

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

FIRST CLASS MAIL
U.S. Postage PAID
BRUNSWICK, ME.
Permit No. 25

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

VOLUME CXVII

BOWDOIN COLLEGE, BRUNSWICK, MAINE, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 1987

NUMBER 1

Fraternity system facing changes

Dry rush turns off kegs: freshmen search for parties

By ADAM NAJBERG
ORIENT News Editor

Mud and Jello have replaced Bud and Coors during this fall's rush.

Bowdoin College's 1987 rush period is dry, and until the campus gets used to alcohol free rush, the Dean of Students office anticipates a decline in the number of freshmen dropping at fraternities.

A joint effort by the Interfraternity Council and the College administration resulted in the institution of an alcohol free rush. A curfew was set, prohibiting freshmen from the fraternities after 10 p.m. on weekdays and midnight on weekends for the first week and after midnight during the second and third weeks. Guidelines were also set restricting fraternities from serving any alcoholic beverages until freshmen vacated the premises.

The dry rush policy does not allow for students of a legal drinking age to consume alcoholic beverages in the fraternities houses until after freshmen have left, but does not restrict them from drinking on other parts of campus.

President of the College A. LeRoy Gresson, said the purpose of the college was "not to monitor the individual lives of the students... There is a distinct difference between what individuals do in their private lives and what they do when involved in college activities."

Rush is a college activity and should involve administrative supervision, Gresson said.

REVVING 'EM UP: Mud wrestling at Beta was a popular but messy matter. Staff photo by Adam Najberg

The original Rush Policy proposed by the IFC stated "alcohol will not be made available in fraternities to freshmen during rush." After consultation with the administration, the clause was altered to read "alcohol will not be made available in fraternities during rush activities."

The change was needed to comply with Maine state liquor laws, according to Acting Dean of the College Paul Nyhus. The college could not condone a rush policy that would allow underage

(Continued on page eight)

Direction under question

Bowdoin without fraternities? President of the College A. LeRoy Gresson posed this question at last Friday's Convocation marking the beginning of Bowdoin College's 186th academic year.

During his convocation speech Gresson questioned the direction Bowdoin fraternities have taken and said he had called for a formal review of the college's fraternity system by a campus-wide committee. Gresson expects to announce committee members next week.

Gresson said Bowdoin's fraternities, which began "to supplement a curriculum devoid of modern literature," no longer add to the academic life of the college.

"Fraternities today appear to (Continued on page seven)

Jane Jervis

Paul Nyhus

Dean's office in transition

ROSEMARIE DOUGHERTY
ORIENT Assoc. News Editor

For the first time in the history of Bowdoin, a senior office will be held by a woman with the appointment of Jane L. Jervis as the new Dean of the College.

Jervis is presently serving as Dean of Students at Hamilton College and her appointment at Bowdoin becomes effective December 1. Until this time, professor of history Paul L. Nyhus will be serving as acting Dean of the College.

Nyhus does not have plans to try and make a great impact on Bowdoin in his short term as dean. "In many areas it is just a matter of tending shop until Jervis arrives," said Nyhus.

Nyhus said some long-range programs he discussed with Jervis include investigating the feasibility of postponing rush until second semester, and an expanded class schedule with classes continuing through the now fixed lunch hour.

If rush were to be delayed, the college would have to accommodate all freshmen until second semester at dining facilities which are already overcrowded.

Nyhus said that expanding the class schedule will help alleviate the problems of not having enough class hours for curriculum, as well as relieving overcrowding at the 12:30 lunch hour rush.

Currently, if a student picks one class in the 11:30 time slot he or she eliminates much of the curriculum from the rest of his or her schedule, as too many classes are being held in two few slots, said Nyhus.

"We've become a more complex (Continued on page nine)

Student dismissal increase

By DAWN VANCE
ORIENT Assoc. News Editor

This past spring, 16 students failed out of Bowdoin College. The number of students dismissed from the college has grown steadily over the last three years.

The Bowdoin College Student Handbook sets the guidelines for failure: two course failures constitute eligibility for dismissal for a period of at least one semester. Two failures do not however necessarily equal automatic dismissal.

First semester freshmen can fail three courses before the college recommends that they leave for at least one semester; and the records of all students eligible for dismissal are subject to the review of the Recording Committee at the end of each semester.

The Recording Committee examines the records of all students eligible for dismissal with the aim of discovering reasons behind the poor performance. At times students will appear personally before the Committee or will submit a written petition on their behalf. As a result the Recording Committee sometimes allows exceptions to the two failure rule.

When examining records the Recording Committee looks for developments in a student's career at Bowdoin that he/she could not have predicted or was helpless to control. Examples that would constitute an exception to the rule would include a death in the family, physical or emotional illness, or family distractions.

In most cases, however, the failure of two courses indicates a "large degree of personal irresponsibility" on the behalf of the student, according to Dean of Students Kenneth A. Lewallen. Lewallen said, "The time away from Bowdoin is designed to get students to recognize that for the most part they control the factors that lead to poor performances and that they have to accept responsibility for their actions."

Once the college has asked someone to leave the student usually accepts the decision of the Recording Committee. Government professor Allen L. Springer said "It's a fairly straightforward process and not usually controversial — it's not something most (Continued on page ten)

Bells will chime 200th birthday

The bells in the Bowdoin College Chapel will ring for 200 seconds Thursday, at 4 p.m., as the nation marks the 200th anniversary of the U.S. Constitution.

Bowdoin will be one of thousands of participants in "Bells Across America: A Ringing Tribute to the Constitution," a nationwide event sponsored by the Commission on the Bicentennial of the United States Constitution.

"The adoption of the Constitution was the most significant event in our nation's history," said Bowdoin President A. LeRoy Gresson. "We look back at our nation's achievements over the last 200 years with pride. We also look forward to celebrating the college's own bicentennial in 1994."

$10m divested by Oct. 31

Bowdoin College announced last May that it will divest over $10 million worth of financial holdings in South Africa by October 31, 1987.

The decision to divest was made at the Spring '87 meeting of the governing boards in fulfillment of the total divestment plan endorsed by the trustees and overseers of the college a year earlier.

The plan stated that "if by May 31, 1987, the enfranchising process for blacks in South Africa is not at an acceptable and substantial level, the College will thereafter divest in an orderly and timely manner."

College Treasurer, Dudley H. Woodall, said that Bowdoin will be following a threefold divestment path. First, the capital invested directly in three corporations still operating in South Africa will be withdrawn.

Second, the relatively large proportion of capital invested in the Ivy Fund which is a pool of the resources of several institutions, will be withdrawn and controlled by a single manager. The third phase of the College's total divestiture policy will be the creation of a South African free portfolio of bonds.

Woodall added that he does not expect the divestment procedure which involves approximately $10 million of the total investment portfolio of $140 million to significantly affect the College's investment performance.

How has dry rush affected the freshmen's view of the fraternities?

By BECKY AUSTIN
ORIENT Contributor

Marshall Woodward '91
"I think freshmen aren't going to the fraternities as much. We party in the dorms. It's a lot mellower compared to the past. The freshmen don't meet as many upperclassmen."

Caitlin Hart '91
"Dry rush is good in a way because freshmen really see the frats...and remember. It would be a lot of fun if it wasn't dry. It's easier to meet people when you're slightly intoxicated."

Rich Coombs '89
"It's kind of strange. Freshmen don't think fraternities are necessary for parties, so they have their own parties in the dorms."

Arlen Johnson '91 "We really don't know what we're missing. Other students say it's terrible, so we think it's terrible. There are parties anyway, but now they're in the dorms. I think it would be a lot more fun if we could drink."

Greason ready to jump

By TAMARA
DASSANAYAKE
ORIENT Asst. News Editor

President of the College, A. LeRoy Greason, will take an inaugural "dip" in Bowdoin College Athletic Facility's new pool Monday, September 14.

The presidential "dip" will follow a ceremony that will transfer one bucket of water from the 60-year old Curtis Pool to each of the 16 lanes of the new pool. Over 300 students are expected to take part in the "Bucket Brigade" which will form from the old to the new pool. Donovan Lancaster '27, Bowdoin's first swimming coach, will draw the first bucket of water from the Curtis Pool.

Director of Public Relations and Publications Richard Mersereau said the novel opening of the new pool is especially appropriate, as Greason, who swam as a Wesleyan College student, will be celebrating his 65th birthday on the previous day.

He added the "bucket brigade" will be formed at around 12:30 p.m. Monday afternoon to ensure that the whole college community will be able to participate. Dining service has agreed to provide boxed lunches on that day.

Mersereau added that although the day is essentially a celebration of the opening of a "marvellous" new facility, it is also a sad farewell by generations of Bowdoin students, faculty and friends to the Curtis Pool, which has served the College community for over 60 years.

The whole community is encouraged to participate and Mersereau promises an afternoon of fun and surprises.

ID: don't leave home without it

By HANNAH RAHILL
ORIENT CONTRIBUTOR

Bowdoin students have been discussing the new policy of showing their ID cards at meals, and there is confusion as to what has prompted the change.

Dining Service feels that flexibility shown in the past has led to a loss of efficiency. Students paying for full board had been losing out by paying for more than just themselves, as others slipped in and ate without proper authorization.

Director of Dining Services Larry Pinnette sees this change as a step towards protecting the "full board" student.

Dining Service Aid Cecile Pelletier, who punches in student idea numbers at Coles Tower said she approves of the new system of ID checking. She said abuse of numbers has always been a problem.

"I think it's great. This year, when the computer was down, three kids gave me the wrong number. We found later that the numbers didn't exist. How was I supposed to know. It's not fair to some kids," said Pelletier.

Lynne Hodgkins '90 referred to the change as "a pain, it's inconvenient", while Greg Lewis '91 said it did not bother him, as he has never had any other way.

In the future Dining Service plans to use a computerized system in which each ID card would have a track and would be authorized electronically. Meanwhile, students will need to continue carrying their ID cards with them to all meals.

New dean of planning

By TANYA WEINSTEIN
ORIENT Staff Writer

The newly created position of Dean of Planning and General Administration at Bowdoin College has been filled by Thomas J. Hochstetler.

Hochstetler will be responsible for planning and institutional research at Bowdoin, as well as overseeing the computer center and the office of Special and Summer Programs.

Why was new position created? Hochstetler said with the increasing size of the school a new senior official was needed. Other administrators were previously handling these responsibilities, and Hochstetler has been appointed to this position so other deans can devote more time to their respective duties.

Hochstetler comes to Bowdoin from Stanford University, where he was the senior associate and staff economist in the Office of Management and Financial Planning. His responsibilities there included financial analysis and planning, as well as special projects in the computer center. Hochstetler also taught history at the university and served as budget director of Stanford Medical Center.

Hochstetler does not think the acceptance of the position at Bowdoin was influenced by the opportunity to return to the atmosphere of a small, liberal arts college, which he enjoyed as an undergraduate at Earlham College. He is also interested in the prospect of teaching history again.

Hochstetler said one of the benefits of being at a school like Bowdoin is "a respect for contemplation... that is different from the way education takes place at a larger institution."

Hochstetler does not think the change from such a large school to a small one will be a problem, because the same basic decisions have to be made. However, he says some differences will arise due to a smaller budget and fewer administrators.

"Decisions will be more significant and greater care will have to be given to them, and since there are fewer people in administration, everyone has to do a little bit more," said Hochstetler.

Tower cracks down on kegs

By ROBERT WILLAMEY
ORIENT Contributor

Students are learning that kegs of beer are still taboo in the Tower. Coles Tower residents have been sent a memorandum informing them of the college's alcohol policy regarding the Tower. The policy has been a long-standing edict at Bowdoin.

Lt. Roger St. Pierre of the College's security force says the no-keg policy for Coles Tower residents has been part of the College's alcohol policy for quite some time. This year, however, there is a shift toward tighter adherence to the policy. Coles Tower desk monitors will no longer turn a blind eye on kegs passing the desk.

Thompson Interns Peter LaMontagne '88 and Joy Stuart '88 sent a memo to all Tower residents regarding the policy.

Direction to enforce the policy is the result of several factors. According to Lt. St. Pierre the increased drinking age has decreased the number of students who are of legal drinking age, forcing the college to review its alcohol policy and ultimately its enforcement.

In the past, Physical Plant employees were left with large messes to clean following weekend parties, and reports of damaged floors and sinks were not uncommon. St. Pierre does not wish to see a recurrence of that night a few years ago when an officer was nearly struck by a half empty keg thrown out of a Tower window.

Both the Thompson Interns and Lt. St. Pierre do not believe the purpose of the policy is to halt drinking in the Tower; they believe it's just safer, cleaner and more responsible.

Class of 1991

The Class of 1991 was chosen from over 3,707 applicants (a 6 percent increase over the previous year). Twenty-four percent of the applicants were offered admission.

Seventy-seven percent of the students who were admitted ranked in the top 10 percent of their high school classes.

The entering class has 212 men and 184 women. There are 24 minority students, including 13 blacks, 6 Hispanics, 4 Asians, and 1 Native American.

Tuition and other student charges total $15,675 for the 1987-88 academic year.

About 65 percent of Bowdoin's students receive financial aid of some form. Nearly 40 percent will share approximately $4.9 million in need-based aid for and average aid package of $8,900. That includes $3.6 million in direct grants and $1 million in Loans, as well as approximately $300,000 from campus jobs.

Committee offers cures to avoid queues

By DAWN VANCE
ORIENT Asst. News Editor

Those long lines and crowded conditions at Wentworth Hall and the Moulton Union dining room may soon come to an end. At least that's what the Committee on Student Life Facilities is aiming for.

The Committee on Student Life Facilities was created in February 1987 to aid Bowdoin College in planning its future needs for dining, housing, and student activities. The Committee's objective lies in drawing up a game plan for the expansion or modification of the college's current housing and dining facilities. It is also studying the potential of the Hyde Athletic Building (Hyde Cage) and Curtis Pool to suit certain extracurricular needs.

In addition, the Committee on Student Life Facilities is considering adding lounge areas to some or all of the dormitories and possible renovation of Hyde Hall dormitory.

By far the Committee's most pressing concern at present is the alleviation of the overcrowdedness of the college's kitchen and dining facilities. In a February 23, 1987 letter President of the College LeRoy A. Gresson informed the Committee, "Of all these needs, additional dining space, either at Wentworth or at the Union or at both, is most urgent."

Thus far the Committee has convened four times. Its first meeting simply afforded the group an opportunity to acquaint itself with President Gresson's requests. During its subsequent three meetings of April 3, May 2, and July 11, 1987 the Committee has met with various members of the Bowdoin College administration to ascertain the needs of the college community.

On April 3, 1987 the Committee toured the campus with Head of Physical Plant Dave Barber to familiarize itself with all of the college's facilities. The Committee examined the kitchen preparatory and dining areas of Wentworth Hall and the Moulton Union, dormitory basements, the Hyde Cage and the Curtis Pool area. In an effort to get a "feel for the dining world" different members of the group ate lunch at fraternities, Coles Tower, and the Moulton Union.

Since that time the Committee has met with such college administrators as Director of Dining Service Laurent C. Pinette and his assistant Mary Lou Kennedy, Director of Special and Summer Programs Edmund A. Peratta, Director of Athletics Sidney J. Watson, Treasurer of the College Dudley H. Woodall, Dean of Students Kenneth A. Lewallen, and Student Activities Coordinator William J. Fruth.

The group met a second time with Pinette and Kennedy in accordance with President Gresson's concern with dining.

Having toured the kitchen and dining facilities the Committee witnessed first hand the long lines and crowded dining conditions.

Committee member and Government professor Allen L. Springer said, "I was strongly impressed by the argument for the need of more dining facilities soon...our present facilities are only designed to feed about one-third of the people they are now...any expansion is just talking about catching up with the need we have already."

Student representative to the Committee Andrew B. Winter '89 echoed Springer's conviction that, "Any expansion will get us up to where we really should be." Winter continued, "We are working on the assumption that the college will remain the size it is today and that the fraternity system will remain essentially as it is today...we have not been given information to lead us to believe otherwise."

The Committee on Student Life Facilities will meet again on October 9, 1987 in conjunction with Homecoming and the meetings of the Governing Boards. At that time the Committee will present a recommendation to President Gresson in accordance with its findings to date. According to Director of Career Services and the Moulton Union Harry K.

Warren the Committee will also at that time "plan how to go about garnering a cross-section of student opinion and student feelings about their wish list of needs."

Although the work of the Committee has been as Warren says, "mainly a wish list gathering activity up to now," it does have definite possibilities in mind as to the expansion of the college's present dining facilities. Any recommendations will however be subject to review by the Governing Boards and dependent upon adequate funding through the Capital Campaign.

Relief may not come tomorrow, but those long lines at mealtimes may disappear soon.

With the official opening of the athletic center at Pickard Field on Monday, September 14, 1987 at 1:30 p.m., Bowdoin College will initiate its policy of requiring a Bowdoin ID card for admittance. Everyone is welcome and urged to use the center during its operating hours, but you must show your ID.

Brown adjusting to Bowdoin

By ED AMER
ORIENT Contributor

Ana M. Brown, a native of Portland, Oregon, was recently named Assistant Dean of Students at Bowdoin College. Brown replaced Lisa Barresi, who had been with the dean's office since her graduation from Bowdoin in 1985.

Brown will be in charge of student housing assignments and will advise students on off-campus study programs. In addition, she will give much-needed assistance to Lewallen in academic and personal advising and student referrals.

Brown's responsibilities will also include administration of the Honor and Social Codes, crisis intervention, and the creation of programs to promote student growth and development.

One of Brown's greatest challenges will be to build a better residential life program for students, enhancing both social and educational benefits. She stressed that an increase in activities revolving around the dorms would not be intended to shift the social scene away from the fraternities.

Prior to her arrival at Bowdoin, Brown was Director of Student Activities and Assistant Director of Residential Life at Reed College in Portland, Oregon. Although, the two colleges' academics are comparable, Bowdoin is quite different for her. Reed has neither fraternities, nor athletics.

After graduating from Reed, where she majored in Biology, Brown went on to receive her master's degree in Educational Administration from the University of Wisconsin in Madison.

Aside from lobster at Cook's Lobster House, and ice cream at Ben & Jerry's, the highlight of Brown's job since she began two months ago has been getting to know her fellow faculty members. She now looks forward with great anticipation to getting to know the students, as well as the college.

Brown said she is accessible, and urges students to come to her with any problems, suggestions, or ideas.

IT DIDN'T COME EASY FOR THEM EITHER.

Each one had to practice. Again and again. When the biggest came, each athlete was ready. Striving for his personal best.

That's how it is with sports. And that's how it is with another form of competition—graduate admissions exams.

To do your best, you should prepare with the best. Kaplan.

Our students are able to score the most, year after year. Fact is, Kaplan preparation has helped overcome million students onto the inside track, giving them the skills and confidence to finish strong.

If you're facing the GMAT, GRE, LSAT, MCAT, or professional tests like the Bar or CPA exams, call Stanley H. Kaplan. These athletes had to train to beat their competition. Maybe there's a lesson in it for you.

THE KAPLAN
INDEPENDENT KAPLAN EDUCATIONAL CENTER, ETC.

Welcome back!

To train in Maine
for the LSAT, GMAT, MCAT,
call (617) 964-TEST collect.

FILM, POLITICS & SOCIAL CHANGE IN ASIA

January - May 1988

Faculty from Harvard University and the University of Illinois

Itinerary includes: India
China
Japan
Hong Kong

- travel and work closely with professors
- live with families in each country
- expand intellectual and personal awareness through comparative study in a variety of environments
- 16 credit hours of academic work studying film, politics and social change in Asia

For a catalogue and application contact:
Joan Tiffany, Director
International Honors Program
19 Braddock Park
Boston, MA 02116
617-267-8612

INTERNATIONAL HONORS PROGRAM

Woody Owl says
Give a hoot.
Don't pollute.

Call
Orient
Classified
725-3300

Digging holes in two continents

Bowdoin explores Labrador's past

By STEPHEN REYNOLDS
ORIENT Features Editor

Ned Searles '89 points to a photograph taken this August during Bowdoin College's archaeological expedition to Labrador. He, fellow Bowdoin student Tim Kupferschmid '89, and Charlie, a fifteen year old Inuit boy, squat next to each other on a bluff overlooking a bay in Labrador. Evidently one of the three set the camera on a rock, switched on the self timer, and quickly posed with the others as the shutter clicked. The tundra in the foreground is blurred and Ned's smile is either restrained or has yet to fully develop.

Just as the camera cannot flawlessly report the events on the bluff within moments of their transpiration, a reporter interviewing Ned Searles weeks after his trip flounders in an attempt to recount the events of the expedition. Participation and involvement in an undertaking is crucial in order to understand and appreciate its significance; the common adage wearily says "there ain't no substitute for experience" and, in a more relevant sense, expedition leader and Bowdoin Professor of Anthropology Susan Kaplan explains, "the best way to get excited about arctic research is to experience the north."

July 11, three Bowdoin students—Laura Godwin, Tim Kupferschmid, and Ned Searles—traveled to Labrador with Professor Kaplan, Professor Steve Cox of the Center for Northern Studies, Newfoundland Mark Allcott, and photographer Greg Hart. The group based itself in Nain, a small and the northernmost town in Labrador, where a 15 year old Inuit boy named Charlie joined the group. For the next six weeks the group would leave that last outpost of civilization, the small collection of houses that is Nain, and explore and excavate archaeological sites on three islands off the Northern Labrador coast—Skull, Nuasor-nak, and Igloosiatik.

The islands off northern Labrador are littered with Indian and Eskimo (Indians and Eskimos are different, Kaplan impresses, they have entirely different cultural traditions) archaeological sites ranging from the Pre-Dorset peoples inhabiting the area 3000-4000 years ago to the Inuit's ancestors, the Thule, 1000-200 years ago. The islands have always been good hunting grounds, Kaplan says, hence the wealth of archaeological finds in the area is great.

Tim Kupferschmid, Charlie, and Ned Searles pose for picture on Igloosiatik Island, Labrador. Photo by Ned Searles

The expedition was no vacation, weekends and holidays did not exist. Every day the weather permitted work to be done, the group excavated sites. Ropes and pegs partitioned a site into a grid of square meter sections. Working ten hours a day, until the sun set and work could not be continued, the group crouched over their sections meticulously scraping away dirt with hand trowels. "On the average, it would take two full days to fully excavate a square meter area," says Kupferschmid.

All the dirt was screened through a fourth inch wire mesh to insure that no artifacts were lost. Searles explains, "we were often looking for things the size of matchsticks." If artifacts were found, their position was immediately plotted on a map of the site.

"The group was carrying a huge responsibility," says Kaplan. "Archaeology is destructive by nature. You're digging into a tent ring that has been there for 4000 years and you're destroying it. Caution and diligence is necessary."

"The number of objects found varied a lot," says Kupferschmid. "The best square would have as many as thirty artifacts, the worst obviously zero." By the end of the expedition, a large footlocker of artifacts had been collected. The artifacts will be washed, numbered, and studied for a year and then placed in the Newfoundland Museum.

Besides recovering tools, pieces of metal, fragments of pots, and hunting weapons, the group excavated and diagrammed dwellings and structures. On Igloosiatik the group excavated a Thule sod house dating from around the 1500's says Kupferschmid. A piece of metal was found at the site and, since the existence of metal at this site infers contact with European civilization either Norse or Dutch, Kupferschmid arrives at his date.

The Thule designed their sod houses to conserve and retain heat. Built into the side of a hill, an upward sloping tunnel serves as an entryway. A pit separating the entryway and house serves as a cold trap. At the back of the house the Thule built elevated platforms for sleeping. Since hot air rises, the sleeping platform was naturally the warmest spot. One drawback, the Thule sod houses lacked ventilation—black lung, says Kupferschmid, was a problem among the Thule.

Living in Labrador was not only difficult for the Thule, but also for the Bowdoin group. "We were living in rugged conditions and living in tents. Regardless of the weather we got blasted by winds. A lot of time was spent just maintaining camp," says Kaplan. The weather was harsh and the mosquitoes unforgiving. "Every night Ned and I had a ritual of killing every mosquito in our tent before going to bed," says Kupferschmid of the thick everpresent cloud of mosquitoes that managed to get through the mesh of their tents.

From a psychological perspective the trip was taxing. Kaplan emphasizes a "juxtaposition" of both a sense of space and culture experienced by the group during the expedition. "The conditions were very intense. A small group of people in a vast wilderness would have to get along in a confined space."

Charlie had been carefully selected by the Inuit in Nain to participate in the expedition; just recently he had killed his first seal, a difficult accomplishment that marked his passage into manhood. Kupferschmid described Charlie as "very americanized" and Searles found it amazing that the 15 year old Inuit had scene more movies on video tape than anyone he knew at college. "Charlie is an kid of the 1980's and also under tremendous pressure to hunt traditionally as his father does. He faces a ray of opportunities and a mixture of two cultural traditions," explains Kaplan.

"Charlie knew a lot about the land and wildlife," says Searles, "he knew the behavior of seals, caribou and geese. That summer he had already shot his first seal. His father wants him to maintain Inuit traditions. The north is addictive in many ways—it's inspiring the things you see and experience. I want to go back."

(Continued on page five)

Groveling and troweling for artifacts—the expedition excavated for up to ten hours a day. Photo by Tim Kupferschmid

No small stink: building latrines in Ecuador

By KATESY TOWNSEND
ORIENT staff

Picture yourself in El Toldo, Ecuador, a village of forty families of Incan descent. You live in a 9 x 11 foot adobe shack with two other Americans. Running water and electricity are sparse. If you plan on hitching a ride to the city for a movie, expect a fifteen hour bus ride at an altitude of 8,000 feet through the Andes Mountains. Be prepared to tantalize your taste buds with guinea pig meat. Ready to pack your bags?

This past summer senior Cindy Heller vacationed in isolated El Toldo where visitors, albeit blond ones, are almost nonexistent. Heller traveled to Ecuador as a member of the Amigos de las Americas program, which sends about 500 students (16 years and older) to 15 different countries in Central and South America. There, the students direct development projects and grapple with health issues such as immunizations, rabies vaccinations, latrines, and dental and vision care. Amigos de las Americas is an international non-profit volunteer public health organization.

After taking a sociology course on world population, Heller became interested in Third World Within her first two days, she had lectured—in Spanish—about the purpose of the project before 140 of the villagers. She development. This spring she took a correspondence training course through the mail and polished her CPR and first aid skills.

"I did not go down there to save the world. I went with a project as a basis for learning from those people..."

surveyed the area for potential latrine sites and by the second week overcame her initial culture shock.

"I did not go down there to save the world. I went with a project, as a basis for learning from those people and integrating into their culture," she says.

Though not initially receptive, eventually the village let Cindy become an immediate member of the community. "They gave us unconditional acceptance. Various we rushed, cut-throat world, they are genuine, caring people," she said.

This accomplished latrine designer learned more than how to

(Continued on page five)

The finished product — Amigos de las Amicas, the group Cindy Heller worked with in Ecuador, constructed 32 latrines. Photo by Cindy Heller

Latrine

(Continued from page four) successfully carry 55 lb. bags of cement and install underground pipes. Heller saw evidence of the outside world creeping into the traditional farm area and noticed the rift created by slow modernization. The conflict between the old and new is significant, especially in rural areas where education is not stressed. "Teenagers have lots of emotional problems. Kids are taught manual skills and forced to work on the farm. There are not many reward systems (just

as) in America's poor, urban areas. It's tearing families apart," she explains.

At the moment the village will survive, Heller said confidently. Today the older, more unified generation continues to run the community and after working six days per week, provides food for the table. "They will advance because of their unity."

"Instead of the gun-ho, competitive approach, (I learned) the sit-back way. I lived by their rules."

Frosh trip before classes

By KATHRYN NANOVIC
ORIENT Production Manager

"You could have dove in the water to dry off, it was raining so hard," smiled Ted Mastin '91 referring to the pre-orientation trip he took two weeks ago. "It rained and poured all day." In spite of the rain, Mastin praised his first experience at Bowdoin. "I would recommend it to all incoming freshmen," he said.

Mastin's paddling excursion to Merrymeeting Bay and the Kennebec River was one of 14 different biking, sailing, hiking and canoeing trips held the week before freshman orientation. "The trips contribute to a smooth transition," Pre-Orientation Trip Coordinator Peter LaMontagne '88 said. "With these trips, students are forced to be themselves when they get to Bowdoin."

About 140 freshmen participated in this year's trips led by 30 upperclassmen, according to LaMontagne. He added that he was impressed with the leaders, who possessed "more outdoors skills, which were secondary in past trips." Many of the leaders had taken "Solo," a wilderness medicine course offered here, as well as leadership training courses. Several canoe trip leaders were American Canoe Association certified paddlers.

"This year it was a good thing we had more qualified leaders," LaMontagne noted. Many of the groups experienced unforeseen hitches during their expeditions. LaMontagne commended the leaders for their successful handling the first evacuation of a camper from a pre-orientation trip ever.

Trip leader Shamu Fenyesi '90 stepped on a bees' nest during his hiking trip in the Pemigewassit Wilderness Area in New Hampshire's White Mountains. Because his leg was swollen from bee stings, freshmen took turns carrying him on a litter to get help. "I was impressed with the freshmen, and with Shamu as a leader," LaMontagne said.

In another incident, two college vans carrying canoes for two of the trips broke down, and paddling for one trip had to be postponed a day. A day-long hike in Camden Hills State Park was substituted. The group then returned to campus for a stir-fry dinner made by Freshmen Advisor Bina Chaddha, and a sleep-over in Chase Barn Chamber. "Bina was great about it," Mastin said. "It was a lot of fun."

On Liz Sizeler's trip to Mahoec Notch on the Appalachian Trail, she and fellow leader Pat Baker '89 had to make decisions concerning their group's safety one rainy day. "The trip through the Notch would have been too dangerous to do in the rain," said Sizeler '90, who has taken both leadership training and Solo EMT courses. "Even though we had a lot of problems, everything turned out okay," she added.

Among the more humorous mishaps was the Outing Club's oversight in supplying trip-goer Greg Castell's group with matches. The paddlers had to borrow them from a friendly hiker camping nearby. "We would have been eating graham crackers for four days," Castell joked.

"No matter what happens, you can't really have a bad time," Castell said. "You grow closer to everyone. Even the people who were miserable during the trip wouldn't regret having gone."

"By the end of it, everyone's helping everyone," agreed an enthusiastic Tessa Hadlock '90, co-leader of the Pemigewassit trip.

Hadlock felt that positive experiences brought the campers closer together as well. "The first night we were there, eating our graham cracker dinner, some Canadian jays flew down and sat on our hands watching us eat. It was so great," she laughed.

Sophomore Peter Collings, who helped lead another trip to Mahoec Notch with Charles Hassrick, had never been hiking for more than two days. In spite of the fact that the Notch is known as one of the more difficult parts of the Appalachian Trail, Collings and Hassrick's trip with mostly inexperienced hikers went "really smoothly," Collings affirmed. "It was greatly rewarding knowing the responsibility I had and that nobody got hurt."

"All of our troopers still hang out together," Collings said. "That's rewarding in itself. We relied on each other so much." Collings offered, "It just seems that the trips aren't appreciated enough. They are the best thing for a lot of freshmen."

IMAGINUS POSTER SALE

OVER 200
DIFFERENT IMAGES

FEATURING: Old Masters, Impressionism, Surrealism, Van Gogh, Picasso, Escher, Mini-Posters, Travel Posters, Postcard Selection, Car and Travel Posters, Rock & Roll and more!

PRICES

MOST LARGE POSTERS

$6 each

MOST SMALL POSTERS

$2 each

NEW THIS YEAR:

- EXPANDED GALLERY LINE
- ART BAGS AND BUTTONS
- LARGE PHOTOPOSTER SERIES
- SPORTS ILLUSTRATED POSTERS

DATE: Sept. 14-15
TIME: 9 a.m. - 5 p.m.
PLACE: Moulton Union,
Lancaster Lounge

ENTERTAINMENT

Packer, Bridgeman dance

By ELIZABETH MULLEN
ORIENT Contributor

New York's Myrna Packer and Art Bridgeman explode onto the stage at Pickard Theatre this Friday night.

This hot duo have been performing and choreographing together since 1978. They were last seen in this area at their summer performance in the 1987 Maine Festival, although they have performed extensively throughout the United States and Europe.

Bowdoin's director of dance June Vail first saw the duo when she served on a commission that selected the performers for the Maine Festival in 1986. Vail attributes the duo's success to the approachable, intelligent nature of their performances.

Accurately described as "a duet dance theatre company" by Packer and Bridgeman themselves, there can be no argument that theirs is an eclectic, multifaceted, deeply moving form of dance. None of the usual labels applied to dance — "modern", "jazz", or "interpretive" — can be applied to their art. Their works range from fast-paced to languid, from sexy to frightening, with musical accompaniment that includes both Strauss and the Rhythm Devils.

Vail adds: "Audiences in Maine who have seen Packer and Bridgeman perform at two recent Maine Festivals have simply fallen in love with them. They are magnetic performers, and their dances convey their intelligence, humor, and warmth as well as their physical daring and strength. As a duo, they have what all great partnerships have: shared dynamism and a sensual electricity."

Professional choreographers Art Bridgeman and Myrna Packer will dance on the Bowdoin stage tonight at 8 p.m.

In addition to their Friday performance, Packer and Bridgeman will conduct a series of dance seminars for Bowdoin and Bates students throughout next week. Each school will perform the dances learned in the seminar. Bates' performance will take place on Thursday, September 17 at 8:00 p.m. in Schaeffer Theater; and Bowdoin's performance happens on Friday, September 18 at 4:30 p.m. in Sargent Gymnasium.

The performance and seminar are funded by both the New England Foundation for the Arts, and the Bowdoin/Bates Dance Alliance. Packer and Bridgeman will perform at 8:00 p.m. in Pickard Theatre. Admission is free for Bowdoin students, $5 for the general public, and $3 for all other students and senior citizens.

Constitutionalism lecture series begins

On Tuesday, September 14, at 8 p.m. in Daggett Lounge, Professor Richard E. Morgan will initiate a Bates-Bowdoin College series of lectures and related events in observance of the Bicentennial of the United States Constitution. Morgan, who holds the William Nelson Cromwell Professorship in Constitutional and International Law and Government, will speak of the topic "The Crisis of American Constitutionalism."

Bates and Bowdoin have joined to sponsor a series of events featuring faculty members, alumni, and visiting scholars. Arrangements are being made by Professor William B. Whiteside and by history professor Ernest Muller at Bates College. The theme of the series is "The Constitution: Into the Third Century."

"We do not in this series seek a self-congratulatory celebration of the founding fathers in Philadelphia in 1787," Whiteside observed. "Rather, we want to focus attention upon the problems of our Constitutional system and of national understanding of it that require attention during the years ahead."

On October 8, Dennis Hutchinson, Bowdoin graduate and now Professor of Law at the University of Chicago Law School, will take as his topic "Does the Constitution matter?"

Other events are still in the planning stage. The series will through most of the fall semester. Events will be held at both Bowdoin and Bates.

Calendar

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 11

8 pm — Dance Performance by Art Bridgeman and Myrna Packer, New York choreographers/dancers. Pickard Theatre. $5 admission for the general public, $3 for students/senior citizens, free to Bowdoin/Bates students with I.D.

8:30 pm — Reggae concert by Cool Runnings Band at the Polar Bear.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 12

9 pm — Hypnotist James Mapes will perform in Kresge. $1 admission for students, $2 for the general public.

10 pm — Everything You Ever Wanted To Know About Sex But Were Afraid To Ask, in the Pub.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 13

8 pm — Amnesty International videos in the Pub.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 14

9 am—5 pm — Imaginus Poster Sale, Lancaster Lounge

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 15

9 am—5 pm — Imaginus Poster Sale, Lancaster Lounge

8 pm — Lecture, "The Crisis of American Constitutionalism". Professor Richard E. Morgan. Daggett Lounge.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 16

9:30 pm — Bingo in the Pub.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 17

7:30 pm — Concert, "Avant Garde Music of Three Centuries", a solo flute recital by Douglas Worthen. Walker Art Building.

MOVIE LISTINGS

Evening Star Cinema (Maine St.)

The Big Easy, showing at 7:00 and 8:55 through Sept. 17

Cinema City (Cooks Corner)

The Lost Boys, showing at 7:10 and 9:10

Stakeout, showing at 7:00 and 9:00

Summer School, showing at 7:15 and 9:15

Living Daylights, showing at 6:45 and 9:00

Maine's Most
Enterprising
Record Shop

THE TONTINE MALL
149 Maine St.
Brunswick, Maine 04011

Check Macbean's surprising selection of Classical, Jazz, Folk, Children's and Show recordings. LP's, Tapes, and of course Compact Discs

LaVERDIERE'S VALUABLE COUPON

4.00 EXTRA OFF
ON YOUR NEXT
New or Transferred Prescription
WITH THIS COUPON

SAVE ON YOUR NEXT
NEW or TRANSFERRED
Prescription

You, bring this coupon into LaVerdier's Super Drug Store and get an extra $4 off your next new or transferred prescription not previously filled at LaVerdier's with a student I.D. Only one coupon honored per customer.
94 Maine St., Brunswick
DOES NOT APPLY TO ACTION MAIL ORDER DIVISION
Hours: Mon.-Sat. 9 a.m.-8 p.m.; Sun. 9 a.m.-6 p.m.
GOOD THROUGH OCT. 31, 1987

FILM DEVELOPING HALF PRICE
Every Sunday!

only at your LaVERDIERE'S
SUPER DRUG STORES

Agnes set to go

By LIZZ MILLAN
ORIENT Asst. Entertainment Editor

Psychological and spiritual issues will be brought to light next weekend when the Masque and Gown opens its season with a minimalist rendition of the play Agnes of God.

Agnes, a nun living in a convent, is accused of the murder of her baby. The action revolves around the interaction of Agnes with Mother Miriam Ruth and psychiatrist, Dr. Livingstone. From the interrelationships between these three women the audience observes the spiritual and psychological issues surrounding Agnes' dilemma.

Laura Farnsworth will play the troubled nun, Agnes. As Mother

Miriam Ruth, Elizabeth Eggleston will represent the spiritual force against which Agnes must struggle. Sara Williams as Dr. Livingstone will introduce the psychological aspect of this struggle. Triahka Waterbury is directs the three actresses.

The set, comprised of a chair and ashtary only, add to the atmosphere created by the play. The mood is not light, yet there are moments of fun. Agnes of God will leave the audience with something to think about.

The play opens Thursday, September 16 at 8:00 in the Experimental Theatre at Pickard. Tickets will be available at the Union Monday thru Friday. Remaining tickets will be dispensed at the Box Office the nights of the play.

Parrot to speak at Bowdoin on rape and harassment

By DAWN VANCE
ORIENT Asst. News Editor

Dr. Andrea Parrot will address the problem of when she addresses the Bowdoin College community Wednesday night in Daggett Lounge at 7 p.m.

Dr. Parrot, a member of the faculty of Cornell University in Ithaca, New York since 1980, devotes her professional attention to acquaintance rape prevention and human sexuality. She has traveled extensively conducting programs on acquaintance rape and has acted as a consultant to colleges, universities, educational media producers, federal and state agencies, and crime prevention programs.

When asked why she involved herself with the issues of acquaintance rape, Dr. Parrot cited her experience in dealing with students at Cornell. "Intuitively I thought it was a problem and decided to focus on the minimization and elimination of the traumas associated with acquaintance rape," Parrot said.

Is acquaintance rape a real problem? "Absolutely," claims Dr. Parrot. "At least twenty percent of all college women have suffered force sex. It is my aim to teach individuals how to recognize, avoid, and deal with acquaintance rape."

While on campus Dr. Parrot will conduct workshops for the administrative staff of the college and for the Grievance Committee for Issues on Sexual Harassment. She will present policies and procedures presently instituted on other college campuses, highlighting those which work and those which don't. She will also focus on identifying those individuals who are at risk, as well as problems associated with acquaintance rape and their prevention.

At Cornell, Dr. Parrot conducts a course on Human Sexuality and Social Policy attended by up to 1000 students each year. She teaches a course on Sexuality at the Upstate Medical Center in Syracuse, New York where she serves as a Clinical Assistant Professor of Psychology. In addition, she teaches a women's self defense course and human sexuality graduate courses including one on Sexual Educational Programs and Prevention Strategies.

Dr. Parrot aided in the founding of the Cornell University Sexual Assault Prevention task force and has long stood as a member of the Education Committee at Planned Parenthood of Tompkins County.

Dr. Parrot's work has appeared in such notable publications as Newsweek on Campus, Ms. Magazine, USA Today, the New York Times, and the NBC News Magazine "1986". Her most recent book, "An Acquaintance Rape and Sexual Assault Prevention Manual" is acclaimed a leading work in its field and held in high esteem by Ms. Magazine.

Dr. Parrot's address is being cosponsored by a number of campus organizations including the President's and Deans' Offices, the Counseling Service, the Peer Relations Support Group, the Psychology Department, the Bowdoin Women's Association, the Health Department, Struggle and Change, the Interfraternity Council, and the Bowdoin Gay-Lesbian-Straight Alliance.

Direction

(Continued from page one)

be pretty much social centers without any very clear purpose. If indeed some of them turn students away from intellectual and aesthetic concerns, then we do have a problem," said Gresson.

Gresson pointed to an alienation of the fraternities from college officers. He later said there has been "no willingness by the fraternities and the fraternity alumni council" to cooperate with the administration. Gresson also said the attitude of the fraternities "has encouraged a 'we/they' situation."

All other facets of the college are reviewed regularly and there is no reason that the fraternities should not be subject to such scrutiny, Gresson said. Pressure for such a review has come from faculty, students, alumni and board members.

Gresson believes the advice he offered to the fraternities in the past has gone unheeded and vows this time he will "not again be just another voice in the wilderness."

DR. WILLIAM R. OUELLETTE DR. BRIAN L. DANIELS OPTOMETRISTS

Eye Examinations Optical Services
Specializing in Children's Vision
and Contact Lenses

Pleasant Street Professional Building
52 Pleasant Street, Brunswick
Telephone 725-2161

Yarns From All Around The World

• Wools	• Alpaca
• Cashmere	• Silks

• Hand Painted Needlepoint

Friendly Expert Service

Yankee Yarns

— WE SHIP ANYWHERE —

THE RED BRICK HOUSE

47 PLEASANT STREET BRUNSWICK, MAINE
725-7013 YARNS

TIE-DYE
- TANKS
- SWEATSHIRTS
- TAPESTRIES

ROCK T-SHIRTS
- THE DEAD
- MISFITS
- BLACK FLAG

VINTAGE WOOL OVERCOATS
FROM $30

GREAT PRICES!!

ALL COTTON SWEATERS
for WOMEN & MAN

Egyptian AFRICAN South American jewelry

BAGS, BELTS, WOOL SCARVES

141B MAINE ST.
RIGHT BEHIND THE WORKS
TUE-SAT 10-5:30

Outback

Dean hands down decisions on frats

Dean of Students Kenneth Lewallen announced this week that Beta Theta Pi is no longer under scrutiny by the college committee on compliance. Lewallen said Beta had exceeded fraternity integration standards imposed by the college. Lewallen explained the committee found an adequate male-female ratio in the house and found no evidence of sexual discrimination in house activities or office-holding.

Lewallen also announced Theta Delta Chi would be eligible to come off probation if the fraternity meets with college integration guidelines. TD's status will be reviewed following "drop night." (Sept 19)

In other fraternity news, Psi Upsilon was placed on a two-day probationary period by the Interfraternity Council (IFC) task force. The task force, consisting of IFC members, was created to police the fraternities and enforce compliance with this fall's "dry rush." PsiU violated rush policies and the two-day punishment was meted out by IFC president Scott Milo '88.

Dry Rush

(Continued from page one)
students of any class to consume alcohol.

In addition to the restriction of alcohol, the IFC appointed a "Task Force" to "review the actions of all houses during rush on a daily basis." The Task Force has the power to impose sanctions on any fraternity violating the dry rush guidelines. Within the first week of rush, the Task Force employed their power once. Freshman were prohibited from entering Psi Upsilon for two nights after actions inconsistent with the IFC policy were discovered.

In addition to alcohol regulations, the rush period was extended from two weeks to three weeks, setting Saturday, September 19 as drop night. This added time will allow the fraternities to schedule more events in an effort to attract freshmen and also give the freshmen a longer period in which to judge the fraternities.

Fraternity scheduled events have included lip sync contests, movie screenings, mud and jello wrestling, and theme parties. All events have been alcohol free but, according to some fraternity presidents, the freshmen did not respond immediately to the new system.

Alan MacIntyre '90, president of Delta Sigma, said this year's rush has so far attracted fewer freshmen than last year. He said "dry rush" has caused freshmen to avoid fraternities and hold beer parties in their dorms.

"This year's rush is a lot more this year's rush is a lot more quiet," said MacIntyre.

Bethany Tarbell '91 said she objects to "dry rush" because it does not show the fraternities "in their true light." She has been bid, but expects to remain independent.

"I want to see the frats as they really are. I can't do that now. I think a 'dry rush' makes people want to hold back and not drop. At least, that's how I feel," said Tarbell.

Betsey Woodey '91, said she objects to the freshmen curfew, because it is unrealistic.

"I don't think the time restriction is good at all. We're in college, and we should know when to restrict ourselves. We've got to learn to manage our time," said Woodey.

Both Woodey and Tarbell said the IFC's original "wet-dry rush" proposal would have satisfied the majority of freshmen. They agreed that "dry" parties have caused freshmen to throw beer bashes in their dormitories.

Sergeant Clay Burns of Bowdoin College Security said he has seen "more drinking in dorms this year than in any of the frats." Burns and other security officers have broken up numerous dorm and Coles Tower parties this year.

President of the IFC, Scott Milo '88, said that the college is "not attacking a drinking problem" by limiting the dry rush only to the fraternities. "It has been harder on the upperclassmen than on the freshmen. We're not drinking," Milo said.

PASS ALONG
AN HEIRLOOM MORE VALUABLE THAN GOLD.

LIFE.

When you make a bequest to the American Heart Association, you're passing along a precious legacy: The gift of life. That's because your contribution supports research that could save your descendants from America's number one killer.

To learn more about the Planned Giving Program, call us today. It's the first step in making a memory that lasts beyond a lifetime.

WE'RE FIGHTING FOR
YOUR LIFE

American Heart
Association

This space provided as a public service.

THE
BRUNSWICK

FLOWER SHOP

Centrally located across from Bowdoin College.

729-8895
We Deliver
216A Maine St.
Mon.-Sat. 9:30-6

Give your college student a very special care package! An Ice Cream Cake from Ben & Jerry's for birthdays, study breaks, exams, surprises, rainy days...

Call and order your
cake today.

Free Delivery (207) 725-2723
.96 Maine Street, Brunswick

Beautiful furnished room
for female Bowdoin student in lovely restored
Colonial home near campus.
729-8616, days
725-8290, evenings

BIG RED Q PRINTING
next to the College

- stationery
- resumes
- posters
- newsletters

212E Maine Street
Brunswick
729-4840

Let's get our heads together...

Downtown
Plaza
Coiffures

Tanning Bed

176 Maine St. Brunswick
(next to Deering Ice Cream Shop)

Phone 725-8853

Tontine Hair Fashions

207-729-5475

BOWDOIN STUDENT DISCOUNT
FOR HAIRCUTS
BRING I.D.

TWO WOODY ALLEN FILMS
Friday and Saturday 10 P.M.

Quit smoking.

WE'RE FIGHTING FOR
YOUR LIFE

American Heart
Association

SIT DOWN OR TAKE OUT.

The Amato's Pasta Special,
every Monday and Tuesday.

Try the Amato's Pasta Special, delicious spaghetti or ziti and our own homemade meatballs and tomato sauce, with fresh bread on the side. A fantastic meal at this special price:

$2.49

Monday and Tuesday only

THERE'S NOTHING LIKE A REAL ITALIAN.

135 Maine Street, Brunswick. 3 Main St. Gorham
Open 6 am-Midnight, Sun.-Thur.; 6 am-1 am. Fri. & Sat.
Call 729-5514 for fast take out.

Deans

(Continued from page one)
institution and we need to recognize this in terms of the course schedule," said Nyhus, "the fixed lunch hour is one of the old anachronisms of Bowdoin we may have to surrender."

When asked about these plans, Jervis said they had been discussed as possible solutions to issues raised in discussion during her visit to Bowdoin in August.

Jervis stressed that these plans were only possible solutions which would need much more careful consideration after she gets an idea of what Bowdoin is like — what will help and what will make things worse.

"I am not coming to Bowdoin with a big agenda, what I would like to do first is listen," said Jervis. Jervis said she thought it was a mistake to arrive at a new institution with a preconceived plan of what changes need to be made and how to make them.

"The first few months I'm there I'm taking an intensive course on Bowdoin; what its strengths and weaknesses are. You need to get the feel of the institution first," said Jervis.

Asked for her thoughts on fraternities, Jervis said, "I have mixed feelings about fraternities because fraternities are a mixed bag."

Jervis said the question of whether or not fraternities are a good idea at a school like Bowdoin must be considered in terms of if their presence has a positive or negative impact on the academic purpose of the college.

Jervis said there are both good and bad aspects of fraternities.

and that she will have to wait until she gets here to see what fraternities are like at Bowdoin. She said if it is only a question of how some of them behave, then work on changing the behavior, but if it is a question of the institution itself, then the institution may have to be changed.

Although Hamilton and Bowdoin are very similar in many respects, Jervis said it will still be a major transition. "Every institution has its own personality and you have to be sensitive to that," said Jervis, adding that just the prospect of moving to an entirely new place full of entirely new people, especially in the middle of the year, was a scary one in itself.

Jervis said she was attracted to Bowdoin because it is a very good small, liberal arts school, and the position of Dean of the College has broader responsibilities than her current position at Hamilton.

Jervis said she doesn't like to feel too comfortable and after six years at Hamilton she had the feeling that she needed to try something a little bigger, different, and more challenging.

Before coming to Hamilton in 1982, Jervis served for four years as dean of Davenport College, Yale University, where she was a lecturer in the history of science. She was also a lecturer in history and political science at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute and worked as a free-lance scientific editor, writer, and education advisor.

Jervis is a graduate of Radcliffe College and earned her master's and doctoral degrees at Yale University.

NEW!!

Film Developing In 45 Minutes! Why Wait Any Longer?

MERCURY PHOTO

Quality Film Developing...Fast!

Kodak® Mini Lab System 25 processor
Newest Kodak paper and chemicals
Kodak Colorwatch quality control links
our lab with Rochester for unsurpassed results.

FULL LINE CAMERA STORE - Slide developing - cameras, film, batteries, bags - large frame selection - repairs

Ever Lost Your Film Or
Had It Come Back Wrong?

You only develop your film ONCE. You owe it to yourself to get the highest quality backed by
the KODAK® COLORWATCH™ SYSTEM.

I-95 (EXIT 24) & ROUTE 196, TOPSHAM, ME.

PASSPORTS
WHILE
YOU WAIT

Dismissals

(Continued from page one)

students normally contest." Lewallen commented that although most students initially resist dismissal, most later find it good that it happened. "Dismissal gives the student a chance to stop, refocus, think things through, and to come back far more prepared to succeed. A negative thing often becomes positive."

After a semester's absence from campus most dismissed students reapply for admission. The readmission process proves fairly uncomplicated.

In order to reapply, a student must demonstrate personal and intellectual maturity by submitting a record of experiences while away from Bowdoin. The student must also supply two written references to authenticate these efforts. According to Lewallen, "Generally readmission is assured if all is positive."

Unfortunately, however, anyone who returns to Bowdoin and then fails two courses for a second time is permanently dismissed. That generally does not happen. In the spring of 1987 two students who had formerly been dismissed for poor academic performance were asked to leave the college permanently.

After spring semester '87 the college dismissed sixteen of the seventeen students eligible for academic action. This figure indicates a higher number of students eligible for academic action and a higher number actually dismissed than in past spring semesters. In the spring of 1986 the Recording Committee reviewed the records of twelve students, in the spring of 1985 only eight.

Lewallen claims, "I don't know what to make of that right now. Every spring there appear more students eligible for dismissal."

Lewallen, when asked why, answered, "I hesitate to say there are trends...I hate to say we can make sweeping generalizations...but we can describe it." Lewallen pointed out that the failures may indicate a particular course, a particular professor, or a disproportionate group of people in a certain friendship or living arrangement that "support each other's academic misbehavior."

"I can't say that there has been a crackdown. I just think that the college is asking for more accountability and responsibility in a student's life here at Bowdoin College."

BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed

Karate DEMO

WU HSING SHAN SCHOOL OF MARTIAL ARTS

THURSDAY,
SEPT 17
COLBATH
ROOM
IN MORRELL
GYM

BEER • WINE • CHEESE • KEGS

SIMPLY, THE LOWEST PRICES!

A BOWDOIN TRADITION SINCE 1979

Results of Bowdoin College athletic events are available on Sportline. The number to call is (207)725-3061. Results for fall sports will be available after 9:00 p.m. daily beginning September 12.

Announcement

BRUNSWICK HOUSE OF PIZZA

WILL NOW DELIVER TO BOWDOIN CAMPUS!!!
FULL MENU AVAILABLE! NO DELIVERY CHARGE!

PIZZAS

	Reg.	Fam.
plain	$2.95	5.65	black olives	3.95 6.95
onion	3.45	6.25	sausage	3.95 6.95
pepper	3.45	6.25	meatball	3.95 6.95
onion & pepper	3.95	6.95	mushroom	3.95 6.95
salami	"	"	ham	3.95 6.95
anchovies	"	"	pastorini	3.95 6.95
hamburger	"	"	2 way combo	"
pepperoni	"	"	3 way combo	"
			Brunswick special	5.95 10.95

Gyros 2.75

BHOP is known for the best pizza and grinders in town. We use the best available meats and we give you more for your money than anyone in town. Give us a try and you'll agree.

729-5526

5 Delivery Times Per Night

SEAFOOD PLATES

Fresh haddock	5.75
clams	6.75
shrimp	6.35
scallops	6.95
seafood combo	8.50
above served w/fries & cole slaw
Greek salad	2.85
antipasto	3.25

MEAL TAX 5%

GRINDERS

	Med.	Lg.
meatball	2.60	3.25	sliced turkey	2.70 3.95
sausage	"	"	veal cutlet	2.60 3.25
hot pastromi	"	"	vegetarian	2.25 2.60
italian	"	"	pepper steak	2.80 3.45
salami	2.60	3.25	cheese steak	2.80 3.45
imported ham	2.70	3.35	mushroom steak	2.90 3.65
genoa salami	2.60	3.25	onion steak	2.80 3.45
tuna salad	"	"	special steak	2.95 3.75
roast beef	2.80	3.60	Brunswick special	2.95 3.80

SIDE ORDERS

French fries	.85	1.15
Onion rings	.95	1.60

DINNERS

Chicken Tenders	4.05
Fried Chicken	4.05
served w/fries & COLE SLAW

SPAGHETTI

w/sauce	2.95
w/sausage	3.45
w/meatballs	3.45
w/mushroom	3.95
lasagna	4.40
veal cutlet	3.45

MEAL TAX 5%

SPORTS

Bears prepare to do battle

By MATT LONDON
ORIENT Staff

Although only a scrimmage, tomorrow's game against Division II Springfield is a big day for Coach Howard Vandersee and his Bowdoin football team, who will be trying to turn things around after last year's 2-6 finish.

"An awful lot of decisions will be made Saturday," said Vandersee indicating that there are still positions that are up in the air.

In comparing this year's Bowdoin team to last year's squad, experience will play a more prominent role. There are many returning players giving the coaching staff not only a deeper squad to work with, but, according to Vandersee, a more knowledgeable and confident one as well.

Ryan Stafford '89 will start at quarterback Saturday, sharing time with Michael Kirch '90. Mike Cavanaugh '90, who worked out at quarterback last year, has been moved to wide receiver joining speedster Eric Gans '88 and Bill Herrmann '88.

The Polar Bears have a number of people who can gain big yards on the ground. Much is expected from Greg Bohannon '88, a 1985 NESCAC All-Star, who missed last season studying away. The Arlington, Massachusetts duo of Gerry Cronin '89 and Brian Deveau '90 will also see plenty of action in the offensive backfield.

Co-captain Chip Davis '88 will anchor the offensive line with help from returning starters Vincent Fusco '89 and William Mackey '89.

Defensively, Bowdoin is a much more experienced unit than a year ago. Middle guard Ed Daft '89, the team's strongest player, leads the defensive corps and is the key player on Bowdoin's five man front line. However, Daft will have plenty of support from the end positions. Dave Otto '89 has become a top-notch defensive end over his two previous Polar Bear campaigns and, along with end David Balestrery '89 will attempt to contain opposing offenses.

At the two linebacker spots, the Polar Bears plan to start John Ollis '88 and Ken Fusco '89.

The secondary features co-captain Chris Fitz '88 at one corner with Ken McLaughlin '89 at the other. Mike Burnett '89 and Terrence Conroy '89 will rove free at the safety positions.

The special teams are undetermined as yet, but Saturday's game should give Vandersee a better idea of the players he'll be using on those units.

Bowdoin plays an eight game regular season that kicks off a week from tomorrow at home against Norwich. After the Norwich game, Bowdoin plays strictly NESCAC opponents with a home date against Bates, November 7th and will conclude the season a week later at Colby.

Coach Howard Vandersee surveys the troops for the 1987 gridiron edition. Photo by Asaf Farashuddin

X-Country competes

By CHRIS LACKE
ORIENT Staff

A new coach, new training facilities, and a hoard of new talent are the main ingredients in what the men's and women's cross-country teams are hoping will help to turn this into one of the strongest seasons in recent history.

New head coach Peter Slovenski hopes to turn the Polar Bears into a strong unit from top to bottom. With the first meet still over a week away, Coach Slovenski has been putting the runners through long-distance workouts while saving the speed workouts for a later time.

The men's captain is sophomore Marty Malague of Edison, N.J. Malague, the 2 man on the team last year, inherits a team well supplied not only in youth, but also a solid core of veterans who can help lead the freshmen. Junior Todd Dillon of Sharon, MA should fill Malague's 2 spot while seniors Colin Sweeney of Cambridge, MA, Jim Anderson of Brunswick, ME and sophomore Dave Polgar of Warren, NJ should push Malague and Dillon all season long.

This year's freshman class should also contribute heavily to the men's effort. Slovenski has lauded the efforts of four very strong newcomers to the program. John Dougherty of Eliot, ME was a state class B finalist last year and comes from one of the newest running traditions at Bowdoin. His older sister Rosemarie is the co-captain of the women's team. Ed Beagan and Sean Hale, both of Falmouth, MA were the 1 and 2 runners on their state championship team. Andy Sheffer of Weston, MA has also been praised for his early season efforts.

The women's team is showing some strong similarities to the men's team. The ladies are blessed with strong leadership in junior co-captains Rosemarie Dougherty of Eliot, ME and Deanna Hodgkin of Lewiston, ME. Both women have shown their talent over the past two years competing on cross-country and also very successfully on the track team. Sophomores Gretchen Herold and Leslie Dwight should also perform well for the team while injured senior Teresa Nester of Ridgefield, CT is staying on in a managerial role for the team. Slovenski has also identified four promising freshmen for the women's team. They are Marilyn Fredey of Sarasota, FL, Margaret Heron of Lexington, KY, Gwen Kay of Bethlehem, PA, and Jennifer Snow of Great Falls, MT.

All three captains have reacted well to the new coach and the abundance of freshmen. Hodgkin cites Slovenski's attitude toward his new job. "He's really excited about working with all of us. He laid out many new practice routes for us, even one where we ran on Popham Beach. The program is becoming more interesting and exciting each day."

Malague says that this is the best freshman class that he's known of in recent years. "They will definitely cushion the loss of Nord Samuelson, last year's captain who graduated this past year."

Although all three have cited that the team's have no long-term goals right now, it is obvious that they are all anxiously looking toward their first meet on the 19th when they tangle with UMO, USM, and Colby in Orono.

Women's tennis to win

By JAN BREKKE
ORIENT Staff

Despite losing his two top players to graduation last spring, women's tennis coach Ed Reid is optimistic about the 1987 season. Reid is confident that freshman Heidi Wallenfels, from Bellevue, Washington, will be able to make up for the loss of former number one player Anne Penner. "Wallenfels is definitely state material," commented Reid. "She should be very competitive with both Bates' and Colby's number one players this year." Other newcomers that should help out include freshman Katherine Loebe, from Columbus, Ohio, and squash recruit Erika Gustafsson.

Reid is counting on co-captains Heidi Snyder and Jennifer Tews to provide leadership for the young Polar Bears. Tews is currently recovering from an illness and hopes to return to the lineup in the near future. Other returnees from last year's team include Patty Ingraham '89, Suzanne Fogarty '90 and Jennifer Grimes '90.

The Polar Bears will get their first test of the season on September 15th, when they travel to face the University of Maine in Orono. With experienced teams such as UNH, Bates and Colby on the schedule, it could be a tough season for the young team, but coach Reid likes what he sees thus far.

Soccer squad in pre-season scrimmage. Photo by Mary Ann Lai

Soccer ready to kick

By JUSTIN PRISENDORF
ORIENT Assistant Sports Editor

Having gained experience last year, the 1987 Bowdoin men's soccer team has an optimistic outlook about this season.

"I am guardedly optimistic about this team this season. The nucleus of the squad has gained experience, and I feel we should continue to improve this fall despite our youth," said Head Coach Tim Gilbride.

This year's co-captains are Scott Farrell '88 and Richard Adams '88, both proven leaders, who will anchor the men's defensive unit. The Polar Bears lost their two most consistent point scoring threats with the graduation of last year's co-captains Mike McCabe and Rolf Langeland. However, with sixteen returning lettermen including the high powered front line of Stathis Manousos '88, Karl Maier '89 and Christopher Garbaccio '90, the team is confident it can compensate for these two major losses.

The key to defense this year is depth. Coach Gilbride has three weathered goalies to call on: Peter Levitt '88, Bruce Wilson '90, and Charles Waldorf '90. Although

(Continued on page 12)

Sport shorts

Leonard drafted

Jon J. Leonard '87 of Bedford, N.H., a three-time All-American defenseman on the men's varsity hockey team, was selected by the Pittsburgh Penguins in the National Hockey League's supplemental draft. Leonard is presently playing semi-professional hockey in Sweden.

Dempsey praised

Last spring, junior Catherine Dempsey of Philadelphia, Pa., was named to the United States Women's Lacrosse Association's Division II/III All-American first team. Senior Audrey Augustin of Wellesley Hills, Mass., was named USWLA honorable mention All-American.

It was the second national award for Dempsey, who was named to the coaches' All-American second team in 1986. She has anchored Bowdoin's defensive unit for the past two seasons, during which the Polar Bears have established a 26-3 record, and advanced to the NIAC finals twice. Bowdoin allowed only 113 goals in 14 games in 1987.

Augustin was called on to do more scoring from her center position last season to help out a young attack unit. She responded by scoring 20 more points than in 1986, and ended up second on the team in scoring with 29-15-44 totals.

Smart wrestlers

Recent graduates Harold E. Barakewood '87 of Lincolnville, Maine, and Thomas M. Teare '87 of Scituate, Mass., were named to the College Sports Information Directors of America (CoSIDA) All-American team in the sport of wrestling.

Barakewood, who graduated cum laude with high honors in physics, wrestled in the 177-pound and 190-pound weight classes during his career at Bowdoin. He was awarded the 1987 Noel C. Little Prize in Experimental Physics, presented annually to the graduating senior who has distinguished himself or herself in experimental physics.

Teare was a dean's list student majoring in biology. He was a dominating athlete last year in the 142-pound class and finished in the top five at the year-ending Northern New England meet.

Each year, CoSIDA chooses Academic All-America students in NCAA recognized sports. Nominees must be starters or active reserves and carry at least a 3.2 grade point average or its equivalent.

Field hockey gears up

By MONIQUE DA SILVA
ORIENT Staff

The women's varsity field hockey team is getting ready for a tough season. Not only have they lost their starting goalie and a key defensive player, but they are also faced with the toughest game schedule in the team's history.

After a successful 1986 season that ended in an invitation to the season-ending NIAC Tournament, the team lost two of their key players to graduation. All-State goalie Margaret Churchill and Honorable Mention Regional All-American defender Kim Conly often played key roles in the team's victories.

"Fortunately," said Coach Sally Lapointe, "Conly's position will be filled by her substitute who was away last year to patch up our defense. The whole line is still in tact."

"In place of Churchill we have three possible players, including two freshmen who have shown a lot of promise."

Fifteen freshmen made the team and seven of them are very strong players. "They have the speed and the skills needed on our team," said LaPointe. "We have never had such a strong pool of freshmen to choose from before."

"This new formation of players will take sometime to get together," says LaPointe. "It's a new challenge for everyone, the competition will make it more exciting for the older group." The Bears are facing a tough playing schedule, which has only one suspected weak spot against New England College further along in the season. The opponents include Salem State, University of Southern Maine, University of Maine at Farmington and Plymouth State, four large universities with a much larger pool from which to choose their players.

Also lined up are Trinity, Wheaton, Wesleyan and Middlebury, solid teams that are on the rebound and becoming stronger every year.

"Of course, Bates and Colby are our greatest challengers," states LaPointe. "Bates is a perennial challenge that ends in a blood bath. Colby will be very important this season as we lost our game to them last year. Our goalie got hurt and we played the second half with an open net. We were very successful in keeping them in front of the fifty yard line, but unfortunately they did get the chance to score one more goal than we did. We are seeking revenge, so that should be an exciting game."

"The tough schedule will be good for us," cites LaPointe. "It will require us to play at a high level consistently, which will keep the team in top shape."

The Bears will begin their season on September 18 at Middlebury. On September 19 they will travel to Trinity.

Soccer

(Continued from page 11)

Levitt has seen the most game time, Wilson and Waldorf have the experience to challenge Levitt for Gilbride's nod.

The women's soccer program at Bowdoin has a precedence of excellence. This year's team has high expectations coming off an 11-5 season highlighted by a trip to the NIAC Tournament finals.

However, Coach John Cullen sees the need for some repair. "We've had some key losses. Our leading goal-scorer Sally Daggett '87 has graduated, as have our first three performers off the bench...you can see the holes we must fill."

The Polar Bear offensive attack this year is lead by Karen Crehore '90 and Jennifer Russell '89. Last year, Crehore had 24 points while Russell had seven goals and four assists.

Co-captain midfielders Nancy Delaney '88 and Joanna DeWolfe '88 look to dominate the defense this year and get the offense rolling with their pinpoint passing.

Freshman Melanie Koza will start in the net this season for the women.

The Polar Bears start the season on the road with two games on September 18 and 19, against Middlebury and Trinity.

BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed

ITALIANS DELIVERED. FREE.

Announcing free delivery service for all Amato's great food.

Amato's in Brunswick will now deliver many of its great menu items. And they'll deliver them free. It's the ultimate in fast, convenient service. Delicious pastas, pizzas, calzone, and dinners and our famous Italian sandwiches with fresh cold cuts, thick slices of plump tomatoes and more are only a phone call away. With a minimum order of $15.00, these and many other of our menu items can be at your door, as fresh and as fast as if you ordered them at the counter.

Sunday-Thursday, 4 pm to 11:30 pm
Friday and Saturday, 4 pm to midnight

So call ahead and enjoy speedy, free delivery from the home of the original Italian sandwich.

THERE'S NOTHING LIKE A REAL ITALIAN.

135 Maine Street, Brunswick
Open 6 am-midnight, Sun-Thur.; 6 am-1 am, Fri. and Sat.
Call 729-5514 for fast take-out and free delivery.

PROFESSORS STUDENTS GET THE NEW YORK TIMES

AT 50% OFF NEWSSTAND PRICE!

SAVE MONEY WHEN YOU GET THE NEW YORK TIMES THROUGH YOUR CAMPUS REPRESENTATIVE

	FALL TERM	WHOLE YEAR
WEEKDAYS (Mon. - Sat.)	() 19.50	() 40.25

WEEKDAYS	() 39.00	() 80.75
----------	-----------	-----------

AND SUNDAYS

RETURN WITH CHECK PLEASE MAKE CHECKS
VIA CAMPUS MAIL TO: PAYABLE TO
ADAM NAJBERG
M.U. BOX 571

Students: You can pick up
The Times in Moulton Union
9 AM to 11 PM

Professors: Give your address and The Times will be delivered the same day.

Rugby games

Clinic will feature Irish team

By KEVIN WESLEY
ORIENT Assistant Editor

Rugby will take on both international and local flavors tomorrow when ruggers from around the world compete at Bowdoin.

A team from the University of Ulster, Northern Ireland, will play the Portland Rugby "A" Club tomorrow at noon at Pickard Field. Following, the Bowdoin Rugby Club will play the Portland "B" Club.

When not playing, the Irish ruggers will be staying at Bow-doin, according to Andrew Palmer '88, president of the Bowdoin Rugby Club.

Prior to the games, a clinic will be held at Pickard Field from 9:30 a.m. to noon for college rugby players attending Maine colleges. The clinic is sponsored by the Bowdoin Rugby Club and the Portland Rugby Club.

Palmer said players from Bowdoin, Bates, Colby, University of Maine and Maine Maritime Academy are expected to attend the clinic, which will focus on drills and technique. The public is invited.

STOWE TRAVEL

MID COAST MAINE'S MOST COMPLETE TRAVEL AGENCY
A TRAVELERS NATIONAL NETWORK AGENCY

- GROUP TRAVEL SPECIALISTS ■ BUSINESS ACCOUNTS
- INCENTIVE TRAVEL ■ CRUISES ■ AMTRAK ■ AIRLINES
- VCR CASSETTE TRAVEL LIBRARY ■ VACATION PACKAGES
- GREYHOUND ■ WESTERN UNION
- $150,000 AUTOMATIC FLIGHT INSURANCE

"ALL SERVICES AT NO EXTRA COST"

725-5573

9 PLEASANT ST. BRUNSWICK

Call toll free in Maine 1-800-522-9990

8:30 - 5:30 DAILY
9 - 2 SAT (SUMMER)
9 - 4 SAT (WINTER)

BLOOM COUNTY
by Berke Breathed

CLINIQUE

"Extra Wonderfals" yours at no extra charge whatever with any Clinique purchase of 10.00 or more.

Facial Soap Mild

Clinique dermatologists say good skin starts here

Dramatically Different Moisturizing Lotion

Famous "drink" all skins need

Eye Shadow Duo

Seashell Pink for highlighting; Violet Rain for shading

Peach Lily Different Lipstick

Fresh, ripe, a clear wear-now shade

Lip Brush

Lucite with silvery touches
one bonus to a customer

Clinique is a total system of skin care.
For a fast, free skin analysis,
come and meet the Clinique computer.

All Clinique products are allergy tested and 100% fragrance free.

Senter's

124 MAINE STREET • BRUNSWICK • MAINE • 04011 • 725-5558

Shop daily Monday through Saturday 9:00-6:00 • Enjoy lunch in The Greenery 11:00-2:30

Fraternities under fire

Students returning to campus over the past two weeks may feel they are coming back to a different college. Freshmen moving onto campus may think they are not at the same college they visited last year. In many ways, they are correct.

The fraternity system has been put through some profound changes in its traditional rush procedure this fall. Furthermore, it seems to many who heard President A. Leroy Greason's convocation address that dry rush may be just the first step in a campaign initiated by the administration to profoundly change the role fraternities play at Bowdoin.

Greason announced in his speech a planned "review" of Bowdoin's fraternities. He also suggested a college in twenty years without fraternities. Coupled with the proposed review, this projection has troubled fraternity members and independents alike who enjoy the benefits of the fraternity system at Bowdoin. And when dry rush is added to the picture, all these developments seem to fit together in a disturbing manner.

These developments seem to point to an intent on the part of the administration of the college to alter the basic purposes and nature of the Bowdoin fraternity system. Indeed, in his convocation address Greason said that the current fraternity system had no "very clear purpose." We must disagree with the president in the strongest terms on this score. Indeed, the fraternities should find much of what Greason said in his address insulting and offensive. One of the strongest arguments they have in their arsenal is their very existence and popularity. If they were not answering the needs of the campus, they would not exist in their current form.

The willingness the fraternities have displayed to play by the rules and work with the college in a reasonable manner is pointed up especially by the efforts the fraternities made to police each other and themselves. This effort went to the painful extreme of suspending parties at one fraternity — Psi Upsilon — for two nights.

Another aspect of fraternity life too often overlooked by those who look in from the outside is the fact that every fraternity is more than a place to party. A moment's thought will probably call to mind reports of fraternity charitable efforts, open houses for both faculty and the community, and lecture series and cultural events sponsored by fraternities.

Neighbors who have complaints about the fraternities probably have not sent their sons and daughters to the holiday parties some fraternities sponsor for neighborhood children. Benefactors of fraternity charity fundraising events would be unlikely to disparage the fraternity system. Guest lecturers at fraternity lecture series have seen a big part of fraternity life that the administration has not.

And perhaps most important is the simple day-to-day lifestyle that brothers and sisters lead. They do not publicize it because they take it for granted, but it surely means more to any fraternity member than any campus wide.

The administration has the responsibility to create an atmosphere in which a liberal arts student may be educated to the highest possible level. However, an administration which thinks education begins and ends with academic and cultural pursuits has no place at Bowdoin.

The college's responsibility includes the right and indeed the duty to exercise its control over the fraternities when they fail to meet reasonable standards of behavior. Have they failed to meet these standards in the past to such a level to justify the changes the college seems to have in the works? We say no.

Greason in his speech compared fraternities to the Peucinian and Athenian Societies. He made a faulty analogy. These were groups which died due to lack of student support. If the fraternities at Bowdoin die now, they will not have died for the same reason. They will have been hounded to death by an administration too eager to jump on the bandwagon of colleges abolishing fraternities.

The administration must bear in mind that Bowdoin is not the same place as Amherst or Colby, two schools which abolished fraternities. We contend that there is no wise or safe way to abolish fraternities at a school where the students want them in numbers enough to generate a system the magnitude of Bowdoin's. The president must realize that if a Bowdoin without fraternities is meant to be, it will come about naturally. No administrative act will kill fraternities if there is a need for them on campus.

Regulations should exist in accordance with the standards of the society that creates them. Any effort on the part of the administration to severely alter the current fraternity system would not be a wise regulation. It would instead be an attempt to impose artificial standards on a self-directed community.

The fraternity system has flaws which need to be addressed soon. But pressure on the fraternities at a time when they are making an effort to bring themselves into line with standards the college has set is a mistake. Further regulations will increase tension and do nothing to solve present problems.

And if the administration is looking to ameliorate a perceived alcohol problem at the college, they should look not to the fraternities, but to the reasons for excessive drinking at the college. Anyone who believes the alcohol problem will disappear if fraternities do might as well leave his head in the sand. Fraternities do not cause people to abuse alcohol.

The current policy of the administration on fraternities, coupled with their failure to fill the gap in campus social life, make the campus a time bomb. And it is up to the administration to defuse it now.

KEVIN WESLEY

Under the Pines

The big step. The last leap before reality. College.

Departing for those ivy-covered walls means no more senior proms, six-hour school days or detention halls. Replacing those activities are 2 a.m. pizza runs, inorganic chemistry lectures and sleepy cups of coffee as you run to class across campus.

The shocking comparison between high school and college is that there are very few similarities.

The trauma begins when you arrive on the first day of school, freshman year.

When all your clothes have been hauled out of the station wagon, and box after box of Bruce Springsteen records and notebook paper have been dumped in your room, you turn to your parents to say goodbye. Then it hits you - you're not in high school anymore.

Right away, you know something is different.

The first harsh realities of college life appear about a week after arrival, when the supply of clean clothes is down to a bare minimum. It's laundry time. That's when all that summer coaching on separating colors from whites, wools from cottons, will be forgotten. The results will be pink underwear, size four shirts and a pile of mismatched socks.

Letter

To the Editor:

Happily, those silly people who cry that Bowdoin is not progressive will be silenced. Indeed, Bowdoin is striding boldly into the '80s making an intelligent, well-planned, and progressive movement. It's true: Bobo is expanding and repaving the walks. The college has even cut down a couple of trees. And none too soon.

I can scarcely contain my joy at the thought of the day when the college will have completed the Capital Paving Campaign and the quad is finally finished. It comes as a surprise to find that some actually oppose this move, an utterly unreasonable stance when one considers the numerous benefits. Besides the obvious aesthetic improvement, there is the enormous savings that the college will reap from the improved groundskeeping. Asphalt can be cleaned with a quick sweep from time to time. In addition, asphalt attracts much-needed heat for those long Maine winters (the tanners will enjoy the warmth in the summer) and it has been

College forces most people to mature quicker than they would like. Your seven-course high school schedule drops to four, but your nightly two hours of homework jump to six. In high school history class, reading a chapter a night is common; in a similar college class, you're expected to read a book each night. Usually, you don't.

One of the more striking differences between high school and college is your environment. Suddenly your world is filled almost entirely with men and women 18 to 22 years old. It's an isolated and unrealistic oasis where the real world isn't invited. You eat, drink, sleep, share bathrooms, attend parties and travel solely with the Pepsi Generation. You won't realize how lucky you are, however, until you return home during your first semester break.

In your absence, the parents you think you've missed so much have grown rusty. For several months, they've been without a foothold on each aspect of your life and they feel they have to make up for lost time. Curfew, dinners with Aunt Jane, and pleas to get your hair cut and your room clean will haunt you incessantly. You will eagerly await the start of next semester.

(Continued on page 15)

proven to be a deterrent to dogs with overactive bowels and those many squirrels (the lack of trees could further this effort). And perhaps best of all, the asphalt will not die from the myriads of vehicles careening about campus, as the grass now does. The only pity is that it was not completed sooner so that the job of installing the drainage pipes this summer could have been avoided.

Sincerely,

Shallee T. Page '89

Let's hear it

The Orient is a student newspaper, designed to serve the campus of Bowdoin College. Letters to the editor are always welcome and we will print as many as space permits. Send them by campus mail to the Orient, or deliver them in person to our offices at 12 Cleveland Street.

If you have more to say than you can fit in a short letter, and want to write an in-depth opinion, please contact Jack Cahill, Editorials Editor, at the Orient or Coles Tower Box 313.

Subscribe to the Orient

If someone special to you is a member of the Bowdoin community, what better way to keep up with what's going on in that person's life than a subscription to the ORIENT? Stay up to date on news, sports, entertainment, and the life of a college campus by having the ORIENT sent to your home every week.

For $8.00 a semester or $15.00 a year, you can have the nation's oldest continuously published college weekly delivered to your door. Send check or money order, payable to the Bowdoin Publishing Company, to:

THE ORIENT
Bowdoin College
Brunswick, ME 04011

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

Member United States Student Press Association

"The College exercises no control over the content of the student writings contained herein and neither it, the Administration, nor the faculty assumes any responsibility for the views expressed herein."

Lori Bodwell...Editor in Chief

Kevin Wesley...Assistant Editor
Adam Najberg...News Editor
Rosemarie Dougherty...Assoc. News Editor

Tamara Dassanayake...Asst. News Editor
Eric Foushee...Account Executive
Alan Harris...Photography Editor
Mary Ann Lai...Photography Editor
Lizz Millan...Asst. Entertainment Editor

Michael Botelho...Sports Editor
Jack Cahill...Editorials Editor
Susan Lyons...Contributing Editor

Kathryn Nanovic...Production Manager
Justin Prisdorf...Asst. Sports Editor
Stephen Reynolds...Features Editor
Sharon Smart...Entertainment Editor
Michael Townsend...Advertising Manager

Dawn Vance...Asst. News Editor

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

Published by

THE BOWDOIN PUBLISHING COMPANY

LORI M. BODWELL ALBERT P. MAURO, JR.

Published weekly when classes are held during the Fall and Spring semester by the students of Bowdoin College. Address editorial communication to the Editor, subscription communication to the circulation manager, and business correspondence to the business manager: The Bowdoin Orient, 12 Cleveland Street, Brunswick, Maine 04011, or telephone (207) 725-3300. The Bowdoin Orient reserves the right to edit any and all articles and letters. Subscriptions are $15.00 per year or $8.00 per semester. Past issues cannot be mailed. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to The Bowdoin Orient, Moulton Union, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011.

Under the Pines

(Continued from page 14)

The other key change college unveils is the opportunity to indulge in every possible vice known to mankind, plus several new ones. Eating becomes a treat, but soon all those new jeans don't fit so well and are replaced in popularity by baggy sweat pants ideal for hiding growing bulges.

Unfortunately, the majority of the Freshman Fifteen comes from sources other than food. Fraternity parties breed promiscuity and free alcohol. The not-so-strange thing is that one blends very well with the other.

The 3 a.m. binge is necessary because, in college, bedtime doesn't come until after David Letterman finishes his spiel and Domino's Pizza closes. It's been rumored that some students actually study late at night. Either way, the problem is that the next morning, you pay for it.

The long mornings in bed will come back to haunt you. The last week of classes hits and you realize you have to find the notes for six different classes. Exam week blues have hit.

There is nothing in high school that even remotely resembles a college exam. At 9 a.m., you enter a large gymnasium. It's usually raining or snowing outside, and the heater doesn't work. You want to sleep two hours ago and slept for three minutes. The rest of the time, calculus equations and quotes of Ralph Waldo Emerson flash in your mind. This is what cost your parents $17,000.

You arrive at the test and sit down. It's a good idea to peruse the test before starting. You'll panic when you don't recognize the first 12 questions, then persevere. Three hours and four blue books (little pamphlets that remind you of phonics drillbooks in second grade) later, answers will flow with ease. "Compare the macroeconomic principles of John Keynes and Milton Friedman as they pertain to supply side inflationary policies (fiscal and monetary) and the resulting stagflation," are no problem.

So what are the big differences between high school and college? College is more challenging, more social, and more fattening. Reprinted courtesy of Essex County Newspapers, Beverly, MA

American Heart Association
WE'RE FIGHTING FOR YOUR LIFE

BEHIND COLES TOWER

the Samuel Newman House
Circa 1821

7 South St., Brunswick, Me. 04011
For Reservations, call (207) 725-6959

BED & BREAKFAST

Come browse through our yarns and patterns.
Knitting can be very relaxing.

A Likely Yarn opening Tues.-Fri. at noon, Sat. 10-2
90 UNION STREET BRUNSWICK, ME 04011
(207) 725-2147 Yarns, Books, Needles, Knitting Totes, etc.

CLASSES START TUESDAY
Beginning Knitting — Tues. 4-6 p.m., 6 wks.
Design-A-Sweater — Wed. 6-8 p.m., 6 wks.
Pick-A-Project — Thurs 6:30-8:30 p.m., 6 wks.
$30.00/course

Tontine Fine Candies

Bring this ad into the shop and receive a piece of our delicious, smooth, creamy chocolates. Come in and make yourself known.
We are in the Tontine Mall.

Theme house opens

By TAMARA DASSANAYAKE
ORIENT Asst. News Editor

"All Are Welcome" was the message on the banner hanging from the windows of 30 College Street as it was officially declared the International House this Monday.

President of the College, A. LeRoy Gresson reiterated the welcome in the banner as he lit the auspicious "oil lamp" together with many representatives of the College community. Gresson added that the lighting of the lamp, a Sri Lankan tradition, was also symbolic because of the light and heat it emits. Light is representative of the spread of knowledge while heat represents the warmth of friendship and understanding.

The International House, as it will be known henceforth, will serve as the headquarters of the International Club. The Club's proposal was chosen from among several applications submitted to the Dean's Office this Spring. International Club members said that the house will serve as a center for cross-cultural experience at Bowdoin. There are presently two language teaching fellows and six students living at the house.

The house will also contain a study away/research library and will be the venue for a variety of events including international festivals and dinners, weekly coffee houses, slide shows, debates and language sessions.

The members of the club welcome any suggestions that would enhance the purpose of the house and invite the college community to share the benefits of this new facility.

Flowers by Knowles

Welcome to Bowdoin
We offer a complete florist service.

15 Jordan Ave.

725-2461

Pauline's Bloomers

DURING SEPT. - 25% off on all plants
Tontine Mall, Brunswick, 725-5952

QUALITY FLORAL SERVICE

Anniversary, Birthday, Hospital, Wedding, Sympathy, Holiday, All Occasions

Flowers, Plants & Gifts

We Deliver Wire Service

Balloons & Candy

Major Credit Cards Accepted • Open 6 days 9:00 to 5:30

Don't compete with a Kaplan student — be one.

Why? Consider this: More students increase their scores after taking a Kaplan prep course than after taking anything else.

Why? Kaplan's test-taking techniques and educational programs have 50 years of experience behind them. We know students. And we know what helps boost their confidence and scoring potential.

So if you need preparation for the: LSAT, GMAT, MCAT, GRE, DAT, ADVANCED MEDICAL BOARDS, TOEFL, NURSING BOARDS, NTE, CPA, INTRO TO LAW, SPEED READING, or others, call us.

Why be at a disadvantage?

KAPLAN
STANLEY H. KAPLAN EDUCATIONAL CENTER LTD.

Get the Kaplan edge on your exam.

Maine classes forming now.
Call collect (617) 964-TEST

ESSENTIAL PARTY FAVORS

Having some friends over? Then you'll want plenty of hot, delicious pizza from Domino's Pizza® on hand for the occasion.

Whether you're expecting one person or a whole roomful, Domino's Pizza has the answer. We'll handle your order with the efficiency that has made us the world's largest pizza delivery company.

So guarantee the success of your next party. Call Domino's Pizza. Our pizza is the essential party favor at any campus get-together!

729-5561

26 Bath Road Brunswick

Hours:

4:30pm - 1am Mon.-Thurs.
11am - 2 am Fri. & Sat.
11am - 1 am Sun.

Our drivers carry less than $20.00.
Limited delivery area.
©1987 Domino's Pizza, Inc.

DOMINO'S
PIZZA
DELIVERS®
FREE.

Over 1100 served

Something fishy: Joshua Bloomstone '89 was one of 1,100 members of the Bowdoin community served in Wednesday's Annual Lobster Bake. Dining Services relocated to behind Coles Tower for the annual fete, at which approximately 850 lobsters were served to drooling diners. And, that's no fish story. Photo by Lori Bodwell.

Classrooms overflow again

By TANYA WEINSTEIN
ORIENT Staff

Did your schedule work out the way you planned? If it didn't, you're not the only one.

According to acting Dean of the College, "Paul L. Nyhus, class overcrowding has been a problem at Bowdoin for several years, and this semester is no exception. Many students—even seniors—are not able to take classes they want, creating a conflict in their schedules.

Nyhus attributes the problem to the fact that many students are attracted to a course due to the reputation of the teacher, not only by the interest level of the material.

Nyhus foresees no way to alleviate this problem, he said, although approximately 30 new faculty have been hired this year as replacements or new professors.

Another cause of overcrowding is that in past years several class enrollment limitations have been dropped from 75 to 50 students. This puts 25 students "out into the academic market," according to Nyhus. The smaller classes still have the same amount of students clamoring for places, with less of them being admitted.

The large introductory classes are often easier for students to get into, but are crowded, creating a shortage of textbooks and laboratory space. "The jam up is in comparatively small classes," Nyhus said.

While the majority of classes have 20 students or less enrolled, there are several classes of 80 students and above. Nyhus said he hoped that students balance out their schedules so "they can have their mob classes as well as smaller classes."

(Continued on page seven)

Asian studies program to expand

By RICHARD LINDAHL
ORIENT Contributor

At Tuesday night's meeting of the Committee on Asian Studies, the area of course offerings in Japanese language was identified as being the weakest part of the Asian Studies curriculum. The committee discussed ways in which the current situation might be improved.

The method which now provides Bowdoin students with the opportunity to study Japanese is to attend courses at Bates College in Lewiston and language labs at Bowdoin. This avenue of instruction is open only to a maximum of five Bowdoin students for the two years of Japanese that Bates offers; therefore, study of the language is not an opportunity that is open for all Bowdoin students. A possible remedy to the situation is under investigation by the committee.

"We're working hard to find a way for first and second year Japanese to be taught at Bowdoin," said Kidder Smith, Assistant Professor of History. The committee hopes that such a program might be in place as early as the next academic year.

Even though Japanese language may come to Bowdoin, the co-operative program with Bates would most likely continue said Smith. There has been discussion among members of the committee concerning a plan in which Bates and Bowdoin would still exchange students for advanced language courses.

By the terms of the "very preliminary plan," Bates and Bowdoin would each offer courses to their own students for first and

(Continued on page ten)

Big time: Bowdoin's unrecognized sorority has attained national status as a Phi Sigma Sigma Chapter.

Sorority goes national

By CHARLES HASSRICK
ORIENT Contributor

Alpha Beta Phi, Bowdoin College's unrecognized sorority, has gone national.

Sorority members' attitudes toward the change in name and stature was evident last spring when they unanimously voted to become a local chapter of Phi Sigma Sigma. The sorority had faced possible extinction when their lease expired last spring.

The search for a sponsor began last spring when Alpha Phi wrote to all 26 national sororities. Many replied, and three were brought to the campus and interviewed by the Alpha Phis. The final choice was Phi Sigma Sigma.

This summer, the national chapter of Phi Sigma Sigma provided two Bowdoin sorority members with leadership training. House president Kate Adams and member Lisa Aufranc attended the four-day seminar, which taught them aspects of successful sorority management (i.e. methods to attract women and rush activities and procedure).

The national chapter also aided

(Continued on page ten)

Sci center still on hold

By DAWN VANCE
ORIENT Asst. News Editor

Bowdoin College will soon witness the arrival of a new science facility. As of yet the facility remains in the planning stages, but it won't take too much longer before construction sets under way.

The science facility presently being planned will house the college's four science departments—biology, chemistry, physics and geology, as well as contain a comprehensive science library. Due to the requirement of much careful consideration, the planning process has proved itself long and drawn out, but this process is nearing its conclusion.

According to Dean of the Faculty Craig A. McEwen, the long length of time required for the planning of the new facility stems from the fact that it is, "one of the most complicated buildings you could ever choose to build...the architects must take into consideration the sort of chemicals housed in each lab, all the engineering involved, the exhaust systems...for instance, the level of the detail of the planning is far beyond what one would require for a house."

Thus far the Science Building Committee has completed a reasonable design of the outer envelope of the new science facility that will envelop Sills Hall and space in front of Cleveland Hall. Now the focus of the planning will concentrate upon the interior of the new facility.

The Science Building Committee's task lies in determining the amount of space required by the four departments involved in addition to the science library. The individual departments are presently working closely with the architects of the facility to refine the necessary space in terms of laboratories, classrooms, offices, and research space.

Once the Committee has completed this stage of the planning process it will prove possible to address the issue of cost. At that time, possibly the end of 1987 or early 1988, the Committee will present the Governing Boards of the College with a figure of the projected cost. Present estimates project the cost at $21 million.

The ultimate decision to go forward or to abandon the project rests with the Governing Boards. Said McEwen, "It is my assumption that there will be a vote of the Governing Boards during their winter meetings to commit us to move forwards, but of course that depends upon a clear statement of cost."

From where and how fast the money is coming remains the question. Construction will not begin until at least a portion of the required funding becomes available.

Some of the required funds will come from the college's Capital Campaign. However, these will hardly fulfill the total need required for completion of the new facility.

According to McEwen, "Groups are in place for the purpose of fundraising and they will be distributing publicity materials...within the next month these materials will be out and fundraising will be in full stride."

Unfortunately, considerations (Continued on page five)

Greason reveals review members

By ADAM NABBERG
ORIENT News Editor

A capacity crowd listened in silence as President of the College A. LeRoy Greason presided over the semester's first Chapel talk.

The Chapel Talk program, once an institution at Bowdoin, had slipped out of fashion. The Interfraternity Council, in an effort to "expand the boundaries of the intellectual life of the college," has reinstituted the practice.

Greason received much attention after his convocation speech when he called for a review of the fraternity system. In his twenty minute Chapel Talk, Greason announced the members of the committee that will review the position of the fraternity system at Bowdoin.

Chairing the committee is Merton Henry '80. Henry was formerly the chairman of the Board of Trustees and is the recipient of an honorary degree from Bowdoin.

Also serving on the committee is Dr. Leonard Cronkrite '41, a trustee, who has served as president of the Children's Hospital Medical Center in Boston and of the Medical College of Wisconsin.

Representing the Board of Overseers are Norman Cohen '56, president of the overseers, and Cynthia McFadden '78, currently a staff member at Columbia University.

Greason also chose Alfred Nicholson '50 as an alumni representative of the committee and

(Continued on page ten)

If it were up to you, what would you do with the Curtis Pool?

Dawn Johnson '89
"I think it should be a student lounge—a place for people to go to watch t.v. and relax."

Scott Milo '88
"I'd like to see it become fraternity office space."

By BECKY AUSTIN
ORIENT Contributor

Dean Lewallen
"I would rehabilitate some form of student alternative center, meeting facility, social facility (i.e. party, partial dining)."

Bill Fruth
"I'd like to see it turn into a theater or multi-purpose area. It could be a large floor used for a stage, meeting place, or other alternative activities."

They just don't make 'em like they used to. The old, graffiti-covered monitor's desk is moved from the Curtis Pool to the Farley Field House Pool, while President Gresson, who recently celebrated his 65th birthday, mugs for the camera sporting the latest in fashion swimwear. Photo by Alan Harris.

Bucket brigade opens pool with splash

By DAWN VANCE
ORIENT Asst. News Editor

The signs posted all over campus read, "Be part of Bowdoin history! Celebrate!" Indeed, a great portion of the Bowdoin College Community did just that Monday afternoon when it participated in the Bucket Brigade.

Monday's Bucket Brigade commemorated 60 years of service by the Curtis Pool and the opening of the new pool at Bowdoin's new Farley Field House. Administration, faculty, alumni and the student body joined the line to pass 16 buckets of water hand to hand to inaugurate the new pool complex.

Festivities began at the Curtis Pool with a presentation by Director of Career Services and of the Moulton Union Harry K. Warren and the drawing of the first ceremonial bucket by Donovan K. Lancaster. A sizeable crowd of people gathered around as Warren said, "to celebrate the closing of a facility... that has served so faithfully these last 60 years."

Lancaster contributed 42 years of service to the college and served as Bowdoin's First Swim Team coach when the pool opened in 1927. Warren said, "it is only fitting that Don Lancaster pour the first ceremonial bucket" as Lancaster prepared to empty the bucket.

Alumni and swim team members filled the remaining 15 buckets and the parade to Pickard Field was underway.

Unfortunately, the line of volunteers broke before reaching Coffin Street. In the spirit of fun, however, individual members of the community continued the transportation of the water to Pickard Field following President of the College A. LeRoy Gresson and the Bowdoin Bear as they drove by in a golf cart.

Upon reaching the new athletic complex, the Bowdoin Bear suited up in a life preserver and proceeded to kayak around the pool. President Gresson stood on the sidelines dressed in Bowdoin Swimming sweats, preparing to take the plunge as he awaited the arrival of all 16 buckets.

With the uncapping of the bucket lids Warren continued, "Here to take the inaugural swim is President A. LeRoy Gresson, who celebrated his 65th birthday yesterday...and now to officially open the new pool."

Gresson did in fact commence to swim a lap, costumed in vintage swimwear: grey tanktop and boxer-like shorts. At the same time the crowd dumped the 16 buckets of water into the pool.

Then the real fun started with Warren's announcement, "Anybody else prepared to go swimming, jump in!" Those prepared to swim were not the only ones to end up in the pool - a sufficient number found themselves thrown in.

Bowdoin awarded grant

By CHRISTINE HONG
ORIENT Contributor

Students receiving financial aid will benefit from a $1,000 grant recently awarded to Bowdoin College.

The Sears-Roebuck Foundation awarded the unrestricted grant to Bowdoin, which President A. LeRoy Gresson designated for student financial aid.

"The gift will go toward our scholarship budget and thereby enable Bowdoin to help our ablest applicants to accept admission to the college," Gresson said.

Alumnus David C. Gleason '70 presented the check to Gresson this summer, who expressed appreciation for the Foundation's continuing support of higher education. Bowdoin has received similar grants from the Sears-Roebuck Foundation for the past several years.

Bowdoin is among 956 two and four-year colleges across the country sharing $ 1.75 million in Sears Foundation funds for the academic year. In Maine, Bowdoin is among 10 colleges sharing $ 8,000.

Because of its sizable scholarship aid endowment and annual giving program, Bowdoin is able to meet the expected financial need, determined by the financial aid office, of all incoming freshmen and returning upperclassmen. Next year, about 65 percent of Bowdoin's 1,350 students will receive financial aid of some form. Nearly 40 percent will share approximately $4.9 million in need-based aid for an average aid package of $ 8,900.

McEwen acting dean

By LANCE HICKEY
ORIENT Contributor

Acting Dean of the Faculty Craig A. McEwen wants to address class overcrowding and fraternity issues during his year-long tenure in the administrative office.

McEwen, a sociology professor, will be acting dean for the 1987-88 academic year.

As acting dean of the faculty, McEwen is concerned with the limited space for classrooms and laboratories. He is involved in the plans to erect a new science building between Cleveland Hall and Sills Hall, complete with laboratories, classrooms, offices and a library. The new science building would solve Bowdoin's present lack of science facilities, and provide more room for faculty offices. A consulting firm has already been found for the project, but now finances and time are needed to complete it. Some of McEwen's other ideas include employee-faculty fringe benefits and faculty seminars.

When asked about the fraternity problem raised by President A. LeRoy Gresson at Convocation, McEwen said an educational process addressing the problem is needed. He also feels the faculty should support this program and encourage "a viable solution by seriously evaluating the purpose of fraternities. McEwen insists the fraternities "should not be eliminated, but rather reevaluated" by this educational process.

McEwen has been a Bowdoin faculty member since 1975. In 1981 he was promoted to associate professor, and he has chaired the department of anthropology and sociology twice since then. He served as assistant dean of the faculty since November 1984.

McEwen has received two grants from the National Science Foundation to study mediation in small claims courts in Maine, and he is the author of "Designing Correctional Organizations for Youths." He has also been a spokesman for the Maine Civil Liberties Union on prison reform and recent bond referendums.

Bowdoin to guarantee minority admission

By ROBERT WILLAMEY
ORIENT Contributor

The problem of minority enrollment at Bowdoin has been a pressing issue for many years. For the past several years the representation of minority students on campus has remained constant at 2 to 3 percent.

According to a study done by the Admissions Committee, an average of fewer than ten black students per year have matriculated at Bowdoin since 1980. Daniel Levine, who chairs the Admissions Committee, which recommends changes to the admissions policy, said that Bowdoin has always received an average minority enrollment lower than that of other schools with similar characteristics.

This problem is not limited to Bowdoin however. All across the country colleges are witnessing a decline in the average number of minority students. This is particularly troubling when national statistics show increase in the number of minority students eligible for college enrollment.

Even though the College has recognized the need to actively recruit minority students since 1965, the year in which an organized minority recruitment plan was developed, the faculty felt that new and more imaginative methods were needed to increase minority interest in Bowdoin. In response to this problem they unanimously passed at list of recommendations proposed by the Admissions Committee.

The proposals targets blacks, Hispanics and Native Americans as those minorities that are in most need of increased attention. According to Levine these groups are less likely than whites to see college as an alternative after high school. He feels that the college has an obligation to these people to make up for the disadvantages they face when considering college.

The Admissions Office is responsible for implementing many of the proposals passed by the faculty. Under the new provisions the Admissions Office is to select certain high schools with large minority enrollments for continguarantee admissions to qualified students.

Three high schools with large minority enrollments will be invited to participate in the program. Under the provisions of the program the College will guarantee admission to any student meeting certain specified academic requirements. The program will not jeopardize the academic standards that Bowdoin sets for all high school applicants because the requirements will be set high enough to assure that the student under the program would most likely be admitted under normal application procedures.

The administrative that this program will not only increase the minority population at Bowdoin but will also increase the effort of all students to strive harder in their academic pursuits much earlier than they normally might.

In order to help meet the financial needs of minority students the College is to set up scholarships targeted at particular minority groups. The scholarships will be similar to the present Russwurm Scholarships for black students. There will be separate scholarships for Hispanics and Native Americans.

Under the scholarship program exceptionally well qualified minority applicants will be required to take on a $500 per year loan rather than the normal $1950 per year loan. For low income students the $500 loan would be dropped in the freshman year and the difference would be made up in grants. While the scholarships are need-based and are most attractive to students who fall into the lower income brackets, it is the hope of the College that they will attract moderate income students as well.

To help the Admissions Office with the increased work load the faculty has requested that the Admissions staff be increased to meet the needs that will result from the increased emphasis on minority recruitment.

Once a minority student applies to Bowdoin his application will be reviewed. If he meets all the academic requirements his application will carry more weight than application from non-minority students.

While this might not sit well with some people, the faculty is concerned with removing the obstacles that have been set in the way of minorities. Levine said, "I just hope our indignation is proportionate to the problem. Our society's treatment of darker skinned people has been a social crime for centuries. Changing this is more important than how many athletes we admit".

This is the first in a series of two articles on the Bowdoin College admissions office.

News Analysis

uous attention. These schools should be visited twice a year with a significant amount of follow-up work being done for students who show interest in Bowdoin.

Perhaps the most bold and imaginative step taken to increase minority enrollment involves the newly developed Admissions Guarantee Program. Under this program the Admissions Office is directed to make arrangements with selected high schools to

MacFest

The Apple Macintosh™ personal computer is the machine for all of us who want to get work done efficiently. It's powerful, yet so easy to use that you'll be using your Macintosh right out of the box. That's productivity.

And with your Macintosh you can use the latest, most advanced software.

You're invited to the Bowdoin College and Coastal Computer Center MacFest on Monday and Tuesday, September 28 & 29 from 9 am to 5 pm.

In Lancaster Lounge at Molton Union.

Authorized Dealer

Coastal Computer CENTER

Maine's largest Apple® dealer.

16 Forest Avenue, Portland, 774-0741
The Tontine Mall, Brunswick, 729-0298

We're Fighting For Your Life.

American Heart
Association

How to start your law career before you start law school.

Start with the Kaplan LSAT prep course.

After taking Kaplan, thousands of LSAT students score over 40. That's the top 10% nationwide! And candidates who score over 40 on the new LSAT enjoy the best chance of being accepted to the law school of their choice and going on to practice with top law firms or corporations.

So call any of our 120 centers for information and class starting dates. The Kaplan LSAT prep course could be the one pre-law course that determines the course of your law career.

KAPLAN
STANLEY H. KAPLAN EDUCATIONAL CENTER LTD.

Portland class starts 10/11
Call Collect
(617) 964-TEST

College Briefs

By ADAM NAJBERG
ORIENT News Editor

Bates College, our neighbor to the north, is in shambles. The shambles of campus renovations, that is. Over the past three months, the Bates campus has undergone construction and renovations. Work completed includes renovations of Smith Hall, Roger Williams Hall and Adams Hall. Also, we are not alone in our overcrowding woes. Bates has a severe housing shortage this year. The problem has reached a point where some freshmen may find themselves bedded down in what used to be a doctor's office. Help may be on the way. Housing Coordinator Spencer Neyland '87 said students studying away next semester may alleviate the housing crunch.

The hell hath run dry. Money to purchase alcohol for Haverford College's parties will no longer be collected in college facilities or through the Students' Council. This decision came in light of a liability case involving liquor served to minors. As a result of the decision, college administrators are discussing a policy on serving alcohol in accordance with Pennsylvania law. The college may institute the use of red ID cards for students over 21. In addition, the Haverford College Board of Managers has appointed a Search Committee, chaired by Board Member George P. Kesley, to begin the process of former Haverford President Robert Stevens. Art, where art thou? In North Adams, MA. What? Williams College may be the proud manager of the second largest modern art museum in the United States. Williams is currently planning and fund-raising for the art museum, which would be housed in a large, vacant mill building in neighboring North Adams. The college would coordinate the daily operations of the museum once it opened its doors.

You thought we were having problems with frats? Colby College, which eliminated fraternities three years ago, once again has face fraternity issues. Since the fraternity prohibition, the frats have headed for the hills. The result has been the emergence of underground frats on the Waterville campus. The college had refused to officially recognize the illicit fraternities, but has this year adopted frat policies that are more open in acknowledging the presence of the underground brotherhoods.

What has two snack bars, a movie theatre, a bookstore, fireplaces, offices, pool tables and an entertainment area? It's bigger than a bread box and costs a lot more.

It's Amherst College's new Campus Center. The college built the center to fill a void in student life after the college banned fraternities four years ago. Also, Amherst has created a Womens' Study Program (a year after we created a similar program). And, Amherst also faces a housing crunch. To alleviate the problem the college has provided off-campus housing for upperclassmen, who now find themselves living in off-campus apartments.

Holy Cow! A Yogi explains the finer points of his art to an attentive Bowdoin crowd. Photo by Adam Najberg.

Lecture commemorates Constitution

By JACK CAHILL
ORIENT Editorial Editor

Professor Richard E. Morgan's Tuesday night lecture was the first in a series of lectures sponsored by Bates and Bowdoin Colleges addressing the theme, "The Constitution: Into the Third Century."

Morgan's lecture dealt with "The Crisis of American Constitutionalism." According to Bowdoin history professor William B. Whiteside, the series and the bicentennial of the drafting of the Constitution come at an interesting time in the document's history. "Not since the Civil War has there been so much disagreement between people over what the system is and what it should be," Whiteside said.

Whiteside said plans for the series have been ongoing since last spring, when a meeting was held in Augusta to make plans for Maine's observance of the Constitution's bicentennial anniversary. "We thought it would be appropriate to use the 200th anniversary of the drafting of the Constitution to educate people about what the Constitution is," Whiteside said. "It's a statewide theme."

Whiteside and Bates history professor Ernest Muller are in charge of planning the lecture series, which Whiteside said will consist of at least four lectures and perhaps as many as six. The next lecture in the series will be Oct. 8, when University of Chicago Law School professor Dennis Hutchinson will speak on the topic, "Does the Constitution Matter?"

"I think it's fairly easy to predict what his answer will be," Whiteside said. "But he will develop some ideas on the role of the Constitution." Whiteside added that Hutchinson, a Rhodes Scholar, is a member of Bowdoin's class of 1969 and a recently elected member of the Board of Trustees, after having served as an overseer of the college.

Whiteside said it would be premature to release the names of other dignitaries invited to participate in the lecture series, but predicted it would last until the end of the semester or the beginning of next semester.

NEW!! Film Developing In 45 Minutes!
Why Wait Any Longer?

MERCURY PHOTO
Quality Film
Developing...Fast!

Kodak® Mini Lab System 25 processor
Newest Kodak paper and chemicals
Kodak Colorwatch quality control links
our lab with Rochester for
unsurpassed results.

FULL LINE CAMERA STORE - Slide developing - cameras,
film, batteries, bags - large frame selection - repairs

Ever Lost Your Film Or
Had It Come Back Wrong?
You only develop your film ONCE. You owe it to yourself to get the highest quality backed by
the KODAK® Colorwatch™ system.

I-95 (EXIT 24) & ROUTE 196, TOPSHAM, ME.

PASSPORTS
WHILE
YOU WAIT

Pauline's Bloomers
DURING SEPT. - 25% off on all plants
Tondine Mall, Brunswick, 726-5962
QUALITY FLORAL SERVICE
Anniversary, Birthday, Hospital, Wedding, Sympathy, Holiday, All Occasions
Flowers, Plants & Gifts
We Deliver Wine Service Balloons & Candy
Major Credit Cards Accepted - Open 6 days 9:00 to 5:30

ITALIANS DELIVERED. FREE.

Announcing free delivery service for all Amato's great food.

Amato's in Brunswick will now deliver many of its great menu items. And they'll deliver them free. It's the ultimate in fast, convenient service. Delicious pastas, pizzas, calzone, and dinners and our famous Italian sandwiches with fresh cold cuts, thick slices of plump tomatoes and more are only a phone call away. With a minimum order of $15.00, these and many other of our menu items can be at your door, as fresh and as fast as if you ordered them at the counter.

Sunday-Thursday, 4 pm to 11:30 pm
Friday and Saturday, 4 pm to midnight

So call ahead and enjoy speedy, free delivery from the home of the original Italian sandwich.

THERE'S NOTHING LIKE A REAL ITALIAN.

135 Maine Street, Brunswick
Open 6 am-midnight, Sun.-Thur.: 6 am-1 am, Fri. and Sat.
Call 729-5514 for fast take-out and free delivery.

Library will go high-tech

By ANGELA DAIGLE
ORIENT Contributor

A new cataloging and security system which will be in place in "two to three years" may help stop the disappearance of over 2,100 library books each year.

Arthur Monke, head librarian, said the new automated security system would include an on-line cataloging system, which would allow students to find books by consulting a computer terminal. The computer would then give the student information such as the location of a book and whether it was in circulation or not.

Monke has been working jointly with Bates and Colby on the on-line catalogue. He said a combined automated on-line security system would allow the schools to "combine information, essentially doubling the number of books and journals that are available to our students and faculty."

The new system would enable the library to keep better track of book checkouts.

Commenting on the present security system, Monke said, "a human security system just isn't worth it ... (they) just don't work very well." Monke hopes that a new automated security system for the library would mean "far better circulation for the library."

Monke says that there is "no simple, easy answer" for the problem of missing books. According to Monke, even the installation of an electronic security system in the next 2 or 3 years "won't change the fact that some books can not be found at the time students want them."

This summer, an inventory was taken on half the college's open-shelf stacks. The official count of books in the Hawthorne-Longfellow library, as well as in the departmental libraries, is 725,000 volumes. Monke estimated that over a five year period, three out of every 1000 books, a total of 2,175 volumes, disappear.

Howard Papers preserved

By ANGELA DAIGLE
ORIENT Contributor

Bowdoin College's Hawthorne-Longfellow Library recently received a $5,000 Maine state grant to preserve part of the Oliver Otis Howard Papers.

The grant was awarded after the state legislature approved funds for the preservation of important historical matters in the state.

The Howard Papers, Bowdoin's largest manuscript collection, form the centerpiece of the college's Civil War collection. Historians have called the Howard papers one of the most significant post-Civil War holdings at any American library.

Howard, a member of Bowdoin's class of 1850, was a Civil War general who accompanied General William Sherman on his march across the South. He was also the first head of the Freedmen's Bureau, a member of the bureau of Indian affairs, president of Howard University and the leader of the 1877 expedition against the Nez Percés during the Northwest Indian campaigns.

When Howard died, his family donated the manuscript, a collection of letters and papers accumulated over his lifetime, to Bowdoin College. The material provides a very good source of information on the Post-Civil War period, according to Head Librarian Arthur Monke. The grant will now enable the college to microfilm the manuscripts in order to preserve them for future use.

Science Facility

(Continued from page one)

for the planning of the new science building do not rest solely with the construction itself or with the appropriation of funds. Present plans call for the incorporation of Sills Hall into the new facility and the tearing down of Smith Auditorium and the space beneath it. This poses problems for the college's language department.

In addressing this problem, McEwen said, "The Design Development Committee is engaged in very complicated planning to determine the implications of the moves required so that we can assess other space needs on campus, which are serious."

McEwen continued, "The Saratoga Associates (a consulting firm that has worked closely with the college in the past) will be working over the next nine to ten months with the Student Life Facilities Committee and the Academic Space Committee to assess the programmatic needs of the various academic departments, student life, the administration and parking. After assessment of the college's facilities, they will help us think about the musical chairs likely in the next five to ten years."

Said Chemistry Professor Samuel S. Butcher, "There is indeed a great gap." The entire construction process will entail six to seven stages of reshuffling of the various academic departments. Continued Butcher, "It will take a carefully orchestrated dance to get it all done."

The Committee on Academic Space which will play a major role in the consideration of the campus special needs has not yet met. Despite this fact, Assistant Dean of the Faculty Helen L. Cafferty assured that the language department, one of the departments most directly affected by the future construction, will be prominently represented on the Committee. Cafferty further assured, "I expect that the needs of the programs in Sills as well as the other departments affected will be taken into account."

The committee's task entails taking care of many needs at once. In further reference to the language department Cafferty said, "People are just concerned that the language programs and state of the art language lab retain their integrity through any move."

Said Language Media Center Supervisor Carmen M. Greenlee, "We're working very closely with the administration and the Saratoga Associates on needs assessment. Hopefully they will be able to accommodate us." Greenlee did express some concern at the tearing down of Smith Auditorium as it is presently one of the only auditoriums on campus outfitted with film and video that can seat 200 people.

Greenlee continued, "I feel pretty sure they're going to take care of us. We're letting them know what we'd like to see happen. It's just going to be a wait and see sort of thing."

Wait and see - that's the message on the science facility thus far. The construction crew won't break ground tomorrow, but there will be a new building rising soon. In the meantime the college will have to work to make sure it appeases all the academic departments its construction will affect.

Humongous fungus from Hell: Toadstools in full bloom behind Hyde Hall may one day threaten to take over the campus. Photo by Mary Ann Lai.

PARENTS!

Give your college student a very special care package! An Ice Cream Cake from Ben & Jerry's for birthdays, study breaks, exams, surprises, rainy days...

Call and order your cake today.

Free Delivery (207) 725-2725
96 Maine Street, Brunswick

FILM, POLITICS & SOCIAL CHANGE IN ASIA

January - May 1988

Faculty from Harvard University and the University of Illinois

Itinerary includes: India, China, Japan, Hong Kong

- travel and work closely with professors
- live with families in each country
- expand intellectual and personal awareness through comparative study in a variety of environments
- 16 credit hours of academic work studying film, politics and social change in Asia

For a catalogue and application contact:

Joan Tiffany, Director
International Honors Program
19 Braddock Park
Boston, MA 02116
617-267-8612

INTERNATIONAL HONORS PROGRAM

SUPPORT GROUPS FOR ADULT CHILDREN OF ALCOHOLICS are being developed by the Counseling Service

For More Information:
Call Jane Carlson at X3145

Revolutions and Ancient Temples

By SUZANNE DEVER
ORIENT Contributor

What do you do when the country you're visiting is suddenly overwhelmed by 6,000 foreign troops? How do you feel standing before a Hindu temple over 1000 years old? And does a lime rubbed on your forehead and the bottoms of your feet really cure a hang-over?

These are some of the experi-

2) To introduce areas of scholarly research which might be actively pursued in the future by individual faculty participants.

3) To help make American academicians aware of specific social, economic, and political problems facing a developing, pluralistic and democratic South Asian society. This was no vacation.

The Bowdoin contingent consisted of Professor Holt as previ-valuable insight into the social and historical significance of the locations toured. The next two weeks consisted of a classroom period at the University of Peradeniya, Kandy.

The university faculty offered five seminars with the Americans' disciplines in mind, including "Political Economy and Social Change," "Women's Studies," "Mind and Body in Buddhist Perspective," "Painting and Sculpture" and "Traditional Rites, Drama and Theatre." The professors became students as they participated in the seminar relating to both their field and interests.

During the second two weeks the Americans lived in the homes of the University faculty allowing further discussion on topics of interest. In the final two-week period, the professors each pursued their own research projects and scholarly interests.

As project director, Professor Holt spent much of the final two-week period assuring that all the research arrangements were going as planned. Holt has lived in Sri Lanka three of the past five years and was therefore able to utilize his many contacts on the island. Only, why choose this troubled island at the tip of India?

Holt explained that the country was ideal as a very pluralistic society having many problems "archetypical of third world countries." Sri Lanka has great religious diversity including Buddhism, Hinduism, Islam, and Christianity and many of the faculty interested are scholars of comparative religions.

While the group was in Sri Lanka, a major development took place when India and Sri Lanka signed a peace accord. This caused much turmoil when 6,000 Indian troops landed on the northern and eastern parts of the island. Fortunately, none of the researchers were affected adversely and commented that this event "drove ences encountered by a group of four Bowdoin College professors, along with scholars from Bates, Hobart and William Smith, Swathmore, Colby, and St. Olaf colleges took part in a six week ISLE/Fulbright-Hayes Group Project Abroad Program in Sri Lanka.

(Continued on page seven)

Holt explained that Sri Lanka was ideal as a very pluralistic society having many problems "archetypical of third world countries."

The ISLE (Intercollegiate Sri Lanka Educational) Program was organized by members of the faculty and administration of the ISLE colleges (substituting Carlton for St. Olaf) in 1982 in order to establish an educational and cultural exchange between the two countries. This ISLE program, under the direction of Associate Professor of religion John C. Holt, was funded by a $54,000 dollar grant from the Fulbright-Hayes Project Abroad (a U.S. Department of Education office).

The program's objectives in Sri Lanka this summer were, as reported by Professor Holt:

1) To develop curriculum within the respective Asian and Comparative Studies Programs of the ISLE Program colleges and to further develop the curriculum of the ISLE Program itself.

ously mentioned, Associate Professor of Psychology Guenter H. Rose, Associate Professor of Art Larry D. Lutchmansingh and Assistant Professor of Sociology Liliane P. Floge. The trip was divided into three two-week periods. The first two weeks included a tour of major archeological sites, religious shrines and plantations.

The group was guided by Sri Lankan academicians, who gave

Above: Nirvana — a seventh century Buddha image sits among the remains of a Vatsadevi, medieval Buddhist temple, in Anuraadhapura, Sri Lanka. Left: Buses, motorcycles and Kodak film, all available in the Fort district of Colombo, Sri Lanka's capital. Photos by Professor John Holt

Social nightmares: Jacob Holdt's American Pictures

In the mid seventies, Danish citizen Jacob Holdt traveled across America. He did not drive around in a Winebago, take polaroids of Old Faithful, and then spend the night at a Ramada Inn with closed circuit t.v. For the better part of five years, Holdt hitchhiked his way across the country and immersed himself into the unseen underbelly of America—working with southern sharecroppers, living in urban ghettos, and infiltrating the Ku Klux Klan. Selling his blood twice a week to buy film, Holdt thoroughly photographed his experiences. The result is American Pictures, a disturbing and insightful four hour combination lecture, slide show, discussion.

Sponsored by Struggle and Change, American Pictures will be shown in Pickard Theatre this Sunday at 1:30 p.m. "The subject of American Pictures," says Shamu Fenyvesi of Struggle and Change, "is something that most people at Bowdoin have not seen and, if it weren't for this presentation, would not see."

Response for Holdt's presentation has been overwhelmingly positive if not phenomenal. Pamphlets advertising the show boast that Berkeley screened American Pictures 15 times and Harvard had ten showings in one year, the lowest attendance being 700 people. The University of Chicago Student Journal says, "Holdt forces the audience not only to examine the presentation, but also to examine themselves. In this sense it is an absolute success." The Bowdoin faculty also appears enthusiastic; professors Wilson, Rosenbrink, Waterson, Vail, Goodridge, and Coorish have volunteered to lead discussions.

"I think the faculty would like to see more of these type of presentations at Bowdoin," Fenyvesi says. "Students here are rarely, if not at all, exposed the social problems like American Pictures reports."

In a more radical tone, Holdt writes, "Many of the same schools gladly raise from $3000 to $8000 to get convicted Watergate criminals to speak for an hour. These speakers generally pocket the money themselves. Compare that with American Pictures which usually gets a much bigger student turnout where the spectators are being 'entertained' for at least for or five hours..."

American Pictures has evolved from the mass of photographs, memories, and opinions Holdt sifted through after his sojourn ended. With the success of his lecture tour and book, Holdt has built a non-profit charity organization to help fight poverty in the United States and Africa. Furthermore, Holdt continues to add photos to the show to avoid stagnation.

Holdt still cries-crosses the U.S. He does not stay in hotels. He does not fly. He drives from lecture to lecture, revealing to the public America's buried social nightmares.

Southern comfort: child staring out of broken screen, just one of many images photographer Jacob Holdt will discuss Sunday at Pickard Theatre. Photo by and courtesy of Jacob Holdt

Sri Lanka

(Continued from page six)
home the volatile nature of the country politically," one of the points he had hoped the faculty would realize.

Professor Lutchmansingh used his last two weeks in Sri Lanka to visit numerous South Indian Hindu and Buddhist temples, many dating back to the seventh century. He feels that as an art history teacher by experiencing these ruins and buildings first hand he gained a personal knowledge of the monuments that will help him relay their mystique in future art history classes.

The professor expressed a fascination with his research and described it as a challenging experience to be studying ancient ruins as he usually deals with modern art and architecture. Instead of American Art — at the most three to four hundred years old — in Sri Lanka he was confronting sites thousands of years old.

Lutchmansingh was also intrigued by the social and cultural practices of the island, which he described as a mix of ancient and contemporary; he felt he was "in the middle of a society in the making." Professor Lutchmansingh plans to initiate some new art history courses as a result of his visit.

Professor Rose also had an interesting two week research period. During this time he stayed with the family of a university student in a small, isolated village. There he studied non-western medicine; this included traditional Hindu Ayurvedic medicine as well as folk medicine.

Ayurvedic medicine is a whole body approach to treatment where everything about you (emotional disturbances, eating habits, the climate accustomed to, etc.) is taken into consideration before medicine is prescribed. This psychosomatic approach to medicine is an ancient practice with books dating back 2,000 years. Folk medicine is more regionally specialized and utilizes various plants and herbs as well as lore.

Rose told of a plant that stops bleeding and the hangover remedy revealed earlier. He valued the final two weeks above all, because he was able to get to know the people on a personal level rather than being stared at as though he were a tourist. He described the people as wonderful and generous, although very poor.

As a result of this trip Rose is involved in a joint program with Sri Lankan scholars investigating various indigenous plants' compositions and their effects.

Hopefully, new compounds and medicines can be found that will be useful to both Western and Eastern medicine. Rose also has incorporated his experiences into his classes.

Professor Liliane Flöge was in France and unable to be interviewed for this story, but according to her report, she gained much knowledge on the role of women in Sri Lanka. This she plans to incorporate into existing courses, as well as the development of a new course on the "Population of Asia."

Professor Rose commented that it's "incredibly important to get into a totally new culture...when you get into another culture you think of things in completely new ways." He feels that he can now more easily look at and accept very different viewpoints and that it's healthy to look at all systems.

Along the same lines, Professor Lutchmansingh commented that he most valued being "reminded of the rich diversity of the world's cultures and the complexity of another society. The effect of this was to decentralize my attention from the United States. In the U.S. we consider ourselves the center of the world. We must understand forces which operate in other places. We need to shake people out of their narrow focus."

Agnes of God, a three-person drama which inaugurates Masque and Gown's season, will be presented in the George H. Quinby Memorial Playwright's Theatre tonight and tomorrow night. Curtain is at 8 p.m. The play stars Laura Farnsworth '88, Elizabeth Eggleston '89 and Sarah Williams '89. Agnes of God is directed by Trishka Waterbury '89.

BIG RED Q PRINTING

next to the College

- stationery
- resumes
- posters
- newsletters

212E Maine Street
Brunswick
729-4840

Flowers by Knowles

Welcome to Bowdoin
We offer a complete
florist service.

15 Jordan Ave.

725-2461

Overcrowding

(Continued from page one)

However, it is not so easy to schedule classes if they are overcrowded. Lise Aufranc '88 stated that "I was unable to get into 3 classes simply because I was not majoring in the department, even though I am a senior."

Nyhus said that in the early '70's the administration changed their policy and tried to admit every interested student into a class. This resulted in several problems, the major ones being that there were "outrageously large classes...and some faculty were bearing impossible loads."

Another contributing factor to overcrowding is one that is being carefully looked at. Oftentimes, many classes are scheduled in the same time slots, causing conflicts in scheduling and forcing students to turn elsewhere, creating an overflow into other classes.

The Recording Committee this fall will be discussing the possibility of extending class scheduling hours through lunch time. This would give more choices to students and at the same time help out Dining Service with long 12:30 p.m. lunch lines. If accepted, the proposal could be in effect as soon as January, which Nyhus believes will "spread out course scheduling to keep opportunities larger" for students.

Results of Bowdoin College athletic events are available on Sportsline. The number to call is (207)725-3061. Results for fall sports will be available after 9:00 p.m. daily beginning September 12.

Tontine Hair Fashions

207-729-5475

BOWDOIN STUDENT DISCOUNT
FOR HAIRCUTS
BRING I.D.

Subscribe to the Orient

If someone special to you is a member of the Bowdoin community, what better way to keep up with what's going on in that person's life than a subscription to the ORIENT? Stay up to date on news, sports, entertainment, and the life of a college campus by having the ORIENT sent to your home every week.

For $8.00 a semester or $15.00 a year, you can have the nation's oldest continuously published college weekly delivered to your door. Send check or money order, payable to the Bowdoin Publishing Company, to:

THE ORIENT
Bowdoin College
Brunswick, ME 04011

Odds & Ends

SPECIAL/SALE

Onkyo CP-1007A auto-return turntable with Ortofon cartridge nearly new.....(Half price) $90

SONY X03 AM/FM Receiver with built-in cassette.....$120

Pair/Sony SS-X10A Speakers - amazing sound for...$50

Ford deluxe AM/FM stereo car radio - from Pasadena lady...$50

Much used typewriter stand.....$15

Used Sanyo Cassette dictation machine, with foot control
New model is $349.....Just $150

All this and...

Brand new Pioneer components at pretty good prices

Like a complete LP/tape/CD/AM-FM system....$800 .

THE TONTINE MALL
149 Maine St.
Brunswick, Maine 04011

ENTERTAINMENT

Mapes entrances Bowdoin

By LIZZ MILLAN
ORIENT Asst. Entertainment Editor

5-4-3-2-1 Blast off. Believe it or not, a spaceship blasted off from Morrell Gym last Saturday, and hypnotist James Mapes controlled the spaceship manned by a crew of Bowdoin students.

The "Journey Into Space" began with minor demonstrations of the power of the mind using hypnosis. James Mapes, a mid-westerner from Zion, Ill., did not swing any watches, yet was able to captivate his audience.

Mapes earned an undergraduate degree in psychology and a masters degree in theater from Cal. State before deciding to pursue a career in hypnosis. "Although I had always been interested in performing, I never gave hypnosis much thought until 1970," Mapes said.

He saw a hypnotist for the first time, for help with a weight problem, only after his friends bribed him with a case of beer. "I kept my eyes glued to the floor the entire time; I didn't want to look a hypnotist in the eyes and spend the rest of my life in a trance," Mapes said.

On Saturday, Mapes dispelled that myth for his audience. In fact, by the end of the evening, most were eagerly watching Mapes, awaiting his next demonstration.

After relaxing the viewers using stress reduction techniques, Mapes chose volunteers from the audience. He then demonstrated the power that suggestion has on the mind.

Mapes, however, does not use hypnosis solely to amaze college students. In his private practice, he specializes in pain reduction in cancer patients, sports improvement and age regression. He also works with corporations, helping employees to realize the power they have over their minds and thus over their lives.

As was demonstrated in Saturday's show, Mapes allows others to see that things can be exactly as they wish them to be. During the show, thirty chairs became rocket ships which travelled through space. The space travellers experienced weightlessness, saw little green men, and began disrobing as temperatures soared to 90 degrees.

The participating students also travelled back in time to 1967 to partake in an original version of the Twist. Mapes then dolled out a potent drug which made each of the space travellers a bit more spacey.

Not only those on board received the benefits of this journey. Watching fellow students travel through space, smelling flowers which no one could see, waving at people who were not present as well as many other bizarre behaviors continued to supply much entertainment to the general audience.

Ordinary abilities which the average person takes for granted were disrupted. At the end of the demonstration, two participants were no longer able to answer when asked their names, and other participants could not count from one to ten as Mapes had erased specific numbers from their minds. Thankfully, Mapes was sure to restore this knowledge to participants at the end of his performance.

There seemed to be no end to the marvels of the mind. The most visibly amazing revelation concluded the evening, when Mapes actually took three participants back in time to their fifth birthdays. The contrast in their signatures and the intonations in their voices between before and during the age regression convinced the audience of the validity of the regression.

"I had forgotten how much fun it was to be five years old," participant Jack Cahill said of his experience.

At the snap of his fingers or a tap on their foreheads, Mapes had pulled each participant back to the present. Mapes also stressed, "A hypnotist cannot make you say or do anything you do not want to." In effect, the individual can decide whether or not he wishes to be hypnotized.

At a more professional level, Mapes uses age regression to help patients overcome phobias and other disabilities. "In one audience, a girl who had not used her hand in five years was able to write her name when brought back to the age of five," Mapes told his Bowdoin Audience. Apparently, the attending physician had used mind power in a negative sense leading this girl to believe that she had lost movement in her hand.

Mapes wants people to enjoy his show — "I have always had a knack for performing," he says — but there is more to him than that. "My main objective is to help people realize that they can gain complete control over their lives. With heightened self awareness the world is theirs to create." Mapes allowed Bowdoin students to peer into the world of the mind, a world into which most do not often travel. His performance was amazing, as are the worlds which all have the power to experience without ever boarding a plane or even leaving a seat.

James Mapes will be returning to Bowdoin on November 7 at 7:30 p.m. to conduct a workshop for all interested.

Bach is back: Harpsichordist Edward Parmentier will feature J.S. Bach's Partita IV in D Major in his upcoming performance Sunday, Sept. 27 at 7:30 p.m. in Kresge Auditorium. In addition, he will perform works by Scarlatti, Couperin, D'Anglebert and Byrd. Admission is $7 or free with Bowdoin I.D.

Calendar

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 18

4:30 pm — Bowdoin students accompany choreographers Myrna Packer and Art Bridgeman in an informal dance demonstration. Sargent Gymnasium.

8:00 pm — Agnes of God is presented by Masque & Gown. Tickets available at the door one half hour before performance. First 100 seated. Playwrights' Theater.

8:00 pm — Alien is presented by the BFS. $1 admission. Smith Auditorium.

9:00 pm — Chuck Kruger Band performs in The Pub.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 19

8:00 pm — Agnes of God is presented by Masque & Gown. Tickets available at the door one half hour before performance. First 100 seated. Playwrights' Theater.

8:00 pm — Aliens

f. $1 admission. Smith Auditorium.

9:30 pm — Dance by the Polar Bear. Loose Ends Band.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 20

1:30 pm — American Pictures is presented by Struggle and Change. Pickard Theater.

3:00 pm — Foreign Film Series. Erendira. Spanish with English subtitles. Smith Auditorium.

7:30 pm — Slide/Lecture by Tom Krumpak, a Los Angeles painter. Beam Classroom, VAC.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 21

8:00 pm — Author Toni Morrison speaks in Pickard Theater.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 23

10:10 am — Chapel Talk — William Mason, Director of Admissions

1:00 pm — Gallery talk, "Robert Van Vranken '82: Recent Work"

7:30 pm — Faust, a silent movie directed Murnau. The first in a Faust Film Series.

10:00 pm — Lip Sync in The Pub.

MOVIE LISTINGS

Cinema City (Cooks Corner)

The Lost Boys, showing at 7:15 and 9:15

Stakeout, showing at 7:00 and 9:00

Dirty Dancing, showing at 7:10 and 9:10

No Way Out, showing at 7:00 and 9:00

Evening Star Cinema (Maine St.)

The Big Easy, showing at 7:00 and 8:55

UPCOMING EVENTS

Harpsichordist Edward Parmentier will perform on Sunday, September 27, at 7:30 p.m. in Kresge Auditorium. Works performed include those by J.S. Bach, Domenico Scarlatti, Francois Couperin, Jean-Henri D'Anglebert, and William Byrd. Admission is $7 or free with a Bowdoin I.D.

Coming Sept. 29 - Longer Store Hours

WE will open at 9 AM Tues-Fri

and at 10 AM Sat.

Closing times are the same

Upcoming Saturday Workshops:

Oct. 3 - Finishing Techniques and

2 Color Knitting -

Teacher: Pat Clockedile

For more information
please stop in or call

Oct. 17 - Designing - if you can knit, puri, and follow directions, you can design an original.

Teacher is Laurie Doran, formerly a sweater designer for Samuel Roberts
and winner of a national award
for design.

A Likely Yarn

90 UNION STREET

BRUNSWICK, ME 04011

(207) 725-2147

Music at noon and a half

Music at Noon-and-a-Half, a series of concerts featuring outstanding performers, will be presented Monday afternoons at 12:30 p.m. in Room 101, Gibson Hall, Bowdoin College.

All of the performances are sponsored by the department of music and will be open to the public free of charge:

September 28: Edward Parmentier, harpsichord

October 12: Stephen Montague, piano

November 9: Portland Brass Quintet

Tontine Fine Candies

Have you tried our truffles?

If not...

You are really missing a pleasurable experience.

We are in the Tontine Mall

BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed

BLOOM COUNTY.

by Berke Breathed

BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed

BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed

BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed

BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed

B
L
O
O
M

COUNTY

Chapel Talk

(Continued from page one)
still awaits word from an alumna. Faculty representatives include Professors John Howland '57 of the biology department, and Melinda Small of the psychology department.

Two students representatives will be chosen by the Executive Board.

The committee is not marching toward some foregone conclusion," and "there is not a puppet in the crowd," according to Greason.

Greason said he had received numerous letters and phone calls expressing concerns over the conditions of fraternity houses and their policies. He said the amount of time spent on fraternities, coupled with the "systematic review" the rest of the college undergoes, led to his call for a review.

"At Convocation, I noted that all of us are under systematic review — academic departments, faculty members, administrative officers. Fraternities should be too... it is a series of abuse of the idea of 'fraternity' over the last several years that has prompted a review this year," said Greason.

Greason said he expected the review committee "to proceed as expeditiously as possible," and anticipates recommended changes in the college's fraternity system, changes that would bring the fraternities closer to college officers, faculty and alumni.

"I find it hard to believe the committee will recommend a continuation of the status quo — of things exactly as they are now. I don't see how a fraternity system can be a part of the college unless college officers, faculty, alumni and students all share in the structure that governs fraternities," said Greason.

Greason recommended the fraternities "participate in the review frankly and constructively," in order to simplify the review process.

R. Ross Baker '90, who organized this year's "Chapel Talk," was satisfied both with the turnout at the year's first "Chapel Talk" and the manner in which Greason expressed himself.

"He (Greason) squelched some rumors going around campus. His suggestions were constructive, straightforward and fair. He knows he is in a powerful position, and he is putting the ball in our

(the fraternities) court," said Baker.

"Chapel Talk" will be held every Wednesday in the Bowdoin Chapel beginning at 10:10 a.m. and running for approximately 10 minutes. Next week's speaker will be Director of Admissions William Mason.

Sorority

(Continued from page one)
the sorority by sending Kim Rau, a national representative to help with rush.

Adams said, though the sorority will receive national support, most of the house's money will still originate from its members. Adams added that the national chapter would assist the sorority should it decide to purchase a house of its own.

Adams views the options and validity that a national standing provides as a blessing to Bowdoin's lone sorority. Adams happily added that the sorority's new name "gives us a feeling of being wanted and needed."

Asian Studies

(Continued from page one)

second year Japanese and Chinese. Bowdoin would offer courses for third and fourth year Chinese, while Bates would do the same for Japanese. Students from Bowdoin would be allowed to take the advanced courses at Bates, and vice-versa.

"We feel it is fruitful and possible to do the commuting at the advanced levels because the foundation is already there," Smith explained.

Bates College also has recently received an endowment to establish a chair in Japanese Studies, a development from which Bowdoin students could possibly benefit.

The major obstacle to Japanese language courses at Bowdoin is lack of funding. The committee is now actively soliciting funds, according to committee chair John Holt, Associate Professor of Religion.

The grant(s) which the committee hopes to receive would be similar to the five-year grant of the Pew Foundation in the summer of 1986 for to create three new positions, which have resulted in the tremendous expansion of Asian Studies courses and a college-designed major. The three positions concern Japanese religion and culture, Southern Asian anthropology, and Chinese language and civilization.

Assistant Professor Ed Gilday was hired this year to fill the position of Japanese religion and culture.

Holt confirmed that the college has "just advertised" for candidates to fill the anthropology position, which should start next fall.

This year, eight students at Bowdoin have enrolled in first year Sanskrit, the classical language of southern India. The new course offering is another example of the continued expansion of Asian Studies at Bowdoin.

Because the Asian Studies faculty is now quite sizeable, the college has bought and renovated a building for offices on 38 College Street, which will be shared by the Religion and Asian Studies faculty members.

"This expansion in Asian Studies is possible because of continuing student interest, the support of departments and the administration, and generous foundation grants," said Smith.

Friday night -
The Band That Makes You Tan
Chuck Kruger Band 9 PM
Saturday night -
Rodney Dangerfield's
"Back to School"
10 PM

Announcement

BRUNSWICK HOUSE OF PIZZA

WILL NOW DELIVER TO BOWDOIN CAMPUS!!!
FULL MENU AVAILABLE! NO DELIVERY CHARGE!

NO MINIMUM!

729-5526

5 Delivery Times Per Night

MEAL TAX 5%

PIZZAS

	Small	Large		Small	Large
plain	$2.95	5.65	black olives	3.95	6.95
onion	3.45	6.25	sausage	3.95	6.95
pepper	3.45	6.25	meatball	3.95	6.95
onion & pepper	3.95	6.95	mushroom	3.95	6.95
salami	"	"	ham	3.95	6.95
anchovies	"	"	pastorini	3.95	6.95
hamburger	"	"	2 way combo	4.50	7.95
pepperoni	"	"	3 way combo	4.95	8.65
			Brunswick special	5.95	10.95

Gyros 2.75

GRINDERS

	Med.	Lg.
meatball	2.60	3.25	sliced turkey	2.70	3.35
sausage	"	"	veal cutlet	2.60	3.25
hot pastorini	"	"	vegetarian	2.25	2.60
italian	"	"	pepper steak	2.80	3.45
salami	2.60	3.25	cheese steak	2.80	3.45
imported ham	2.70	3.35	mushroom steak	2.90	3.65
genoa salami	2.60	3.25	onion steak	2.80	3.45
tuna salad	"	"	special steak	2.95	3.75
roast beef	2.80	3.60	Brunswick special	2.95	3.80

DINNERS

Chicken Tenders 4.05
Fried Chicken 4.05
served w/fries & salad

w/sauce	2.95	w/meatballs	3.45
* w/sausage	3.45	w/mushroom	3.95
lasagna	4.40	veal cutlet	3.45

SPAGHETTI

SEAFOOD PLATES

Fresh haddock	5.75
clams	6.75
shrimp	6.35
scallops	6.95
seafood combo	8.50
above served w/fries & salad
greek salad	2.85
antipasto	3.25

- * 7 pm, call by 6:40
- * 8 pm, call by 7:40
- * 9 pm, call by 8:40
- * 10 pm, call by 9:40
- * 11 pm, call by 10:40

What a great response!
We appreciate it!
Keep calling! Thanks

BHOP is known for the best pizza and grinders in town. We use the best available meats and we give you more for your money than anyone in town. Give us a try and you'll agree.

SPORTS

Yanks down Irish ruggers, 13-10

Bowdoin and Portland ruggers fight for loose ball in Saturday rugby action. Photo by Lori Bodwell.

By KEVIN WESLEY
ORIENT Assistant Editor

A taste of Northern Ireland touched Pickard Field last Saturday when "Go U Bears" was replaced by "Come on boys."

A team of rugby players from the University of Ulster at Coleraine lost a tight 13-10 contest to the Portland Rugby Club in an exhibition match Sept. 12. The Northern Irish team was in Brunswick as part of a six-stop tour of the Eastern United States.

The 25 Northern Irish players and officials arrived on Sept. 7. Their first game was a 26-12 win over the Berlin (Conn.) Strollers. Before the close of the tour Sept. 26, the team will play Amherst College, Dartmouth College, Yale University and Wesleyan University. According to Ulster Coach Ray Robinson, the sunny, clear skies on Saturday were ideal for playing at Bowdoin. "We had perfect conditions today," he said. "We had good support, a good crowd." Robinson was surprised at the turnout of over 100 people to watch the contest, which was followed by a game between Bowdoin and the Portland "B" team. The crowd was boosted by 175 college rugby players who attended a morning clinic run by Portland coaches.

The Northern Irish players were surprised at the skill of their American counterparts. Robinson said the difference was in the kinds of players American rugby attracted. "They (American teams) use a lot more athletes first, rugby players second."

Robinson said the rugby style in Northern Ireland is much different. "Over there, you can find a position for anyone."

The Coleraine campus has 3,000 students, and is one of four colleges in the University of Ulster system.

Bears hungry for start await Norwich artillery

By ERIC PALMQUIST
ORIENT Contributor

Tommorrow afternoon at 1:30 the highly touted Norwich Cadets will step onto Whittier field to take on the Bowdoin Polar Bears in their season opener. The Bears open the season with high hopes of improving on last year's disappointing 2-6 record, and early indications suggest that this is a vastly improved squad.

Unfortunately, some key performers from last season are gone. Coach Howard Vanderee will miss wide receiver and punter Brad Cushman, who led the Bears in receiving yardage last year with 285, while averaging almost 36 yards a punt, and fullback Greg Smith, who finished out a fine career as a Polar Bear with a team leading 344 yards rushing.

However, the Bears are not without help. Among the 31 lettermen returning this year are senior wide receiver Erik Gans (team leading 13 catches) and quarterback Ryan Stafford (772 yards passing). Also returning from a junior year abroad is tailback Gregg Bohannon, who led the team in rushing in '85. In addition, senior co-captain and three time letterman Chip Davis returns at center to anchor an experienced offensive line.

Defensively, the Bears will be hurt by the loss of linebacker Chuck Piacentini, who was second on the team in tackles. But back for another shot is nose tackle Ed Daft (team leading 3.5 sacks) and co-captain cornerback Chris Fitz. Also back are last year's leading tackler, free safety Terry Conroy, who picked off a team high 4 passes, and linebacker John Ollis (51 tackles).

The Polar Bears have good reason to expect improvement over last year. Each starter on the defensive unit boasts a letter, and six similar players wait in the wings. Also, despite the loss of running back Smith, this looks to be one of the deepest Bear backfields in recent memory. Starting alongside Bohannon is fullback Brian Deveaux (3.3 yards per rush), while Jerry Cronin (300 yards rushing, second to Smith) and Paul Popeo will also see heavy action.

Ryan Stafford returns at quarterback, but sophomore Michael Kirch (56% completion rate, 4 TDs) will also see much time, as Vanderee likes to rotate quarterbacks. The receiving core looks strong with Gans, senior Bill Herrmann (24.4 yards per catch) and tight end John Hayden (14 catches).

There are problems to watch out for, however. In last week's scrimmage against Springfield College, Bowdoin's opponent was able to burn the Bears twice on deep passes when there was a breakdown in assignments in the secondary. The Bears also had trouble covering the kickoff return. Injuries may also prove costly. Daft is questionable for Saturday's game with a bruised shoulder, and three time letterman Tom Trafton has a bruised knee at defensive end and may miss a number of games.

The bad news for Bowdoin is that they will have to go up against a very tough Norwich squad that last week played an excellent team from Western Connecticut to a 20-20 tie. Though they lost their starting QB to injuries, Norwich reserve Tom Grandinetti led them to two late touchdowns and had them in position to win with a late

(Continued on page 12)

Does sailing coach lie on the horizon?

By JUSTIN PREISENDORF
ORIENT Asst. Sports Editor

Sailing on a beam reach off Bethel Point, the seven boats vie to tact first around the marker. This year's Bowdoin Sailing Team is off to a flying start.

"The team this year is talented and very enthusiastic," said Co-captain Tom Gibbons '90. "With 40 people going out for the team, we know that there is support for a sailing program at Bowdoin."

However, smooth sailing is not in the forecast. "Right now our primary concern is getting a coach; there's only so much you can improve without one," said Gibbons.

As luck would have it, the Bowdoin sailors have found someone with experience that is willing to coach them. Michael Horn was coach of Harvard University's sailing team for 22 years, during which time he amassed ten national titles in a row.

Gibbons is excited about Horn's coaching the team. "Horn is ideal for the job. He doesn't want to make the team a sailing powerhouse; he only wants to make better sailors out of us so that we can enjoy the sport even more. Everything is ready for Mr. Horn to start coaching as soon as he reaches a financial agreement with the athletic department." This, however, is where the problem lies. Since the department has already submitted its budget for the 1987-1988 school year, there is no money to pay Horn.

"What we need is continued alumni support," said the Co-captain. "The Alumni have been very generous in the past and hopefully they will see the grave predicament that we are in."

The Polar Bears began their season on September 5 in New Haven, Connecticut. Bowdoin sent two crews to the Harry Anderson

Regatta at Yale University. Co-captain Amy Hamilton '88 and Ron Frankel '90 represented Bowdoin in the lightweight division, while Scott Brown '88 and Brian Thede '89 raced in the heavyweight division. Highlighting the two day 22 boat regatta were Hamilton's fourth and seventh place finishes against many All Americans.

The varsity team has five more regattas, while the freshman team, headed by Julie Asselta and Charles Gibbs, have three more races.

Aye there, matey! — Bowdoin sailors battle the elements and their competitors in recent regatta at Yale. The Bears fared well despite absence of a coach. Photo by Eric Rice.

Heidi Snyder '87 returns for a winner in match against UMO. Photo by Ned May.

Tennis team nets first win

By JAN BREKKE
ORIENT Staff

After a tentative start, the Bowdoin women's tennis team quickly found their form and handled the University of Maine Black Bears by the score of 6-3. Although coach Ed Reid had his doubts, watching his young team falter during the early stages of its matches, he was pleasantly surprised by the end result.

Leading the way for the Polar Bears was freshman Heidi Wallenfeld at number one singles. Wallenfeld fell victim to "first match jitters" in the first set before settling down to easily handle her opponent 6-4, 6-2.

"Heidi was definitely tense at the beginning, but she really ended up playing a good match," commented Reid.

Freshman teammate Katherine Leobes lost a tough three set match at number three singles. However, coach Reid is confident that she will bounce back from the defeat. Reid noted that "Katherine will be able to beat Maine's number three player by the end of the season."

Sophomores Jennifer Grimes and Suzanne Fogarty and senior Suzanne Palmer were also victorious in their singles matches. Grimes played a solid match at number two singles, while Palmer had a good outing in replacing the injured Jen Tewes.

The doubles teams of Wallenfeld-Palmer and Erika Gustafson-Loebes gave Bowdoin its final two victories of the day and put the match out of reach for the Black Bears.

The team will get their first major test of the young season on Monday, September 21st, when they travel to New Hampshire to do battle with UNH.

Leonard and McGeough skate for team in Sweden

Although the hockey season is several months away, it has already begun for two special members of the 1986-87 Polar Bear team.

John McGeough '87 and Jon Leonard '87 are currently skating for Vitahasten, a professional team which plays in Sweden's highly competitive Division I bracket. Located in Norrköping, Sweden, McGeough and Leonard are the latest Polar Bears to test European talent, the last player being defenseman Jean Roy '84.

McGeough, Bowdoin's all-time leading scorer, was selected to the ECAC East All-Star team and the Titan All-America team on his way to being named ECAC East "Player of the Year."

Leonard was selected to the Titan and Hockey Writer's All-America teams three times. He finished as Bowdoin's fifth leading scorer among defensemen.

Both men are looking forward to the challenge of professional hockey. The fact that Vitahasten has chosen two players from the small college program is a tremendous accomplishment considering that teams in Sweden's Division I are allowed only two import players per roster.

In evaluating their two rookie prospects, Vitahasten feels that Leonard, a smooth-skating defenseman who distributes the puck wisely, will fit in well with their system. Leonard agrees and says, "They do a lot of weaving and passing on the move. Their game revolves around speed on the ice."

McGeough has been asked to take the left wing position. Having been a center at Bowdoin, McGeough sounded anxious to get started. "We're going to be playing in a great atmosphere. I won't add pressure on myself to score every night; if I press, the puck won't bounce my way. I'm confident that I can contribute to their

Football

(Continued from page 11)
field goal. He likes to scramble which puts pressure on Bear defensive ends Balestrey and Otto, making the loss of Trafton critical. Another player to watch out for is safety Dennis Smith, who won the Golden Helmet award last week when he recorded seven solo tackles, a blocked field goal, a deflected punt and kicked five punts for a 43 yard average. If Bowdoin is to win they are going to have to contain the Cadet's running game and keep Grandinetti under control. Offensively, the Bears must avoid Smith and pick up the offensive production."

The season will be longer for McGeough and Leonard than last year's. Including pre-season games, the total reaches close to 55 games. Leonard, a supplemental draft choice of the Pittsburgh Penguins, will receive attention from several NHL scouts. McGeough is hoping that his play at the Division I level will earn him a spot in Sweden's top league, the high-salaried Elite League.

Bowdoin swimmers prepare to survey the dark depths of athletic facility pool. Photo by Alan Harris.

Bowdoin presents new athletic facility

By ROSEMARIE DOUGHERTY
ORIENT Assoc. News Editor

The new athletic center is now officially open for use, although not entirely completed.

Comprised of Farley field house and the pool, the center contains a six lane, 200 meter track with a Rekortan surface, four indoor tennis courts, a free-weight room, and a multi-purpose room, with a floor designed to be especially good for aerobic type activities.

Designed by Bowdoin swim coach Charley Butt, the pool is unique in its construction. The 16 lane pool is 75 feet wide and 114 feet long, unlike most pools which are only 60 feet wide and 114 feet long. "This gives us the versatility of a 15-meter pool with less maintenance and less water," said facility scheduler Lynn Ruddy.

Tennis court reservations may be made at the front desk of the center, and are in one and one half hour time blocks. Reservations cannot be made more than one week in advance, and only one reservation per person may be on the book at the same time.

The upper level of the center, containing the multi-purpose room and spectator seating is not yet completed, but will be finished in time for the athletic center's dedication ceremony, scheduled to take place on Homecoming.

The athletic center is open for use from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily, but everyone — faculty, students, staff, dependents and members are required to show Bowdoin I.D. to the monitor upon entering.

Ruddy said I.D. is required to keep people who don't belong in the facility out; thereby preserving the facility and allowing the people who do belong there less congested use of the facilities.

Lockers are available for students, faculty, and staff at the Morrell and Sargent Gymnasium. Due to limited locker space, only 25 lockers are available in the faculty/staff locker room, day lockers only are available at the fieldhouse. "It may be inconvenient, but it makes (locker space) available for everyone," said Ruddy.

Golf clinches second

By JULIE FELNER
ORIENT Contributor

This past Monday, in their first match of the season, the Bowdoin golf team finished second behind Colby in CBB tournament play. Bates rounded off the competition by placing third.

Two Bowdoin players placed among the top five golfers. Steve Mitchell '90 came in second with a score of 77, one point more than Colby's first place winner. Mike Moynihan '89 followed Mitchell in third place with a score of 78.

Coach Terry Meagher viewed the match as a good warm-up for the upcoming 12 team Bowdoin Invitational this weekend. In addition to praising the great course conditions, Coach Meagher added that Mitchell and Moynihan had particularly strong days.

He also remarked that "It was a good tournament. We did very well for the first time out." He added that "the team has real potential."

The Bowdoin golf team looks forward to an upcoming match with UNH and the 60 team New England Golf Tournament later in the season. Coach Meagher feels the team has come back with a little more experience this year and says "with a little luck we can do very well."

Kicker tees it up in practice. Photo by Asaf Farashuddin.

Fly with the finest.

Get your career off to a flying start. Become a Marine aviator. If you're a college freshman, sophomore or junior, you could qualify for our undergraduate Officer Commissioning Program and be guaranteed flight school after graduation. All training is conducted during the summer. There are no on-campus drills. Plus, you receive $100 a month during the school year.

Seniors can qualify for the graduate Officer Commissioning Program and attend training after graduation.

This is an excellent opportunity to prove your self amongst the best and start off making from $17,000 to $23,000 a year. See if you measure up. Check out the Marine Corps Officer Commissioning Programs.

Marines
Maybe you can be one of us. The few. The proud. The Marines.

The Marine Corps Officer Selection Officer will be on campus 21 September through 23 September 1987, 10 am to 2 pm daily in the Moulton Building. If you would like more information, call 436-0974.

Huddled Masses

Students come to Bowdoin for many different reasons. They cite the campus, social atmosphere, and tradition and prestige the college enjoys. But the primary reason is the individual attention in class they can receive because of small classes and lower student-faculty ratios than larger colleges can offer.

But it appears that these features of the college may fast be on their way into the history books. This semester, the problem of overcrowded classes has reached new levels again, and it demands immediate attention on the part of the administration to remedy it.

The college is, of course, taking steps to correct the problem. They cite the hiring of 30 new faculty members - a measure we laud as a step in the right direction. But it seems that there are other measures the college may be enacting to alleviate overcrowding. Many of them appear to be placebos or band-aid cures for a problem fundamental to the academic atmosphere of the college.

One step the college is considering is the extension of classes through lunch hours. This plan might have the added bonus of reducing the lunchtime crunch which causes long lines in Wentworth Hall and the Moulton Union in addition to scheduling more classes throughout the day. A perfect solution?

Hardly. While the actual scheduling concerns of lunch would be no more than a minor inconvenience, the real impact would be to stretch the worktime of faculty and students. While it is perhaps inaccurate to say we stagger under a crushing burden already, the extension of class hours would serve only to aggravate the problems caused by overcrowding.

The solution is simple. If the college wants to offer more classes, it must hire more professors, instructors, and laboratory assistants. Other steps are temporary solutions to a problem reaching crisis proportions and threatening the greatest asset of the school - its personal nature and attention to the development of the individual student.

At a time when the college administration is calling for renewed commitment to academics on the part of the student body, we demand the same of them. Making faculty a priority over expansion of non-academic facilities in college spending policies is a must if Bowdoin is to continue to offer to students the qualities that have consistently attracted the best and the brightest for almost 200 years.

KEVIN WESLEY

Under the Pines

"Should auld acquaintance be forgot ..."

The bells were pealing, sending in the start of a new school year. The Bowdoin College fall semester would soon be in full swing, with all the hopes and aspirations, fears and frustrations, which autumn brings to any college campus.

"Auld Lang Syne." A traditionally irrelevant tune which echoes in the beginning of a new year - calendar or academic. New beginnings, breaking new habits, all HIs, lose 15 pounds, stop smoking, go to class more, take an art course, pop the champagne.

Bowdoin stands for something different for each person on or off campus. The faculty, students, staff, townspeople, alumni, visitors and parents each have a different view of its functions, needs, wants, good points and bad.

But not in the autumn. A fresh perspective for all.

8 a.m. classes, new friends, old friends, buying those books for only $250. It seems as though we all start with the same perspective. Bowdoin is our home, our school, our central focus until May.

Perspective.

The bells rang again yesterday. A birthday of sorts. Our country, with all its ideals, values, tradition, independence. Another celebration. More bells. New perspective.

The founders of the United States' Constitution met in Philadelphia 200 years ago with a single purpose in mind: to establish a firm doctrine enabling us all to enjoy the land from the mountains to the prairies to the white-foamed oceans.

The founders of Bowdoin had the same goal. An alternative to the crimsoned college in Cambridge. A solid education for those boys - soon to be men - who would leave with a new perspective on life. A view which they would hopefully utilize in our new country of new dreams.

The bells must have been ringing.

Bowdoin College could be a model for all institutions of higher learning. A haven for molding the shape of the country - to create an atmosphere where the rich young men of New England could learn - a new perspective.

Since the time when the bells in Philly and Brunswick pealed for the first times, both Bowdoin and the United States have travelled in separate directions, but two weeks ago, they crashed together.

The chapel bells were striking another joyous chorus of "Auld Lang Syne" as our president welcomed us back for another year. I didn't go to Convocation, but as I strolled the campus listening to a tune I used to associate with popping corks and funny hats, I changed my perspective.

"What a college," I said to myself, basking in the pride I had for the brick-faced buildings, the rich literary tradition and exemplary graduates Bowdoin College had produced.

"Think of all that Bowdoin has done for this country - producing statesmen, athletes, scientists, writers and artists."

Walking back to my room feeling quite smug, I continued to revel in what Bowdoin offered for the town, the students, the staff, the professors. So much. So much.

I glanced to my side as I strolled past Hyde Hall. A middle-aged woman, a shawl protecting her hair from the wind, was searching intensely. Poring through her resources, she struggled with the difficulty of her task. She finally found what she wanted.

With grace and ease she lifted a dirty beer can out of the garbage, tucked it in her plastic shopping bag, and strolled expeditiously towards the chapel. The bells were still ringing.

A new perspective.

Letter

To the Editor:

Bowdoin College professor Richard Morgan drools over the candidacy of Judge Robert Bork, President Reagan's nominee to sit on the Supreme Court of the United States (Portland Press Herald, 9/14/87). In view of the controversy raging over Mr. Bork's record as a judge - his judicial temperament, his technical competence, his integrity, and his ambivalence toward basic democratic principles, it's interesting to find such an outspoken and unabashed Bork booster sitting as professor of constitutional law at a prestigious local institution of higher learning.

As a Bowdoin graduate I, of course, would like to think that Professor Morgan's hanging out at Bowdoin is evidence of the College's meticulous dedication to freedom of expression under the Bill of Rights, a dedication dismally absent from Mr. Bork's long established record of judicial mediocrity, intolerance for the rights of citizens, and apparent hostility to the constitution itself. Sincerely, Julian C. Holmes '82

Let's hear it

The Orient is a student newspaper, designed to serve the campus of Bowdoin College. Letters to the editor are always welcome and we will print as many as space permits. Send them by campus mail to the Orient, or deliver them in person to our offices at 12 Cleveland Street.

If you have more to say than you can fit in a short letter, and want to write an in-depth opinion, please contact Jack Cahill, Editorials Editor, at the Orient or Coles Tower Box 313.

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

"The College exercises no control over the content of the student writings contained herein and neither it, the Administration, nor the faculty assume any responsibility for the views expressed herein."

Lori Bodwell...Editor in Chief

Kevin Wesley...Assistant Editor
Adam Najberg...News Editor
Rosemarie Dougherty...Assoc. News Editor

Michael Botelho...Sports Editor
Jack Cahill...Editorials Editor
Susan Lyons...Contributing Editor

Tamara Dassanayake...Asst. News Editor
Eric Foushee...Account Executive
Alan Harris...Photography Editor
Mary Ann Lai...Photography Editor
Lizz Millan...Asst. Entertainment Editor
Dawn Vance...Asst. News Editor

Kathryn Nanovic...Production Manager
Justin Preisendorfer...Asst. Sports Editor
Stephen Reynolds...Features Editor
Sharon Smart...Entertainment Editor
Michael Townsend...Advertising Manager

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT
Published by

THE BOWDOIN PUBLISHING COMPANY

LORI M. BODWELL ALBERT P. MAURO, JR.

Published weekly when classes are held during the Fall and Spring semester by the students of Bowdoin College. Address editorial communication to the Editor, subscription communication to the circulation manager, and business correspondence to the business manager at The Bowdoin Orient, 12 Cleveland Street, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011, or telephone (207) 725-3300. The Bowdoin Orient reserves the right to edit any and all articles and letters. Subscriptions are $15.00 per year or $8.00 per semester. Past issues cannot be mailed. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to The Bowdoin Orient, Moulton Union, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011.

Pander takes aim at Bowdoin security

By LANCE HICKEY
ORIENT Contributor

The new director of campus security for the 1987-88 year has been chosen. Michael S. Pander of Mansfield Center, Connecticut, will be replacing former director Lawrence M. Joy who died last April.

Pander has had a 15 year career with the University of Connecticut's public safety division, where he has served for the last two years as associate director and deputy chief of police. Pander directed a 31 member police staff and an 18 member fire department, and now has 20 department personnel serving under him at Bowdoin.

Pander has had considerable field work, having served as a police officer, detective, sergeant, and lieutenant. He says that "investigative work is what I enjoy doing most," but he admits he will have little time for investigation at Bowdoin. One of his past investigations has been immortalized as the "Big Foot Caper."

The Fine Arts Building on the UConn campus had been broken into several times. Once, an electronic keyboard was stolen. While investigating the scene of the crime, Pander discovered large footprints of tracked-in dirt on a window sill.

Pander said the bootmarks were huge. "They must have been a size 13," he said. A few days later the culprit was arrested on another charge, and his big feet were instantly recognized. "He had to walk out of our offices barefoot because we seized his shoes for evidence," said Pander.

Michael S. Pander

Pander plans to make Bowdoin a community in which the inhabitants "are safe, and feel safe." One way of accomplishing this is an outreach program among the dorms. "Be cautious - lock your doors!" he warns. Thus far Pander has been impressed by the Bowdoin students' respect for law and order. Fraternities have also been "very cooperative", and complaints from Bowdoin neighbors have been few.

Pander doesn't have a specific security program yet, but said he is preparing well for upcoming events, including drug night. Pander said he will be strolling the campus on that night, looking to quench trouble and maintain order. Pander also said Bowdoin security genuinely cares about student safety and wants to help keep the campus safe.

"I don't think you can be in this job and not care," said Pander.

Crossword Companion

ACROSS

1. Epoch
4. Sire
9. Tennis shot
12. Pave
13. Odor
14. Mock
15. Adore
17. Scan
19. Aged
20. Cent
21. Chore
23. Ban
24. Moray (pl.)
27. Some
28. Master
29. Pointed missile
30. Verb (form of be)
31. Plan (pl.)
33. Plural of 1
34. Poison
36. Eat (p.t.)
37. Jelly
38. Coat
39. Squeeze
40. Twist
41. Desk
43. Drunk
44. Tune in (p.t.)

46. Aired
49. Mistake
50. Scary
52. Yale
53. Course
54. Oddity
55. Fish eggs

DOWN

1. 7th Letter, Greek Alphabet
2. Frightened (Early Eng.)
3. Military Depot
4. Poet
5. Before
6. Depart
7. Ash
8. Lake
9. Attorney
10. Ceres mother (Gr.)

11. Drone
16. Type, Sort
18. Burden
20. Indulge
21. Code
22. Origin
23. Lighter
25. Cut back
26. Bloat
28. Spade
29. High card
31. Relation between tones on scale
32. Inhabitant (abbr.)
35. Certifier
37. Ditch
39. Senior
40. Trick
42. Squabble
43. Hunt
44. Morning Molature
45. Ireland Military Organization (abbr.)
46. By way of
47. Rock Group
48. Decrease
51. Concerning

Answer on page five

If you like the crossword puzzle, let us know. Call Assistant Editor Kevin Wesley at x3300.

With the official opening of the athletic center at Pickard Field on Monday, September 14, 1987 at 1:30 p.m., Bowdoin College will initiate its policy of requiring a Bowdoin ID card for admittance. Everyone is welcome and urged to use the center during its operating hours, but you must show your ID.

Frosh orientation evaluated

By MARSHALL CARTER
ORIENT Contributor

Freshmen orientation will undergo serious evaluation by the Student Life Committee (SLC) in the upcoming weeks, according to Dean of Students and SLC chairman Kenneth Lewallen.

The call for examination came after criticism from some faculty about the lack of academic structure, and the sentiment expressed by some freshmen that they were anxious for classes to start.

"Orientation ought to have an academic theme. That's what college is all about," said Lewallen. One possibility Lewallen discussed was requiring freshmen to complete reading assignments before arrival on campus, then participating in discussion seminars with professors during orientation.

Length and substance were also cited by Lewallen as areas needing examination. By concentrating the activities over a shorter period, orientation would be more efficient and worthwhile. However, Lewallen noted that condensing this year's activities for next year would not be the answer.

The SLC will "discover the less successful activities and replace them," while also finding "what seemed most effective, clearly, what had the most attendance," said Lewallen.

Orientation began on Monday, Aug. 31, for all new students. However, more than one-third had participated in 14 different pre-orientation trips.

During orientation, many freshmen had just two or three short activities per day, and were left with large spans of unstructured time. Many used this time to shop for supplies and dorm room decorations. However, some freshmen, such as Heather Freund, feel that "there was too much free time and nothing to do. Everybody seemed to be dying for classes to start."

Jim Berlino '91 confirmed that some of the existing programs needed evaluation, saying, "Some of the things we went to didn't accomplish much."

Lewallen said some freshmen will be given the opportunity to provide input for the SLC's efforts towards the improvement of orientation.

As the evaluation is "one of my primary issues," Lewallen said, "I expect orientation will be changed significantly by next fall."

SIT DOWN OR TAKE OUT.

The Amato's Pasta Special, every Monday and Tuesday.

Try the Amato's Pasta Special, delicious spaghetti or ziti and our own homemade meatballs and tomato sauce, with fresh bread on the side.

A fantastic meal at this special price:

$2.49

Monday and Tuesday only

THERE'S NOTHING LIKE A REAL ITALIAN.

135 Maine Street, Brunswick. 3 Main St., Gorham
Open 6 am-Midnight, Sun.-Thur.; 6 am-1 am, Fri. & Sat.
Call 729-5514 for fast take out.

Casual Sportswear
Imported from France
For men and women

Freeport Village Square
2 Depot St., Freeport, ME
865-3066

$ EASY MONEY!!

I will pay $25 for your phone book.
Call Lee Ramsey Collect
at: (615) 577-7237
After 6:00 PM

Beautiful furnished room
for female Bowdoin student
in lovely restored
Colonial home near campus.
729-8616, days
725-8290, evenings

Monday madness

Throbbing head? Quaking body? Has Monday dealt another crushing blow? Revive yourself with a well-rounded meal from Domino's Pizza. We'll help smooth the wrinkles out of your day.

Call us.
729-5561
26 Bath Road

Hours:
4:30pm - 1am Mon.-Thurs.
11am - 2 am Fri. & Sat.
11am - 1 am Sun.

Our drivers carry less than $20.00.
Limited delivery area.

© 1987 Domino's Pizza, Inc.

DOMINO'S
PIZZA
DELIVERS™
FREE.

Menu

All Pizzas Include Our Special Blend of Sauce and 100% Real Cheese

Our Superb Cheese Pizza
12" cheese $4.76
16" cheese $7.24

Additional Items
Pepperoni, Mushrooms,
Black Olives, Ham,
Onions, Anchovies,
Green Peppers, Sausage,
Ground Beef, Extra
Cheese, Green Olives,
Pineapple, Hot Pepper
Rings
12" pizza $.86 per item
16" pizza $1.19 per item

Coca-Cola® available.
16-oz. bottle $.62
Customer pays deposit.

Prices do not include
Maine state sales tax.

Monday
Only

Only $5.00 for a 12 inch pepperoni pizza and two 16-ounce bottles of Coke
SAVE $2.30!!

Fast, Free Delivery™
26 Bath Rd.
Phone: 729-5561

No Coupon Necessary

Exclusive Toni Morrison interview page three

THE

BOWDOIN ORIENT

FIRST CLASS MAIL
U.S. Postage PAID
BRUNSWICK, ME.
Permit No. 25

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

VOLUME CXVII

BOWDOIN COLLEGE

BRUNSWICK, MAINE, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, 1987

NUMBER 3

Fraternities pleased with dry rush drops

By DAWN VANCE
ORIENT Asst. News Editor

This semester's rush has drawn to an end and the drop results are in. The only question that remains - was this semester's attempt at a dry rush a success?

Yes, if numbers provide any indication. Despite the dry rush, fraternities did not suffer a decline in the number of drops as many may have originally feared. The numbers coincided fairly well with those of past years, and in some cases they even rose.

According to the Inter-Fraternity Council's (IFC) calculations as of Tuesday night September 22, 1987, the figures stand: Alpha Beta Phi 5, Alpha Delta Phi 13, Alpha Kappa Sigma 17, Alpha Rho Upsilon 9, Beta Theta Pi 35, Chi Psi 9, Delta Kappa Epsilon 35, Delta Sigma 5, Kappa Psi Upsilon 7, Theta Delta Chi 26, Zeta Psi 18.

Administratively dry rush proved a success. This semester's rush lacked the conflict inherent between the fraternity system and the administration in past years. Such conflict traditionally included overconsumption of alcohol, noise complaints, and angry parents and professors.

In fact, the administration received minimal complaints - simply a noise complaint against Kappa Psi Upsilon which that fraternity handled with a great deal of responsibility.

The administration's only disappointment stemmed from the amount of drinking within the college's residence halls.

The administration had expected an increase in alcohol consumption within the residence halls due to the dry rush. Despite the increase, Dean of Students Kenneth A. Lewallen shed a favorable light upon this phenomenon.

Lewallen said smaller amounts of alcohol were involved than would have been had the freshmen been drinking in the fraternities, that students were drinking in smaller groups, that the dormitories suffered considerably less damage, and that the proctors and Bowdoin College Security were better able to monitor student behavior within the residence halls.

Lewallen commended the fraternities on their handling of dry rush. "I think the faculty are quite happy and that the President and Dean of the College are equally satisfied with the results. I give the IFC full credit for developing and monitoring dry rush. It could not have been successful without their commitment," said Lewallen.

Lewallen also expressed pleasure at the numbers of students who decided to join fraternities this semester. Said Lewallen, "I'm pleased with the results. I hoped that the fraternities could have high numbers as an incentive to continue with dry rush or at least some form of dry rush."

Lewallen continued, "Most fraternity systems that have dry rushes suffer a precipitous decline in the number of drops at first, though these numbers rise as fraternities adapt. We don't have that sharp decline - we have stable numbers...as a result of the (Continued on page 11)

Sorority cited

By JACK CAHILL
ORIENT Editorials Editor

The president of Alpha Beta Phi, Bowdoin's only sorority, faces heavy fines and a possible jail term if convicted of liquor violations which allegedly occurred Saturday night during sorority drop night activities.

Kate Adams '89, Alpha Beta Phi president, was cited Saturday night by state Liquor Enforcement Officer David Milan with furnishing a place for minors to consume alcohol, a charge which carries a fine of up to $500 and a possible six-month jail term. Milan issued a summons to Adams to appear before Cumberland County District Court, according to a Department of Public Safety spokesman.

In addition to penalties Adams faces if convicted, questions have been raised about the possibility that Saturday night's incident may jeopardize the relationship between the sorority and its na-

(Continued on page two)

Norwich students storm campus

By KEVIN WESLEY
ORIENT Assistant Editor

Two Norwich University students, who caused $950 in damages to Coles Tower last weekend, have agreed to pay for repairs.

According to Dean of Students Kenneth A. Lewallen, Bowdoin College will seek restitution for the damage done to two fire doors on Saturday, Sept. 18 on the eighth floor of the Tower.

Several Bowdoin students reported seeing two Norwich students rip the doors off their hinges on Saturday night. Lewallen said the Norwich students exhibited "obnoxious and destructive behavior," while on campus.

Security officers were called into the Tower at 11:02 p.m. that night, where the damaged doors were discovered. Three other calls were made to security over related incidents, according to eighth floor resident Andrew Winter '89.

Director of Security Michael Pander would not release the names of the Norwich students involved.

According to Pander the northside door on the eighth floor was cracked at the hinges. The southside door was completely separated from its hinges.

Later that night, Louanne Alexander, a Bowdoin College security officer, approached two males fitting the description of the Norwich students seen in Coles Tower. The students said they were staying at Bowdoin, but did not admit to breaking the Tower doors.

Pander estimated repairs would cost between $950-$1,000.

Both Lewallen and Pander said although the vandalism was the most serious incident, they were aware of incidents of harassment, nuisance and trespassing. "That (the doors) is just the tip of the iceberg," Lewallen said.

Lewallen said he will speak with Norwich University officials about the incidents, once he confers with witnesses and evaluates the apology letter. Lewallen said he may request a formal apology request or issue a warning to the students never to return to Bowdoin College. Lewallen also said Norwich University might seek disciplinary action against the students.

"It's something I don't think our college should tolerate," said Lewallen.

Norwich University's football and rugby teams both played against Bowdoin on Saturday. It is unclear whether the students who caused the damage were players or fans.

Microscale proves that 'Smaller is better'

By
TAMARA DASSANAYAKE
ORIENT Asst. News Editor

The innovative microscale organic laboratory program developed at the Bowdoin College Chemistry department recently received two more awards to add to an already impressive list.

Two Bowdoin professors, Dana W. Mayo and Samuel S. Butcher and Merrimack College's Ronald Pike received the 1987 American Chemical Society Division of Chemical Health and Safety award for their "outstanding contributions to increasing health and safety in the laboratory."

Organic chemists Mayo and Pike were also the recipients of the 1987 Timm award presented by the New England Association of Chemical Teachers for their "innovative contributions to the teaching of organic chemistry."

According to Mayo, the program was conceived in fall 1980 when the Cleveland Hall laboratories were having "serious" ventilation problems arising from the large quantities of vapors produced in the organic lab. "When the organic lab was being used, the whole building knew!" said Mayo.

Mayo said Butcher studied the environment of the lab and came up with "horrendous" statistics. It was estimated that about $250,000 was needed to carry out the necessary renovations on the ventilation systems. The alternative was to scale down the existing (Continued on page 11)

Senior tailback Greg Bohannon sprints to open daylight on way to a stellar performance in which he gained 252 total yards. Bohannon's efforts did not go unnoticed as he received the Golden Helmet award given weekly to the best Division II or III player in the East. Photo by Asaf Farashuddin.

What was your reaction to American Pictures?

By BECKY AUSTIN
ORIENT Contributor

Jennifer Andrus '90
"I was more affected by the photographs than what he said. It's important to remember that he has a European point of view. It's easy for him to make suggestions that aren't as easy as they sound."

Nick Szatkowski '90
"It was interesting and enlightening, but it has to be taken with a grain of salt."

Liz Sizler '90
"Seeing American Pictures made me feel guilty for everything I have and those people don't. It made me want to do something for them."

Lisa Kane '90
"The whole presentation was well done and thought-provoking. It was hard to understand how he could have such capacity to love and empathize all types, even the people who held him at gun point."

Seventeen to run for Board

By KEVIN WESLEY
ORIENT Assistant Editor

Fraternities and dining issues were the focus of a forum for Executive Board candidates Wednesday night.

Eighteen candidates discussed their goals and aims as board members. Seventeen of the candidates will vie for 15 spots on the 1987-88 Exec Board.

Of the 17 candidates, four are running for re-election. All four cited a need to eliminate the dissent which plagued last year's board. Karen Feeley '90 said, "I realize we can't keep this dissension going."

George Hillhouse, who served as summer chair, cited his role in doubling the computer capacity on campus, assisting the Big Brother/Sister program and obtaining preliminary approval for a new student lounge on campus as examples of his work.

Mark Peluso '88, disputed claims that last year's board was ineffective. "Don't be discouraged if you're running," he said. Peluso noted that last year's board recommended a new checkout system at Hawthorne-Longfellow Library and the establishment of a new laundry service.

Andrew Winter '89 said the linen issue and his work with the Student Life Committee were important in last year's board. "The Exec Board is only as good as the members on it," he said.

Joe Gulino '89 said the dissent in last year's board must be put to rest if the new board is to be effective.

Several candidates told the audience they were fraternity members and that President A. Leroy Greason's newly-formed fraternity evaluation committee was of great concern to them. Jason Easterly '90, said he disagreed with several aspects of the committee, but his election would be "a healthy opportunity to correct those faults."

Jennifer Youncey '90 said she wants to improve the relationship between the Exec Board and the student body. "I think the Exec Board should go after the student body more."

Five of the seventeen candidates are freshmen. Said Robert Smith '91, "If this board isn't apparently what the student body wants, and we get 15 members who want to change, we can change it."

Jim Caron '91 said, "I think the students at a small school can do more than those at a large school," and Tim Hughes '88 added that the new Dining Service i.d. policy makes Bowdoin impersonal.

Suzana Makowski '90 said the need to increase international and minority student interest in Bowdoin was pressing, as well as the status of the fraternity system.

Rich Krasauski '90 said his experience in various activities gave him a broad perspective of the Bowdoin scene.

Stephen Curley '88, was active on last year's Executive Board but withdrew his candidacy saying the board was "a worthless body filled with self-centered people, bent on self-gratification."

The Bowdoin-Bates Blood Challenge was issued once again on Wednesday. Bowdoin has been victorious over its Lewiston rivals for the last two years.

Sorority

(Continued from page one)
tional sponsor, Phi Sigma Sigma. Sorority members elected to join the national organization last spring when they faced loss of their house on Harpswell Street.

The incident may also endanger the sorority's relations with college administration, which does not officially recognize the sorority. "The college certainly doesn't recognize any single-sex organizations," said Dean of Students Kenneth A. Lewallen, "but in practice we treat them as if they exist. They use our facilities in a casual way, we allow them to advertise on campus, and so forth."

"In dealings with Alpha Beta Phi and Chi Psi, we haven't been harsh. But if they seriously disrupt the campus, or violate Maine state law, or do anything that causes the college embarrassment, that may change." According to Lewallen, Milan was patrolling campus Saturday night when he observed two minors carrying what appeared to be open alcoholic beverages and stopped them to determine where the alcohol came from. "They said they had been served at the apartment building that houses Alpha Beta Phi," Lewallen said.

Milan then went to the sorority house to investigate, and cited

Adams for furnishing a place for minors to consume alcohol. "In his interpretation, she had control of the premises. Even though it's an apartment house, it's rented to the women in the sorority," Lewallen said. Adams, although she was on the premises at the time of the alleged violation, resides in Coles Tower.

Lewallen said the college will wait until the law has run its course before bringing possible disciplinary action against Adams or other sorority members.

According to the Dean, sanctions imposed by the college in case of a conviction "could range from a reprimand to action by the Student Judiciary Board, resulting in possible dismissal from the institution."

THE
BRUNSWICK
FLOWER SHOP

729-8895
216A Maine St.
Mon.-Sat. 9:30-6

We Deliver

Wire Service

Centrally located across from Bowdoin College

ITALIANS DELIVERED. FREE.

Announcing free delivery service for all Amato's great food.

Amato's in Brunswick will now deliver many of its great menu items. And they'll deliver them free. It's the ultimate in fast, convenient service. Delicious pastas, pizzas, calzone, and dinners and our famous Italian sandwiches with fresh cold cuts, thick slices of plump tomatoes and more are only a phone call away. With a minimum order of $15.00, these and many other of our menu items can be at your door, as fresh and as fast as if you ordered them at the counter.

Sunday-Thursday, 4 pm to 11:30 pm
Friday and Saturday, 4 pm to midnight

So call ahead and enjoy speedy, free delivery from the home of the original Italian sandwich.

THERE'S NOTHING LIKE A REAL ITALIAN.

135 Maine Street, Brunswick
Open 6 am-midnight, Sun.-Thur.; 6 am-1 am, Fri. and Sat.
Call 729-5514 for fast take-out and free delivery.

Morrison discusses women, working, writing

By SUSAN LYONS
ORIENT Contributing Editor

Noted author Toni Morrison (The Bluest Eyes, Sula, Tar Baby, Song of Solomon, and Beloved) spoke to a capacity crowd Monday night in Pickard Theatre. In an exclusive interview, Orient Contributing Editor Susan Lyons spoke with the author about her work and her life.

Orient: You are a teacher as well as a writer—what do you feel can be taught to your students?

Toni Morrison: You can teach them how to come close to their own perception of truth or vision, it is important that a writer have a technique or have at their disposal a range of techniques so that they can make choices, not because they don't know how to do something, but so that they can make a choice when the text is developed. A style is something you acquire, you don't really know your style in the beginning. You have to find it.

Orient: You're also an editor....

T.M.: I was an editor at Random House for 19 years, but I am not anymore, I stopped a couple of years ago.

Orient: Were you an editor or a writer first?

T.M.: Both. I started editing when I began my first book. Editing doesn't do anything for the imagination. It just makes you conscious of other people's work and what they mean. If you are an editor in a publishing house it's very very difficult to become a writer, for good reasons. Split loyalties and such....

Orient: In an interview with

Claudia Tate (Black Women Writers) you say, "A good cliché can never be overwritten."

T.M.: Well, a cliché is cliché because it's useful, because there is something in it that at one time clarified something. And of course it's the same thing composition teachers always say to avoid. They're right, except in a cliché is always a kernel of some other idea. You have to make a distinction between an inexhaustible subject and an exhaustible idea.

"Time is different for young people, there's no schedule, you can start, fail and start again."

Orient: Do you feel there is a distinctive, fundamental difference between male and female authors which surfaces in their writing?

T.M.: There's a lot of scholarship on that question.... It's hard to pin it down, there are women who insist that there is a different language. I am not convinced that there is. You can't really say. There are some things, you could pick out, the fact that women usually avoid linear plots.... But I have read and I'm sure you have too some of the most vulnerable, sensitive, insightful books by men who have put themselves in the place of women, Anna Karenina is one, I mean how can you say that men don't know what it is? I think it's just a habit of men to assume that the center of consciousness is male, that that is the normal state of things. I think it bears exploration not only on biological but also on cultural grounds, gender is culture-based. How you function as a woman depends on the culture in which you live.

Orient: In your latest novel, Beloved, Sethe's murdered child, Beloved, seems to possess a dual symbolism—in a review of your book Time refers to her as, "both Sethe's guilt and redemption." Is that a correct interpretation of the character?

T.M.: I think that's a little misleading about Beloved. Beloved is Sethe's past, although she is called up and invented, Sethe needs the presence of the ghost. She is eager for her to be her restored child, Beloved is the mechanism by which Sethe can confront the palpable past. Beloved is not salvation or damnation, although the final wish that is granted to Sethe is to re-do her past, so she doesn't have any regrets. And of course we re-do the past, and do the same thing, and so that's what it's really about.

Orient: So much of your work shows a fascination with ancestry, what is it that intrigues you about the past?

T.M.: We live in a country that plays games with the past and the future, you know, the "frontier," the "American Hero" who is sort of vulnerable but is going to make it alright through the next whatever, it has something to do with a sort of population that was not ensnared of the old countries, they left those places and they went to bring it with them. So there's a great deal of that in the character of Americans, they deal in a very interesting way with the past, they tend to sanitize it a lot, which is not necessarily a bad thing because you should decide what is valuable about the past and what isn't. You can't take it all, but in doing so, they seem to be denying a great deal. It's like an individual, an individual just can't sanitize everything, there are some times when they feel regret or shame and have to deal with it in order to go forward. I don't recommend that you dwell in the past, people do that and they just sort of die there, and they never go forward. I don't really think you can go forward healthfully without repeating your mistakes unless the past is confronted and cleaned up and dealt with. Black women have had some very modern problems to solve for a long time. Now most women are confronting these situations: single parenthood, taking care of house and children, etc. These are problems black women had to face long ago not because they wanted to but because they were forced to, so that's why I say that even though this book (Beloved) is set in slavery, it seems to me to have implications that are very contemporary.

Orient: You wrote a play last year, Dreaming Emmett. What are you doing with it, where is it going?

T.M.: It's not going anywhere, although I have 35 or 40 theatres who have asked me. It was a huge success in Albany, I did it to celebrate the first year that Martin Luther King's birthday was a national holiday. I wanted to do something special, so I did that. We ran it for four weeks, it was a regional theatre and they give you four week productions. I would like to revise that play on its feet, so to speak, before I print it and make it available. If you do it like I did it in four weeks, anything you want to change in production you don't have time to cause you gotta go on, so what I want to do is make final decisions about the production and then see how that looks and I'll actually print it.

Orient: What advice would you offer to aspiring undergraduate writers?

T.M.: I think you obviously should read everything if for no other reason than to develop a sense of what is the difference between good writing and bad writing. Not to imitate, but so they can recognize what works and what doesn't so that when they begin to write they will know what works for them. They should also be willing to take the time, there's an urgency that the media manufactures of the young novelist and people seem to feel that if they reach 25 and it's not there, then it's not ever coming. Time is different for young people, there's no schedule, you can start, fail, and start again. You may have the skills but not the wisdom, or you may have the wisdom but not the skills; they have to come together. The only way to find out is to continue to do it. But whether or not one gets published at an early age might seem to be the most important thing in the world but in fact is always the most irrelevant thing. What you have to do is develop so that whenever you're published you're strong.

Morrison explains 'nuts and bolts' of her writing

By RICHARD LINDAHL
ORIENT Contributor

Renowned author Toni Morrison was given a grand welcome by an eager audience in Pickard Theatre Monday evening, even before Professor Gayle Pemberton was able to properly introduce her.

Before reading from her most recent novel, Beloved, Morrison gave an account of her recent writing experiences.

After writing the novel Tar Baby, she left her editing position at Random House Publishing to "go live like grown-ups do," and to write for a living. She had not planned to write another novel because she did not want to find an idea for a novel, simply because she called herself a writer. She wanted to let the idea find her.

The idea found her when she read an article in an old magazine about a slave woman named Margaret Garner who killed one of her four children and tried to kill the others. The woman calmly explained to a preacher the reason for the incident—she was responsible for their lives, but had no control over what happened to them as a mother should.

Morrison, although intrigued, at first resisted writing about blacks in slavery. She also thought it would be "too big," wear her out, and that she would not be able to successfully complete it. Then she decided that if she couldn't address the subject of oppression under slavery, then it would be as if "they won." She thought about the lives of slaves, and decided, "If they could live it, I could write it."

She tried to forget most of what she had read about Garner because she wanted to invent her life for her own purposes. She had found the basic premise for the novel, and wanted to fictionalize as much as she could.

After the reading Morrison answered questions from the audience.

Morrison said she needed four years to write her latest novel. When asked whether she saw her characters in her dreams, she said she didn't, adding, "I need some peace."

To a question about the resolution of problems in her stories Morrison replied that she felt satisfaction in surfacing and exploring problems, and that she deliberately did not give the reader "Advisory tablets" to deal with the book, "that's not my job," she said.

Asked about the relationship between her career and her personal life, Morrison said she does not write about herself because she doesn't want to write about real people and because she can't invent things about herself.

Morrison said she didn't hear voices when writing about characters, but affirmed that there was a sense of the characters that forced her to make their actions authentic. She added that no one can explain the process of ideas coming to be, saying, "If anyone described it to you perfectly, I wouldn't trust it."

Morrison said she often writes five to seven drafts of a book, and the first draft is the hardest to write. She confided that the re-writing is what she enjoys most about writing. "I make the big sculpture and then I spend years chiseling away at it," she said.

Morrison said she had envisioned her current novel at about one-third of the book she wanted to write, but others, such as her publisher, convinced her that it was complete. She still persists in her view of incompleteness, and thus has been able to avoid the depression normally encountered upon finishing a book and losing the company of its characters.

On the subject of other authors, Morrison said she had favorites, but had never been inspired to write by reading another author's book.

When queried about her tendency to burden her main characters with physical afflictions, Morrison noted she did so to set the characters apart from their communities, allowing them to find resources within themselves. She reported that one of her character's afflictions, the absence of a novel, was previously without scientific justification; however, a recent separation of Siamese twins resulted in such a phenomenon.

Asked how she chooses the names for her characters, Morrison said some of the characters appear with their names, but most are the result of experimentation, trying different names to see what works. "Like anyone else, if you don't know their names they're not going to respond right," she said.

Morrison then said that the real Margaret Garner's fate was very different from that of her fictional counterpart. The real Garner was returned to her master in Kentucky rather than sent to prison, and Morrison wonders what the real story was after that.

Toni Morrison signs a copy of her latest novel for Bowdoin student Michael Townsend '90 after her lecture Monday night. Photo by Alan Harris.

By CHIP BLAKE
ORIENT Contributor

Sometimes I feel like I am the only Mainer at Bowdoin. I even feel a bit inferior to "out-of-staters". When asked where I am from, I usually respond with a timid "Maine", somehow hoping that the questioner will not hear my response, and just nod in affirmation. If my answer is heard, the next question is usually, "Really? Where?". My answer is usually a direction-North, and travelling time by car (two hours) rather than the name of my hometown, Hampden—which is usually confused with another Maine town, Camden, or more to my dismay, Hamden Connecticut. Despite playing these little games with my ego, I am proud to be a Mainer. I have lived here for nineteen years, and have enjoyed both the people and the state itself.

When I was in the M.U. Bookstore the other day, waiting in line to buy my buck-forty-five notebook, the "Maineiac Express" caught my eye. A headline screaming "Northern Maine secedes!" dominated the front page of the tabloid and underneath the title was the line "the world's only Novel Conference. Michael Kimball, the Express' other co-editor, and Melnicove had been submitting short, anonymous articles to Maine papers for a few years. "That wasn't paying the rent", says Melnicove, so the two then decided to put out an entire paper of original articles and ads. The paper took about six months to put together with help from a staff of five, including recent Bowdoin graduate, Nessa Burns '86.

Melnicove seemed more than willing to explain articles in the paper. He scanned the front page and pointed to the photo in the lower left and said, "Roy Oulette is about seven-hundred miles off the coast now" in reference to an article that described Oulette's, a beer bellied hillbilly wearing a wetsuit four sizes too large, attempt at a transatlantic swim. An embarrassing rash of naiveite, I actually believed Mark for a second, exclaiming "Really?". He affirmed his statement in a serious tone, noting that Roy had had quite a send-off. Nessa Burns, who had since joined us, said "I thought the whole thing was going to be a flop". Melnicove had arranged a gathering at Old Orchard Beach this summer to see gested that anyone who wanted to come down to his office on Thursday and help him box books would be eligible for the contest. Another piece that he believed would be of interest to Bowdoin students was an ad for Johnny's Condoms, based in Augusta. The company offered free, discrete delivery in the greater Augusta area. Melnicove thought that anyone interested would have to drive to the Gardiner exit.

As I was looking through the paper, trying to find my favorite piece, which I will mention later, Melnicove looked at the back page of the paper—pointing to an ad for the Maine Food Mart, he started musing about marshmallows. Just about every item in the ad that was on sale was some form of marshmallow. Chunky marshmallow soup, marshmallow soda, and marshmallow cake mix. "Marshmallow days are here again!" declared the ad in bold-face. "We ate lots of marshmallows", Melnicove explained. The humor is only fully appreciable if one shops in small stores and sees things like marshmallow salad, which I hope is only found in Maine.

I felt quite satisfied after my

Shock therapy Down-East: Humor for Maineiacs

Maine comedy newspaper". I could not argue, nor could I resist. The paper had to have been one of the funniest things that I had ever read. Granted, some of the articles may be a bit beyond "outstaters". There are some things that can only be appreciated after shopping at a isolated country store in the Maine interior or eating at a hunters' breakfast, but I think that the "Maineiac Express" is essential reading for anyone that has set foot in Maine.

Because the "Maineiac Express" is written and published here in Brunswick, I felt obligated to talk with the creators of this state's comic masterpiece. I interviewed Mark Melnicove, one of the co-writers and editors, at the offices of the Maine Writers and Publishers Alliance on Mason street. As it turned out, the Express is just one of Melnicove's projects. He is the director of the Maine Writers and Publishers Alliance, an organization that publishes works by Maine authors. He is also a publisher, and co-editor and co-author of the Uncensored Guide to Maine. His office is in a bookstore that has over eight-hundred titles by Maine authors. It is, as he claims, "the largest collection of Maine books in the Universe".

I pulled a chair up to his desk and we started talking about the Express. The paper was started last winter soon after the Maine

Roy off, Melnicove, however, did not tell the crowd that the entire event was bogus. "Mark had a megaphone" added Nessa, "Undoubtedly, many people were attracted to the event and Mark's megaphone, but I am certain that they wondered why they hadn't heard anything about someone trying to swim across the Atlantic."

Throughout the interview, Melnicove treated everything in the Express as if it were real. Mark pointed to another article "Seagull and Blackfly Mate". "Have you seen any of these things yet?", he asked. The Express claimed the creatures had been genetically engineered in Bar Harbor, a mid-coastal resort town not far from my hometown. I admitted that although I had been to Bar Harbor recently, I hadn't seen any of the Seafalls. Melnicove assured me that I would see some soon, "They fly about forty miles an hour", he said, "And they have most likely migrated down to the Brunswick area by now."

Melnicove continued to flip through the paper; his enthusiasm never waned. He wanted to find some articles that might be of some interest to Bowdoin students. An advertisement for a contest, featuring a five minute alcohol shopping spree for the winners, caught his eye. He admitted that the contest was only open to "Maineiac Express" employees and their families, but he suggested that anyone who wanted to be a "Maineiac" in every sense, and the writing in the "Maineiac Express" showed not only Melnicove's humor, but also his love of the state of Maine. I asked Melnicove about his educational background, and in particular his major. His response was "Maine studies". He went to Princeton and his actual major was anthropology. He seems to like this state as much as I do.

After reading the Express a few times, I had quite a feeling of pride for the state of Maine. Even though Melnicove and the rest of the Express staff were making fun of just about every important person and institution in the state, I could still say, "Yeah, I've been there", or "I've done that". Getting back to my favorite piece in the paper, a chart that classifies Maine residents into different classes according to the amount of time spent living in this state—tourist, Newly 0-5 years, Out-caster 1-20 years, Flatlander 8-30 years, Iffy 20-40 years, Local 30-60 years, and the coveted Maineiac "attainable only by third generation locals, 39 year minimum. I don't qualify as a "Maineiac" (I'll admit that I was born in New Hampshire), nor do I come under the category of "Local" (although I have been to several baked bean suppers). I am merely an "Out-caster" the Express' eyes. What a blow.

Top: Front page of the Maineiac Express. Middle and below: Co-editor Mark Melnicove. Photos by Dawn Bradford

Specimens of the Maineiac mind

Illiteracy declared official second language

AUGUSTA—In a move that surprised no one, Governor McKernan yesterday announced that illiteracy would become Maine's official second language.

"If you can't fight 'em, join 'em," the Governor said at the proclamation ceremonies. In a move to show his solidarity with Maine's illiterates, the Governor didn't even sign his name to the proclamation. "It's no longer necessary to know how to do that," the Governor quipped as aides passed out books with blank pages to the assembled reporters and invited guests.

From now on, schools will be required to teach both English and illiteracy. "I know this puts an extra burden on our already overburdened," said the Governor, "but it's worth it if ethnic diversity in this state is to survive." A small crowd of about 25 protestors from the Franco-American community gathered outside the ceremony. Spokesperson Jacques Paradis said that his group was "naturellement tres disappointed in l'action du gouverneur," but would consider making French Maine's official third language someday.

Whale killed by Navy plane

BRUNSWICK—Brunswick Naval Station officials have announced that a humpback whale in the Gulf of Maine was accidentally bombed by an Orion P-3 airplane on Sunday.

The plane was on a routine reconnaissance mission, searching for Soviet nuclear submarines, when it picked up the whale on its radar. The plane's radar technician thought the whale was a Soviet sub and gave the orders to bomb it.

The whale has been identified as "Wilbur the Whale" by the Allied Whale organization of Bar Harbor. Since the mid-1970's, Allied Whale has identified and named over 3,000 different whales based on the unique markings on their flukes.

The late, great Wilbur the Whale.

An investigation is under way to see if the technician was under the influence of drugs. Lab results are due back tomorrow.

President Reagan has sent a telegram of condolence to Allied Whale and promised it won't happen again.

Maine Yankee meltdown planned

WISCASSET—Next Wednesday is the long awaited date of the Maine Yankee meltdown experiment.

"This is the first controlled meltdown in the history of mankind," said Maine Yankee spokesman I.M. Rad at yesterday's news conference. "We at Maine Yankee feel it is necessary, once and for all, to dispel the myths about meltdowns that opponents of the industry have been circulating."

When asked what would be controlled about the meltdown, Rad answered, "The use of the word 'controlled' means that we will know exactly when the meltdown will take place—we're starting it deliberately, after all. Beyond that, however, we have no idea what will happen. We're going to let nature take her course and see."

Next week has been declared "Evacuate Maine Week" by Governor McKernan. All residents within a 100 mile radius of the plant will be required to move

Grand Opening
De Sade MART

Kimbo
Miniature
BRANDING
IRON
"Personalize"
Your Friends
Sizzle Sale
$8.85

Kids! Real life
UROLOGY BAG
COMPLETE

85.85

Electric Screenless
WINDOW FANS
Reg. 85.85
Now 58.85
With 27¢ Rebate
just $58.58

Tooth and Toenail pliers

Keen-Tip
Ear Wires

84¢ SALE!

Party TONGUE SLICERS 84¢

GLASS SLIVERS 84¢

Hay Moms

Sugarloaf Aluminum CHEWING FOIL...Wo!...84¢

Dr. Payne's ACID GUMMY DROPS

For Quick Tooth Decay..... 84¢

Padless Bandage Strips with SUPERGLUE stick formula for a BIG OUCH removal
Grand 85¢
Opening price

Like To "Sing" In The Tub?
floating
ELECTRIC RADIO for the Tub
Alternating
Current! $8.85

HEY KIDS!
GREAT TRICKS FOR DAD

Trick Fallaway
Ladder Rung
ONLY 2.85

Collapsible
Stair Treed
3.85

Tractor
Eject-Seat
FOR THE FARM
JUST 1.85

Party FIRE ANTS 84¢
Razor-Edged
MINI WHIZBEE 84¢

JOHNNY'S CONDOMS
serving greater Augusta

No questions asked

JOLLY JOHN

FOR GOVERNOR

"If Maine's not jolly, then it's not Maine"

All material above courtesy of and copyright 1987 The Maineiac Express.

Wanted: Fitness instructor for modern club that includes nautilus and aerobics flexible hours, am and pm
membership inclusive 442-8498

Beautiful furnished room
for female Bowdoin student
in lovely restored
Colonial home near campus.
729-8616, days
729-8290, evenings

BIG RED Q PRINTING
next to the College

- stationery
- resumes
- posters
- newsletters

212E Maine Street
Brunswick
729-4840

H A I R
STUDIO
Hair Sculpture

3 Bowker St.
Brunswick, Me. 725-2694

With a Bowdoin I.D.,
receive a cut and blow-dry
— at a discount.

Women $12.00 Men $7.00

Within walking distance
of campus.

SKI FREE
AT SUGARLOAF

Sugarloaf/USA is now accepting applications for full and part time winter season employment.
Hundreds of job openings in all types of resort operations. Benefits include FREE skiing at Maine's big mountain! Earn extra money and have fun at the same time. Call for an interview.

Personnel Department
Sugarloaf/USA
Carrabassett Valley
Maine 04947
207-237-2000

Sugarloaf is an equal opportunity employer

ENTERTAINMENT

Get your Fixx tonight

By SHARON SMART
ORIENT Entertainment Editor

The British band The Fixx comes to town Friday night. Drummer Adam Woods, in a long-distance interview, discussed the past, present, evolution, and other dimensions of this hard-to-classify musical group.

About the past: "We got together as we are now in 1980, when Jamie (West-Oram) joined. Our first success came with our second album, Reach the Beach, and the single One Thing Leads to Another." Woods believes this to be the group's biggest hit.

Unsease came with the 1984 release of Phantom. Said Woods, "The record business didn't like what we had to say. They exert pressure towards the production of singles, and the album was just that, an album. I think hit singles are a matter of chance—you can't set out to create them."

The band members tired of the pressure, and after a lengthy tour—"a huge experimental stage production"—decided to take a respite. They gave themselves time to grow individually.

During this time, each member travelled. "We are all musicians, so of course we continued, individually, to play and listen to music."

The 1986 album Walkabout "grew out of our different travels and varied musical experiences," Woods remembered. They reunited with the idea of showing, through the album, that they are not "precious" about the music they perform, as some critics feel, but do so because they "like to do it".

Following the album's successful release, The Fixx toured with the Moody Blues, though without complete enthusiasm. Woods explained, "We went on tour with [the Moody Blues] because we were advised to do so—our record company said it would be a financially solvent move. We were, however, quite horrified with them, even more so now we've worked with them."

The experience gave the band members the impetus to re-evaluate their future—"The 1986 tour was a huge thing, 80 dates across the U.S. and Canada. It made us consider if this was what we really wanted for our future."

React, their fifth and latest album, evolved out of this tour. Their record company saw them at the tour, "something they don't usually do," said Woods, and suggested the band put together a live album.

"We had previously thought such an album was unnecessary, and we were unsure of the popular call for it. Our managers persuaded us as to the demand, after seeing us perform, so we taped two shows on the tour." React contains live performances, in addition to three new studio-recorded tunes, and a re-recording of Red Skies.

About their music: "We try to make music, without a mirror. By this I mean, when you look in a mirror, you become aware of your appearance to others. We don't want to try and achieve a certain appearance. In our music we hope to project how we really are, how we truthfully feel. You can't put a label on us."

Additionally, the impetus behind each album has been different. Their motivation has derived from the spectrum of "celebration, desperation, indecision, and experience," described Woods.

There has also been no identifiable musical influence common to all of the band's members. (Except... Woods whimsically mused, perhaps Arthur Guinness, the British beer maker.) Personally, Woods enjoys the music of Bob Marley & the Wailers, Public Image, the Talking Heads (though he feels their recent works have been repetitive), and Joy Division.

His favorite songs by The Fixx itself include Less Cities, More Moving People, about the 1984 situation in Beirut, Woman on a Train, and One Thing Leads to Another. When questioned about the instrumental emphasis of the band, Adams explained the balance they try to strike. "We have a synthesizer player (Rupert Greenall) who really plays, not just programs or operates—Rupert is very performance-oriented and spontaneous. Cy (Curnin) has started to play more guitar, so we have two guitars (Curnin and Jamie West-Oram) and a bass (Danny Brown). The different instruments play in different spaces, at complementary frequencies. The notes are important, but our music is all about the spaces between the notes."

Adams described the overall sound of The Fixx as "textural", adding, "I love thrash, but that's not what we play—we are more an embroidery in sound." All members collaborate in the writing of the music.

About the audience: The Fixx appeals to a varied audience. Upper-middle and middle-class students are not a large portion of their fans. "I'd describe the people at our concerts as what I'd call 'traveling people' of varied ages, from teens up to forty-five year olds—not the straight sort but (Continued on page nine)

Pictures numbers senses

By LIZZ MILLAN
ORIENT Asst. Entertainment Editor

American Pictures was not a standard "Sunday afternoon at the movies". Lasting four hours, the film presentation was geared at arousing the awareness of the problems of racism in the United States. "The show is oppression, not entertainment!" according to its creator, Jacob Holdt.

REACTION

It would be senseless to retell here the story of Mr. Holdt's experiences. These experiences were described vividly in American Pictures. Many students, however, were not completely satisfied by Holdt's presentation however:

"I did not like his implications that all of us are racists."

"He failed to present the problems of white poverty."

"He was so busy showing us the problem that he did nothing in the way of presenting a solution."

These were common criticisms. Yet few students took the time to direct these criticisms to Holdt at the workshop he held after the presentation.

He stressed that those who need our care and attention are those to whom we are least likely to respond. Those who have been deeply hurt and rejected are those most likely to oppress others, alienating themselves from other members of society.

He also pointed out that there do exist passive ways to be more active. This activity must start with the individual—one person (Continued on page nine)

Taylor still great

By MICHAEL TOWNSEND
ORIENT Advertising Manager

After succumbing to last weekend's steady rain and postponing his planned Sunday afternoon concert, James Taylor returned last night to The Ballpark in Old Orchard Beach for a show that was well worth the wait. A crowd estimated at over 10,000 gathered under crystal clear Maine skies to witness the final offering in The Ballpark's summer concert series. Taylor and his band delighted the crowd for over two and half hours with a variety of music ranging from driving rock to the stirring ballads for which he is famous.

Taylor's excellent first set, which lasted just over an hour, was the mellow of the two. Several songs by other artists highlighted this set, including Buddy Holly's "Rollercoaster", "She Thinks I Still Care" by country star George Jones, and Carole King's "Up On

The Roof." From the beginning, Taylor's band was tight, and the addition of two backup vocalists, Rosemary Butler and Arnold McCuller, lend support to Taylor's typically impressive singing. Also notable was Dan Dugmore's spectacular work on the pedal steel and banjo.

After a short break, Taylor returned to the stage, this time wearing a jacket to ward off the crisp night air. (Taylor seemed unaccustomed to Maine's early Fall: he said that he wished he "could warm his hands in a bowl of chowder.") The set opened with a frantic version of a classic Bo Diddley tune which demonstrated the range of all three singers. Taylor continued with a pair of new songs off his forthcoming album, Never Die Young, which, to the crowd's delight, Taylor announced would be released around Christmas. Later, Taylor dedicated one of his more recent (Continued on page 11)

Calendar

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 25

7:30 pm — Lecture, "The Artist's Hand Revealed: Printmaking Today," by Barry Walker, associate curator, Department of Prints and Drawing, The Brooklyn Museum, Kresge Auditorium.
8:00—10:00 pm — A reception celebrating the opening of two exhibitions, Hot Off the Press: Graphics of the 80s and Kevin Donahue, Walker Art Building.
8:00 & 10:00 pm — Weekly Weekend Films. Harold & Maude, presented by the BFVS. $1 admission. Smith Auditorium.
8:00 pm — The Fixx in concert. Admission: $7 in advance, $8 at the door. Morrell Gymnasium.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 26

8:00 & 10:00 pm — Weekly Weekend Films. Cocoon. $1 admission. Smith Auditorium.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 27

3:00 pm — Foreign Film Series. Umberto D., by Vittorio De Sica. Italian with English subtitles. Smith Auditorium.
7:30 pm — Concert Series. Edward Parmentier, harpsichordist. Admission $7 (each concert), $40 (seven concerts).

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 28

12:30 pm — Music at Noon-and-a-Half. Edward Parmentier, harpsichord.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 30

10:10 am — Chapel Talk, Sid Watson, Athletic Director.
1:00 pm — Gallery talk, "Kevin Donahue: Recent Paintings," by Kevin Donahue, visiting assistant professor of art.
8:00 pm — Weekly Wednesday Films. Jules & Jim. $1 admission. Smith Auditorium.

MOVIE LISTINGS

Cinema City (Cooks Corner)
The Lost Boys, showing at 7:15 and 9:15
Stakeout, showing at 7:00 and 9:00
Dirty Dancing, showing at 7:10 and 9:10
Hamburger Hill, showing at 7:05 and 9:05

Evening Star Cinema (Maine St.)
84 Charing Cross Road, showing at 7:00 and 8:55

UPCOMING EVENTS

A bicycle trip will be led by the Freeport Historical Society on Saturday, October 3. The route will take cyclists through the nineteenth century villages of South Freeport, Porters Landing, Mast Landing and Wolf's Neck, along the Harraseeket River. The trip will begin at 9:00 a.m. at Winslow Park, South Freeport, ending at Wolf Neck Woods State Park. Reservations and payment ($10 per person) must be made in advance by September 30. Phone 865-3170.

Tontine Fine Candies

Have you tried our truffles?
They are creamy and smooth
and altogether delicious!
Come in and enjoy!

We are in the Tontine Mall

Coming Sept. 29 - Longer Store Hours

WE will open at 9 AM Tues-Fri
and at 10 am Sat.
Closing times are the same

Upcoming Saturday Workshops:

Oct. 3 - Finishing Techniques and
2 Color Knitting
Teacher: Pat Clockiedile

For more information
please stop in or call

Oct. 17 - Designing - if you can knit, purr, and follow directions, you can design an original.
Teacher is Laurie Doran, formerly a sweater designer for Samuel Roberts
and winner of
a national award
for design.

A Likely Yarn
90 UNION STREET
BRUNSWICK, ME 04011
(207) 725-2147

SPORTS

Ryan Stafford '89 was key figure in Bowdoin's big upset of the Norwich Cadets. Photo by Asaf Farashuddin.

Bears stun Cadets

By ERIC PALMQUIST
ORIENT Contributor

Any fan who braved the cold, rainy weather on Saturday to watch the Polar Bears take on Norwich was warmly rewarded as the Bears clawed their way back from a 13-0 deficit to upset the Cadets, 20-16.

In a game full of great performances, the one that stands out the most was the play of senior tailback Gregg Bohannon, back from a junior year abroad, who accumulated an impressive 252 total yards.

Offensively, Bohannon was a one man show. He carried the ball 25 times for 138 yards, including one 46 yard romp that set up a Polar Bear touchdown. His best run of the day, however, may have been when he grabbed a short screen pass, eluded some would-be tacklers, and scampered 45 yards down the sideline. This run eventually led to another Bowdoin touchdown. Bohannon led the Bears with 6 catches for 100 yards receiving. He also returned a punt 14 yards.

Gregg was named ECAC "Offensive Player of the Week" and also won the prestigious Golden Helmet Award for best performance by a Division II or III player in the East, a prize that had been captured the week before by one of the men who was trying to stop him, Norwich free safety Dennis Smith.

But Bohannon was not the only bright spot Bowdoin fans saw that day. Junior quarterback Ryan Stafford completed 14 of his 25 attempts for 180 yards passing, including the winning touchdown toss in the third quarter. Sophomore QB Michael Kirch also played well, passing for 20 yards and rushing for 46 in limited action.

However, none of these performances would have been possible were it not for the outstanding play of the Bowdoin offensive line. Despite facing a Norwich line which averaged 6'3" and 225 lbs., the Polar Bears consistently gave Stafford time to throw, while opening sizable holes for the running backs. Leading the charge were co-captain center Chip Davis and left guard Vincent Fusco.

The Bowdoin defense was outstanding against a very potent Norwich offense. In the first quarter the Cadets scored in their first three possessions, but the Bear defense adjusted and shut them out the rest of the way.

The Polar Bear defensive line, led by Scott Wilkin and Dave Otto, consistently pressured the Norwich QB's, sacking them twice and forcing hurried, off-balance passes. When the Cadets turned to the run they were met by safety Terry Conroy (10 tackles, 9 unassisted) and strong safety Mike Burnett (9 tackles, 8 unassisted, one interception). The Bear line-backing crew, led by senior John Ollis, was also exceptional.

At the outset, however, the game seemed as dismal as the weather. In their first two possessions the Cadets ran effortlessly through the Polar Bear defense, driving for two touchdowns and a quick 13-0 lead. Yet, the Bears refused to surrender to the heavily favored Cadets. Led by a long Gregg Bohannon run the Bears mounted a drive of their own, culminating in a 4 yard touchdown by Bohannon. Norwich responded with a field goal, and remained comfortably ahead at the end of the first quarter, 16-7.

It was in the second quarter that the Bears turned the game (Continued on page eight)

Bowdoin trips Brandeis

By TOD DILLON
ORIENT Contributor

Led by the strong performances of Dirk Asherman and Stathis Manousos, the men's soccer team recorded two wins in as many games to begin the 1987 season. On Saturday the Polar Bears surprised a powerful Brandeis squad, 2-1, and followed it up on Tuesday with a 2-0 shutout of a feisty Southern Maine team. Saturday's victory marked the first time the Judges had been beaten by Bowdoin since 1961. Dirk Asherman scored the Polar Bear's first goal of the game and of the season at 6:31 of the first half on an assist from Eathan Lovell. Manousos followed at 14:31 on a pass from Dave Novara to register Bowdoin's second goal. Brandeis' lone goal came at 15:16 of the second half when John Bollinger set up Steve Setterland for the score. The rest of the game was a battle by both sides to gain control.

Brandeis threatened late. With one minute remaining, the Judges had a corner kick on the Bowdoin net, but the Bears hung tough on defense to preserve a well deserved, and much awaited victory.

Defensesman Blair Dills called the victory "a very big win, since it is the first game of the season and, especially, since it was Brandeis." Dills also expressed optimism for the season provided the team "keeps up the level of intensity and comes to each game ready to play."

Coach Tim Gilbride echoed Dill's optimistic sentiments. Prior to Saturday's game, Gilbride admitted his concern over a letdown, both physically and mentally, by the team due to the unusually long time between the return to school and the first match.

However, such a letdown does not appear to have occurred. "There was no letdown, the team was ready to play," said Gilbride. On Tuesday the Polar Bears played host to an aggressive Southern Maine squad and came away with a solid 2-0 victory. The first half was a scoreless battle marked by aggressive play and a few hot tempers. The result was that neither team could seem to amount an offensive attack.

Gilbride commented on Bowdoin's problems: "USM was very aggressive and we were having difficulty completing our passes through midfield." The halftime break seemed to settle the Polar Bears and the second half proved to be much different.

The Polar Bears began to connect on their passes and the game began to open up. At 18:37 Chris Garbaccio registered his first goal of the game off an assist by Manousos. Just as they had done on Saturday, Novara and Manousos teamed up with Manousos getting the goal at 33:07 to put Bowdoin up 2-0. In net Will Walldorf turned aside 6 shots to preserve the shutout.

Women's soccer kicks off with OT win

By TONY JACCACI
ORIENT Contributor

Last weekend, the Women's Varsity soccer team hit the road and hit it hard as the Polar Bears traveled to Middlebury and Trinity, emerging with a victory and a draw. Coach John Cullen was quite pleased with his team's performance and said "although the team has a long way to go, I am happy to have returned to Bowdoin with a win and a tie." The Bears will travel to Babson on Saturday where the team will play a strong Babson team.

When Bowdoin arrived at Middlebury, things were just not going their way. Rains from the evening before had transformed the field into a maze of puddles and mud. Weary from a long bus trip, the game the game got off to a slow start for Bowdoin. Early in the first half, a Middlebury half-back launched a floating shot from almost half field that hit the upper right corner of the net over the head of freshman goalie Melanie Koza. Bowdoin then pressed back, but Middlebury was to strike again. About 10 minutes after the first goal, a Middlebury back stole the ball at half field and passed it into the middle. A Middlebury forward received the pass in front of the net and finding a lapse in Bowdoin's defense, slammed the ball home. By this time, the Polar Bears wondered what they were doing in this dreary Vermont college. As coach Cullen stated

"We had dug ourselves into a deep hole."

The Bears kept the intensity high as they entered the second half and clearly took territorial advantage. Again, Bowdoin launched a barrage of shots against the Middlebury goal and in the middle of the second half, freshman Christing Neill scored the tying goal for Bowdoin. Neill received a through ball from sophomore Karen Crehore and then pushed the ball past the Middlebury goalie, much to the chagrin of the home team.

The regulation time ended with the score of 2-2 and the game went into a 10 minute overtime period. Having come this far, Bowdoin was not to be denied. Halfway

(Continued on page eight)

Field hockey takes two in week

By BONNIE BERRYMAN
ORIENT Contributor

The women's field hockey team fared well in its first week of competition, winning two of its three games.

Opening the season last Friday against Middlebury, the Polar Bears won a tight contest, 2-1. Leading the way for the Polar Bears was co-captain Linda Woodhull, who scored both goals unassisted.

The outcome of Saturday's game against Trinity was not quite as favorable. In what Coach Sally LaPointe deemed "a hard-fought game", the Bears were defeated by a score of 4-1. The lone goal for the team was made by center forward Sheila Carroll '90. LaPointe cited a "couple of lapses in defense" as the main reason for the loss.

The Bears bounced back from the loss to Trinity by beating the University of Maine Farmington, 2-1. Carroll scored the first goal which was unassisted. Adding the other goal was Woodhull, assisted by co-captain Audrey Augustin. "Outstanding" freshman goalie Lynn Warner also contributed a fine performance. "They played very aggressively, but we stopped them by allowing only seven shots on goal," LaPointe said.

The team faces a tough challenge on Tuesday, September 29, against rival Bates.

What does Coach LaPointe feel about the team's chances? "I know we can win," she remarked confidently.

Bowdoin field hockey player battles against UMF foe in Tuesday action. The women went on to win the game, 2-1. Photo by Mary Ann Lai.

Cross country cruises

By PAULA SINCERO
ORIENT Staff

This year's cross country teams are off to a running start judging from the fine performances last Saturday.

The men's team defeated the University of Southern Maine, but came up short against the powerful Black Bears of the University of Maine. "UMO is a strong team, and they b arly beat us," said Coach Peter Silvisky.

"Our goal is to stay healthy this season so we can improve," added Silvisky. The coach highlighted the performances of Captain Marty Malague '90 and teammate Todd Dillon '89. "Five freshman placed in the top seven slots; we have a very young team, and hopefully we will improve with more experience and mileage," said Silvisky.

The women's team also had an excellent day tying Colby. "Colby is one of the best teams in New England, and we were right there with them. Colby's the defending state and New England Small College Athletic Conference champion," said the coach.

Two outstanding individual performances were those of Co-captain Deanna Hodgkin '89, who placed third overall, and freshman Marilyn Fredey who came in sixth. "Deanna beat the number one runner from Colby, who placed 36th last year in the NCAA Championships. It was a personal victory for her," said Silvisky.

This weekend the team travels to Southeastern Massachusetts University.

Football

(Continued from page seven)
around. Kirch took over at QB and immediately drove them down the field to the Norwich goal line, where Bohannon punched in from two yards out for the score. The key play was when Kirch, chased out of the pocket, scampered 24 yards for a first down.

In the third quarter Bowdoin drove 75 yards (69 of them on

Mariners' boss relies on Polar Bears and Bruins

By KEVIN WESLEY
ORIENT Assistant Editor

Maine's newest connection with the Boston Bruins also ties in closely with Polar Bear hockey.

Edward Anderson, president of the Maine Mariners hockey club, started as a reporter covering Bowdoin College hockey and swimming teams in the mid 1970s.

On Monday, he told an audience of 50 people at the Bowdoin Business Breakfast about his 11 year reign with the Mariners. 'After the Bowdoin men's hockey team won the ECAC Holiday Hockey Festival at Madison Square Garden in the 1976-77 season, Anderson went to work for a fledgling American Hockey League club based in Portland. For six seasons, the Mariners were a

Soccer

(Continued from page seven)
through the overtime, Karen Crehorne broke free on the left wing and sent a high 20 yard cross to sophomore Sue Ingram in front of the net. Ingram wasted no time and one-touched the ball into the corner of the goal. The Bears shut Middlebury down in the remaining minutes and when the final whistle blew, Bowdoin had earned a 3-2 victory. There would be no time for celebration though, for the team would have to face Trinity the following morning.

Some say that a tie is like kissing your sister and after Bowdoin totally dominated Trinity the next day, the saying couldn't be more appropriate. As was the case with Middlebury, the field conditions were quite poor. The squad came out "like a ball of fire," stated coach Cullen as the Bowdoin offense turned on the feeder program for the Philadelphia Flyers of the National Hockey League.

For the past five years, the Mariners fed players to the hapless New Jersey Devils. Neither team was too successful during that period, and last year, the Devils declined to renew Maine's contract.

Along came the Boston Bruins which signed the Mariners to a five-year developmental contract. Anderson feels the local flavor of serving a team three hours away will be a plus for the Mariners.

The response of Maine residents to the upcoming season has been enthusiastic, with over 1,700 season tickets sold. Anderson said the increase could lead to a positive future for Maine professional sports.

jets. Trinity, however, had a strong and physical defense that kept Trinity in the game.

With only several minutes left in the first half, Karen Crehorne broke free on the left. In a play almost identical to the Middlebury winner, Crehorne crossed the ball to Sue Ingram who proceeded to net her second goal in as many days. The Bears were confident as they went into half-time with a 1-0 lead.

Bowdoin came into the second half somewhat overconfident and their intensity suffered as they let Trinity climb back into the game. It had begun to rain at half time causing play to suffer.

The game ended with a tie of 1-1, and despite two overtime periods, neither team could capitalize. Bowdoin outshot the Trinity team 25-14, but the Trinity defense held tight.

Kirch fumbled in Bowdoin territory, but the Polar Bear defense stiffened, stopping the Cadets and preserving the lead. Then, with only minutes remaining, Norwich began a long drive to inside the Bear's ten yard line. On the next play the Norwich QB rolled to his right and gunned a pass for the end zone. Bowdoin cornerback Ken McLaughlin stepped in front of it for the interception, sealing the Cadet's fate and giving Bowdoin a hard fought victory, 20-16.

by Berke Breathed
BLOOM COUNTY

FILM, POLITICS & SOCIAL CHANGE IN ASIA

January - May 1988

Faculty from Harvard University and the University of Illinois

Itinerary includes: India
China
Japan
Hong Kong

- travel and work closely with professors
- live with families in each country
- expand intellectual and personal awareness through comparative study in a variety of environments
- 16 credit hours of academic work studying film, politics and social change in Asia

For a catalogue and application contact:

Joan Tiffany, Director
International Honors Program
19 Braddock Park
Boston, MA 02116
617-267-8612

INTERNATIONAL HONORS PROGRAM

FREE BEER POSTERS

Great room decorations
No purchase necessary
Stop by & pick them up!!

Kegs Wine Beer Cheese Ice

A BOWDOIN TRADITION SINCE 1979

SPECIAL SUNDAY

SPECIAL SUNDAY

featuring
Ben & Jerry's and Cote's Ice Cream
sponsored by Beta Theta Pi

All proceeds to benefit SPECIAL OLYMPICS OF MAINE

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 27th
Noon - 5 p.m.

Contribution $2.00

at Beta Theta Pi
14 McKen Street

Rain Date: Sunday, October 4th

Noon to 5 p.m.

NEW!!

Film Developing In 45 Minutes!
Why Wait Any Longer?

MERCURY PHOTO
Quality Film
Developing...Fast!

Kodak® Mini Lab System 25 processor
Newest Kodak paper and chemicals
Kodak Colorwatch quality control links
our lab with Rochester for
unsurpassed results.

Bowdoin College
Students

Bring in 2 rolls get 2nd roll
FREE

good thru 10/16/87

FULL LINE CAMERA STORE -
Slide developing - cameras,
film, batteries, bags -
large frame selection - repairs

I-95 (EXIT 24) & ROUTE 196, TOPSHAM, ME.

PASSPORTS
WHILE
YOU WAIT

Fixx

(Continued from page six)
more of the 'I dropped acid in the '60s, man' type," said Woods.

About the present: At the moment, the band is performing independently, without the backing of a record company. As Woods described, the purpose of their tour is to simply play together as a band. "We're trying to get across the idea that we can work with any material, not just the hits selected by record companies."

College campuses, such as Microscale

(Continued from page one)
experiments so that the volume of exhaust produced would be reduced.

After a great deal of deliberation and with the approval of the administration, it was decided that the conversion to microscale was both feasible and advantageous said Mayo.

The microscale experiments use tiny quantities of chemicals, between 100 and 1000 times less than traditional organic laboratory experiments. Mayo cited several advantages of microscale over macroscale.

There is a dramatic reduction in expenditure on chemicals (approximately 70 percent) and a similar reduction in the volume of gases evolved. The experiments, which often involve the use of toxic or hazardous materials, are also much safer because of the minute quantities used, said Mayo.

Mayo added that the pedagogical benefits of microscale are also "substantial." Since the experiments are on a smaller scale, the reactions take a shorter time and the "long waits associated with organic labs are often eliminated."

This means that students can do a greater number of experiments, some of which are usually reserved for more advanced students. Mayo added that most students also find the microscale lab to be "more fun."

Since its inception in 1982, over 300 institutions all over the country have converted or are in the process of converting to microscale.

Bowdoin, were selected because of the ease with which music can be communicated to a small group, as opposed to a large, public audience. "We hope for spontaneous feedback from small campuses. This may sound 'fascist', but I feel college audiences are more receptive to new things, and we want to get a realistic response to what we're trying to do."

The performance composition reflects this attitude, including approximately equal numbers of old and new, never before performed, songs. The band wishes to gauge audience reaction to new material before selecting material to record. They intend to begin work on a new album immediately after the tour's completion (in six weeks).

The attitude of The Fixx today, after their varied experiences, is summarized by Woods: "We are playing stuff as well as we possibly can, and we think people will like The Fixx."

About Bowdoin: "I'm looking forward to it—I like Maine."

croscale. Mayo predicted it would probably be another decade before the system was "really pervasive."

Among the institutions which have "gone microscale" are Rice, Arizona State and Case Western Reserve. The University of Wisconsin, University of Minnesota and the California State system are experimenting with microscale.

Mayo said the Bowdoin chemistry graduates are now in "great demand" by other institutions because of their experience with microscale.

The laboratory text Microscale Organic Laboratory by Mayo Pike and Butcher published in 1985, is expected to have sold about 10,000 copies by the end of this year. Each summer Bowdoin hosts a course to introduce academicians to microscale. The Smaller is Better microscale newsletter is also compiled and has a mailing list of over 700.

American Pictures

(Continued from page six)
at a time.

He urged students to take advantage of campus groups to generate awareness. Struggle and Change is an awareness educational group which encourages interested students to become more aware of the various social issues present in our society.

Holdt assured us that he was aware of the problem of poverty in all races, yet reiterated that the point of American Pictures was to raise awareness to the problem of racism, not classism. After fielding other questions, he began his lecture. He attempted to outline possible solutions to the large and crucial social issue of racism in the United States.

American Pictures heightened the awareness of those who viewed it. Struggle and Change offers a continuation of this awareness. An awareness of the problems confronting our society is the only way in which we can ever hope to resolve them. Perhaps more students should give thought to Holdt's words, "If not now, when? If not me, who? If not here, where?"

DR. WILLIAM R. OUELLETTE DR. BRIAN L. DANIELS OPTOMETRISTS

Eye Examinations Optical Services
Specializing in Children's Vision
and Contact Lenses

Pleasant Street Professional Building
52 Pleasant Street, Brunswick
Telephone 725-2161

MacFest

The Apple Macintosh™ personal computer is the machine for all of us who want to get work done efficiently. It's powerful, yet so easy to use that you'll be using your Macintosh right out of the box. That's productivity.

And with your Macintosh you can use the latest, most advanced software.

You're invited to the Bowdoin College and Coastal Computer Center MacFest on Monday and Tuesday, September 28 & 29 from 9 am to 5 pm.

In Lancaster Lounge
at Moulton Union.

Coastal Computer CENTER

Maine's largest Apple® dealer.

16 Forest Avenue, Portland, 774-0741
The Tontine Mall, Brunswick, 729-0298

LSAT GMAT GRE

WHAT IF YOU DON'T GET INTO THE GRAD SCHOOL
OF YOUR CHOICE?

Sure, there are other schools. But why settle? Kaplan helps students raise their scores and their chances of being admitted into their first-choice schools. Fact is, no one has helped students score higher!

KAPLAN
STANLEY H. KAPLAN EDUCATIONAL CENTER LTD.

Portland LSAT class

starts 10/11

GMAT class starts 11/15, 1

Call collect (617) 964-TEST

OPINION

Ignorant electorate

The Executive Board of the Student Body of Bowdoin College began another year Tuesday night with their candidate forum, offering voters an opportunity to scout their options for balloting.

We are disappointed again by the fact that there were fewer people present to hear the candidates than there were candidates. Those ten or so who were responsible enough to show up are to be commended. And, in many ways, they may be the only ones who are qualified to vote. They heard all the candidates put on the spot and forced to come out in public with what they stand for.

Voters should be qualified in this manner. In national, state, and local elections, the media serve to educate the public. Not everybody can question all the candidates on all their positions, so the press does it for them - scrutinizing those who would lead and serve us to let us judge if they deserve our trust.

Bowdoin is a special closed and small community, and so the Board serves a slightly different purpose than elected bodies do in the outside world. It does not have the same responsibilities as a Senate or House. But those who vote for Executive Board seats have a special responsibility. The individual votes means a great deal more in this election than in most, and so you must be much more careful how you cast it. To cast it responsibly, you must be as completely informed as you can make yourself.

Of course, it's not too late to educate yourself. Ask around. Make an effort to meet the candidates and hear what they have to say. And realize your responsibility to yourself and your Bowdoin community to be a participating member of the electorate. Remember what Robert Heinlein said when he described politics as being "barely less important than your own breathing."

This is the time of year when we are all getting a new start. And the Executive Board is no exception. In this space, we have criticized the Board and its actions repeatedly. Perhaps some of these criticisms were harsh, but they were meant to raise awareness of a real problem. We hope the new broom sweeps clean.

At the forum, a speaker said he believed the structure of the Board was flawed. But another candidate was correct when he said, "The board is only as good as its members." It needs members who take their responsibilities to their constituents first, and make a real effort to be servants and trustees of the people who vote for them as well as leaders. It does not need those who use their positions as Board members to represent special interests, as has often been the case in the past.

To all the candidates who had the courage to take on what is not an easy job, we wish not only luck, but the courage of convictions to persevere when the chips are down. You will be the most criticized and second-guessed members of the Bowdoin community, and most likely will draw fire frequently from the editors of this newspaper. Stick by your guns.

Letters

Prohibition

To the Editor

Although I am on exchange at Amherst college for the year, I still take some interest in the politics of my home institution. I read an article which appeared in the Amherst school newspaper, causing jeering and denigration of Bowdoin in my own presence; sadly enough, I believe that the prods were not misplaced.

"Another clue to the administration's intentions lies in the social policies that have recently been enforced at Bowdoin. These policies include 'dry' (alcohol-free) rush and a midnight curfew for freshmen."

Let me begin by saying that the idea of a dry rush is an insult to both the administration and to the students. The paternalistic administration feels the need to exercise its authority over the students by disallowing them the freedom to be responsible for their own actions. If a student chooses to consume alcohol, it should be their free choice to do so, or to abstain. Since the drinking age has been elevated, it prevents a majority of the college community from drinking; however, it is reminiscent of prohibition to restrain those who can legally consume alcohol from doing so.

The second policy that has "recently been enforced" is absolutely infuriating. Students attend college to learn to be independent — to think and act for themselves — not to be placed in the care of an autonomous group of surrogate parents. The very idea of a curfew at a liberal arts institution anywhere awakens not-so-pleasant memories of early high school days that most, if not all, college students have left behind.

I pose a question to any and all associated with Bowdoin College in any way: Are we as students not to be considered as consenting adults capable of making our own decisions and assuming responsibility for them?

College should be a place of learning and developing, not a place of paternalistic restraints unfairly imposed upon mature men and women.

Will P. Pettinger

Rush

To the Editor:

I sincerely appreciate IFC's responsible contributions in conducting and supervising "Dry Rush" activities during the previous three weeks. IFC Chair, Scott Milo, and the leadership of each house deserve credit for their tireless efforts.

"Dry Rush" represented a considerable departure from previous rush practices at Bowdoin. I confess that I doubted IFC's ability to manage such responsibilities. To my pleasant surprise, I observed a degree of group unity and commitment to purpose unseen at Bowdoin in quite some time. As a result, my office witnessed a marked reduction in (1) local community complaints, (2) Security and Brunswick police incidents, (3) hospital and College infirmity responses, and, (4) calls from irate parents. From a Dean's perspective, I consider this an enormous improvement over earlier Rush experiences and a positive effort by the IFC and the entire Bowdoin student body.

"Dry Rush" would never have succeeded without the IFC's responsible commitment and self-policing approach. Scott's willingness to maintain lines of communication with administrative officials and the IFC's simultaneous efforts at raising the collective consciousness of the fraternity system and the administration clearly represents one of the organization's finest virtues. I urge the leadership of the IFC to continue demonstrating its capacity for excellent leadership.

Sincerely,
Kenneth A. Lewallen
Dean of Students

Lunch Lines

To the Editor Dawn Vance's September 18th article on the proposed new science center was very enlightening in many ways. Being a science major, I was delighted to know that our already wonderful facilities might soon be improved. But, that is not what this letter is about. I was appalled to read that 21 million dollars are going to be spent on this project when everyday, students by pass lunch because of the overcrowding in the dining room.

The administration needs to get the priorities of the school straight. We pay too much for meals already, we do not need to be made to feel we don't have the time to eat because we might miss a class if we wait on line. The only reason I can see for not correcting this problem is a blatant attempt on the administration's part to boost the bag lunch business. What the school needs desperately is a new dining facility or expansion of the existing ones. I have not read about that in the Orient.

Lunch should be an enjoyable experience, a nice break from the continuum of classes. I don't know how many times someone has told me as I walked to the Tower not to go because the line is too long. An even if you do get in, usually there are no seats to be had.

I have not really mentioned the Union because the lines don't seem as long, but they can be. And admittedly, the lunch food is not as good and the atmosphere is not as pleasant. Maybe if the administrators had to stand on these lines every day, they would better understand this complaint. The food is great, just give us better access to it!!

Andy Bernstein '88

CORRECTION

Last week's "College Briefs" section stated Amherst had created an women's studies program a year after Bowdoin. However, Bowdoin does not yet have such a program (no major, no minor, no director.)

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

"The College exercises no control over the content of the student writings contained herein and neither it, the Administration, nor the faculty assume any responsibility for the views expressed herein."

Lori Bodwell...Editor in Chief

Kevin Wesley...Assistant Editor
Adam Najberg...News Editor
Rosemarie Dougherty...Assoc. News Editor

Tamara Dassanayake...Asst. News Editor
Eric Foushee...Account Executive
Alan Harris...Photography Editor
Mary Ann La...Photography Editor
Lizz Millan...Asst. Entertainment Editor
Dawn Vance...Asst. News Editor

Michael Botelho...Sports Editor
Jack Cahill...Editorial Editor
Susan Lyons...Contributing Editor

Kathryn Nanovic...Production Manager
Justin Prisdorf...Asst. Sports Editor
Stephen Reynolds...Features Editor
Sharon Smart...Entertainment Editor
Michael Townsend...Advertising Manager

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

Published by

THE BOWDOIN PUBLISHING COMPANY

LORI M. BODWELL ALBERT P. MAURO, JR.

Published weekly when classes are held during the Fall and Spring semester by the students of Bowdoin College. Address editorial communication to the Editor, subscription communication to the circulation manager, and business correspondence to the business manager at The Bowdoin Orient, 12 Cleveland Street, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011, or telephone (207) 725-3300. The Bowdoin Orient reserves the right to edit any and all articles and letters. Subscriptions are $15.00 per year or $8.00 per semester. Past issues cannot be mailed. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to The Bowdoin Orient, Moulton Union, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011.

Mason calls for greater diversity

By RICHARD LINDAHL, JR.
ORIENT Contributor

Director of Admissions William R. Mason addressed a mid-sized crowd of students Wednesday morning at the second of this year's Chapel Talks sponsored by the Interfraternity Council. The title of his talk was "About Differences."

During his speech Mason reflected upon the return of seniors who studied away last year. He stated his belief that "only by being jolted from the security and comfort of our past do we grow," and he said he and the admissions

Drop

(Continued from page one) numbers our system seems strong."

Inter-Fraternity Council President Scott Milo suggested that the three week rush period was perhaps too long. Milo pointed out that general sentiment indicated that rush should be limited to two weeks. Milo said, "During a dry rush three weeks seems too long. It becomes tedious on fraternity members and the freshmen...it tends to grate on you after a while."

According to Milo, the IFC will look into dry rush at its meeting on Monday night, September 28. The IFC will set down policies for next year's rush after considering what worked, what didn't and the underlying reasons.

The fraternities themselves expressed enthusiasm at the results of this semester's dry rush. Many of them pointed out that despite the extra time, energy, effort and organization required the dry rush policy worked well.

Two of Beta Theta Pi's rush chairmen, Lauren Greenwald '89 and Lisa Lucas '89, expressed great enthusiasm about the dry rush.

Greenwald said, "I thought rush was really fun. I think it went really well. Lisa and I were both pleased - we met a lot of freshmen and I think it was a great way to do it."

Delta Kappa Epsilon indicated that their rush tactics not only attracted a large number of freshmen to its house but served to tighten the bonds already existent between house members. Commented house member Hope Hall '90, "We put more organization, effort and time into our rush activities so that the freshmen could see the interaction between house members. At our slip and slide event people walking by could see that the whole house was having a great time and could see the way the house interacted."

Theta Delta Chi, too, concentrated its efforts at getting to know the people who dropped by the house during rush. Said house member Terry Rouse '90, "We tried to do stuff that would get people to stay here a long time and try to meet the members. We tried to have events that lasted - casino night, games night...I think dry rush was effective - we got the same size drop class and people who fit the mold of the typical TD, and filled one of our main goals - to get girls. We got a fair number of girls and we were satisfied."

Alpha Kappa Sigma felt that the dry rush worked well. "Dry rush worked pretty well for us. I think it was better - it gave both sides a chance to see things in a better light. You could see what staff try to select entering classes with an emphasis on diverse cultural backgrounds.

Mason said that while Bowdoin "cannot approach" the variety of larger institutions, the college still has much to offer those who wish to examine their own mores by comparing them to those of others. The sharing and debating of ideas, and the "confrontation" of students, faculty, and others was identified by Mason as one of the most important aspects of receiving a liberal education.

Mason informed the assembly that seniors returning from study-away programs were "energized, stimulated, and propelled" by their experiences in other countries. He listed the adjustment difficulties the students had to face, such as different expectations of conduct from host families and anti-Americanism. Adjusting to differences was not always easy, but it was thought-provoking and led to personal growth.

Even coming to Bowdoin can be a cultural shock in itself, as Mason demonstrated with descriptions of the great differences that existed between him and his roommate. Mason told of the day he moved in to his dorm and his roommate appeared with two rifles which he placed on his bed.

rush. Commented Libby, "We got good numbers...we did all right. I felt it went pretty well considering the whole dry rush thing...we didn't know if we'd be able to adapt, but we did pretty well. It looks good for the fraternity system itself - everybody did all right."

Despite low drop numbers at Delta Sigma and Kappa Psi Upsilon representatives of those houses reflected on rush with the same enthusiasm as the other houses.

Said Delta Sigma house member Jennifer Louney '89, "Rush went pretty well although the three weeks was difficult on the house. I think rush went well for us - there wasn't a big difference between this rush and past wet rushes. This is a big second semester house and big upper-classmen house and I do think it went pretty well."

Kappa Psi Upsilon house member Bill Beasley '90 said, "Rush was a bit of a change from the past. All in all it worked well and I like the way the IFC policed itself."

Taylor

(Continued from page 11) songs, "That's Why I'm Here," to the crowd, for coming out "in the middle of the week, on the coldest night of the year."

The remainder of the concert went like a greatest hits list as Taylor went through an upbeat version of "Mexico," followed by the stunning "Carolina In My Mind" and the beautiful "Fire and Rain," before concluding with a driving, lengthy rendition of "Steamroller." Taylor was by no means finished, however, as he and his seven member ensemble returned three times for encores, including the favorites "You've Got A Friend" and "How Sweet It Is (To Be Loved By You)."

Fittingly, the concert ended with Taylor alone on stage with an acoustic guitar, bathed in a single purple spotlight as he sang "Sweet Baby James."

THE BESTSELLING PHENOMENON ALL AMERICA'S READING

Odds & Ends

SPECIAL/SALE

Onkyo CP-1007A auto-return turntable with Ortofon cartridge nearly new(Half price) $90

SONY X-3 AM/FM Receiver with built-in cassette.....$120

Pair/Sony SS-X10A Speakers - amazing sound for...$50

Ford deluxe AM/FM stereo car radio - from Pasadena lady...$50

Much used typewriter stand.....$15

Used Sanyo Cassette dictation machine, with foot control New model is $349.....Just $150

All this and...

Brand new Pioneer components at pretty good prices

Like a complete LP/tape/CD/AM-FM system.....$800

THE TONTINE MALL
149 Maine St.
Brunswick, Maine 04011

Pauline's Bloomers

DURING SEPT. - 25% off on all plants

Tontine Mall, Brunswick, 725-5552

QUALITY FLORAL SERVICE

Anniversary, Birthday, Hospital, Wedding, Sympathy, Holiday, All Occasions

Flowers, Plants & Gifts

We Deliver

Wire Service

Balloons & Candy

Major Credit Cards Accepted - Open 8 days 9:00 to 5:30

BEHIND COLES TOWER

the Samuel Newman House
Circa 1821

7 South St., Brunswick, Me. 04011
For Reservations, call (207) 729-6959

BED & BREAKFAST

STOWE TRAVEL

MID COAST MAINE'S MOST COMPLETE TRAVEL AGENCY

A TRAVELERS NATIONAL NETWORK AGENCY

GROUP TRAVEL SPECIALISTS • BUSINESS AIRLINES

INCENTIVE TRAVEL • CRUISES • AMTRAK • AIRLINES

VCR CASSETTE TRAVEL LIBRARY • VALUATION PACKAGES

GREYHOUND & WESTERN UNION

$150.00 AUTOMATIC FLIGHT INSURANCE

"ALL SERVICES AT NO EXTRA COST"

725-5573

9 PLEASANT ST. BRUNSWICK

Call toll free in Maine 1-800-522-9990

FREE DELIVERY!

BRUNSWICK HOUSE OF PIZZA

WILL NOW DELIVER TO BOWDOIN CAMPUS!!!
FULL MENU AVAILABLE! NO DELIVERY CHARGE!
NO MINIMUM!

729-5526

5 Delivery Times Per Night

- * 7 pm, call by 6:40
- * 8 pm, call by 7:40
- * 9 pm, call by 8:40
- * 10 pm, call by 9:40
- * 11 pm, call by 10:40

MEAL TAX 5%

PIZZAS

	Small	Large		Small	Large
plain	$2.95	5.65	black olives	3.95	6.95
onion	3.45	6.25	sausage	3.95	6.95
pepper	3.45	6.25	meatball	3.95	6.95
onion & pepper	3.95	6.95	mushroom	3.95	6.95
salami	"	"	ham	3.95	6.95
anchovies	"	"	pastorini	3.95	6.95
hamburg	"	"	2 way combo	4.50	7.95
pepperoni	"	"	3 way combo	4.95	8.65
			Brunswick special	5.95	10.95

SEAFOOD PLATES

Fresh haddock	5.75
clams	6.75
shrimp	6.35
scallops	6.95
seafood combo	8.50
above served w/fries & salad
greek salad	2.85
antipasto	3.25

GRINDERS

	Med.	Lg.
meatball	2.60	3.25	sliced turkey	2.70 3.35
sausage	"	"	veal cutlet	2.60 3.25
hot pastormi	"	"	vegetarian	2.25 2.60
italian	"	"	pepper steak	2.80 3.45
salami	2.60	3.25	cheese steak	2.80 3.45
imported ham	2.70	3.35	mushroom steak	2.90 3.65
genoa salami	2.60	3.25	onion steak	2.80 3.45
tuna salad	"	"	special steak	2.95 3.75
roast beef	2.80	3.60	Brunswick special	2.95 3.80

SIDE ORDERS

French fries	.85	1.15
Onion rings	.95	1.60

DINNERS

Chicken Tenders	4.05
Fried Chicken	4.05
served w/fries & salad

w/sauce	2.95	w/meatballs	3.45
w/sausage	3.45	w/mushroom	3.95
lasagna	4.40	veal cutlet	3.45

SPAGHETTI

Special Deal!
Free liter of Pepsi with every $10 order. Thanks for your enthusiastic response!

BHOP is known for the best pizza and grinders in town. We use the best available meats and we give you more for your money than anyone in town. Give us a try and you'll agree.

Only place in Brunswick to get delicious Gyros!

SIT DOWN OR TAKE OUT.

The Amato's Pasta Special, every Monday and Tuesday.

Try the Amato's Pasta Special, delicious spaghetti or ziti and our own homemade meatballs and tomato sauce, with fresh bread on the side.

A fantastic meal at this special price:

$2.49

Monday and Tuesday only

THERE'S NOTHING LIKE A REAL ITALIAN.

135 Maine Street, Brunswick. 3 Main St., Gorham
Open 6 am-Midnight, Sun.-Thur.; 6 am-1 am, Fri. & Sat.
Call 729-5514 for fast take out.

BOWDOIN COLLEGE STUDENT UNION COMMITTEE PRESENTS

the

FIXX

(with special guest - IN THE FLESH)

TONIGHT!!!

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 25
8 PM

BOWDOIN COLLEGE MORRELL GYM

FOR MORE INFORMATION: (207) 725-3375

WTOS 105.1
the Rock of Maine

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

FIRST CLASS MAIL
U.S. Postage PAID
BRUNSWICK, ME.
Permit No. 25

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

VOLUME CXVII

BOWDOIN COLLEGE, BRUNSWICK, MAINE, FRIDAY, OCTOBER 2, 1987

NUMBER 4

Students turned out en masse during elections which took three days to select the 1987-88 Executive Board. Photo by Kelly Beckman

Exec's season opens, Hillhouse new chair

By DAWN VANCE
ORIENT Asst. News Editor

The Student Executive Board opened its 1987-1988 season with the election of George Hillhouse '88 to the position of chairman.

Newly elected members to the Board include George Hillhouse '88, Mark Peluso '88, Timothy Hughes '88, Joseph Gulinio '89, Andrew Winter '89, Dana Bureau '89, Karen Feeley '90, Suzanna Makowski '90, Jason Easterly '90, Terrence Rouse '90, Jennifer Vancey '90, Richard Krasuski '90, David Spohr '91, Elizabeth Yarnell '91 and Jennifer Snow '91.

Chairman of the Student Life Committee Mitchell Price '89 called Wednesday night's meeting to order and presided as chair until Hillhouse's election. Hillhouse then conducted elections for the positions of Vice Chair, Secretary/Treasurer, and Public Relations officer.

Peluso will serve as the 1987-1988 Vice Chair of the Executive Board, Feeley as Secretary/Treasurer, and Gulinio as Public Relations officer.

With the elections of the official positions completed, Chairman of the Student Activities Fee Committee Cindy Heller '88 presented the board with SAFC's proposal of allocations for the 1987-1988 academic year. The Board will consider these proposed allocations at its next

(Continued on page nine)

Teen caught in break attempt

By KEVIN WESLEY
ORIENT Assistant Editor

An early-morning prowler was arrested after apparently trespassing on Bowdoin College property and entering the home of the Phi Sigma Sigma sorority.

George Clements, 19, was arrested by Brunswick police at Smith House at 4:15 a.m., Sept. 26. A Brunswick resident, Clements allegedly entered the sorority's home at 39 Harpell St.

After receiving a call from Bowdoin security for assistance with a potential prowler, Brunswick Patrolman Perry Purinton arrested Clements. He was charged with criminal trespassing. Earlier that morning, Clements apparently entered the house occupied by members of Phi Sigma Sigma. A member of the sorority discovered him in the house and asked him for identification.

When the man identified himself as Greg Clements, he was told to leave the premises. Sorority members believe that George Clements may be his brother, but Brunswick police said Greg Clements was not arrested.

"He just came in and was wandering around the house," said Tanya Weinstein '90, who is one of eight women living in the house. Weinstein said the front door was left unlocked that night.

After leaving the sorority, Clements apparently went to Smith House, 59 Harpell St. There he was arrested while trying to climb through a window.

After George Clements was arrested, police came to the sorority house and searched the premises. No one else was found. Weinstein said Phi Sigma Sigma has since increased security protection in the house.

Sorority members said they were unsure if charges would be pressed against Clements.

Black students urge change

By ADAM NAJBERG
ORIENT News Editor

The quality of minority social life on campus, the current state of the college's Afro-American studies program and minority recruitment were three issues addressed by a student panel during last Saturday's Black Alumni Weekend.

The weekend, sponsored by the Admissions Office, brought back over 50 black alumnae to Bowdoin. During the weekend the alumnae discussed the present and future situations of black students on campus with Bowdoin students and faculty.

The student panel, moderated by Leon Braswell, both asked and answered questions about the college's policies toward black students and the adjustment periods black students face at Bowdoin during the 90 minute informal question and answer period.

Panel member Tyrone Brown '88 spoke on his social status at Bowdoin. Brown, in his opening remarks to the alumnae, expressed the discomfort he has faced at the college.

"I feel I don't fit in. I have a better time dealing with people at home," said Brown.

Gordon Buffonge '88, who is president of the senior class and a member of the panel, attributed the social discomfort black students face to the homogeneity of Bowdoin students.

Buffonge said he has had "tremendous difficulty fitting in" due to his West Indian background.

"This (Bowdoin) is not necessarily the most ideal place for minority students due to a central focus of the school on a specific type of student," said Buffonge.

Another panel member, Adrienne Hatten '90, said adjustment problems for black students are individual occurrences and are not unique to minorities. She said she has not faced any major adjustment problems.

"I'm the president of the Russworm Afro-American Center, and I'm involved with the Alpha Delta Phi fraternity. I'm the only black member. I don't really notice it. When I sit in class I don't think, 'oh, I'm the only black in the room.' I've adjusted well. I knew if I wanted to adjust and succeed, I would probably end up the only black in an office," said Hatten.

Theodore Howe '55 said he did not encourage his children to attend Bowdoin because he was afraid they would be assimilated into the homogeneity of the college.

"I saw too many kids lose their racial identity here," said Howe.

Hatten announced that despite the college's commitment to Afro-American Studies, she was distressed to learn that the program "did not officially exist." She and the gathered alumnae also expressed displeasure over the absence of this year's introductory Afro-American Studies course (101), which is a prerequisite for the major.

The panel also raised the issue of the lack of recruitment of minorities from inner-city high schools.

(Continued on page eight)

Afro-Am on hold

By KEVIN WESLEY
ORIENT Assistant Editor

Tempers flared Sunday at a faculty forum addressing the Afro-American program and the status of blacks at Bowdoin.

Assistant Director of Admissions Sammie T. Robinson led the discussion which focused on the attitude of the college towards blacks. Over 50 students and alumni listened as the panel illustrated the problem of attracting blacks and other minorities to Bowdoin.

Black alumni were on campus, courtesy of the admissions department, to discuss plans for minority recruitment and the newly-formed black alumni fund.

According to Professor Daniel Levine of the history department, the weekend was crucial. "If it doesn't accomplish matriculating more black students, and graduating more black students, it hasn't accomplished anything," he said.

Several alumni questioned the status of Afro-American Studies program, which has not been made into an academic department, but which instead relies on interdisciplinary courses. Said Randolph Stakeman, assistant professor of history, "The program looks great on paper (but) the program itself doesn't have control on the personnel."

"It's not very good," said Gayle

(Continued on page nine)

Struggle and Change set up a table on the Union steps to collect signatures to end aid to the Contras in Nicaragua. Passerby were halted by members of the organization on their way in and out of the building. Photo by Alan Harris.

What do you think about having lounges in the dorms?

By BECKY AUSTIN
ORIENT Contributor

Jeff Durkee '90

"I think the lounges in the individual rooms already serve that purpose. What we really need is one big, social area or student center."

Peter Quimby '89

"I think it's a really good idea because before there was no place to socialize."

Zoe Oxley '90

"I think that they definitely need lounges, but they should be larger."

Mike Smith '89

"I wish they would have had them my freshman year. It's a good place for dorm study breaks."

Serena Zabin '91

"I think they are a very good idea. I think it will give the independents a place to hang out. But they'll have to bolt the furniture down."

College Briefs

The Big Green are a bit red in the face this week. The Dartmouth College Student Assembly president has been accused of plagiarizing his speech from a Columbia University professor. The college was made aware of Scott Evans' '88, actions when administrators received a letter from a faculty member. No decision has been made yet on his fate, but he will probably be forced to go before the Student Judiciary Committee. Dartmouth has an honor code similar to Bowdoin's and requires students to sign a card signifying compliance with the code.

The Middlebury College Admissions Office has taken a step in the right direction — Bowdoin's direction. As of September 1987, the college no longer requires applicants to submit Scholastic Aptitude Test scores, but Admissions does require some standardized test scores. The prospective student has three options: to report their SAT scores and three Achievement Tests, five Achievement Tests or the American College Testing Service exam.

Middlebury is now richer than ever after receiving the largest gift in the history of the school. Alexander Hamilton Fulton, a benefactor and trustee emeritus of Middlebury, donated six million dollars to the college. The money will be used to enhance the academic programs he has supported for 25 years.

Bryn Mawr College is not as fortunate. The School of Arts and Sciences is suffering from an operating budget reduction that will cut funds 40-50 percent over the next five years.

A former junior at Mount Holyoke College will spend the year in jail after pleading guilty to vehicular homicide while under the influence of alcohol. Coleen Manning was charged with the death of her classmate Michelle Cook, who was walking back from a local bar with a friend on April 17.

Drinking and walking in Amherst are now taboo in Amherst, MA. The town of Amherst recently passed bylaws making it illegal to carry an open container of alcohol on the streets. Town committee members insisted these bylaws were not the result of any one incident instigated by Amherst College or University of Massachusetts students, but a reaction to what they perceive as an increase in campus rowdiness over the past several years. Violations of the alcohol ordinance is punishable by a $50 fine for each offense. Sound familiar?

Springfield College students are steaming about new college rules that prohibit cooking in dorm rooms. Said one level headed student, "It (the policy) sucks. Cooking is hard enough as it is in a dorm closet, but when they tell you that you can't (cook) and that you have to follow these insane rules, it gets ridiculous."

Academics major concern

By RICHARD LINDAHL, JR.
ORIENT Staff

Sidney J. Watson, director of athletics, echoed the concerns of President Gresson about the "P minus athlete" in his Chapel Talk on Wednesday.

He said the athletics department expects "one hundred percent effort in academics as well as athletics" from student athletes. He explained that since a Bowdoin athlete is a "very select student" in a "very select school," it is important that the athlete must give a "first-class response" to the "first-class act" of the college.

Watson claimed, "Nobody in the east, big or small, has a better athletic plant than Bowdoin." He said it indicates the college's commitment to the athletic program. He noted that 68% of the student body makes use of the athletics program, and activities have always been financed by the college.

"Our aim is to have athletics for all," said Watson.

The college now offers thirty intercollegiate programs, as well as physical education classes, intramurals open to all students, and a new outing club, Watson said.

According to Watson, in 1985-86 there were 506 students in sports, which means that 34% of the student body was involved in intercollegiate programs.

Watson recalled that 18 of his past hockey players have become doctors, and six of them are orthopedic surgeons. "That, to me, is special," he said.

The role of athletics in education was defended. "The college has always felt that our programs were justified," said Watson.

He said that society is built on competition, and athletics teach competition and cooperation skills that carry over into life through business and other advancement opportunities.

"The lessons learned in wins and losses carry over into your future endeavors," said Watson.

Maine's Most
Enterprising
Record Shop

THE TONTINE MALL
149 Maine St.
Brunswick, Maine 04011

Check Macbean's surprising selection of Classical, Jazz,
Folk, Children's and Show recordings.
LP's, Tapes, and of course
Compact Discs

If you would like to find out more about the Williams - Mystic program

Please join us for an illustrated talk
Wednesday, 7 October, 4:30
P.M.
Lancaster Lounge
Or see Anna Brown - Dean of Students Office

Fall or Spring Semester

AMERICAN MARITIME STUDIES

Accredited by
WILLIAMS COLLEGE
Taught at
MYSTIC SEAPORT MUSEUM

- ☐ Ecology
- ☐ Economics
- ☐ Biology
- ☐ History
- ☐ Literature
- ☐ American Studies
- ☐ Public Policy
- ☐ Oceanography
- ☐ Off-Shore Research

The Williams-Mystic Program offers a half-century opportunity to study the maritime culture of the United States and the world. We bring our participants to the Mystic Seaport Museum, an outstanding maritime museum, and to the Mystic Seaport Laboratory, and diverse coastal environments. You can see Williams-Mystic students in the field, on the water, in the museum, and in the classroom. You can also develop your own research project, and receive a stipend. You can also develop your own research project, and receive a stipend. You can also develop your own research project, and receive a stipend.

ENTERTAINMENT

Dance gains recognition

By SHARON SMART
ORIENT Entertainment Editor

The newly established Division of Dance in the Department of Theater Arts has enabled the Dance Program to become an academic department this year. In addition, a proposal for a minor in dance is presently pending review before the Committee on Curriculum and Educational Policy.

June Vail, Assistant Professor and Director of Dance, described the aim of the new Division of Dance as "to educate people about dance." Courses previously offered have been placed into a cohesive grouping, listed together in the catalog. Vail characterized the change as "not that revolutionary—the courses have been available, but not cohesively recognized."

The Dance Program began in 1971, when Vail initially came to Bowdoin, as a co-curricular program. Along with technique classes, a course in choreography and, every other year, a dance history course, were offered. Only the course in dance history was a recognized academic offering.

The courses were listed in various departments, from English to Art. Vail described the past situation as "a very ambiguous position for dance."

This year, dance at Bowdoin has gained official recognition. "The dance courses have been here for sixteen years. What has evolved is a combination of what has attracted students over the years, input from other colleges and several committees."

The evolution of dance at Bowdoin parallels trends of recognition for all the Arts, stressed Vail. "People are learning that dance is not a frivolity, but rather is intimately connected to everything in the liberal arts—culture, history, anthropology, art. I'd like to affirm the study of dance and the connection between all Arts."

Dancers practice during an afternoon Performance Studies class.

Four courses would comprise the proposed Dance minor: an introductory course in dance history, a higher level course in dance history/criticism, an individually tailored independent study, and a choreography course. In addition, two years of Dance Performance (technique and repertory) would be required. A comprehensive curriculum is in the process of formulation.

Vail does not "believe there will be a major in Dance. There just is not enough personnel for teaching."

In both the proposed minor and the Division of Dance in general, the focus seems to be on striking a balance between technique and academics, while maintaining a flexibility for individual differences. "When you are talking about dance, there are two parts: doing it (experiential), and learning it (cognitive). The most effective experience is a combination of the two," said Vail.

Vail stressed the importance for Dance minors, and students interested in dance in general, of taking part in technique/repertory classes, rather than restricting themselves to the academic courses: "Some things can only be learned through experience. For example, an Art History major might want to take drawing to see how it felt."

"Also, one learns from one's mistakes—it is important to experience the feeling of being on stage, of being on the line, no matter the outcome. A dancer is able to say 'this is mine, this is my very best,' and to show it," Vail continued.

She stressed that "the program is really for everyone, not just those who have had prior training. It is for both men and women, to educate them about dance. Stud-

(Continued on page four)

Calendar

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 2

8:00 pm — Club Night in the Moulton Union. Abrams & Anderson.
8:00 & 10:00 pm — Weekly Weekend Films. Midnight Express, presented by the BFVS. $1 admission. Smith Auditorium.
9:00 pm — Club Night continues with the campus dance band Dry Rush in the Moulton Union.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 3

4:30 pm — Dance Performance. Martha Enson '84 and Trisha Bauman '84 present a studio concert of recent works. Dance Studio, Sargent Gymnasium. 8:00 & 10:00 pm — Weekly Weekend Films. Birdy. $1 admission. Smith Auditorium.

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 4

3:00 pm — Foreign Film Series. Padre Padrone. Italian with English subtitles. Smith Auditorium.
3:00 pm — Gallery Talk. "Kevin Donahue: Recent Paintings." Kevin M. Donahue, visiting assistant professor of art. Walker Art Building.
7:30 pm — Concert Series. Vox Nova Wind Quintet. Female quintet will perform pieces by Ibert, Hindemith, and John Harbison. Admission $7, or free with a Bowdoin I.D. Kresge Auditorium.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 6

7:00 pm — Sports nutrition seminar, presented by Nancy Clark, M.S., R.D., a registered dietitian with training in exercise physiology. Daggett Lounge.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 7

10:10 am — Chapel Talk.
3:30 pm — Study abroad representative. The Swedish Program. New Conference Room, M.U.
4:30 pm — Williams — Mystic Program in American Maritime Studies: An Illustrated Talk. Lancaster Lounge.
7:30 pm — Faust Film Series. La Damnation de Faust, the Berlioz opera. No charge. Smith Auditorium.
7:30 pm — Albert C. Boothby Memorial Lecture. "The Case of Ernest Everett Just," will chronicle the life of the black American biologist who, despite the threats of racism, Nazism, and Fascism, established himself as a leading marine biologist. Kenneth R. Manning, professor of history of science at M.I.T. Daggett Lounge.
7:30 pm — Constitution Lecture Series. "Does the Constitution Matter?" Dennis J. Hutchinson, professor of law at the University of Chicago Law School. Daggett Lounge.
8:00 pm — Lecture. "American High Renaissance: The Walker Art Building Murals," by H. Barbara Weinberg, professor of art, Queens College of the City University of New York.

MOVIE LISTINGS

Cinema City (Cooks Corner)
The Fourth Protocol, showing at 7:00 and 9:00
Stakeout, showing at 7:00 and 9:00
Dirty Dancing, showing at 7:10 and 9:10
Hamburger Hill, showing at 7:05 and 9:05

Evening Star Cinema (Maine St.)
84 Charing Cross Road, showing at 7:00 and 8:55

UPCOMING EVENTS

October 10 — Olympic athletes Wilma Rudolph and Joan Benoit Samuelson will take part in the dedication of the William Farley Field House. 10:30 a.m. at Pickard Field.

October 11 — Elizabeth Holtzman, district attorney for Kings County, Brooklyn, N.Y., will deliver the 1987 Spindel Memorial Lecture: "The U.S. Government and Nazi War Criminals." 7:30 in Daggett Lounge.

Crowd responds to The Fixx

By LIZZ MILLAN
ORIENT Asst. Entertainment Editor

"Calm Animals." "Cause To Be..." "Red Earth." "Shake" and "Watch." These are songs with which no one was familiar until last Friday night, when The Fixx appeared in Morrell Gym. Eight of the songs performed had never been heard before.

Of course, classics such as "Are We Ourselves?," "One Thing," and "Secret Separation" were played as well. The point of their college tour, however, is to field the reactions of students to their new material. The Fixx, lead singer Cy Curnin, drummer Adam Woods, guitarist Jamie West-Oram, keyboard player Rupert Greenwald, and bassist Dan K. Brown have undergone many changes lately. Their sound, as was evident from Friday's performance, has shifted from that of art pop to a rougher sounding rock. "The music sounded loud and bangy," an observer said. "We like playing new music — it's more of a challenge. It's easy to face an audience with a lot of top songs. No one really has to listen to it, the reaction is already there. With the new songs, there is a lot more work involved," said West-Oram.

Review

West-Oram is pleased with the direction the music of the Fixx is taking. The question remaining is whether or not the public will be pleased. The 1,100 members of that public present in Morrell on Friday seemed to enjoy the concert. "It was definitely foot-tapping music," one listener said.

The foot-tapping began even before the Fixx trotted onto the stage. A young band from Springfield, Ma. In the Flesh, warmed up the audience with several upbeat songs. They have previously performed with Belinda Carlisle, Crowded House and Gingo Boingo.

Unfortunately, their bass player was prevented by an oil spill on the highway from arriving in time to perform. The band made the best of the situation. Clapping from the audience not only covered the missing sound, but increased audience participation.

In the Flesh possessed a definite stage presence, and there was plenty of movement as lead singer David Brooks bopped around the stage. "The whole idea behind a performance is doing something for the audience," Brooks said.

The Fixx then took over the show. They opened with a new song — "Calm Animals." This title was a fitting description for the effect the music had on the audience. Two more songs passed with little reaction from the audience. Finally, "Are We Ourselves?" generated a bit of enthusiasm from the listeners. From then on, the Fixx remained fixed — the audience began responding (Continued on page four)

McNutt discusses works

By ELIZABETH MULLEN
ORIENT Staff

On Monday night, a small gathering of Bowdoin students, faculty, and members of the art community gathered to hear and see a remarkable artist trace the evolution of her work.

Though softspoken in her demeanor, painter Jenny Lynn McNutt creates art of tremendous power and emotion. Her technique and palette cover a wide range — from thickly applied paint to flat plains of color, from somber grays to vivid greens. Yet underlying all her work there is a sense of searching — a searching the artist herself traced on Monday night.

Jenny Lynn McNutt was born and raised in Knoxville, Tennessee. She received her B.A. in French literature and philosophy from Rollins College in 1973, and her M.F.A. from Yale School of Art in 1983. She has spent time in Oregon and New York, and has studied under a fellowship with the Fine Arts Work Center in Provincetown, Massachusetts. She moved to Maine a few years ago in order to regain a sort of "restoration to the land" she had felt both in her childhood and in Oregon.

When asked what kind of painting she does, Jenny Lynn replied: "I feel very strongly about not labeling, not categorizing my work... paintings are built of belief, not of something as flimsy as an opinion. [They are] something that transcends anything as easy as categories, the route of least (Continued on page four) resistance." She embodies this belief in her own work.

McNutt

(Continued from page three)

As an undergraduate, Jenny Lynn was (and remains) an avid reader. She did not really begin to paint until her late twenties. Due to her literary and philosophical training, she brings a contemplative quality to her work, a sense of the thoughts that enter her mind and inspire her to paint.

The work pictured here, "Sleeping Thalassa" refers to her own frustration at man's inability to comprehend the power of the sea — of the sea's utter indifference to her being. The word "thalassa" is a Greek term which refers to man's longing to return to the sea, to disappear into the sea. It is a kind of wail let forth by man in the face of the indifference of the sea.

The Fixx

(Continued from page three)
to their new sound.

"Their music was good, but they don't have much of a stage presence," a student said. Overall, the audience seemed unimpressed with lead singer, Cy Curnin's, hand expressions. One onlooker, however, was obviously attracted to him. She bounded up onto the stage and began grooving with him. This was one of the few moments of activity during the show.

There was not much physical movement onstage during the rest of the performance. Yet throughout the show, there was constant movement behind the scenes. Lights were constantly being checked on, smoke was released and sound monitored. Without a crew, there could be no show. "Most people don't realize the Jenny Lynn speaks of nature and the outdoors as one of the major influences in her life. Another influence stems from the religious training of her Tennessee childhood. These themes pervade her painting. While in Oregon, her reunion with the land brought out many of the feelings of conflict she associates with Tennessee and her childhood. Her work at that time was largely narrative painting, borrowing styles from many different artists — still searching for her own means of expression, her own method of relating her inner dialogue.

Many of Jenny Lynn's works are based on thoughts, emotions, poetry. The titles of her paintings mean a great deal in her work. They speak of a time, a period in her life and in her art, of resolu-work that goes into producing a show like this. The performers step onto the stage and the audience don't give a second thought to anything else. "a crew member said.

Thanks to the crew, an upbeat warm-up band and a crowd of eleven hundred people, the Fixx was provided with an environment in which to test its new sound. The audience, in turn, was treated to a fine musical performance. Where the group lacked activity, the audience possessed it. "This was a definite improvement over the Ramones," exclaimed one observer.

The Fixx will have a new album out early next year. The Student Union Committee worked hard to allow Bowdoin students the opportunity to preview the material which will compose the album.

tions she has and has not yet reached. Thus "Sleeping Thalassa" is a work which bespeaks of a certain reconciliation not present in the earlier work, "Thalassa."

A sense of struggle, a "working through" can be felt in Jenny Lynn's paintings — as if the process of painting, and not the finished product, is her means of communication. Like Tennyson in his "In Memoriam: A.H.H.," Jenny Lynn McNutt traces the evolution of her ideas through the act of painting itself.

"Thalassa" by Jenny Lynn McNutt.

Dance

(Continued from page three)

dents here need to become aware of possibilities for creative arts."

Performance Studies classes (either on a credit or a non-credit basis), offered in the afternoon and evening, "will always be for everyone," said Vail. "The core of the program is modern dance. It encompasses many styles of moving, is very adaptable, allows for lots of variation and the development of one's own style. You really can't categorize it in one word, such as 'modern'—it is training in making art," she explained.

A general introductory course is offered, along with the more specific areas of jazz, modern, repertory, and ballet. Vail explained, "The Introduction to Dance course is about moving, strengthening, and stretching, in preparation for dance. The students learn to discipline both the mind and body, and to use memory and thought in dance."

The teaching staff includes Gwyneth Jones, a dancer with the New York company Dan Wagoner and Dancers, Paul Sarvis, previously with the Ram Island Dance Group of Portland, and Vail. Jazz and ballet are taught, respectively, by Elizabeth Mullen, '88, and Katherine Filmanowicz, '90.

Numerous performance opportunities exist for the dancers. In addition to an informal Parents' Day performance and a Winter Studio show, there will be a major show in Pickard Theater in the spring.

This year is one of transition for dance at Bowdoin. The future direction of the Division of Dance is undecided—"My own strong feeling is that we need to let things evolve in terms of the variety of courses offered," said Vail.

With the official opening of the athletic center at Pickard Field on Monday, September 14, 1987 at 1:30 p.m., Bowdoin College will initiate its policy of requiring a Bowdoin ID card for admittance. Everyone is welcome and urged to use the center during its operating hours, but you must show your ID.

COLBY COLLEGE CONCERTS presents THE HOOTERS

Tuesday, October 6
9:00 P.M.

Tickets on sale through Student Union Committee and at all Ticketron outlets

$11 General Admission

For Ticket Information
Call 872-3338

SPORTS

Varsity volleyball stays undefeated in state

Bear volleyball player sets up for strike in game against UNE.
Photo by Asaf Farashuddin.

By TANYA WEINSTEIN
ORIENT Staff

On Wednesday night, the Bowdoin volleyball team defeated the University of New England, maintaining their undefeated record in the state.

Bowdoin took four games in the best of five match. This win will keep them in their number one position in the Maine Volleyball Power Rating. The team's record is presently 8-0 in the state, and 10-3 overall. Coach Lynn Ruddy stated, "We are already well ahead of last year...we ended the year with a 9-9 record."

The volleyball team is much smaller this year, and Ruddy believes that this is a clear advantage. She said, "We have half the number of people...we don't have anyone who hasn't played the game before." Co-captain Sarah Kelsik '89 agreed that this is an advantage, because the coach can work with members individually. She added that everyone on the team travels to away games, which was impossible last year with so many players.

Ruddy also said that the team is using a 6-2 formation this year, since there are so many strong hitters. This formation provides a more offensive game, with "hitters at all times and a maximum attack at the net."

The team is playing more matches and has a tougher schedule this year. According to Ruddy, "You have to play people that are better than you in order to get better." Won Sin '89 agreed by saying, "If we play really good schools, we play up to par with them."

The volleyball team showed their great teamwork and offensive playing on Saturday, when the Polar Bear Invitational was held in the gym. Bowdoin defeated all four Maine teams that participated. Although Bates did not participate, Bowdoin will be playing the team again in the near future. Since Bowdoin defeated the last year's state champions two weeks ago, Bates will most likely be out for revenge, according to Ruddy. Karen Andrew '90 co-captain stated, "Bates is a great team, but if we play our best, I think we can beat them."

The squad is fortunate enough this year to have Dan Rush '89 and Ron Frankel '90 helping out with coaching and statistics. Coach Ruddy said that their experience with the game is helpful. Andrews agreed by saying, "They've played all through high school and they really know what they are talking about."

The volleyball team faces a challenging tournament Homecoming Weekend. Several of the best regional teams from out of state will be participating. Sin commented, "It will be a hard tournament, but if we really work together we can do well."

The team has already proven that the members can work well together. Despite the fact that they are a young team, the women have played exceptionally well as proven by their undefeated record. Consequently, opponents have taken notice. Ruddy said, "This is only our second year and already we're making waves."

Bantam rush bruises Bears

By ERIC PALMQUIST
ORIENT Contributor

The Polar Bears entered last Saturday's game with the Trinity College Bantams with high expectations.

They were coming off one of their biggest wins in recent memory, were returning some injured starters and were facing a team whose defense had been depleted by graduation. Last Saturday appeared to be an ideal time for Bowdoin to defeat the Bantams for the first time in recent history. However, the Bears fell short, 28-14, as Trinity rode on the heels of a powerful running game.

The story of the day was the Bantam ground attack which amassed a total of 293 yards on only 49 carries, an average of nearly six yards per rush. With an experienced offensive line consistently moving the Bears back, running backs John Calcaterra and Wally Wrobel danced through the defense for a combined total of 240 yards. One hundred yard rushing days are rare, yet the Bantams fell only one yard shy of having two — Calcaterra collected 141, Wrobel 99.

But, despite this onslaught, the Polar Bears were never out of the game as they amassed some impressive drives of their own. Even though he was singled out by the Trinity defense, Gregg Bohannon recorded his second consecutive one hundred yard day, recording 101 yards in 22 carries.

However, the main damage inflicted by the Bears was done through the air. Quarterbacks Ryan Stafford and Mike Kirch hit on 59 percent of their passes for 203 yards consistently finding the holes in the Trinity defense. Wide receiver Bill Herrmann and tight end John Hayden were the men open most often as they both made crucial third down catches to keep Bowdoin scoring drives alive. The Bears relied heavily on them. Aside from Bohannon, Polar Bear rushers managed barely two yards a carry.

The thing that eventually cost the Polar Bears the game, however, was turnovers. One Bear drive was thwarted inside Trinity's 30 yard line by a fumble. Another ended when the Bantams were backed up in their own end zone, a touchdown just two yards away, and the Bears coughed up the football. These turnovers were unforgotten. As Coach Howard Vandersee said, "We just dropped the ball."

The Bears were also not helped by the explosive Bantam pass rush which registered five sacks for 55 yards in losses. Kirch was the primary victim falling four times. Despite such rough treatment, he still managed to lead the Polar Bears to two scores—one on an option play where he took it in himself, another on an eleven yard screen pass to running back Rich Ledbury.

Despite a poor day overall, there were some fine individual performances in the Bear defense. Linebacker Rick Arena paced the team with ten tackles while safety Terry Conroy and linebacker John Ollis recorded eight. Ken Fusco contributed five tackles, but his biggest play was when he picked off a Trinity pass and returned it 17 yards. Scott Wilkin and Scott Wojcicki also had fine days.

Tomorrow the Polar Bears are back home for a game against the perennially tough Amherst Lord Jeffs. Amherst boasts a hard-fought 17-0 victory over an excellent squad from Bates, and they hope to continue recent tra-

(Continued on page seven)

(Continued on page seven)

Bowdoin's Karen Creechore defends goal in recent soccer action.
Photo by Asaf Farashuddin.

Men's soccer still on top

By TOD DILLON
ORIENT Contributor

The undefeated men's soccer team followed up last week's solid performances with two more victories, upping their record to 4-0. Last Saturday the Polar Bears travelled to New London to take on the Camels of Connecticut College, ranked 3rd in the New England Division III poll, and returned with a 2-0 victory.

On Tuesday, the Polar Bears were in Biddeford, ME., winning a 3-1 decision against the University of New England.

Saturday's win was the second upset for the Bears in this young season as well as the second shutout in as many games. Karl Maier scored what would prove to be the only goal Bowdoin would need at the 40:00 of the first half on an assist from Lance Conrad. In the second half Conrad chalked up another assist, this time to John Secor at 3:30 for the insurance goal.

The two goals would be more than enough for the Bears as the stellar performance of the defense, coupled with the play of Peter Levitt in goal, stifled the Camel's offensive attempts. Levitt, playing in place of the injured Will Waldorf, turned aside 8 shots to become the second Bowdoin goalie to register a shutout this season.

On Tuesday Bowdoin found themselves with yet another goalie and another hard-fought win. The Polar Bears, now ranked 5th in the New England Division III poll, opened up the scoring at 10:23 of the first half when Conrad scored on an assist from Dave Novaria. The score stood at 1-0 as

Women down Babson

By TONY JACCACI
ORIENT Contributor

The women's varsity soccer team continued in its winning ways, shutting-out Babson College and St. Anselms College. With a record of 3-0-1, Bowdoin is presently ranked third in Division III soccer.

Today, the Polar Bears are playing Wheaton College at home and next Wednesday, they will travel to Colby College to battle Bowdoin's perennially tough arch-enemy.

According to coach John Cullen, a team "that is working perfectly well after three games" is the scariest thing known to a coach because there is no way but down. When Bowdoin travelled to Babson last Saturday, the Polar Bears played a very strong first half, dominating Babson. Bowdoin outshot Babson 15-6 in the first half without scoring. Bowdoin's defense effectively shut down any offensive threats that Babson tried to mount and gave goalie Melanie Koza '91 a relatively easy day in the nets.

Again, in the second half, Bowdoin could not put the ball into the net. Bowdoin's main problem was that the offense tried all day to make the perfect play inside the 18. There were too many passes and dribbles in the offensive third of the field when, according to Cullen, they should have let it rip. Cullen never felt that the team was in danger of losing, but then again, "you can't win many games if you don't

(Continued on page eight)

Sailing successful on Saturday

By JON DEVINE
ORIENT Contributor

Women's tennis player smashes backhand winner in court play this past week. Photo by Asaf Farashuddin.

Tennis streak reaches four

By JAN BREKKE
ORIENT Staff

The Bowdoin women's tennis team stretched their winning streak to four straight with wins over Babson and the University of Maine this week. After defeating Babson 6-3 on Saturday, the Polar Bears returned home for a tough 5-3 victory over Maine on Tuesday.

Coach Ed Reid was understandably worried when he saw number one player Heidi Wallenfels limping during the early stages of her singles match on Tuesday. Wallenfels played through the first set, but was forced to default shortly thereafter. Meanwhile, Jennifer Grimes lost a tough match at number two singles to a U. Maine player that she had beaten earlier this season.

Bowdoin got its first singles win of the afternoon from Suzanne Fogarty at number four singles. Fogarty was joined by Erika Gustafson and Suzanne Palmer, who also defeated their Black Bear opponents.

Reid was forced to do some shuffling of his doubles teams due to the inability of Wallenfels to play. The new number one doubles combination of Fogarty-Patty Ingraham held on to win

Need Extra Spending Money?
Benetton in Freeport has sales positions available part time mornings, evenings and weekends.
Apply in person at 56 Main Street

BIG RED Q PRINTING
next to the College

- stationary
- resumes
- posters
- newsletters

212E Maine Street
Brunswick
729-4840

their match in a tiebreaker. The number two doubles team secured the victory for Bowdoin, winning in impressive fashion.

Reid commented, "We were really lucky to come out of this match with a win, considering all of our injuries and the lineup changes that we were forced to make. Suzanne Palmer has really been a star in replacing our injured co-captains."

Reid is hoping that his team will recover in time for their home match with Wheaton on Friday, October 2nd.

In sailing action this week, the Polar Bears made an impressive showing at a regatta in Worcester, Ma. Bowdoin logged a very respectable third place amidst some heavy competition from schools such as host school Holy Cross and Massachusetts Maritime.

The A-division boat was skippered by Scott Brown, with Amy Borge as his crew. According to captain Tom Gibbons, they were very successful this week.

The freshman squad was not quite so fortunate. Their regatta was called due to treacherous sailing conditions. Before canceling the race, however, the first round of competition was held, with four out of nine boats capsizeing in the process.

Next weekend, the team will be participating in a regatta to be held at M.I.T., and Gibbons anticipates tough going against the teams of the region. The captain further noted that this season has been a great challenge for the team, due to the fact that the sailors have been without a coach for the entire season as a result of a lack of funds.

In turn, Gibbons believes that teams which Bowdoin should have beaten have been able to out-distance the Bears. Freshman Tally Blumberg said, "It's a shame that we can't have someone out there every day who knows as much as he does," referring to Mike Horn, former Harvard varsity sailing coach who has expressed an interest in the job.

The team will wrap up its season when a group of Bowdoin sailors

Results of Bowdoin College athletic events are available on Sportline. The number to call is (207) 725-3061. Results for fall sports will be available after 9:00 p.m. daily led by Doug Jenke plan on participating in a regatta for larger boats to be held in Larchmont, NY on October 10-11. The crew holds high expectations for this competition, and with good reason. Two years ago, Bowdoin placed second in spite of having to face some of the strongest sailing teams in the area. This race could be "the victory of the season," said Gibbons, who believes that Jenke's experience in the U.S. Sardinia Cup Trials will boost the chances of the Bowdoin entry, a Tartan 33 named Surprise.

Golf pleased with season

By BONNIE BERRYMAN
ORIENT Contributor

The men's golf team ended their season this week with a strong performance in the New England's tournament at New Seabury.

The team left early Sunday morning and did not return until late Tuesday night. Coach Terry Meagher was very pleased with his team's performance in the "very competitive tournament" against 44 other teams. After the first day of competition, Bowdoin was among the top 25 teams out of the 45 who entered.

Leading the way for the Bears was sophomore Steve Mitchell, who shot a 77 the first day and a 75 the second. Peter Cook '89 followed closely with scores of 77 and 80.

"Both played well on the difficult course," Meagher remarked in reference to Mitchell and Cook. "I was also pleased with the performance of the rest of the team."

The Bears will not know their official standing in the tournament until later this week. Of those teams within the New England area, Bentley, Dartmouth, Holy Cross, Bryant, and Hartford fared well at New Seabury, placing in the top five.

Meagher has only good things to say about his players. "It was an enjoyable season. This tournament was a nice way to finish it."

Pauline's Bloomers

Large Hanging Plants - 2 for $17.50
Tontine Mall, Brunswick, 725-5952

Anniversary, Birthday, Hospital, Wedding, Sympathy, Holiday, All Occasions
Flowers, Plants & Gifts

We Deliver
Wire Service

Balloons & Candy

Major Credit Cards Accepted - Open 9 days 9:00 to 5:30

YOUTH BASKETBALL SUPERVISOR

The Brunswick Parks and Recreation Department is accepting applications for Youth Basketball Supervisor. Will be responsible for the program planning and supervision of the various grade levels of boys and girls. Must be knowledgeable about the game and interested in working with youth. Average of 12-15 hours per week beginning mid-November through mid-March, including a few late weekday afternoons, early evenings and all day on Saturdays. Pay rate $4.75-$5.00 per hour.

Applications available at:
PARKS AND RECREATION DEPARTMENT
30 Federal Street
Brunswick, Maine 04011
(207) 729-0114

Office Hours: Monday-Friday, 8:00 a.m.-4:30 p.m.
Application Deadline: Friday, October 16, 1987.

EQUAL OPPORTUNITY EMPLOYER

Tontine Fine Candies

Have you tried our chocolate pizzas?

Large and Small sizes
Looks like the real thing...
tastes like something special!
A really neat gift!

We are in the Tontine Mall

H A I R
STUDIO
Hair Sculpture

3 Bowker St.
Brunswick, Me. 725-2694

With a Bowdoin I.D.,
receive a cut and blow-dry
— at a discount.

Women $12.00 Men $7.00

Within walking distance
of campus.

PARENTS!

Give your college student a very special care package! An Ice Cream Cake from Ben & Jerry's for birthdays, study breaks, exams, surprises, rainy days...

Call and order your
cake today.

Free Delivery (207) 725-2725

96 Maine Street, Brunswick

Ruggers skin Bates Bobcats at home

By MATT SAMUELSON
ORIENT Staff

Power, raw power. After their stunning 6-4 victory over Norwich University two weekends ago, the Bowdoin ruggers were at it again last weekend, destroying Bates, 12-4. The B team did some pretty impressive dirtywork too, but Bates slid away from a 3-0 win in the end.

At Bates in the A game, the All-Blacks played a cool first half, keeping the game slow. The second half was a different story, painfully different. As Bowdoin All-Black captain Andy Palmer '88 said, "In the second half, we rolled all over 'em."

Senior scrum-half Brian Feriso, scored all day for Bowdoin coming out with one try and two penalty plays. In the highlight was senior Tim Devaney who was a formidable force throughout the day in the lineouts. Overall, the A team claimed a well-earned victory of biblical proportions.

The Killer B's also had a tough fight last Saturday. Junior Jim Savage had an exceptional day as prop and sophomore Jason Easterly was also highlighted for his performance as scrum-half. It was a rough day, though, and the Bobcats slimed their way through to a 3-0 win.

The Bowdoin ruggers have two more league games in this season after which they begin the New England Tournament. They face Colby this Saturday and U.M.O.

next week. Palmer is confident that about these upcoming games, stating, "I think we can take 'em."

Harriers have impressive showing

By JUSTIN PRISENDORF
ORIENT Asst. Sports Editor

Last Saturday, the Bowdoin men's and women's cross country teams traveled to the Southeastern Massachusetts University Invitational in North Dartmouth. The meet was marked by outstanding individual performances.

Out of a field of 236 runners, junior Tod Dillon took an impressive 12th place. "Right now I really feel good about running, the best I've felt all season," said

Dillon. Captain Marty Malague '90 finished 33rd.

Overall, the men's team finished ninth out of 19 teams. "With our good showing on Saturday, we were able to capture a Division III top ten ranking," said Coach Peter J. Slovenski. It is the first time in seven years that the Polar Bears, have had such a ranking.

On this outing, the women's team turned in their best performance of the season. Bowdoin decisively defeated twelve teams for a fifth place showing. Co-captain Deanna Hodgkin '89 captured sixth place in a field of 176. Marilyn Fredey '91 surprised the well weathered field with an 11th place finish. Freshman Gwen Kay and Jennifer Snow helped the team with commendable finishes, 37th and 45th respectively.

Tomorrow the teams travel to Colby College in Waterville. The men race against Colby, the University of New Hampshire, and the University of Southern Maine. Slovenski is reservedly optimistic about the meet. "U.N.H. is a Division I team, and they should win handily. But with the way we are running, we could upset Colby."

The women will face Bates and Colby. Bates is currently the number one Division III women's cross country team in New England. "Colby has been us two weekends in a row. It is only a matter of time before we take one for ourselves."

Field hockey cages Bobcat offense 4-0

By JULIE FELNER
ORIENT Contributor

Women's varsity field hockey crushed Bates, 4-0, in a stunning shut-out victory on Tuesday. The Bears' success, as a result of excellent teamwork and deft playing, puts their record at 3-1.

Bowdoin started the game aggressively and never slowed down—amassing a total of 26 shots on goal. Bates, which had ample chance to score with ten corners, got off only five attempts. Coach Sally LaPointe felt that the Bates goalie was clearly beaten in all four of Bowdoin's scoring situations.

Sheila Carroll '90 put the Bears ahead with an unassisted score in the first half. Laura Bongiorno '88 rounded out the half with an additional unassisted goal.

Bowdoin kept up the intensity in the second half scoring twice more. Carroll, assisted by Nancy Beverage '91, furthered the Bear's lead with her second goal of the game. She then assisted co-captain Audrey Augustin on the goal that clinched Bowdoin's victory.

Co-captain Linda Woodhull '88, Maureen Letson '88, Kathy McCormick '88, and Margaret Danenberger '88 also played exceptional games. Freshman goalie Lynn Warner put in a top-notch performance with 3 saves in the first half and 2 in the second half.

Coach LaPointe hesitated to laud any one player for her outstanding play. Instead, she stressed that "the team worked beautifully together—nobody did poorly." She was particularly praiseworthy of the Bear's defense. A Bates player who had led her team to victory over Colby and Connecticut College with six goals in two games never even got a shot on Warner due to Letson and McCormick's paralyzing defense.

"Bates played a rough game—they hit people instead of balls," said LaPointe. Even after sustaining two major injuries and several minor ones, the Bears "never let up" according to Beverage.

LaPointe seems optimistic about the team's future now that they have become comfortable with each other and the new formation. She feels that "Whenever any group plays as a unit, they're hard to beat. It's like playing a solid wall."

The Bears will need that determination and strong teamwork for the home games against Wheaton today, 1 ranked Salem State on tomorrow, and in upcoming games against Tufts and Southern Maine.

Students are needed for a variety of jobs for Homecoming Day - Saturday, October 10. Great opportunity to meet and talk with alumni. Stop by the Alumni Relations Office, Cram Alumni House, 2nd Floor or call Ext. 3266 to sign up.

SUGARLOAF GIVES YOU A RUN FOR THE MONEY... 56 IN FACT!

A STUDENT SEASON PASS is the best ski deal around. Buy now ... ski a lot and save a lot!! Only $250 with purchase before 10/31/87 for a full season of skiing. Contact your campus representative today!

Your representative is:

John Bellows
Ext. 3825

sugarloaf/usa
Carrabassett Valley
Maine 04947
207-237-2000

Football

(Continued from page five)
dition by adding Bowdoin to their list of victims.

Vandersea believes that if the Bears are to win they must contain the Jeff's powerful ground game which returns three fine running backs from last season. He also looks for better play from the kickoff and punt return teams. The game begins at 1:30 p.m. at Whittier Field, and a large crowd is expected for what proves to be an entertaining contest.

Men's Soccer

(Continued from page five)
the teams began the second half and it remained unchanged until 12:46 when Chris Garbaccio scored what proved to be the game winner on an assist from Greg-Hoffstetter '91.

The Polar Bears could not yet be content with the 2-0 lead for UNE wouldnot give up. At 21:37 the game was made a little tighter when Slyné Cherifis scored for the hosts, making it 2-1 in the Bear's favor. It was not until Dirk Asherman came through at 39:22 with Bowdoin's third goal that the victory seemed assured. In goal for the Bears, Bruce Wilson had three saves to become the third Bowdoin goalie with a win.

KEGS

729-0711
LOWEST PRICES.
OFFERED BY ADVANCE RESERVATION.

Cask and Ken

26 Rock Road, Brunswick, 729-0711 Mon. Sat. 10 to 6

Kaplan puts you in scoring position.

Want a touchdown on the SAT, LSAT, GMAT, MCAT, GRE, NTE, CPA, or others? If so, you want Kaplan.

We're the undefeated leaders in the test prep field. Number one since we started 50 years ago. Since then, we've helped over one million students increase their scoring power. We've taught them how to tackle "test nerves." How to use winning test-taking strategies. How to scramble through exams with an eye on the clock.

So don't wait on the sidelines. Avoid getting sacked by the SAT, LSAT, GMAT, MCAT, GRE, NTE, or CPA, by getting on the team with the best scoring record in the league. Stanley H. Kaplan.

IKAPLAN
STANLEY H. KAPLAN EDUCATIONAL CENTER LTD.

Train with the winners!
Portland LSAT class starts 10/11.
GMAT class starts 11/15.
MCAT class forming now.

Call collect (617) 964-TEST

Brunswick Parks and Recreation Department

BOYS 7TH & 8TH GRADE BASKETBALL COACH

Stipend Position — early November to mid-February

Apply at: Parks and Recreation Department
30 Federal Street
Brunswick, Maine 04011

(207) 729-0114
Application Deadline:
Friday, October 16, 1987

Equal Opportunity Employer

Women's Soccer

(Continued from page five)
score," said the coach. The regulation time ended with a score of 0-0 in a game that the Polar Bears deserved.

For their third consecutive game, Bowdoin found themselves in an overtime game. Having come this far, the team would not be denied. Only one minute into the first overtime, sophomore Liz Brown crossed the ball from the left wing to junior Jen Russell in the middle.

Russell took a beautiful shot that hit the left hand post and then hustled for her own rebound which she passed to freshman Christine Neill in front of the net. Neill literally threw herself at the ball and when the dust had cleared, both Neill and the ball were in the net for Bowdoin's first goal.

Neill wasn't yet though. Halfway through the second period of overtime, sophomore Sue Ingram penetrated the Babson defense to the 12 yard line and then finding herself surrounded, passed the ball back to Neill who was waiting about 10 yards outside of the 18. Neill launched the ball which flew into the top right-hand corner of the goal over the hands of the Babson net-minder. The game ended and Bowdoin returned home with a well deserved 2-0 victory.

On Wednesday, Bowdoin braved the elements as they played St. Anselms in the Polar Bears' first home appearance. Those who did brave the rain saw a fine display of soccer as Bowdoin trounced the visiting St. Anselms team.

The game was quite physical, and the slippery conditions made for aggressive play. Bowdoin stormed into the game and according to co-captain Nancy Delaney "played the best game to date." Delaney stated that the key to Bowdoin's success was the fact that the Polar Bears maintained intensity for the entire game. Bowdoin controlled the ball for the entire game and excellent defensive play earned the defense their third shut-out in four games.

Bowdoin's first goal came late in the first half when Neill broke free on the right side and took a shot from several yards inside the 18. Russell '89 closed the door on the shot as she tipped the ball into net.

The Polar Bears' second goal came early in the second half when co-captain Nancy Delaney took a shot from about 20 yards from the net. The shot was an amazing drive on the ground that blazed into the corner of the goal. St. Anselms continued to play a tough game but was unable to pull together a strong attack. When regulation ended, the team had another 2-0 victory under its belt.

by Berke Breathed

BLOOM COUNTY

College bans Norwich vandals

By MARSHALL CARTER
ORIENT Staff

Two Norwich University students who caused approximately $1,000 damage to Coles Tower two weeks ago face possible suspension from the private Vermont military academy.

The two men, both seniors, will be subject to the decision of the Norwich honor board if a regimental investigation finds them guilty.

Their infraction is considered very serious by the school. Deemed a Class One offense, it is punishable by short term or permanent suspension. According to Norwich Public Relations director Guy Solomon, "the honor court does not take lightly these types of offenses."

Regardless of the University's action, the two students will reimburse Bowdoin College for damage to two fire doors, located on the eighth floor of the Tower. Apology letters from both men were received by campus security and Tower residents on September 24. Nonetheless, they have been instructed not to return to Bowdoin under threat of arrest.

The names of the students will not be released by either school until the Norwich honor board has handed down its decision, according to Bowdoin College Dean of Students Kenneth A. Lewallen. The honor board will convene as soon as all the necessary documents from Bowdoin are received. Norwich students were at Bowdoin the weekend of the incident for football and rugby games. The school does not restrict upperclassmen from attending away games, and Solomon does not think that this incident will prompt the school to restrict freedom in the future.

"Students here are on an honor system," said Solomon, "and they are expected to conduct themselves as officers and gentlemen." However, this incident may serve as "a harsh reminder if the students are suspended."

Minority admissions

(Continued from page one)

Hatten said she attended an all-black high school in Cleveland, Ohio and did not hear about Bowdoin until her senior year. Hatten praised the recruiter who "sold" her on Bowdoin. She urged the Admissions Office to expand the inner-city recruitment program.

Tamara Mallory '90, a panel member, had not planned to attend Bowdoin until she attended classes during her senior year. She said the "personable" atmosphere of the college attracted her to the college.

Dennis Norwood '84 said Bowdoin must give inner-city high school students a reason to come to Maine. He said the college must target students early in their high school years and establish ties with them, in the same fashion as Harvard and Yale. He believes offering high school students high-paying summer jobs and allowing them to "rub shoulders with alumnae" would draw students to Bowdoin.

"We've got to get these kids with potential and attack them during their sophomore year. We've got to give them jobs at NYNEX or in a library for $7 or $8 an hour... Getting these kids here isn't like bringing in logs from the forest. It's more like finding blocks of ice in the desert," said Norwood.

The alumnae and panel agreed the college applicant pool must be changed to target inner-city high schools.

Coming Sept. 29 - Longer Store Hours

WE will open at 9 AM Tues-Fri

and at 10 AM Sat.

Closing times are the same

Upcoming Saturday Workshops:

Oct. 3 - Finishing Techniques and

2 Color Knitting -

Teacher: Pat Clockedile

For more information

please stop in or call

A Likely Yarn

90 UNION STREET

BRUNSWICK, ME 04011

(207) 725-2147

Oct. 17 - Designing - if you can knit, purl, and follow directions, you can design an original.

Teacher is Laurie Doran, formerly a sweater designer for Samuel Roberts and winner of a national award for design.

LOOKOUT POINT HOUSE

Harpwell, Maine

(207) 833-5509

Winter rentals available
Monthly and seasonal
Either inc. breakfast or not

OPEN ALL YEAR

Tontine Hair Fashions

207-729-5475

BOWDOIN STUDENT DISCOUNT
FOR HAIRCUTS
BRING I.D.

78th Anniversary Sale

20%-50% off

Come discover really terrific savings on our new fall collections

Great Finds

From every department - now
20%-50% off

Sale Ends

Columbus Day -
Monday, October 12

The Style ... The Savings

Senter's

124 MAINE STREET • BRUNSWICK • MAINE • 04011 • 725-5558
Shop daily Monday through Saturday 9:00-5:00 • Enjoy lunch in The Greenery 11:00-2:30

Middle Kingdom comes to college

Deng impressed

By ANGELA DAIGLE
ORIENT Contributor

Professor Deng Lin-yu has recently been hired to teach the Chinese language to first and second year students. In Beijing, China, Deng was associate professor of translation at Normal College of foreign language. Deng's forte is translation, and he said his main reason for coming to teach at Bowdoin was "to know better the culture and the language of the American people."

Deng hopes this opportunity to share his knowledge of Chinese will be a benefit to both his American students as well as to himself.

"I like my students. I think they are very hard workers," said Deng. Deng also said he is impressed with the "efficiency, serious attitude towards work and readiness for helping others" exhibited by Bowdoin students.

Comparing the college systems of China and of the U.S., Deng said the most outstanding difference is that in America, "students have a kind of free choice for what they would like to study," while in China, "once they are fixed up in one field, it's hard for them to make a change."

He added that China, "has a lot to learn from American colleges."

Deng Lin-yu

He said Chinese students are capable of making their own decisions. Although Chinese tradition is changing, parents still feel obligated to make decisions for their college age children. He concluded that students, "must have their independence."

Deng said he has adapted readily to his surroundings. He said he enjoys Bowdoin and is pleased to be here. "I like it very much. I didn't expect that it was such a nice place."

During his year at Bowdoin College, Deng said he would "like to try my best to cooperate with my colleagues to set up a Chinese study program and do a good job here."

Li seeks cultural exchange

BY LANCE HICKEY
ORIENT Contributor

Visiting Professor Li Zongjun hopes to expand students' knowledge of the Far East during his year at Bowdoin.

Li, who described the college as "friendly and hospitable," with "wonderful students and a beautiful campus," will be teaching Chinese literature and advanced language courses at the college this year.

In 1947 he finished his studies at the University of Shanghai, and two years later he joined the Chinese army. After this "unforgettable experience," Li started teaching at Shanghai in 1959.

Since then Li has taught Chinese and English literature at both Wuhan University and the University of Shanghai. At Bowdoin, Li's goal is to promote cultural awareness of China among students. He also hopes to learn about American culture firsthand.

He said the college community is like a "close family," and he is struck by the history and beauty of the campus. Li especially admires the "openness" that he feels dominates school life.

"People are questioning everything and discussing different things everywhere," said Li.

Li said he intends to promote this cultural exchange in his classes and in open discussions at any time. He said his "doors are open," and he wants to help the average Bowdoin student understand China better. He feels it is vital to understand classical Chinese to really understand China, because China's important literature is all in classical Chinese.

Li said he is grateful for the support he has received from the Bowdoin community and from all the people involved in bringing him to Bowdoin. Li said he especially appreciates the students who have welcomed him and made him feel comfortable in his new surroundings.

Li Zongjun

Faculty

(Continued from page one)

R. Pemberton, acting director of the program. She said the problem lies in the structure of the program.

While courses in history, anthropology and sociology are adequate for the program, Afro-Am still needs a consistent core of courses. "Economics, English and literature are dismal," she said. "We must create a situation where consistency is possible."

Several panelists cited the leave of absence of A. Lynn Bolles, who is currently in the midst of an 18-month sabbatical. Bolles is the director of the Afro-Am program.

Bolles' absence meant the introductory Afro-Am course could not be taught this semester. According to Acting Dean of the Faculty Craig A. McEwen, the college tried to find a replacement for Bolles, but was unsuccessful. "College curriculum goes where the money goes," McEwen said. "The money hasn't been channelled."

Assistant Professor of Sociology Frank H. Wilson, Jr. responded to a suggestion to start a summer school program for high school blacks to expose them to Bowdoin. Noting the success of such a program at the University of Michigan, he said, "In order to be competitive, we've got to come up with some new ideas."

Levine added, "I hope you do help us make our results better than they have been. Raise hell if nothing happens."

Execs

(Continued from page one) weekly meeting.

Hillhouse announced to the Board his appointments of new members to the Women's Studies Committee during his reign as summer chair. Kim Surkan '90, Lynn Vogelstein '88 and Susan Evans '87 will serve as student representatives to this Committee.

Hillhouse further announced the formation of an interviewing committee to choose two student representatives to serve on the President's Fraternity Review Committee. This interviewing committee under the direction of chair Winter will nominate the two prospective candidates by its next weekly meeting.

In addition to the Fraternity Review Committee, the Board is conducting interviews for a present opening on the Student Life Facilities Committee. Conducting these interviews are Easterly, Makowski and Rouse.

THE
BRUNSWICK

FLOWER SHOP

729-8895
216A Maine St.
Mon.-Sat. 9:30-6

We Deliver

Wire Service

Centrally located across from Bowdoin College

ABRAMS & ANDERSON

IMPROVISATIONAL COMEDY

Sponsored by S.U.C.

Introducing
DRY
RUSH
A campus band!!

Friday
Oct. 2 at
8:00 P.M.
in the NU Dining Room!!

ITALIANS DELIVERED. FREE.

Announcing free delivery service for all Amato's great food.

Amato's in Brunswick will now deliver many of its great menu items. And they'll deliver them free: it's the ultimate in fast, convenient service. Delicious pastas, pizzas, calzones, and dinners and our famous Italian sandwiches with fresh cold cuts, thick slices of plump tomatoes and more are only a phone call away. With a minimum order of $15.00, these and many other of our menu items can be at your door, as fresh and as fast as if you ordered them at the counter.

Sunday-Thursday, 4 pm to 11:30 pm
Friday and Saturday, 4 pm to midnight

So call ahead and enjoy speedy, free delivery from the home of the original Italian sandwich.

THERE'S NOTHING LIKE A REAL ITALIAN.

135 Maine Street, Brunswick
Open 6 am-midnight, Sun.-Thur.; 6 am-1 am, Fri. and Sat.
Call 729-5514 for fast take-out and free delivery.

Beautiful furnished room
for female Bowdoin student
in lovely restored
Colonial home near campus.
729-8616, days
725-8290, evenings

Let's get our heads together...

Downtown
Plaza
Coiffures

Tanning Bed

176 Maine St. Brunswick
(next to Deering Ice Cream Shop)

Phone 725-8853

OPINION

Social needs

Students who live in Appleton, Maine, Winthrop, and Moore halls will applaud this week's announcement that student lounges will be installed in those dormitories. We agree that these lounges will benefit residents of those dormitories, but we also believe that it is an inadequate measure. It is time the college took a significant step towards answering the social needs of the student body.

This fall has seen the college administration take steps which seem to threaten the only institution the college has for socializing on a large scale—the fraternities. This is a decision the administration has wisely chosen to undertake without consulting the student body on a large scale or in a formal manner. The results of the review and how accurately it will reflect the opinions of the entire college community remain to be seen.

Also, the college has not announced plans for the disposal of the Curtis Pool building, which has been replaced by the new Farley Field House. Several groups are vying to reserve the facility or parts of it for exclusive use. We propose that the college not cater to special interests, but rather direct its energies toward developing a plan which will use the building to benefit the entire student body. Make the building into a real student center that can accommodate most, if not all, of the student body.

Currently, the only place on campus that's full on a weekend night, other than the fraternities, is the pub. That's fine. But we also find it curious that a college which says it is making an effort to alleviate a perceived alcohol problem provides no other place for students to socialize on weekend nights than the pub.

If the college wants to remove alcohol as the focus of weekend socialization, it should provide a real alternative to beer parties. The pub is fun, even if you're not 21, but there's no room for 400 or 500 students to dance, hear music, and blow off steam the way they want to at the end of the week. The answer is not lounges in the dorms, but a sizeable recreation hall.

The college may say they have no responsibility to answer the social needs of the student body. We disagree. But if they adopt that position, in all fairness they have no right to regulate the way students socialize.

Furthermore, we believe that the needs of the student body, as a whole, come not only before the needs of special interest groups on campus, but also before those of the faculty and staff. The college exists for us and our education and personal development, not the benefit of the staff or the faculty. Also, staff and faculty go home at night. The vast majority of us live here.

President Geason refers constantly to moving the college into the future. Let's hope he means what he says, and understands what those words really mean.

Letters

Thanks

To the Editor,

I would like to send my warmest thanks to all of Moore Hall for helping me pick my life (and room) back up after a terrible incident that occurred late at night on September 17. The story has it that two people broke into my room and maliciously covered my entire room with the chemical spray from a fire extinguisher.

Luckily I was not asleep or present in the room for these chemicals could have caused serious injury. About $150 of personal items were ruined by the powder, which coated everything from the pages of my textbooks to all of my clothes.

Clean-up seemed virtually impossible. I sat in class the morning after dreading the weekend-long project. I returned to my room in the lowest spirits possible. However, when I arrived my room was close to sparkling clean. About fifteen Moore Hall residents were in my room scrubbing the walls and ceilings, washing the floors and dusting my furniture. I was amazed!

These people sacrificed many hours to help me out. The uplifting part was the incredible attitude that these people worked with. They made the tedious cleaning as fun as it could be. Not only did these people help, but all of Moore pitched in by taking up a collection to lessen the financial losses.

I thank the administration for all their support in getting me back on my feet again. But most of all I thank Moore Hall for supporting me in my time of crisis. You are all great. THANK YOU!

Special thanks to Dick Lindahl, Adam Halem, Dave Callan, Alvin Bugbee, Meredith Sumner, Taka Tsukada, Michelle Campagna, Sarah Clodfelter, Chris Leger, Pam Butler and the rest of Moore Hall.

John Curran '90
Proctor Moore Hall

attendance. Bowdoin is the first Dukakis campus organization in the state and is already forging ahead with an ambitious schedule. The group's activities are intended to educate Bowdoin and the Brunswick area on the Governor's positions on the environment, international trade, and the war in Central America. Plans for the petition drive aimed at bringing Dukakis to Bowdoin capped the evening.

The official "kick-off" of the governor's campaign in Maine is slated for October 12, when Kitty Dukakis, Mike's wife, officially opens the state office in Portland. All are invited to attend.

Cory A. Burns
Press Liaison

Blood Drive

To the Editor

The first Bowdoin blood drive is history, and it is now time to thank those who participated. As has been tradition here in the past, Bowdoin students responded well to the challenge. Our final numbers were 297 people presented, 41 deferred, and 256 full units collected. The Red Cross considers these wonderful numbers, and continues to be impressed by the Bowdoin's enthusiasm. We had a great turnout from the freshman class especially, they deserve congratulations!

I would like to thank all those who donated and encourage them to give again when the opportunity presents itself. I would especially like to thank the M.U. Dining Service, Lynn Ruddy, Physical Plant, Audio Visual department, the custodians, Ralph D'Agostino, and all the great people who helped out.

If anyone is interested, we beat Bate's donations by at least 100!!

Andy Bernstein '88
The Blood Drive Committee

Dukakis Campaign

To the Editor:

While the other campaigns are either folding up or ignoring Bowdoin, Students for Dukakis has organized on campus. At a recent meeting, 25 students pledged support to the campaign. The turn-out impressed Sam Richardson, Maine campaign manager for the "Duke," who was in

Subscribe to the Orient

If someone special to you is a member of the Bowdoin community, what better way to keep up with what's going on in that person's life than a subscription to the ORIENT? Stay up to date on news, sports, entertainment, and the life of a college campus by having the ORIENT sent to your home every week.

For $8.00 a semester or $15.00 a year, you can have the nation's oldest continuously published college weekly delivered to your door. Send check or money order, payable to the Bowdoin Publishing Company, to:

THE ORIENT
Bowdoin College
Brunswick, ME 04011

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

"The College exercises no control over the content of the student writings contained herein and neither it, nor the Administration, nor the faculty assume any responsibility for the views expressed herein."

Lori Bodwell...Editor in Chief

Kevin Wesley...Assistant Editor
Adam Najberg...News Editor
Rosemarie Dougherty...Assoc. News Editor

Tamara Dassanayake...Asst. News Editor
Eric Foushee...Account Executive
Alan Harris...Photography Editor
Mary Ann Lai...Photography Editor
Lizz Millan...Asst. Entertainment Editor

Dawn Vance...Asst. News Editor

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT
Published by

THE BOWDOIN PUBLISHING COMPANY

LORI M. BODWELL ALBERT P. MAURO, JR.

Michael Botelho...Sports Editor
Jack Cahill...Editorials Editor
Susan Lyons...Contributing Editor

Kathryn Nanovic...Production Manager
Justin Prisendorf...Asst. Sports Editor
Stephen Reynolds...Features Editor
Sharon Smart...Entertainment Editor
Michael Townsend...Advertising Manager

Published weekly when classes are held during the Fall and Spring semester by the students of Bowdoin College. Address editorial communication to the Editor, subscription communication to the circulation manager, and business correspondence to the business manager at The Bowdoin Orient, 12 Cleveland Street, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011, or telephone (207) 725-3300. The Bowdoin Orient reserves the right to edit any and all articles and letters. Subscriptions are $15.00 per year or $8.00 per semester. Past issues cannot be mailed. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to The Bowdoin Orient, Moulton Union, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011.

Jews celebrate Yom Kippur

By TANYA WEINSTEIN
ORIENT Staff

Tonight marks the beginning of Yom Kippur for Jews all over the world. The Bowdoin community is invited to join the celebration of this holiday tonight at 8:00 p.m. in Daggett Lounge.

Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement, is the highest of all Jewish holy days. It is the culmination of the 10 day period that begins with the holiday of Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish New Year. These 10 days are referred to as the Days of Awe. It is a time of introspection and deep consideration of one's actions in the past year.

During Yom Kippur, Jews observing the holiday refrain from daily activities, such as eating, drinking, working or going to class. The purpose is to clear one's mind completely and concentrate on introspection.

After realizing what wrongdoings were committed during the year, one looks to family and friends for forgiveness. Josh Bloomstone '89, co-president of the Bowdoin Jewish Organization, said, "The most important aspect of Yom Kippur is that we don't ask God for forgiveness for the bad things we have done, as in other religions, but ask those we have hurt."

During these Days of Awe, it is said there is a Book of Life that is only opened for this time period. Yom Kippur is also known as the Judgement Day. If one truly repents during the 10 day period, on this final day God will inscribe he or she in the Book of Life. It will then be closed for yet another year.

In addition to tonight's program, services will also be conducted tomorrow at 10 a.m. in Daggett Lounge. It is also traditional to end Yom Kippur with a breaking of the fast. This dinner, or break fast will take place tomorrow at 5:30 p.m. in the small dining room in the Moulton Union.

Stuart Weinberg, a rabbinical student from Hebrew Union College, will be conducting the services. He welcomes any questions or comments anyone might have, and encourages all to attend.

Constitution series

The second lecture in the Bowdoin-Bates series in observance of the bicentennial will be presented by Professor Dennis J. Hutchinson of the University of Chicago Law School.

Hutchinson, a Bowdoin College graduate, transferred from the University of Colorado. He received his degree in 1969, summa cum laude, with highest honors in government. He went on to the University of Chicago Law School, but withdrew after one year to become a Rhodes Scholar at Magdalen College, Oxford.

On his return to America, he completed his legal study at the University of Texas. He has served as law clerk to a number of federal judges, including Supreme Court justices Byron White and William O. Douglas. He has taught law at Washington College, Georgetown, Cornell and the University of Chicago.

He has served as a member of the Bowdoin Board of Overseers and is currently serving his first year as a Trustee of the College.

While on campus for the lecture and the Boards meetings (October 9 and 10) he will be willing to advise students about law study and legal careers.

by Berke Breathed
BLOOM COUNTY

Glaznost hits Bowdoin

By ELIZABETH GILLILAND
ORIENT Contributor

Russian television broadcast via satellite will be available for 12 to 15 hours per day for all students next semester.

According to Carmen Greenlee, supervisor of the Language Media Center, the future addition will be a large asset to the present foreign television broadcasts. It will upgrade a satellite system now in place, adding to the number of international programming hours already available.

This new program has been made possible by the Pew Memorial Trust Fund. Three years ago, a satellite was installed and boosted this year in order to pick up the new programs installed four years ago and added to this year. This international satellite is capable of transmitting a series of international programs.

The broadcasts may be viewed in the Language Media Center in the basement of Sills Hall. The times of live newscasts are posted on the lobby bulletin board, and any student may view these programs during the working hours of the media center.

Greenlee pointed out that the foreign broadcasts are not only helpful in language courses, but also in foreign politics classes. She mentioned that the Soviet Foreign Policy class and many language classes are required to watch foreign news broadcasts. Translators are available for those students not fluent in the language.

Broadcasts from 11 different countries are shown on a daily basis. These countries include Ecuador, Chile, Venezuela, Mexico, Japan, Peru, the Soviet Union, France, Canada, Italy and England.

Flowers by Knowles

A large selection of beautiful flowers for Homecoming
Call us!

We offer a complete
florist service.

15 Jordan Ave.

725-2461

FILM, POLITICS & SOCIAL CHANGE IN ASIA

January - May 1988

Faculty from Harvard University and the University of Illinois

Itinerary includes: India
China
Japan
Hong Kong

- travel and work closely with professors
- live with families in each country
- expand intellectual and personal awareness through comparative study in a variety of environments
- 16 credit hours of academic work studying film, politics and social change in Asia

For a catalogue and application contact:

Joan Tiffany, Director
International Honors Program
19 Braddock Park
Boston, MA 02116
617-267-8612

INTERNATIONAL HONORS PROGRAM

JAMES J. MAPES RETURNS presenting

"CHOICES"

The Workshop

WED., OCT. 7th
4:00 - 6:00

BEAM CLASSROOM, V.A.C.

Everyone Welcome
Registration at 3:30
Students $20.00
Public $75.00

ERASE YOUR HUNGER WITH
DOMINO'S
PIZZA

You're back hitting the books again. So let us remind you that there's no better food for thought than pizza from Domino's Pizza.

We'll rub out your munchies with hot, delicious, quality pizza delivered in less than 30 minutes after you've ordered. Nobody can do better than that!

Call us.
729-5561

26 Bath Road Brunswick

Our drivers carry less than $20.00.
Limited delivery area.
©1987 Domino's Pizza, Inc.

DOMINO'S
PIZZA
DELIVERS®
FREE.

Inside view of the new William Farley Field House, to be dedicated Saturday.

Farley Fieldhouse to highlight homecoming

The formal dedication of the William Farley Field House will highlight this year's Homecoming festivities.

The ceremonies which commence at 10:30 a.m. at Pickard Field, will combine both the serious and lighthearted in celebration of the completion of the 61,000 square foot facility.

William Farley, Bowdoin class of '64 and chairman of Farley Industries, will address the audience. Farley will be joined by Olympic champions Joan Benoit Samuelson '79, and Wilma Rudolph.

for aerobics, a reception area, locker rooms and offices.

After receiving his degree in government from Bowdoin, Farley went on to graduate with a degree in law from Boston College. Today, Farley Industries is ranked 259th among Fortune magazine's top 500 corporations. The corporation boasts sales of more than $1.2 billion and assets of more than $1.6 billion. Among the corporations major holdings are Fruit of the Loom, Inc. and Acme Boot Co.

The William Farley field house will officially be christened with a ceremonial lap featuring Farley, Sid Watson, Director of Athletics at Bowdoin, members of the building committee and many others.

T-shirts celebrating the dedication of the field house will be available to the first 100 Bowdoin students at the ceremonies for only $1. More t-shirts will be sold later in the day for $8 with the proceeds benefiting Bowdoin's basketball and swim teams.

After the ceremonies the day's festivities will continue at the Homecoming Luncheon. During the lunch, the Distinguished Bowdoin Educator Awards and the 25th Annual Alumni Award for Faculty and staff will be presented.

Claude B Bonang '52, and S. David Spector '50, will be honored with the Educator Awards in recognition of "outstanding achievement in the field of

(Continued on page two)

By MARSHALL CARTER
ORIENT Staff

A bomb scare caused the evacuation of Appleton Hall yesterday afternoon at 4 p.m. The scare required the assistance of a Navy demolition squad and the Brunswick fire and police department.

The device, which was placed atop a basement soda machine in Appleton, was later discovered to be a harmless smoke bomb, but precautions were taken because of its realistic appearance.

An unidentified caller to Campus Security reported smoke in the basement of Appleton just before 4:00 p.m. Upon inspection, Bowdoin security officer Donald Smith pulled the fire alarm and the building was evacuated. Two fire trucks were the first vehicles on the scene.

The device was carried outside and inspected by Dean of Students Kenneth A. Lewallen, security and fire personnel. Preliminary reports showed that the bomb was constructed of a small alarm clock connected and wired to a fist-size metal box.

The device was then moved to the wooded area between College Street and the Moulton Union and the area was roped off in preparation for the disarmament.

Four experts arrived from the Brunswick Naval Air Station's demolition squad at 4:34 p.m. and began work. Chief Warrant Officer Robert P. Demers examined the device for several minutes before attaching it to a thin nylon cord connected to the squad's truck. The cord was then jerked, and the device flew apart with the force. The pieces were collected, and by 4:55 p.m., the squad determined the device no longer posed a threat.

Brunswick police kept the explosive for further examination.

The box part of the device contained four AA batteries wrapped in black electrical tape, connected to a cigar. Wires ran from the box to the alarm clock.

Dean of Students Kenneth Lewallen described the device as crude, "but enough to cause a scare."

As of late Friday morning, Lewallen said that there were no leads in the case, and that "unless there is somebody—a proctor maybe—who knows who did it, we're not likely to find the person or persons responsible.

Courtship patterns turn topsy-turvy

By RICHARD LINDAHL JR.
ORIENT Staff

"Mating, dating, and relating," rather than "dating, relating, and mating," is the courtship pattern at Bowdoin, according to the consensus of the participants in a discussion sponsored by the Bowdoin Women's Association during lunch Wednesday.

The informal discussion explored the factors that prevent the development of intimate relationships between Bowdoin students. The conversants also talked about what might be done to improve the situation.

The group noted the tendency of Bowdoin students to have either a "marriage-like" relationship with another person or no relationship at all. This seemed contradictory to the feeling of the group that good intimate relationships need to develop gradually.

The group discussed the need for men and women to discard stereotypical sex-roles.

Men often try to live up to the "Miami Vice" image of masculinity, said one woman. Others agreed that men often go to campus-wide fraternity parties with an expectation that they can "scoop" a girl by acting in a very masculine manner. They expect girls to "jump right into" a relationship, observed one participant.

Women also perpetuate sex-roles. A few conferees confided they used a "stupid chick" act to make their ways to the front of the beer lines at fraternity parties.

The group theorized that many Bowdoin men may have become accustomed to having relationships with girls who were not as academically strong as themselves in high school. They are not used to being with women who are just

(Continued on page 12)

Olympian celebrates dedication

By
ROSEMARIE DOUGHERTY
ORIENT Assoc. News Editor

Saturday's dedication of the William Farley Field House will be a celebration of firsts, past and present.

Wilma Rudolph, the first American woman ever to win three gold medals in track in a single Olympiad, and Joan Benoit, Bowdoin graduate and gold medalist in the first Olympic women's marathon, will take part in this first opening celebration and dedication of the new fieldhouse.

Rudolph, who will be the guest speaker at the ceremony, describes both herself and Benoit as "women of firsts." Among their long lists of achievements, both are part of a select group of women recipients of the James E. Sullivan award, the highest amateur athletic honor awarded in the United States.

"It's a gala time. It's a time for celebration... it's a great honor," said Rudolph, who says she will speak on the standpoint of honor, and of pursuing goals, from the experience of her own career.

Rudolph gave up competitive track in 1962 and entered the world of business. She is founder and president of the Wilma Rudolph Foundation, and currently serving as director of the women's track program and special consultant to the president on minority affairs at DePauw University.

The Wilma Rudolph Foundation is a not-for-profit community-based amateur athletics and educational program based at Indianapolis, Indiana. Its goals, in addition to helping young people reach their full academic, character and physical potential, include developing athletes for national and international competition.

Rudolph looks upon the found-dedication as her legacy to children, "to teach them to set goals and how to accomplish them... to make decisions and to realize that they have a choice as to what they do with their lives."

Dedication ceremonies will begin at 10:30 p.m. at the William Farley Fieldhouse.

Wilma Rudolph

William Farley '64

Farley's gift of $3.5 million helped kick-off Bowdoin's capital campaign drive in 1984 and represents the largest gift by a living alumnus in the history of Bowdoin College. The funds have been used towards the completion of the $9 million athletic complex. The facilities includes in addition to the field house, a 16 lane swimming pool, weight training rooms, areas

What do you think of Judge Robert Bork?

By BECKY AUSTIN
ORIENT Contributor

Scott Garfield

"I think he's too strict in the Ivory Tower world where the Supreme Court should have compassion for the real world. He's a bright, smart man, so lacking in human compassion, that it frightens me."

Steven Curley '88

"As president of Young Democrats, I'm passionately against both Reagan's nomination of Bork and how he behaved in front of the committee."

Brett Wickard '90

"I don't think he's conservative enough...ha.ha."

Kevin Daner '88

"I don't think I'd be opposed to him if his sideburns weren't so long."

Bina Chaddha '87

"This country is a democracy and the President should acknowledge that the senators represent the American voices. If Bork were elected, it would be a life-long sentence for the country."

Humanity of Poles called to question

By RICHARD LINDAHL, JR.
ORIENT Staff

Whether or not Poland passed "the test of humanity" it faced in the Holocaust was the question addressed by Visiting Professor of Government Andrzej Bryk in his lecture, "Jews and Poles in the Holocaust."

Bryk, who was born in Poland, has taught at the Krakow University and the Institute of European Studies in Vienna. He will teach at Bowdoin during this semester.

Jews in Poland before World War II "formed a separate, rich civilization," with their own universities, political parties, publications and language. They comprised 10% of the Polish population. Before World War II one-third of the Jews in the world were in Poland. At one point, the Jewish population in Poland totalled over three million, said Bryk.

Bryk said there was a strong anti-Semitism before the war in Poland. The prejudice grew for traditional, mainly religious, reasons, greatly different from the "scientific racism of the Nazis," he said.

Bryk examined the conditions of the Jews and Christian Poles under German occupation and the "relationships that existed between them."

Bryk said, "There was not the slightest chance of saving" the Jews from the Holocaust unless the allies "grasped what was going on" and decided to help "regardless of costs."

The Nazi goal after invading Poland in 1939 was to destroy Poland as a nation, Bryk said. He said they killed three million Christian Poles.

The Nazis built approximately 2000 camps for extermination, (mainly Jews) concentration and labor in Poland during the war. Bryk said this was because Poland was subjugated, cut off from the rest of the world and was home to the greatest number of Jews in Europe. He added that the Germans "did not ask anybody about" the murder of Jews.

No other nation witnessed the extermination of the Jews as did the Poles, "who, living in the hell themselves, were forced to watch the ever lower and more horrific infernal circles," said Bryk.

Only in Poland was helping a Jew punishable by death. Aiding a Jew always resulted in the execution of the benefactor and his family, said Bryk. In Denmark, for instance, the penalty was a fine.

Bryk said between 80,000 and 100,000 Jews were saved by Poles. Bryk answered his own question on whether Poles passed the test of humanity: "No Pole should have the moral certainty or the courage to say yes," except for those who actually aided the Jews or risked their own lives in their sake, he said.

He said the problem of the Polish culture is not complicity with the Nazis; "There was no complicity," he said.

Bryk said, "The moral problem of the Polish mind is the silence after the Holocaust...the refusal to accept the moral guilt for the easy acceptance of the fact that they (Jews) were murdered."

"It was a treason of a very old, intimate attachment," he said.

Bryk said the reemergence of anti-Semitism after the war testifies to the treason.

The fight against Stalinism caused Poles to "draw upon any stream of national tradition," even one as bad as anti-Semitism. "It does not justify that, but it explains," Bryk said.

Bryk concluded his lecture with the story of a Polish peasant couple taking an orphaned Jewish baby to be baptized. Their priest did not allow the baby to be baptized because it "belonged with its own people."

The priest charged the couple with the protection of the child as a Jew, even though it would be more dangerous than keeping a baptized baby.

The priest later became Pope John Paul II.

Bryk said, "There are no more Jews in Poland, but the Poles must remember them. That is why I spoke."

The Baxter Hall Crew walked off with the $100 grand prize from SUC in Wednesday night's Lyp Sync Competition in Kresge Auditorium. The group, fronted by Rachel Dobkin '90 and Kate Hall '90, performed Meatloaf's "Parade by the Dashboard Lights." Photo by Mary Ann Lai.

Clark declares 'food works'

By MARSHALL CARTER
ORIENT Staff

Boston area sports nutritionist and author Nancy Clark spoke at Bowdoin Tuesday night on proper nutrition and its importance in athletics. Clark is director of nutrition services for Sports Medicine Systems, Inc., a private national network of sports medicine clinics.

Declaring to a crowd of about 100 that "food works!," Clark stressed that food is health, and that in this age of often destructive dieting, the value of food should not be forgotten. These days, she said, "there is too much emphasis on calorie counting," and sometimes "athletes forget that food is health." Being physically fit does not mean that an individual is nutritionally sound, she noted.

Clark spoke of four major health problems that exist today. She said that iron deficiency, calcium deficiency, misinformation about carbohydrates, and casual attitudes towards breakfast are important areas needing attention. Too often, people don't make enough of an effort to eat right.

Speaking of the breakfast problem, she said that skipping breakfast can cause the urge for sugar binges later in the day. Many people skip the morning meal because they see it as an easy way to cut out several hundred calories from their daily intake.

The binges that result often consist of more calories of less nutritive foods. Eating properly at breakfast can be a key to controlling weight.

Speaking of the current trend towards less consumption of red meats, Clark said that many people have incorrect ideas about its cholesterol level. Lean red meats do not have a significantly higher amount of cholesterol than poultry, and in fact are much lower than cheese and eggs. Meat, she said has very good nutritive value, especially for iron. She also said that salt is not as harming as commonly thought. It has been shown that large doses do not cause high blood pressure, she said.

Another important aspect of nutrition that Clark dealt with was the timing of meals through the day. "Eat during the day, and diet at night," she said. If a snack is necessary, as it often is for late study nights, it should be kept between 300 and 400 calories. She cited yogurt and unsalted popcorn as good snacks. And if the urge for pizza is undeniable, order it with only cheese and extra thick crust, for its carbohydrate value.

Homecoming

(Continued from page one)
education."

Bonang received his masters at Stanford University and has taught high school biology for 34 years. He is a specialist in marine biology and has been honored by the National Association of Biology Teachers.

Spector was a cum laude and Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Bowdoin before pursuing his master's and doctoral degrees and the Certificate of the Russian Institute at Columbia University.

Currently at Russell Sage College, Spector has also taught at Colorado State University, the State University of New York at Albany, George Washington University and University of Bucharest in Romania. He has written extensively on Eastern European history.

The Alumni Award "for service and devotion to Bowdoin, recognizing that the College in a larger sense includes both students and alumni," will be presented to Paul V. Hazelton '42.

Hazelton received his master's from Harvard University before joining the Bowdoin faculty in 1948. He remained in the classroom teaching English or education until his retirement in 1985.

Currently, Hazelton serves as a member of the Bowdoin Bicentennial Committee working in preparation of the College's 200th anniversary in 1994.

In addition to numerous publications in the education field, Hazelton has served on the Maine Education Council and the Maine Humanities Council. He also received the Distinguished Educator Award from the Maine State Superintendents Association in 1984.

Role of athletics in admissions under scrutiny

By ROBERT WILLAMEY
ORIENT Contributor

In their September meeting the faculty voted to accept a general principle set forth in an Admissions Committee special report on Admissions and Athletics. The principle stated, "Athletic ability assumes too important a role in admissions decisions at Bowdoin and policies need to be established to moderate this influence."

News Analysis

Director of Admissions William R. Mason agrees with the general principle. "I think that for one reason or another over the past four or five years the athletic coaches have had more and more input to admissions and we all feel that it's time to back off somewhat," said Mason. The Athletic, Music, and Art departments all have a system for rating the talent of applicants for admission to Bowdoin. A positive rating from one of these departments gives the applicant a better chance for admission. According to Mason, the Athletic department has traditionally been more rigorous in their usage of the rating system than either the Music or Art departments.

The athletic coaches have the opportunity to review the athletic ability of applicants based on video tapes, past performances, and discussions with high school coaches. They then generate a list of rated athletes which is submitted to the Admissions Office. The ratings can range anywhere from a 3, the lowest rating, to a 1, the highest rating. An applicant's chances of admission are increased if they receive a rating of 1- or better.

Last year twenty-four of the thirty athletic teams at Bowdoin submitted a list of rated athletes. When taking into account the number of multiple ratings (ratings given to a student for more than one sport) approximately eight hundred and fifty applicants were rated out of an applicant pool of some three thousand seven hundred students. Of those applicants rated approximately six hundred and seventy five received a rating of 1- or better.

With such a large number of athletes rated by athletic teams, the faculty feels that the Admissions Office faces an additional burden in choosing a well rounded class. It is estimated that an athletic rating of 1- or better gives an applicant twice as good a chance of admission over the non-rated athlete.

There are more serious implications to the Admissions Committee's report. In addition to evaluating the significance of an athletic rating, the committee also investigated the academic standings of those applicants who received a rating of 1- or better both before and after their matriculation at Bowdoin.

According to Stephen T. Fisk, associate professor of Mathematics and a member of the Admissions Committee, the investigation was prompted by faculty concern over a small minority of athletes whose academic performance showed a considerable disinterest in the curriculum. The faculty find that this disinterest leads to a less than desirable classroom atmosphere.

The report has shown that in almost every category of academic ability, whether high school class rank or SAT scores, applicants that have received an athletic rating have demonstrated the lowest ranges of ability.

The report has also shown that of the students wait-listed all had academic standings in these categories that were higher than those of some of the rated athletes admitted. These statistics have led some members of the Admissions Committee to believe that there has been a lowering of the academic standards for the college.

According to Fisk, "What we are trying to do is get the best students who will contribute the most to the college as an academic institution. We, therefore, would like to choose people at the top of the ranks. We are choosing people who are marginally able to do the work and contribute absolutely zero intellectually to the college. (They) detract from it, clearly detract."

Daniel Levine, professor of history and chairman of the Admissions Committee, expressed his belief that a small minority of students whom admissions otherwise would have rejected are being accepted to the college solely on the basis of their athletic rat-believes however, that having athletic teams that can compete on the same level of other small schools like Bowdoin is also a part of the college's role in preparing young people for life after Bowdoin.

"Athletic sports teach the right decision-making process is very complicated. The process does not rely on a grand formula but on the impression an applicant makes on his staff.

Academic ratings are the most important criteria for determining whether an applicant is qualified for admittance. Mason says that applicants fall into three groups. The first group of applicants is admitted immediately based on their superior academic record, while another group is rejected based on this same criterion. The remaining applicants form a middle group who vary in their academic standings but are thought able to compete in the college's curriculum.

An athletic rating is only one of many factors that help in separating these applicants. Other factors include race, geographic location, artistic ability, and alumni relations to name a few. It is a combination of these factors that will determine whether a student is accepted or not.

The report clearly shows that there is a small percentage of athletes admitted to the college that fall into the lower academic portion of their class at Bowdoin.

"Athletic ability assumes too important a role in admissions decisions at Bowdoin and Policies need to be established to moderate this influence."

Admissions Committee
Special Report

ing. He would like to see this small minority of applicants replaced by students with better academic standings.

The report has raised a number of concerns among members of the Bowdoin community. Until the Admissions Committee formulates policy guidelines regarding the emphasis of athletic ratings the future of athletics at Bowdoin is uncertain.

The absence of policy guidelines has given rise to a number of rumors. Some students fear that the college is in the process of abolishing intercollegiate varsity sports. While such rumors lack foundation, the possibility exists that the athletic standings of some teams could be affected depending on the direction of the new policies.

Sidney J. Watson, Director of Athletics, is concerned that new policies might take away the coaches' ability to rate prospective athletes. Without the ability to rate applicants coaches lack the means to let the Admissions Office know of promising athletes. Without the rating coaches cannot get the most competitive teams.

Watson agrees that the large number of rated athletes has put an undue burden on the Admissions Office and feels that steps need to be taken to rectify this. He way and the wrong way of competing. The competitive spirit that is developed in athletics is carried over into the person going out in the working field," said Watson.

The new policies may also have an effect on the Admissions Office and the way admissions decisions are made. According to Mason the

Sarah Lawrence College At Oxford

An opportunity for qualified undergraduates to spend a year of study in the Oxford educational tradition, centering on tutorials and a seminar with Oxford faculty.

For information and an application contact:
Sarah Lawrence College At Oxford
Box BCB0
Bronxville, New York 10708

Now ... at Macbeans Music

COMPACT DISCS

... well over 1,200 of the
12,000-plus now available

If you don't see what you want,
let us get it for you

(That goes for

LPs, Tapes and Videos, too.)

Maine's most enterprising Record Shop

The Tontine, 149 Maine St.
Brunswick, Maine 04011 • (207) 729-6513

Columbus Day Sale

30% Off Entire* Store

Main Street
Freeport, Maine

* does not include 1st quality 1987 Fall merchandise and accessories

Beach blanket tango at the Gulf of Maine. Photo courtesy of Leonard and Lawless.

Maine's Greenwich Village

Having hauled half their stock up to the Maine Common Ground Fair the previous weekend, Beth Leonard and Gary Lawless have been reconstructing their bookstore Monday afternoon. It's six thirty at night and the truckload of books remaining unsold from the fair are essentially back in place on the store's shelves and cardtables. "The fair provides a custom made clientel," says Lawless, "We sell more books there in one weekend than we will sell here in a month."

"The fair has become more mainstream though since it started eight years ago—there's no more strip shows for one thing."

New York has Greenwich Village. San Francisco has the Haight-Ashbury. And Brunswick has the Gulf of Maine Books.

The alternative to the 7-11 convenience bookmart, best represented by B. Dalton and other shopping mall book barns, the Gulf of Maine features Lawless and Leonard's personally selected stock. Lawless emphasizes the small press chapbooks and literary magazines, Leonard cites women's studies, women's literature, and African-American studies. Both joke, "We sell books that don't sell."

Lawless, sitting on a stool, has a wild frizzy beard and wire-rimmed glasses. Leonard, behind the counter, wears a bandana around her head. On a superficial level one could label them eighties' hippies or nature children and, as stereotypes go, be dead wrong. The two project a lightly cynical attitude towards New Ageism — "The term 'New Age' is largely a marketing device," says Leonard — and, if it means anything, attended the Ramones concert at Bowdoin last spring.

Leonard and Lawless operate their own small publishing company, Blackberry Press, with the same attitude that manages the store — selecting material that they like regardless of its current popularity or projected income potential. The press's name comes from when Lawless was an apprentice poet to Bay Area writer Gary Snyder. "Because we both had the same first name, things were getting confusing," says Lawless, "we asked his son, who was eating a bowl of blackberries at the time, what we should call me. It's also my pen name."

Blackberry Press primarily printed xeroxed chapbooks of poetry, including Lawless's, and short stories. One of the chapbooks, Back Then Tomorrow, by Peter Blue Cloud was reviewed nationally. Annoyed by a hillbilly pick-up truck driving image Maine had acquired from popular fiction in recent years, Lawless and Leonard decided to publish several out of print novels that they felt accurately described Maine life. Leonard photographed the cover art for the books — The Maine Islands by Dorothy Simpson, Spoonhandle by Ruth Moore, and The Weir. Although the authors and titles are from the forties and unfamiliar today, Leonard says, "the books deal with topical issues such as coastal problems and land grabbing." With a press run of 1500, the books have been distributed chiefly in the New England; somehow a few books ended up in Samoa, says Leonard, where they sold surprisingly well.

Lawless, a Colby graduate, and Leonard, a Brunswick native, started into the book business working at Bookland at Cook's Corner. "Bookland provided training," says Lawless, "I learned who the publishers are, how to select stock, basically how to run the store. Bookland's computerized buying formula eventually cramped our style."

The two first opened a store adjacent to Bowdoin in 1979. Displeased with the facility itself — it had no heat among other things — and a lack of business, they moved to their present location at the end of the downtown area near route one. "When we moved in, there were seven empty store fronts and no sidewalks," says Lawless.

"We revitalized this part of town," says Leonard, "after we moved in the natural food store and some restaurants opened."

As the west end of downtown grew, Brunswick made sidewalks for every store except the Gulf of Maine. "For a year we had a sand front while everyone else had a sidewalk," says Lawless. In the spring of 1982, they organized a "public action" or beach party on their sandy store front which created a traffic jam. Leonard points out that the Portland papers covered the event, while the Brunswick Times-Record failed to find the beach blanket tango newsworthy. Nonetheless, a sidewalk was promptly installed.

Plastered with political posters, a picture of Reagan doing moneyshines, and advertisements for concerts and lectures, the Gulf of Maine's window introduces the selection inside — Beat poetry, Feminist literature, underground comics, Existentialist works, New Age material, and Environmental information.

Regarding the recent popularity of New Age awareness — Shirley MacLaine, crystal power, Harmonic convergences, reincarnation — Leonard and Lawless view most of it as trendy but, amidst all the garbage, find a substantial base. "We have a friend who can predict these trends," Leonard says, "Is it fire walking or channeling this week? we ask. We can base our stock from his answer."

"Most things have roots in a legitimate cultural base," Lawless says. "Both of us take shamanism seriously," says Leonard, "and lately this past year its become a New Age trend."

When printing their books, the Blackberry Press does not use recycled paper. "The chemical wastes created by recycled paper," says Leonard, "are more toxic as compared to new paper."

Besides selling books, the Gulf of Maine is the headquarters for Lawn Ornaments, a rock and roll band in which Lawless plays base. Lawless didn't change his name for either rock and roll or book-selling; his father was police chief Lawless of Belfast, Maine and his uncle was judge Lawless.

In a scrapbook of newspaper clippings, Leonard has pulled out pictures of other rock groups associated with the Gulf of Maine. Concert photos of Janis Joplin, Elvis Costello, and the English Beat are taped to the album's pages — all the with caption "Benefit concert for the Gulf of Maine."

—Stephen Reynolds

Gulf of Maine, 61 Maine Brunswick.

Left: Leonard and Lawless inside the Gulf of Maine. Right: Greenwich Village. Staff photographer.

Rare book revelations from the Old Mystic

By STEPHEN REYNOLDS
ORIENT Features Editor

Published in 1628, Sir Walter Raleigh's History of the World is a massive leather bound book filled with charts and diagrams of the world as viewed through Elizabethan eyes. It has a presence sitting among other books at the table—unlike a ripped calculus workbook neglected in a library carrel. History, romance, the mysterious, all that stuff associated with anything ancient seems to radiate from this tome.

Charles Vincent, owner of the Old Mystic Bookshop, ignores Raleigh's call from the past and flips through American Book Prices Current, doing the business of rare bookseller not ancient book romanticizer. An earlier fire damaged edition was last sold at an auction for $200. Vincent, seeing the report, says, "Price depends on whether or not the right number of illustrations are still intact among other things."

With one swift remark, the mid-eighties Vincent dispels the fallacy of the old curio shop; one would like to perceive a used bookshop as a time machine but Vincent impresses that selling books is primarily a business. "Over the years, I wish I could have kept a few that I enjoyed owning—ones that I bought for $100 and sold for $4000. But you have to eat once in awhile."

Graduating from Clark University, Vincent later fought in World War II in Europe. In 1950 he opened the Old Mystic Bookshop in Old Mystic, Connecticut, a location he kept until his retirement and subsequent move to Brunswick last spring. Vincent liquidated his stock in Connecticut, selling 25,000 books to "a fellow from Rhode Island just starting out—he got a good general stock."

Operating out of his home now with a condensed selection, Vincent opens his doors by appointment only. Books overflow an enlarged breezeway, spilling into the house and study. "There's no sense in buying paperbacks," says Vincent, "the idea is to get something that collectors value or is a rarity." One example, Vincent sold Churches of New England, published in Boston in the early eighteenth century, for $1600. "The real rarities show up very infrequently. Once I got called in to look at a load of books minutes before they were to be dumped. I rushed over and found a first edition American Navigator.

about reporters' delusions of the rare book business rivaling some of his customers. Throughout the interview, he has dropped names of magazines and papers covering him during the past thirty years. "They always want to know the most valuable book I have," he says as he looks through a scrapbook filled with newspaper clippings, "they bring in the photographer and tell me to hold a book or map—what else would they his cat runs down the hallway. After five minutes Vincent comes back into the study. Another book dealer had called asking for Vincent's advice concerning a recently acquired atlas parchment. "You can't know everything," he says. A large network of book-dealers throughout New England and the rest of the states not only trade and sell books between them, but also refer to each other for information. "There is an

the place, very dreary and industrial. But that's where the books are." Canada, especially Toronto, has also provided prospectful territory for rare books. The biggest source, however, are estate sales or anyone wanting to get rid of books "sitting in an attic."

Most books are not worth much, in a monetary sense, to Vincent. He only bothers to keep the first edition of Jack London's Call of the Wild, discarding any reprints. "All books are worth a dime, the paper they're printed on," he says, "until someone wants to buy them. It's all supply and demand." Valuable books do not always need a famous author to guarantee a good price. "Certain books are showing up all the time—Thatcher's books for instance. You could throw the author out with the garbage, but a few people value the book's construction itself, the leather, the embossed covers..."

The interview is nearly over, and despite his concentration on the financial work end of the business, his love (though perhaps trite, only this phrase can adequately describe the attitude) of books is obvious. He will not forthrightly tell his favorite reading material, but surrounds his response, "Dickens, detective stories, Agatha Christie books, usually English authors", with disclaimers such as "everyone has their own idea what a good book is." He has periodically dropped in short comments on the satisfaction of discovering a good book among boxes of dusty paperbacks. "I know as good book when I see it. After awhile in the business you acquire a certain instinct."

It's time to take a picture and as Vincent rises out of his chair he asks, "Want me to hold a book or something...I feel comfortable with them I guess. How about if I just stand next to this bookcase and point?"

Charles Vincent—Books Hours: year round, by chance or appointment. Stock: rare antiquarian books and collectibles.

Charles Vincent. Staff photographer.

Never expected to find that; if I was just starting out, I would have never recognized it."

Vincent repeatedly affirms that rare books live up to their name. Fidgeting with the cellophane wrapper off a cigar

Vincent says, "A lot of people come in with a box of books claiming anything published before 1820 is worth a fortune. This is never true."

Still twisting the cellophane around his fingers, Vincent talks have me do. They don't understand the business part."

A close friend of his and author, Stephen Jones, wrote an extensive article celebrating the used book shop when Vincent closed his Connecticut store. Vincent is proud of the story, constantly referring to it, but still has reservations. "He had a poetic license. I have one cat and he said nineteen."

The phone rings. Vincent walks into the kitchen to answer it and awful lot of bookdealers in Maine, probably more than in Massachusetts and Connecticut. I don't know why this is so; this is where the books are."

Rare books predominately came from England, collectors would travel there to hunt and deal for material, but that source has recently dwindled. Vincent formerly went to England twice a year. "I would go to places like Birmingham. You ever been there? No tourists want to visit

W
I
T
H
T
H
E
R
E

Sing'n the Basin Street Blues

By KEVIN WESLEY
ORIENT Asst. Editor

After two years of rebuilding, the 1987-88 Meddiebempsters are singing right in tune.

The Meddies, Bowdoin's male a cappella singing group, are touring extensively in New England, hope to make a record, and want to reestablish their reputation after two shaky years.

"I sense that this year will be better than ever," said Michael May '88, who is singing with the group for the fourth year. May, who also serves as business manager, thinks the group has the vocal talent to make the Meddies strong.

"I'm interested this year in having a great sound, not a good sound," May said. "I sense that this year will be better than ever."

Five of the nine Meddiebempsters are returning this year. They include Peter Douglas '89, Jay Gibbons '88, May, Dave Fogler '90 and Brad Miller '88. With the exception of Fogler, the returnees have each sung at least five semesters together.

The Meddiebempsters '87. Photo courtesy of Mike May.

Gibbons serves as musical director this year, while Douglas is sergeant-at-arms and entertainment director.

Douglas and Miller will be leading the bass section, while May sings second tenor. Fogler and Gibbons both voice first tenor.

(Continued on page seven)

Meddiebempsters gather for 50th anniversary sing

Acting on a bet with a professor, Geoffrey Stanwood '38 organized a double quartet in 1937. The group soon became better known as the Meddiebempsters and in the fall of '87, fifty years later, celebrates its fiftieth anniversary.

This Homecoming weekend approximately 150 of 225 living Meddiebempster alumni will reunite in Morrell Gymnasium. "We hope to have a party of a more public nature," says event organizer Don Snyder '50, "The alumni will split up into six groups of years. Each group will sing about four songs, giving a total program of about an hour and a half, and conclude with current undergraduate group."

Over the course of fifty years music has changed—and the Meddiebempsters have little in common with the Rolling Stones, Sex Pistols, and Menudo. "It's good. Good music, good singing," says Stanwood of the Meddiebempsters' lasting appeal. "It's the joy of singing, the group brings joy."

"Everything gets electrified when the group performs."

The Meddiebempsters have always been self directed. "The group really exists or fails on their own merits. It's a curiosity to me how well the group keeps doing. Bowdoin has no glee club, no choir, no great singing tradition;

it's amazing that they're continuing," says Snyder.

Snyder was with the group when it went on its first overseas tour to occupied Germany in the summer of 1948. The Meddies had played in Washington the previous spring where the Army heard of the group and invited them to tour command stations in Germany. "At first we weren't sure if we could go; we would be forgoing summer jobs. The governing boards came up with $100 bucks for each of us, though," says Snyder. The group chiefly performed for military audiences, including a concert in occupied Berlin.

Snyder also participated in making the first Meddiebempster record. The group had finished playing at Princeton. They had a recording studio with early tape recording machines," says Snyder. The 78 r.p.m. record came out in 1950 and was distributed at commencement only, receiving no local distribution.

Peter Race '52 has compiled a extensive history of the Meddiebempsters, Songs and the Young Men, covering the group's fifty year history; it will be on sale at the reunion concert.

Looking forward to the reunion, Stanwood says, "The singing will be the best part. All ages can't wait to get into it with the other ones."

Goodbye Kent State:we're going to roast Bork

Students, collecting signatures against Robert Bork's nomination to the Supreme Court, camp outside the Moulton Union. Approximately six hundred signatures were gathered at the Union two weeks ago according to Rachel Dobkin '90. Photo by Alan Harris.

People are going to puke if they read another article reminiscing the '67 Summer of Love, sixties' political consciousness, and Sergeant Pepper on compact disc. Meanwhile, Oliver North and Robert Bork testify before Congress and displace T.V. game shows. The media gives no mercy.

This fall, politics at Bowdoin has been divorced from Rolling Stone magazine and NBC news. Just one of several political oriented activities this year. Students handed out flowered armbands in the Moulton Union Tuesday morning to show unification against Bork's nomination to the Supreme Court.

A part of National Student Protest Day, the dispersion of armbands occurred with similar demonstrations protesting Bork across U.S. college campuses. Rachel Dobkin '90, one of the event's several organizers from the Women's Resource Center, says the demonstration "raises consciousness of Bork; it makes the community aware of the threat to individual rights Bork presents."

During the planning meeting the preceding night, everyone had an opinion on Bork for the Orient reporter. As fast as markers scrawled out posters screaming "Roast Bork" in pink magic marker, facts and opinions about the Court nominee quickly shot into the room. "Bork is anti-women, anti-civil rights, anti-children, anti-affirmative action, and anti-privacy," said Dobkin. "Bork believes in original intent," said Lynn Volgelstein '88, "this kind of view of the constitution puts women's suffrage and black rights in jeopardy..."

"His image that's so scary is one of a professor, he's wrapped up in complete intellectual mind games."

"If the Constitution was a cut and dry document we wouldn't need a Supreme Court," said Dobkin, "but it isn't. He goes about interpretation in a very anti-human way. The only people that could possibly support him are rich white men."

"What happens today to the Supreme Court is more important than the Iran-Contra hearings," said Volgelstein, "Reagan can control the Supreme court for the next thirty years. There's a difference between conservative and reactionary; Bork is beyond right wing."

Earlier in the semester, the group collected approximately six hundred signed post cards requesting Maine senators to vote against confirming Bork. "It's strange for such a stereotypical conservative campus," says Dobkin.

Amy Carter protested against the C.I.A. before she got the boot from Brown. So is it hip to be radical? "I don't think it's cool," says Volgelstein. "It's fun and I'd feel like a real ... on a log if I didn't [protest]," adds Dobkin, "It's my rights that are getting abused."

—Stephen Reynolds

Protesting Bork. Photo by Alan Harris.

Execs appoint fraternity review members

By DAWN VANCE
Asst. News Editor

The Student Executive Board approved the Student Activities Fee Committee's proposal of allocations for the 1987-1988 academic year at its Tuesday night weekly meeting.

Chairman of the SAFC Cindy Heller '88, presented the committee's proposal of allocations for the upcoming year to the Executive Board at its opening meeting on September 30, 1987. After reviewing these budget appropriations Tuesday night the Board found no reason to veto.

Heller, however, did request the formation of a joint SAFC/Executive Board Committee to investigate the nature of organizations presently applying for SAFC funding. She suggested that many organizations seeking funding would better fall under the jurisdiction and sponsorship of various academic/administrative departments rather than the SAFC.

Heller and Exec Board member Andrew Winter '89 will serve as co-chairmen on this committee. Board members George Hillhouse '88 and Suzanna Makowski '90 will also serve on this committee, as well as two other representatives that SAFC has yet to appoint.

Winter announced the Exec Board's nomination of Scott Milo '88 and Anne St. Peter '89 as prospective representatives to the Presidential Fraternity Review Committee. The Board voted unanimously to appoint Milo and St. Peter to represent the student body on this committee.

Member Jason Easterly '90 apologized to the Board for erring in his selection of candidates to serve on the Student Life Facilities Committee. Easterly reported his selection committee had mistakenly chosen two representatives to fill the one vacant seat.

"I'd just like to apologize for my error and to say that I realize the consequences," said Easterly.

Easterly informed the Board he had requested that President of the College A. LeRoy Gresson allow his appointment of two students to this committee, but that he had not yet received an answer. Therefore, the Board approved Easterly's suggestion that he postpone formal nomination of candidates until the Board's next weekly meeting.

Easterly, himself, will sit on the Student Life Facilities Committee when the Governing Boards of the College convene on Friday afternoon.

During the Exec Board's open forum Adam Najberg '90 requested that the Board look into the possibility of the athletic department providing transportation for students wishing to study karate in Bath.

The athletic department sponsors physical education classes in karate, but only at the introductory level. The course is designed to prepare students for the advanced classes taught in Bath. Any students wishing to progress past this level must travel to the instructor's karate school in Bath to continue with lessons.

Najberg informed the Board he had brought up the matter with the athletic department for transportation at the end of the fall '86 semester. As of yet, however, the athletic department has taken no action.

Acting as an onlooking observer, Scott Milo found no support for Najberg's request. Said Milo, "I just think it's wrong because of the precedent that might set."

Despite member Joe Gulino's '89 argument, "Do you think the college has a responsibility to support your interest?" the Board decided to adopt a course of action to fulfill Najberg's request. The Board's Administration Services Committee under the direction of Easterly, Karen Feeley '90, and David Spohr '91 will approach the athletic department on Najberg's behalf.

Also during the open forum SAFC member Kevin Wesley '89 brought an issue concerning organization charters to the Board's attention. Wesley informed the Board that the Constitution of the Student Assembly requires organizations with FC-2 and FC-1 charters to appear on the quad at Student Organizations Day to solicit new members. Not only did some such organizations not appear on the quad but they have also not approached SAFC for funding.

These organizations include War Games, the Fencing Club, Students for Peace in Latin America (SPALA), and The Growler. Wesley suggested that the Board review the charters of such obviously inactive organizations.

In response Hillhouse informed Wesley that the Board normally does not revoke charters until charter review at the end of each semester. Until that time the Board will take no action.

In other business, the Russian Club and the Bowdoin Recycling Group both appeared before the Board to request upgrades from FC-3 to FC-2 charters. The Board will consider these requests at its next weekly meeting.

Students for Dukakis for President under the direction of Zachary Messite '90 and Stephen Curley '88 also appeared before the Board to petition for an FC-3 charter. Messite informed the Board that his organization is not seeking SAFC funding but rather for the privileges that recognition as an organization entails - a mailbox and the right to use meeting rooms.

The Board will consider this FC-3 request at its next meeting.

Execs and SAFC form liaison

By DAWN VANCE
ORIENT Asst. News Editor

This year's Student Activities Fee Committee (SAFC) encountered a slight problem when drawing up its September Budget Appropriations. Due to a lack of available funds SAFC found it necessary to cut the budgets of every campus student run organization.

After adding up all of the student organizations' requests and accounting for additional spring and/or year appropriation requests, SAFC found itself faced with the necessity of cutting $35,593 from the total amount requested. This amounted to approximately one-third of every organization's budget.

The SAFC began its budget appropriations by reviewing each organization's budget and making cuts where the requests did not fall under the realm of the organization's charter or fell more to the jurisdiction of another department. SAFC then proceeded to systematically cut honorariums and extremely expensive food events.

Faced with the realization that it must continue to cut funding, the SAFC voted to cut every organization by 15%. This excepted those organizations already at the minimum possible limit for existence.

In a cover letter to the Executive Board when it presented its proposal of allocations for the 1987-1988 academic year the SAFC apologized for these budget cuts. "This year's budget proposals were well written, creative and demonstrated detailed long range planning. We wish we could fund all organizations at their initial request but the SAFC budget is not infinite."

The SAFC has set aside $13,050 for additional funding throughout the year. These reserve funds, however, do not serve as a buffer for unexpected charter upgrades and activities. Therefore, the SAFC has appealed to those organizations funded before September 24, 1987, which were not subject to a budget cut for monies, to create a necessary buffer.

The organizations to which the SAFC has appealed for money include the Student Union Committee (SUC). In compliance with the SAFC need for a buffer, SUC has returned $4500 in allocations.

This lack of available funds may stem from the fact that many organizations presently appealing to the SAFC for funding might better fall under the sponsorship of another academic/administrative department. Said Chairman of SAFC Cindy Heller '88, "There are a lot of organizations coming to us for funding which don't seem to fall under us but more to respective departments...funding is going to get cramped with everybody's budgets."

Heller suggested the formation of a liaison between the SAFC and the Executive Board to investigate the nature of organizations appealing to SAFC for funding. A committee headed by Heller and Exec Board member Andrew Winter '89 will take up this matter.

College kicks off United Way campaign

By ROBERT WUILLAMEY
ORIENT Contributor

The Bowdoin faculty has once again begun its United Way fund raising campaign. After a very successful campaign 1986 year, which raised $18,800 from 47% of the Bowdoin community, the committee feels confident that the modest increase to $20,000 and 50% participation will easily be met.

The Bath/Brunswick chapter of United Way is a community resource that provides funds and assistance to local non-profit organizations. As part of this community Bowdoin does what ever it can to see to it that the United Way fund-raising campaign is a success.

Many of the organizations funded through United Way play a large role in the volunteer organizations on campus. The Red Cross and the Bath/Brunswick Child Care Services are only two of the organizations that benefit from the United Way and involve Bowdoin students.

This year the fund-raising committee expects to see increased participation from the entire Bowdoin Community. Richard A. Mersereau, Director of Public Relations and chairman of the committee believes the student body will take a more active role in the fund-raising with the addition of William Fruth to the committee.

Fruth, who is the Student Activities Coordinator, has already met with student groups in an attempt to organize activities that will be both fun the student body and profitable for the campaign. Dome activities that were conducted last year and are being considered this year are the Battle of the Bands, the IFC College Bowl and the Dance Marathon.

Meddies

(Continued from page six)

Auditions were held both last spring and at the beginning of the school year. One member was added before the end of last year, while three were added this fall.

The strong core of veterans has been augmented by freshmen Jody Condra, a second tenor, and bass Scott Stephens. Upperclassmen Keith Paine '90 and Ethan Lovell '89 are both singing baritone this year.

Due to organizational problems last semester, the group was unable to tour. This year, however, May has planned a week-long trip starting this weekend. The entourage will travel through New Hampshire, Vermont, New York, Connecticut, and Massachusetts. On the trip, the Meddiebemps will sing at UVM, St. Lawrence University, Vassar College and the Wellesley School of Sexually Frustrated Women.

The group hopes to cut a record in December, especially since Douglas will be studying away next semester. Other plans include a Halloween concert at Mt. Holyoke College and a tour of Maine high schools.

"When it all comes down to it," May continued, "it's how you sound. It's strange how much the mental attitudes affect the sound."

COOKS

Put the spice into your career as a Cook with Sizzler. We're looking for seasoned professionals to provide the leadership and expertise that will ensure high quality and efficiency. If you have experience as a short order cook, we can offer you the opportunity to grow with a leading restaurant chain that's setting trends in the industry.

We offer an outstanding compensation and benefits package and excellent working conditions. Come in and fill out an application today.

Cooks Corner
Brunswick
11:00 - 7:00
October 13-16
Sizzler
Steak • Seafood • Salad
Equal Opportunity Employer

BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed

ENTERTAINMENT

Look homeward Bears: Homecoming '87

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 23, 1987

NO. 19

Anonymous Donor Gives $2 Million, Coles Reveals At Homecoming Lunch

Value Of Senior Center Program
Cited By Symposium Lecturers

Donor's unique Senior Center Program was praised by several of the nation's leading musicians and educators at the recent Symposium on Undergraduate Education here.

Dr. Nerval Sadoun, Director of the Institute for the Study of Human Problems at Stanford University, was the keynote speaker at the Symposium cosponsored by the College and reported that the hope that the Center would become "a model and a catalyst for others."

Capital Campaign Facts

Recent Last June
Deadline: Two Years
Goal: $10 Million

Present Total: Over $1.5 Million
Progress: Better Than Expected
For This Early Date

Largest Gift Ever

A gift of more than two million dollars to Bowdoin's recent Capital Campaign from an anonymous donor was announced Saturday by President Colles at his evening dinner to honor the annual Alumni Day luncheon.

It was the largest single gift ever received by the College, and the announcement of it was greeted with a tremendous burst of applause from its hosts of alumni present for Homecoming weekend.

The gift, from a Bowdoin alumnus, represents more than one fifth of the College's $10 million goal to erect its academic program and improve its physical plant.

In an interview on Monday, President Colles said that current plans call for construction to begin on the Senior Center later this month, and that the gift would probably be completed by then.

Theme of Homecoming To Be Folk Singing

The Student Union Committee announced this week that the Brandywine Singers with Carolyn Hester will be the star attractions at this year's Homecoming Weekend.

Both the Brandywine Singers and Miss Hester will combine to present a two hour program of folk-music which is scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m. on Saturday, October 17.

Tickets for the folk concert went on sale yesterday at the Union Bookstore at an advanced sale price of $2.00 per person.

Starting October 7, advanced sale tickets will also be available from the members of the Student Union Committee.

The price of tickets at the door will be $2.50.

The "Button Down Folk Music" of the Brandywine singers stems from the "melodic format and their 'buttoning down' of a fresh new harmonic approach to folksinging."

The group prides itself on its ability to play any common stringed instrument and is fast growing in popularity in college entertainment circuits.

Texas-born Carolyn Hester is one of the rising talents in the folk music field. TIME magazine said that she "has looks and the gift for appearing as if she were delivering the Truth every time she steps up to the microphone."

A superb guitarist, the versatile Miss Hester can currently be heard on the critically hailed Columbia Album "This Life I'm Living" and as a guest artist on the Columbia Legacy Series "The Badmen."

Homecoming in 1962 was remembered in the Orient (top) with the announcement of a $2 million gift and the start of construction of the Senior Center. The anonymous gift was the single largest gift received at that time. Tomorrow, the college dedicates the William Farley Fieldhouse made possible by an $3.5 million gift.

The spirit of the sixties was in full swing in 1964 (left) as folk songs provided the theme for Homecoming weekend.

By
TAMARA DASSANAYAKE
ORIENT Asst. News Editor

"Don't you remember how the smoke of autumn leaves burning on the campus paths used to smell at this time of year? Walk in and renew your youth. Come back to Bowdoin for a day!" urged the 1928 Alumni Day announcement. Hundreds of Bowdoin alumni will be answering the call of the past today for the first of this year's 'big' events, Homecoming.

Each year, since its inception in the Fall of 1924, Homecoming (or Alumni Day as it was called) has been a time not only of gaiety but also of retrospection and recognition of all those who have been, and indeed still are such an integral part of Bowdoin.

A time for laughter, conditioned by traditions and memoirs of the past. By all accounts, this year will be no exception.

The highlight of this year's Homecoming will be the dedication of the Farley Field House by three-time Olympic gold medalist Wilma Rudolph. The opening of the new athletic complex, an impressive statement of the generosity of Bowdoin alumni to their alma mater, is the latest in a tradition of important announcements made during this weekend.

The very first Alumni Day, on November 1, 1924 was initiated because it was felt that "large numbers of alumni should come back at least once a year when the College is in full swing" said the invitation.

About 300 alumni gathered in Memorial Hall (Pickard Theater) for luncheon to hear Dr. Donald B.

McMillan '98 give an "admiral speech in keeping with the pre-game enthusiasm, which the chapel bell was bringing near the boiling point," reported the Orient.

The "game" in question was the highlight of the day, a Bowdoin-University of Maine home football game. A record number of spectators almost 8000 turned out for the game, making it the biggest game ever played in the State of Maine at the time.

For many years the "game" remained the highlight of Alumni Day. For many years there was also a pre-game rally the night before during which Bowdoin men marched through Brunswick wielding torches and finally congregated on the quad to hear speeches by administrators, coaches and captains. To many returning today, the rallies and the game will remain as fond memories.

Homecoming has also been a time for generating the continued support of the alumni. In October 1962, President of the College, James S. Coles announced in "an emotion filled speech" the donation of $2 million by an anonymous donor. The money was a contribution to a $10 million capital campaign.

Two years later, the Senior Center (now Coles Tower), one of the components of the campaign was dedicated at Homecoming.

More recently the present capital campaign was boosted in Fall '84 by the announcement of $3.5 million gift of William Farley '64 towards the construction of the new athletic complex.

This weekend, three years later the college will proudly dedicate the new facility.

Hooters rock out

By MICHAEL TOWNSEND
ORIENT Concert Critic

In support of their recent album, One Way Home, the Philadelphia-based band the Hooters is making a tour of college campuses. Their travels brought them to Maine Tuesday night, where they entertained a small but vocal crowd in Colby College's Wadsworth Gym. For those who made it to the campus of our archrivals, the show was well worth the trip.

Positive, a late replacement, opened the show with a rather uninspiring selection of songs. After a lengthy delay, due to minor technical difficulties, the Hooters took the stage with a rousing version of their present hit, "Satellite." Like most of the Hooters' songs, it is upbeat and catchy, thus setting the tone for the whole evening.

The Hooters are widely acclaimed for their ability to incorporate unusual instruments into their performance, and they did not disappoint anyone on this night. Guitarist and vocalist Eric Bazilian picked up the recorder for a memorable version of the traditional hymn "Greensleeves," which led into another recent hit, "Johnny B."

Another highlight was Bazilian and guitarist John Lilley playing mandolins on a daring cover of the Beatles classic "Lucy In The Sky With Diamonds." Keyboardist

Rob Hyman was impressive on the accordion on several songs as well. Most notable, however, was the presence of the melodica, affectionately known as a hooter, from which the band derives its name. The instrument, a lung-powered keyboard with a distinctive sound, was utilized throughout the evening, especially as the band wound up with "Day By Day" and "And We Danced," much to the crowd's delight.

After a short break, the band returned to the stage for three encores, including their hit, "All You Zombies." They also chose to play two songs from their little-known debut album, Amore. Most of the crowd departed after this, but the band returned with shouts of "We never said anything about leaving!" They ended the night rather anticlimactically, playing a trio of lesser-known songs to a crowd which had dwindled to only a few hundred.

The crowd was kept small in part due to a tour schedule that has the band playing at the University of Maine and the University of New Hampshire in the near future. Nevertheless the Hooters managed to put together an extremely energetic and lively evening of music. This concert solidified Colby's recent hold on the best campus concerts in Maine, a title further strengthened by the pre-concert announcement that INXS will appear at Wadsworth Gym on November 7.

Free-lance composer-painter Stephen Montague will present "The European New Music Scene 1987," a multimedia lecture/recital illustrated with slides, Monday, Oct. 12, at 12:30 p.m. in Room 101, Gibson Hall. A native of Syracuse, N.Y., Montague has lived in London since 1975 and has performed in Europe and the United States. He has received commissions for compositions from the National Endowment for the Arts, the British Arts Council, the Sadler's Wells Royal Ballet, and London's Almeida Festival. He has also done a great deal of work with electronic music at Stanford University, in Belgium, and in Paris. The public is welcome at no charge.

Yoygoi I

Graphics exhibit

Two exhibitions opened at the Bowdoin Museum of Art last Friday: "Hot Off the Press: Graphics of the '80s," a survey of American and European prints produced in this decade; and an exhibition of landscape and still-life paintings by Kevin Donahue, visiting assistant professor of art.

"Hot Off the Press," which draws largely from the Museum's extensive collection, highlights the extraordinary diversity and creative vitality of contemporary printmaking. The show features approximately 40 prints by leading graphic artists, including Robert Longo, Jennifer Bartlett, Elizabeth Murray, James Rosenquist, Georg Baselitz, Barbara Kruger, Red Grooms, Pat Steir, Francesco Clemente, and Lucien Freud.

"The graphic arts in recent years have experienced a dramatic revival, surpassing even the 'golden age' of the 60s," according to John W. Coffey II, Museum Curator. "Today, prints are no longer considered secondary media, after painting and sculpture. More artists than ever before are turning to prints, creating images and applying techniques learned in other art media. They produce prints which often combine radical expression with a traditional attention to craft."

Donahue's landscapes feature elegantly painted vistas of France, Italy, New Mexico, and Maine. Accompanying the exhibit is an illustrated catalog.

Both shows will continue through November 22.

The Masque and Gown will present Henry IV, Part I on Friday and Saturday at 8:00 p.m. in Pickard Theater, Memorial Hall. The play is directed by A. Raymond Rutan, director of the theater. Admission is $2.50 for the general public and free with a Bowdoin I.D.

DA addresses war crimes

Elizabeth Holtzman, district attorney for Kings County, Brooklyn, N.Y., will deliver the 1987 Spindel Memorial Lecture Sunday, October 11, at 7:30 p.m. in Daggett Lounge, Wentworth Hall.

Her address, "The U.S. Government and Nazi War Criminals," is free to the public.

Prior to becoming the first woman district attorney in the history of New York City, Holtzman served in the U.S. House of Representatives for eight years. Her work as a member of the House Judiciary Committee led to the so-called Holtzman Amendment, which provides for the deportation of Nazi war criminals who entered the United States illegally. At her urging, a special unit was created in the Justice Department to investigate charges of Nazi war crimes made against U.S. citizens.

A magna cum laude graduate of Radcliffe College, Holtzman received her law degree from Harvard University.

The Harry Spindel Memorial Lectureship was established in 1977 by the gift of Rosalynne Spindel Bernstein and her husband, Sumner Bernstein, in memory of her father, as a lasting testimony to his lifelong devotion to Jewish learning.

Chama River

THE ORIGINAL "TRIPLE LOBSTER PLATE"

$14⁹⁵

(only served at)

ESTES LOBSTER HOUSE

833-6340

ROUTE 123, SO., HARPSWELL
(not confused with Bailey Island)

AND
THE TASTE OF MAINE

443-4554

ROUTE ONE, WOOLWICH
1/2 mile north of Bath

Bowdoin Steakhouse

Serving dinner

from 5-9 Sun-Thurs
5-10 Fri & Sat

Serving Lunch 11:30-2 Mon-Fri

"Wishing Polar Bears a good year"

115 Maine Street, Brunswick

(207)725-2314

76 UNION STREET BRUNSWICK CORSICAN

The Corsican
Welcomes Returning Alumni and Future Alumni.

We've got the best pizza in town.

SIT DOWN OR TAKE OUT.

The Amato's Pasta Special,
every Monday and Tuesday.

Try the Amato's Pasta Special, delicious spaghetti or ziti and our own homemade meatballs and tomato sauce, with fresh bread on the side.
A fantastic meal at this special price:

$2.49

Monday and Tuesday only

THERE'S NOTHING LIKE A REAL ITALIAN.

135 Maine Street, Brunswick, 3 Main St., Gorham
Open 6 am-Midnight, Sun-Thur: 6 am-1 am, Fri. & Sat.
Call 729-5514 for fast take out.

Homecoming W.

Friday, October 9

3:30 pm — Women's JV Soccer vs.
University of Maine/Farmington.
Pickard Field.

7:00 pm — The Alumni Swim Meet. New athletic facility. For men and women swimmers.
Spectators welcome.

7:00 pm — The AIDS Show.
Sponsored by Bowdoin Gay and Lesbian Alumni. Smith Auditorium.

8:00 pm — Masque and Gown production of Henry IV, Part I.
Pickard Theater. Admission $2.50 general public, free with Bowdoin
I.D.

8:00 pm — midnight — Informal socializing at Cram Alumni
House.

8:30 pm — Taylor Mason, ventriloquist, comedian, and pianist.
Kresge Auditorium.

Photo by Lori Bodwell

Saturday, October 10

9:00 am — Society of Bowdoin
Women reception. Kate Douglas Wiggin Room, Cram Alumni
House, 83 Federal Street. Refreshments. Open to all.

9:00 am — Admissions Workshop.
William R. Mason '63, Director of Admissions, and Walter H.
Moulton '58, Director of Student Aid, offer information for sons and daughters of alumni who are of college age. Parents welcome.
Mitchell Room of Wentworth
Hall.

9:30 am — Fun Run. Alumni, students, faculty, staff, and their families are invited to run. The three and five mile courses begin and end at the new athletic facility. Prizes and refreshments.
Registration outside the new athletic facility, Pickard Field, at 9:30 a.m.

9:30 am — Faculty Lecture.
"Brunswick and the American Renaissance: The Bowdoin College Museum of Art as Form and Symbol." Linda J. Docherty, Assistant Professor of Art and Dana Faculty Fellow. Walker Art Building.

9:30 am — Faculty Lecture.
"Problems and Opportunities in the Maine Woods: The Challenge of Multiple Use Forest Policy."
David J. Vail, Professor of Economics. Conference Hubbard
Hall, second floor.

Main Street,
Freeport
865-4196

Noted under landlord
Jameson for its quality spirits
and excellent cuisine,
we aspire to an old tradition.

Steaks • Seafood
• Cocktails

Light meals in the Lounge
Banquet Facilities

Map 4 No. 97

Serving
Dinner
from
5-9 p.m.

Sunday
Dinner
noon-
8 p.m.

Casual Country Dining
with homemade soups,
breads and desserts

Reservations Recommended
Rt. 123, Harpswell Center 833-5305

Weekend Calendar

Sunday, October 11

10:30 pm — Dedication of the William Farley Field House, Pickard Field. Wilma Rudolph, three-time Olympic gold-medalist, is the guest speaker.

11:00 am — Women's varsity field hockey vs. Tufts. Pickard Field.

11:00 am — Women's varsity soccer vs. Tufts. Pickard Field.

11:30 am — Women's varsity volleyball tournament. Morrell Gym.

1:00 pm — Women's JV Field Hockey vs. Hebron Academy. Pickard Field.

1:30 pm — Football vs. Tufts. Whittier Field. (Informal reception to follow football game. Music by the Royal River Philharmonic Jazz Band. Cram Alumni House.)

After the game until 6:00 pm — Informal reception at Cram Alumni House. An opportunity to chat with Roy and Polly Gresson and the Alumni Award recipients and their families. Music, beer, cider, and soft drinks provided under the tent. BYOB.

8:00 pm — Masque and Gown production Henry IV, Part I. Pickard Theater. Admission $2.50 general public, free with Bowdoin I.D.

8:00 pm — Meddiebumpsters' 50th Anniversary Sing. Cabaret style. Morrell Gym. Refreshments provided.

8:00 & 10:00 pm — Weekly Weekend Films. Diner. $1 admission. Smith Auditorium.

10:30 am — Alumni Field Hockey Game. Pickard Field.

10:30 am — Alumni Soccer Game. Pickard Field.

10:30 am — Alumni Tennis Match. Pickard Field.

12:00 pm — JV Football vs. Maine Central Institute. Whittier Field.

2:00 pm — The Chinese Music Ensemble of New York will perform "An Afternoon of Chinese Folk Music." Founded in 1961, the ensemble now features more than 30 members and a repertoire that ranges from ancient classical music to folk music of diverse regional styles. Kresge Auditorium. Sponsored by the Asian studies program with support from the National Endowment for the Arts.

3:00 pm — Gallery Talk. "Hot Off the Press: Graphics of the 80s." Mark Wethli, Associate Professor of Art. Walker Art Building.

7:30 pm — "The U.S. Government and Nazi War Criminals." The Harry Spindel' Memorial Lectureship. Elizabeth Holtzman, district attorney of Kings County, New York. Daggett Lounge. Free to the public.

Photo by Lori Bodwell

Photo by Dave Wilby

KEGS
729-0711
LOWEST PRICES.
OFFERED BY ADVANCE RESERVATION.

Cask and Ken

26 Bath Road, Brunswick, 729-0711 Mon. Sat. 10 to 6

BEHIND COLES TOWER

the Samuel
Circa 1821 Newman
House

7 South St., Brunswick, Me. 04011
For Reservations, call (207) 729-6959

BED & BREAKFAST

Tontine Fine Candies

Have you tried our chocolate pizzas?

Large and Small sizes
Looks like the real thing...
tastes like something special!
A really neat gift!
We are in the Tontine Mall

LOOKOUT POINT HOUSE
Harpwell Maine
(207) 833-5509
Winter rentals available
Monthly and seasonal
Either inc. breakfast or not
We welcome Christmas and
Holiday functions.
OPEN ALL YEAR

KRISTINA'S
BAKERY RESTAURANT

Everyone's favorite for Breakfast,
Lunch & Dinner

Deliciously different menus
Delectable pastries
Friendly atmosphere
Outdoor dining in Summer
Fine wines, beers, specialty coffees
Cocktails

Open 7 days a week
at the corner of
Center & High St.,
Bath, Maine 04530
(207) 442-8577

NEW FALL/WINTER HOURS — OPEN MONDAYS

HARPSWELL INN
RESTAURANT

ROUTE 123
NORTH HARPSWELL
MAINE
(207) 729-1210

MAJOR CREDIT CARDS
ACCEPTED

COUPON GOOD FOR 10% DISCOUNT

EFFECTIVE MONDAY OCTOBER 11th

Sunday Brunch 9am - 2pm
Monday and Thursday 5:30 - 8:30pm
Friday and Saturday 5:30 - 9:00pm
Closed Tuesday and Wednesday

BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed

Dating

(Continued from page one)
very competitive.

Bowdoin's size and competitive character were also noted as contributors to the poor environment for relationships.

The group thought students may be hesitant to enter relationships because "people like their privacy." At Bowdoin any two people have a great chance of seeing each other every day. If two people take the time to gradually build a relationship, they will very likely be observed together. The "gossip factor" then enters the picture.

One woman commented, "If two people are seen talking together at a party, it is almost immediately assumed they are a couple."

The highly competitive nature of Bowdoin students also adds to the unfavorable relationship environment. Students make academics their priority, so they have no time or energy to develop a relationship or be a part of other people's lives.

Therefore many men and women "store up" their "Friday and Saturday night libido" and look for one-weekend relationships.

Differing expectations from relationships is another problem. Some people may be "looking for the ideal mate," while others dread the "C-word": commitment.

The thought was expressed that some men truly want commitment in a relationship. The widespread belief that all men want one-weekend relationships could be explained by the possibility that those men are but a small number sought after by many women.

The lack of places on campus to meet people was discussed. An incident was related in which a woman walked among the library shelves pretending to look for a book just to meet someone. Incidents like this, the group thought, occur because the practice of dating has virtually fallen into oblivion at Bowdoin.

Members of both sexes tend to count on fraternity parties as activities for the weekend, and thus do not bother to make dates.

When women do ask men out for dates, they often wonder if positive responses are on account of sincere wishes to know them better or if the men are "just being polite."

The conferees discussed ways to improve the male-female situation. They thought more lounges and other areas for students to congregate near their living quarters would encourage people to get to know each other during the week.

It was noted that administration responses to the problem, such as Andrea Parrot's lecture on intimate relationships, received great response from women but extremely little from men.

"The few men who go to those things are the ones who don't need to," stated one participant.

Not all MBAs are created equal.

Often, the better the business school, the better your job opportunities.

So to increase your chances of getting into your first-choice school, call Kaplan. Enrollment in our GMAT prep course has more than quadrupled since "MBA fever" struck 10 years ago.

As a bonus, our GMAT prep includes refresher math lessons and business school admissions information.

Call Kaplan. In the business of business school prep, we have no equal.

KAPLAN
STANLEY H. KAPLAN EDUCATIONAL CENTER LTD.
DON'T COMPETE WITH
A KAPLAN STUDENT—BE ONE

Acc the Jan. 23 GMAT
Portland class starts 11/15

Call collect (617) 964-TEST

Alumni/ae, Parents, Students, and Friends are invited to a screening of

The AIDS Show

Time: 7 pm October 10

Place: Smith Auditorium

hosted by

Bowdoin Gay and Lesbian Alumni/ae

Bowdoin Gay and Lesbian Alumni/ae (BGALA) is a network of gay and lesbian alumni and friends that is organized to promote the interests of gays and lesbians in the Bowdoin Community, and to foster a greater understanding between lesbians/gays and all other members of the college community.

For further information, contact
BGALA c/o Rebic, 1641 Third
Avenue, 19J
New York, New York 10128

At last—a generation has found its voice.

Two years ago, Bret Easton Ellis's first novel, Less than Zero, became a nationwide sensation. Hailed as "electrifying" by Publishers Weekly and "exceptional" by The Los Angeles Times, it established its twenty-year-old author as a major new voice in American fiction.

Now that voice speaks again, even more compellingly than ever. In The New York Times Book Review, Scott Spencer describes THE RULES OF ATTRACTION as "maybe the first exposé of what really goes on in the coed dorms we've heard about."

"Ellis is sympathetic to his 'lost generation' the way only Fitzgerald was about his." —Elle

THE RULES OF

ATTRACTION

A NOVEL BY

Bret Easton Ellis
Author of LESS THAN ZERO

SIMON AND SCHUSTER
A DIVISION OF

SPORTS

Polar Bears dethrone Lord Jeffs, 29-7

By ERIC PALMQUIST
Orient Contributor

When the Amherst Lord Jeffs stepped onto Whittier field last Saturday, they were confident of victory. They were coming off a 17-0 win over Bates, facing a Bowdoin squad which had fumbled away a 28-14 game at Trinity and had been victorious in their last six meetings against the Polar Bears. However, they were unable to move the ball against a stingy Bowdoin defense which picked off four passes and thus lost handily to the Bears, 29-7.

The story of the day for both teams was defense as the offenses mustered only 25 first downs leading to a total of thirteen punts. The difference in the game was the Bears' ability to make the big play, both offensively and defensively.

The tone of the game was set in the first quarter when Bowdoin quarterback Ryan Stafford rolled to his right and hit Mike Cavanaugh for a 64 yard touchdown pass. In the third quarter Stafford again found Cavanaugh for a big gain, this time on a 63 yard play that set up a field goal putting the Bears up, 9-0. Though Bowdoin completed only four other passes the rest of the day, this production was all they needed as the defense shut the Lord Jeffs out until the final play.

There was more to the Bear offense than just two long passes, however. Running back Greg Bohannon once again rushed for over one hundred yards, this time gaining 116 on 24 carries. His biggest play was a four yard touchdown run early in the fourth quarter that forced Amherst to turn to the air where the Bowdoin defense was at its best.

The Bear defense did more than just stop the Amherst air attack. They also turned it around for two scores of their own. Cornerback Ken McLaughlin, who against Norwich had saved the game with an interception on the goal line, picked off a pass and returned it 72 yards for a touchdown icing the Bowdoin victory. Mike Burnett then turned the game into a rout as he intercepted a pass and took it eight yards in for the score.

The Bowdoin defense was outstanding as they sacked three Amherst quarterbacks four times, picked up five turnovers, and held the Lord Jeffs to only nine completions in 36 attempts for a dismal 3.5 yards per pass. Leading the charge were defensive end Scott Wilkin, who recorded two sacks and five tackles, and linebacker John Ollis, whose ten tackles gave him the team lead. Middle guard Ed Daft and cornerback Nelson Lebo also played a big part in helping the Bears shut down the Lord Jeffs offense.

Bowdoin's running attack blasts the Amherst line wide open on route to a crushing victory. Photo by Lori Bodwell.

However, the Bears continued to have trouble holding on to the ball fumbling five times. They also were caught for eleven penalties amounting to 90 yards in losses, a figure that more than doubled their season's output.

Bowdoin will look to correct these problems when tomorrow they face yet another tough opponent in the Tufts University Jumbos, winners of nine straight games over the last two seasons. They are led by junior fullback

Tim Fanikos, who has rushed for two consecutive 200 yard games out of the wishbone formation. It will be a difficult test for the Bear's defense, but if history repeats itself Bowdoin should have a good shot at upstaging their opponents. The Jumbos have not won at Whittier field since 1968.

Men's soccer loses a close one to the Lord Jeffs. Bowdoin is now ranked fifth in New England Division III. Photo by Dave Wilby.

Soccer loses to Amherst

By TOD DILLON
Orient Contributor

Sunday afternoon was marked by rain and the first loss of the season for the men's soccer team. Amherst College proved to be a bit too strong for the Polar Bears as they dropped a 1-0 decision on a drenched Pickard Field. Tuesday the Polar Bears rebounded and ended up on the other side of a 1-0 game against Maine Maritime Academy.

The match-up between Bowdoin and Amherst, the 5th and 4th ranked teams in New England Division III coming into the game, was heated from the outset.

Neither team could manage to gain total control of the game although Amherst appeared to have the upper hand. Coach Tim Gilbride commented on the first half of play, "Both teams played very well in the first half, it was very close." He added that Amherst was the best opponent the Bears had faced this season.

The Lord Jeffs lived up to that assessment as they came charging out in the second half of play. The constant attack paid off as the visitors finally converted on the only goal of the game. Gilbride said of the second half on-slaught, "Amherst came out at us for the first fifteen to twenty minutes of

(Continued on page 15)

By MATT SAMUELSON
Orient Staff

The Bowdoin women rugger got down and dirty in the mud against Colby last weekend. However, Colby women are apparently capable of lower and dirtier deeds for they defeated Bowdoin in a hard fought 8-0 game.

Plagued by injuries, the Bowdoin women could only muster one full team to face Colby's two. The Colby women then maneuvered some pretty powerful strategy playing their B side in the first half only to have their A team shamelessly attack the tired Bowdoin women in the final half.

Minor injuries also piled up during the game making the struggle even harder. Sophomore Kristin Pula was pulled down with a knee injury on Saturday and Zard Snodgrass '89 took a hit to her nose. Although Colby was held off for the entire first half, with less experienced ruggers to replace the two downed Bowdoin women, the mules gained the upper hand with two tries in the second half.

Commenting on their performance, Bowdoin women's captain, Meg Hausman said, "There were lots of bruises, but, we played more as a team than in the past." Next week, the women play away at Bates. Hausman promised it to be a good game.

Bowdoin men's rugby annihilated Colby 28-0 in the A game and 9-0 in the B game. Men's captain, Andy Palmer commented that, "Colby just came into the game a little cocky."

During the week preceeding the Colby match-up, the Bowdoin team underwent true honing of their skills. A member of the Portland A's assisted the All-Blacks in perfecting their rucking ability. Palmer stated, "We're now playing second phase rugby. That's what blew them away."

Everyone was in the highlight this week. Among the six or seven tries, Randy Finn ran with the carnal power of a madman, pushing a try through from midfield. Brian Feriso also demonstrated raging power again this week, as well as Morgan Binswanger, Scott Erlenborne and Matt Tierny. Tim Devaney also performed to perfection in the line outs.

In the B game, Bowdoin ruled again. Senior Jim Barter played with amazing skill, completing a try, after which the conversion kick and the field goal upheld the final score to 9-0. And Nick Peay performed at scrum half with adeptness.

Overall, captain, Andy Palmer stated that the Bowdoin All-Blacks, "...dominated every aspect of the game."

The women's rugby team battles the more experienced Colby Mules. Photo by Alan Harris.

Kent Lawson, a student at Northeastern University, is at Bowdoin this semester as part of the Northeastern athletic training program. Photo by Asaf Farashuddin.

New trainer-in-training

By MATT LONDON
ORIENT Staff

Injuries and sports are an inseparable couple. Combatting injuries at a school like Bowdoin, where athletics is such a major part of campus life, is no easy task. That's why the Bowdoin athletic training program was so happy to get the services of Kent Lawson.

Lawson is not a professional trainer, though. He's a student at Northeastern University, who is in the third year of a five year athletic training program. As a part of the program, students take semesters off from the classroom and go to co-op schools where they get the experience helping training staffs like Bowdoin, which had taken Northeastern students the last four years.

Lawson himself didn't choose to come to Bowdoin. Rather, it was his adviser at Northeastern who suggested coming here, and it seems it was a good match.

"I really like it here. At Northeastern there were five thousand people in a class, here I can get to know everyone," he said.

While he works and travels with the men's varsity soccer team, Lawson also has responsibilities with football, women's soccer and field hockey, and more generally attends to any injuries that come his way at the infirmary, both his workplace and home for the semester.

"He's done an excellent job. He's sort of taken over here and he knows our system very well," said assistant trainer Denise Aloia, who has been Lawson's mentor in training and fitness matters while at Bowdoin along with head trainer Mike Linkovich.

It wasn't always going this well for Lawson, however, who said that when he first came here in early September he was very nervous about his new responsibilities. Since those initial concerns have left, Lawson said that he has gained a lot of confidence.

At games Lawson said that he always has to be watching the action to see if someone might be injured, because in many instances players won't want to come out of the game.

Besides working with the athletes during the games and after injuries, Lawson does a lot with them before and after games, taping ankles and administering to other problems.

"The best part of training for me is doing something when players are hurt and then seeing them go back on the field to play. Like if I help a soccer player, who was injured, and then he goes out and scores a goal, that is a real good feeling. It's satisfying," he said.

Lawson finishes his stay at Bowdoin, December 15, but he said, "I would like to come back if they let me."

It certainly seems that Bowdoin would.

By TONY JACCACI
ORIENT Contributor

The Women's Varsity Soccer team increased its record to 5-0-1 last week as they defeated Wheaton college and Colby college. The undefeated Polar Bears are currently ranked second in Division III will face Tufts university, currently ranked fourth, tomorrow in what may prove to be their toughest game to date.

Bowdoin faced Wheaton college last Friday at home and beat the Wheaton squad by the score of 2-1. Bowdoin played aggressively and the offense played especially well. During the afternoon, the Polar Bears would take an amazing 42 shots on the Wheaton keeper.

Although the team had problems putting the ball into the net, the offense took more shots which coach John Cullen attributes to the forwards' learning to play as a unit. He stressed, however, that the offense still tends to rush plays. If the offense can play with a little more composure and concentration, the shots will start going into the goal.

Wheaton scored the first goal of the game with only 20 minutes gone. When the Bowdoin defense failed to clear the ball from the penalty box, a Wheaton forward took a pretty side-volley from about 20 yards out that flew into the right hand corner of the goal. The Polar Bears took the goal in stride and came storming into the second half. It took Bowdoin a mere minute to score the equalizer.

Sophomore Karen Crehore beat the Wheaton left fullback and then drew the Wheaton sweeper back. Crehore then chipped the ball to freshman Christine Neill who one-touched the ball into the net. Bowdoin's second goal came with only one minute left in the game when Sue Ingram '88 made a "carbon copy" of Crehore's earlier play. Drawing two Wheaton fullbacks to her, Ingram chipped the ball to Crehore who broke through the other two defenders and buried the ball in the net.

The Polar Bear defense played a strong game and had a relatively easy day for Wheaton did not "have the firepower to match up one-on-one with Bowdoin" stated Cullen. An encouraging sign for the squad was the return of co-captain Joanna Dewolf '88 who had been side lined due to an injury. Dewolf returned to the team and played very well on defense.

Women's soccer undefeated

The Women's Varsity travelled to Colby college last Wednesday where they soundly defeated Colby by a score of 5-3. The game was played in a heavy downpour which had transformed a poor field into a mud pit. The Polar Bear offense deluged the Colby goal with shots and the majority of the shots were on net.

Bowdoin's first goal came 18 minutes into the first half when Christine Neill took a through ball from Karen Crehore at midfield and found herself with a breakaway. When the goalie rushed out, she tapped the ball past the sprawling net-minder into the corner of the net.

Bowdoin's second goal came early in the second half on a corner kick from sweeper Suzanne Garibaldi '90. Garibaldi crossed the ball to Junior Jennifer Russell who trapped the ball and then smashed it into the upper corner. After Bowdoin's second goal, Colby's defense began to open up and the Polar Bears took advantage of their frantic play.

Bowdoin scored its third goal when Senior Tiffany Poor picked up a loose ball about 10 yards from the Colby goal and sent the ball to a higher calling. Poor's goal was quickly followed by a beautiful goal by Freshman Sara Russell. Russell took the ball on the left hand side of the field with her back to the net. She turned and fired at once, sending a rocket into the lower left hand corner of the Colby goal.

Colby was not going to be shut-out however and picked up two quick goals, as if to make a come-back. Christine Neill would have nothing of this and scored her second and Bowdoin's final goal. She worked a give and go pass with sophomore Liz Brown and then took a shot which hit the right hand side of the goal. Colby would score once more, but the Polar Bears clearly dominated the game and returned home with a 5-3 victory.

Coach Cullen was very pleased with his team's performance, especially in the horrible conditions. He was also pleased that he could allow many players into the game, stating that he wants all of his players to have significant playing time for the game situations "down the stretch".

Christine Neill has been playing very aggressive soccer and it has been paying off lately as she is leading the Polar Bears in scoring with six goals. Cullen states that she certainly "has a nose for the net". Karen Crehore is also playing very well for the Bowdoin offense while Suzanne Garibaldi is dominating the back field for the Polar Bears. The entire team is playing controlled, intelligent soccer and this has been quite visible in their games as Bowdoin is able to move the ball with ease. Despite several close scores, Bowdoin has yet to face a team which they have not totally dominated.

STOWE TRAVEL

MID COAST MAINE'S MOST COMPLETE TRAVEL AGENCY

A TRAVELERS NATIONAL NETWORK AGENCY

- GROUP TRAVEL SPECIALISTS • BUSINESS ACCOUNTS
- INCENTIVE TRAVEL • CRUISES • AMTRAK • AIRLINES
- VOR CASSETTE TRAVEL LIBRARY • VALATION PACKAGES
- GREYHOUND • WESTERN UNION
- $150,000 AUTOMATIC FLIGHT INSURANCE

"ALL SERVICES AT NO EXTRA COST"

725-5573

8:30 - 5:30 DAILY
9 - 2 SAT. (SUMMER)
9 - 4 SAT. (WINTER)

9 PLEASANT ST. BRUNSWICK

Call toll free in Maine 1-800-522-9990

SUGARLOAF
GIVES YOU A RUN
FOR THE MONEY...
56 IN FACT!

A STUDENT SEASON PASS
is the best ski deal around. Buy now ... ski a lot and save a lot!!
Only $250 with purchase before 10/31/87 for a full season of skiing. Contact your campus representative today!

Your representative is:

John Bellows
Ext. 3825

sugarloaf/usa
Carrabassett Valley
Maine 04947
207-237-2000

BIG RED Q PRINTING

next to the College

- stationery
- resumes
- posters
- newsletters

212E Maine Street
Brunswick
729-4840

YOUTH BASKETBALL SUPERVISOR

The Brunswick Parks and Recreation Department is accepting applications for Youth Basketball Supervisor. Will be responsible for the program planning and supervision of the various grade levels of boys and girls. Must be knowledgeable about the game and interested in working with youth. Average of 12-15 hours per week beginning mid-November through mid-March. Including a few late weekday afternoons, early evenings and all day on Saturdays. Pay rate $4.75-$5.00 per hour.

Applications available at:
PARKS AND RECREATION DEPARTMENT
30 Federal Street
Brunswick, Maine 04011
(207) 729-0114

Office Hours: Monday-Friday, 8:00 a.m.-4:30 p.m.
Application Deadline: Friday, October 16, 1987.

EQUAL OPPORTUNITY EMPLOYER

Water polo rallies for victory

BY BONNIE BERRYMAN
ORIENT Contributor

The water polo team began its season with a tournament at Bates this weekend. The result was two resounding victories over Bowdoin's biggest rivals, Bates and Colby.

The Bears played their first game Saturday against Colby. They won quite handily, 16-6. The team never trailed, leading 6-1 after seven minutes of play. Goalie Rob Tisdale, also president of the water polo club, was very pleased with the team's performance. "Everybody got the chance to play," he commented. "We began with the starting players, but the freshman and back-up players got a good chance to play too."

After the victory over Colby, the Bears went on and defeated Bates, their other opponent. The margin of victory was again wide, the final score being 17-8. At first the Bears encountered a fair deal of difficulty. The team trailed 3-1 after the first quarter. Overcoming the deficit was little problem though, as Bowdoin once again regained a substantial lead in the second quarter, which they never lost. As with the game against Colby, all of the players received the chance to play.

"We began with our starting team," Tisdale said, "but the Bates players were not as strong as we thought they were going to be." Good defense, speed, and "outswimming the other team" were the reasons cited for the victories.

The Bears take a 2-0 record to Amherst this Saturday for another tournament. They face the likes of other strong teams such as Dartmouth and Williams. If the first two games are any indication of the team's potential, Bowdoin should be in good shape this weekend.

Photo by Dave Wilby

Men's Soccer

(Continued from page 13)

the half and took advantage of it." Bowdoin attempted to mount a comeback, but it was to no avail. Gilbride expressed satisfaction, though, with the play of the team.

Tuesday's game proved to be a test for the Polar Bears, both mentally and physically. With only one day of rest and lingering memory of Sunday's defeat remained to be seen whether the team would perform. However, all doubts were dispelled as Bowdoin controlled a tough Maine Maritime squad.

Stathis Manousos scored Bowdoin's lone goal at 33:14 of the first half on a pass from Chris Garbaccio. That would be all that was needed as the defense rose to the challenge of a fierce attack by the hosts. In net, Will Waldorf turned aside five shots to record his second shutout and Bowdoin's third of the season. The season. Bowdoin outshot Maine Maritime, 17-5, but Gilbride said he was worried about getting out of Castine with the win. "In the second half we were tired and they were playing hard... it was a hard win."

With the split of this week's games, the Polar Bears stand at 5-1 on the season. Even with the loss Bowdoin is still ranked 5th in New England and hopes to move up still further.

coming league meet. Things are looking up as long as we can stay healthy."

The women runners did not fair as well in Saturday's meet. Facing stiff competition from both Bates and Colby, the women finished not far behind Colby's 45 points for a strong third place, posting a score of 51.

Bates maintained its first place standing in the division with 31 points. USM is still out on the course, finishing fourth with 107 points.

Co-captain Deanna Hodgkins '89, and Marilyn Freddy '91, finished in fourth and fifth place respectively in the final standings, while freshmen Jenny Snow, Kim Dirlam, and Bev Halliday all offered strong performances.

Co-captain Rosie Dougherty, '89, finished 12th overall and third for the team. Dougherty said after the race, "We're getting closer to Colby."

BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed

TAYLOR MASON

• VENTRILOQUIST • COMICIAN • MUSICIAN

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 9th at 8:30 p.m.

KRESGE AUDITORIUM

Cross country defeats USM

By DAVID A. NUTE
ORIENT Contributor

Last Saturday Bowdoin's men's cross country team squared off against Colby and the University of Maine in a meet at Colby. The course was tough, and Bowdoin deeply felt the absence of three of the team's finest runners. In a meet that should have handed the Bears an easy victory, the team found itself clawing for second place.

Colby won handily with a score of 32 points. Bowdoin placed second accumulating 47 points, and University of Southern Maine finished close behind with 48 points.

Individually, Bowdoin's Todd Dillon '88, placed second, and Captain Marty Malague '90, took ninth place.

In reference to the season ahead, Dillon said, "Hopefully we will put it together for the up-

Gateway to London and Beyond

ITHACA COLLEGE

London
Center

■ SEMESTER OR YEAR PROGRAM
■ ITHACA COLLEGE CREDIT
■ BRITISH FACULTY

Learn about British and European cultures through courses in literature, history, business, music, sociology, communications, politics, and much more. Special program offered in Drama. Internships available to qualified students in international business, social services, communications, political science, and economics. Visits to the theatre, museums, galleries, schools, social and political institutions are an integral part of the curriculum.

For further information write:
International Programs - SP
Ithaca College, Ithaca, New York 14850

j&j sports center

YOUR FOUR SEASON DEALER

Opening
Thursday,
October 8!!

A sporting goods store is now opening in Brunswick with the very latest in sports equipment for all seasons.

FEATURING Products from:

- Wilson
- Nike
- CCM
- Brine
- Cooper
- Puma
- Foot Joy
- Many More

Also, team uniform and trophy sales are available.

212 Maine Street • Brunswick • 725-8675

Bowdoin, 29-7

at Brunswick, Maine

Bowdoin: 5 0 3 20 - 29

Amherst: 0 0 0 7 - 7

B — Mike Cavanaugh 64 pass from Ryan

Stafford (kick failed)

B — Rick Saletta 20 FG

B — Greg Bohannon 4 run (Saletta kick)

B — Ken McLaughlin 72 intercept return (Saletta kick)

B — Mike Burnett 8 intercept return (kick failed)

A — Rob Bors 14 pass from Wes Adams (Joe Love

kick)

First Downs Bow 12, Amh. 15; Rushes—yards Bow,

47—222, Amh. 48—192; Passing yards Bow, 180, Amh.

121; Passes Bow 6—20—1, Amh. 9—36—4; Punts Bow,

7—35.6, Amh. 6—36; Fumbles—lost Bow 5—2, Amh.

3—1; Possession—yards Bow 11—90, Amh. 9—63

Individual Statistics

Running

Greg Bohannon — 24 Att, 116 yds, 4.8 avg

Cerald Crooks — 5 Att, 20 yds, 4.0 avg

Mike Kirch — 6 Att, 36 yds, 6.0 avg

Passing

Ryan Stafford — 4 Comp, 11 Att, 144 yds, 1 TD, 1 Int

Mike Kirch — 2 Comp, 8 Att, 16 yds, 0 TD, 0 Int

Receiving

Mike Cavanaugh — 2 Recap, 127 yds, 1 TD

Photo by Lori Bodwell

Tennis has perfect record

By JAN BREKKE
ORIENT Staff

The women's tennis team added two more victories to their already impressive record last week. With home wins over Wheaton and the University of Southern Maine, the record currently stands at 6-0.

On Friday the women opened up the weekend with a hard fought 5-4 victory over Wheaton. Number two singles player Jen Grimes led the way for the Polar Bears, handing her opponent 6-1, 6-4. Other singles victories came from Erika Gustafsson and Suzanne Fogarty. Number one Heidi Wallenfels was able to come back from last week's foot injury only to lose a difficult three set match to her Wheaton opponent.

"We really needed some good doubles performances from our number two and three teams to null out the win for us. This was just a tough, close match," commented coach Ed Reid.

The combinations of Patty Ingraham — Suzanne Fogarty at number three doubles and Katherine Loeb — Erika Gustafsson at number two doubles came up with the key victories to seal the match for Bowdoin.

Saturday's match with USM didn't look too close on paper, but according to coach Reid, many of the individual matches were very tight. Heidi Wallenfels returned to form, as indicated by her 6-0, 6-3 victory at number one singles. The Polar Bears swept through the singles, 6-0 and won two out of three doubles matches to finish off the match, 8-1.

Bowdoin's 6-0 record may be in jeopardy this weekend when they travel to Waterville to do battle with a tough Colby team. Coach Reid expects the matches against Bates and Colby to show the true character of this year's team.

Brunswick Parks and Recreation
DepartmentBOYS 7TH & 8TH
GRADE
BASKETBALL COACH

Stipend Position — early November to mid-February

Apply at: Parks and Recreation Department
30 Federal Street
Brunswick, Maine 04011

(207) 729-0114
Application Deadline:
Friday, October 16, 1987
Equal Opportunity Employer

FILM, POLITICS & SOCIAL CHANGE
IN ASIA

January - May 1988

Faculty from Harvard University and the University of Illinois

Itinerary includes: India
China
Japan
Hong Kong

- travel and work closely with professors
- live with families in each country
- expand intellectual and personal awareness through comparative study in a variety of environments
- 16 credit hours of academic work studying film, politics and social change in Asia

For a catalogue and application contact:

Joan Tiffany, Director
International Honors Program
19 Braddock Park
Boston, MA 02116
617-267-8612

INTERNATIONAL HONORS PROGRAM

DENIM STYLE

JUNIORS DO A GREAT BALANCING ACT — THAT'S THE LONG AND THE SHORT OF IT!

The new long division — that's what smart juniors are doing. It starts with the hot new denim duster going to great lengths over the denim short, short, short skirt. A fabulous new proportion for a fabulous young body!

Duster, $60.00
Skirt, $30.00

Canterbury
ShopFINE MEN'S AND WOMEN'S APPARELCooks Corner, Brunswick
Promenade Mall, Lewiston

Monday thru Saturday 9:30 to 9:00

Cards and Clothing
to keep you in stitches.

THE WORKS

141 MAINE ST. 729-8064
BRUNSWICK, ME 04011

Hutchinson questions "original intent"

By JACK CAHILL
ORIENT Editorial Editor

Well-known law professor and Bowdoin graduate and trustee Dennis J. Hutchinson outlined a model for understanding the Constitution and how it is and should be interpreted in his lecture, "Does the Constitution Really Matter?," delivered to a nearly full house Thursday night in Daggett Lounge.

The lecture was the second in a series sponsored by Bowdoin and Bates Colleges to commemorate the bicentennial anniversary of the establishment of the Constitution.

Hutchinson, a member of the class of 1969 and the faculty of the University of Chicago Law School, began his address by asking whether the title of his speech was an impertinent question.

He went on to cite several examples of the impertinent manner in which the anniversary itself is being observed. He mentioned the city of Indianapolis, which he said "has painted its fireplugs in effigies of the framers of the Constitution."

Settling down to more serious matters, Hutchinson decried the judicial philosophy of "original intent," which many legal scholars espouse. Proponents of original intent hold that judges charged with the interpretation of the Constitution should base their decisions on the original intent of the framers of the document. "Half the time we don't even know what they intended," Hutchinson said. "And the theory also assumes that they intended that we be bound by their intent."

"This is where Professor Morgan and I disagree," Hutchinson continued. He was referring to government professor Richard E. Morgan's lecture two weeks ago, which kicked off the series.

Comparing law to boxing, Hutchinson said proponents of the original intent theory want the Constitution to be the Marquis of Queensbury rules for building a society. "It's not the Marquis of Queensbury rules at all. It's more like a general blueprint for the boxing ring, where everybody gets the same standing eight count," he said.

Hutchinson answered questions from the audience for as long as he spoke, and asked questions of them himself. Responding to a question about how the Constitution could be used to check the actions of Sen. Gary Hart, Sen. Joseph Biden, and Lt. Col. Oliver North, he said, "I don't know if we can outlaw lust, vanity, and arrogance."

Hutchinson will be on campus this weekend for the trustees meeting, and can discuss law school and law careers.

BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed

729-8895
216A Maine St.
Mon.-Sat. 9:30-6

We Deliver

Wire Service

Centrally located across from Bowdoin College

College Briefs

Amherst College has a new look this semester. The college renovated Fayweather Hall over the summer. The renovations, which cost approximately $50,000, converted a snack bar into a studio where art classes will be taught. In addition, the renovations have created space for the Theatre and Dance Departments. Improvements and expansion include a lounge, a ticket booth and an office for the department.

Also, Amherst, has gone high-tech. The college now offers IBM PS/2 computers at reduced rates to students. And, did anybody happen to check the scoreboard after last week's Bowdoin-Amherst football game? Bowdoin 29, Amherst 7.

Bates College students rallied around the wrong flag last month. The Bates Student reported in its September 25 issue that a group of students supporting the candidacy of Colorado Congresswoman Pat Schroeder for president would "become very active shortly." Schroeder bowed out of the race several days later, leaving the student organization with no candidate.

Who says good guys don't wear black? Tim Redmond, Wesleyan College '80, has recently been elected to the college's Board of Trustees. Redmond, who sports a long ponytail, black cowboy hat and cowboy boots, is described by The Wesleyan Argus as "undiplomatically blunt" in some instances.

In other news, the Wesleyan Board of Trustees approved plans for a $17.5 million new gymnasium complex last month.

The University of Vermont is baring its teeth at Playboy Magazine. The October issue of Playboy featured a UVM student identified as Aimee Lee baring something else, sitting atop a piano in the UVM chapter of the Kappa Epsilon fraternity house. UVM, which was ranked the number four party school in the nation, actually had two students appearing in "The Women of the Top Ten Party Schools" spread, but the college has only one credit listed under Aimee Lee. Ms. Lee, according to UVM administration now has one credit towards a summer course major in aerobics.

Something special
for your Little One

- * Fine clothing - premie-6/7 yrs.
- * educational games and toys
- * shower gifts

149 Maine Street, Tontine Mall
HRS: Mon-Thurs. 10 - 5:30

Fri 10 - 5 Sat & Sun closed

H
A
I
R

3 Bowker St.
Brunswick, Me. 725-2694

With a Bowdoin I.D.,
receive a cut and blow-dry
— at a discount.

Women $12.00 Men $7.00

Within walking distance
of campus.

DR. WILLIAM R. OUELLETTE
DR. BRIAN L. DANIELS
OPTOMETRISTS

Eye Examinations Optical Services
*Specializing in Children's Vision
and Contact Lenses*
Pleasant Street Professional Building
53 Pleasant Street, Brunswick
Telephone 725-2161

Casual
Sportswear
Imported from France
For men and women

Freeport Village Square
2 Depot St., Freeport, ME
865-3066

October Special - 10 visits for $25

Add The Frosting

Add the One Ingredient Needed to Make Your Appearance
Complete A Rich, Healthy Tan
All Year Long!

No matter what the weather, day or night, we offer you a completely safe, golden, healthy, and radiant tan in just days. And since there is no burning, peeling or drying skin... ever... no matter how long you want to retain your rich tan... we can help you keep it all year long,
year after year.

DOWNTOWN PLAZA
COIFFURES

MON. THUR. WED. 9:30 to 5
THURS. AND FRI. 9:30 to 5, SAT. 9:30 to 5
176 MAINE STREET - 725-0653

PLAZA
COIFFURES

MONDAY THRU FRIDAY 9:30 to 5
SATURDAY 9:30 to 5
725-0986 - COOKS CORNER

OPINION

Scholar athletes

Athletics enjoy a proud tradition at Bowdoin. Hockey is, of course, the standout success and the biggest crowd-pleaser. But there are any number of other squads among Bowdoin's the 30 intercollegiate teams Bowdoin fields that enjoy popular support among students, faculty, and alumni. Especially deserving of credit are women's varsity sports at the college, which have developed a competitive reputation during Bowdoin's short history of coeducation.

This is as it should be. Athletics are an important part of any real liberal arts education, and the body at least as much a part of the whole individual as the intellect. And athletics play other important roles in the college community, making it a colorful and exciting place to live, learn, and grow. Bowdoin students are proud of their Polar Bear gladiators, and their reputation makes the college more attractive to top students to whom sport is also important.

This is why we find so disturbing the rumors that the administration is hatching plans to de-emphasize the role of athletics in the admissions process. The idea itself is commendable, but the change must not take place at the expense of Bowdoin's consideration of the student as a whole, not just as an intellectual creature.

Coming under fire in the controversy is the practice of allowing athletic coaches to rate students who might participate in Bowdoin sports on the basis of high school performance. Outstanding athletic prowess is taken into consideration alongside other factors in the admissions process.

The problem that arises with this practice is the admission of students who may be outstanding athletes instead of those who show no unique talent on the playing field but have performed better in the classroom. Faculty members spurred an investigation earlier this year that indicates that members of varsity sports teams perform on the average measurably lower than the rest of the student body. This has been used as an argument against the consideration of athletic excellence in the admissions process.

At first glance, this may seem a reasonable stance. Bowdoin is, after all, first and foremost a place of education. Should non-academic concerns take precedence over classroom standards here?

The answer is, of course, no, but we ask those members of the faculty dissatisfied with the role sports and athletes play in the college community to inform themselves of the opinions of the student body on that score. Students, participants and spectators alike, consider athletics an important part of the college experience. Academic performance should not be allowed to suffer due to sports, but then neither should the college demand that it be the only focus of a student's life. The importance of a balanced variety of skills and interests and general competence in many fields is key to the liberal arts education, which has its roots in the Greek idea of "sound mind, sound body."

The fact that those who are not varsity athletes tend to outperform those who are in the area of grades is not surprising. Those who devote significant time to sports, dance, or music, or art, or any number of other admirable and broadening pursuits will have less time to spend with the books. To these people we say, good for you.

And to those professors who wish to eliminate or decrease rating of athletes, we suggest that you instead demand that rating be balanced among activities such as theatre, music, dance, painting, and so forth. People who understand that these activities supplement academics belong at Bowdoin, and an effort should be made to attract them. We remind them of the words of Voltaire, who advised us not to let school stand in the way of education.

Lisa Jacobs

Computer shortage causes problems

Computers are becoming omnipresent. It is hard to envision a Bowdoin graduate who will not be using one in the future. Word processing, graphics, communications, data analysis, and data retrieval work will be performed using computer technology in the home and at work. A specialist can set up and maintain the hardware and a programmer do the programming, but a computer graduate will have to be the user and interface with computer technology. Due to the paucity of computers and one of the best word processing software programs around are available to students at incredible discounts. If students can finance purchasing a computer before they enter the real world after graduation, they will save big bucks. For students unable to afford computers, Bowdoin needs to increase the number of computers and printers available for their use. Computers in decentralized locations that would eventually hook into the new library cataloguing system would be great.

Will every student have the luxury of having the college install a computer in his dorm room? According to John Balling, Manager of Academic Services, Bowdoin will most likely not install hookups in students' rooms because it would be too expensive. The cost to rewire dorms to permit access to the central computer system would be in the millions. Present inadequate wiring prevents students from gaining the luxury of having computers provided by Bowdoin.

The quality of the present Rainbow computers in the computer room is poor. Students frequently find their discs chewed up by these computers. The only letter quality printer is constantly in demand. The other few dot matrix printers create print which is hard to read. Problems are often created by equipment breakdowns.

But help is on the way. Harry Hopcroft, a new technical support person, has been hired to help Balling. Also, Bowdoin is getting rid of the Rainbows. But despite the upgrading of computers, it's still not enough. Twelve or so computers for the entire student body is inadequate. And, according to Balling, space is a key issue. In a few years, plans could be made to include a computer center in the new science building. The many advantages of offered by computers can be accessed by more students if more quality computers and printers are purchased.

Viewpoint

puter resources at Bowdoin, many Bowdoin graduates may not be prepared for the future.

Although Bowdoin has very good mainframe computing resources, there are not enough microcomputers and printers for students to meet their word processing and data analysis needs. Compared to other small colleges of its caliber, Bowdoin lacks adequate microcomputers. Hobart not only has many more computers, but also has better quality computers and printers. In terms of microcomputers, last spring students at Bowdoin had access to 10 Rainbows, one IBM, one IBM clone, and one Apple. The demand to use these computers is greater than the available number of computers. During peak times of use, students wait hours in line to use the micros. Last year, Dick Moffit '87 stated that over eight to 10 people were waiting to use the Macintosh the night before the last day of final exams. Despite the substantial discounts offered to Bowdoin students to buy computers, Moffit made the point that everybody can't afford to buy a computer even at the 40 percent discount offered to students. During the 17 hours Dick Moffit waited in the Hubbard Hall computer room to use the Macintosh, he was able to use it for five or six hours.

IBM System Twos, Apples,

Correction

In "Black students urge change," (2 October 1987) Gordon Buffonge '88, was quoted as saying he "had tremendous difficulty fitting in" due to his West Indian background. The article implied that Buffonge had difficulty adjusting to Bowdoin. However, Buffonge was actually referring to his transition to America.

BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed

Subscribe to the Orient

If someone special to you is a member of the Bowdoin community, what better way to keep up with what's going on in that person's life than a subscription to the ORIENT? Stay up to date on news, sports, entertainment, and the life of a college campus by having the ORIENT sent to your home every week.

For $3.00 a semester or $15.00 a year, you can have the nation's oldest continuously published college weekly delivered to your door. Send check or money order, payable to the Bowdoin Publishing Company, to:

THE ORIENT
Bowdoin College
Brunswick, ME 04011

Letter

To the Editor:

Recently, many rumors have been circulating the Bowdoin campus regarding the de-emphasis of athletics. We are uncertain as to the nature of any future plans involving the athletic policy; however, we are certain that athletics have been beneficial to our development as students here at Bowdoin.

Being a student at Bowdoin is a 24-hour a day, seven-day a week commitment. It is important for everyone to realize that learning takes place not only in the classroom but also through athletic participation. A majority of students (60 percent) have chosen to develop school spirit, leadership skills, a commitment to a team network, and competitive instincts through their respective sports. These characteristics enhanced by athletics combine with personal academic to create the well-rounded student Bowdoin has always stressed.

In light of the recent rumors surrounding the importance of athletics at Bowdoin, we, as athletes, feel it is time to express our views. For the past four years, athletics have played a crucial role in our development as students. It would be a shame to diminish the level of athletic competition offered at Bowdoin. Intercollegiate athletics are crucial to maintaining school spirit as well as the competitive edge in the classroom, which leads to future successes. We appeal to the administration, faculty, staff, alumni, and student body to support the athletic side of the Bowdoin experience.

Sincerely,
Maureen Letson '88
Kathy McCormick '88

Let's hear it

The Orient is a student newspaper, designed to serve the campus of Bowdoin College. Letters to the editor are always welcome and we will print as many as space permits. Send them by campus mail to the Orient, or deliver them in person to our offices at 12 Cleveland Street.

If you have more to say than you can fit in a short letter, and want to write an in-depth opinion, please contact Jack Cahill, Editorials Editor, at the Orient or Coles Tower Box 313.

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

"The College exercises no control over the content of the student writings contained herein and neither it, nor the Administration, nor the faculty assume any responsibility for the views expressed herein."

Lori Bodwell...Editor in Chief

Kevin Wesley...Assistant Editor
Adam Najberg...News Editor
Rosemarie Dougherty...Assoc. News Editor

Michael Botelho...Sports Editor
Jack Cahill...Editorials Editor
Susan Lyons...Contributing Editor

Tamara Dassanayake...Asst. News Editor
Eric Foushee...Account Executive
Alan Harris...Photography Editor
Mary Ann Lal...Photography Editor
Lizz Millan...Asst. Entertainment Editor

Kathryn Nanovic...Production Manager
Justin Prisenford...Asst. Sports Editor
Stephen Reynolds...Features Editor
Sharon Smart...Entertainment Editor
Michael Townsend...Advertising Manager

Dawn Vance...Asst. News Editor

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT
Published by

THE BOWDOIN PUBLISHING COMPANY

LORI M. BODWELL ALBERT P. MAURO, JR.

Published weekly when classes are held during the Fall and Spring semester by the students of Bowdoin College. Address editorial communication to the Editor, subscription communication to the circulation manager, and business correspondence to the business manager at The Bowdoin Orient, 12 Cleveland Street, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011, or telephone (207) 725-3300. The Bowdoin Orient reserves the right to edit any and all articles and letters. Subscriptions are $15.00 per year or $4.00 per semester. Past issues cannot be mailed. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to The Bowdoin Orient, Moulton Union, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011.

Wethli stresses emotion and understanding in painting

By ADAM NAJBERG
ORIENT News Editor

Artist Mark Wethli has the best of both worlds. Not only is he able to paint to his heart's content, but he can also pass on the finer points of painting to aspiring Bowdoin artists.

Wethli, a professor in the Visual Arts department came to Bowdoin in 1985 after a seven year tenure at California State University at Long Beach (UCLB). Before 1978 he taught at the University of Northern Iowa at Cedar Falls.

Bowdoin's location and dedication to the liberal arts first attracted Wethli. He said a liberal arts college enables him to teach students more than just "how to be an artist."

"I can teach students what art is and how art is important in their lives. This approach really fits in with the whole liberal arts program... Art here is not perceived as a hobby corner," said Wethli.

Wethli said he can teach technique to his students, but that practice and their own talent will ultimately lead to their success. According to Wethli, success in the arts is not economic or tangible in any way.

"Technique is the means, but our goal is not just to paint a pretty picture. A painting should reflect one person's relation to the world. A person's values and background come out in a painting. Our goal is not only to express these values, but to understand them as well," said Wethli.

Discovery and sensitivity to one's surrounding are vital to an artist, Wethli explained. Heightened awareness can be detected in one's painting. Wethli applies his teaching to his own painting. He is a talented artist, who has sold many works. He said he attempts to convey reality in his paintings, and he paints only those objects that appeal to him.

"It's important to me that my work looks real. It's not just a technical feat, though. I paint things that I find beautiful. They mean more to me that way... I want my work to create moods and feelings," said Wethli.

Other artists' paintings arouse emotions within Wethli. He described the process he undergoes upon viewing another artist's work.

"First, the painting excites me. It might be the color or the composition. Then, it embraces me, draws me in. It lives with me for a while. I might rhapsodize with the painting," said Wethli.

Wethli described the popularity behind the late Andy Warhol's work. He said Warhol had talent and a fresh idea that stirred emotions in people.

"Warhol pinpointed the relationship between people and products. His bottom line was compassion, or the lack of it in humanity. This reflects back on the culture," Wethli said.

Wethli said his ultimate goal is not to achieve the notoriety of a Warhol or Michelangelo. He does, however, admit such fame would be nice. Until it arrives, Mark Wethli will continue to pass on his views on emotion and discovery to eager and talented liberal arts students.

Mark Wethli

A Likely Yarn We have Maine Wool for your Christmas sweaters, socks, hats, and mittens.

90 UNION STREET
BRUNSWICK, ME 04011
(207) 725-2147

Pauline's Bloomers

Tondine Mall, Brunswick, 725-5862

QUALITY FLORAL SERVICE

Anniversary, Birthday, Wedding, Sympathy, Holiday, All Occasions

Flowers, Plants & Gifts

We Deliver Wire Service Ballroom & Candy

Major Credit Cards Accepted - Open 6 days 9:00 to 5:30

NEW!! Film Developing In 45 Minutes!
Why Wait Any Longer?

MERCURY PHOTO

Quality Film Developing...Fast!

40% off

all frames in stock

Kodak® Mini Lab System 25 processor

Newest Kodak paper and chemicals

Kodak Colorwatch quality control links our lab with Rochester for unsurpassed results.

Bowdoin College Students

Bring in 2 rolls get 2nd roll FREE

good thru 10/16/87

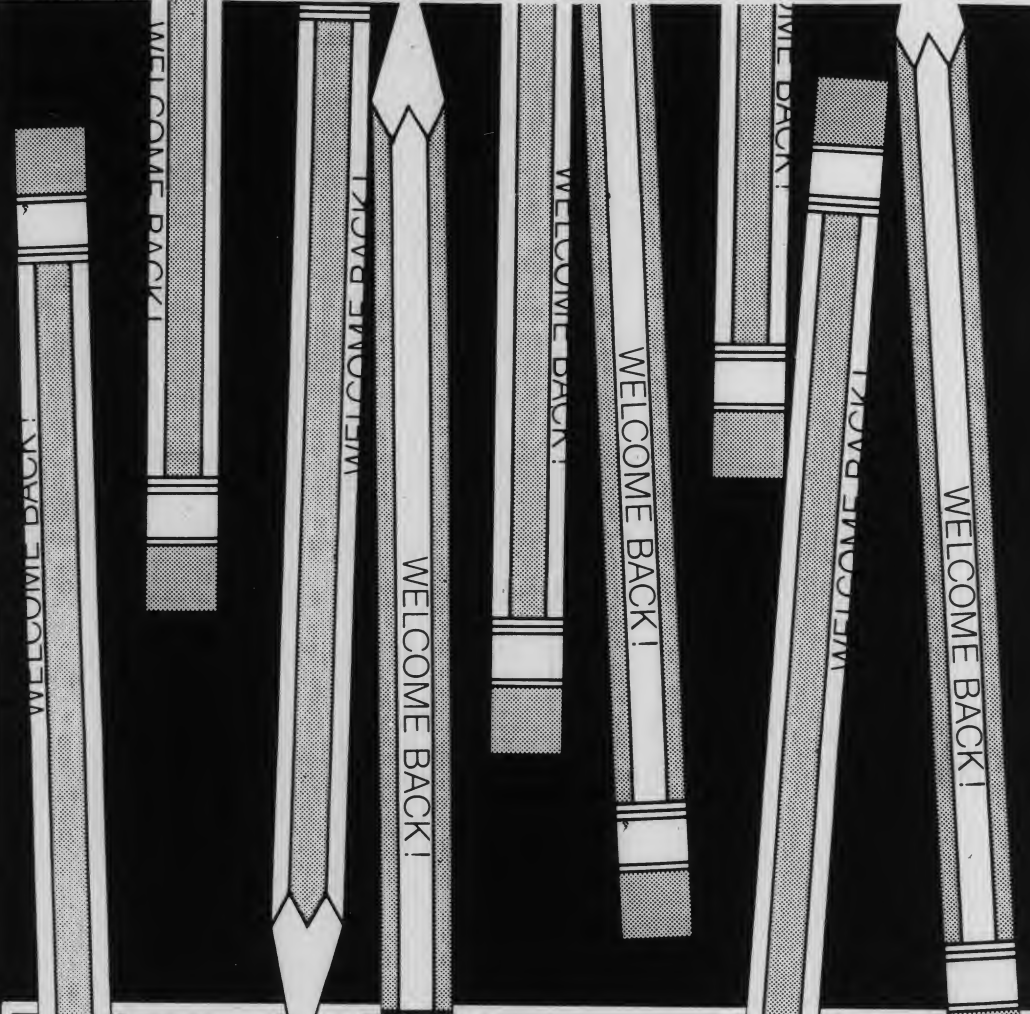

FULL LINE CAMERA STORE -

Slide developing - cameras, film, batteries, bags - large frame selection - repairs

TOPSHAM FAIR MALL

1-95 (EXIT 24) & ROUTE 196, TOPSHAM, ME.

PASSPORTS WHILE YOU WAIT

Two Dollars Off!

Any 16" 2-item or more pizza.
One coupon per pizza.
Expires: 10/25/87
Fast, free delivery
26 Bath Road
Phone: 729-5561

DOMINO'S PIZZA®

One Dollar Off!

Any size pizza.
One coupon per pizza.
Expires: 10/25/87
Fast, free delivery
26 Bath Road
Phone: 729-5561

DOMINO'S PIZZA®

Fifty Cents Off!

Any size pizza.
One coupon per pizza.
Expires: 10/25/87
Fast, free delivery
26 Bath Road
Phone: 729-5561

DOMINO'S PIZZA®

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

FIRST CLASS MAIL
U.S. Postage PAID
BRUNSWICK, ME.
Permit No. 25

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

VOLUME CXVII

BOWDOIN COLLEGE, BRUNSWICK, MAINE, FRIDAY, OCTOBER 23, 1987

NUMBER 6

Bowdoin witnessed the fruits of its labor at the official opening of the William Farley Field House, Saturday, Oct. 10. Farley '64 (center) kicked off the construction three years ago with a $3.5 million gift. He relaxes here with Bowdoin's own Fruit of the Loom men, Jack Cahill '89 (left), Todd Green '89 and Vincent Jacks '91. Fruit of the Loom is a division of Farley Industries.

Two fellows live for free

KEVIN WESLEY
ORIENT Asst. Editor

Two of the 1987-88 fellows are currently house-sitting in the dean's house, previously occupied by the Dean of the College.

Kelly McKinney '87 and Bina Chaddha '87, are living at 256 Maine St. at the request of President A. LeRoy Geason, who wanted someone in the house for security reasons. McKinney and Chaddha have responsibilities as tenants in the house, but are paying neither rent nor utilities.

McKinney said during a casual meeting with Geason this summer, she was asked whether she would like to live in the house, which is maintained by the college, includes a college telephone, and is protected by security. She had already planned to live with Chaddha, and Geason, after consultation with college Treasurer Dudley Woodall, allowed them both to live there.

Geason, however, claims McKinney and Chaddha approached him and asked to live in the empty house. "They came in to see me and asked to live there," he said.

McKinney said the issue arose during a regularly scheduled meeting with Geason, who meets with all new fellows. McKinney said the president asked where she was living. She replied that she and Chaddha were looking for a place to live.

At that point, McKinney said, Geason mentioned the empty house. "It was definitely chance. We were in the right place at the right time. He (Geason) was definitely the person who mentioned it," she said.

Associate Director of Admissions Janet Lavin is also living in the house temporarily.

The house was vacated after Robert Wilhelm was fired by the president last November. The new dean of the college, Jane Jervis, does not wish to live in the house, and will purchase a home in Brunswick.

Chaddha, who is freshman advisor, said the three are living on the second floor of the house. The first floor is being used as a reception hall for the president's office.

The residents are required to check the thermostats, watch for prowlers and notify security if they will be away for an extended period of time, Geason said the students are not being granted free housing.

"It's a service they're supplying to security," he said.

The house contains 14 rooms on three floors as well as three-and-a-half bathrooms. Chaddha said the third floor is being used primarily for storage.

While a college telephone is available (Continued on page 4)

Maine Yankee sparks high-powered debate

MARSHAL CARTER
ORIENT Staff

Psi Upsilon (Psi U) fraternity hosted a debate Wednesday night about the pros and cons of closing the Maine Yankee Nuclear Plant, a major issue of the November 3 state elections.

Supporting the continued operation of the plant was David Allen, a representative from People For Maine Yankee's Electricity. His opponent was Elizabeth King, a member of two committees that oppose the plant's operation as a nuclear facility. About 35 people attended the debate, held in the Psi U dining room.

King argued that the primary consideration for providing power for Maine should be safety, and that Maine Yankee is not safe. Allen maintained there are no health hazards caused by Maine Yankee, and the plant produces the cheapest power of any major power plant in New England, at approximately two and a half cents per kilowatt hour.

According to Allen, conversion to alternate sources of power, such as oil, would require billions of dollars and would dramatically affect the Maine economy for the worse. Allen said running the plant on oil would cost between five and seven cents per kilowatt hour and would involve foreign trade.

King claimed gamma rays that are emitted from Maine Yankee are harmful and are resulting in an increase of birth defects and cancers, such as leukemia. She cited a period last December when peaks, reaching fifty times normal background level, were recorded by the group's detection devices. These bursts, she said are what create the health problems.

Allen argued about the economic impact should the plant be forced to shut down. As it provides as much 45% of the electrical power for parts of Maine, rising costs by alternate energy sources could financially disable Maine residents. He cited medical costs as an area that would be affected. Rising energy costs could also force an

(Continued on page 4)

Sound selling saves stocks

TAMARA DASSANAYAKE
ORIENT Asst. News Editor

With economists talking of another "Great Depression" and the stock market in apparent turmoil, it looks as if sound advice from stockbrokers have saved day for Bowdoin - at least for now.

Treasurer of the College Dudley H. Woodall revealed Wednesday that the college had been expecting the value of stocks to crash in the near future. "The only question was by how much and when," said Woodall.

He added that in anticipation of falling stock prices, the college had been converting some investments into cash, bonds and treasury bills, and at the same time lowering its exposure to foreign markets.

He said these precautions had, for the present, cushioned the blow for Bowdoin but since the college has long-term investments, there is no way of predicting the consequences at present.

He added that the college's position would be clearer in a few weeks, if and when the market stabilizes and the impacts of this week's frenzied trading are actually felt.

A sustained decline in prices could spell serious losses for Bowdoin, as well as the whole economy, but if the market adjusts, there might be little impact. Woodall said with the present instability, it was not possible to hazard a guess as to the outcome for the college.

The "crash" started on Monday as the value of the Dow Jones industrial average, one of the main indicators of the market performance, dropped by almost 25%.

The unprecedented drop, described as the worst since World War I, was followed by a period of panic buying and selling which led to record trading volumes in the market.

The market rose over 100 points on both Tuesday and Wednesday.

Inside

Parents' Weekend Calendar
pages 10 and 11
Where to brunch in Brunswick page 5
Sports
page 13
Bohannon wins second Golden Helmet Award
page 15

McCabe suffers near-tragic fall

ADAM NAIJBEG
ORIENT News Editor

Andrew McCabe '90 had a near-fatal accident on Friday night, October 9.

On that night, sometime after 11 p.m., McCabe was on his way down the kitchen stairs in Chi Psi Lodge, when he slipped and fell. According to House President Ed Pond, McCabe was alone when he fell. Pond also said the single bulb at the top of the stairs may or may not have been on at the time of the fall.

A house party was in progress that evening. House members and alumni were celebrating Homecoming weekend.

McCabe appeared to have no serious injuries directly after the fall. He joked with house members and friends for some time before he went to sleep. He did not wake up.

At 1:15 p.m., the next day, fraternity brothers attempted to wake McCabe to no avail. They rushed him to Parkview Memorial Hospital in Brunswick, where doctors tried to revive him with injections.

He was then taken to Maine Medical Center in Portland. Doctors operated and successfully removed a blood clot that had dislodged itself and traveled to the brain.

McCabe's physicians were unavailable for comment, and School Physician Roy Weymouth would not speculate on the nature or extent of McCabe's injury without an official injury report.

The following day McCabe regained consciousness. His speech and motor skill were restored in subsequent days. He was released from the hospital and returned home October 20. Doctors expect a full recovery.

According to Pond, McCabe's recovery time has been incredible. He spoke with McCabe last Monday, and said he may return this semester "to finish a couple of courses."

If you were on the review committee, what would you change about the fraternities?

Danny Courcey '90

"I would try to change the image of the fraternities. I'd de-emphasize the drinking and emphasize more intellectual things. It would be nice to have it so the faculty and students could meet without the confinements of the classroom."

Hillary Bush '90

"You don't see the fraternity people as much. They seem to be not as involved in whole campus activities. I'd try to change that."

Heather Freund '91

"I like them just the way they are."

Fred Bierhaus '90

"They're fine the way they are. I'm apathetic."

David Lyman '88

"I think what they're doing now is good, like dry rush. I definitely think the way the fraternity houses look, physically, is in need of improvement."

Professor Steven Cerf walking in the rain. Photo by Greg Merrill

College Briefs

Wellesley College students are in a furor over an item that appeared in the October 9 issue of The Bowdoin Orient. In an article on the Meddiebumpsters, written by Orient Assistant Editor Kevin Wesley, a derogatory reference was made to Wellesley. As a result of the newspaper's error in printing the item, Wellesley refused to let the Meddiebumpsters perform or spend the night on campus as scheduled. The Meddiebumpsters were one of many events scheduled during Wellesley's Parents Weekend.

Bates College administration somehow "lost" the innards of its 1987-88 College Directory. The section including students' names, home addresses, box numbers and dorm assignments disappeared during "conversion of software" over the summer. Coordinator of Housing Spencer Neyland '87 assured the college community the new directory, which was issued October 12, would be better than before. "There won't be any blanks in the directory," said Neyland.

Also, Bates students have been urged to lock their room doors and not prop open outside doors, after an intruder entered seven dorm rooms and assaulted a Bates woman. The assault was "not a rape," but "more of an indecent assault," reported Director of Security Mark McCracken.

curity Mark McCracken.

In the continuing saga of dorm intruders, two Amherst College students discovered an intruder in their room. The two women, who returned to their room at 10:30 p.m., Oct. 7, noticed the feet of a man sticking out from under a bed in the room. The students left the room, phoned security and returned to find the unwanted roommate had fled by means of the window.

The intruder's feet were discovered at approximately 11 p.m. during a phone conversation with a friend who had called the women's room while they were away. The friend reported somebody had answered the phone and immediately hung up the receiver. The two women returned at 10:30 to find the phone off the hook.

Haverford and Bryn Mawr have also been visited by unwelcome guests. In separate instances, three dorms were broken into and equipment was stolen from the college's Physical Plant. Head of Bryn Mawr Security Katherine Steinbeck said security will "step up patrols and... fix [outside] lighting." Theft is including valuable computer equipment and sets of walkie-talkies.

Wesleyan College students will have to travel a bit further to eat wienies from now on. Parking problems in Middletown have caused hotdog vendor Vicki Peterson to move her "Surph Dog" stand from in front of the college's science center. Wesleyan students continue to flock to Peterson's stand, either reflecting on the quality of school food or their connoisseurship.

Colby College last summer sponsored a two-week program that offered high school minority students a chance to experience the advantages of a liberal arts college. The program, entitled "The Top 5 Summer Institute," was open to minority students from Boston schools who had completed their sophomore year in high school and were ranked in the top 5 percent of their class.

The purpose of the program was to teach the selected 32 minority students the attitudes and techniques needed for success in applying to a post-secondary school, and to preview college life in a liberal arts setting. Colby students acted as peer advisors. Perhaps Bowdoin should take a page from Colby's book.

Execs create new charter class

DAWN VANCE

ORIENT Asst. News Editor

The role of athletics at Bowdoin came up once again Tuesday night. This time, the Student Executive Board debated on the "hot" issue at its weekly meeting.

Stephen Curley '88, student representative to the Admissions Committee appeared before the board during the open forum segment of the meeting. He informed the board of the status of the Admissions Committee deliberations on how important athletics should be to the admissions process.

According to Curley, the committee is presently considering two options: limiting the number of rated athletes to the number of starting players necessary on each varsity team, which would total approximately 200 athletes, or to totally eliminate consideration of athletic ability in the admissions process.

A possible compromise would include the phasing out of athletic ratings. In other business the board passed an amendment to the Constitution of the Student Assembly that altered the organizational chartering process. The board created a charter rating of FC-4, one step below the FC-3 charter rating.

An organization with an FC-3 charter is entitled to funding from the college. Under the new FC-4 charter rating, a campus group would be entitled to recognition by the college and privileges, including a student mailbox and the right to use official meeting rooms.

The groups may not receive funding from the Student Activities Fee Committee (SAFC), under the provisions of the amendment.

sions of the amendment.

The board promptly granted an FC-4 charter to the newly-formed Students for Dukakis for President, headed by Zachary Messite.

Following heated debate the board upgraded the Russian Club's charter from FC-3 to an FC-2 charter, which would enable the group to request funds greater than the $50 allotment under its old charter.

The debate stemmed from what many board members perceived as the direct relationship of the Russian Club to the Russian Department. Members felt the Russian Department, rather than the SAFC, should assume responsibility for sponsorship of the club.

Board member Andrew Winter '89 pointed out the relationship between certain clubs and academic departments was one which the joint SAFC/Exec Committee had been formed October 6, 1987 to consider.

Winter said he believed the entire board should not review the Russian Club's charter at the time of the meeting, but should examine whether the club did meet constitutional guidelines.

"Our sole concern is whether it meets the requirements of the constitution and I think it does... There is a history of organizations closely related to departments receiving SAFC funds... until we come through with clear cut changes as to how organizations will be funded we have to accept the charter as it is," said Winter.

Board member Jason Easterly announced his selection committee nominations of Joy Stuart '88 and Mitra Morgan '88 to the Student Life Facilities Committee. The board unanimously approved the nominations.

Chairman George Hillhouse '88 announced an opening on the Student Life Facility Committee, due to the resignation of Kathy McPherson '89. The board will conduct interviews to fill the vacancy.

The board will also conduct interviews for one member and one alternate for the Science Building Facility Committee.

Phi Beta Kappas named

The Bowdoin College chapter of Phi Beta Kappa announced today that five seniors have been nominated for membership in the national honor society that recognizes high academic distinction.

The five were chosen on the basis of their scholarly achievement and sustained superior intellectual performance during their first three years at Bowdoin, according to James H. Turner, associate professor of physics and secretary-treasurer of the Bowdoin Phi Beta Kappa chapter. The nominees will be formally honored at the James Bowdoin Day ceremonies October 23.

The newly nominated Phi Beta Kappa members are:

Pietro G. Andres of Buffalo, N.Y., a graduate of Calasancius Preparatory School in Buffalo; Paul B. Kornigebel of East Peoria, Ill., a graduate of the International School of Geneva, Switzerland; Lawrence H. Martin of Greenwich, CT, a graduate of Greenwich High School; Joanne E. Thompson of Manchester, CT, a graduate of Manchester High School; and Joy E. Stuart of Winter Park, FL, a graduate of Trinity Preparatory School in Winter Park.

Stuart was also the recipient of the Almon Goodwin Prize. She is a dean's list student, with a double major in economics and mathematics.

The Almon Goodwin Prize is awarded annually to a member of Phi Beta Kappa in memory of Almon Goodwin, a member of Bowdoin's class of 1862. The fund was established in 1906.

Judiciary Board dispenses justice with fairness

RICHARD LINDAHL, JR.
ORIENT Staff

Cheating, plagiarism and sexual harassment are three of the dirtiest words on the Bowdoin College campus.

The three also have another vein of similarity. Committing any one of them may get you called before the Student Judiciary Board.

The Student Judiciary Board is "not trying to kill anybody," said Chairman Sam Shepherd '88. The board's primary goal is to "educate the student," he said.

The board hears allegations of infractions of the Honor and Social Codes, to which every student subscribes before entering the college.

While the Bowdoin Honor Code's prohibitions against plagiarism and cheating seem quite explicit, Shepherd said, "In reality, it's not all that clear-cut."

Plagiarism is the most easily defined offense, Shepherd said. A pamphlet entitled "Sources" is issued to each student in order to prevent plagiarism caused by ignorance of the college's policy of recognition of material not originated by students.

Allegations of plagiarism are reviewed by an ad hoc committee comprised of faculty in the appropriate academic field before being presented to the J-Board.

Shepherd said a large number of exam cheating cases stem from the extremely popular Self-Paced Calculus classes.

Because SPC exams are taken at the convenience of the students, they are more liable to cheating attempts than exams in other courses. He also said many cases were the result of cheating on take-home exams in regular classroom courses.

"Any instance of cheating, whether on a homework assignment or on a final exam, is a very serious violation," Shepherd said.

Whether cheating on homework has occurred in a particular incident can be difficult to determine, Shepherd said.

"Everyone gets help from other people on homework assignments at some time or other. The question is when does the helping go too far," said Shepherd. The J-Board "has to figure this out a lot," he said.

Shepherd said a common mistake made by students is misunderstanding their professors' policies concerning particular assignments. When signs of inappropriate assistance are noticed by a professor, the students often state they thought the professor said they could work together on the assignment. In such a case, the J-Board might deliberate for hours, said Shepherd.

The J-Board is ready to convene as soon as necessary to hear a case, Shepherd said. "Most cases come up right at exam time, so we need to hear it quickly so that the accused can find out whether they'll be coming back next semester," said Shepherd.

Some students would prefer a delay, however, so that they could have more time to "get their story together," said Shepherd.

Board "tries to figure out what the crime was, and what the sanction should be," said Shepherd.

A course of action is recommended to the Dean of Students and the offending student. Most of the time, the course is immediately implemented. The Dean may "tinker with the conditions first, just so he can handle the logistics involved," said Shepherd.

A student has the right to ask the J-Board to reconsider their ruling. Shepherd calls such a move "basically worthless, unless there is some new evidence or the student had some difficulty during his tenure have been 3-2 decisions. "We usually deliberate until all of the members agree on a recommendation," he said.

The two alternates to the J-Board also participate in the discussions, Shepherd said. The alternates can't normally vote, but they alert the body to instances in which "a 3-2 vote might go 4-3 the other way if the alternates could vote," he said. In such an occasion, the J-Board continues its deliberation.

A student may appeal the J-Board's decision to the Board of Appeals. Shepherd said, "In my two years on J-Board, there has only been one appeal."

Shepherd said the anonymity of the parties involved is "essential to the process." However, the need for anonymity conflicts with another goal of the J-Board: educating students about the possible consequences they may face if they violate the code.

Shepherd keeps a confidential log of all cases and the decisions reached. He prepares a report to the Executive Board each semester which lists the offenses and the sanctions. Shepherd feels that the report is too simplistic to give understanding of the decisions to the student body.

"The report just says very simply, for instance, 'cheating: failure of course' for one entry then 'cheating: suspension' for another," said Shepherd. This format does not give students insight into the reasons why the sanctions were handed down, Shepherd said.

Violations of the Social Code are handled in a similar manner by the board. However, the victim of a serious violation such as rape or sexual harassment is not required to be in the same room with the accused.

Such a situation is handled by having the accused and the accuser separately interviewed by the Board. Each is subsequently given the chance to hear what the other said and make replies as necessity demands.

Students are not bound to the Social Code only while on campus, said Shepherd. A student who goes into town or another school and causes a disturbance faces retribution not only from the local authorities, but also from the J-Board. "Anyone who wants to be a part of the Bowdoin community has to act in a responsible way off campus because they represent us wherever they go," said Shepherd.

Shepherd also said repeat offenders have a special surprise when they see the board. "Anyone who comes before the board twice will definitely be spending some time away from Bowdoin," he said.

"The J-Board system wouldn't work without the great effort of Dean L'wallen," said Shepherd. He said, "The Dean is the key."

"Everyone gets help from other people on homework assignments at some time or other. The question is when does helping go too far."

--Sam Shepherd

Shepherd remembered one case in which he drove back to Bowdoin from Boston during a break so that it could be heard immediately.

In a hearing before the J-Board concerning the Honor Code, the procedure ensures the rights of the accused as listed in the Student Handbook. The J-with the technical procedures of the hearing."

"When we've already spent three or four hours talking about a case, the chances that we're going to change our minds is small," said Shepherd.

Shepherd said only a few decisions reached by the five-member J-Board

IT'S TIME TO MOVE AHEAD

You are a decision away from a career of challenge, opportunity, personal recognition and reward. Our Management Training Program opens the door to today's most vital and dynamic industry—the world of banking and finance.

The "new" EAB is a vigorous institution aggressively expanding its current $6.5 billion base in New York City and Long Island. While sophisticated and urban in its marketing approach, EAB is home town in personality and nature—the best of both worlds.

Most important, at EAB you will thrive in an exciting, supportive atmosphere as you grow professionally. We encourage creativity, vision and independence, and we generously compensate achievement.

Motivated to succeed? Explore the opportunities by asking your Career Placement Office about applying for EAB's Management Training Program.

EAB
European American Bank

Equal Opportunity Employer
M/F/H/V

Member FDIC
Chartered in New York State

(Continued from page 1)

able, McKinney and Chaddha have asked for a phone bill.

Greason said he doesn't want anyone else living in the house, despite the ample number of rooms. He said he had not been approached by the other fellows, or anyone else wanting to live there. "It's not a rooming house for fellows."

He hinted the house eventually may become a home for the president who succeeds him. The current presidential home on Federal St. is occupied by the Development Office.

Other fellows, however, have expressed disappointment at Greason's decision. Eric Kulezycky, the financial aid fellow, said the situation is a problem for those fellows who had a difficult time finding housing. He thinks Greason acted too quickly in making a decision.

"There is an inequitable situation present since two fellows are being given a subsidy for rent, utilities...

who knows what else," he said.

"It's not as if there's enough room for other fellows to live there," he said.

Maine Yankee

(Continued from page 1)

increase in the cost of medical care.

King represents the Citizens' Monitoring Network and the Health Research Group. She said that the groups are beginning to blend because they support the same goal—the elimination of nuclear power in Maine. The groups are non-funded volunteer organizations.

The issue at stake has been voted on twice before, in 1980 and 1982. Both times, Maine residents voted to keep the plant open. Allen predicts the vote will once again keep Maine Yankee operating. King, however, feels that rising concern will cause a change in the ballot this year.

BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed

Something special for your Little One

- * Fine clothing - premie-6/7 yrs.
- * educational games and toys
- * shower gifts

Children's harps - beginners and professional models

149 Maine Street, Tontine Mall

HRS: Mon-Thurs. 10 - 5:30

Fri 10 - 5 Sat & Sun closed

the Greenery

Breakfast

Fresh baked muffins, French toast, omelettes, old fashioned griddle cakes and lots of hot coffee!

9:15-10:45

Lunch

Sandwiches, seafood, imaginative daily specials, and of course - devastating desserts!

11:00-2:30

Top level at

Senter's

324 MAINE STREET • BURLINGTON • MAINE • (603) 551-7255

Now that you've gotten into Bowdoin, IBM can help you get more out of it.

The road to graduation is paved with term papers, lab reports, cramming, all-nighters and, of course, exams.

To ease that journey and awaken your professors to your exceptional abilities, we suggest the newest member of the IBM® Personal System/2® family: the Model 25 Collegiate.

It's a high-powered personal computer with advanced graphics capabilities, designed to fit on your desk without adding to the clutter. And it comes with a generous 640 KB memory, two 3.5" diskette drives and an aid package every student can appreciate—a big discount, plus Microsoft® Windows 1.04, Write, Paint, Cardfile, IBM DOS 3.3 and a mouse.

Pop in the load-and-go diskette and your Model 25 Collegiate is set to help you write and revise long papers and illustrate your points by combining words and graphics. So your professors will draw favorable conclusions about your work.

For more information on the Model 25 Collegiate, visit the IBM Education Product Coordinator on campus.

You'll quickly learn how to get the most out of the IBM Personal System/2. IBM®

Microsoft is a registered trademark of the Microsoft Corporation. IBM is a registered trademark and Personal System/2 is a trademark of the International Business Machines Corporation. © IBM 1987.

Are you considering professional school?

HARVARD UNIVERSITY

JOHN F. KENNEDY SCHOOL OF GOVERNMENT

Is Looking for Future Leaders in Public Affairs.

Come Learn About Harvard's Two-Year Master's Program in Public Policy, Leading to either the Master in Public Policy or City and Regional Planning Degree.

JOINT DEGREE OPTIONS AND CROSS-REGISTRATION OPPORTUNITIES WITH OTHER SCHOOLS

MEET WITH A REPRESENTATIVE

DATE: Tues., Oct 27

TIME: 11:00 a.m.

LOCATION: PLEASE CONTACT YOUR CAREER PLACEMENT OFFICE FOR THIS INFORMATION

All Students, All Majors, All Years Welcome!

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

A Maine St. Brunch

LIZZ MILLAN

ORIENT Asst. Entertainment Editor

Many believe breakfast to be the most important meal of the day - it should be done right. If the ordinary cereal, juice and toast routine is getting boring, what better time than Parent's weekend to sample the creative alternatives offered within walking distance of Bowdoin. There exist three "Maine Street" cafes each offering something a bit different.

What started as a bakery shop in Brunswick's Tontine Mall has moved up - right up Maine Street. Tastewrights now occupies a prominent position in the first block from Bowdoin.

Why the move? As a bakery, Tastewrights offered daily hot food specials to take-out. They decided to expand in order to provide an "eat-in" area for these daily specials.

In March of 1987, they opened their new doors. A cafeteria style cafe provides customers with a place to enjoy the gourmet entries. Of course, homemade pastries remain the specialty. Tastewrights opens at 9:00 a.m., providing a light breakfast which might include a homemade muffin and a cup of Green Mountain Coffee. Wait until 10:30, and all of the homemade goodies for a filling brunch have been prepared. Everything from the soups to the quiches are made fresh each day.

As you make your way down the counter you might choose a slice of the fritatta - a baked omelette, and a fresh roll, juice would go nicely to moisten the throat; for dessert, the possibilities are endless (if you are a dessert person, this is your place!).

Most agree, the food is good and the atmosphere cozy - jazzy music adds to the mellow atmosphere. Yet Tastewrights also has its set-backs. If you are a Sunday bruncher, you can cross Tastewrights off your list - it's closed on Sundays. While you're there on Saturday morning, you may pay more than you intended to - portions are not big and it is tempting to fill your tray.

If your parents are up and you want to treat them to a filling brunch, keep in mind the portion sizes and prices, but don't forget the quality. The food is good as is the atmosphere, yet the lack of service and the high (but not outlandish) make bad food good, but they make good food even better and the food is definitely good.

"All the people who work here are really friendly - it has a great atmosphere," a Bowdoin student said.

The bagels are probably the best you'll find in Brunswick. Broadway Delicatessen is also the only place in town that makes potatoe knishes.

Blintzes also provide a tasty alternative to the standard brunch menu. For the hearty appetite, the Broadway Breakfast Special provides a hearty fill-up of scrambled eggs with lox and onion, bagel and cream cheese - all for 5.75.

On the lighter side are the herbal teas and homemade pastries and muffins. Of course, being a New York style deli, New York seltzers are also available.

The cook enjoys using his imagination in creating the daily specials. soups may include turkey noodle, cream of vegetable, mock iguana, or you name it.

If you would enjoy a brunch picnic-order take-out, Broadway Deli provides it.

Broadway Delicatessen is a friendly, owner operated deli which provides a tasty brunch menu. If you treat your parents to brunch at the Broadway deli, you will get nice portions at nice prices.

A gourmet alternative, a deli choice, what was left? Frank Brockman discovered what was missing long before I had wondered about what was left. Established seven years ago, the Omelette Shop filled the opening for an egg specialty restaurant.

"It was an adventurous undertaking, one which caught on," Mr. Brockman said.

What is the secret to this restaurant's success? There really is no secret as is apparent the moment to enter the cozy wood paneled restaurant. They are open everyday of the week from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.. Customers can enjoy brunch all day. Seating for thirty is available inside. Perhaps you and your parents would prefer to enjoy your brunch under the October sun - the outside cafe seats forty.

The Omelette Shop provides many with a creative outlet. The customer is invited to be creative. With a choice of 13 cheeses and more than four times as many other fillings for the omelette, there is plenty of room for creativity.

For the less imaginative, creative combinations have been prepared. The Mexican Omelette Surprise is filled with refried beans, ground beef, onions, tomatoes, guacamole, sour cream and a jalapeno pepper. Perhaps a banana and strawberry omelette would be more to your liking - the possibilities are endless. Omelette order prices average five dollars and include home fries and a choice of nine breads (more decisions to make).

Don't rule out the Omelette Shop if you don't enjoy omelettes. Strawberry French Toast Chantilly is a delicious alternative - heaped with fresh strawberries and whipped cream on french bread. If you're in a meat eating mood, any one of the gourmet burgers is guaranteed to soothe your appetite.

From atmosphere - beautiful photos taken by the owner decorate the walls; to service - fast and friendly; to, most important, food quality - omelettes are never greasy and always filling. The Omelette Shop provides the perfect brunch. If you don't make it there with your parents, be sure to treat yourself soon.

As you show your parents the beautiful town of Brunswick, be sure to stroll down Maine Street. Whether for a gourmet bite at Tastewrights, a creative cup of soup at Broadway Deli or an imaginative omelette at The Omelette Shop, brunch will certainly not be ordinary.

NEXT WEEK

MONDAY, OCTOBER 26

12:30 pm — Music at Noon-and-a-Half. A violin-oboe-piano trio, featuring violinist Dinos Constantinides, performs a program of 20th-century music. Room 101, Gibson Hall.

4:00 pm — An open house at the Women's Resource Center.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 27

2:00 pm — Study Abroad Representative. University of Nottingham. New conference room, Moulton Union, 2nd floor.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 28

3:00 and 8:00 pm — Weekly Wednesday Film. Woman of the Dunes.

Movie Listings:

Evening Star Cinema (Tontine Mall)

My Life As a Dog (call 729-5486 for times)

Cinema City (Cooks Corner)

Fatal Attraction, showing at 6:45 and 9:00

Hellraiser, showing at 7:00 and 9:00

Dirty Dancing, showing at 7:05 and 9:05

Chamber Choir to tour in Germany this spring

The Bowdoin Chamber Choir will be traveling to Germany this spring, performing their music at the place of its origin. The Choir sings a varied combination of a cappella and instrument-accompanied pieces, from 16th-century to 20th-century compositions.

The students will perform, stay with German families, and engage in study of Reformation history during their two-week tour. According to Robert Greenlee, assistant professor of music and director of the Choir, "the purpose of the tour is to give the Choir a sense of the history which created the music, to gain a better understanding of the music." The musical concentration will be on German Renaissance music, "for us, and some American music for the German audience," said Greenlee.

The group will leave on March 19 (the beginning of Spring Break), for the Black Forest in Southern Germany. They will perform in Altensteig on March 22, and at an as yet undecided location on March 23. The second week, the Choir will travel north to perform on March 26, 28, and 31, in Hellenheim, Kassel, and Wiesbaden respectively. On April 2, they will return to Bowdoin.

Possibly, the journey will include visits to Switzerland and France to attend the lectures of two Bowdoin professors there on leaves of absence: Paul Nyhus, professor of history, and Katherine Watson.

Financial support for the trip comes from the students themselves, as well as from a Mellon grant received by the Choir.

In the past few years, the Chamber Choir has toured the East Coast and Canada. But Greenlee terms their upcoming spring tour, "going for the big time." He would like to arrange trips overseas approximately every four years in the future.

The choir is made up of 30 singers who are chosen as a result of a rigorous audition process. Officers for the choir include Sarah Sioyos '88, president; David Nichols '88, vice-president; Kevin Wesley '89, tour manager; Linda Blanchard '88, secretary; and Anne Butler '90, librarian.

This weekend, the Chamber Choir will be performing in the Chapel at 8:15 p.m. Friday and 11:30 a.m. Sunday.

COMEDY • MIME • MUSIC

TIM SETTİMİ

endearing - funny - great music - emotional mime

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 24th

9:15 p.m.

PICKARD THEATER

THE
BRUNSWICK

FLOWER SHOP

729-8895

216A Maine St.

Mon.-Sat. 9:30-6

We Deliver

Wire Service

Centrally located across from Bowdoin College

Now... at Macbeans Music

COMPACT DISCS

... well over 1,200 of the 12,000-plus now available

If you don't see what you want,
let us get it for you!

(That gives for LPs, Tapes and Videos, too.)

Maine's most enterprising Record Shop

The Tontine, 149 Maine St.
Brunswick, Maine 04011 • (207) 729-6513

BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed

BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed

BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed

COLBY COLLEGE CONCERTS

present

INXS

with special guest
THE BRANDOS
Saturday, November 7
in Wadsworth Gym - 8:00 p.m.

Tickets $12.00

available in Bowdoin College Student Activities Office

For more information - call 872-3338

The John A. and Helen P. Becker Gallery is small—about twelve by twenty feet with an oak loveseat dominating the floor space—and it overflowed with forty people gathered for the opening of Sketches, Studies, Solutions: Drawings and the Creative Process Wednesday afternoon. Despite the limiting gallery space, the exhibition is impressive for two reasons: The show is of major museum around the room, the drawings exemplify the different stages of the drawing process—the primo pensiero, the detailed study, and the model. The show does not include representations of the fourth stage, a full-scale drawing of the envisioned project, due to their scarcity. The students selected twenty works from more than one hundred drawings in storage at the Walker Art Museum. The decision to select "the Alpine Landscape is not in the drawing process. It is a drawing in its own right." Biern asserts that it is a personal record of a "meaningful trip to the Alps" for Breugel.

The inclusion of Breugel's landscape is a vestige of the seminar's major debate over the nature of the show. Originally, Heather Johnson '88 wanted to display several landscapes in the Becker Gallery's back room. The

Jung Seminar

ROBERT WILLAMEY
ORIENT Staff

Have you ever wanted to know what significance your dreams might have?

If you have not been attending the college's weekly Jung Seminar, you might never know. The Jung Seminar, sponsored by the English Department, meets every Tuesday at 4:00 PM in the Faculty Room on the third floor of Massachusetts Hall. The seminar's purpose is to analyze and interpret the symbols of the unconscious mind.

The discussions are led by members of the faculty and Bruce Reigel. Reigel is a Jungian psychotherapist and counselor who studied at the Jung Institute in Zurich. He is presently practicing psychotherapy in the Brunswick area.

The discussions center around different aspects of the unconscious and the importance of the symbols they contain. Jungian enthusiasts believe the symbols found in the unconscious can help us obtain a balance between our conscious and unconscious states. Jung believed such a balance was necessary in order to lead a healthy life.

This week's discussion focused on a dream presented by a seminar participant. The participant recounted the dream:

A woman was descending a long trail. At the bottom of the trail she found a stream, and in the stream discovered a large golden nugget veined with quartz crystal.

The audience pondered the meaning of the dream and offered opinions, ranging from the dream's religious to its sexual implications.

Next week's seminar will address nightmares and will put particular emphasis on student nightmares. This topic is scheduled for the next three seminars.

Professor of Religion William D. Geoghegan, the seminar's moderator, invites all interested students to attend and hopes participation will prove enlightening. Who knows? Perhaps I may even learn something about those nightmares I've been having on my Old English exam.

Students organize Old Master Drawing exhibit Museum design

Left, Betsy Biern lectures on Old Master Drawings in the Becker Art Gallery. At the right, is a drawing entitled "Woman & Child" by Bernardino Poccetti, a gift of James Bowdoin III in 1811. All the show's drawings came from the Walker Art Museums collections.

quality according to Professor of Art Carolyn Wood and, more importantly, students designed, organized, researched, and developed the exhibition.

A class project for the Studies in Renaissance and Baroque Art seminar, the show emphasizes the preparatory sketches and drawings Sixteenth and Seventeenth century artists used to visualize and plan their finished works. Usually done in pen and brown ink or chalk, the drawings relate the genesis of the creative process. "We wanted to teach people," says seminar member Sarah Holloway '88 of the show's approach, "and not highlight some vague theme like biblical imagery."

Arranged to be viewed clockwise

Creative Process" as the show's theme was not difficult to reach says Holloway, "it was the most logical approach."

The drawings cannot be considered mere sketchings hinting at treasures to follow; the drawings stand as art on their own ground. Hilary Rapkin '89, speaking at the show's opening, emphasized the artist's use of chalk to create flowing "organic" lines and accent certain features.

Ironically, the show's proclaimed "masterpiece," Pieter Bruegel the Elder's Alpine Landscape, does not fit into the overall scheme. In her gallery talk at the show's opening, Betsy Biern '89 (Mt. Holyoke) said, "Bruegel's majority of the seminar decided otherwise and the backroom remains empty save for the doors to the lavatories. Breugel's inclusion, says Johnson, partially stems from her insistence "to put Breugel in because it was the masterpiece of the collection."

The students who conceived and developed the show are: Betsy Biern, Ginny Blossom, Scott Briton, Sarah Holloway, Donna Ingham, Heather Johnson, Lisa Kelly, Christopher Pennington, Hilary Rapkin, Juliana Robertson, Matt Wilcox, and Linda Woodhull. Professor Carolyn Wood teaches the class.

—S.Reynolds

Whiteside questions social ethics

LANCE HICKEY
ORIENT Contributor

Social and ethical obligation of community members was the subject of this week's chapel talk given by professor of history William D. Whiteside.

Whiteside began by illustrating how the Bowdoin community was once able to handle ethical questions by offering specific courses, such as moral philosophy, or by required chapel attendance seven days a week. He believes the college needs to revive its interest in dealing with these problems.

Whiteside illustrated his point by using the case of Asher B. Edelman as an example. Edelman, a professor at the Columbia University Business school, offered $100,000 finder's fee to the student who could successfully identify a company for possible corporate raiding.

Although the college forced Edelman to rescind this offer, Whiteside maintained that this instance pointed out the clash of values between the academic and business worlds. He then pointed to the recent Stock Market disaster and suggested that we, as a community, focus on the issue to help alleviate community suffering as a result of the disaster.

Whiteside believes that Edelman's proposal at Columbia, and similar proposals at Bowdoin should be conducted, as long as they are "for fairness, for honesty, and for creating in their business and professional activities a better setting for young people and for persons yet unborn."

As long as ethical education remains aloof from politics, Whiteside insists it should be encouraged.

Whiteside ended his talk by making his own proposal. He is offering a hamburger (royal) and soda at the Moulton Union for the student who can answer how to alleviate the ethical ignorance at Bowdoin College.

THE

PEPE'S SING ALONG SONG~
Once there was a horse
who had a big NOSE...

THEN ONE DAY HE RAN into a TREE...
BOONK!

HE LIKED LICKING JELLY off his toes...

NOW THERE'S Lots of
Glue for you & ME!

NEED TO DOCTOR YOUR MCAT SCORE?

If your MCAT score needs a shot in the arm, come to the experts in test preparation—Stanley H. Kaplan.

Our test-taking techniques and educational review will help you be in top condition test day. We'll not only sharpen your scientific knowledge, but your reading, problem-solving, and essay-writing skills too.

Summer courses are registering now. So call the best in test prep—Kaplan. And get an MCAT score that you deserve.

KAPLAN
STANLEY H. KAPLAN EDUCATIONAL CENTER LTD.

DON'T COMPETE WITH
A KAPLAN STUDENT—BE ONE

Maine classes for
April MCAT now forming -
Call to reserve your place!

(617) 964-TEST collect.

Notes on the James Bond film festival

Connery is back.

Forget about the twentyfifth anniversary Bond wimp Timothy Dalton and his eighties' one woman/ safe-sex business—after all if a super spy has enough balls to wrestle with a Russian agent dangling from a cargo plane at 20,000 feet then he can fool around at the hotel a little bit too. He may experience The Living Daylights but goes to bed after the ten o' clock news.

Roger Moore is a smart mouthed buffoon, giggling at his own lame jokes, in a rented Pierre Cardin tuxedo who works more on his sultan than saving Western Civilization from communists and other crackpots.

Sean Connery as Bond, however, doesn't waste time being witty and concentrates on more important matters when strapped to a table with a laser slowly inching towards his crotch. The danger is real and Connery's Bond both realizes the situations' immediacy (he's frightened for one thing) and struggles his way out of it. And no serious lovey-dubby affairs for this man.

Connery is the James Bond and the four films to be shown this weekend are arguably the best in the Bond canon. Goldfinger and From Russia with Love represent two major themes Bond films cover—world domination, and East versus West confrontations. Goldfinger's memorable villains, Oddjob and Auric Goldfinger, give the film it's comic book menacing backdrop without sacrificing all of the villains' believability. The plot involves world domination, but does not go overboard emphasizing the villains' craziness like The Spy Who Loved Me or needlessly toying with low budget special effects like Moonraker.

From Russia with Love is the most realistic and plausible of all the Bond films. Bond must steal a decoder from a Russian Embassy in Turkey—that's it, West outwits the East. And a frustrated grandma spy with poison tipped high heels is something not to be missed in any movie.

—S.Reynolds

This weekend, the Bowdoin Film/ Video Society presents a special series of James Bond films in honor of Parents Weekend. Instead of the usual two films, this weekend will feature a different movie at each showing for a total of four films.

Showing tonight will be Ian

Fleming's agent 007— Sean Connery—in Dr. No at 7:30 and in From Russia With Love at 10:00 p.m. Tomorrow night features Goldfinger and Thunderball. Bring Mom and Dad to see these action-packed movies, as always, only $1 with or without a Bowdoin I.D.

WRC Open House

LAURIE DUCHOVNY

ORIENT Contributor

The Women's Resource Center Library (WRC) is located at 24 College St.. Funded by the Dean's office, the WRC Library is an academic resource for women's issues at Bowdoin. However, with 2,000 volumes, over 26 current periodicals, and endless files on women and women's studies, the WRC Library still remains a mystery to the majority of this campus.

On Monday, October 26 at 4 p.m., the WRC is holding an open house for everyone interested in what the WRC has to offer.

In its sixth year, the WRC Library is the center for women's studies at Bowdoin College. The WRC Library has always had reserves for women's studies classes and has excellent research facilities. There is also a music library with a special tape section dedicated to women writers and poets such as Andrienne Rich and Toni Morrison reading from their works.

Thus far there is no evidence for an Agatha Christie novel, but the mystery of the WRC Library lies not only the lack of publicity but also the mystique attached to a library dedicated to women.

The WRC Library is open to everyone. It is a primary resource for women's studies research at the college. As Sarah Holloway, a monitor at the library said, "This library is a resource — so it is here for everyone."

The WRC Library is a quiet place where you can escape the maddening hum of the Hawthorne-Longfellow lights, find books not in the H-L Library, and simply have an alternative working space.

Women's Resource Center Hours: Sunday - Friday, 3-5 p.m. 7-11 p.m.

Constitution lecture

"Bringing the U.S. Constitution in Tune With the 20th Century," a lecture by Everett C. Ladd, president and executive director of the Roper Center for Public Opinion Research, will be given this Wednesday at 8 p.m. in Daggett Lounge.

A native of Saco and a 1959 graduate of Bates College, Ladd is professor of political science at the University of Connecticut, Storrs. He has published numerous works about the American political system, among them Where Have All the Voters Gone? and Trans- formations of the American Party System: Political Coalitions From the New Deal to the 1970s.

Ladd's lecture is the third in a series of events sponsored by Bowdoin and Bates Colleges on the occasion of the bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution. The theme of the series is "The U.S. Constitution: Into the Third Century."

The series has been coordinated by Bates Professor of history Ernest P. Muller and William B. Whiteside, Frank Munsey Professor of History at Bowdoin.

DENIM STYLE

JUNIORS DO A GREAT BALANCING ACT—THAT'S THE LONG AND THE SHORT OF IT!

The new long division—that's what smart juniors are doing. It starts with the hot new denim duster going to great lengths over the denim short, short, short skirt. A fabulous new proportion for a fabulous young body! Sizes 5-13

Duster, $60.00
Skirt, $30.00

Canterbury Shop

FINE MEN'S AND WOMEN'S APPAREL

Cooks Corner, Brunswick Promenade Mall, Lewiston

Monday thru Saturday 9:30 to 9:00

Cards and Clothing
to keep you in stitches.

THE WORKS

141 MAINE ST. 729-8064
BRUNSWICK, ME 04011

“What distinguishes J.P. Morgan starts with the investment we make in you.”

At J.P. Morgan, we look for potential, not polished skill. And if we find it in you, we'll give you outstanding training right from the start, and movement through different jobs – often through different parts of the world. Whether your major is English literature or economics, we offer opportunities to work for a global financial firm in corporate finance, mergers and acquisitions, securities sales and trading, public finance, foreign exchange, private banking, human resources, and operations and systems management.

Contact Lisa Nilsson Gabler, Corporate Recruitment, J.P. Morgan & Co. Incorporated, 23 Wall Street, NY, NY 10015.

Strength and continuity: Morgan's new headquarters rise on Wall Street; other principal offices are located throughout Europe, Asia and Australia, and Latin America.

JPMorgan

KRISTINA'S

BAKERY RESTAURANT

Everyone's favorite for Breakfast,
Lunch & Dinner

*Deliciously different menus
Delectable pastries
Friendly atmosphere
Outdoor dining in Summer
Fine wines, beers, specialty coffees
Cocktails*

Open 7 days a week
at the corner of
Center & High St.,
Bath, Maine 04530
(207) 442-8577

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 23

7:30 and 10:00 pm — Weekly
Weekend Film Series. Dr. No. (7:30) and From Russia with Love (10:00).
Presented by BFVS in Smith Auditorium. Admission $1.

8:00 — 11:00 pm — Wherefore Art display and coffee house. Visual Arts Center.

8:15 pm — Music Showcase. Concert by the Bowdoin Chamber Choir and members of the Bowdoin Community Orchestra and the Bowdoin Wind Ensemble. Chapel.

8:30 pm — 12:30 am — Olde Fashioned Ice Cream Shoppe. Joy Spring
Jazz Ensemble entertains. The Pub.

Parents' Week

1:30 pm — JV football
Academy.

1:30 pm — Study with Ana Brown, assistants, and students who sin 1986-87. Daggett L-worth.

2:00 pm — Soviet E-
Live from Moscow. En-assistant professor of Language Media Center.

2:00 — 4:00 pm —
Coleman Farm Bird Bar
Led by Charles Hunting-emeritus of biology, a Wheelwright, assistant biology. Vans leave from at 2:10 p.m. for the four-

2:30 — 3:30 pm — S-
Issues Panel. Patricia Rat-tor of counseling servman, R.N., Ian Buchan assistant, and Bob Bila
Daggett Lounge, Wentw-

3:00 — 4:00 pm — G-
the Bowdoin College M-Clifton C. Olds, profess-acting director of the M-
Walker Art Building.

3:30 — 4:30 pm —
sion on Women. Maryal ordinator of the wom-center, Phyllis Pascariell assistant professor of anthchel Dobkin '90, Lynn V.
Daggett Lounge, Wentw-

— Farley Fy-
new swimming pool on d-match, water polo comp-training program feat-door hockey team. Fick-

9:15 pm — Campus Concert. Recent Works by the Bowdoin Dance Group. Performances by the Mediabemptsers and Miscellania. Pickard Theater.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 24

9:00 am — "Asian Studies at Bow-doin College". John Holt, associate professor of religion. Faculty Room, Massachusetts Hall.

— "Bowdoin Students in the Arctic: Slide Presentation of Summer 1987 Arctic Studies Program".
Susan Kaplan, assistant professor of anthropology. Beam Classroom, VAC.

— "High Temperature Superconductivity". Dale Syphers, assistant professor of physics. Room 101, Searles.

10:00 am — "The Holocaust and Imaginative Writing: Why Literature?". Steven Cerf, associate professor of German. Room 314, Searles.

— "Glasnost via Soviet Television". Jane Knox, associate professor of Russian. Language Media Center, Sills Hall.

— "Financing the High Cost of Education". Walter Moulton, director of student aid. Daggett Lounge, Wenworth Hall.

11:15 am — A Discussion with the President. A. LeRoy Gresson, president. Daggett Lounge, Wentworth
Hall.

1:00 pm — Men's soccer vs. Bab-son.

MONTSWEAG FARM RESTAURANT

An enjoyable and affordable big red barn of the sea, halfway between Bath and Wiscasset on Rt. 1. Good and simple food and beverages served in a casual atmosphere of nautical hand-me-downs.

LOBSTER - STEAKS - COCKTAILS
Daily Noon Specials - Banquet Facilities
Private Dining Room - Reservations Accepted

11:30 - 8:00 Sun. - Thu.
'til 8:30 Fri. & Sat.
MC/VISA/AE
443-6563

PARENTS!

Give your college student a very special care package! An Ice Cream Cake from Ben & Jerry's for birthdays, study breaks, exams, surprises, rainy days...

Call and order your
cake today.

Free Delivery (207) 725-2725
96 Maine Street, Brunswick

Bowdoin Steakhouse

Serving dinner

from 5-9 Sun-Thurs
5-10 Fri & Sat

Serving Lunch 11:30-2 Mon-Fri

115 Maine Street, Brunswick

(207) 725-2314

Tontine Fin

We've just receive of homemade pe
By the piece or b
come in and tr
We are in the Tor

LOOKOUT POINT HOUSE

Harpwell Maine
(207) 833-5509
Winter rentals available
Monthly and seasonal
Either inc. breakfast or not
We welcome Christmas and
Holiday functions.
OPEN ALL YEAR

NEW FALL/WINTER HOURS — OPEN MONDAYS

HARPSWELL INN
RESTAURANT

ROUTE 123
NORTH HARPSWELL
MAINE
(207) 729-1210

MAJOR CREDIT CARDS
ACCEPTED

COUPON GOOD FOR 10% DISCOUNT

EFFECTIVE MONDAY OCTOBER 5th

Sunday Brunch 9am-2pm
Monday and Thursday 5:30-8:30pm
Friday and Saturday 5:30-9:00pm
Closed Tuesday and Wednesday

2nd Calendar

lvs. Bridgton

Abroad Panel on dean of studied abroad cunge, Wen-

vening News
gene Huskey, government.
Sills Hall.

Field Trip to ding Station.
on, professor id Nathaniel professor of Searles Hall mile drive.

nulent Health
hbone, direc-
s, Nan Hartphysician's
s, counselor.
rth.

uided tour of scum of Art.
or of art and
scum of Art.

Panel Discuslunsinger, con's resource a, visiting as-opology, Raogebstien '88.
orth.

ld House and isplay. Tennis
ation, weight
ng the Bowrd Field.

3:30 — 4:30 pm — Worldwide
Television Live via Satellite. Director
Carmen Greenlee displays the latest foreign films and live TV feeds received by Bowdoin. Language Media Center, Sills Hall.

4:00 — 5:30 pm — President's Reception. President and Mrs. A. Le-Roy Greason welcome students and parents to Johnson, 256 Maine Street.

— Senior Class Reception. Main Lounge, Moulton Union.

7:30 and 10:00 pm — Weekly
Weekend Films. Goldfinger (7:30) and Thunderball (10:00). Presented by the BEVS. Smith Auditorium. Admission
$1.

8:00 pm — Miscellaneous and the Meddiebumpsters in concert. Daggett Lounge, Wentworth.

8:30 pm — 12:30 am — Olde Fashioned Ice Cream Shoppe. The Pub.

9:15 pm — Tim Settimi performs mime, music and high comedy. Pickard Theater.

10:00 pm — The Student Union
Committee presents music and dancing with the Bowdoin Swing Band. Dining Room, Moulton Union.

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 25

11:00 am — Coffee at the Newman
Center.

11:30 am — Concert. Bowdoin
Chamber Choir performs English music for choir and organ. Chapel.

12:15 pm — Family Fun Run. Sponsored by the senior class. Three mile run, starting at 12:15 p.m. Registration will be from 9:30 a.m. to 11:00 a.m. by the Polar Bear. The fee is $3 per person or $7 per family. A portion of the funds collected will be donated to the Brunswick-Bath Area United Way. Various prizes will be awarded.

3:00 pm — Gallery Talk. "Renaissance and Baroque Drawings from the Permanent Collection." Carolyn H.
Wood, visiting assistant professor of art. Walker Art Building.

3:00 pm — Foreign Film Series.
Ikuru, directed by Akira Kurosawa.
Japanese with English subtitles. Smith Auditorium.

BEHIND COLES TOWER

the Samuel
Newman
House

7 South St., Brunswick, Me. 04011
For Reservations, call (207) 729-6959

BED & BREAKFAST

Serving
Dinner
from
5-9 p.m.

Sunday
Dinner
noon-
8 p.m.

Casual Country Dining
with homemade soups,
breads and desserts

Reservations Recommended
Rt. 123, Harpswell Center 833-5305

Main Street,
Freeport

865-4196

Noted under landlord
Jameson for its quality spirits
and excellent cuisine,
we aspire to an old tradition.
Steaks • Seafood
• Cocktails

Light meals in the Lounge
Banquet Facilities
Map 4 No. 97

e Candies

d a new batch
anut brittle!!
y the pound -
y some!
tine Mall.

KEGS WINE BEER

THE SHOP WITH THE MOST SURPRISING INVENTORY...AND LOWEST PRICES!
729-0711

26 Bath Road, Brunswick, 729-0711 Mon. Sat. 10 to 6

76 UNION STREET BRUNSWICK CORSICAN

The Corsican in Brunswick
has new hours:
open daily 9-4
Closed Tuesday.

729-8117

The Corsican
in Freeport:
full menu
full service
open daily 11 - 8
closed Tuesday

ITALIANS DELIVERED. FREE.

Announcing free delivery service for all Amato's great food!

Amato's in Brunswick will now deliver many of its great menu items. And they'll deliver them free. It's the ultimate in fast, convenient service. Delicious pastas, pizzas, calzone, and dinners and our famous Italian sandwiches with fresh cold cuts, thick slices of plump tomatoes and more are only a phone call away. With a minimum order of $15.00, these and many other of our menu items can be at your door, as fresh and as fast as if you ordered them at the counter.

Sunday-Thursday, 4 pm to 11:30 pm
Friday and Saturday, 4 pm to midnight

So call ahead and enjoy speedy, free delivery from the home of the original Italian sandwich.

THERE'S NOTHING LIKE A REAL ITALIAN.

135 Maine Street, Brunswick
Open 6 am-midnight, Sun.-Thur.; 6 am-1 am, Fri. and Sat.
Call 729-5514 for fast take-out and free delivery.

BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed

Support
research.*American Heart AssociationWE'RE FIGHTING FOR YOUR LIFEPauline's
Bloomers

Congratulations Brad!

Tontine Mall, Brunswick, 725-5862

QUALITY FLORAL SERVICE

Anniversary, Birthday, Hospital, Wedding, Sympathy, Holiday, All Occasions

Flowers, Plants & Gifts

We Deliver

Wire Service

Balloons & Candy

Major Credit Cards Accepted • Open 8 days 8:00 to 5:30

benetton*PARENTS' DAY SALE

PRESENT YOUR BOWDOIN I.D.

AND GET 20 % OFF

2ND QUALITY MERCHANDISE

AND 10 % OFF

1ST QUALITY 1987 FALL MERCHANDISE

56 MAIN STREET
FREEPORT, MAINECasual
Sportswear

Imported from France

For men and womenFreeport Village Square
2 Depot St., Freeport, ME
865-3066THE ORIGINAL
"TRIPLE LOBSTER PLATE"*$12.95

(only served at)

THE TASTE
OF MAINE*443 - 4554*ROUTE ONE, WOOLWICH*½ mile north of Bath

SPORTS

Before falling to Williams, the Polar Bears crushed Tufts 45-14. The game was marked by an impressive Bowdoin ground attack that gained 350 yards. Photo by Lori Bodwell.

Bears bow to Williams

ERIC PALMQUIST
ORIENT Staff

The last two weeks have seen the Polar Bears fall from the top of the football world to the bottom of it, as they quickly fell behind 13-0. They had been able to overcome a similar deficit against Norwich, but this time they were unable to move the ball against the stubborn Williams' defense, as their only score came on a Gregg Bohannon (116 yards) touchdown run late in the fourth quarter. The Bears have now outscored their opponents in every quarter except the first.

The Ephemen's defensive line was the key as they harassed quarterbacks Ryan Stafford and Mike Kirch into throwing three interceptions, while sacking them six times for almost 50 yards in losses.

The Polar Bears played fine defense after the first quarter, however, as they held Williams to only 14 first downs. Nose guard Ed Daft led the team with 12 tackles and a sack, and defensive end Dave Otto blocked a field goal. All told, they held Ephemen runners to barely three yards per rush.

Stopping the run was also the key in the victory over Tufts. Jumbo's full-back Tim Fanikos was gunning for his third consecutive 200 yard game, but the Polar Bear defensive line, led by Daft and Otto, dominated their counterparts. When the day was over, Fanikos had been held to a mere 46 yards.

When the Jumbos tried to run the option from their wishbone offense, the Bear defenders pursued them everywhere. Linebackers John Ollis, Rick Arena, and Ken Fusco combined for 21 tackles, frequently shutting down the option before it could begin. Tufts managed only 123 yards rushing on the day, averaging less than three yards a carry, while amassing only seven first downs.

Meanwhile, the Bears were accumulating wishbone-like stats, as they racked up 350 yards on the ground. Bohannon led the show as he carried 26 times for 197 yards. It was a record tying fourth consecutive 100 yard game for Gregg, and for his efforts he was awarded his second Golden Helmet award of the year.

Also leading the ground attack were quarterback Mike Kirch, who foiled the Tufts defense by scrambling for 77 yards, Rich Ledbury, who rushed for 29 yards in only five carries, and Gerry Cronin, who bulled his way into the endzone for the Bears final score.

Stafford and Kirch further frustrated the Jumbos by consistently connecting on key passes. Tight end John Hayden and wide receiver Mike Cavanaugh were the most frequent targets, as they caught five passes between them for 87 yards.

The game did not look to be so easy at first, however. Tufts took the opening kickoff and marched down the field, mixing up their plays beautifully with a reverse and two passes, the last one for a touchdown.

Bowdoin answered right back with a score of their own, however, as Bohannon broke away on a 47 yard run for the first of his four touchdowns. He then pounded over from two yards out to put the Bears ahead to stay, 14-7.

After Kirch had put the Bears ahead 21-7 with an eight yard scamper, the Jumbos picked off a pass deep in Bear territory and made the best of it on a five yard run by Fanikos. With just minutes to go in the first half it seemed to be anyone's game.

But it was not to be, as the Polar Bears took the ensuing kickoff and drove down the field. Bohannon culminated the drive by punching in for the touchdown, and the Bears never looked back.

Women's soccer maintains ranking

TONY JACCACI
ORIENT Staff

"We knew that we were heading into the toughest part of our schedule and I was quite pleased with our performance," stated women's varsity soccer coach John Cullen whose team won three games and lost its first two matches in the past two weeks.

While Bowdoin played excellent soccer in defeating Tufts, Southern Maine University and Wesleyan, the Polar Bears were beaten by the University of Vermont and number one ranked Plymouth State. Bowdoin is still ranked second in division III soccer behind Plymouth State and boasts an impressive 8-2-1 record.

Bowdoin will face New Hampshire College at home this afternoon in what should prove to be another tough game.

Bowdoin hosted Tufts University for the homecoming game and won a close contest by a score of 3-2. Bowdoin launched a quick attack against the Tufts goal and scored the first three goals. Bowdoin goals came from freshman Christine Neill, junior Jennifer Russell and sophomore Karen Crehore respectively.

The Jumbos came back and scored two goals in the second half, one of which was scored on a penalty shot. The Polar Bear defense quickly rose to the occasion and closed the door on the Tufts squad. The game ended with a 3-2 victory that was well appreciated by the Alumni crowd.

Bowdoin's next foe was Southern Maine University. Bowdoin dominated the game and beat SMU by a score of 3-0. Christine Neill began the scoring for Bowdoin and she was followed by Jen Russell and Liz Brown. SMU succeeded in using the offside trap against the Polar Bears later in the game thus shutting the team out for the rest of the contest.

Bowdoin suffered its first loss last Friday at the hands of the University of Vermont, a Division I team. Bowdoin traveled to UVM and encountered difficulty in trying to score against a strong defensive squad. The first half ended in a 0-0 tie and when UVM scored two quick goals in the opening minutes of the second half, the Polar Bears were never able to climb back into the game. At the final whistle, Bowdoin had lost its first game to UVM by a score of 2-0.

It was back on the bus for the women as they traveled to Wesleyan for their next match on the following day. The ten hour bus ride did not seem to take its toll on the team as Bowdoin scored with only two minutes gone in the game. Christine Neill, who would turn in an excellent performance this day, put the Polar Bears on the scoreboard first. Wesleyan fought back and tied the score at 1-1 going into the half.

Wesleyan continued its momentum and scored a second goal only three minutes into the half to go up by the score of 2-1. The Polar Bears buckled down and began to play their type of soccer. Coach Cullen felt that if the squad could tie the game, Bowdoin would win it. Sue Ingram answered the call as she hit a 15 yard shot into the upper right hand corner of the net, late in the half, to tie the score. Regulation ended with a score of 2-2.

Bowdoin wasted no time in the overtime as Neill scored her second goal of the day and what would prove to be the game winner. With only 30 seconds gone in the first overtime period, Neill received a through ball and sped after it for a breakaway. As the Wesleyan goal-keepers rushed out, Neill coolly tipped the ball into the corner of the net for the go

(Continued on page 17)

A Bowdoin field hockey players battles for the loose ball. Bowdoin went on to defeat Plymouth State 4-1. Photo by Mary Ann Lal

Field Hockey ups record to 7-2-1

JULIE FELNER
ORIENT Contributor

There can be no doubt about the tremendous success of the women's varsity field hockey team this season. The last four games have demonstrated the polished skills, organization, and unity of the team. One tie against Tufts and three consecutive wins over Wesleyan, Southern Maine, and Plymouth State place the Bears at #3 in New England with a record of 7-2-1.

Saturday October 14th's match against Tufts was in Coach Sally LaPointe's words "a very even game." Halfway through the first period, Tuft's Melissa Lowe, assisted by Aryn Landau, scored the first goal of the game off a penalty corner. Bowdoin tied up the game in the last 10 minutes of the first half with an unassisted score by Sheila Carroll. Despite the total of 35 shots for the Bears and 37 for Tufts, the score remained 1-1 throughout the entire game and the two ten-minute overtime periods.

On the following Wednesday, Bowdoin crushed the University of Southern Maine 3-1. Early in the first half, co-captain Linda Woodhull, unassisted, pocketed Bowdoin's first goal. Soon after, USM player Ashley Hayes, on an assist from Kristin Potito, evened the score. Then, with one minute left in the half, Carroll, on an assist from Kate Erda, regained Bowdoin's lead. An additional goal by co-captain Laura Bongiorni in the second half cemented the win. Potito, USM's high scorer, was completely shut out by Kathy McPherson's superb man-to-man coverage and the unrelenting efforts of defenselwoman Kathy McCormick. Goalie Lynn Warner also played a great game with 11 saves in total.

This past Saturday, the persistent Bears secured another win conquering Wesleyan 5-1. Bowdoin controlled the game the entire time. Carroll started the Bears off with a goal on an assist from

(Continued on page 17)

Cross Country Cruises

DAVID A. NUTE
ORIENT Contributor

The women's cross country team took the NESCAC finals by storm last Saturday taking second place in the overall standings. The entire team pulled together for an exceptional showing on all fronts to beat the team's previous best fifth place in the 1983 finals. The first runner to cross the line for Bowdoin was Deanna Hodgkin, '89, whose sixth place finish secured her a birth on the All-Conference Team.

Marilyn Fredey placed a close ninth as the second Bowdoin runner. Perhaps the most outstanding personal efforts on the team were made by Rose Dougherty, '89, and Kim Dirlam, '91, whose 23rd and 35th place finishes sewed up the team's placing. The team's final scoring member arrived in the form of Gwen Kay, '91, running right behind Dirlam in 36th place. Jennifer Snow, '91, and Margaret Heron, '91, crossed the line in 42nd and 56th place to take the Bears on home.

The team fared considerably well with five freshmen on the team, and great performances seem assured in the future. Tufts took the meet with 39 points, and Bowdoin followed with 109. Bates took third with a close 111 points, followed by Middlebury (112), and Williams (116). Six other schools and 77 runners participated in the meet to round out the eleven school score card.

Bowdoin controls the ball. Photo by Dave Wilby.

Volleyball nets mixed results in SMU tournament

TANYA WEINSTEIN
ORIENT Staff

After playing two matches last week, the volleyball team stands at an overall record of 14-10.

The team beat Thomas on October 13, maintaining its high rating in Maine with a record of 10-3 in state play. On October 17, they participated in a tournament at Southeastern Massachusetts University. The team was able to win two games against UMass at Boston and Wheaton. However, they lost to both SMU and Bates.

The members played well despite the absence of Penny Palevsky, who will be out the rest of the season due to an injury.

The loss to Bates has caused the Bowdoin volleyball team to lose its first place position in the Maine Power Rating for the first time this season. Bates now holds the number one position in the state.

The last two season matches will be held tomorrow at Amherst. Bowdoin will play both Amherst and Wellesley. Coach Lynn Ruddy feels confident that the team is capable of beating both opponents. She said, however, that the outcome is never predictable: "Volleyball is such an up and down game, such a fast-paced game...it can turn on you any moment."

The outcome of the match tomorrow will help to decide whether the team will be chosen for the NYAC regional tournament to be held at the end of the month. If they win, the chances of getting into NYAC are good. Only four teams can participate, and Ruddy said, "It's a big toss up amongst all of the teams (in the region) except for Bates."

Ruddy said that one of the season goals is to be invited to this tournament. She said that even if the team loses the tournament, "it is still an honor to have been chosen as a second year varsity team."

The state championship will be the final tournament of the season. It will be held in early November. Although Bates is now in first place in the state, Ruddy believes that the team still has a chance of winning the championship. She said, "We have the potential. It's just a matter of keeping it together."

Bears Beaten in last three outings

TOD DILLON
ORIENT Staff

Following a solid victory on Homecoming Weekend, the men's soccer team has fallen into a slump just recently. Bowdoin's 1-0 shutout of Tufts brought the men's record up to 6-1 but then three successive losses have dropped them to 6-4.

On Homecoming Weekend students and alumni were treated to what proved to be Bowdoin's fourth shutout of the 1987 season as the Polar Bears controlled a pesky Tuft's squad. At 18:22 of the first half, Lance Conrad scored the lone goal of the game on an assist from Bobby Schultz. That would be all the hosts needed as they outshot the Jumbos, 15-5 on a damp Saturday morning. In goal for the Polar Bears, Peter Levitt had 1 save to register the shutout.

Tuesday, October 13th brought Division I University of Maine to Pickard Field. The Black Bears, ranked 7th in New England Division I, proved to be a little too strong for the Polar Bears that day.

Maine quickly opened things up at 1:01 of the first half when Brian Spike put home a Brian Matt pass. The visitors continued to apply the pressure, and it paid off again at 24:05. Once again Matt and Spike were involved but it was Bob Brule who finished off the play for the score.

Before the half ended, Maine appeared to score again but Spike was called for holding in front of the net so the tally was nullified.

In the second half the Polar Bears attempted to mount an attack, and it was a melee, not a goal, that resulted. Chasing a shot on net, Schultz bumped into Maine goalie Todd Brennan at 29:40 of the second half. Brennan lost his cool and charged Schultz fists flying. Both teams erupted and the game was halted. Brennan was ejected for fighting while Schultz was removed for charging.

The Black Bears followed up the fracas with the game's final goal at 40:45 when Tom Phillips collected a rebound out front and beat goalie Will Waldorf.

This past Saturday found the Bears in Williamstown on the short end of a 2-1 decision against the 10th ranked Division III team in the nation.

After a scoreless first half Williams broke the ice at 26:35 of the second when Doug Brooks scored on an assist from Dan Calichman. Robert Lake scored the game winner at 31:50 with Steve Bailey assisting. Bowdoin answered at 37:44 when Stathis Manousos set up Dave Novaria to make it 2-1. It was not enough though as the Ephrussi held off the Polar Bears, dropping them to 6-3.

The Colby White Mules played host to the Bears on Wednesday and shut them out, 2-0. Colby got both goals in the first half, and it would be all that they would need as they kept the Polar Bears at bay. Defenseman Blair Dills expressed frustration over the afternoon saying "We just didn't seem to have it together today."

Hopefully this weekend will prove to be different as the men hope to play well for a Parent's Weekend crowd.

The IBM Personal System/2 is here.

Introducing the IBM Personal System/2 family: a full range of high performance, advanced design computers. From the new model 25 Collegiate to the powerful model 80, IBM has the Personal System/2 that's just right for you.

Announcing!

The IBM Education Product Coordinator

Save up to 40%*

Now Bowdoin College students, faculty and staff can buy the Personal System/2 at truly affordable prices. Just order your PS/2 through the on-campus IBM Education Product Coordinator. You can save up to 40% on most PS/2 models and accessories. To place your order, contact...

The IBM Education Product Coordinator
Call John Balling (X3785), or
Ted Kim (833-5834/M.U. Box 421)

So check it out. You'll find the PS/2 graphics are spectacular.
So is the value.

IBM

*Offer limited to qualified students, faculty and staff of Bowdoin College. Prices subject to change. Personal System/2 is a trademark of IBM Corp.

JOYSRING
A Z Z QUARTET
Friday, October 23
9-12 P.M.
The Bear Necessity

Bohannon wins coveted Golden Helmet a second time

MATT LONDON

ORIENT Staff

For senior running back Greg Bohannon, this football season has been the stuff for storybooks. He has simply been outstanding in leading what seems to be a very promising Bowdoin team.

His numbers are indeed impressive. In five games he has rushed for 657 yards or 131.4 a game. As of last weekend that figure put him fourth in the nation among Division III backs. Bohannon has also set a school record by running for 100 yards in five consecutive games. Add the eight touchdowns he has scored and you begin to sense the kind of year he's having.

His play has earned him regional attention. Twice this season he has won the Gold Helmet Award, given by the ground and added 100 yards on catches for good measure.

It was, however, in the Tufts game that Bohannon really distinguished himself, rushing for a career high 197 yards. Bohannon said he was inspired by his mother's presence at the game. It was the first time she had seen her son play at Bowdoin.

Vandersea only has praise for Bohannon. The coach added that he is a tremendously hard worker and does many things well. "He's never satisfied. He has really taken his play to another level through studying and learning our system and opposing defenses. And that is the mark of a great player," Vandersea said.

Bohannon also feels that knowing the system better than two years ago, when he was an all-ECAC performer, has been a big reason for his success this season. He also gave credit to his offensive line especially co-captain Chip Davis and tight end Dodds Hayden.

But it would be wrong to underplay Bohannon's individual talents. According to Vandersea, he has great innate skill that he has taken advantage of through practicing.

Last year, Bohannon did not play because he was studying away.

Bohannon has been somewhat of a workhouse in the backfield carrying the ball close to 25 times a game, and he says he liked that role. "I didn't work hard all summer to sit on the bench," he said.

Though he seems to be taking his success this season very much in stride, Bohannon said he was glad to receive the Gold Helmets and hopes to keep his play up the rest of the season.

Senior tailback Greg Bohannon is having an incredible season, rushing for over 100 yard each of five games.

Greg Bohannon

New England Football Writers in conjunction with Coca-Cola of Boston for the outstanding college performance of the week for small New England schools. The only other Polar Bears to win a Gold Helmet during Coach Howard Vandersea stay at Bowdoin are Chuck Piacentini and Tony Rubico.

Bohannon's first award was for his performance in the Norwich opener in which he galloped for 138 yards on the

TYPISTS - Hundreds weekly
at home! Write: P.O. Box 17
Clark, New Jersey 07066

BIG RED Q PRINTING

next to the College

- stationery
- resumes
- posters
- newsletters

212E Maine Street
Brunswick
729-4840

Bain & Company, Inc.

Management Consultants

cordially invites

The Bowdoin College Classes of 1988 & 1989

to a presentation and reception on
Associate Consultant Career Opportunities
and Internships in
Corporate Strategy Consulting

Boston

San Francisco

London

Paris

Munich

Tokyo

Monday, November 9, 1987
7:30 p.m.

Main Lounge, Moulton Union

SUGARLOAF
GIVES YOU A RUN
FOR THE MONEY...
56 IN FACT!

A STUDENT SEASON PASS
is the best ski deal around. Buy now ... ski a lot and save a lot!!
Only $250 with purchase before 10/31/87 for a full season of skiing. Contact your campus representative today!

Your representative is:

John Bellows
Ext. 3825

sugarloaf/usa
Carrabassett Valley
Maine 04947
207-237-2000

Senders

Come see what's in store for you!

Shop Daily 9:00-6:00
124 Maine Street, Brunswick

Women's Tennis finishes with 6-2 record

JAN BREKKE
ORIENT Staff

Despite ending the season on a losing note, women's tennis coach Ed Reid was very pleased with the effort his team put forth during the year. "This season exceeded my wildest expectations," commented a satisfied coach Reid.

Freshman Heidi Wallenfels' capturing of the state A singles title and A doubles title (with partner Suzanne Palmer) was one of the biggest highlights of the season for the Polar Bears. Although coach Reid predicted Wallenfels to take the state singles title, he was very pleasantly surprised by Wallenfels and Palmer's doubles performance.

"No Bowdoin tennis player has ever taken both the singles and doubles titles in the same year. It was truly an excellent performance by both Heidi and Suzanne," added coach Reid.

Even with first place finishes in

A singles and doubles and Erika Gustafsson's strong second place finish in B singles, the team couldn't manage to overtake Bates for the state title.

Bowdoin was unable to avenge their earlier season loss to Colby last Tuesday, as they were defeated 6-3. Things were looking quite promising after the singles round, with the score knotted at 3-3, but Colby dominated the three doubles matches to put the match out of reach.

Heidi Wallenfels once again led the way for Bowdoin, winning her match 6-1, 6-3. Other singles victors were Suzanne Fogarty (6-4, 6-3) and Suzanne Palmer (6-4, 6-4). Palmer and Fogarty continued to earn praise from coach Reid over their play. "Both players have really been key to our successful season. They have continued to improve and earn important victories for us all year."

All-Black crush UMaine, await Maine Maritime

MATT SAMUELSON
ORIENT Staff

Athletic dominance quite aptly describes Bowdoin's performance in the pre-break men's rugby match against U.M.O. When the slaughter was completed the score was 36-3. Bowdoin rugby president, Andy Palmer, stated, "Everybody scored. It was amazing." This game primes the Bowdoin squad for this weekend's game against Maine Maritime and seats the All-Blacks in the number one position for the following week's New England Division II rugby tournament at U.M.O.

Just about everyone did score. In the backs, Brian Feriso, Andy Palmer and Matt Tierny all drove home two tries each, racking up 24 of the game's 36 points. This was consistent playing on the parts of Feriso and Tierny, for Palmer, however, this was the first taste of carnage since injuring his ribs in one of the first games of the season, although he said it was tough coming back after such a long recovery.

Also with a white knuckle performance was senior, Sandy McClean. Playing at hooker, McClean helped the All-Blacks win every scrum of the day. "He really shined," commented Palmer.

The All-Blacks take on Maine Maritime at 11:00 am this Saturday in their last game before the New England tournament. Seniors will be getting their last seasonal stomping in this game, creating excitement far superior to that of a 50cc adrenaline injection. Only a fool would miss it. Palmer stated, however, that he would try to even out the sides to avoid all out genocide. "The whole point is to play rugby, not to just go in and demolish people," he said. Bring your parents and show them what true sport is.

Think there's no
place in business
for someone with a liberal arts degree?
Think again.

A Master's from The Annenberg School of Communications, combined with your bachelor's degree, can take you into a management career in the mass media or telecommunications.

Here's what some recent graduates of Annenberg's Master's in Communications Management are doing:

Suzanne B., B.A., French, U.C. Berkeley
Vice President, Programming Sales, ABC Radio

Steve B., B.A., Fine Arts, Ohio University
Senior Vice President, Creative Affairs,
Columbia Pictures-TV

Paul D., B.A., English, U. Michigan
Manager, Marketing and Public Policy, Pacific Bell

Sara K., B.A., Political Science, Duke
Director, Creative Services,
Assoc. of TV Programming Executives

Pam R., B.A., Asian Studies, Mount Holyoke
Director, Public Relations,
St. Paul Medical Center

Karl K., B.A., Economics, USC
Senior Telecommunications Consultant,
Price Waterhouse

Wendell F., B.A., Radio/TV/Film, Northwestern
Manager, Audience and Syndication Research,
Walt Disney Co.

HERE ARE TWO WAYS The Annenberg School, University of Southern California, Los Angeles, prepares graduates for their careers.

1. Course work in...
 - management of media firms
 - communications technologies
 - law and public policy
 - international communications
 - diffusion of innovations
 - communication in organizations
2. On the job learning...
 - internships in Los Angeles and Washington, D.C.
 - job placement, while in school and after
 - access to alumni network

Please send me more information.

Name _____

Address _____

City/State/Zip _____

Currently Attending _____

MAIL TO: The Annenberg School of Communications
3502 South Hoover Street, University of Southern California, Los Angeles, California 90089-0281

Men race at NESCAC's

DAVID A. NUTE

ORIENT Staff

On Saturday, October 17, Bowdoin's cross country team joined eleven other colleges and universities for the running of the NESCAC finals. 77 runners converged on the town of Medford, Massachusetts and, in the end, Bowdoin walked away with sixth place, tying the team's previous best finish at the 1985 meet.

Tod Dillon, '89, placed first for the team, and fifth over all, a stellar performance that won him a position on the All-Conference Team. Second for the Bears, with 17th place in the final standings was Marty Malague, '90.

Women's soccer

(Continued from page 13)

ball into the corner of the net for the go ahead goal. Neill scored again, for her third goal of the day, to give the Polar Bears the security they needed. The game ended with a 4-2 victory in Bowdoin's favor.

Bowdoin lost to a strong and fast Plymouth State College team last Tuesday in a game which Coach Cullen said "It was a shame that there had to be a loser." The game started slowly for the Bears as Plymouth State launched a strong attack on the Bowdoin goal. Plymouth State scored the only goal of Malague was followed by Sean Hale, '91, in 37th place, John Dougherty, '91, placing 42nd, Lance Hickey, '91, numbered 46th, Colm Sweeney, '88, in 52nd place, and to complete the Bear's efforts, Jim Anderson, '88, crossed the line to take place 59.

First in the general team standings was Colby, scoring 55 points. Tufts (55), Bates (75), Amherst (119), and Middlebury (128), filled the scoring gap until Bowdoin showed a final 147 points that secured sixth place.

In reference to the meet Coach Peter Silvinsky stated, "We're young, and we hope to get third or fourth place in this race next year."

the game in the first half on an indirect kick inside Bowdoin's penalty box. The Polar Bears fought back and played with the Plymouth State team for the remainder of the game, but were unable to score. Both sides played controlled, aggressive soccer and showed why Plymouth State and Bowdoin are ranked first and second respectively. Coach Cullen was very pleased with his team's performance.

Looking at the players, Christine Neill continues to score often as she leads the Polar Bears with 11 goals. C

Field hockey

(Continued from page 13)

McPherson. Shortly afterwards, Woodhull attained a goal after an assist from co-captain Audrey Augustin. In the second half, Augustin assisted Carroll for the Bear's third goal. LaPointe then made what was in her opinion a tactical misjudgement by substituting in most of her bench at one time. During the brief period it took the subs to warm up, Wesleyan's Murphy, assisted by Fitzhugh, scored her team's solitary goal. Carroll then completed a hat trick with her third goal of the game off of an assist from Nancy Beverage. Woodhull brought the score to 5-1 after another assist from Beverage. "Beverage had a super game, as did Margaret Danenbarger," said LaPointe. In addition, Warner put in an excellent performance during a half of shots by the Wesleyan offense in the second half.

Then team continued its successful winning streak with a 4-1 victory over Plymouth State on Wednesday. Laura Bongiorno described the game as a display of "the best field hockey I've ever seen."

3 minutes into the game, Woodhull got past the Plymouth goalie with an unassisted goal. Carroll, assisted by Bongiorno, then scored 14 minutes later. Halfway through the first period, Beth Hamilton obtained Plymouth's single goal on an air ball deflected off a defenseman's stick. Bowdoin had 13 shots on goal in the first half as opposed to Plymouth's 7.

Early in the second half, the Plymouth goalie came out and blocked a shot by Woodhull only to find Bongiorno, on an assist from Woodhull, send the ball (along with Sheila Carroll) hurtling into the goal. Two minutes later, Augustin assisted Carroll on a powerful goal that broke Carroll's stick in the process.

Plymouth had ample opportunity to score off of eight penalty corners in the second half, but the Bears stopped them every time. Audrey Augustin had an incredibly impressive game scarcely letting the ball or her opponents get by her. As LaPointe commented, "Audrey sacrificed her body out there on the line."

LaPointe was visibly pleased with the team's performance. "We worked very hard on teamwork. We had to fill seven holes left by those who had graduated and it takes time. We went through periods of frustration, but now they are playing together beautifully—they're just clicking." Bongiorno remarked that the Plymouth game "shows what kind of team we are. We're unified to such an extreme that we can really dominate any team."

The Bears have two more games coming up against New England College on October 24th and Colby on the 27th. The team will also compete (probably in the #2 rank) in the Northeast Intercollegiate Athletic Conference (NIAC) Tournament on October 31st and November 1st.

Tontine Hair Fashions

207-729-5475

BOWDOIN STUDENT DISCOUNT
FOR HAIRCUTS
BRING I.D.

Now there's more than one way to get through Bowdoin...

See the power of Macintosh demonstrated by Andy Palmer

This Sunday,
October 25
from Noon to 1 p.m.
in the computing center in
Hubbard Hall.
All parents are welcome!

To get ahead at Bowdoin, it helps if you choose a brilliant roommate. Like a Macintosh™ personal computer. And now Bowdoin College students have two great models to choose from at special prices.

The Macintosh Plus, which comes with one 800K disk drive, 1 megabyte of memory, keyboard, and mouse.

And the Macintosh SE, which comes with either two built-in 800K drives, or one drive and an internal 20-megabyte hard disk. As well as a choice of keyboards.

Whichever Macintosh you choose, Apple offers a one-time, affordable student purchase price. Purchase information available at the computer center in Hubbard Hall or contact Dana Melick at Coastal Computer Center.

Coastal Computer CENTER

Maine's largest Apple® dealer.
16 Forest Avenue, Portland 774-0741
The Tontine Mall, Brunswick 729-0298

This advertisement was designed, typeset, and produced on an Apple Macintosh™ personal computer and printed on an Apple LaserWriter™ printer. Apple and the Apple logo are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. Macintosh and LaserWriter are trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc.

OPINION

Pull out the rug

October is a special time to be at Bowdoin. We settle into the academic routine, our living arrangements and daily habits are cemented for another year, and breathtaking fall foliage makes it a gratifying experience just to glance out a window or step outside.

But to many members of the Bowdoin community, and indeed across the nation, this October has brought a disturbing development. That annual American October ritual, the World Series, is being played entirely on artificial turf.

To those who do not fully comprehend the importance of baseball, this may seem a trivial matter. "No big deal," they say. "A sign of the times." This dangerous attitude is all too prevalent on campus and elsewhere, and we feel we must do our part to combat this indifference.

Baseball has always been an important part of America's spiritual underpinnings. The baseball player represents a special part of our society. He must have the tactical sense of a guerilla warrior, the grace of a ballerina, the timing of a boxer, the skill of a surgeon, and the wisdom and inner serenity of a Zen master. And, despite all this, he still represents the baggy-pants innocence of the game's early days, when a champion ballplayer might have to take an offseason job to feed his children.

This, of course, is a myth. Since its earliest days, baseball has been tainted by materialism as much as any sport. Think of the Black Sox scandal of 1919. Or of George Herman Ruth—the immortal Babe—who, when asked in 1930 if he thought it right that he earned more money than President Hoover, replied, "Why not? I had a better year than he did."

But these realizations make it all the more important that baseball's spirit be preserved. Despite the flaws of the men who played it, the game remained greater in the American imagination and self-image than even its most revered saints—Ruth, Robinson, Mays, Mantle, DiMaggio, Speaker. For 74 years, since the Red Stockings defeated the Pirates in the first World Series, a dream, an ideal has clung tenaciously to baseball, setting it apart from football, basketball, and hockey.

This is why we feel it is urgent that it be made whole again. The Cardinals are a fine team, as are the Senators—oops—the Twins. But they have lost touch with the nature of the sport. The boys from the Twin Cities play in a styrofoam, pentagon building called the Hubert H. Humphrey Metrodome—or, to their opponents, the Homerodome. One can almost sense the discomfort Don Baylor feels when he steps up to bat and looks up not at Fenway or the House that Ruth built, but... a canvas ceiling.

And, while Busch Stadium is beautiful, it shares a flaw with Milwaukee's park—no grass. Broadcasters may speak of the difference it makes to hit a ball or steal a base on artificial turf. But the bottom line, to those who really love the game, is that it just doesn't feel the same.

We applaud those teams which understand the importance of playing America's pastime on real grass. You are defenders of a tradition which has intrinsic aesthetic merit. And to those who look not at the game and its real meaning to America, but rather at some financial bottom line—pull the rug out.

Apology

In the October 9, 1987 edition of the Bowdoin Orient, an article featuring Bowdoin's male a cappella singing group appeared. In that article, an inconsiderate and degrading phrase describing the Wellesley College student body was erroneously included.

The Orient and the Meddiebempsers have come under scrutiny as a result of the article, and as a result, the Meddiebempsers were unable to perform on the Wellesley College campus last weekend. As author and assistant editor in chief, I would like to make clear that it was neither the Meddiebempsers' nor the Orient's intent for such a phrase to appear in print.

Responsibility for the article and its contents lies solely with me. The phrase was not meant to show malice towards, or in any way embarrass the students of Wellesley College. Furthermore, the Meddiebempsers were unaware of the contents of the article until it appeared in print.

As a result of the article being printed, I have received several complaints both on the Bowdoin campus and at my home. While I am not belittling the severity of my actions, I feel it unfortunate that the Meddiebempsers were banned as a result of my actions. I also am disappointed that students at Wellesley College found it necessary to harass my family as a result of actions which again did not involve them.

Again, I am deeply sorry for the problems a stupid mistake may have caused.

Sincerely,
Kevin Wesley '89

Letters

Sexism

To the Editor:

In regard to the article of October 9, "Singin' the Basin Street Blues," I ask why the following statement, written by the Ass't Editor, was printed: "On the trip, the Meddiebempsers will sing at UVM, St. Lawrence University, Vassar College, and the Wellesley School of Sexually Frustrated Women." This offensive example of unprofessional journalism was brought to my attention by Paula Kelley, President of the Wellesley College a cappella group, the Tupelos. "Of course we've heard it before, but to see it in print makes it even more shocking and insulting." As a direct result of this remark, the Meddiebempsers, who asked to sing at Wellesley this past weekend, were denied the opportunity to perform. Although they were not responsible for the statement, the Tupelos decided not to let them sing because they are, nevertheless, representatives of Bowdoin. This was not as an act of retaliation, but to save the Meddiebempsers from the negative reception that surely would have been provoked. The level of response to being entitled "Wellesley College of Sexually Frustrated Women" differed, but some apparently took it quite seriously. The article was photocopied and displayed around the Wellesley campus the night before the proposed concert. Bowdoin received more publicity at the concert when the article was distributed along with the message that even if Wellesley women were sexually frustrated, Bowdoin men could do little to alleviate the situation. The name and phone number of the Ass't Editor of the Orient were also provided. This may seem like an exaggerated response, but I sympathize with the offended students. I'm disappointed that our newspaper, which represents the entire Bowdoin community, slandered another college.

Labelling Wellesley as "sexually frustrated" is even more hypocritical and ridiculous when seen in conjunction with another article printed in the same issue of the Orient: "Courtship patterns turn topsy-turvy." The need for men and women "to disregard stereotypical sex-roles" and the "unfavorable relationship environment" at Bowdoin are discussed.

I ask the people responsible for the Orient to remember that the newspaper circulates outside of Bowdoin, is frequently picked up by prospective students and parents (among which may be Wellesley alumnae), and that we have Wellesley exchange students here. "Wellesley School of Sexually Frustrated Women" is an offensive remark which reflects poorly on Bowdoin.

Lisa Bremner '88

Offensive

To the Editor:

As two Wellesley College exchange students attending Bowdoin for the year, we were appalled by a statement made in the October 9 issue of the Bowdoin Orient. In reporting the touring schedule of the Meddiebempsers, this article referred to our school as the "Wellesley School of Sexually Frustrated Women." Such an unjustified and derogatory comment exemplifies poor journalism and illustrates a disappointing lack of respect for both women's colleges and the representatives of these colleges exchanging at Bowdoin. We would appreciate an apology as well as an explanation of the reasoning behind this offensive comment.

Sincerely,
Maryanne Ford '89
Rachel Keegan '89

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

"The College exercises no control over the content of the student writings contained herein and neither it, nor the Administration, nor the faculty assume any responsibility for the views expressed herein."

Lori Bodwell...Editor in Chief

Kevin Wesley...Assistant Editor
Adam Najberg...News Editor
Rosemarie Dougherty...Assoc. News Editor

Tamara Dassanayake...Asst. News Editor
Eric Foushee...Account Executive
Alan Harris...Photography Editor
Mary Ann Lai...Photography Editor
Lizz Millan...Asst. Entertainment Editor

Dawn Vance...Asst. News Editor

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT
Published by

THE BOWDOIN PUBLISHING COMPANY

LORI M. BODWELL ALBERT P. MAURO, JR.

Published weekly when classes are held during the Fall and Spring semester by the students of Bowdoin College. Address editorial communication to the Editor, subscription communication to the circulation manager, and business correspondence to the business manager at The Bowdoin Orient, 12 Cleveland Street, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011, or telephone (207) 725-3300. The Bowdoin Orient reserves the right to edit any and all articles and letters. Subscriptions are $15.00 per year or $8.00 per semester. Past issues cannot be mailed. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to The Bowdoin Orient, Moulton Union, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011.

Parents' perspective: the fraternity experience

Editor's note: Hope and Jim Tscoyeanes, parents of Andrea Tscoyeanes '88, wrote the following as an open letter to President A. LeRoy Greason, Dean of Students Kenneth A. Lewallen, and the editorial staff of the Orient. Since it is too long to appear in the letters section of the newspaper, it is printed here as a viewpoint.

My daughter is a senior at Bowdoin. She, her father and I have thoroughly enjoyed her years at Bowdoin and have a very high regard for the education Bowdoin imparts to its students.

When our daughter told us she was joining a fraternity three and a half years ago, my heart sank a little... a lot! I had a well-developed opinion of sororities and fraternities and the kinds of young men and women who chose to join them, and I did not want my daughter to be numbered among them.

I "knew," you see, that "sorority girls" were empty-headed, over-indulged snobs who bonded together to exclude others less fortunate than they in looks, opportunities, and the pursuit of the opposite sex, more clothes, and social success.

I also "knew" that fraternities harbored the jocks and party animals who were at school to party, play sports, drink to excess, and pursue easy or naive young female victims.

When, then, our daughter chose to drop at Theta Delta Chi Fraternity, we swallowed our protests and hoped her education would not suffer too greatly as a result.

Soon, we began to hear funny stories about initiation activities "and trying to memorize everyone's name and brief histories, etc. But we also heard of choosing fraternity big sisters to help smooth the rough spots of adjusting to college life and studying - and we heard of choosing fraternity big brothers who would keep an eye out for guys on the make who might make life uncomfortable for a young freshman, or big brothers who could exhort a friend on campus after dark.

We learned that, for our daughter, the fraternity house was like a haven - a home away from home - where she could go between classes or studying stints at the library, or during that very lonely time just before dinner when her roommates were out and she needed a friend to talk to. She'd always find a willing listener at TD, a friend, a member of her new Bowdoin "family" to play football with or talk to.

Her fraternity friends? Those "brainless, snobby, drunken jocks and party girls" we feared? Well, to name but a few...

...the wrestling team champ who juggled competing and studies and election to fraternity president while going on to become a James Bowdoin Scholar! And she still took the time to write letters to me telling about our daughter's adjustment to college life, plans he had for fraternity programs, and his ambition to become a teacher - an ambition he has now achieved.

...the young man who maintained his scholastic record in spite of a rigorous schedule of singing with the Meddiebumpsters at schools all over the eastern region, and who always made sure the group made a special appearance at TD for visiting parents on Parents Weekend.

...my daughter's big brother, who gave me a gift of a Meddiebumpster recording - just because he wanted us to feel welcome, and just because he's a sweet, thoughtful guy - who most of the time liked to project the image of a prankster who never took things seriously - all belied by his achievements then and since.

...a young woman who studied abroad her junior year and was a truly devoted friend and confidante - whose entire family are Bowdoin alumnae.

...the girls living in Phi Sigma Sigma Sorority who last year, when our daughter suddenly found herself in a very uncomfortable dormitory situation at mid-term, offered her a room in their house for the remainder of the year. It certainly didn't fit the image I had of stuck-up snobs who only interacted with each other! My daughter moved in with them, and, though the only member of the house who was not a member of their sorority, was treated warmly and lovingly as a member of the family.

But even more than the service fraternities provide for the fine young men and women: my husband and I have been privileged to meet and know, is the service Bowdoin fraternities provide for the greater Bowdoin and Brunswick community:

...There are the fierce, fraternity competitions - no, not grudge games, but the Blood Drive, to see which house will donate the most blood for those in need.

...The Brunswick Children's holiday parties where community children and parents are invited into the fraternity houses to enjoy Santa Claus, games, crafts, cookie decorating with the young men and women in the houses. My favorite snapshots are those of burly young men daintily frosting cookies or playing musical chairs with their five and six year old guests. What better ambassadors can a college present to the community in which they co-exist?

...There are the study groups before exams for the sharing of knowledge, trying out of new theories or ideas, bolstering of morale, keeping each other company - and awake - during those long, nervous hours of studying.

...There are the Parents Weekend dinners and parties, where our young, usually jean-clad, rumpled children dress smartly in skirts, suits and ties, with slicked down hair, show off neat rooms and made-up beds, wait on us hand and foot and make us feel totally welcome and at home.

I am not suggesting that the positive experiences our daughter has had at Bowdoin are entirely due to her membership in a coed fraternity, or that she wouldn't have experienced the same support system and growth opportunities outside a fraternal community. I'm saying that, in the community that she chose, and which sought her out, she has experienced all of the above. Others of her close friends have spent their Bowdoin years without joining a fraternity or sorority. They have neither shunned, nor been shunned by, those in fraternities. The two communities, from what we've seen ourselves and what we've heard from our daughter, have co-existed very well together.

We've been aware of the controversy and dialog that has surrounded the existence of Bowdoin fraternities for some time, and the questions of equal opportunities for men and women as well as concern over over-inbibing. We appreciate the college's concern and attempts to maintain proper control regarding these problems.

We maintain, however, that these problems are ones that society as a whole addresses on a daily basis and in all arenas. They are not problems particularly fostered or encouraged by fraternities.

We thank TD for proving me wrong in my fears. We thank TD's for making our daughter feel welcome, for electing her to hold office in a fraternity, for being her good and true friends.

We thank Bowdoin for educating her, helping her to grow, making her happy.

Jim and Hope Tscoyeanes

Letters

Coeds

To the Editor:

As a frequent visitor to the campus and a bearer of antiquated numerals (1931) I am slowly developing a theory concerning today's undergraduates.

It is my humble opinion that the coeds I see are serious students who dress as unattractively as possible in order to avoid the attentions and distractions of the opposite gender.

Au contraire, I suspect that the male contingency now on board is so appalled by the appearance of what we used to call girls that it keeps out of sight whenever able. This seems to apply especially to the library where I conduct most of my business.

It is also within reason that the coeds are so impoverished by the high cost of higher education that they have been forced to borrow clothing from older and larger brothers.

Cordially,
Alfred H. Fenton

Oppression

To the Editor:

Oppression in our society is pervasive yet specific environments tend to highlight different types of discrimination. The lack of reaction to Kevin Wesley's comment in the last issue of the Orient about "the Wellesley School of Sexually Frustrated Women" demonstrates that sexism is above ground and socially acceptable at Bowdoin College.

Lynn Vogelstein
Rachel Dobkin
for the Women's Resource Center Collective

Poles

To the Editor:

In the Bowdoin Orient, October 9, you published a report about my lecture "Poles and Jews During the Holocaust" entitled "Humanity of Poles called into question." The article reflects roughly my views but the title is a total misunderstanding and a violation of everything I said and in fact contradicts the report itself.

There is always a danger involved when one uses general terms like "The Poles," "The Jews," "The Americans." Did those hundreds of Poles who did hiding Jews pass the test of humanity? Did those hundreds of thousands engaged in one or another form of rescue activity pass it?

If one is to be morally consistent one must assume that when it came to the test for whole societies during World War II with regard to the annihilation of the Jewish nation by Germans in the devilish conditions of Eastern Europe, people who confirmed their humanity were those who made the ultimate choice and who died helping their neighbors. No one living can, whether for political or polemical reason, demand it of another.

In the final analysis every country failed the test of humanity, even the free ones. The surveys taken in the United States between 1940 and 1946 - as Deborah Lipstadt shows in her book "Beyond Belief: The American Press and the Coming of the Holocaust" - prove that Jews were consistently perceived as a greater menace to American society than Germans or Japanese. The states, governments, institutions failed. Only people, individuals, "their brothers' keepers" passed it. It has nothing to do with Polishness but with sacrifices which only individual people make.

The existence of such people can give us hope, but does not give us the moral right to pass a judgement from a vantage point of abstract, ignorant, and complacent height of "Humanity."

Andrzej Bryk
Visiting Professor of Government

We're Fighting For Your Life.

American Heart Association

A Likely Yarn We have Maine Wool for your Christmas sweaters, socks, hats, and mittens.
90 UNION STREET
BRUNSWICK, ME 04011
(207) 725-2147

j&j sports center

YOUR FOUR SEASON DEALER

Grand Opening - Sat. October 24, 9 to 5

All Nike and Puma footwear - 15% off
All soccer equipment - 20% off
All skates - 10% off
All racquets - 15% off
All school jackets - 15% off

Hourly drawings will be held for various prizes!

A sporting goods store is now opening in Brunswick with the very latest in sports equipment for all seasons.

212 Maine Street • Brunswick • 725-8675

Monday madness

Throbbing head? Quaking body? Has Monday dealt another crushing blow? Revive yourself with a well-rounded meal from Domino's Pizza. We'll help smooth the wrinkles out of your day.

Call us.
729-5561
26 Bath Road

Hours:
4:30pm - 1am Mon.-Thurs.
11am - 2 am Fri. & Sat.
11am - 1 am Sun.

Our drivers carry less than $20.00.
Limited delivery area.

© 1987 Domino's Pizza, Inc.

DOMINO'S
PIZZA
DELIVERS™
FREE.

Menu

All Pizzas Include Our Special Blend of Sauce and 100% Real Cheese

Our Superb Cheese Pizza
12" cheese $4.76
16" cheese $7.24

Additional Items
Pepperoni, Mushrooms, Black Olives, Ham, Onions, Anchovies, Green Peppers, Sausage, Ground Beef, Extra Cheese, Green Olives, Pineapple, Hot Pepper Rings
12" pizza $.86 per item
16" pizza $1.19 per item

Coca-Cola® available.
16-oz. bottle $.62
Customer pays deposit.

Prices do not include
Maine state sales tax.

NO COUPON NECESSARY

Monday
Only

Only $5.00 for a 12 inch pepperoni pizza and two 16-ounce bottles of Coke
SAVE $2.30!!

Fast, Free Delivery™
26 Bath Rd.
Phone: 729-5561

No Coupon Necessary

THE BOWDOIN COLLEGE ORIENT

FIRST CLASS MAIL
U.S. Postage PAID
BRUNSWICK, ME.
Permit No. 25

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

VOLUME CXVII

BOWDOIN COLLEGE, BRUNSWICK, MAINE, FRIDAY, OCTOBER 30, 1987

Number 7

South African divestment completed

TAMARA DASSANAYAKE
ORIENT Asst. News Editor

Bowdoin College has divested over $10 million in South African investments and created a "South Africa-free" portfolio in accord with the October 30 deadline for total divestment.

Treasurer of the College, Dudley H. Woodall said the college is now, "to all intents and purposes," without any financial interests in South Africa.

He added it would not be possible to tell whether there are still some minor discrepancies until statements from the college's bank custodian are received at the end of October.

The decision to divest was announced at the Spring 1987 meeting of the Governing Boards in fulfillment of the total divestment plan endorsed by the trustees and overseers of the college one year earlier.

The plan, which was the result of intensive lobbying by members of the college community, stated that "if by May 31, 1987, the enfranchising process for blacks in South Africa is not at an acceptable and substantial level, the College will thereafter divest in an orderly and timely manner."

The divestment procedure adopted by the college has been threefold:

First, capital invested directly in three corporations; Mobil, Johnson & Johnson and Merck has been withdrawn. The selling of these stocks were due to the continued presence of these firms in South Africa.

Secondly, the relatively large proportion of funds invested in a mutual fund, the Ivy Fund, was withdrawn and placed under the control of a single manager. The Ivy Fund manages the pooled resources of several institutions.

The final phase of the total divestment

(Continued on page 16)

Chi Psi fraternity entertains little terrors Jake Smet and Shawn Crossman in their haunted house on Thursday afternoon. Proceeds from the activity will be donated to the United Way. Photo by Alan Harris

Spiderman steals flag

ADAM NAJBERG
ORIENT News Editor

"Spiderman, Spiderman, does whatever a spider can... Hey, there, there goes the Spiderman..."

Bowdoin College's very own Spiderman struck for the third year in a row during the night of October 9. This year's victim was Theta Delta Chi (TD) fraternity.

Bowdoin's Spiderman, who made his first appearance three years ago, has made a habit of hanging fraternity house flags from the spires of the campus chapel.

The mysterious wall-scaler, who asked that his name not be revealed, absconded with the TD flag sometime during fall semester Rush. The flag did not reappear until bystanders noticed the black, white and blue banner flapping in the early Friday morning breeze on the ninth.

Andrew Clark '89, vice president of TD, said he doesn't understand the theft of the flag or the significance of its placement atop the chapel. He expressed his displeasure at the theft and said he does not know how TD will reclaim the flag, which now flies 120 feet over the campus.

"Some guys get their kicks out of stealing a flag and hanging it between the towers (of the chapel)... It doesn't mean anything to anyone, except the guy who put it up there. We don't know how to get it down," said Clark.

TD President Mike Augustini '89 said the house would like to get the flag back, but did not have plans to remove it from its precarious height.

"We're kind of waiting for Security. We'd like to have it (the flag) back, but it's not a major insult," Augustini said.

Chief of Security Michael Pander is baffled by the incident. He was on the scene after security officers discovered the flag and conducted a thorough investigation inside the chapel to determine how and why the flag was hung between the spires. He paid particular attention to metal vents inside the towers.

"It (the flag-hanging) went unnoticed completely. I climbed inside the towers, myself, to verify it was not done through a vent. You couldn't do it from the inside," said Pander.

Pander said he would have to assess the reasons behind the flag-hanging and identify the Spiderman before making a

(Continued on page 16)

Crash may not affect college in long run

TAMARA DASSANAYAKE
ORIENT Asst. News Editor

Bowdoin College's financial portfolio has been depleted by an estimated $20 million due to the prevailing stock market crisis.

The portfolio, which stood at $133 million at the end of August, now stands at $113 million, a loss of 15%.

Treasurer of the College Dudley H. Woodall said that the Investment committee which met Wednesday was "encouraged" by the figures as they demonstrated the effectiveness of Bowdoin's 'pre-crash' stock selling.

Woodall revealed last week that Bowdoin's stockbrokers had anticipated imminent devaluation and had advised the College to convert a "significant" proportion of its capital from equities to cash and bonds.

When the conversion process was started this year, 65% of the portfolio was made up of stocks. By the beginning of last week only 51% consisted of stocks. If the conversion had not been effected, Woodall estimated that the College could have suffered additional losses of approximately $15 million.

Thus, the losses to Bowdoin "were significantly cushioned," said Woodall. The losses sustained on the stock market were also partially offset by the returns from the increased percentage of bonds. Bonds have done comparatively well in the market during the past two weeks.

What do these losses mean for the College?

Woodall said that in the short term, providing the market stabilizes, the College's budget would not be affected. This is ensured by the spending formula used to relate the portfolio value to the annual budget.

The formula helps "to smooth" the

(Continued on page 16)

Past lends insight into anorexia

TANYA WEINSTEIN
ORIENT Staff

Eating disorders, such as anorexia nervosa, are not new diseases. Society's emphasis on appearances, as well as other factors, has contributed to the high percentage of women with eating disorders not only in our time but in the past century.

Joan Jacobs Brumberg, author of "Fasting Girls: Emergence of Anorexia Nervosa as A Modern Disease", addressed these issues at a lecture featuring anorexia nervosa on Thursday night.

Brumberg is an Associate Professor in the Department of Human Development and Family Studies at Cornell University and is also Director of the Women's Studies Program.

Brumberg's book, to be published in March, focuses on the history of anorexia. A question she addresses is whether or not the disease existed before the modern era. In her research she proves that it emerged simultaneously in England, France and the United States during the 1870s.

Anorexia nervosa is an eating disorder with many causes and characteristics. Some of the symptoms include: refusal to maintain normal weight, loss of over 25% of body weight, disturbance of body image and intense fear of becoming fat.

Other symptoms include disruption of the menstrual cycle and hyperactivity, or excessive exercise.

It has been estimated that approximately 20% of college age women have eating disorders. This number includes other diseases, such as bulimia, which has caused some debate as to whether it should be considered separately or as a form of anorexia.

This is a large percentage, yet Brumberg said it is easy to see how a college like Bowdoin sets up pressures to diet and exercise. "Bowdoin, like many institutions, caters to upper and middle class kids, who are apt to have more eating disorders than those who attend state and public universities." She said that there definitely is a connection between anorexia and class structure.

Brumberg named three models as possible causes of this disease. The first model is made up of biological-organic causes such as hormonal imbalance. The second model encompasses psychological factors, such as adolescent and sexual difficulties and family distress. The last model, cultural causes, stems from the influence of media. Fashion and fitness are stressed in our society, as seen by commercials and advertisements.

Brumberg stressed that anorexia should be thought of as a multi-determined disorder. Not one of these models explains exactly why certain people have the disease, but it is "the three working reciprocally and interacting with each other."

What do you think of the Orient?

By BECKY AUSTIN
ORIENT Staff

Scott Milo '88
"It's improved in my four years here. They are more responsible in their journalism. In the past their have been mis-quotes, but now they're checking up on things."

Peter Lamcia '89
"It's gotten better—it's longer, and they do more than just college news."

Gordon Buffonge '88
"Ha! Ha! Ha! Ha! Ha!"

Elizabeth Gilliland '91
"I think there needs to be more news about what's happening on other campuses."

David Murray '90
"I think it's really improved. The new format is better, it has a lot more content, and more comics—I like that."

Over 1000 parents ventured to Maine for Bowdoin's Parents' weekend. Staff Photo

Buffonge decries anti-intellectualism

ADAM NAJBERG
ORIENT News Editor

Senior Class President Gordon Buffonge '88 used the "i word" at last Wednesday's Chapel Talk.

Buffonge focused his talk on intellectual aspects of college life outside the classroom. He expressed concern for an apparent tide of anti-intellectualism that has swept over the college in recent years.

This anti-intellectualism, said Buffonge, stems from influences outside of college life. Buffonge said the major influences affecting the college student come from the pressures our society places on them.

"We are perhaps the most dangerous thing to the intellectual—the true anti-intellectual. We are the over-achiever, the pride of our society," said Buffonge.

According to Buffonge, students first participate in school activities and seek good grades in order to matriculate at "a good college." The process is repeated at the college level in order to "gain good jobs," because, "our society expects this of us."

Buffonge described a phenomenon that affects Bowdoin students during their years at the college level. He called the phenomenon the "Bowdoin Routine." This phenomenon prevents students from addressing "crucial questions" and intellectual issues.

"We become immersed in the freshman year party, which begins to fall from our grace around the middle of our sophomore year. By then we are making plans to travel and when we return senior year, it's job search time," Buffonge said.

Buffonge said more active student-faculty relations would help to counteract the problems of anti-intellectualism. He recommended the creation of facilities which would enable students and faculty to intermingle and learn from each other in both formal and informal settings.

He urged the Administration to heed students' requests for more space and opportunity to mix with faculty. He cited the creation of the college's Senior Center (Coles Tower), which contributed to the intellectual growth of students. Without such facilities and growth, Buffonge said he fears the worst.

"We must be concerned with and address the social issues and questions of our time. Mankind cannot afford to squander that which separates him from other animals—his reason," said of student facility needs, said Warren.

"Now we want to tap students to find out what sort of facilities they feel they need," said Warren.

Warren said the administration's response to the question of student needs has been varied. For this reason it is very important for students to attend the forum and make their priorities in terms of facility needs known.

The committee is one of two that are studying the facility needs of the college. The other committee is studying academic facility needs.

The findings of the two committees will be forwarded to Saratoga Associates, an architectural firm retained by the college. Warren said the firm will "look at the space now available, and with their creativity come up with a number of options that will meet both student life and academic needs."

Open forum planned to gather student opinion

By Richard Lindahl, JR.
Orient Staff

If you feel the Bowdoin campus does not meet the needs of its students' lives, you have a golden opportunity to demonstrate your argument 7 p.m. next Thursday in the Main Lounge of the Moulton Union. At that time the Committee on Student Life Facilities will be listening to student concerns about facilities on campus.

Committee Chair Harry K. Warren urges "any students who have expressed themselves in small gripe sessions" to come to the forum and make their voices heard.

The committee has been meeting for several months to assess the different perceptions that members of the Bowdoin community have of student needs. The committee has just finished surveying administration perceptions

College Briefs

Mount Holyoke College senior Colleen F. Manning is presently serving 90 days at the Western Massachusetts Correctional Alcohol Center in Springfield. Hampshire County District Court sentenced Manning on September 18 to serve one year in a house of correction for the drunk driving accident that killed Mount Holyoke junior Michelle Cook last April.

The car struck Cook as she and another student Kerry O'Connell walked along Route 47. All three students had just headed back to campus during the early morning hours from The Wooden Nickel, a bar in South Hadley.

Manning is presently on non-academic leave from Mount Holyoke. Once she has completed treatment and counseling at the Center in Springfield she will most likely finish her sentence at the state prison in Framingham. It is uncertain whether Manning plans at some point in the future to return to Mount Holyoke.

In connection with the accident, mother of the deceased, Marilyn Cook is suing Edwin J. Manning, father of Colleen and owner of the car, and the manager/ treasurer of The Wooden Nickel. The Wooden Nickel lost its license and closed for business following the accident.

If you happened to be at Middlebury for their Homecoming weekend, you may have noticed that the Rugby Team did not play as scheduled. This is because they were serving a weekend's suspension as a result of charges brought against the Club by Dean of Students Erica Wonnacott. The team was punished for habitually shouting obscenities at those who crossed their field during practices, as well as holding a keg party in a college lounge. Club President John Walker said of the party: "It was supposed to be B. Y. O. B."

Editor's note: The following is the first in a installment of a weekly series of safety tips. They will be prepared by Michael Pander, Head of Security at Bowdoin.

Often, for the sake of convenience, students will attach their keys to identification cards. The convenience of this is obvious -- often you may need both your keys and ID with you and not want to carry a wallet or purse. The

Such illicit activities have earned the bad reputation that Walker has described as "cultivated." Said Walker of the misconduct charges, "It's been a tradition of the rugby team to shout at people who cross our field during practice. It's not just women either - we yell at everyone: women, men, dogs...it's meant to be taken in a funny manner."

Walker continued to explain, "It stems from our insecurity because we feel we have no rights as a team. I mean people wouldn't cross the football field during practice."

And we complain about the long lines at Wentworth Hall and the Moulton Union during mealtimes? Eighty students and several members of the faculty at Princeton University suffered from food poisoning after eating in two of the campus' resident halls on Wednesday, September 16. The spoiled food apparently came from the one kitchen that prepares food for the dining halls of Rockefeller and Mathey residential colleges.

"Although reporter John Young of the Daily Princetonian claimed, "It really seems to be an isolated case," Princeton has suffered other bouts with food poisoning. Within the past year two other incidents of food poisoning have occurred at Princeton.

Last September, 15 or so students were infected with salmonella at another campus dining hall and in March 23 students suffered illness after eating food served at one of the thirteen eating clubs for upperclassmen - the Colonial Club.

Amherst College students have noticed that their security force is one of the few that routinely carries guns. The reason for this is that the security officers at Amherst are actually officers of the town. They have jurisdiction in the town, just as town police officers are able to come on campus.

risk is less obvious.

Should you lose your key/ID card combination, they may fall into the "wrong hands. A person could identify, without much research, just where those keys may go and use them for purposes of theft or worse.

Indeed, it is better to lose your keys or ID and have them replaced.

FOR YOUR SAFETY, We strongly suggest that you carry your keys and identification separately.

Bowdoin students play the market

ED AMER

ORIENT Staff

Although the Bowdoin Investment Club is only in its first semester, its 23 members are already realizing what a valuable service it is for learning the 'ins and outs' of the stock market.

Bowdoin is one of over 100 schools benefitting from a program offered free of charge by Merrill Lynch, enabling students to experience all facets of investing, except the risk.

Merrill Lynch provides Folio Manager Software and access to Dow Jones retrieval, enabling students to get current financial quotes on stocks, bonds, and options. Students are able to get these quotes daily through a personal computer, along with access to many financial reports, world and national news, and predictions and estimates for the market and economy from many different sources. These resources are identical to those shared by professional stockbrokers.

The students are given $100,000 in mock money at the beginning of the year to invest any way they wish. One nice thing about the service is that the amount of participation is completely up to the students, some just buying stocks and watching them over the year, and others wheeling and dealing actively.

The focus of the club is to educate students on the market, and the weekly meetings are designed to answer any questions the students might have had from the week's activities. The students, majoring in fields from economics to history, have realized the importance of understanding the financial marketplace, even if it is not one's field of interest. The fact that Bowdoin's endowments are tied up primarily in the marketplace, should encourage others to learn about it.

The no-risk factor allows students to experiment with different tactics, and to learn about the market through their mistakes. The recent crash enabled students to see how the market reacts to rapid change and panic, and although some did suffer great losses, none of them will need any second mortgages to repay the mock money lost.

President Dave Crawford '88 and faculty advisor Professor Gregory Decoster encourage more students to take advantage of the program, and students are able to join the club at any time. The program can run up to 250 portfolios at a time, and Alumni speakers are being planned for the future, so it looks to be a bullish year for the Bowdoin Investment Club.

Recycle trash cans are available in each dorm lounge and on each floor in the dorms. The cans are for clean paper only. The town of Brunswick has voted to adopt a mandatory recycling program.

BLOOM
COUNTY

Breathed
by Berke

New Marketing Director Ned "Crack'em Up" Katston was going to tell the story about the priest, the rabbi and the girdle salesman, but he has apparently choked in the clutch.

Ned soon will be moving back to shipping where, he should be happy to learn, his audience will be about two.

OFFICE WITH A VIEW

The Peace Corps is an exhilarating two year experience that will last a lifetime.

Working at a professional level that ordinarily might take years of apprenticeship back home, volunteers find the career growth they're looking for and enjoy a unique experience in the developing world.

International firms and government agencies value the skills and knowledge mastered during Peace Corps service.

Monday, November 2

Film and Information Session at 7:00 p.m. in Lancaster Lounge of Moulton Union

Tuesday, November 3

Information Booth from 10-4:00 p.m. in Moulton Union

Interviews from 9-5:00 p.m.
in the Office of Career Services

Peace Corps
The Toughest Job You'll Ever Love.

SIT DOWN OR TAKE OUT.

The Amato's Pasta Special,
every Monday and Tuesday.

Try the Amato's Pasta Special, delicious spaghetti or ziti and our own homemade meatballs and tomato sauce, with fresh bread on the side.

A fantastic meal at this special price:

$2.49

Monday and Tuesday only

THERE'S NOTHING LIKE A REAL ITALIAN.

135 Maine Street, Brunswick, 3 Main St., Gorham
Open 6 am-Midnight, Sun.-Thur.; 6 am-1 am, Fri. & Sat.
Call 729-5514 for fast take out.

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

One Acts good, but too long

STEPHEN REYNOLDS
FEATURES Editor

A play review and a play preview are different terms. A review discusses a formally presented work. Shmucks like myself go to a dress rehearsal, constitute one third of the audience, scribble notes in the dark, and pass off meager criticism of a work in progress—in other words, a preview.

At a dress rehearsal, obviously, the acting is nowhere near peak performance and stage directions may require finalization. A preview, however, does not necessarily stab in the dark; its reliability is comparable to the television weatherman using hand puppets to explain next week's jet stream flow and enhance his t.v. personality.

Wednesday evening I viewed—a dress rehearsal needless to mention, but I will anyway for clarity's sake—the Masque and Gown's annual fall presentation of three one-act plays: Thornton Wilder's The Happy Journey, David Mamet's Sexual Perversity in Chicago, and Ron Cowen's Summertime.

The format often squashes full length plays into overly condensed versions with student production, acting, and direction emphasized more than the presentation of a full and cohesive work.

The Happy Journey does not suffer from a butcher job, as it was written as a one-act. Ma Kirby (Jennifer James), the central character, gathers her family to drive through the emerging suburban wasteland New Jersey of the forties to visit her "sick" married daughter, Beulah (Melissa Makin).

During the "journey," conversation sporadically materializes when a family member remarks on a passing billboard or hodgepodge stand. The moral authority and emotional guidance counselor, Ma waxes philosophic, "New Jersey is the best state," and keeps the family in line during times of miniature outbreaks of modern world angst. When son Arthur (Michael Schwartz) satirically questions God's designs with childish naïveté, Ma scolds him immediately; Pa Kirby (Doug Kirshen) concentrates on his driving. Ma supercedes Pa and the traditional male father figure as the seat of world awareness and wisdom. In between fighting in the back seat, Arthur and sister Caroline (Lisa Lucas) ask Ma, not Pa, if "she's ever been to Ohio?"

Wilder parodies the paterfamilial family and its patriarchal leadership, but with compassion and understanding—Ma's counseling really does work. Director Doug Kirshen's family tend to be cardboard cutouts racing through lines and stereotypical portrayals. The acting is good, but character portrayal is slightly off center. From the way they behave, up-playing their juvenile characteristics to warped proportions, Caroline and Arthur might well be retarded. Pa acts like Jack Nicholson's shock therapy vegetable in One Flew over the Coo Coo's Nest's final scenes.

A "stage manager" (Dana Stanley) reads deadpan lines of all the characters outside the family—a gas station attendant and neighbors. At first the idea appears a little forced—more "the world's a stage" garbage. But considering the family unit's central importance, the outside world is a stage with billboards and gas boys as characters in a drama viewed from the car window. James' performance, reflecting Ma's authority, balances the other characters' minor shortcomings, grounding a well executed production of Wilder's interesting, and seldom performed, work.

The one-act version of Sexual Perversity in Chicago should be renamed to "The World According to Bernard Litko." Sexual Perversity suffers from director Mitch Price's editing to cram the entire play into the one-act format. Countless individual scenes last about forty seconds each with Litko emerging as the main focus. Litko (Jack Cahill) is the combination swinging seventies macho chauvinist and slob, either looking for or talking about sex, and who's probably discouraged because he's unable to fit into a white disco suit.

His friend, Danny Shapiro (J.B. Dilheimer) establishes what appears to be a steady relationship, a seventies cultural taboo and act of foolishness that will not last according to Litko, with Deborah Solomon (Jill Roberts). Solomon's friend Joan Webber (Karen McSweeney) reacts similarly to Litko, rejecting the possibility a mutual relationship because, she repeatedly asserts, men only take advantage of women.

Deborah and Danny; Barbie and Ken. There's no difference and as the play unfolds their plastic love affair, putting hands on each other's thighs as though as passionate as they get, becomes more tedious to watch. Nobody cares about their relationship and petty arguments; Litko's impressions about topics like prayer and sex, "Do you ever give thanks when doing it?" is where the interest lies.

Furthermore, Cahill's and McSweeney's performances are better than Roberts' and Dilheimer's, increasing the gulf between interest and boredom. The only time Dilheimer (playing a far more difficult role than Cahill's Litko) proves he is not actually a Ken doll in the physical sense is when he blurts expletives at McSweeney's Webber. Both Roberts and Dilheimer work best when they're not together, when they're listening to their respective friends' diatribes. Webber's and Litko's polarized opinions on sexual relationships, which turn out to be similar "me"-generation attitudes taken from either a male or female perspective, make Sexual Perversity the evening's most accessible and entertaining production.

On one hand, everything the director, Bill Evans, and the actors are responsible for in the production of Summertime—the stage direction, condensed flow of the play, and acting, particularly Paul Adelman as the young man and Amy Loyd as the girl—are exceptionally good.

On the other hand, the play itself is an unbearable exercise in sentimental tearjerking, consistently attempting to coerce the audience into raising the Kleenex corporation's stock value.

Young man (title of protagonist and overly overt way of "hinting" at universality. And wait, there's more awfulness; young man wears black. Gee, does that symbolize death, is he going to die?) wants to be an artist, but father (Derek Wadlington) and his realist Protestant work ethic—dad wanted to be a doctor, ended up a traveling salesman—won't allow it. Young man decides to drop out of college, gets drafted, tearfully parts with girl, with mother (Carmen Thomas), and dies in Vietnam.

The play juxtaposes scenes out of chronological sequence and Evan's stage direction in the experimental theatre cleverly utilizes this. While describing his girlfriend to soldier (Aaron Caplan), young man steps out of a Vietnam battlefield into his bedroom before he was drafted.

Adelman and Loyd work extremely well together in the bedroom scenes and their strong performances supercede the play's inherent sentimentality. In fact, the rest of the cast—Wadlington's father (wonder bread white beyond belief), Thomas' concerned mother, and Caplan's tensed but authoritative soldier—turn in extraordinary performances. Summertime's production has everything in its favor, except for a true first rate script.

Calendar

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 29

7:30 and 10:00 pm — Weekly Weekend Films. Alice's Restaurant, presented by the BFVS. Smith Auditorium. $1 admission.

8:00 pm — One Acts. Summertime by Ron Cowen. Sexual Perversity in Chicago by David Mamet. The Happy Journey by Thornton Wilder. G.H.Q. Playwrights' Theater. Seating limited to 100.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 31

2:00 - 5:00 pm — Amnesty International presents The Killing Fields, Smith Auditorium.

7:30 and 10:00 pm — Weekly Weekend Films. Mash, presented by the BFVS. Smith Auditorium. $1 admission.

8:00 pm — One Act. Summertime by Ron Cowen. Sexual Perversity in Chicago by David Mamet. The Happy Journey by Thornton Wilder. G.H.Q. Playwrights' Theater. Seating limited to 100.

9:00 pm — Fright Night II. Dancing with music by Crosswinds Band, followed by Rocky Horror Picture Show. Costume contest and fortune telling. Dining Room, Wentworth Hall.

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 1

3:00 pm — Gallery Talk. "A Recent Acquisition: Bronze Statuette of a Youth." Henrietta M. Tye, registrar. Walker Art Building.

3:00 pm — Foreign Film Series. La Cage aux folles. French with English subtitles. Smith Auditorium.

7:30 pm — Slide/Lecture. "Recent Paintings and Drawings by Kathy Bradford." Kathy Bradford, painter, from New York. Visual Arts Center.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 2

7:00 pm — Film presentation, The Toughest Job You'll Ever Love, by Peace Corps representatives. Chronicles the lives of three Peace Corps Volunteers in the field. Lancaster Lounge, Moulton Union.

7:30 pm — Lecture. "Praise and Blame: Aspects of the Graeco-Roman Literary Tradition About Women", by Helene P. Foley, associate professor of classics at Barnard College, Columbia University. Kresge Auditorium.

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 3

9:00 am — 4:00 pm — Recruiters will interview persons interested in Peace Corps in the Office of Career Services.

10:00 am — 4:00 pm — Returned Peace Corps volunteers will sponsor an information booth in the Moulton Union.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 4

3:00 and 8:00 pm — Weekly Wednesday Films. 8 1/2, directed by Federico Fellini. Smith Auditorium.

MOVIE LISTINGS:

Evening Star Cinema (Tontine Hall)

My Life As a Dog, showing at 7:00 and 9:00 p.m.

Cinema City (Cooks Corner)

Fatal Attraction, showing at 6:45 and 9:00 p.m.

Suspect, showing at 6:45 and 9:00 p.m.

Dirty Dancing, showing at 7:05 and 9:05 p.m.

Like Father, Like Son, showing at 7:10 and 9:10 p.m.

Nickelodeon Cinema (1 Temple, Portland)

Suspect

Lost Boys

Dirty Dancing

Like Father, Like Son

Mateman

Baby Boom

Call 772-9751 for times.

NOVEMBER, OFF CAMPUS...

NOVEMBER 1

3:00 pm — Royal Winnipeg Ballet. Hutchins Concert Hall, UMO. Call 581-1755.

NOVEMBER 2

9:30 and 11:00 am — Concert. Meet the Orchestra, presented by the Portland Symphony Orchestra, Portland City Hall Auditorium. $1.50. Call 773-8191.

NOVEMBER 3

7:30 pm — "Gay Civil Rights", a panel discussion sponsored by the Maine Civil Liberties Union. Lincoln School, 45 Forest Ave. in Bangor. 7:30 pm — Radio Kaos presents Roger Waters in concert. Cumberland County Civic Center.

NOVEMBER 4

7:30 pm — The first meeting of an informal writer's group will be held at the Maine Writer's Center, Brunswick. Bring any work you would like to share.

NOVEMBER 5

8:15 pm — Inter-Ilumini, a Chilean folk ensemble, in concert. Olin Arts Center, Bates College. Call 786-6135.

NOVEMBER 7

8:00 pm — An acoustic music performance, with Montreux-Pierre Ben-susan and Latitude. Portland City Hall Auditorium. Tickets at all Ticketron locations, or call 1-800-382-8080.

8:00 pm — INXS, with the Brandos. Wadsworth Gymnasium, Colby College. Tickets $12, available at Ticketron locations, Student Activities office at Bowdoin, or call 1-800-382-8080.

8:00 pm — The Little Prince original musical performance. $5 admission. American Legions Hall, 86 Winthrop, Augusta. Call 622-6339.

(continued on page 16)

Behl calls for awareness, curricular diversity

LIZZ MILLAN

Orient Asst. Entertainment Editor

"President Greason, Dr. Blake, Members of the College and Guests:

I want to talk today about the figure of a beautiful tree, once mentioned by Mahatma Gandhi. In talking about this tree, I also want to mention its relevance to the Bowdoin curriculum. I believe that the curriculum should be related to the vision of the world we have. Also, I will express a personal vision."

As the student selected by the Awards Committee, senior Aditya Behl delivered a speech in Morrell Gym on Friday, October 23. "The Beautiful Tree" was presented by Behl during the James Bowdoin Day Ceremony.

The metaphor used to interweave the political, social and moral concerns of Aditya's speech was that of the beautiful tree. The words which inspired Behl to use such a metaphor are the words of Mahatma Gandhi.

"... the British, when they came to India, instead of taking hold of things as they were, began to root them out and examine the roots. They left the roots uncovered, ... and the beautiful tree perished."

Behl went on to cite recent historical movements which indicate that something is being done to revive the beautiful tree.

"Despite the anarchic nature of international events, there are movements to bring the world together in a New International Economic Order."

Behl stressed the importance of these movements for, "even something as far away as terrorism in the Middle East affects us here. After all, no man is an island entire of itself."

The main point of the speech, however, resided in the relevance of these events to education at Bowdoin.

"The idea of a world spreading out in a web-like complexity of meanings from the roots of our existence means that a basic function of a liberal arts education is to enable the student to deal with such a world, one becoming systematically more interdependent and I hope less fragmented. Since we are all connected with Bowdoin College, we must ask ourselves: how does Bowdoin address this multiplicity and how well does Bowdoin prepare its students to be citizens in such a world?"

The answer was — not as well as it should. Behl brought to light the lack of opportunities for foreign study in the classroom: "Even the two courses (required) are based on the assumption of a dichotomy between Western and non-Western civilizations." Also mentioned was the lack of cultural and socio-economical differences among the student body.

Behl's solution? A broadening of the vision of culture via a greater variety of course offerings as well as a more active recruitment of students with different cultures and backgrounds.

"Practically, I think that we need a diversification of the system at Bowdoin. But diversification is a term that is thrown around a lot these days. What does it mean? In my view, it would have to take into account the metaphor of the tree. We need to proliferate and expand the faculty and curriculum radically. There is the reality of fixed resources, but if we can have a nine million dollar Farley Field Center, we can have a larger variety of offerings.

"If we have more diverse social resources for all students, we will all have more opportunity to expand ourselves. I believe that innate curiosity would make people find out more about others. Like the tree, we have to spread out from our roots and meet the world."

Reform was demanded. "We need to shake complacency and make radical changes in the nature of this college, or we will just be preparing students for living and working in a rather narrow segment of American society. An expanded vision of the world, and the tools to deal with such a vision — these must be among the educational skills given to us by Bowdoin. Members of the College and honoured guests, we have to make sure that this beautiful tree does not perish."

Obviously the subject addressed in this speech strikes a familiar chord. Aditya Behl's criticisms have been well received. Dean Nyhus will be sending copies of the speech to the governing boards.

A problem with reform, is where to start. Behl suggests beginning in the classroom — expanding world vision there. Would Bowdoin students enroll in such classes? Reform also involves change at the individual level. Active participation in the Afro-American Society, International Club, Struggle and Change or one of the other socially concerned groups on campus would indicate an interest in opening one's mind to the cultural differences already present at Bowdoin.

If students do not show an interest in cultural growth and increased world vision, the beautiful tree of which Aditya spoke, will perish.

Outing Club update

"Since the Bowdoin Outing Club Leadership Training Course is taking most of our leaders on a trek to Bigelow Mountain, there will only be one other trip going out this weekend...but a fine one it should be.

On November 1, at 8:00am, (that's this Sunday) a group will leave for Robinhood, Maine where students will canoe flat water on the Sasanoa River to the Kennebec and right on towards Days Ferry (near Bath), where they will arrive around lunchtime, so pack a lunch.

The voyage promises to be a good one with coastal scenery galore and hopefully, many a seal. All are invited. If you are interested, please contact Peter Hodum or the Outing Club office (x3325) TODAY for further details.

Looking ahead, on Saturday, November 7, a day-long hike to Chocura Mountain near Conway, New Hampshire is in the planning stages. It will be a 7.8 mile hike (round trip) with a 2737' vertical rise. Chocura Mountain is one of the most spectacular mountains in New Hampshire and again, everyone is welcome. Jen Gervais will be leading the hike, so you can contact her with any questions.

1,200 volumes relating primarily to the fine arts, French and English history and literature, and travel, contained in the Susan Dwight Bliss Collection are now available for public viewing. The Bliss Room, on the second floor of Hubbard Hall, is open from 10 a.m. until noon Thursdays through April.

Meanwhile, the Map and Compass class has been "searching and locating" in Topsham this past week as a finale to the course. The assignment was to find the Peak of Power mountain in Topsham and various items along the way by compass, originating at Jim Lentz' home outside Brunswick. All questions concerning any of these trips, courses, or borrowing of equipment can be answered if you stop by the Outing Club office on the second floor of the old gym during any weekday.

Pauline's Bloomers

Tontine Mall, Brunswick, 725-5952

QUALITY FLORAL SERVICE

Anniversary, Birthday, Hospital, Wedding, Sympathy, Holiday, All Occasions

Flowers, Plants & Gifts

We Deliver

Balloons & Candles

Major Credit Cards Accepted • Open 6 days 9:00 to 5:30

COLBY COLLEGE CONCERTS

present

INXS

with special guest

THE BRANDOS

Saturday, November 7

at 8:00 p.m.

in Wadsworth Gym

Tickets $12.00

available in Bowdoin College

Student Activities Office

For more information - call 872-3338

NEW!! Film Developing In 45 Minutes!
Why Wait Any Longer?

MERCURY
PHOTO Quality Film
Developing...Fast!

Kodak® Mini Lab System 25 processor
Newest Kodak paper and chemicals
Kodak Colorwatch quality control links
our lab with Rochester's
unsurpassed results.

FULL LINE CAMERA STORE - Slide developing - cameras,
film, batteries, bags - large frame selection - repairs

1-95 (EXIT 24) & ROUTE 196, TOPSHAM, ME.

PASSPORTS
WHILE
YOU WAIT

Alan Harris
ORIENT Photography Editor

They've been trying to spruce up the Bowdoin Pines. The wooded tract in the north-east corner of campus has been undergoing some trimming for the past few years. Under the suggestion of Phillip Sargent, volunteer College Forester, physical plant personnel had been clearing out deciduous trees and undergrowth from beneath the towering pines in hopes getting the younger white pine saplings to grow. This work had been going on whenever the physical plant crew could find the time. This past summer the college contracted out and the work at the Bowdoin Pines went quicker than before.

The Pines have an extensive history. They were spared some hundred and fifty years ago while land all around was cleared for farm land. Not much is on record of their history before the Second World War. Joe Sewall (a Bowdoin graduate) and his company from Old Town did a forestry plan in the 1930's, much of it cannot be found. Since the war there have been two hurricanes (1947, 1957) that blew down the taller trees. Trees were also affected by white pine blister 'corrected' by removal of gooseberries (it was suspected that the gooseberries promoted the white pine blister) and nutrient deficiencies in the 50's were corrected by fertilizing. Also, six thousand seedlings have been planted. All in an attempt to keep the tall, straight pines growing at Bowdoin when they'd been cleared elsewhere. David Barbour, director of Physical Plant, describes the Bowdoin Pines as "one of the finest stands of [white] pines in Maine or even the country".

The pines have become strongly associated with Bowdoin College, both with alumni and with tourists who are told about the Pines in guides to Maine's coast like Dorcus Miller's The Maine Coast: A Nature Lovers Guide and Bowdoin's Jan and Liz Pierson's A Birder's Guide to the Coast of Maine.

The Pines have some great trails leading down to, and along, the rail-road tracks. It is easy enough to see how the towering white pines have become such an attraction—just go down the paths or the tracks and look up, way up. In 1980, the state recognized the Pines, putting them on the "Register of Critical Areas" saying that the Pines were found "...to be a highly significant natural feature from a statewide perspective..."

It is this perspective of 'The Bowdoin

Photo by Alan Harris

Out on a limb: preserving the Bowdoin Pines

Pines' that the present plan had in mind. Phil Sargent, eighty-eight years old, retired from forty-one years of work with the Forest Service and the International Paper Company, and a graduate of Yale School of Forestry, volunteered to work out some ways, as he states in his report, "...to perpetuate as long as possible into the future, the uniqueness and natural beauty of this tract..." which includes mostly, but not solely, white pines.

The logging this summer was done to help meet this objective. The hope was to prepare an area that young pine trees could establish themselves and grow tall and straight like their elders. The young pines are not particularly shade tolerant. That is, they have a hard time growing in the dense undergrowth of the oak and birch. This problem means the tall deciduous trees that also make up some of the Bowdoin Pines were to be cut to make room for the young pines.

It is the stumps of these trees one sees when walking down the paths that leave from the Development Office's parking lot. The cut area is very neat for a logged area. The loggers followed Sargent's guidelines and cleared slash and other remnants of their activities so that visitors don't feel shocked about logging in the Pines. The result is that the casual visitor most likely doesn't pay the cutting much mind. But those who like the Bowdoin Pines as a place to birdwatch or use as a study area have noticed the difference.

Professor Nathaniel T. Wheelwright, a biology professor, has used the area as a place for field trips for his ecology and ornithology classes. His students have and are using the area as a convenient study site. Other biology classes have found it useful, as have art students looking for inspiration close by. Dudley Woodall, Treasurer of the College, says that a new approach to caring for the pines is being worked out between Wheelwright and Sargent.

Prof. Wheelwright would like to see the Bowdoin Pines go the way they are going, perhaps in the next generation (100-150 years) there will be few giant white pines, but he says that "...in the mean time there will be a nice forest to enjoy." Wheelwright's ideal plan for the forest has less cutting. He believes not only will the area serve more as 'nice' forest preserve if left undisturbed but the young pines will benefit from the surrounding trees since the tall trees help the protect the younger white pine from the white pine beetle. The white pine beetle is a common pest that attacks the white pine at their growing tip, a situation that causes them to grow out and forked instead of straight and tall.

The pines as they are now, and will be for quite some time, contain much to look at. Moose have been seen there, (as recently as this summer). Ecology students have found there are at least four kinds of fern, and a variety of trees besides the white pine, such as red and sugar maple, red oak, hemlock, fir, red pine, red spruce, black cherry, and yellow birch. The Pierson's Guide says that during migration there are 18 to 20 species that can be seen during an hour along the tracks. It is this kind of diversity that Wheelwright wants to plan for.

A forty-five minute walk (and that is if one walks extremely slowly) down to the tracks shows the Bowdoin Pine's diversity best. There from the tracks is a view that includes now autumn grass that lies along the tracks leading into the moss and ferns and shorter trees with the massive pines and oak rising above them. The calm is punctured with chickadees, nuthatches and kinglets playing in and out of sight amongst the trees and juncos flitting by with their white tail edges flashing. All this right by campus.

Surrogate parents without test tubes: the Host Family Program

LIZ MILLAN
ORIENT Asst. Entertainment Editor

A home cooked meal enjoyed in a family atmosphere is something most students can enjoy over break. For some, however, it is not possible to travel home each break. For these students, Bowdoin provides a host family. Of course, through this program, a relationship is established which provides much more than just a home cooked meal.

The host family program was expanded this year to include American students. When the program began last year, it offered host families to international students only. Last Spring, a campus poll was conducted to determine whether American students would be receptive to the program. One in twenty students polled were receptive to the idea. This was enough of a response to make the program available to American students as well.

The Association of Bowdoin Friends recruited the host families. Eighty-eight Brunswick families responded to the program.

"A lot of people who went to Bowdoin participate in the program. They realize the need for such a service as many of them missed having the opportunity while they were students." Anne Howell, director of the program said.

These families now host; thirty international students, seventy-six freshmen, three transfer students; four exchange students also participate in the program. The program does not restrict itself to filling the needs of students. A professor and a teaching fellow also benefit from the program.

"The program fills a need. It's nice for someone from the college community to have a relaxing homey environment where they can go to enjoy a change of scenery." Anne Howell, director of the program said.

The program was quite successful last year. Every student remained with the same family. A questionnaire is sent to both students and families in order to match interests. The interests seem to be well matched this year as well.

"I always feel welcome. It's great to have a place to get away from the college environment."

--Katherine Denny

"I always feel welcome. It's great to have a place to go when I want to get away from the college environment for a change of scenery," participant Katherine Denny said.

Denny is from Virginia, making it inconvenient for her to travel home for breaks. The purpose of including American students in the program was to provide them with a home away from home, especially during breaks.

"We take care of the students from outside New England first. Selection is based on geographic distance. Although eight students from Maine applied for a host family - not all were able to be accommodated." Howell said.

Those students who were accommodated have nothing but praise for the program. "It's a hot program - I would definitely recommend it to incoming freshmen," freshman Eric Olson said.

Olson is from New Jersey. He felt that having a family-type connection in Brunswick would be helpful. He feels he has definitely benefited from his host family.

The benefits work both ways. Many of the families who participate have older children who are no longer living at home. Hosting a bowdoin student allows them to ease the emptiness. Also, families with young children enjoy the interaction between their Bowdoin "son" or "daughter" and their children.

"I think it's nice for our kids to have contact with older people. Tamar (our host daughter) has taken our son to Bowdoin - he really appreciates her company," Anne Howell said.

The program provides benefits for both family and student. The student knows he/she has a place to go where he/she can enjoy the company of caring adults and the families know that they are filling a need - the need of those students who are not able to enjoy a family atmosphere as often as they would like.

Air turbulence: WBOR radio

Tucker Shaw

ORIENT Contributor

The staff at WBOR, Bowdoin's own student-run radio station, have been busy throughout the fall making changes and improvements around the station in hopes of gaining a more professional sound and a wider audience.

The station, which serves not only the Bowdoin campus, but all of the Bath - Brunswick area, has been re-evaluated and put through a series of changes over the last few months, under the direction of Edie Hoffman '88.

Hoffman, a WIGY disc-jockey and WBOR's station manager, has put the Bowdoin DJ's through an extensive re-training session in an attempt to perfect each staff member's performance on the air, as well as behind the scenes.

Cheray Hogan '90, the station's program director, noted that the re-evaluation period has been tough, but said, "I think it was about the best thing we've ever done. It's been very beneficial."

Hogan, as program director, is responsible for seeing that all of the DJ's are properly licensed. The licensing is not difficult, but very serious, according to Hogan, because the station must comply with federal rules and regulations.

Hogan also takes care of public service announcements, which are short messages concerning environmental and social issues, as well as on-campus and local events. She stressed the importance of these spots. "They are something we're giving back to the community," she said.

"We all help each other out, doing what we have the time and initiative to do," explained Hogan. She shares a new music show on Friday evenings from 7:00 pm to 9:30 pm with Barrett Broutas '91.

Production manager Bill Zegal '89 hosts a hardcore punk rock show on Friday afternoons from 2:30 pm to 4:30 pm. He claimed that WBOR is needed not only on the Bowdoin campus, but also in the Brunswick area.

"The station plays an important role. It introduces new music to listeners, which is especially important in this area. There are no limitations on what we can play," noted Zegal.

WBOR radio staff 1987-88. Photo by Morrell

Zegal is in agreement with Hogan concerning the changes of late. "The organization fell apart last year, but we're back on the right track. I think we have a much more professional sound," he commented.

Zegal would like listeners to feel free to call the station to make requests or to offer suggestions. "Tune in and give us some feedback," he urged.

This year's music director, Larry

Glenn '88, has also noticed change at WBOR. According to Glenn, the college radio market has become much more commercially important in the past few years, and the station now receives dozens of promotional material from record companies each week.

"WBOR is the only station in the area that the listener can tune in to hear music other than the mainstream - Whitney Houston variety," said Glenn.

Glenn, who does a new music show from 9:30 pm to 12:30 pm on Wednesday nights, is also impressed with this year's staff. "There seem to be a lot of really good freshmen, which is great," he explained.

Tina Rodfong '91 was a DJ last year while still in high school. She now co-hosts a Sunday morning WBOR show from 9:00 am to 10:30 am. "It's fun to go in and get out of control, laugh a lot, and play your favorite music," she said.

Record reviews: Pianosaurus, Washington Squares and others

Larry Glenn

ORIENT Contributor

Red Hot Chili Peppers The Uplift Moto Party Plan

If you liked the Beastie Boys, you'll rip off all of your clothes and run naked like a screaming beast when you hear this. Even if you hated the Beastie Boys, you'll lose control of your lower extremities. The Red Hot Chili Peppers don't want to change your life. They don't want to make you stand up for your rights. They don't want to make you see the evils of capitalist, imperialist patriarchal society. They just want to make you lighten up and have a good time. The most political statement that this album makes is that white people can play funk ("Funky Crime"). Take Sly and the Family Stone, George Clinton and Parliament, throw in some ACDC guitar, let four punks play it, and you've got the Red Hot Chili Peppers blistering funk. From a cover of Dylan's "Subterranean Homesick Blues" that probably still has his head spinning, to psychedelia, "Behind the Sun", to funk anthems, "Organic Anti-Beat Box Band", this is almost more fun than humans should be allowed.

The Washington Squares

The Washington Squares are three neo-beatniks from New York City who play acoustic folk music. All the ingredients of a bad album. Which is actually what I was expecting when I opened it up. I mean, I hate folk music. It really annoys the hell out of me. I've always hated it. I never even liked "Puff the Magic Dragon".

But there's something different about these people. I'm not quite sure what it is, but this record is...good. It ranges from anthemic (great word, huh?) we're-young-let's-change-the-world-for-the-better songs, "New Generation", to Country and Western, "He Was a Good Friend of Mine", and Texas rockabilly, "Samson and Delilah, all with the folksy twist. All of the Squares, as I like to call them, are veterans of seventies New York New Wave bands—Billy Ficca of Television plays drums—insuring a lack of the drippy sentimentality that seems to plague most folk music and rooting their music firmly in eighties sensibility. This is an interesting and refreshingly different album.

The Silencers A letter from Saint

Paul

Boring English people with great haircuts and nice matching leather outfits. If I had to compare this band's music to a food, it would probably be mashed potatoes (no butter.)

Pianosaurus Groovy Neighborhood

First, there was Elvis. Then, in 1967, the Beatles released Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band. In 1976, the Sex Pistols changed everything again. It's 1987 and Pianosaurs is the NEXT BIG THING. This album breaks away from just about every tradition that rock and roll has established, and sets off in an entirely new direction—towards a new realm, an exciting, unexplored, and utterly fertile land. Pianosaurs goes where no band has dared to go before. They only play toy instruments. That's right, Fraggles Rock drums, plastic guitars, and a piano that Schroeder would kill for. The really frightening thing about this album, though, the thing that left me totally perplexed, is that it's really good!

Admittedly, it is a tad skewed but the Pianosaurs play sort of dB's-style pop (Peter Holsapple of the dB's produced the album), with a good helping of Jonathan Richman's squeaky-clean sensibility. They also branch out into doo-wop, "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Toystore", and amazingly authentic blues, Chuck Berry's "Memphis" and John Lee Hookers "Dimples." I guarantee that you'll be singing this stuff to yourself long after you've heard it. Pretty good for a band that spent less than ten dollars on its equipment.

W
I
T
H

NEED TO DOCTOR YOUR MCAT SCORE?

If your MCAT score needs a shot in the arm, come to the experts in test preparation—Stanley H. Kaplan.

Our test-taking techniques and educational review will help you be in top condition test day. We'll not only sharpen your scientific knowledge, but your reading, problem-solving, and essay-writing skills too.

Summer courses are registering now. So call the best in test prep—Kaplan. And get an MCAT score that you deserve.

STANLEY H. KAPLAN EDUCATIONAL CENTER, LTD.

DON'T COMPETE WITH
A KAPLAN STUDENT—BE ONE

Maine classes for
April MCAT now forming -
Call to reserve your place!

(617) 964-TEST collect.

A Bowdoin player dribbles past the Bates defenders. Photo by Bonnie Berryman

Women's soccer continues to cruise

By TONY IACCACI
ORIENT Staff

The Women's Varsity Soccer team had two key victories last week defeating New Hampshire college and Bates college to increase their record to a strong 10-2-1. The Polar Bears are playing excellent soccer as they approach the end of their season, and the team hopes to receive an invitation to the NIAC tournament which will begin next weekend. Bowdoin wraps up the season tomorrow against Salem State at home.

Everything seemed to be going Bowdoin's way last Friday as the Polar Bears beat New Hampshire by the score of 1-0 before a veritable gamut of proud parents. Coach Cullen felt that the team played very well, and he was also pleased that he was able to give every player on the team playing time. By playing everyone, Bowdoin seemed to gain a mental advantage as a flood of new players kept the opposition struggling to maintain their marks. On a more obvious level, it gave the starters a chance for much needed rest.

The two teams played aggressive soccer, and neither side was able to gain superiority. Bowdoin took 13 shots in the game to N.H. college's 12 shots; however, it was the defenses of both teams that controlled the game and no goals were allowed. The Polar Bears had several chances to score including one shot from junior Jen Russell hitting the right hand post and another shot by freshman Christine Neill that went over the cross-bar by mere inches. The regulation time ended in a scoreless tie and once again, Bowdoin found themselves going into overtime.

It took the Polar Bears only 1 minute to score in the first overtime. Freshman Sara Russell broke down the right wing and then sent a beautiful cross to the front of the N.H. goal. Christine Neill converged on the ball and slammed it into the back of the net for what would prove to be the winning goal. The Polar Bears then moved to a double sweeper configuration and played a defensive game. N.H. college was unable to score and much to the delight of the delirious parents, Bowdoin emerged with a 1-0 victory. The shut-out is the fourth of the season for freshman goalie Melanie Kratz.

When the Polar Bears faced the Bobcats of Bates last Wednesday, Bowdoin played a very strong game beating the visiting Bates team by a score of 3-1. Bates stormed into the game and scored the first goal of the game. The field was lined with hostile Bates fans and suddenly Bowdoin found themselves in a uncomfortable position.

In the past, Bowdoin has not always played their best soccer against Bates, but on this occasion they were able to turn on the offense when needed, supported by excellent defensive play.

Christine Neill quickly scored the tying goal for Bowdoin. Neill took a cross from Jen Russell on the left wing and placed it in the right hand corner of the net for Bowdoin's first tally. The two teams were tied at 1-1 going into the second half.

Bowdoin took charge in the second half. The Polar Bears totally dominated play as the defense denied Bates any forward movement. Neill scored her second goal and the winner for Bowdoin as she took advantage of a scramble in front of the Bates net and sent the ball home.

Liz Brown scored the final goal for Bowdoin several minutes later as she took an amazing shot from the right hand side of the 18 yard line. Brown's shot was high and dipped into the left hand side of the net over the netminder's head. The game ended in a 3-1 victory for Bowdoin.

Running safety

At this time of year, and for the next four months, the athletic department would like to remind student and faculty joggers to be particularly careful while running on the roads in and around Brunswick.

"The sun is very low in the afternoons now, and drivers have a hard time seeing runners," said Bowdoin cross-country coach Peter Slovenski. "We get calls from concerned people in the community who have had close calls with joggers from Bowdoin."

The single most important thing to do for your safety is wear bright colors or a reflective vest.

"Bowdoin grays and blacks are absolutely the worst things to wear on the roads," said Slovenski.

Reflective vests are available for $6.50 in the bookstore. The bookstore also carries less expensive reflective strips and leg bands.

Other safety tips from the athletic department include: run facing traffic, never listen to a Walkman while running on roads, and stay out of the Brunswick Commons during hunting season.

Volleyball drops two

TANYA WEINSTEIN
ORIENT Staff

The volleyball team lost fast Saturday to both Amherst and Wellesley in their final regular season tournament of the season. Their record now stands at 14-12.

The match was played at Amherst College. Bowdoin lost to Amherst in two games, with scores of 8-15 and 8-15. They were also beaten by Wellesley in two games, 11-15 and 13-15.

Assistant Coach Dan Rush said that despite the losses the team played very well. The problem he saw was a slackening off of intensity towards the end of the game. In one game against Wellesley, Bowdoin had a significant lead but then allowed Wellesley to catch up. He said, "We became tentative, and once you become tentative you can lose rather quickly."

Karen Andrew has been an outstanding player this year, and was named to the All-Tournament Team recently at a tournament at SMU. One major disadvantage that the team has, however, is the absence of one of its key players, Penny Palevsky, who was recently injured. Rush stated that Palevsky's passing ability and experience have been greatly missed.

The team was not chosen to attend the NYAC regional championship tournament with Bates, Smith, Williams and MIT. Although Coach Ruddy was disappointed, she said, "It is an honor to even be looked at in the selection process." She believes that the team will be even stronger next year as it tries again to make it to the NYAC.

The final tournament of the season is the Maine State Championship to be held on November 7th at SMVIT. Bowdoin still remains in the number two position in the state, while Bates holds the lead. Although twelve teams are invited to the tournament, it seems that it will basically be a battle between Bowdoin and Bates.

Rush said that the team is working on their offense in preparation. He stated, "If we can diversify our offense against Bates and sustain it, we can beat them. It is a question of always thinking when on the court, reading the other team, and looking for the best shot."

Rush also said that volleyball is very much a mental game, and although the Bates team is bigger, stronger, and has more experience, there is still a chance of winning the state championship. He said, "We can definitely win-it will take a pretty good effort though."

BIG RED Q PRINTING

next to the College

- stationery
- resumes
- posters
- newsletters

212E Maine Street
Brunswick
729-4840

STOWE TRAVEL

MID COAST MAINE'S MOST COMPLETE TRAVEL AGENCY

A TRAVELERS NATIONAL NETWORK AGENCY

- GROUP TRAVEL SPECIALISTS • BUSINESS ACCOUNTS
- INCENTIVE TRAVEL • CRUISES • AMTRAK • AIRLINES
- VCR CASSETTE TRAVEL LIBRARY • VACATION PACKAGES
- GREYHOUND • WESTERN UNION
- $150,000 AUTOMATIC FLIGHT INSURANCE

"ALL SERVICES AT NO EXTRA COST"

725-5573

8:30 5:30 DAILY
9 - 2 SAT (SUMMER)
9 - 4 SAT (WINTER)

9 PLEASANT ST. BRUNSWICK

Call toll free in Maine 1-800-522-9990

There is a difference in Law Schools.

To learn more about our Law School, where faculty and students work together toward a common goal, see your Pre-Law Advisor or write directly to us.

We invite applications from all persons regardless of race, gender, or handicap.

School of Law
Western New England College

1215 Wilbraham Road Springfield, MA 01119 413-782-1406

Sarah Lawrence College Academic Year in Paris

a semester or year of academic study for juniors and seniors. Students study in small seminars and tutorials with French faculty, and in such Parisian institutions as the Sorbonne, the Ecole du Louvre, and the Institut d'Etudes Politiques.

For information and an application, contact:
Sarah Lawrence College Academic Year in Paris
Box BOP
Bronxville, New York 10708

Cross country streaks to second in state

Men's cross country clinches third at states

DAVE NUTE

Orient Contributor

Bowdoin's women's cross country team rallied for an impressive second place in the Maine State Championships held last Saturday at Bates College.

Beating both Colby and Bates for the second week running, the Bears fell only to the superior performance of the University of Maine. The University of Southern Maine finished with a fifth place standing.

Two runners from Bowdoin, co-captain Deanna Hodgkin, '89, and Marilyn Fredey, '91, earned spots on the All Maine Team with their respective second and fourth place finishes.

Co-captain Rosie Dougherty, '89, followed in fifteenth place, and freshmen Bev Halliday finished with twenty seventh. "It was the best race of my life!" said Halliday.

Also scoring for the Polar Bears was Kim Dirlam, '91, who finished just behind Halliday in twenty eighteenth place.

The runners now move on to face competition on a higher level. The qualifying and final rounds of Division III New England lie in the weekends ahead. The first qualification meet will be held this Friday.

An enthusiastic Dougherty stated, "Everybody's been running really well; it was great to beat Bates and Colby again."

DAVE NUTE

Orient Contributor

Bowdoin's men's cross country team placed third in the State of Maine Championship meet held last Saturday. Bates College hosted the event on their tough, hilly five mile course. Five schools fielded runners for the meet won by St. Joseph's.

Tod Dillon '89 ran yet another exceptional race, finishing third over-all, and first for Bowdoin. "I'm happy with the way I ran, considering that I wasn't feeling that great," he states of the performance that earned him a position on the All Maine Team. "It was a tough course, but a fast one."

A pack of Bears finished in the late teens, starting with Sean Hale '91, at place number sixteen. Captain Marty Malague '90, with eighteenth place, Lance Hickey '91, at nineteen, and Colm Sweeney '88, with twenty first, rounded out the scoring for Bowdoin.

The team is looking forward to the three remaining races of the season—the three toughest. The Division III New England Championships and the qualifying races for it should prove a formidable task for the Bears.

Malague summed up the week's events saying, "I did run a super race, and we're all looking forward to the New England Qualifier."

Bowdoin forwards converge on the opponent's goal during a 6-1 thrashing of Colby. The women's record now stands at 9-2-1. Photo by Alan Harris

Field hockey

(continued from page 9)

"Audrey held us in that first half. She did everything possible," commented coach Sally LaPointe. Carroll also put on an incredible display at her position in front of the goal.

LaPointe sees the team as much stronger than in the beginning of the season. She noted that "in our last four games we scored 18 goals and had 3 scored against us as opposed to the first four games where we had 9 goals and 6 against us; that shows how the team has developed."

LaPointe is banking on that improvement and strength for the upcoming NIAC tournament at Trinity on the 31st and 1st. The #2 ranked Bowdoin faces Williams first and, if successful, will compete against the winner of the Tufts vs. Trinity game. Williams, which had a 10-1-1 season, will be a difficult game but LaPointe is looking forward to the challenge.

The coach stressed that "we are a much better team than when we played Tufts and Trinity in the season. I think it's obvious how far we've come."

Peggy's Typing Service
443-1267
Fast, Accurate, Reliable!
Affordable Rates!

Men's soccer

(continued from page nine)

Schultz had a near miss as he headed the ball off the post.

It was not until the three minute mark that the Polar Bears sewed things up. Garbaccio put a header in on a long crossing pass from captain Rich Adams, '88. It was Adam's first college point and it could not have come at a more opportune time.

Bowdoin now looks ahead to tomorrow's game as they venture to Middletown, Connecticut to face the Cardinals of Wesleyan University.

Beginning Nov. 8, we will be open Sundays, 11-4.
Something special for your Little One

Little Ones

- * fine clothing - premie-6/7 yrs.
- * educational games and toys
- * shower gifts

Children's harps - beginners and professional models

149 Maine Street, Tontine Mall
HRS: Mon-Thurs. 10 - 5:30 Fri 10 - 5 Sat & Sun closed

The TASTE OF MAINE RESTAURANT

- Banquet Facilities
- Function Rooms
- Overlooking Pleasant Cove

443-4554

Home of the Triple Lobster Plate!

Rt. 1, Woolwich Just north of Bath

Today:
Ms. Leona O'Bannor,
Exec. Vice President of Bloom County, Inc.
will tell a funny political joke.

All of us here in management are behind you
the whole way.
Leona!
Go for it, girl!

BILL CASEY WALKED UP
TO THE GATES OF HEAVEN AND SAID TO ANGEL GABRIEL:
GABRIEL
ST. GABRIEL
PETER GABRIEL
NO NO.

OH THANKS THIS
W.A. ...JUST SETTLE
WITH THE STRIKERS.

THAT'S FUNNY
LEONA
YOU'RE FIRED

BLOOM COUNTY

THE BRUNSWICK

FLOWER SHOP

729-8895
216A Maine St.
Mon.-Sat. 9:30-6

We Deliver
Wire Service

Centrally located across from Bowdoin College

Lanz of Salzburg

What would the Fall be without the timeless

"Granny" in cheerful prints? 100% cotton.

P. S. M. and L.
$26.00 to $30.00

CANTERBURY

FINE MEN'S AND WOMEN'S APPAREL
Monday thru Saturday 9:30 to 9:00
Cooks Corner Shopping Center, Brunswick

BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed

BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed

Think there's no
place in business
for someone
with a liberal arts degree?
Think again.

A Master's from The Annenberg School of Communications, combined with your bachelor's degree, can take you into a management career in the mass media or telecommunications.

Here's what some recent graduates of Annenberg's Master's in Communications Management are doing:

Suzanne B., B.A., French, U.C. Berkeley
Vice President, Programming Sales, ABC Radio

Steve B., B.A., Fine Arts, Ohio University
Senior Vice President, Creative Affairs,
Columbia Pictures-TV

Paul D., B.A., English, U. Michigan
Manager, Marketing and Public Policy, Pacific Bell

Sara K., B.A., Political Science, Duke
Director, Creative Services,
Assoc. of TV Programming Executives

Pam R., B.A., Asian Studies, Mount Holyoke
Director, Public Relations,
St. Paul Medical Center

Karl K., B.A., Economics, USC
Senior Telecommunications Consultant,
Price Waterhouse

Wendell F., B.A., Radio/TV/Film, Northwestern
Manager, Audience and Syndication Research,
Walt Disney Co.

HERE ARE TWO WAYS The Annenberg School,
University of Southern California, Los Angeles, prepares graduates for their careers.

1. Course work in...
 - management of media firms
 - communications technologies
 - law and public policy
 - international communications
 - diffusion of innovations
 - communication in organizations
2. On the job learning...
 - internships in Los Angeles and Washington, D.C.
 - job placement, while in school and after
 - access to alumni network

Please send me more information.

Name _____

Address _____

City/State/Zip _____

Currently Attending _____

MAIL TO: The Annenberg School of Communications
3502 South Hoover Street, University of Southern California, Los Angeles, California 90089-0281

Senders
Come see what's in store
for you!

Shop Daily 9:00-6:00
124 Maine Street, Brunswick

Ladd lauds constitution

TAMARA DASSANAYAKE
ORIENT Asst. News Editor

It is still, as it was at its inception 200 years ago, "the perfect vehicle" for translating the ideology of the American people into a governance structure said Professor Everett C. Ladd in his lecture last Wednesday entitled "Bringing the U.S. Constitution in Tune with the Twentieth Century."

Ladd, Professor of Political Science at the University of Connecticut and Executive Director and President of the Roper Center for Public Opinion Research, was speaking in the third of series sponsored by Bates and Bowdoin Colleges in observance of the bicentennial of the United States Constitution.

He said the Constitution is in essence a means of dividing power and has as its core a strong "individualism." Generations of Americans have realized the importance of this individualism and the need to check the power of the government, so that no 'one' group assumes too great a power, said Ladd.

Although various groups have accused the Constitution of being ineffective and outdated, Ladd believes that it is as effective now as it was 200 years ago citing opinion polls which have time and time again proved the support of the American people for this "ingenious" piece of work.

FRIGHT. NIGHT

II Saturday,
October 31
Wentworth

9 p.m.--Crosswinds Band
12 a.m.--Rocky Horror
Picture Show

We need you.

Write for the Orient
Positions available in all departments. No experience necessary.

For information call ext. 3300

Public Policy and Management

University of Southern Maine

Two years of interdisciplinary study leading to a master of arts degree in public policy and management

- offers a strong foundation in policy analysis and public management
- provides opportunity for specialized concentration options in growth management, health/human services, and environment/natural resources
- addresses cutting edge issues in regional, state, and local government
- integrates economics, sociology, political science, ethics, and law into total curriculum
- balances theoretical studies with practical applications, using the community, state and region as a laboratory

PPM SMALL CLASSES, CREATIVE PROGRAMMING, AND A UNIQUE OPPORTUNITY FOR ACCESS TO LEADERS AND DECISION MAKERS THROUGHOUT THE REGION

Applications now being accepted for September 1988
Part-time study options available

Contact: Office of the Director
Public Policy and Management Program
University of Southern Maine
96 Falmouth Street, Portland, ME 04103
(207)780-4380

Now that you've gotten into Bowdoin, IBM can help you get more out of it.

The road to graduation is paved with term papers, lab reports, cramming, all-nighters and, of course, exams.

To ease that journey and awaken your professors to your exceptional abilities, we suggest the newest member of the IBM® Personal System/2® family: the Model 25 Collegiate.

It's a high-powered personal computer with advanced graphics capabilities, designed to fit on your desk without adding to the clutter. And it comes with a generous 640 KB memory, two 3.5" diskette drives and an aid package every student can appreciate—a big discount.

plus Microsoft® Windows 1.04, Write, Paint, Cardfile, IBM DOS 3.3 and a mouse.

Pop in the load-and-go diskette and your Model 25 Collegiate is set to help you write and revise long papers and illustrate your points by combining words and graphics. So your professors will draw favorable conclusions about your work.

For more information on the Model 25 Collegiate, visit the IBM Education Product Coordinator on campus.

You'll quickly learn how to get the most out of the IBM Personal System/2.

IBM®

Microsoft is a registered trademark of the Microsoft Corporation. IBM is a registered trademark and Personal System/2 is a trademark of the International Business Machines Corporation. © IBM 1987.

OPINION

A modest proposal

Gordon Buffonge's chapel talk last Wednesday provided food for thought for students and professors alike. The general theme of the talk was the decline of intellectualism at Bowdoin and Buffonge's views on the reasons this problem might be growing.

Buffonge's suggestions were on target and instructive; now we feel it is our turn to try to be constructive. If there is a growing rift between students and the life of the mind at this college, then all members of the college community must move in concert to close that gap, students, faculty, and administrators alike.

To act effectively, we must first analyze the reasons for the problem. Obviously, many of them are not isolated in the college, but are restrictions that society places on our special community. Students feel pressure from family, their peers, themselves, and from social norms to gain certain status symbols. This pressure is not particular to the college years, but continues throughout life. At reunions, most of us will probably compare German cars and houses in the suburbs, or maybe how many short stories or poems or scholarly works were published during the past year. Stress to prepare for this competition is already felt during the undergraduate years. And perhaps that is unavoidable. But it certainly detracts from the growth that is supposed to take place throughout our last few years before we enter the "real world."

Of course, Bowdoin is supposed to prepare young men and women to go out and change the world. But it seems that if Bowdoin's sons and daughters are to change the world into a more idea-oriented place, the college itself must first undergo some changes.

For these changes, we make a plea to the faculty. In this space, they have often found themselves criticized; when asked by the newspaper for their opinion, they have often laid much of the blame for the problem with intellectualism at Bowdoin on the student body, and, by implication, on the admissions department for admitting the kind of students who may cause the problem. But we ask now that you listen with open minds.

Students come and go at Bowdoin; we are undergraduates for four years only, and then we are gone. But professors and policymakers provide the real continuity for the college, remaining for decades. We shape our years here, and the college exists for our growth. Many large universities exist seemingly more for the benefit of the professors than the students, providing a safe haven for research and writing. But Bowdoin professors are a special breed; they sign on, supposedly, to guide students and help them grow.

There are many professors who fulfill this duty admirably. But there are some who close up shop at the end of the day and go home to their own lives. Curiously, it is they who tend to complain most about the intellectual capacity of their students. So, it is to them that this plea is addressed.

To make a student want to live and active life of the mind, or to sustain that desire which exists in so many who arrive on campus for the first time every fall, you must interact with them in a way that makes that life attractive. Not everyone is cut out to be a philosopher, but everyone is deserving of a rewarding contemplative life to be at home with ideas.

Professors need not treat students as intellectual equals, but should treat them as their complete potential merits. Not all Bowdoin students are beer-swilling slob, and to most the Bowdoin diploma is much more than a glorified union card or working papers. But there is a danger that this will become a self-fulfilling prophecy if the college does not move to consolidate itself as an intellectual community—a market and playground for the free exchange of ideas.

Letters

Fogy

To the Editor:

As live-in students of Bowdoin College and bearers of post-Depression numerals (1988) we are immensely amused by Dr. Foggy Fenton's perky contribution to the Orient.

We regret the possibility that we may shatter Dr. Foggy's precious, illusory world of card catalogue and periodical glamor; but we feel the need to inform him of certain post-Depression realities. We "coeds", as he judiciously terms us, are overwhelmed by his fine estimate of our "partial" status at Bowdoin. It was most gracious of him to clarify his "humble opinion" that the real student body is composed solely of males and that we "coeds" are no more than geisha girls for the aesthetic satisfaction of the "male contingency." We are deeply bereaved that we do not live up to Dr. Foggy's unique standards of gift-wrapped perfection.

However, Dr. Foggy, we are not what you used to call "girls." "Au contraire," we are women, and this is no longer the 1930's.

Amby B. Landau
Devika R. Seth

Reaganesque

To the Editor:

As an exchange student from Mount Holyoke, I feel I must comment on Kevin Wesley's remark about Wellesley College students in his Oct. 9 "Sing in the Basin Street Blues" and his subsequent "Apology" on Oct. 23.

I actually barely noticed the stab at Wellesley when I first read it, but as my friends—also exchanges—and I discussed the implications of it I began to feel increasingly angry, offended, and uncomfortable that students at a women's college would be viewed as "sexually frustrated" rather than "intelligent" or "self-sufficient". For, although the brunt of the joke was Wellesley, it could just as easily have been my home institution; an equally unreasonable possibility.

I was gald to see the response to Kevin's "mistake" grow to dominate the entire editorial page of the October 23 issue of the Orient; However, I was quite disappointed with the Reaganesque nature of his "Apology," in which an assistant editor of the Orient was incapable of directly stating that he, personally, made a "stupid mistake" and was sorry for it. Also, I disagree with his implication that Wellesley's response to this slander was an overreaction. When a spokesperson for such a highly esteemed institution as Bowdoin puts such an inane and petty stab at the students of an equally (if not higher) esteemed institution in print, I believe that those students are justified in making some waves.

Sincerely,
Linda Wlodarski '89

Antiquated

To the Editor:

After I finished laughing hysterically at Mr. Antiquated Numerals' sexist dig at the "coeds" who wear "borrowed clothing from older and larger brothers," I was not sure that the letter even merited a response. The letter virtually made up of itself, yet left the biting impression that Bowdoin should still be ruled by this "male contingency" who need to judge women on how they dress rather than the intellectual capacity they have.

Let it be known that both sexes, the "males" and the "girls," should be appalled by the older, yet in this case, not wiser opinion of Mr. Fenton.

Sharon Yandian '88

Coeds

To the Editor:

Allow me to make an observation of last week's "Letters." Five of the letters concerned matters of sex. Three of those five were letters of protest against a sexist statement that appeared in the Oct. 9 Orient. One was a letter of apology for that same statement. The fifth was, amazingly enough, a rather sexist one itself. As I understand it, Mr. Fenton believes that the "coeds" of this campus are so serious about their studies that they actively avoid the opposite sex, or that "the male contingency now on board is so appalled by the appearance of what we used to call girls that it keeps out of sight whenever able." Sir, allow me to inform you that both of your ideas are ridiculous.

Of course women at Bowdoin (we are not girls) are serious students. We are also serious athletes, performers, etc... We are here for a well-rounded liberal arts education. We do not actively avoid the other sex; however, we are certainly not here to primp and preen every morning, go to class and play the part of the stupid snooty bunny, and find a male chauvinist husband to support us for the rest of our lives. We are here for ourselves, not for the visual pleasure of our counterparts. I would sincerely hope that the men here are intelligent enough to realize this. If they refuse, as Mr. Fenton does, to look beyond a woman's appearance then they are missing out on fully half of what this college, and society, have to offer them.

Sincerely,
Sheila M. Fargis

Offended

To the Editor,

I was really offended by Kevin Wesley's sweeping generalization about the state of Wellesley College women. His reference to the "Wellesley College of sexually frustrated women" in his article about the Meddies showed very poor taste.

I am a transfer student from Wellesley College, and though I had my reasons for leaving, I still feel very protective of it. Wellesley College is known as one of the finest women's colleges in the country; it is inexcusable to label those women who choose a single sex institution as sexually frustrated.

Personally, I don't care what Kevin Wesley thinks about women at Wellesley, but for those who have never been there, and haven't had an opportunity to meet the many intelligent, articulate women there, such a comment in print makes an unfair generalization.

I question the competency (of) an assistant editor who would allow such an inappropriate comment to be printed in a newspaper.

I think the reporter owes the women an apology for his poor judgment in printing such a comment.

Sincerely,
Nancy Metcalf

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

"The College exercises no control over the content of the student writings contained herein and neither it, nor the Administration, nor the faculty assume any responsibility for the views expressed herein."

Lori Bodwell...Editor in Chief

Kevin Wesley...Assistant Editor
Adam Najberg...News Editor
Rosemarie Dougherty...Assoc. News Editor

Tamara Dassanayake...Asst. News Editor
Eric Foushee...Account Executive
Alan Harris...Photography Editor
Mary Ann Lai...Photography Editor
Lizz Millan...Asst. Entertainment Editor

Dawn Vance...Asst. News Editor

Michael Botelho...Sports Editor
Jack Cahill...Editorials Editor
Susan Lyons...Contributing Editor

Kathryn Nanovic...Production Manager
Justin Frisendorf...Asst. Sports Editor
Stephen Reynolds...Features Editor
Sharon Smart...Entertainment Editor
Michael Townsend...Advertising Manager

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT
Published by

THE BOWDOIN PUBLISHING COMPANY

LORI M. BODWELL ALBERT P. MAURO, JR.

Published weekly when classes are held during the Fall and Spring semesters by the students of Bowdoin College. Address editorial communication to the Editor, subscription communication to the circulation manager, and business correspondence to the business manager at The Bowdoin Orient, 12 Cleveland Street, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011, or telephone (207) 725-3300. The Bowdoin Orient reserves the right to edit any and all articles and letters. Subscriptions are $15.00 per year or $8.00 per semester. Past issues cannot be mailed. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to The Bowdoin Orient, Moulton Union, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011.

Faculty viewpoint

The Crash: What happens now?

Gregory DeCoster
Asst. Professor of Economics

At the close of market activity on Aug. 25, 1987, the Dow Jones Industrial Average (DJIA) stood at an all-time high of 2722.42. Just two months later, on Oct. 27, the market closed with the DJIA at 1846.49, down over 30 percent from its August peak.

In the process of this dramatic decline, the market sustained its worst one day loss in history — 508.32 points on Oct. 19; its worst two week loss ever — 531.77 points in the two week period ending Oct. 23; and obliterated all previous records for trading volume, with volume reaching 610 million shares on Oct. 20.

Not surprisingly, the debate on Wall Street was replayed world-wide. Due to the dependence of corporate earnings abroad on U.S. economic performance, it was inevitable that the Tokyo, London, Hong Kong and most other major stock exchanges would also suffer record losses. In sum, not since 1929 have we witnessed such a rapid evaporation of wealth, with U.S. investors alone losing almost $1 trillion over the past two months.

What of the future? In my view the performance of both the stock market and the economy will be heavily dependent on the actions taken by the monetary authorities in the major western nations. Fortunately in the days following "Black Monday," monetary policy was significantly eased, and if the world-wide easing is not quickly reversed we will in all likelihood avoid the appearance of a serious financial crisis in the near term.

Yet, vast amounts of wealth have vanished, and everyone's confidence in the financial system, and more generally the economy, has been severely shaken. It will come as no surprise if as a consequence consumer and corporate spending decline. This would increase the probability that the U.S. will fall into recession some time in the next 12 months.

Adding to this unpleasant scenario is the fact that stock markets remain unsettled. Of particular concern is the Tokyo exchange which is still quite overvalued and seems somewhat fragile. A collapse of the Tokyo market would be calamitous for the U.S., and is among the small number of events that could possibly initiate a world-wide depression of a magnitude similar to that experienced in the 1930s.

And for those who like to worry, there are any number of other reasons for serious concern. Consumer and corporate debt levels are extremely high, and one must wonder how the debt would be serviced if the economy falls into recession. The Third-World debt problem also remains, and is exacerbated by rising interest rates, as is weakness in the U.S. banking system. Finally the prospect of protectionist trade measures being passed by Congress is still with us despite ample evidence that such measures would wreak havoc with the world economy.

We can however be encouraged by the knowledge that severe economic contractions are always accompanied, and many would argue caused by, extremely tight monetary policy. This fact suggests that it is within the powers of monetary policy-makers to avert the economic crisis that could develop in the aftermath of the stock market crash. What is needed is a continuation of the coordinated easing of monetary policies on the part of the U.S., West German and Japanese central banks, that began immediately after the market crash.

The ideal mix would probably have West Germany and Japan easing more than the U.S., at least for a number of months. The result would be a strengthened dollar and lower interest rates world-wide, both of which would provide a needed boost to the world economy. But it must be stressed that monetary easing has to be coordinated. The U.S. cannot unilaterally adopt an easy money policy because of the need to maintain the flow of foreign funds into the U.S. Thus whether we like it or not, the prospects for the U.S. economy in the wake of the stock market collapse are to a great extent dependent on the actions of foreign policy makers. Over the past two weeks their decisions have been excellent. Let's hope the trend continues.

As a final point, it is important to stress that the role of fiscal policy in the market's decline since August, has been relatively small. While an unexpected increase in the federal budget deficit would have a deleterious effect on financial markets, such a surprise has not occurred. The current magnitude of the budget deficit has been accurately forecasted for a number of years, and thus the effects of the budget deficit have been accurately forecasted for a number of years, and thus the effects of the budget deficit have been discounted by financial markets for an equally long period of time. The implication is that frantic attempts to reduce the current year's budget deficit, are inappropriate and possibly even dangerous, since deficit reduction will have a contractionary effect on the economy. While adoption of a long-term deficit reduction strategy would be welcomed by financial markets, in the absence of appropriate monetary policies, action on the deficit can have little positive effect on the performance of the stock market or the economy over the next year.

IFC president shares his views on fraternities

He is a senior who claims he holds his current position because "nobody else wanted the job."

Scott Milo '88 is currently serving his second term as Bowdoin College's Interfraternity Council (IFC) President. Milo has become a well-known figure on campus during the past year. He has been an important part of the Bowdoin fraternity system since he "dropped" at Zeta Psi (Zete) at the beginning of his sophomore year.

In the past he has served as Zete House President, IFC President and was recently selected as one of two students to serve on the "blue ribbon" fraternity review committee called for by President of the College A. LeRoy Greason. Milo spoke to The Orient and offered his views on various aspects of the fraternity system at Bowdoin.

Why he dropped at a fraternity:
"I was an independent for a year. I dropped my sophomore year, first semester. I wanted a place to come back to when I graduate. A frat gave me a chance to expand on my college life, to fill a gap. To a large extent, I've had opportunities I might not have had otherwise."

The strength of fraternities at Bowdoin:

"When you join a frat, there's so much more than just being a member. You have to care... Initiation doesn't have to be like it was 20 years ago... I believe it should teach responsibility and caring... Because some houses are so open in joining, you walk in and you're a member (no initiation), this leads to a lack of responsibility... there are no real ties to the house."

The IFC's position on campus:

"We think we can improve Bowdoin's image. We realize there were problems with Rush. We realize, and we're doing something on our own to address these problems. We're tired of being judged on the past... We'd like to be judged on what we're doing now. We're tired of paying the price for things that were done ten years ago."

"We're only here for four years... President Greason has a larger picture. It's tough for him to separate what happened 20 years ago from what's happening today... We are trying to set precedents. We had to learn from our own mistakes, so now, we're trying to let the people who follow us learn from our mistakes. We're the guinea pigs."

"The IFC is judged by its weakest members. When a frat doesn't attend (meetings) and is a problem, that creates more problems... Indebtedness is also an issue. Delta Sig now owes around $80,000. It's my opinion, from what I've heard, that the college may have to assume the debt."

The Review Committee:

"It strikes me as a strange time for a review committee. I'm not opposed to it, but I'm just confused with the timing. We're (the fraternities) are trying to do things on our own... This is a time when undergraduates are taking a lot of responsibility. We're doing what the administration is saying and even going beyond that."

"We (the review committee) will be examining the physical upkeep of the houses... We'll also look to see how do women function in fraternities. Are they really members, or are they glorified little sisters? This is a major concern to the college... Are they equals? It seems as though there is some correlation between women in frats and at Bowdoin."

"Whether fraternities are anti-intellectual or not is a vague issue. How do you prove that? Is there widespread cheating? I don't think frats as a whole lead to or foster cheating. A person is going to cheat whether he belongs to a frat or not... We won't be setting GPA's (Grade Point Averages), but we may see how many Phi Beta Kappas or how many JBS's (James Bowdoin Scholars) there are. We'll look to see if fraternities are sponsoring intellectual aspects or faculty dinners."

Problems that still exist in fraternities:

"Some houses are not up to physical qualifications. There are physical problems. The orientation procedure needs some work, and Rush still has to be addressed. The treatment of women is important... People say there is a problem. If there is something wrong, women in frats have to speak up. I guess guys can't do it."

Faculty involvement in college and fraternity sponsored activities:

"Some faculty members won't even come through our doors. One won't come in here, because, in 1973, Zete kicked out women for a year. How many faculty members are at Chapel Talk. Why don't they get involved? Faculty were invited to Senior Week-end last year. Only a handful showed up, and most were athletic coaches. It seems as though the same professors are involved... We've got to break down the wall between faculty, administration and students."

His selection as a member of the Review Committee and possible conflicts of interest:

"People feel I'm gonna cover up, that I'm not representing student concerns, but only frat concerns... That's something I'm gonna have to live with... The reason I want frats to progress and move on at Bowdoin, is because they are good for the college. We're going to do what we have to do to get some help."

Liz Millan and Dawn Vance

Sexism alive at Bowdoin?

Two weeks ago there appeared in the Orient an article that caused great uproar not only on the Bowdoin campus but also on the Wellesley College Campus. It is not important that the contents of the article be rehearsed but rather that its consequences be illuminated: the Middlebempsers, Bowdoin's male capella group was unable to perform as scheduled at Wellesley, the author and his family found themselves faced with harassment, the Orient received a rash of letters addressed to the editor including those entitled "Sexism", "Oppression", and "Offensive" and the student Executive Board spent the majority of its weekly Tuesday night meeting discussing this "Orient dilemma."

In retrospect, it has been decided to accept the contents of this article as a mistake. The author has apologized and his apology has indeed been deemed sincere; therefore it has been decided that this mistake be forgotten, that it be swept under the rug."

Unfortunately, however, this article offended many people, and rightly so. More importantly, it reflected badly not only on its author, but on the Orient and the Bowdoin community at large.

The point here, however, extends far beyond the publication of one single derogatory phrase. What matters is not necessarily the phrase itself but its underlying implications. The phrase reflects an almost blatant attitude of sexism inherent not only on the Bowdoin campus but in the world at large.

This was one point which two onlookers at the student Executive Board meeting on Tuesday night painfully drove home. The phrase itself was not important. Its implications, however, are and should perhaps be examined.

It is interesting to note that a letter to the editor entitled "Coeds" appeared in the Oct. 23, 1987 issue of the Orient directly beside the letters entitled "Sexism", "Oppression", and "Offensive." This letter criticized the manner in which the women of Bowdoin choose to dress. Its author claimed: "It is my humble opinion that the coeds I see are serious students who dress as unattractively as possible in order to avoid the attentions and distractions of the opposite gender. Au contraire, I suspect that the male contingency on board is so appalled by what we used to call girls that it keeps out of sight whenever possible. It is also within reason that the coeds are so impoverished that they have been forced to borrow clothing from their older and larger brothers."

The sexism inherent in this letter is perhaps not so blatant as what appeared in the article that caused such an uproar. However, in our opinion it is as equally offensive to the female race if not more so due to its attempts at subtlety. The reference to the women of this campus as coeds implies that they hold an inferior status to the men. We are not simply "coeds" but students of equal status with the men.

Admittedly, we may not always dress to impress — to attract the attentions and distractions of the opposite sex. But then again, neither do our male counterparts. Maybe it is the female contingency on board that ought to be so appalled by what we used to refer to as "gentlemen" that we don't just keep out of sight whenever possible; rather we purposely dress as slob in retaliation.

And perhaps the higher cost of higher education has so impoverished us that we need borrow clothes from our older and larger brothers. Yet that groves indicative of their tastes in clothing, too.

Our point is this: it is unfortunate that sexism must incarnate itself in an issue so petty as that of dress. We all dress as we see fit or we feel comfortable — after all, we are here to study and not to worry about what the opposite sex has to express about our attire. The mere fact that our "girlhood" should be correlated to our mode of dress demonstrates as the authors of "Oppression" state in regards to the offensive Orient article "sexism is above ground and socially acceptable at Bowdoin College."

Spiderman

(continued from page one)
decision on disciplinary action.

"On a college campus, the difference between a crime and a prank is one of those grey areas... In a technical sense, this was indeed a form of trespass," Pander said.

The Spiderman explained his reasons for hanging the TD and other flags on the chapel.

"My freshman year, my roommate made a point to me that a plaque in the Peary-MacMillan Arctic Museum said MacMillan was the last one to retrieve a flag from the top of the steeples (in 1898). It was a challenge. It's sort of neat. I get a kick out of listening to people trying to figure out how it got up there. They're usually way off base," said the Spiderman.

The Spiderman claimed responsibility for hanging fraternity flags between the spires over the last three years. He said he had "complications" the first year he hung a flag on the chapel. These complications forced him to hang the flag at a slightly lower level.

The wall-scaler said he hung the flag unnoticed this year, in contrast to two years ago, when Security officers shone a spotlight at the chapel, almost catching him in the act. This year's flag-hanging took approximately two hours to complete, whereas he perched 120 feet over the campus for five hours three years ago.

He would not reveal how he hung the flag, but said he gained access to the roof of the chapel by climbing cables at the back of the building. He also said he was in "plain view" had anyone been looking up.

Divestment

(continued from page one)

ture policy was creating a South African-free portfolio of bonds.

The college's funds are managed by four companies, who, according to Woodall, buy and sell stock on behalf of the college. The firms, in turn, deal with stockbrokers. The four firms are Grantham, Mayao, and Otterloo; Beck,

The campus Spiderman said Security presented him with an added challenge for this year's escapade.

"I noticed in an article, earlier in the year, that Pander is big in deductive reasoning. It was a challenge to get around Security. I think it's kind of neat," he said.

The Bowdoin College Spiderman is shrouded in mystery and intrigue. Just how he hung the flag between the chapel spires is knowledge shared by only him and a Bowdoin graduate named MacMillan. Who is he and why does he risk his life every year? That knowledge may go with him to his grave.

Mack, and Oliver; The Common Fund; and Frontier.

Woodall said "there have been no practical disadvantages" due to divestment as of yet. He added he was also not expecting any serious implications in the future but that the instability and complexity of financial markets made predictions difficult.

Stocks

(continued from page one)

effects of capital depletion so that there are no major changes in spending from year to year. However, Woodall admitted that the college might have to "slow down growth in expenses" and be more "selective in choosing programs" if losses are sustained over a substantial period of time.

Woodall added that the recent divestment process has had no apparent consequences on the portfolio.

November off campus

(continued from page 4)

NOVEMBER 10

8:00 pm — The Cars, with Icehouse, in concert. Cumberland County Civic Center. Tickets at all Ticketron locations.

NOVEMBER 13 and 14

Brunswick Choral Society presents Gilbert & Sullivan's Thespis. Call 933-2952.

NOVEMBER 14

6:30 and 9:30 pm — LadySmith Black Mambazo in concert. (Featured on Paul Simon's Graceland). First Parish Church, 425 Congress St., Portland. Tickets at Ticketron locations, or call 1-800-3828080.

NOVEMBER 19

7:30 pm — Bath-Brunswick Folk Club presents: English singer-songwriter Pete Coe (from melodian to banjo...). Little Theater, Chocolate Church, 804 Washington St., Bath. $6 advance, $7 at the door. Tickets available at Macbeans Music, or call 729-3185.

8:00 pm — Dance performance. "Not Withstanding Alone". Gretchen Berg and Paul Sarvis. Baxter Gallery, Portland School of Art. Call 773-2562. Also on November 20 and 21, and 22 at 2 p.m.

Bain & Company, Inc.

Management Consultants
cordially invites

The Bowdoin College Classes of 1988 & 1989

to a presentation and reception on

Associate & Consultant Career Opportunities and Internships in Corporate Strategy Consulting

Boston

San Francisco

London

Paris

Munich

Tokyo

Monday, November 9, 1987

7:30 p.m.

Main Lounge, Moulton Union

THE BOWDOIN COLLEGE ORIENT

FIRST CLASS MAIL
U.S. Postage PAID
BRUNSWICK, ME
Permit No. 25

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

VOLUME CXVII

BOWDOIN COLLEGE, BRUNSWICK, MAINE, FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 1987

NUMBER 8

Banned photos come to campus

ROBERT WUILLAMEY

ORIENT Staff

The brutal realities of the anti-apartheid movement in South Africa are graphically communicated in a photo exhibition now at Bowdoin. The pictures have been on display since Nov. 2 and can be seen in the Kregg Gallery of the Visual Arts Center.

The exhibition's opening fell on the anniversary of the 1985 ban on broadcasting and photo coverage of the uprisings in the 38 state-of-emergency areas and was designed to show the determination of those artists supporting the anti-apartheid movement.

Even today it is illegal for photographers and reporters to witness any anti-apartheid events. By law, they are required to turn their backs.

All the photographs in the exhibition, titled "Taking Sides in South Africa," were taken by members of the multi-racial photograph cooperative known as Afripix. The cooperative serves as a library of photographs dealing with the anti-apartheid movement. It distributes these photographs to newspapers and organizations dedicated to the cause of promoting freedom and equality in South Africa.

Many negatives and prints of the photographs on exhibit were seized and destroyed by the South African government in raids on the headquarters of the South African Council of Churches (SACC). SACC is an outspoken opponent of Apartheid and serves as an umbrella for many other groups fighting for equality in South Africa.

At the request of Grassroots International and Oxfam-Canada, Afripix put together the exhibition and smuggled the photographs out of South Africa and into Canada. There, the negatives were made into two sets of prints. Bowdoin College is presently exhibiting the only set of prints in the United States.

The Afripix photo exhibit "Taking Sides in South Africa" Will be on display at the Bowdoin College Visual Arts Center through Nov. 29.

In conjunction with the exhibition, Dan Connell, executive director of Grassroots International, will talk on the present crisis in South Africa. Grassroots International is curating the exhibition in the United States. Connell co-founded Grassroots International with Bowdoin alumnus Chris Carter '77 as an organization which works directly with community groups who show capacity of bringing about social change in crisis areas.

Connell said in a phone interview that the exhibition and its message was entirely the work of the members of Afripix. He believes the emphasis of the exhibition aims not at the violence leveled against the anti-apartheid movement, though several of the photographs depict it graphically, but rather at the multi-racial solidarity of the Anti-apartheid supporters. Connell said apartheid is no longer a black/white issue.

The exhibition is meant to depict the anti-apartheid fighters as members of a larger international community. (Continued on page 11)

Majors allowed "P's" for degrees

ADAM NAJBERG

ORIENT News Editor

Could a student passing all his courses be unable to return to the college to complete a major at the beginning of his junior year?

Until last May this scenario was possible. Students who chose to major in English or Economics and received near-failing or failing grades in courses were not accepted as majors in these departments.

Two weeks ago juniors and seniors received a letter from the office of the Dean of the College stating that minimum grade requirements for completion of a major had been dropped. Acting Dean of the College Paul L. Nyhus said the college's Committee on Educational Policy (CEP) had discussed minimum grade requirements last May.

The issue was brought to the "faculty floor" last May by Professor of History William B. Whiteside, on behalf of the Department of History. Nyhus said the faculty voted to drop the grade requirement in its October meeting.

Two issues were discussed before the vote took place, said Nyhus. First, he said, the faculty discussed whether a minimum grade requirement should be decided on "by the faculty as a whole, or by separate departments." The second issue raised was whether a passing grade, which entitled a student to college credit, was good enough for a major.

Nyhus said standards set by departments could have caused an "interesting problem" had the policy not been changed.

"You could have the interesting problem of a theoretical straight 'P' student ... who is in accord with the college rules and may continue to study at Bowdoin... (a student who is) theoretically passing courses, but who would be unable to continue at the beginning of a junior year, because he couldn't get into any major. This could happen if we said we required 'H's' (honors grades) across the board," said Nyhus.

Under the new policy, students cannot be prohibited from majoring in a certain department. Nyhus said the letter sent out to students was designed to notify juniors or seniors who had been excluded from majoring in a certain department that the department was now open to them for a degree.

Dean of Students Kenneth A. Lewallen said he "completely supports the faculty move."

"Some departments were separately establishing academic qualifications to major there. What the faculty was generally saying (as a result of the vote) is 'you can't do that,' said Lewallen.

Now, instead of excluding a student from a major, faculty members can only advise students who are marginally passing an introductory or middle level course not to major in that particular department, said Lewallen.

Chairman of the Department of Economics David J. Vail said he, too, supports the faculty decision to drop the minimum grade requirement for a major, because of the choice it affords students. He feels the faculty advising (Continued on page 11)

Committee fine tunes academic evaluation process

RICHARD LINDAHL, JR.

ORIENT Staff

The Admissions Committee voted Wednesday Oct. 27 to adopt a plan which limits the number of candidates for admission to Bowdoin College who may receive excellent ratings as athletes from the Athletics Department. The plan will reduce the influence of athletic considerations in the admissions process.

The new limitation allows the Athletics Department to give a rating of 1 or 1+ to no more than two hundred candidates for admission to the college. The ratings given to athletes by members of the Athletics Department range from 3, the lowest, to 1, the highest. Last year more than six hundred athletes were given a rating of 1- or better. The total number of students evaluated athletically last year was less than nine hundred.

The committee also decided that academic evaluations should be made on a scale of one to ten instead of one to five in order to "fine-tune" the academic evaluation process.

The 5-4 decision by the committee might temporarily satiate the demands of concerned faculty members to provide a more varied student body at Bowdoin. At the end of the current admissions process, the committee will review the new policy and adjust the limit as it sees fit.

Committee members who voted in favor of the policy were English Assistant Professor Celeste Goodridge, Art Professor Clifton Olds, Dean of the College Paul Nyhus, History Professor Daniel Levine, and Jacob Rahiman '88.

The opposition to the plan came from two camps who thought they would never be voting the same way. Anne St. Peter '89, and Coach John Cullen voted against the proposal because they wanted the A.D. to be able to evaluate a greater number of athletes as excellent. Stephen Curley '88, and Associate Professor of Mathematics Steve Fisk voted against the proposal because they prefer a "zero option" in which athletics bears absolutely no influence upon admissions to the college.

"Two hundred is too restrictive a number at this point," said St. Peter.

The faculty of the college has made a stand befitting the noble tradition of Bowdoin in demanding that athletics no longer be over-emphasized in the admissions process. They quickly accepted the Admissions Committee's report in September that demonstrated that athletes with excellent ratings had indeed been preferred to students with superior academic credentials in the Admissions process.

Robert Greenlee, Assistant Professor of Music, feels the balance of the student body has too long been tipped in favor of the athlete.

While he feels there is a place for all form of thought at Bowdoin, including that which glorifies athletics, he maintains that the prevalence of the athletic mind-set at Bowdoin serves its students little well.

Greenlee noted the deleterious effects of an athletic philosophy - the promotion of a world very masculine in nature; the highly competitive nature which athletes have; adhesion to the familiar. Greenlee feels that the goal of a liberal arts education can not be met if there is great homogeneity in the learning community.

Greenlee was quick to point out that not all athletically talented students become a part of the athletic mind-set. Some are able to enrich campus life by adding to its diversity.

The newly completed Farley Field House offers facilities to Bowdoin students that many larger colleges can only dream about. Because the funds were set aside specifically for construction of the house by generous donors, Greenlee and others who feel like he does can scarcely point to the new complex as evidence of a conscious effort by the administration to attract athletes. However, the existence of the facility does act as an attracting force to athletic applicants.

Greenlee said the most important role of the new field house will not be to help the Athletics Department produce winning teams.

Greenlee cited the example of "the student who just swims twice a week for half an hour to get some exercise," as being indicative of the true role of athletics in a liberal arts setting.

(Continued on page two)

"What's always going to be the most important is the academics."

--President A. LeRoy Grason

Who is your favorite cartoon character and why?

BECKY AUSTIN
ORIENT Staff

John Curran '90

"Astro the Dog because I like the way he talks and I like the way he goes around on the conveyor belt when George is chasing him."

Maria Afentakis '88

"Garfield, because he likes to eat."

Forest Ceballos '89

"Opus, just because he's Opus."

Anne Burnham '90

"Fred Flintstone, because he's the hottest man in Prehistoria."

Tim Hughes '88

"Calvin, because he has a vivid imagination like I had in grammar school."

Pecking order leaves freshmen with dishpan hands

By LANCE HICKEY
ORIENT Staff

Need some spending money? Get a job.

The system does not always work that way anymore at Bowdoin. Many students don't get the jobs they are looking for. Some will not find the pay scale high enough to line their pockets. Others, unless they want to bus dinner trays will not get a job at all.

Between 900 and 1,000 Bowdoin students will draw payroll checks from the college this year, amounting to over $500,000. In most cases, students obtain these jobs on their own, by applying directly to individual faculty or staff. According to the Student Aid Office, the average student works 6 to 10 hours per week and earns $3.65 to $5 an hour.

Many freshmen who apply for jobs are often frustrated because upperclassmen are given first preference. The pecking order job-hunting underclassmen encounter is not unusual to a college campus.

Ralph D'Agostino '88, holds three campus jobs. He sympathizes with the stone wall the freshmen face when looking for a job in a particular department.

"Most freshmen are not specialized in a department, and so upperclassmen are chosen for those positions. For the most part freshmen are restricted to bussing and dining jobs in Coles Tower. When they choose their major later on, they will find that many openings will be available in the department of their major," said D'Agostino.

The Student Aid Office often serves as a referral agency for students who cannot find campus jobs, but it is the individual departments and programs on campus that do the actual hiring. First preference is usually given to upperclassmen and financial aid recipients. Freshmen aid recipients have no campus earnings expectation built into their award package, hence they are low on the pecking order.

Dining Service reports there are several bussing jobs still available, but at a rate $4 per hour, there have been few takers. Bussing jobs are, arguably, one of the toughest jobs on campus.

"I wouldn't mind working during the week, but it seems the only job I can find is at Coles Tower and who wants to work there?" commented Mark Vokes '91.

The low pay scale has angered workers, and campus Dining Service has a shortage of tray busses this semester. This year's manpower shortage has caused Dining Service to issue a memorandum asking students to cut down on waste and to organize trays before giving them to busses.

Marnita Thompson '90, who has three campus jobs including a bussing job at Coles Tower said she is affected by this year's manpower shortage. She is not happy with her present situation and would like to see it change.

"This year, one person does the bussing of three people, and the pitiful wages create low work incentive. In order to remedy the situation, the management should raise the wages or add more people to the bussing staff. They can't add more people though, because no one wants to work there," said Thompson.

Ken Beaulieu of Dining Service said the department cannot raise wages for the bussing staff without offering comparable pay to every worker. Beaulieu said Dining Service can only post signs, and "wait and hope" for more interest in bussing jobs.

The earlier in the year a student applies for a preferred job, the easier it is to get it. Students looking for jobs now may find the only ones available are those Dining Service has to offer. So, unless you see dishwashing is in your future, you may be out of a job before you even get one.

Betsy Banks '90 (background) busses trays during a busy lunch hour. Photo Nina Roth

(Continued from page one)

The recent rumors circulating about campus that five intercollegiate sports teams will be discontinued are symptomatic of the fears and uncertainties that many athletes currently attending Bowdoin have. These rumors have no ground, according to Sid Watson, the Director of Athletics.

"I've heard those rumors too," said Watson, "but nothing's come across my desk about it. Nobody in the administration has approached me about such a thing. If someone did, it would really hurt."

Watson says that the college has traditionally funded everything the Athletics Department has undertaken. Greenlee feels that the elimination of sports would not necessarily be the best alternative.

"We do have finite financial resources, and an unproportional amount is spent on athletics. But reductions in athletic spending should not have to reduce the ability of students to participate in athletics," said Greenlee.

He would rather look for areas such as more efficiency in the use of facilities and the staff of the Athletics Department to reduce costs.

President of the College A. Leroy Greason declined to make a statement of approval or disapproval about the Admission Committee's report.

"It isn't in the best interest of the process for me to make a public statement of opinion at this time. If I make a statement from which I can't publicly change, the process becomes adversarial," said Greason.

Greason wants to talk with the members of the committee and other involved persons without the onus of confrontation.

Greason does, however, feel athletics is worth considering in looking at applicants for admission.

"Outside of academics, activities such as athletics, music, art, are all indicative of the sort of person the applicant is. The baseball captain, the yearbook editor, the band leader...they are people who have taken on responsibility," Greason said.

"What's always going to be the most important is the academics," he emphasized.

Greason did not wish to state whether he thought athletics had been unproportionally considered in past admissions processes.

KRISTINA'S
BAKERY RESTAURANT

*Everyone's favorite for Breakfast,
Lunch & Dinner*

*Deliciously different menus
Delectable pastries
Friendly atmosphere
Outdoor dining in Summer
Fine wines, beers, specialty coffees
Cocktails*

Open 7 days a week
at the corner of
Center & High St.
Bath, Maine 04530
(207) 442-8577

Notice to all Brunswick Residents

ALL-NIGHT PARKING PROHIBITED

The Brunswick Police Department will be enforcing the all-night parking restriction commencing November 1, 1987. The Town's Traffic Ordinance states, "A person shall not park a vehicle on any public way for longer than two hours between 12:00 midnight and 7:00 a.m. from November 1st to April 15th." Violators are subject to a $5.00 fine per violation.

In the event snow removal is necessary vehicles will be towed immediately at owner's expense.

Constitution shows flexibility

TANYA WEINSTEIN
ORIENT Staff

The fourth lecture in the continuing series on the bicentennial celebration of the Constitution was given by Peter J. Stanlis, Professor of English and Humanities at Rockland College. Stanlis spoke on "The U.S. Constitution: its Origin, Nature, Function and Destiny."

Stanlis has taught at many various universities throughout the United States and Europe. He is the author of several books, including topics on Edmund Burke and Robert Frost. In 1982 he was appointed to the National Council of Humanities by President Reagan.

Stanlis began the lecture with the origins of the Constitution. It was originally written in 1787, and formed out of a need for more coherence and unity between states. Stanlis said that the English Constitution was used as a working model for the founding fathers. He also stated that they used the words and ideas of classical writers and philosophers to help "shape the legal origin of the U.S. Constitution."

Some of the basic laws of the Constitution Stanlis mentioned state that the government branches should be limited in power through a system of checks and balances. Absolute power was denied to any man or any branch of government. A representational government was implemented.

Stanlis pointed out several positive aspects of the constitution. One is the protection of individual and corporate rights. Another is what Stanlis referred to as the electoral college, which "retains the identity of each state" and does not merge them into national uniformity.

According to Stanlis, one of the most important positive characteristics of the Constitution is the provision for making amendments. This allows for great flexibility. The "framers of the Constitution" were aware that they were capable of making mistakes, and allowed for changes in the future. Stanlis stated, "It is unreasonable to expect absolute perfection," and one must allow for human error.

He also listed several weaknesses of the document. Stanlis said that it left several problems unresolved, such as the question of sovereignty between states and the nation, and the problem of black slavery. It also omitted women's involvement in political society.

Despite these weaknesses, Stanlis claimed that the Constitution has worked well for the past 200 years. He said, "It has been through a civil war, foreign wars, internal debate, economic depressions, corruption" and has indeed been battered, but has survived. He said it has carried out its intended functions: defending the democratic government it established, providing maximum individual freedom and equality under the law, and the creation of a national identity of interests.

Stanlis also talked about the direction the Constitution is taking today, and its destiny. He noticed that "the powers of the federal government have grown...people look to the government more often to solve problems" than to their local governments. Freedom is being sacrificed for the promise of economic security.

He foresaw a decision being made by the people over whether there should be strict or loose constructionism of the Constitution, and the interpretations of it by Supreme Court Justices. He personally advocated a strict constructionism.

Stanlis also spoke of the failure of the American people to truly appreciate and understand the Constitution in order to preserve it. He said that it is not an abstract, ideological text and one must view it in a context of historical concerns: "It is impossible to understand it without knowing what went into it."

Norwich cadets hike for crime

By KEVIN WESLEY
ORIENT Asst. Editor

Two students who caused almost $1,000 in damage to Coles Tower in Sept. have been reprimanded by Norwich University.

The students, Private Joseph M. Spinalone and Private John T. Worth, both juniors, were given 15 days of closed military confinement, 20 direct tours and 30 permanent demerits for causing damage to two doors on the eighth floor of the Tower on Saturday, Sept. 18. In addition, they have agreed to pay full financial restitution for the damages.

Disciplinary action was taken because of violations of the Norwich University Honor Code. Both students committed a Class 1 offense: Bringing discredit to the University.

Worth and Spinalone were notified by Assistant Commandant Major Gordon Dewey that disciplinary action would be taken as a result of their actions. The 15 days of closed military confinement meant that neither could leave their rooms except for meals, classes and one hour of physical activity each day.

In addition each had to march along a section of campus for 50 minutes for each direct tour accrued against them. The 30 demerits are part of their semester record, and if the total demerits exceeds 75, further punishment will be taken.

Worth and Spinalone sent Bowdoin Director of Security Michael Pander and Dean of Students Kenneth Lewallen an apology letter for actions which Lewallen labeled, "obnoxious and destructive."

 A Likely Yarn Knit a classic! Christmas and cold winter days are both coming!

90 UNION STREET
BRUNSWICK, ME 04011
(207) 725-2147

H A I R

STUDIO
Hair Sculpture

3 Bowker St.
Brunswick, Me.
725-2694

only $7 with Bowdoin ID

Within walking distance of campus.

GRADUATE SCHOOL

To understand the art of management, learn from the masters:
Bentley's Master of Business Administration.

Bentley College's Master of Business Administration is designed to help men and women who aspire to general management positions further develop these capabilities. The MBA program approaches management as an art—the art of acting in the here and now to develop coherent, pragmatic strategies for responding to market challenges and opportunities; to lead others in adapting to and developing new technologies; and to induce others to give their best efforts in a cooperative pursuit of organizational goals.

Paint a brighter future for your career with a Bentley MBA. For further information, call (617) 891-2108.

 Bentley College
Graduate School Admissions
Waltham, MA 02254

BIG RED Q PRINTING
next to the College

- stationery
- resumes
- posters
- newsletters

212E Maine Street
Brunswick
729-4840

Now... at Macbeans Music

COMPACT DISCS

...well over 1,200 of the 12,000-plus now available

If you don't see what you want, let us get it for you

(That goes for LPs, Tapes and Videos, too.)

Muncie's most enterprising Record Shop

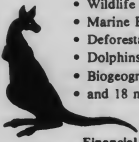

The Tontine, 149 Maine St.
Brunswick, Maine 04011 • (207) 729-6513

TAKE THE ULTIMATE FIELD COURSE

Join us and study:

- Wildlife Management in Kenya,
- Marine Biology in the Virgin Islands,
- Deforestation in Costa Rica,
- Dolphins in Hawaii
- Biogeography in Australia
- and 18 more environmental issues worldwide.

Financial aid and academic credit available

For more information on January, Summer & Semester environmental field research courses, come to:

M.U. CONFERENCE ROOM
7 P.M. Wednesday, Nov. 11

or write: SFS, Box A, 376 Hale St., Beverly, MA 01915, (617) 927-7777

THE SCHOOL FOR FIELD STUDIES
THE WORLD IS YOUR CLASSROOM

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Wednesday films offer study break

LIZZ MILLAN

ORIENT Asst. Entertainment Editor
Wednesday, the middle of the week, is a time when, according to a survey conducted last spring, most students want a break. The Bowdoin Film and Video Society offers an interesting and entertaining break. Every Wednesday at 3 and 8 p.m. a feature film is shown in Kresge Auditorium.

"These films focus on film-making - all have interesting and different topics and themes and different manners of showing them," Cecilia Hirsch, BFVS president said.

"The films celebrate the film medium and must be shown in 16mm reel form to enhance their effects," she added. "These films are still entertaining."

The films have been well attended. While entertaining, they also educate. Many of the films are not American made and thus would not otherwise be available for viewing. The films of such talented directors as Bergman and Fellini give the viewer exposure to the various techniques and effects of these foreign film-makers. The subtitles should not discourage viewers, in fact, much of the richness of these films lies in the presence of a foreign voice, which adds to the atmosphere of the film.

Not all of the feature films are foreign. Many unusual American films will also be shown.

"All of the latest award-winning films made by film school students at U.C.L.A. will be shown this semester," Hirsch said.

In addition, there will be films focusing on recent controversial issues. One such film is a documentary of a television evangelist.

Why these films?

"The BFVS is trying to fulfill all functions of a film society - to bring to the college community entertainment and also insight into the art of film-making," Hirsch said.

In addition to the new Wednesday film series, the BFVS continues to provide Friday and Saturday night movies and videos. Because there is not a video system in Kresge, these films are shown in Smith Auditorium, Sills Hall.

Not only does the BFVS offer a bargain, it offers top quality movies as well. The films are chosen on the basis of some unique quality they possess.

"We don't want to show movies that someone can go rent from a video store," Hirsch said. Each of the 20 members of the society has input into the films and movies selected. Also, students wishing to view a particular movie are invited to offer suggestions.

"We bring one of the major sources of entertainment to campus - we want to supply the students with movies that they want to see," Hirsch said.

Showing tonight is Allen Parker's "Pink Floyd The Wall." "A real rock opera which follows the journey of the singer from his lonely fearless childhood to a world of pure excess. Too many shows, too much dope and too much applause lead, finally, to madness. His only way out is to break down 'The Wall'."

Saturday night's movie is another heavy feature. Based on Anthony Burgess' novel, "A Clockwork Orange" spins the tale of a sick man and his sick acts. Not all of the features are heavy.

Sunkissed bronzes Bowdoin bodies

Dawn Vance

ORIENT Asst. News Editor
Senior Scott Erlenborn '88 has devoted much time and effort to an ambitious endeavor this semester: the creation of Sunkissed Tanning Center.

The tanning center opened officially for use on Tuesday, Nov. 3, 1987, and is located at 238 Maine St. — in the basement of Alpha Rho Upsilon (ARU) fraternity.

Erlenborn has spent the majority of this semester repainting and remodeling the basement room he has rented from ARU. Renovations of the room include not only fresh coats of paint, but the addition of new carpeting and the construction of a wall and door separating Erlenborn's office from the tanning bed itself. This remodeling lends a clean, professional atmosphere to the tanning center.

Erlenborn took some time out of his busy schedule of preparations for the official opening to discuss his tanning center with the Orient.

Orient: First of all, where did you get the tanning bed and what made you think of opening up your own tanning center here at Bowdoin?

Erlenborn: I bought the tanning bed from a health club - the Princeton Club - in Madison, Wis. I spent my summer painting houses and had some money left over, so I took a chance and bought the bed... the idea popped into my head that this would be a great campus job - all you can do is sit here and study... and I thought it would be fun, that it would make school up here seem different.

Orient: How do you think this whole idea of a tanning center will go over?

Erlenborn: I think if people come down here and take a look at it they'll do it... it's a nice setup... I put a lot of time into this... it's safe and completely confidential.

(Erlenborn did, however, express some concern over the money, time and energy that he has poured into his investment.)

Erlenborn: I don't know if it's going to pay off. I hope it does, but that is a question in my mind right now.

Orient: What has the attraction been to day about your endeavor?

Erlenborn: Well, at first I wanted to put the tanning bed over in my apartment on Pine Street, but Dean (Kenneth) Lewallen wouldn't let me do that. However, Dean Lewallen thought it was a great idea and he said that he hoped it goes well — in fact, he suggested I put it in a fraternity after he said no on Pine Street.

Orient: So, is this thing really safe? Don't you need a license to operate it?

Erlenborn: All I needed to operate the bed was a small businessman's license... this bed has been tested and is federally approved as being safe - you just can't abuse it. It's not unhealthy if you don't abuse it. It's important to start out slowly, with only fifteen minutes a day, and gradually progress. After the first fifteen minute session you have to take two days off, and then you can start tanning every other day, building up from fifteen to thirty minutes, until you get the tan you want. Then you only have to come twice a week to maintain it.

Orient: Have any potential customers expressed an interest in your tanning center?

Erlenborn: Some people have showed an interest... I've been running all over campus tacking up flyers - in the aerobics room, the weight room, locker rooms, Coles Tower, the dorms — and I've even tacked up some flyers downtown trying to generate some Brunswick interest. I've had some calls from people showing an interest in the flyers, and the sign in the driveway (Sunkissed Tanning Center) has also generated some calls.

Erlenborn will man the tanning bed, himself. The Sunkissed Tanning Center is now open for business during business hours Monday-Friday.

Peggy's Typing Service
443-1267
Fast, Accurate, Reliable!
Affordable Rates!

THE BRUNSWICK

729-8895
216A Maine St.
Mon.-Sat. 9:30-6

We Deliver
Wire Service

Centrally located across from Bowdoin College

Calendar

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 6

3:00 p.m. "Slow Fires", a video narrated by Robert MacNeil, featured in the Video Viewing Room, Sills Hall.

3:30 p.m. Division of Dance, Department of Theater Arts, sponsors a jazz dance class with guest teacher Glen Terry.

7:00 p.m. Film/Lecture, "To Spot A Zebra." Quentin Keynes, photo-journalist, Kresge Auditorium, Visual Arts Center.

7:30 and 10:00 p.m. "Pink Floyd The Wall." Sponsors: Bowdoin Film/Video Society, Smith Auditorium, Sills Hall. Admission: one dollar.

8:30 p.m. Performance. Second City Touring Company. Pickard Theater, Memorial Hall. Admission: $2 with Bowdoin I.D.; $5, public.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 7

7:30 and 10:00 p.m. "A Clockwork Orange." sponsor: Bowdoin Film/Video Society, Smith Auditorium, Sills Hall. Admission: one dollar.

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 8

3 p.m. Gallery Talk. "Lot and His Daughters by an Unknown Flemish Master." Clifton C. Olds, and Edith Cleaves Barry Walker Art Building.

3 p.m. Foreign Film Series: Cristo si fermato a Eboli (1985).

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 9

12:30 p.m. Music at Noon (and 1/2). Performance by The Portland Brass Quintet includes works by Bach, Brahms, Rossini, and Gershwin. sponsor: Dept. of Music, room 101, Gibson Hall.

7:00-8:30 p.m. Video. "Triumph of the Will" (1936), directed by Leni Riefenstahl. Nazi Nuremberg Party Rally of 1934. Sponsor: Dept. of History. Smith Auditorium, Sills Hall.

7:30 p.m. Video/Lecture. Dan Connell, executive director of Grassroots International, "Still on Strike"

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 10

7:30 p.m. Lecture. "Reading and Writing in China." Helen Chasin, Beam Classroom, Visual Arts Center.

7:30 p.m. Shakespeare Film Series. Richard II starring Derek Jacobi and Charles Gray. Smith Auditorium, Sills Hall.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 11

10:10 a.m. Chapel Talk. "Ethics in Solidarity." Andrzej Bryk, visiting lecturer in government. Sponsor: Interfraternity Council. Chapel.

Sarah Lawrence College Academic Year in Paris

a semester or year of academic study for juniors and seniors. Students study in small seminars and tutorials with French faculty, and in such Parisian institutions as the Sorbonne, the Ecole du Louvre, and the Institut d'Etudes Politiques.

For information and an application, contact:
Sarah Lawrence College Academic Year in Paris
Box 80P
Bronxville, New York 10708

Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs Princeton University

Graduate Education for Careers in Public Affairs

International Relations
Development Studies
Domestic Policy
Economics and Public Policy

Presentation and question-and-answer session will be held with a Woodrow Wilson School representative.

Date: Friday, November 13, 1987

Time: 10:30 and 11:30 a.m.

Place: Moulton Union - 2nd Floor

“What distinguishes J.P. Morgan starts with the investment we make in you.”

At J.P. Morgan, we look for potential, not polished skill. And if we find it in you, we'll give you outstanding training right from the start, and movement through different jobs – often through different parts of the world. Whether your major is English literature or economics, we offer opportunities to work for a global financial firm in corporate finance, mergers and acquisitions, securities sales and trading, public finance, foreign exchange, private banking, human resources, and operations and systems management.

To find out more, please come and meet with us at the time and place indicated.

Opportunities for BAs and BSs at J.P. Morgan:

Corporate Finance
Sales and Trading
Foreign Exchange and Treasury

Information Presentation
Tuesday, November 10
7:00 p.m.
Moulton Union
Main Lounge

JPMorgan

SPORTS

Women's soccer seeded #1 in NIAC

Women's soccer hopes for a strong team effort in the Division II Tournament that will be held at Bowdoin this weekend. The team boasts an 11-2-1 mark and is seeded number one in the tournament.

TONY JACCACI

Orient Staff

The women's varsity soccer team ended their season with a victory last week as they beat Salem State by a score of 3-2.

The victory improved the Polar Bears record to 11-2-1 and earned them a number one seed in the NIAC tournament which will be played at Bowdoin this weekend. The other teams that will be participating in the tournament are Williams College, Connecticut College and Amherst College, respectively, in order of their ranking.

Bowdoin took to the field last Saturday and beat a visiting Salem State squad by a score of 3-2. Coach Cullen felt that the Polar Bears "played as well as they had to." He also felt that the team lost concentration and allowed Salem State back into the game after totally dominating the match for the first thirty minutes.

Bowdoin scored first as the Polar Bears launched a merciless attack against Salem State. The offense took several shots in the opening minutes of the game, and freshman Christine Neill was the first to put a shot past the Salem State netminder. Neill hit from about 12 yards into the left hand corner. Salem State pressed back, and Bowdoin slowly lost control of the game. Salem State managed to score several minutes before the half bringing the score to 1-1.

The game was closer in the second half, but that didn't slow down Neill. Four minutes into the half, Neill stole the ball at half field and scored on the ensuing breakaway. She was followed by Liz Kahn eleven minutes later when Kahn recorded her first goal of the season. Kahn's goal would turn out to be the eventual winner.

Salem State scored again with only ten minutes remaining. There was no more witchcraft from Salem State on this day however, as Bowdoin held on and emerged with a 3-2 victory.

There were several changes in the Polar Bear defense in the second half of the game as Coach Cullen decided to give several players playing time in the backfield in anticipation of the upcoming NIAC tournament.

Forward Liz Brown took the goalie position and seemed fairly comfortable between the posts while forward Karen Crehore played excellent defense in the sweeper position. These moves are a guard against the possibility of injury to one of the regular starters in the defensive positions.

Bowdoin will play host to Williams College (9-2-2), Connecticut College (11-3) and Amherst College (6-6-2) this weekend in the NIAC tournament. Bowdoin has not faced any of the visiting squads although each of the three teams have played against one another.

Cullen has no changes in store for the tournament and states that he will "go with what got us there." His only concern is that, at times, the Polar Bears lose their concentration and can't finish off their opponents.

The team is relatively healthy, and the players are ready to go. If Bowdoin can combine their line talent with a high level of concentration, it could prove to be a very successful weekend for the black and white.

Bowdoin plays fourth ranked Amherst college Saturday at 1:30 on Pickard Field while second ranked Williams and third ranked Connecticut will battle at 1:30 on the men's varsity field. The winners of both matches will play Sunday at 12:00 on Pickard Field for the championship.

Bears err in 13-12 loss

ERIC PALMQUIST

Orient Staff

That a good running team will defeat a good passing team is one of football's oldest axioms, yet it proved false last Saturday as the Polar Bears were defeated by Wesleyan 13-12, despite racking up 274 yards on the ground.

Bowdoin once again proved themselves to be the Minnesota Twins of college football, as they have failed to win a game on the road this year, yet remain undefeated at home. The story of this game, however, was the fumble. The Bears committed four of them, and the Cardinals recovered each one, the last of which led to the winning field goal with only 3:41 to play.

In addition to the fumbles the Bears also threw an interception, but despite these turnovers the offense was able to move the ball consistently all day. The difference was that they were unable to push it in for the score like they have done all season, as they were stopped deep in Wesleyan territory three times, twice settling for field goals by Rick Saletta.

Once again the attack was led by senior tailback Gregg Bohannon, who carried a season high 30 times for 147 yards, despite being the focus of the Cardinal defense. It was the sixth consecutive 100 yard day for Gregg, who only adds to his record in that category with each contest. It was, in fact, a great day for all Bowdoin ballcarriers. Rich Ledbury ran for a season's high of 53 yards, while Ryan Stafford scrambled his way to his season's best, 48 yards.

While at the beginning of the year the Bears mixed up the run and the pass equally, the success of the running game has changed the situation to one where the Bears pass merely to offset the run. What is surprising is the fine play they continue to receive from quarterback Stafford and Mike Kirch, despite the limited opportunity to show off their skills.

Against Wesleyan the two threw fifteen times for 120 yards, most of which were chalked up by tight end John Hayden, who caught two passes for 54 yards. He was outdone by his counterpart John Maynard, however, as the Cardinal tight end was the main target in Wesleyan's big play offense, catching eight passes for 165 yards.

Aside from Maynard's exploits the Bowdoin defense once again was outstanding. They held Wesleyan runners to only 65 yards on the ground, while limiting them to eight first downs and forcing them to punt nine times. When Wesleyan did get into Bear territory the defense tightened even further, twice stopping the Cardinals on the goal line to force short field goals.

(Continued on page nine)

Bill Hall fights off defender while setting up for the score. Photo by Alan Harris

Water polo splits four at home

JON DEVINE

Orient Contributor

This weekend, Bowdoin played host to the New England Division II Tournament for both East and West teams. Five squads from the region joined in a round-robin competition at Bowdoin's Farley Field House pool, many with the hopes of dethroning one of the division's strongest teams, Amherst. However, in the end, the Lord Jeffs prevailed, taking all four games they played.

Bowdoin finished right in the middle of the pack behind Amherst and Williams and in front of both U.R.I. and Boston University. The Bears concluded the weekend with a 2-2 record and nearly stole a game from Williams, another team considered very powerful in the pool. Tied 6-6 going into the final minute of the game, Bowdoin came close to pulling out a surprising victory over the Ephs. However, the Williams team was able to escape with a narrow 8-6 win with a closing surge.

The Bears, however, were content with their finish in the tournament and in this particular game. President of the Water Polo Club, Rob Tisdale said, "We were hoping just to stick close." Tisdale was very happy with the team's performance this past weekend.

Standouts for the Bears included Tom Francouer, who amassed 16 goals in the four-game tournament and Keith Paine who played only two games scored 10 goals and played extremely well for the Bears. Tisdale also mentioned senior Scott Crocker and freshman Dave Morey as players who also stood out in the tournament. All in all, it was a good performance for Bowdoin.

Hockey grieves loss

JULIE FELNER

Orient Staff

The women's field hockey team suffered a disappointing 1-0 loss against Williams at the NIAC Tournament on October 31st. The Bears ended their sensational season with a 9-3-1 record including the tournament.

Williams presented a tough but even match for Bowdoin throughout the entire game for Bowdoin which consisted mostly of midfield play and long outside shots. Both teams remained scoreless during regular game time and three additional overtime periods.

Each side then took five penalty strokes in a final attempt to break the 0-0 tie. Maureen Flaherty, William's #2 scorer, took her team's first shot and obtained the game's only goal.

According to Coach Sally LaPointe, goalie Lynn Warner played "an excellent game. She kept us in there quite often." Warner who stopped 24 Williams' shots, finished her extraordinary season with a total of 124 saves. The strong defense of Kathy McCormick and Mo Letson also largely contributed to the Bears' brave effort.

LaPointe felt the excellent defensive play of both teams was a key factor in the enduring tie. She said, "We had two strong defenses and two strong goalies. Both sides were stingy." In addition, she blamed the poor and erratic calls of the officials who were apparently unfamiliar with some of the college-level rules.

Bowdoin was also dealt a serious blow when early in the second half co-captain and key player, Audrey Augustin, was struck in the face by a Williams player's stick. The loss of Augustin, who required several stitches, had a definite impact on the team's performance and morale.

Trinity won the Tournament after crushing Tufts, 6-2 and Williams, 3-0. The Bears ended up with a #3 ranking in the Northeast and #1 in Maine.

Reflecting on the superb season, Coach LaPointe said "The win-loss record is not as important as getting a group of kids working together and enjoying each other—that to me is a season; that's all I could ever ask for."

The men's soccer team played with its head in the clouds for most of the season finishing with a fine 8-4-2 mark. Photo by Dave Wilby

Men stage impressive comeback in '87

TOD DILLON
ORIENT Staff

At the close of the 1987 season, the men's soccer team is a far cry from their 1986 predecessors. Following an unimpressive 1986 4-9 season the Polar Bears turned in a solid record of 8-4-2, with the two ties coming in the last week of play. This edition of the team is the first winning one since the 1981 Polar Bears.

Bowdoin closed out their season with games against Wesleyan and Bates. In the first match-up the Bears squared off against the Cardinals and ended up with a 1-1 tie. Bates came to Pickard on Tuesday and they too were involved in a 1-1 decision.

Bowdoin was on the road on Saturday down to Middletown, Connecticut for their penultimate game of the season. The travelling seemed to have an affect as both teams played a scoreless, sluggish half. In the second half the hosts broke the ice when Tim Nicholson put in a pass from Dave Reece beating goalie Bruce Wilson.

The Polar Bears answered at 39:36 in the form of a Lance Conrad tally on an assist from Chris Garbaccio. Goalie Adam Rohdie could not make the play as Conrad put the ball over his head for the score. Wesleyan out shot the Bears 13-12 with Wilson having 6 saves in net.

Tuesday was the final game of the season, and Bates College made an appropriate adversary. Once again the opening half was scoreless as neither team could register a goal in the cold and rainy conditions. The second half got off to a quick start when Dirk Asherman took a nice crossing pass from Karl Maier at 3:10 of the half and beat Bobcat goalie Brian Davis.

The Bears held on to this lead until the 33:15 mark. The visitors had a corner kick, and Andy Keller made the most of it as he headed in a Todd Coleman kick that beat the Bowdoin defense. Both Ethan Lovell and Conrad had close bids down the stretch for the Bears but time ran out with things knotted at 1-1.

In the overtimes Davis was called upon to make some impressive saves as the Polar Bears attacked. Conrad appeared to have a sure bid for the game winner but a combination of a trip, a quick whistle and a questionable ball placement outside the penalty area quashed that chance. The Bears out shot the Bobcats by a lopsided 30-6 but the final score still stood at 1-1.

With many key players returning for the 1988 season, the outlook is indeed optimistic for the Polar Bears. Coach Tim Gilbride is looking forward to next fall which should prove to bring with it a more experienced and powerful pack of Polar Bears.

Now in stock!

KEGS WINE BEER
and now COLA

JOLT COLA
"all the sugar
and twice the caffeine"

Cask and Ken

26 Bath Road, Brunswick, 729-4711 Mon, Sat, 10 to 6

Saint Louis University's Academic Year in Madrid

COMPLETE CURRICULUM: English, Spanish, Liberal Arts, Business & Administration, TESOL, Sciences, Hispanic Studies

SLU in Madrid is a member of AA/EOE

Graduate Courses offered during Summer Session in July

Apply NOW for Spring and Summer 1988

More than 600 students in the Program

Contact:

Raymond L. Sullivan, S.J.
Saint Louis University in Madrid
Calle de la Vina, 3
Madrid 28003 SPAIN
Tel: 233-2032/233-2812

Saint Louis University
Study Abroad Coordinator
Admissions Office
221 North Grand Blvd
St. Louis, MO 63103
Toll-free tel: 1-800-325-6666

Get the perfect hairstyle for your lifestyle!

Call the Plaza today, and visit us at our new location, next
to the White Seal Laundry.
Walk ins welcome

DOWNTOWN PLAZA COIFFURES

MON, THUR, WED. 8:30 to 5
THURS. AND FRI. 8:30 to 9, SAT. 8:30 to 5
176 MAINE STREET - 725-4853

PLAZA COIFFURES

MONDAY THRU FRIDAY 8:30 to 8
SATURDAY 8:30 to 5
725-4846 - COOKS CORNER

Circa 1821

the Samuel
Newman
House

BEHIND COLES TOWER
7 South St., Brunswick, Me. 04011
For Reservations, call (207) 729-6959

BED & BREAKFAST

PARENTS!

Give your college student a very special care package! An Ice Cream Cake from Ben & Jerry's for birthdays, study
breaks, exams, surprises, rainy days...

BEN & JERRY'S ICE CREAM

Call and order your
cake today.

Free Delivery (207) 725-2725
96 Maine Street, Brunswick

Sundayz, Inc. Grand Opening

Year 'round sun comes to Sundayz, Inc. starting November 2

We use nothing less than the safest indoor tanning system in the world: the patented Wolff System. It can give you a deep, dark, natural tan in just a few relaxing sessions. And with one or two sessions each week, you can keep your tan long after summer has faded away.

Your first tanning session is free.

Right now, 10 sessions are just $30

Come in and enter our drawing for 6 months of unlimited tanning!

Call us today, and your summer tan will be just a few days away!

WOLFF SYSTEM

The Most Trusted Name in Tanning

Sundayz, Inc.
32 Turner Street
Brunswick, ME
729-3383

off Pleasant Street behind BIG APPLE

Cross Country fares well in Beantown

DAVID NUTE ORIENT Staff

Boston's Franklin Park was the setting for the women's New England Championships. The women's team fared extremely well, coming in 17th out of 32 teams.

Bowdoin's top runners, Marilyn Fredey and Deanna Hodgkin, placed 61st and 82nd respectively out of the field of 290 runners.

The scoring for Bowdoin was rounded out by Co-Captain Rosie Dougherty, 45th place; Jennifer Snow, 121st place; and Kim Dirlam in 141st place.

Coach Slovinski said that Fredey and Hodgkin were merely, "training through" the race in preparation for the grueling last two weeks of the season.

"Special mention to Rosie Dougherty," added Slovinski, "She has been running third all season, and now she's one of the top runners in New England. Rosie is really having an outstanding season."

Bowdoin runners have only two races left. This weekend, the E.C.A.C.'s at Tufts University, and next weekend, the N.C.A.A. Division II Qualifiers at Southeastern Massachusetts University.

Also last weekend at the New England championships in Boston's Franklin Park, the Men's cross country team ran exceptionally well, placing 18th out of 32 teams.

Bowdoin's effort was spearheaded by Junior Tod Dillon's 40th place showing. Dillon's time of 25:41 for the five mile course, was just 43 seconds behind the winner.

Also giving excellent performances were Captain Marry Malague, 83rd place; Colm Sweeney, 111th place; Lance Hickey, 122nd place, and John Dougherty, who finished 134th out of the field of 350 runners.

Bowdoin's combined team score was 483, down 200 points from last year's 30th place.

Coach Slovinski was particularly enthusiastic about Colm Sweeney's race. "Colm has been working very hard all year; he has emerged as the number three man on the team, and is really a factor in our races."

Looking ahead to the remainder of the season, the team will travel to Tufts University tomorrow for the E.C.A.C. Division III Championships.

Football

(Continued from page seven)

Leading the defensive charge was the solid line play of defensive end Dave Otto, nose guard Ed Daft, and defensive tackle Scott Wojcicki. The three effectively killed the Cardinal rushing attack, making fifteen tackles and forcing Wesley to the air. Safety Terry Conroy also stood out by contributing seven tackles.

When the game began it looked as if the Bears were going to dominate the previously winless Cardinals, as they scored first on Bohannon's ninth touchdown of the season. Saletta's extra point attempt hit the upright, however, and that missed opportunity proved to be the difference. Saletta added a field goal later in the quarter to put the Bears on top, 9-0. Those were the last points Bowdoin would see until the fourth quarter.

It does not get any easier for the Polar Bears this week as they open the CBB season against Bates tomorrow at Whittier field at 1:00 pm. Earlier this year Bowdoin held Tufts' fullback Tim Fanikos to 46 yards rushing after he had carried for over 200 yards in consecutive games, but the Bears face an even bigger challenge in Bobcat's tailback Chris Hickey, who has carried for 242 and 274 yards in his last two games, while racking up an impressive ten touchdowns in those contests.

The only encouraging note to be found in those statistics is the fact that one of those games was against W.P.I., who let Fanikos run for similar yardage. It will be the Bowdoin defense versus the Bates offense in what should be an excellent game.

Divers Wanted

The swim teams are looking for active, energetic young men and women, preferably with some gymnastic or dancing experience who might be interested in learning and participating in competitive diving. They will study under the expert instruction of the new coach, Harvey Wheeler. Previous experience is not necessary, just the will to learn and the urge to fly and to have fun.

Dressmaking - Tailoring
Alterations of all kinds
leather, suede, fur
Custom-made suits
11 Cedar St, Brunswick
M-F, 7 to 5; Sat, 7:30 to 12:30
725-5305

TYPISTS - Hundreds weekly
at home! Write: P.O. Box 17
Clark, New Jersey 07066

LSAT GMAT GRE

WHAT IF YOU DON'T GET INTO THE GRAD SCHOOL OF YOUR CHOICE?

Sure, there are other schools. But why settle? Kaplan helps students raise their scores and their chances of being admitted into their first-choice schools. Fact is, no one has helped students score higher!

KAPLAN
STANLEY H. KAPLAN EDUCATIONAL CENTER LTD.

Maine GMAT class starts 11/15.
Bowdoin campus MCAT class starts 1/24.
Call now to reserve your place.

(617) 964-TEST

Meet Macintosh.™

Andy Palmer, Bowdoin senior, will introduce interested students and faculty to Apple's powerful Macintosh™ personal computers. Andy is available three times a week in the Computer Center of Hubbard Hall.

Bowdoin College students have two great models to choose from at special prices. The Macintosh Plus, which comes with one 800K disk drive, 1 megabyte of memory, keyboard and mouse.

And the Macintosh SE, which comes with either two built-in 800K drives, or one drive and an internal 20-megabyte hard disk. As well as choice of keyboards.

Whichever you choose, Apple offers a one-time, affordable student purchase price.

See the Macintosh in action at the Computer Center.

This advertisement was designed, typeset and produced on an Apple Macintosh™ personal computer and printed on an Apple LaserWriter™ printer. Apple and the Apple logo are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. Macintosh and LaserWriter are trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc.

Wreath out and touch someone.

All Wreaths
can be shipped by us.

Order
EARLY.

Fresh Balsam Wreath - $15.00
Eucalyptus Wreath - our most popular aromatic wreath
Everlasting Wreath - Generously made with an intricate blend of dried flowers. $21.50 - $38.50 - $45.00
Grape Vine Wreath - Natural grape vine with a spray of dried flowers and matching bow. Different sizes.
Christmas Wreath - Handcrafted of Christmas stationery comes in different shades of ribbon for the holidays or year-round. $28.50
Cone Wreath - Different Sizes

Arrangements for Thanksgiving, Christmas

Balloons Bouquets & Fruit Baskets.

Pauline's Bloomers

Tontine Mall, Brunswick
To order call: 725-5982
Major credit cards accepted.

Shop Daily 9:00-6:00
124 Maine Street, Brunswick

Coastal Computer CENTER

Maine's largest Apple® dealer.
16 Forest Avenue, Portland 774-0741
The Tontine Mall, Brunswick 729-0298

Come see
what's in store
for you!

OPINION

Keeping perspective

The uproar over athletics continued this week as the Admissions Committee voted to adopt a plan to limit to 200 the number of applicants for admission to the college who may receive ratings which may enhance their chances of being accepted. The plan received stiff opposition from both those who think the plan too restrictive and those who think it is watered down.

We applaud the wise middle course followed by the admissions committee, and ask students and faculty alike to moderate any extreme stands they may hold. On one hand, it is clear that in the recent past Bowdoin's athletics department enjoyed a strong influence on the admissions process; perhaps too strong. While Coach John Cullen and Anne St. Peter '89 said the new limit is too restrictive, it will force the department to choose more carefully those who may receive special consideration. Thus, the ratings will enjoy better credibility and yield better athletes.

On the other hand, we disagree with Assistant Professor of Music Robert Greenlee, who said the proper place of athletics in a liberal arts education is occasional participation for the sake of exercise. On the contrary, we feel that competitive athletics on a varsity level are essential to the college. They provide a means for growth and learning that can not be duplicated. Liberal arts is about striving for excellence and personal self-enhancement; we believe that this applies to the field as well as to the classroom, although not to the same degree. In the course of learning and self-exploration, ballet and theatre and painting express one side of the self; football and tennis and swimming another. Is one to be ignored?

Academic flexibility

Acting Dean of the college Paul Nyhus announced this week that, in compliance with a vote of the faculty, his office would put an end to the policy some academic departments have adopted of placing grade requirements on students who wish to major in those departments. We applaud this action most heartily and are glad the dean's office and our professors are standing behind the rights of the students to choose what academic direction they wish to follow.

Until the dean made his pronouncement this week, some departments required that students achieve honors or higher grades in lower level courses in order to enter the department as a major. Students who received passing grades in the field in which they wished to major would be denied admittance to the department.

One problem which could have arisen from this situation is the possibility that a student who received straight pass grades in all his classes would not be eligible to finish any major in the college. Another possibility is that those returning would be forced into a major in which he was not interested or qualified.

But these cases are the exception to the rule. The real danger is that academic departments might be able to make themselves bastions of exclusivity. Pressure put on a student to excel in his major might detract from concentration on other important elements of the liberal arts education. Departmental grade requirements could also discourage the adoption of minors and double majors by placing more pressure on the student to excel in one field, or might discourage them from taking chances with course they might find extremely broadening but challenging.

Bowdoin has always distinguished itself by an educational philosophy that emphasizes learning instead of grading. By this week's decision, the faculty and dean upheld that essential element of the school admirably.

Letters

Ethics

To the Editor:

I am honored that you reported my recent chapel talk on higher education and the ethical norms of American society.

However I would like to correct one misperception of my message. I did not and would not endorse a professor's offer to pay $100,000 to that student who presents, as a course assignment, an analysis of a corporation ready for takeover. On the contrary, I saw the case as a timely example of the range of practices which require examination as to ethical propriety, not only in law business schools, but in undergraduate liberal arts colleges including Bowdoin.

Ten minutes is not much time to develop an idea, especially when we start by singing more stanzas of America the Beautiful than I knew existed. But I see many problems with the case in question. One of them is that $100,000 is a stingy fee if it is to be assumed that the adjunct professor, a takeover expert in real life, realizes a profit in the millions by applying the wisdom of his student. That's why I chose as my comparable reward (to the student who answered my question about ethics and education) a hamburger royal plus soft drink at the Moulton Union eatery.

Sincerely,
William B. Whiteside

Review

To the Editor:

I have a few thoughts in your review of last weekend's Masque and Gown one acts.

Your article is on target in its commentary on Summertime (solid performances, weak script). Like your reporter, I quarreled with some of the costume choices, particularly the decision to clothe the protagonist in all black. But what is the meaning of the comment in your review, "Gee, does that symbolize death, is he going to die?" If the reporter is trying to be clever or funny, he succeeds only in being hurtful!

It is true that some of the actors of "The Happy Journey" rushed their lines at times, and over-exaggerated some of the characterizations. These were problems that we recognized in rehearsal and tried to correct in the performance evenings that followed the Wednesday night performance that your reporter attended. What I cannot understand is his use of phrases like "might well be retarded" and "shock-therapy vegetable" to describe the performances of several of the actors. If the reviewer intends to be so harsh, why does he later refer to these same characterizations as "minor shortcomings"? All I can think of is that he either lacks the strength of conviction to be consistent, or that he simply could not resist inserting more "clever" and provocative phrases.

Your review does its greatest disservice to Jill Roberts and J.B. Dilshimer of "Sexual Perversity in Chicago." We all know the jumble of emotions that accompanies any new love relationship, and I am amazed that your reporter could find nothing to touch his heart in the performances of these two actors. If your reporter really found their emotions "tadious," and is seriously demanding a more "passionate" demonstration than "putting hands on each other's thighs," then perhaps he should join the play's character Liko at the X-rated cinema and stop attending the one-act play performances.

Amateur actors deserve useful and honest criticism, but not ridicule. I only hope that students who may be contemplating their first Bowdoin auditions will not be scared off by the prospect of snide and self-serving insults published in the school newspaper.

Douglas F. Kirschen '88

Milo

To the Editor:

The comments made by Inter-fraternity Council (IFC) President Scott Milo in the last issue of the Orient made it clear to me how poorly the IFC serves the Bowdoin community and its own members. I question the integrity of an organization which defames one of its members and whose president took control because "nobody else wanted the job." The IFC should be a progressive organization encouraging its members to adjust to changes in the college and the world. Instead, it is a reactionary organization, which is not only struggling to maintain the status quo but trying to step backwards. As a member of the IFC last semester I noticed that the houses that have adjusted most in recent decades were listened to least.

Scott Milo said that Delta Sig was "one of the IFC's 'weakest' members." If Scott Milo judges the strength of fraternities only on their financial status it is exemplary of his narrow minded attitude toward fraternity issues. Last year when Scott Milo begrudgingly encouraged fraternities and the Sorority to begin lectureships and faculty nights his motives did not stem from a sincere desire to fill a void on campus but in the name of public image. In the meantime Chi Psi was beginning a lecture series and Delta Sig has sponsored one for years.

Scott Milo also said, "If there is something wrong, women in frats have to speak up. I guess guys can't do it." This view belittles one of the most important issues facing fraternities. Rather than asking, "Is there a problem when women can't live in some houses?" or "How does the presence of a national fraternity effect women?" or "Do fraternities breed more sexual harassment than dorms do?" or "Do women have a framework within fraternities to express their views especially if 'guys can't do it'?" the IFC continues to harp on the issue of regaining "the single sex option." This view is reactionary. The IFC must accept the fact that the college is not going to change its decision and that the fraternities must make progress integrating women into the houses.

I am not saying other houses should imitate Delta Sig and I am not anti-fraternity. With dry rush the campus saw what the IFC is capable of. Chapel Talks provide a small step toward better faculty/fraternity relations but to truly attract faculty the IFC must encourage true internal change, not development of a false image of an intellectual atmosphere. Basically I want to see the IFC stop trying to create a public relations facade, look at the positive things in all houses, stop wasting their time planning parties, and promote fundamental change.

Stephen Bowler '89

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

"The College exercises no control over the content of the student writings contained herein and neither it, nor the Administration, nor the faculty assume any responsibility for the views expressed herein."

Lori Bodwell...Editor in Chief

Kevin Wesley...Assistant Editor
Adam Najberg...News Editor
Rosemarie Dougherty...Assoc. News Editor

Tamara Dassanayake...Asst. News Editor
Eric Foushee...Account Executive
Alan Harris...Photography Editor
Mary Ann Lai...Photography Editor
Lizz Millan...Asst. Entertainment Editor

Dawn Vance...Asst. News Editor

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT
Published by

THE BOWDOIN PUBLISHING COMPANY

LORI M. BODWELL ALBERT P. MAURO, JR.

Published weekly when classes are held during the Fall and Spring semester by the students of Bowdoin College. Address editorial communication to the Editor, subscription communication to the circulation manager, and business correspondence to the business manager at The Bowdoin Orient, 12 Cleveland Street, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011, or telephone (207) 725-3300. The Bowdoin Orient reserves the right to edit any and all articles and letters. Subscriptions are $15.00 per year or $8.00 per semester. Past issues cannot be mailed.

POSTMASTER: Send address changes to The Bowdoin Orient, Moulton Union, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011.

Geoghegan calls for intellectual spiderman

ADAM NAJBERG
Orient News Editor

Is Bowdoin impoverishing the souls of its students? Professor of Religion William D. Geoghegan raised this question at Wednesday's weekly Chapel Talk.

Geoghegan, who drew his topic from Allan Bloom's recent best seller The Closing of the American Mind, called for "a quantum leap upward," in the quality of education of Bowdoin students.

Bloom's book, said Geoghegan, pointed out the "closing of the seemingly wide-open American mind," and categorized today's students as "clean slates" or "amiable zeros."

The best-selling author claims higher education, today, is "short changing its students and betraying truth by not confronting them with or impartially allowing them to be confronted with, real alternatives to the unquestioned assumption of dogmatic relativism," said Geoghegan.

The "quantum leap upward" advocated by Geoghegan would effectively negate Bloom's statement regarding today's students, that they "have not the slightest notion of what an achievement it is to free oneself from public guidance and find resources for guidance within oneself."

The "leap upward," said Geoghegan, must make the college a "more intellectual and at the same time more truly human" institution.

Geoghegan called for "some intellectual spidermen and spiderwomen, with the guts, smarts and capacity for patient hard work and for magnetizing good luck" from the student body to carry out this upward movement to a more full education.

Today's students must explore the curriculum and motivate themselves to become educated, explained Geoghegan. He offered four suggestions to aid students in their quest to prove Bloom wrong.

First, Geoghegan suggested students enroll in courses "taught philosophically, taught to make you think in a break-through way." Next, students should "demand training not only in writing, but also in speaking, and above all, in thinking." Students should ask professors, why a subject "is fit for a human being to study."

Geoghegan also recommended students consider the forums open to them to discuss "fundamental questions of moral philosophy, the basic principles of human judgement and behavior."

Fraternities and other student residential and social groups, said Geoghegan, could also add to the intellectual environment of the college. Lectures, discussions and debate meetings would enhance the education of college students.

Geoghegan ended his lecture by wishing the chapel congregation "a nice Socratic liberal education."

Pictures

(Continued from page one)

nity. It is the hopes of Afrapix and Grassroots International that the exhibition will make people aware the larger role they can play in bringing about change in South Africa. Connell says that sanctions are great but they are not enough. Connell believes that people can take a more personal role in the struggle.

Connell said Americans don't make any connection with the South African blacks. He said we recognize the injustices that are taking place in South Africa but make no personal connection. This is very different from the outlook of many South Africans who see themselves as part of a larger community.

When South African workers employed by the 3M company went on strike for a day in support of the larger 3M strike taking place in New Jersey, it was because they saw themselves as a member of this larger community.

Cornell believes a similar response from the American people to the plight of the black in South Africa will work miracles for political and social change.

After it leaves Bowdoin the exhibition will move to Brattleboro Vermont and then to Tufts University.

All donations and requests for information can be sent to Grassroots International, PO Box 312, Cambridge, MA 02139.

Majors

(Continued from page one)

aspect will be important in aiding students to choose a major.

"We, as faculty, have a responsibility to advise students on the different encounters they will face when choosing a major. In principle, the choice should be the student's. They are adults (who are) learning to take responsibility for making choices. Some choices prove to be failure. Some adults make choices these past weeks in the stock market, and they've gone bust. Advising is a very important point in this process," said Vail.

Now that you've gotten into Bowdoin, IBM can help you get more out of it.

The road to graduation is paved with term papers, lab reports, cramming, all-nighters and, of course, exams.

To ease that journey and awaken your professors to your exceptional abilities, we suggest the newest member of the IBM® Personal System/2™ family: the Model 25 Collegiate.

It's a high-powered personal computer with advanced graphics capabilities, designed to fit on your desk without adding to the clutter. And it comes with a generous 640 KB memory, two 3.5" diskette drives and an aid package every student can appreciate—a big discount.

plus Microsoft® Windows 1.04, Write, Paint, Cardfile, IBM DOS 3.3 and a mouse.

Pop in the load-and-go diskette and your Model 25 Collegiate is set to help you write and revise long papers and illustrate your points by combining words and graphics. So your professors will draw favorable conclusions about your work.

For more information on the Model 25 Collegiate, visit the IBM Education Product Coordinator on campus.

You'll quickly learn how to get the most out of the IBM Personal System/2.

IBM®

Microsoft is a registered trademark of the Microsoft Corporation. IBM is a registered trademark and Personal System/2 is a trademark of the International Business Machines Corporation. © IBM 1987.

Letter

Veggies

To the Editor:

When I came to Bowdoin four years ago, I never thought I would have "a beef" with the Dining Service. However, after two months I've got to complain. And, believe it or not, it has nothing to do with the ID situation.

My complaint comes in the form of a question: How many other vegetarians have had it with eating fruit plates for dinner every night? It seems that with the rather recent development of fruit plates during dinner hours the Dining Service no longer feels obligated to provide vegetarian meals on a consistent basis. Although I'm not sure, I imagine that there are a substantial number of vegetarians on campus who share my feelings.

It is true that once or twice a week the Dining Service does come up with a vegetarian alternative. These efforts tend to produce less than appealing dishes such as Carrot Souffle and Cauliflower au Gratin. The latter dish, incidentally, tasted not unlike raw cauliflower covered with melted Cheez Whiz.

Why the lackadaisical effort? Where are the stir fried vegetables and tofu, cheese ravioli, and quiches of old? Surely producing a quality non-meat dish three or four times a week would not take a dramatic extra effort in the kitchen.

I'm tired of having to eat fruit plates for dinner, which, by the way, pale in comparison to the lunch fruit plates. For the money each of us has to shell out for board here (dinners run $6.50) a fruit plate hardly fulfills one's expectations. If the Bowdoin Dining Service wants to hold to their claim that they treat each student as their guest they might begin considering that a number of non-meat eaters are getting fed up with not being fed.

James Anderson '88

Sarah Lawrence College At Oxford

An opportunity for qualified undergraduates to spend a year of study in the Oxford educational tradition, centering on tutorials and a seminar with Oxford faculty.

For information and an application contact:
Sarah Lawrence College At Oxford
Box 11CBO
Bronxville, New York 10708

LEAVE A VOID IN THE NOIDSM

Clip this coupon off the
NOID's face and call
Domino's Pizza® now!
We Avoid The NOIDSM
and make pizza just the
way you want it.

26 Bath Rd.
Phone: 729-5561

Open for lunch
Sat. & Sun. at 11 am

Our drivers carry less
than $20.00.
Limited delivery area.

©1987 Domino's Pizza, Inc.
NOIDSM design in CLAYMATION®
by Will Vinton Productions, Inc.

DOMINO'S
PIZZA
DELIVERS[®]
FREE.

SM

$1.00

$1.00 off any pizza.
One coupon per pizza.
Expires: 11/15/87

Fast, Free Delivery
26 Bath Rd.
Phone: 729-5561

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

FIRST CLASS MAIL
U.S. Postage PAID
BRUNSWICK, ME
Permit No. 25

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

VOLUME CXVII

BOWDOIN COLLEGE, BRUNSWICK, MAINE, FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 13, 1987

NUMBER 9

Class conflicts force Chapel Talks to Friday

RICHARD LINDAHL, JR.

ORIENT Staff

The Recording Committee has ruled that the Chapel Talks sponsored by the Interfraternity Council (IFC) will not be held on Wednesday mornings during the spring semester. The committee has recommended the weekly event be moved to Friday morning.

The committee was responding to a September faculty vote on a motion made by Chairman of the Department of Economics David J. Vail.

"The principal that was operative was that regularly scheduled activities should not conflict with the time devoted to athletics," said Vail.

"They (the IFC) had scheduled the talks in the traditional time," Vail added, "although there are now 11 courses at 10 a.m. and 25 at 10:30 a.m."

Eleven courses meet at ten o'clock on Wednesdays, involving a total of 203 students. Twenty-two courses meet at ten-thirty, involving 638 students.

The only class meeting at ten o'clock on Fridays is Vail's own class of 25 students, but the class is not at an officially scheduled time. Vail said he does not feel the fact his class meets on Friday morning should prohibit Chapel Talks at that time.

"The vote appeared to be a routine item, correcting a scheduling conflict," said Dean of the College Paul Nyhus, chair of the Recording Committee. He characterized the voice vote as hastily done without much discussion.

Ross Baker '90, the coordinator of the IFC Chapel Talks, said the Wednesday slot would be better in terms of attendance.

"Having a Wednesday time slot is better, because on Friday, sports teams leave for weekend meets, and people are going away for the weekend," said Baker.

Baker said the Chapel Talks are the one place where faculty, administration, students, and fraternity members are all brought together for the exchange of ideas of general interest.

"I question whether the faculty want to move ahead with the students of this school or instead put a wall between us and them," said Baker.

"The IFC wants to continue the tradition of Wednesday Chapels at Bowdoin," he said.

Baker pointed to a letter sent to him by President Geason during the summer that apparently gives approval of the Wednesday time for Chapel. However, as Vail said, "The president is not in charge of scheduling."

Geason said he saw no problem with the Wednesday slot because there was no compulsory attendance at Chapel Talk. He did however express no concern over the rescheduling of Chapel.

"I don't think we have as large an exodus on the weekends as many other schools do," said Geason. "The event has been moved to the time of least conflict."

The authority of the Recording Committee to deny the IFC the Wednesday slot has been challenged by some critics of the change.

"I cannot find you a piece of paper that says there will be no activities during times in which classes are scheduled, but there has been a clear understanding of this" between the administration and the various activity groups, said Nyhus.

"If the football team or the chamber choir started having practices

(Continued on page three)

Suzie Ingram (23) maneuvers heavy traffic in Bowdoin's 4-1 thrashing of Williams. With the win, the Polars Bears clinched the NIAC Championship for the fifth time in the last seven years. Photo by Lori Bowdell

Execs discuss board's lethargy

DAWN VANCE

ORIENT Asst. News Editor

The near lack of a quorum caused Chairman George Hillhouse '88 to raise this question with members of the Executive Board at the group's weekly Tuesday night meeting.

At the end of the board's regular business, Hillhouse pointed out instances of lethargy among board members this semester. Although Hillhouse said, "there has been no fighting on the board, the board has been laid back and altogether more cohesive", he suggested that perhaps the board has been "too laid-back."

Hillhouse further suggested the reason for this "laid-back" tendency may stem from an absence of administrative issues that have enraged the student body. As a solution to this Hillhouse said, "It seems that the board is no longer a reactionary board. It is time that the board become active, that it make active decisions, that it consider issues not posed by the administration."

Board member Andrew Winter '89 pointed out the lack of attendance by board members at the Student Life Facility's forum on Thursday, November 5 as a further indication of lethargy on the Executive Board.

Winter said, "It is rather unfortunate that more Execs didn't show up... we are the representatives of student opinion... it was a very good forum and I would have liked to see more people there."

In regard to what Hillhouse had to say Winter said, "There are a number of issues that should be dealt with, and I don't know if we can deal with them... there are a lot of problems... it's unfortunate that (students and) Executive Board members don't show up and take more interest."

The board also addressed the issue of eliciting student opinion on the creation of a student center. The board intends to publicize this issue to fully understand where the student body stands.

In other business, the board unanimously voted on the appointments of Colm Sweeney '88 and Tamara Dassanayake '90 to the Science Building Faculty Committee.

The board found no reason to veto the Student Activities Fee Committee's allocations of $150 to the Newman Association and $2500 to the Bowdoin Film Video Society.

Hillhouse announced the board would conduct freshmen officer elections from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. and 5 to 7 p.m. Monday, November 16 at the Moulton Union.

Forum addresses student facilities

LIZZ MILLAN

ORIENT Asst. Entertainment Editor

What do you think Bowdoin needs for social life? What is lacking? These were the questions presented by Andrew Winter at an open forum held on Thursday, November 5.

The forum was held by the Student Life facilities Committee in order to obtain information on the quality of student life desired by Bowdoin students.

The committee represents a diversity of interests and ideas. The committee is composed of two professors, Associate Professor of Government Allen Springer and Associate Professor of German Helen Cafferty, and three students; Andrew Winter, Joy Stuart and Mitra Morgan. Also serving on the committee are; director of the Moulton Union, Harry Warren as well as overseers Lee Herter and Debra Swiss and trustee Richard Wiley. Adding still more diversity to the committee are alumni David Warren and Robert Morrel. The committee is chaired by Lee Herter.

The forum was held to generate ideas and confirm desires regarding social life at Bowdoin. The discussion focused on one particular subject, a student center.

Everything from increased dating to increased academic performance (continued on page three)

Chief meteorologist Paul Cousins at WCME TV-13 reported that yesterday's storm which dumped four inches of snow in Brunswick deposited over six inches in Bath and up to a foot in Boothbay and Bar Harbor. Cousins also told the Orient high winds off shore created waves between ten and 20 feet high. Photo by Alan Harris

If you could be anything but a human being, what would you be and why?

BECKY AUSTIN
ORIENT Staff

Alyssa Hoggatt '91
"A sock so I can find out what happens in the dryer."

Jessica Welt '89
"A dolphin because they can swim boundlessly."

Lisa Carter '91
"I'd be Opus because he's cool."

Antoinette Kavanaugh '90
"A bird. I'd drop my excretions on all the people I don't like and go where I want to go."

Todd Greene '89
"An automobile—a Lamborghini Countach—so people won't mistake my ears for open doors."

College Briefs

RICHARD LINDAHL, JR.
ORIENT Staff

The new multi-million dollar Student Center at Colby College is being used much less for social events this semester. Students at the Waterville college have been favoring campus-wides sponsored by underground fraternities. The fraternities are the only means by which large parties where alcohol is served are probable at the college, because few people want to sign a form to take responsibility for any accident that may result. The fraternities can also handle the fines that may result from a party much better than an individual might.

Middlebury College found a glitch in its telephone system that allowed long-distance phone calls made by students to be charged to the college. The problem existed 4 or 5 weeks before its detection, so the college may be facing some steep phone bills. Several students found out how to take advantage of the situation before it was repaired.

One student said, "I called Colorado only a couple of times." A Junior said, "It was great. I called friends in California and Wyoming...I have some friends in Saudi Arabia and I almost called them."

A New York girlfriend of a student was called about twenty times at an average of 45 minutes per call.

The faculty of Connecticut College is considering the adoption of a plan in which three courses are taught in the fall semester and two in the spring by each professor. The switch from the current 3:3 format at the college might encourage students to take more advanced courses, according to its proponents. Those against the plan say it will reduce the number of courses offered so drastically that the quality of education at the college will be compromised.

One hundred twenty nine people were arrested for under-aged drinking in a police raid on a bar on the campus of Haverford College. The raid was only the latest of a series in the Philadelphia area. Earlier 80 had been arrested at Slippery Rock College, and a raid at Smokey's Joe, a bar frequented by students from the University of Pennsylvania, Temple, and Drexel, resulted in the arrest of several students.

The famous Coffee Hour of Bryn Mawr is experiencing a dramatic drop in attendance because donuts at the event are no longer free. Students find they don't want to pay 35 cents for a donut or one dollar for three donuts.

Faculty also lament the loss of the free donut. Said Professor of Greek Gregory Dickerson, "If it takes the donuts to bring faculty and students together, maybe we could have them once a week."

Zeta Psi is helping to sponsor David Payne, and recently raised $225 to help support the West Virginian boy. The money goes for educational, recreational and health needs.

Student directory still at printer Fraternity sponsors underprivileged child

TAMARA DASSANAYAKE
ORIENT Asst. News Editor

The telephone at the Moulton Union information desk has been ringing off the hook this semester, and all because of a little book. The lack of one, that is.

Have you been frustrated by an endless "busy" tone while frantically trying to find a friend's address or phone number this semester? Be patient a little longer, it looks as if the student directories will be available within a fortnight.

Associate Director of Public Relations and Publications Lucie C. Teegarden said the directories are now at the printer's. She said the longer-than-usual delay was due to understaffing in her office.

Bryk speaks on solidarity

LANCE HICKEY
ORIENT Staff

The uncompromising pursuit of moral and social freedom was the theme of this week's Chapel Talk. Visiting Professor of Government Andrzej Bryk illustrated this message by using solidarity—the Polish Workers' Union—as an ideal example.

In August 1980 the workers for the Lenin Shipyards in Gdansk proclaimed a sit-down strike until they were granted by the authorities an independent trade union. Bryk said this was an example of "the urgent need of decency" that told the workers they "could not wait longer." Bryk used this as an example to highlight the modern inquiry into the rudiments of social and moral order.

To Bryk, the Solidarity revolution was a "revolution of consciousness," although material circumstances changed little, peoples' attitudes were greatly altered. The Polish Workers were determined to live mainly for Christian, not socialist, principles. Solidarity was based on social consciousness that proceeds from the individual to society. Because of this solidarity gave people "hope and a sense of purpose."

Bryk stressed the "solidarity" movement was unique because ethical categories and moral goals played such a large part in it. In its 16 months of revolution, no one was killed. It was in truth an attempt at human liberation, not a violent reaction.

Solidarity merged Christianity and Democratic Socialism to defend fundamental human and civil rights so that the average citizen would benefit.

Solidarity, Bryk concluded, is a modern example of the unrelentless quest for moral and ethical freedom.

Teegarden said that since her assistant left at the beginning of September, she has had to cope with much extra work. The editing of the directories has taken over 20 hours on the word processor and was finally sent to the printer's last week.

Another reason for the delay has been the large number of address changes and new phone numbers that have been registered this semester. The Registrar's office had sent over six pages of changes to be added to the directory.

The fall semester directory is always late to come out because it tries to incorporate as many of the early semester room changes as possible, said Teegarden. Also, students living in the apartments must be given time to arrange for a telephone to be installed.

She added that all academic departments had been given a preliminary list of names and available addresses at the beginning of the semester. Although that list is now outdated, Teegarden said it has helped to ease the situation somewhat.

Meanwhile, at the Moulton Union information desk, which has the most up-to-date listing, the phone rings over 300 times a day for receptionist Lorie MacKenzie. The majority of requests are for student numbers, but MacKenzie said it is rarely no trouble.

"I believe that children are the future..."

Zeta Psi fraternity members take stock in this statement sung by Whitney Houston on local television stations. The house sponsors an underprivileged child in the Appalachian Mountains through the Save the Children Foundation.

The child, David Payne, lives in West Virginia. Zeta Psi sends $50 per month to contribute to David's food, clothing, shelter and education. In return for their sponsorship, house members receive photographs and progress reports on the child. His parents are unemployed.

According to Zeta Psi President Valentine Foti '89, the house recently raised $225 for David during a Halloween "candygram operation" held at the end of October. The fraternity also sends frequent letters and gifts to their sponsor child.

Foti also said David may be in for a surprise in the near future. "We've got a couple of guys who live in the area who might visit him," said Foti.

RED CROSS BLOOD DRIVE

Bowdoin College will be sponsoring a blood drive on November 19, 1987 from 3-9 p.m. in Sargent Gym

For information contact
Andy Bernstein at 725-4892

BE A TURKEY AND DON'T CHICKEN OUT BEFORE GIVING BLOOD
THANKS FOR GIVING

The IFC will be sponsoring the 1987 College Bowl on Thursday, Dec. 3. Pictured here with Dean Lewallen (left) are, two members of last year's championship team, Ian Hockenberger '89 and Steve Janas '88, along with IFC President Scott Milo and Valentine Foti '89, president of Zeta Psi. Anyone interested in fielding a three-person team can call Foti at x3930. The cost is $20 per team and open to the college community. Prizes to be announced. Photo by Alan Harris.

Forum

(Continued from page one)

ance was brought to focus in discussing the advantages of such a center.

According to the students present, the center would allow the student body a place to "hang out", i.e., study, watch t.v., read the paper or grab a bite to eat. The building would also serve as a center for all student activities - centralizing the various organizations on campus. Suggested was the installation of an informational screen which would inform students of all happenings on campus.

Those present repeatedly stressed the need for a building devoted exclusively to students. "The library is the closest thing we have to a student center right now," a student said. The Moulton Union, it was argued, is not a student center. "No one hangs out at the Union." The reasons given for this were the darkness and formal atmosphere which are not conducive to studying or socializing.

The importance of aesthetics was discussed. Every student agreed that care should be taken to design both the exterior and interior carefully. The students do not want dark enclosed areas. Pastels and open space are what is desired.

After five years of discussion, active planning for a student center has been spurred on by the space now available. The Farley Field House has left the Hyde Cage/Curtis Pool area open to other possibilities. Sometime before Christmas, Saratoga Associates, campus planners and architects, will be visiting the campus to go over ideas and perhaps lay down some plans.

The issue of capital is a large one. At this time the college is campaigning for many funds - including funds for the construction of the new science complex.

The student center was described repeatedly as something the Bowdoin campus desperately needs. Warren pointed to the fact that only twelve students attended the forum. It was argued that the weak attendance was further indication of the desperate need of a student center. With a student center students would know what was going on and where it was taking place. This, it was stated, would lead to greater involvement in all areas of campus life.

The forum provided the administration with the information they were seeking.

"A lot of good ideas have come out of tonight's discussion. We'll take you seriously and do the best we can," Herter said.

Weekly Safety Tip

LOCK YOUR DOORS!

Yes, Bowdoin is a safe place to be and your good "security habits" can help keep it that way. You should know that when theft occurs it is primarily accomplished in unlocked areas. These are crimes of opportunity: remove the opportunity and you remove most of the crime. More importantly, you will avoid having to deal with the upsetting circumstance of having cash, jewelry, photographic or electronic equipment stolen.

Now and again "strangers" may walk through residential areas looking for unlocked/ajar doors. If you are unsure of why someone is in the corridor of your dormitory or fraternity, approach the person and ask, "Can I help you?" Because most people will have a legitimate purpose, this non-confrontational approach will be received with appreciation. If the response you receive does not "add up" call Security as soon as possible and have one of our officers check the area. You may prevent one of your neighbors from being the victim of a theft.

Chapel Talk

(Continued from page one)

during class times, we'd stop that too," he said.

Although the Chapel Talks are not compulsory, as other events can be to members of certain student activity groups, Nyhus said the talks "can appear compelling if not compulsory."

The issue of activity meetings during class times may become moot next year if the faculty approves a proposed scheduling format that will have classes starting on every hour during the academic day.

"We've been fairly old-fashioned" in the current schedule format of morning classes, a lunch period, and afternoon classes, Nyhus said.

"We would assume that different groups would still have lunch meetings," if the proposed format is approved, Nyhus said.

TYPISTS - Hundreds weekly at home! Write: P.O. Box 17 Clark, New Jersey 07066

Best looking sweater price in town

Make tracks for our great wool ski sweater layered with horizontal patterns. It's a beauty! Sizes S, M, L, XL. Sold elsewhere: $45.00. OUR PRICE

$19.99

Our new sweater collection only looks expensive. No one will guess how little you paid! Come in now and get the jump on the hottest looks of the season.

CANTERBURY

FINE MEN'S AND WOMEN'S APPAREL
Monday thru Saturday 9:30 to 9:00
Cooks Corner Shopping Center, Brunswick

STOWE TRAVEL

MID COAST MAINE'S MOST COMPLETE TRAVEL AGENCY
A TRAVELERS NATIONAL NETWORK AGENTS
GROUP TRAVEL SPECIALISTS • BUSINESS ACCOUNTS
INCENTIVE TRAVEL • CRUISES • AMTRAK • AIRLINES
VCR CASSETTE TRAVEL LIBRARY • VALUATION PACKAGES
GREYHOUND • WESTERN UNION
$150,000 AUTOMATIC FLIGHT INSURANCE

"ALL SERVICES AT NO EXTRA COST"

725-5573

8:30 - 5:30 DAILY
9 - 2 SAT. (SUMMER)
9 - 4 SAT. (WINTER)

9 PLEASANT ST. BRUNSWICK

Call toll free in Maine 1-800-522-9990

DR. WILLIAM R. OUELLETTE DR. BRIAN L. DANIELS OPTOMETRISTS

Eye Examinations Optical Services

Specializing in Contact Lenses

Pleasant Street Professional Building
53 Pleasant Street, Brunswick
Telephone 725-2161

KRISTINA'S BAKERY RESTAURANT

Everyone's favorite for Breakfast,
Lunch & Dinner

Deliciously different menus
Delectable pastries
Friendly atmosphere
Outdoor dining in Summer
Fine wines, beers, specialty coffees
Cocktails

Open 7 days a week
at the corner of
Center & High St.
Bath, Maine 04530
(207) 442-8577

A Likely Yarn
90 UNION STREET
BRUNSWICK, ME 04011
(207) 725-2147

Coming Workshops
Saturdays 9 - 12:

Nov. 28 - Finishing Techniques

Dec. 5 - Two-color Knitting

Dec. 12 - Christmas Decorations

call for details and sign up!

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Foreign films:

An unusual resource

LIZZ MILLAN
ORIENT Asst. Entertainment
Editor

Films, films and more films. If you're looking for an interesting alternative to a Sunday afternoon in the library, look no further. Every Sunday at 3:00, the Language Media Center presents a foreign film in Smith Auditorium.

The Foreign Film Series is now in its second season. Czech, Polish, Italian, Russian, German, Spanish as well as many other languages are all represented among the center's collection of 500 videos.

"The videos were purchased for use by the upper level language courses, the series allows students not taking a language to enjoy them as well," director of the center, Carmen Greenlee said.

There is a different type of movie shown each week. "We show the more offbeat selections. All of the videos are shown with subtitles," Greenlee said.

The series has attracted a wide range of viewers. Because the selections shown are not widely available in the area, people come all the way from Portland and Augusta to view the movies. However, there has been a lack of student interest. "We really encourage students to come. Those who come are mainly faculty and staff," Greenlee said.

One problem going along with the lack of interest is that of space. "Although the Foreign Film Series is important, it doesn't seem fair to occupy a facility which is in such high demand to accommodate so few people. We may begin showing the movies in the language media center instead," Greenlee said. The Language Media Center does not offer the sound nor viewing quality provided in Smith Auditorium.

"We'll just have to see what the traffic is like for the rest of the semester," said Greenlee.

Perhaps this Sunday's feature, "Ivan the Terrible," will increase traffic. Described by Greenlee as "a very important Russian film," Sergei Eisenstein's creation definitely provides a look into the culture and history of Russia. It was originally conceived as a three part epic about the life and time of Ivan IV, the 16th century ruler who first unified Russia. It has been described as a stunning portrayal of the pomp and politics of Russia in the late Middle Ages.

Part I of the film was produced in the very shaky year of 1945. Although production commenced in April 1943, the filming was temporarily halted by Nazi bombardment of Moscow and was not completed until December, 1944.

Encouraged by the success of part I, Eisenstein immediately began shooting Part II in February, 1945. Banned by the Central Committee of the Communist Party, it was not released until 1958. Part II will be shown on Sunday, November 22.

This film, as well as the others shown every Sunday allow the viewer to experience the culture and history of another era and another country.

Also supported by the Language Media Center in conjunction with Herbert Cusen, professor of English, is the Shakespeare Film Series. These BBC Shakespeare videos are shown in Smith on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 7:30 p.m.

Although the movies are geared towards those enrolled in the various Shakespeare courses, any student may attend. The shows are also open to members of the community. These movies will be shown throughout the year.

Starting next semester, there may be yet another alternative - a "Great Plays Series."

"We have so many plays by such artists as O'Neil and Shakespeare, and also so many great French and German plays; we would like to make them more available to the students," Greenlee said.

A problem with some of the foreign plays, however, is that they are not subtitled. This would greatly limit the number of students to whom the movies would appeal.

With or without a "Great Plays Series," the Language Media Center has worked hard to expose students to a great variety of films. These films are interesting and insightful—offering something out of the ordinary.

Calendar

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 13

7:00 p.m. — Lecture. "Feeling and Reason in the Arts." David Best, department of philosophy, University College, Swansea, Wales, and author. Beam Classroom.

7:30 and 10:00 p.m. — Weekly Weekend Films. Paris, Texas. $1 admission. Smith Auditorium.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 14

7:30 and 10:00 p.m. — Weekly Weekend Films. Last Tango in Paris. $1 admission. Smith Auditorium.

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 15

3:00 p.m. — Foreign Film Series. Ivan the Terrible (Part I). Musical score by Sergei Prokofiev. Smith Auditorium.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 16

7:30 p.m. — Lecture. "The Value of the Agricultural Landscape: A Swedish Example," about the Swedish approach to food production, recreation and open space. Lars Drake, a research leader in alternative agriculture at the Swedish University of Agricultural Sciences. Beam Classroom. He will speak at lunch the same day in Mitchell East, C.T.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 18

7:30 p.m. — Faust Film Series. Mephisto, based on the Klaus Mann novel. Smith Auditorium.

7:30 p.m. — The Los Angeles Piano Quartet will perform. Kresge Auditorium. Admission is free with a Bowdoin I.D., $7 to general public.

1:00 p.m. — Gallery Talk. "American Icons: Gilbert Stuart's Portraits of Jefferson and Madison," by John W. Coffey, curator.

UPCOMING EVENTS:

Benefit concert to kick off Maine Hunger Week. Featuring Tom Rush, Jonathan Edwards, Cheryl Wheeler & David Bromberg. Friday, November 20, Portland and City Hall Auditorium at 8 p.m. Tickets at all Ticketron outlets, or call 236-9643.

The Portland String Quartet will perform Beethoven, Chadwick, and Debussy. Friday, November 20, Immanuel Baptist Church, High St., Portland, at 8 p.m. Call 761-1522.

Island Interior; Upstairs

An exhibition of interiors, landscapes, and monotypes by Cushing artist Libby Wohler will be on display through December 30 in the Lancaster Lounge, Moulton Union.

Wohler, who moved to Maine from Ohio in 1975, has painted landscapes, cityscapes, and sea themes since childhood. She recently turned to interiors, which were inspired by the houses in which she stayed during annual visits to Maine's islands.

Her works have been exhibited in the Portland Museum of Art and the Farnsworth Museum in Rockland. She has also shown her works in art galleries in Augusta, Bath, Rockland, Rockport, and Wiscasset.

The exhibit is open daily from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

We're Fighting For Your Life.

American Heart
Association

Peggy's Typing Service

443-1267

Fast. Accurate. Reliable!
Affordable Rates!

Wreath out and touch someone.

All Wreaths
can be shipped by us.

Order
EARLY.

Fresh Balsam Wreath - $15.00
Escallop Wreath - our most popular aromatic wreath
Everlasting Wreath - Generously made with an intricate blend of dried flowers. $21.50 - $38.50 - $45.00
Grape Vine Wreath - Natural grape vine with a spray of dried flowers and shimmering bery. Different sizes.
Christmas Wreath - Handcrafted of German station cones and different shades of ribbon for the holidays or year-round. $28.50
Cone Wreath - Different sizes

Arrangements for Thanksgiving, Christmas

Balloon Bouquets & Fruit Baskets

Pauline's Bloomers

Tontine Mall, Brunswick

Kidura

To order call: 725-5982

Major credit cards accepted

FRATERNITY REVIEW

The Committee to Review Fraternities will be holding meetings on campus on November 19 and 20. The meetings will be held in Kresge Auditorium at 7:00 p.m. An Additional Meeting will be scheduled for Saturday if necessary.

The Committee will receive statements regarding the current review of fraternities. Anyone who would like to speak is asked to contact Elizabeth Pierson, Committee Staff Person at 729-4473 in advance. Anyone who is unable to attend the meeting is invited to submit a written statement to:

Elizabeth Pierson

c/o Hawthorne Longfellow Hall

Bowdoin College

Brunswick, ME 04011

The Los Angeles Piano Quartet will perform Wednesday, November 18, at 7:30 p.m. in Kresge Auditorium, V.A.C. The program features Mozart's Piano Quartet in E-flat major and two works by Johannes Brahms, the Quartet in C minor and the Quartet in A Major.

Formed in 1977 with the express encouragement of Neville Marriner, the Quartet has established itself as a major force on the American chamber music scene.

The members of the group are pianist James Bonn, violinist Joseph Genualdi, violist Ronald Copes, and cellist Peter Rejto.

This is the fourth performance in the 1987-88 Bowdoin College Concert Series, which will resume in January with Calliope: A Renaissance Band.

BIG RED Q PRINTING

next to the College

- stationery
- resumes
- posters
- newsletters

212E Maine Street
Brunswick
729-4840

An interview with

Irish poet Eavan Boland

Seated in two herculon arm chairs are William Waterson and Eavan Boland. It's the Friday afternoon of Parents' Weekend and their poetry reading in the Chase Barn has attracted a large crowd—a few people unable to shove their way into the cramped second floor room sit in the stairwell listening to the reading. Boland reads first, selecting poems from her most recent book The Journey and Other Poems and a folder of unpublished works. Her presentation, quickly paced and informal, ends within twenty minutes. Waterson follows with an equally brief selection of unpublished poems.

An understated affair, the reading featured a prominent Irish and Feminist contemporary poet currently teaching a creative writing workshop at Bowdoin this semester—Eavan Boland.

Although her name is far from familiar to the United States' public—as is the case with ninety-nine percent of today's poets—among poetry circles she is highly regarded. Northwest Review (a scholarly journal of current fiction and poetry) assistant Editor, Amy Klaute, writes, "Against the fiercely heroic tradition of Irish national poetry, a number of women are expressing a new perspective which is at once personal and political. Foremost among these writers is Eavan Boland."

Boland's poetry draws heavily from personal experience, distinct childhood memories construct the basis for several poems in The Journey, and is written from a first person perspective. Relating a first encounter with art—her mother painted—Boland writes in "I Remember":

I remember the way the big windows washed / out the room and the winter darks tinted / it and how, in the brute quiet and aftermath, / an eyebrow waited helplessly to be composed...

The celebration of the ordinary woman and the dismissal of female stereotypes is major theme for Boland. When the speaker of "The Journey", accompanied with Sappho, travels outside the gates of Troy after the city's defeat, the pair finds a scene representing women throughout history. Devoid of extreme classifications and cataloging, "Do not define these women...as washerwomen...nor as court ladies", it is a collection of the ordinary and maternal woman:

...These are the women who went out like you / when dusk became a dark sweet with leaves, / recovering the day, stooping, picking up / teddy bears and rag dolls and tricycles and buckets—

A short biography: Although Boland was born in Dublin in 1944, much of her childhood was spent outside of Ireland—her father was diplomat and her mother a painter—in London and New York. Her poetry collections are The War Horse (1975), In Her Own Image (1980), Night Feed (1982), and The Journey (1986). She teaches a creative writing workshop at Bowdoin this semester.

The following interview took place in Boland's faculty office. The responses did not present themselves as spontaneous or digressive. Boland would succinctly answer the question and then await the next.

On her childhood outside of Ireland:

"It always gave me a little bit of outsiderism. I missed an important decade of Irish history. Yet it also gave me a strong sense of what I valued there."

Irish literary tradition and the role of women:

"It's the literature of a defeated people. The defeat has entered into literature so that "their" defeat is customary...Women are idealized and Irish poetry has an unpleasant amount of simplification. There is a danger of simplification of women inside and outside of poetry."

Feminism and poetry:

"I'm a feminist but I'm not a Feminist poet. I don't think you can have a feminist poet. As one may say, it's as much a contradiction as a Marxist poet. Feminism helped me appreciate the blessings of being a poet with confidence but it stopped short of the gate. I'm a human being or nothing. When I write a poem, I'm a human being. Feminism is a necessary political drive but it doesn't work as a poetic philosophy."

On voices and silences:

"I feel close as a poet to the South American writers' view as seeing their culture as a series of voices surrounded by silences; they are the end of the line. I have a bit of a tribal sense of voice...silences exist within me and I pay just as much attention to silences as voices."

Britain and Ireland:

"I'm not in the least bit nationalistic. The tragedy of our country has never been the British killing the Irish. We all resent them, but the real tragedy has been the Irish killing the Irish."

Theme of "ordinariness":

"It's an important area in the writing of poetry. It's highlighted because women are often devalued and called ordinary—raising children, all the routines go with that. Those things aren't valued by a society and are referred to as ordinary. They seem to me most poetic themes people might think most ordinary and I always want to be clear in my poetry that I stand by them."

Modern poems and verse construction: "Modern poets go to the supermarket. I have a conservative technical formation and I have learned to go to the supermarket too."

Workshops and the question, "Can creative writing be taught?":

"Not at all. All creative workshops can offer is oxygen. In a workshop people already writing (Continued on page six)

Alex Chilton: Bubblegum rocker to High Priest

LARRY GLENN
ORIENT Staff

Alex Chilton: High Priest

Alex Chilton is one of those seminal types that you hear about all the time, but have never actually listened to. This summer the Replacements had a hit with their little tribute to him titled, aptly enough, "Alex Chilton."

He's been around for eons. In the sixties, he sang in the Boxtops, a bubblegum soul band that had big hits with "The Letter" (you know, "gimme a ticket for an aeroplane, ain't got the time to take a fast train, lonely days are gone..."), and "Cry

Like a Baby." After that band disintegrated amidst a sea of weak follow-up singles and drug problems, Chilton formed Big Star in 1971, a fairly minimal rock and roll band which was largely ignored at the time but came to be very instrumental in the development of New Wave, due to their early rejection of the overblown "progressive rock" sound (i.e. Jethro Tull) of the day. Big Star, too, dissolved amidst a sea of drug problems etc. etc.

By the late seventies, Chilton was being rediscovered by the underground and, between serious bouts with drug abuse, managed to put out a few fairly incoherent solo albums, and do some brilliant production work for the likes of the Cramps and, later on, the Replacements. In the last couple of years, he's managed to clean up his act and start to put out some of the best stuff of his career, such as last year's ode to the age of AIDS, "No Sex", in which he advises us that "pretty soon we're going to get it, so let's go out and get some stuff on credit."

O.K. so now you can talk about Alex Chilton at parties.

On to the album at hand. Wooowee. Great stuff. It's mostly a mixture of sixties r&b, memphis soul, and fifties rock and roll, with a little touch of Motown. From the opening track, "Take It Off," a funky little ditty about getting rid of nasty stuff like fake eyelashes—"I know you bought them on sale"—to the last song, a screaming instrumental that sort of sounds like Hank Williams doing the theme song to Sanford and Son...sort of.

This album's like taking a guided tour of the world of pop music, going just a little too fast and always looking about 45 degrees away from what the tourguide's pointing at. That's the best analogy I can think of. I mean, this is not a normal record. Chilton sings about things like the Dalai Lama's palace in "Dalai Lama"—"a thousand rooms in a thousand colors, he had a far out decorator"—and does a cover of "Volare" that probably has every pink ruffled tuxedo-wielding lounge singer in America chasing him with baseball bats and car antennas. There's also some real nice sort-of-love-songs, touching stuff like "Come by Here", and "(I've Got a) Thing for You." What more can I say? This is a fantastic album. Buy it.

You'll love it. It's well worth the eight bucks.

NEED TO DOCTOR YOUR
MCAT SCORE?

If your MCAT score needs a shot in the arm, come to the experts in test preparation—Stanley H. Kaplan.

Our test-taking techniques and educational review will help you be in top condition test day. We'll not only sharpen your scientific knowledge, but your reading, problem-solving, and essay-writing skills too.

Summer courses are registering now. So call the best in test prep—Kaplan. And get an MCAT score that you deserve.

EKAPLAN
STANLEY H. KAPLAN EDUCATIONAL CENTER, LTD.

DON'T COMPETE WITH
A KAPLAN STUDENT—BE ONE

3 out of 5 pre-meds take Kaplan - shouldn't you?
Bowdoin class starts 1/24.
Reserve your place.
Call collect (617) 964-TEST

Irish poet

(Continued from page five)
can approach their work with more confidence. Self criticism is a sustaining atmosphere—those are the circumstances under which people often improve because they get the confidence to fail with grace.”

The institutionalized poet in America:

“I grew up in the sixties as a young poet and saw the residue of real poverty in real poets, and I have promised myself after that, that I would never make a glib judgement about the way poets are sustained in communities. There are a number of wonderful American poets today and they have really lived as a poet with more dignity than most other poets in other countries.”

The ivory tower poets:
“I think what they miss, their poetry, they re-enter community on written page and that's all that matters.”

Bowdoin and her teaching:
I'm enormously pleased at Bowdoin. It gives me a chance to look around a bit and I love teaching here.

Deconstruction:
“I have always had trouble with the prevailing critical methods of the day. I respect the people who use deconstruction but I couldn't do it. It's obviously valuable and an important method and I don't like the ridicule or rejection of these methods.”

Audience expectations:

“Feminist, nationalist, or whatever, a poet has to be careful not to practice the art of reassurance. Giving the audience what they expect—it can become very corrupt.”

Contemporary poetry:

“Contemporary poetry has a lot of the problems of the century's sustaining belief in the importance of art but it all comes down in the end to doing work you can do in the time you can. The business of poetry is to write good poems.”

Psychological and social forces upon the individual:

“They're something I look at a distance with fear. Concepts of material, of individual, and the presence of self is always a difficulty. My sense of self is unhistorical and unphilosophical. It's just day to day, hand to mouth, sense of being alive.”

—S. Reynolds

BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed

Dressmaking - Tailoring
Alterations of all kinds
leather, suede, fur
Custom-made suits
11 Cedar St, Brunswick
M-F, 7 to 5; Sat, 7:30 to 12:30
725-5305

UNIQUE HOUSING OPPORTUNITY FOR FEMALE BOWDOIN STUDENTS

Rooms in beautiful, newly renovated lovely Colonial home very near campus. Bedrooms have charming antique pine and oak bureaus and desks, new oak beds, and large closets. Share 3 all-new stylish tile baths and lovely new contemporary kitchen with new appliances, new cabinetry, cathedral ceiling. Refinished pumpkin pine floors; natural refinished doors. Spacious, quiet and clean. Large rooms offered double occupancy, $900.00 per semester plus security deposit. All utilities included. Especially charming space for a few particularly discerning students. This is not a place for parties, etc! Care to take a look?
Call Mr. Boudette 729-7577
or please leave a message at 729-8616

Why do you suppose they call it a "Wolff Whistle?"

Today more and more people are turning to indoor tanning for a healthy, attractive look. And the name they turn to most often is SCA Wolff System. With the patented Wolff System you can tan as much or as little as you like. It only takes a few 20-minute sessions to look your best. And you can keep your tan all year around. So for the look that's getting the look, just give us a whistle.

Right now 10 sessions are just $90.

COME IN FOR A FREE TANNING SESSION. ENTER OUR DRAWING FOR 6 MONTHS OF UNLIMITED TANNING.

SUNDAYZ, INC.
32 TURNER ST.
(OFF PLASANT ST., BEHIND BIG APPLE)
BRUNSWICK 725-3383

Soar to great heights at the

BANK OF BOSTON

“A Career Opportunities Presentation”

Tuesday, November 17, 1987
Moulton Union
Main Lounge
7:00 - 8:30 p. m.

SPORTS

Women's soccer cruises to NIAC title

TONY JACCARI
ORIENT Staff

There was celebration in the air last Sunday as the women's varsity soccer team soundly beat Williams College by a score of 4-1 to win the Northeast Intercollegiate Athletic Conference women's soccer title.

The victory earned the team its fifth NIAC title in seven seasons. Bowdoin had advanced to the championship by shutting out Amherst, 4-0, while Williams had knocked off Connecticut College by the score of 1-0. Coach John Cullen felt that the reason the Polar Bears won the title was the black and white's superior athletic ability.

Bowdoin began the weekend on Saturday with a 4-0 shutout against Amherst. The Bears were a bit tentative in the first half, and it reflected in their play as both teams seemed to be scrambling for control of the ball. Bowdoin scored the lone goal 33 minutes into the first half on a heads-up play by Jen Russell. Bowdoin was given an indirect kick inside the Amherst 18 and while the Amherst defenders were lost in the confusion of the call, Russell placed the ball down and passed it to Tiffany Poor. Poor was wide open and slammed the ball past the unprepared net minder. The half ended with Bowdoin in the lead by a score of 1-0.

The Polar Bears overcame their first half nervousness and stormed into the second half. The freshman tandem of Sarah Russell and Christine Neill combined for the second Bowdoin goal only a minute into the half. Russell dribbled down the left hand side of the field and after turning the corner, layed a short pass back to Neill who put the ball into the left hand corner of the net.

Sarah Russell scored the third goal 20 minutes into the half on what coach Cullen called "the prettiest goal of the season." Jen Russell crossed the ball to the 18 where younger sister, Sarah, hit a flying side volley into the left hand side of the goal. As Cullen stated "It was a big league play." Booka Smith finished off the scoring for Bowdoin as she took advantage of a rebound from a Sue Ingram shot and sent the ball home. As the game ended, things were looking up for the Bears. Bowdoin had thrashed Amherst, 4-0, while Williams had squeaked by Connecticut College by the score of 1-0.

The Polar Bears did not lose their intensity as they continued with strong, aggressive play against Williams the following day. It took Bowdoin 15 minutes to get on the scoreboard as Karen Crehore took a cross from Jen Russell in front of the William's net. Crehore trapped the ball and as the goalie rushed out, Crehore quickly chipped the ball over her head for the lead.

Jen Russell also assisted on the second goal at 20 minutes into the first half as she played a back pass to Booka Smith at the 35. Smith took a long shot that sunk into the upper right hand corner of the Williams goal. Williams had its closest chance to making it a close game several minutes before the half when a Williams forward broke past goalie Melanie Koza, but she hit the post in the ensuing shot. Going into the half, Bowdoin was clearly the dominant team. Although Williams outshot the Bears on the day, Bowdoin was taking the quality shot.

Eight minutes into the second half, Christine Neill scored the third goal as she scrambled after a rebound from a Jen Russell shot and put it into the open net. The goal made Neill's total 18 on the season. 18 goals ties the record for the most goals scored in a season which Neill now shares with Jill Bermanham who set the record in 1984.

Sarah Russell finished off the Bowdoin scoring on the day as Karla Brock sent a through ball to Russell who dribbled through three hapless defenders and then shot the ball past the William's goalie. Williams scored one goal with 10 minutes left in the game on a direct kick. However, at this point in the game, the game was Bowdoin's. The final score was Bowdoin 4, Williams 1.

The Polar Bears were playing in top form last weekend as they thoroughly dominated both Amherst and Williams. Cullen feels that the team really improved towards the end of the season as the Bears faced their toughest competition. He stated that the games Bowdoin played from Plymouth State until last Sunday's victory were "5 of the 6 best efforts of the year." Bowdoin will definitely miss the leadership (Continued on page nine)

Bowdoin fullback Booka Smith clears the ball from the defensive zone in NIAC tourney play. Photo by Lori Bodwell

The women's cross country team is shown here with the plaque received for their third place finish in the ECAC Championships. Photo by Lori Bodwell

Polar Bear magic beats Bobcats

ERIC PALMQUIST
ORIENT Staff

When Hollywood directors dream of scripts with dramatic last second endings, and formulate in their minds the obstacles their heroes must overcome, they would be wise to take a page from last weekend's game between Bowdoin and the Bobcats of Bates. When the smoke had cleared Bowdoin had come away with an amazing 20-19 victory that left the chilled crowd shaking their heads in disbelief.

Trailing, 19-14, the Bears inherited the ball after a crucial defensive stand on their own 36 yard line. Just three minutes remained. Standing in their way was a defense that had shut them out since the middle of the second quarter. With their backs to the wall, coach Howard Vandersee turned to the man that has carried the Polar Bears all year, tailback Gregg Bohannon.

Despite playing with a shoulder that had been separated in the first quarter, Gregg was up to the challenge. He took two handoffs from quarterback Ryan Stafford and turned them into 35 yards, putting the Polar Bears deep in Bates territory. But the Bobcat defense tightened, and Bowdoin found themselves faced with a fourth and five situation at the 31 yard line.

It was then that Stafford took over. He received the snap, rolled over, and turned upfield for seven yards and the first down. He was smacked out of bounds with a vicious hit, however, and had to leave the game. Things looked desperate, as there was just one minute remaining.

But after one play, Stafford returned, this time with the Bears on the 17 yard line. He faded back and zipped a pass into the end zone, where tight end Dods Hayden made a leaping catch to give Bowdoin the victory with just 43 seconds remaining.

In a game filled with fine performances it is hard to single out one player as making the difference. However, despite the shoulder injury Bohannon carried the Bears all day. He rushed for 184 yards, accounting for almost 60% of the Bowdoin offense while scoring their first two touchdowns. He is now just twelve yards shy of the thousand yard mark with one game left to play.

Defensively he was matched by nosetackle Ed Daft, who accounted for the winning margin by blocking an extra point attempt in the third quarter. He also helped the Bears hold Bobcat tailback Chris Hickey to only 96 yards, which broke his string of two consecutive 200 yard games, by recording ten tackles and a sack.

It was a team effort, however, as linebacker John Ollis racked up 14 tackles, while Ken McLaughlin and Sean Sanders each picked off a pass. McLaughlin now leads the team with four interceptions.

Bowdoin must solve some problems before traveling to Colby in an attempt to win the CBB for the third time in the last four years. They committed six fumbles against the Bobcats, and were lucky enough to recover five of them. The week before they lost four fumbles to Wesleyan. Though Colby has yet to win this year, the Bears have been burned twice this season by previously winless clubs, and CBB games, as proven by last week's contest, are always tough.

Bowdoin	7	7	0	6	—20
Bates	0	7	6	6	—19

	Bowdoin	Bates
first downs	16	13
yards-rushes	210-5	102-44
p-comp-int	19-7-0	20-12-2
total yards	316	257
yards passing	106	155
fumbles-lost	6-1	1-1
punts-avg.	8-29.8	7-37.6
penalties-yds	5-55	4-30

Bow—Bohannon 1yd. rush
Bow—Bohannon 6yd. rush
Bates—Garabedian 10 yd. pass from Gromelski
Bates—Lewis 74 yd. pass from Gromelski (kick failed)
Bates—Hickey 1yd. rush
Bow—Cavanaugh 17yd. pass from Stafford

Bowdoin Individual Statistics

	att	yds.	TD's
Rushing
Bohannon	28	184	2
Ledbury	3	12	0
	comp.	att	yds.	TD's
Passing
Stafford	7	19	106	1
	rec.	yds.	TD's
Receiving
Hayden	3	49	0
Cavanaugh	1	17	1
Sousa	1	20	0

Harriers shine in ECAC

KEVIN WESLEY
ORIENT Asst. Editor

For a team with five freshman runners in the top seven spots, a first-year coach, no seniors, and junior co-captains, the 1987 women's cross country squad has risen above their own expectations, with the chance to achieve national prominence both individually and as a team.

When first-year coach Peter Slovensky arrived at Bowdoin College this fall, he was unsure what the season would hold. "I knew Deanna (Hodgkin) was going to be one of the top runners in New England Division III, but as a team, it was hard to tell," he said yesterday.

Compiling a 14-8 dual meet record this year, Bowdoin proved worthy of notice, but the invitational meets have allowed the team to shine

Along with the positive win-loss record, Bowdoin has fared well at three meets against the top teams in New England. The runners placed second at the State Meet, and second at the New England Small College Athletic Conference (NESCAC) competition, the top showing ever by a Bowdoin team.

At both the NESCAC and ECAC meets, the team defeated state rivals Colby and Bates, while Hodgkin was named to the All-NESCAC Team when she placed 6th in that meet.

The peak came last weekend when, paced by three top 20 finishers, Bowdoin placed third out of 26 teams at the ECAC Cross Country Championships last weekend at Tufts University. It was the first (Continued on page nine)

Students devoted to the coaching experience

DAWN VANCE

ORIENT Asst. News Editor

Six Bowdoin students have devoted much time and effort to an ambitious endeavor this semester: the coaching of sports at the Brunswick Junior High School and high school level. These students include David Burnham '88, Jeff LaPlante '88, Dan McGovern '88, Ramsay Gifford '89, Christine Clements '89 and Elizabeth Sharp '90.

David Burnham has spent his fall coaching the Brunswick High School cross-country team. His career as a coach started last winter when, Burnham said, "Somebody I knew at the high school told me that they (the high school) needed an indoor track coach." Burnham served as assistant indoor and outdoor track coach last year and head cross-country coach this fall.

Burnham has himself spent a great deal of time running for teams. He spent four years in high school running outdoor track and three seasons here at Bowdoin running for the men's cross-country team.

Of his experience with coaching thus far Burnham said, "I've had a really good time - it's something I've always wanted to do...it's gone very well...we've had a successful team and that has helped."

Burnham assured that he has received favorable reactions from the students he has coached. One thing he has said that he has learned, however, is that, "You can't go out and try to be strict, authoritarian. You have to be a friend - you can't demand, you have to ask."

Burnham will continue on as assistant indoor and outdoor track coach.

Jeff LaPlante has just finished his third season coaching the Brunswick Junior High School football team. Dan McGovern has spent his second fall serving as LaPlante's assistant coach.

LaPlante first found out about the coaching position his sophomore year through Mary Rogers '86, who mentioned that the junior high was searching for a football coach. LaPlante said, "I heard Mary talking at lunch at T.D. and thought it was something that I would want to look into...they already had an assistant coach and were looking for a head coach...I went down there, talked to the principal, vice-principal and the athletic director about my experience with football and my interest in coaching...I got hired for the job...they needed somebody pretty quickly."

LaPlante recounted his first experience with coaching the junior high team. "Brunswick didn't have a youth program - the junior high is where they start. I took on a lot of responsibility where that was concerned, teaching them the fundamentals. I started with the basics...I had good athletes that year and had a pretty good season: 3-5-0 to start off," LaPlante said.

Although LaPlante says he made some mistakes that first season, he was still interested in coaching a second year and was rehired for the position. The second year his assistant coach had moved up to coach the freshman team at the high school so he found himself in need of an assistant. Dan McGovern popped into mind.

LaPlante said, "The first person I thought of was Dan...we'd talked a lot about football...he was interested, went down, went through the same process I had...and was hired as my assistant."

Remembering that first season together LaPlante said, "Danny handled the defense using the system he had learned from his high school years, I worked on the offense...It was a worse season as far as record - we were 2-6-0, but it went well for the type of talent we had...it was tough because a lot of the kids hadn't had exposure to organized sports before."

Dan McGovern said in reference to this first exposure to organized sports, "Six or seven of the teams we played all have youth programs, but Brunswick has no program...most of the kids had never played organized football before...it's tough - sometimes they're slow to learn."

McGovern continued, "We did a lot of basic drills and scrimmaging to get the team used to playing live, contact football...to give them the live experience."

Having completed his third year as the Brunswick Junior High School football coach LaPlante considered his last season his best. "We had good reports with the parents...teachers would come to see how things were going and to give words of encouragement to keep up the job we were doing. This year seemed to be the best although our record was 2-5-1," LaPlante said.

LaPlante continued, "We didn't just teach the kids football - we taught team effort and philosophies...goal setting...and we helped a lot of kids who had discipline problems and gradewise, too."

One of the important things LaPlante learned was how to develop a personal level with his football players. Of his first season LaPlante recalled, "It was kind of a neat thing...I thought to myself, 'I'm 19 years old and don't want these kids to call me Mr. LaPlante...I let them call me Jeff and that sort of put us on a personal level...but then it was difficult to maintain the difference between players and coach - the kids would sort of get carried away with the personal nature - respect and all that.'"

The next year LaPlante discussed the matter with McGovern and they decided to LaPlante said, "to swallow our ages...we told them that they were to call us 'Mister' or 'Coach'...that way the kids respect you as a coach. As long as you show them that you care about them and not just winning games the personal level comes along with it."

LaPlante says that he and McGovern worked hard at studying teamwork and the philosophies that go along with team sports. LaPlante said of these philosophies, "I wanted the kids to understand that they're all one team...they still had their little idiosyncrasies - 'I don't want to sit with you on the bus' - typical junior high school stuff...but the team did come together, there were no longer the same cliques - and that's gratifying right there."

In recalling the totality of his experience as a football coach at the junior high level LaPlante said, "I had a great time - that age group is neat - they were always coming up with excuses why they couldn't practice...it was gratifying for me working with that age group - I saw them improve in games and in their attitudes."

McGovern said of his time as assistant coach, "We had a lot of fun - both had a fantastic time. These kids are still young and you can make an impression...you can sort of get to be friends with the older, more mature kids - they will stop by to visit and just hang out...this is one of the most rewarding things

I've done at Bowdoin College in my four years here."

Perhaps one of the most important aspects of LaPlante's coaching experience was that it provided him with a good avenue to take for the future. LaPlante said, "That's the career field I'm taking, I'm getting certified in the spring (hopefully) as a secondary school teacher. I'm in-

"It was neat. We had four of us working with 35 kids and that made us a better coaching staff. We could help the kids more individually..."

Ramsay Gifford '89, Christine Clements '89 and Elizabeth Sharp '90 spent their fall coaching the Brunswick Junior High School field hockey team. Each of them applied separately for the position and terested in teaching, possibly at a private or prep school in New England, and this experience can do nothing but help me out in setting me up for a teaching job in the future."

Bowdoin's Jeff LaPlante spends his free time coaching Brunswick Junior High School's football team. Here he is shown assisting Coach Terry Meagher and the men's hockey team. Photo by Alan Harris.

LaPlante is currently working with Coach Meagher with the men's varsity hockey team to, "get a feeling for the college level coaching atmosphere and the administration part." He is helping Coach Meagher with practices and possibly he said, "some video, helping to break down the film of games."

LaPlante said of this endeavor, "I never would have proposed that I help him with the team unless I had these three years of experience."

Kevin Cloutier '90 and Bob Coen '90 may very well take over LaPlante's and McGovern's positions as junior high football coaches next fall. Both Cloutier and Coen volunteered their time in aiding LaPlante and McGovern with the team this season.

LaPlante said of their assistance, heard about it through different sources.

Gifford said her interest in coaching stemmed from her position as lacrosse coach at the junior high last spring. "I coached lacrosse and I loved that...I heard about field hockey through Denise Doiron and Andrea Rogers who knew I had done lacrosse."

Clements had heard about the position through Sue Graves '87 who refereed at the junior high last year. She herself had refereed a field hockey game at the junior high last fall.

Gifford said of her experience, "I got a lot of fun out of it...it was a hard age group, 7th and 8th graders, but they were neat girls...it was a good experience being in a position of authority...they looked up to you - you had to watch what you say and do."

Clements said in addition, "It was rewarding to see how much they improved and it was neat to think that you made an impression."

Ruggers nipped in tourney, 9-3

MATT SAMUELSON

ORIENT Staff

Well, 'ya win some and 'ya lose some. That's usually the case. However, this season the Bowdoin Rugby Football Club only lost one game and that was the last game of the three game New England Division II tournament held over Halloween weekend. After publicly shaming Bryant College in the first game of the tournament with a score of 13 to 4, the All-Blacks went on to maim and kill the ruggers of Framingham State College in traditional fashion ending up with the score of 12 to 0. The evil team was the Coast Guard Academy who just barely succeeded in defeating the Bowdoin ruggers by a score of 9 to 3.

Victory was granted to Coast Guard only after a long, bone-crushing struggle. In the first half, Coast Guard managed to slime away with a 3 point penalty kick against the All-Blacks. But it was not until late in the second half that Coast Guard actually scored a try and completed the conversion bringing their tally to a 9 point total. Also in the second half, Bowdoin completed a penalty kick bringing the score to 9-3, where it would stay for the rest of the competition.

With two minutes left in the game, Coast Guard feebly stumbled into their own try zone. The referee had the two choices of either ruling for a drop kick at the 22 meter mark or calling for a 5 meter scrum. Had the ref ruled for the 5 meter scrum, the game might have turned out in favor of Bowdoin. However, due to the twisted workings that all referee's minds are composed of, he called the 22-drop, and changed history forever.

Maiming and killing aside the rest in the pitted battle were Tim "Bam Bam" Jackson, Randy Finn at prop, and Sandy McClean at hooker. The competition was sick and, as usual, the All-Blacks were at peak performance level. Bowdoin Rugby president, Andy Palmer, commented that Bowdoin had the best pack, rugby-wise, in the tournament. Even the trounced Framingham State team admitted to that. Palmer conceded that Coast Guard managed to pull away with the championship because they were in better shape and faster than the average Bear in getting to the ruck and maul.

Throughout the entire fall season, the All-Blacks were only beaten once, and the two tries that were finally scored against them took place in the tournament. Palmer stated that, "Although the Coast Guard game was kind of a let down, being the second place team in New England isn't all that bad."

The Bowdoin Rugby Club has come quite a long way down a road that has only recently begun to be strewn with more and more bloodied corpses of opposing teams. Palmer commented, "When I started, people didn't know what first, second or third phase rugby was. Compared to then, there are no disciplinary problems now and everyone is serious about playing rugby."

Bowdoin's gridders prepare for a showdown with the dreaded Mules of Colby. The Polar Bears (4-3) need a win this Saturday to clinch the CBB title. Photo Asaf Farashuddin

Aquamen sink BU, 11-9

JON DEVINE
ORIENT Contributor

In water polo action this weekend, Bowdoin traveled to Harvard for the New England Division II Championships to take on some of the finest teams in the area. The Bears made an impressive showing against some tough competition, as they took one out of two of their games, defeating Boston University and narrowly losing to a powerful Williams team.

On Saturday night, Bowdoin squared off against Williams, and after falling behind 10-2 in the first half of play, fought back to a more than respectable 13-8 score, mounting a serious challenge to the highly-rated Williams squad.

In the consolation game on Sunday morning, the Bears locked up with a B.U. squad which was seeking revenge on the Bowdoin team that had beaten it only a week before. Bowdoin, however, was able to pull out an 11-9 fourth quarter victory, despite fielding only eight players for the game.

According to Water Polo Club president Rob Tisdale, the standouts over the weekend were Tom Francoeur "as usual", Bill Hall, Bob Paglione and Kevin Fitzpatrick, who "played outstanding defense" for the Bears.

This week's action helped to assure Bowdoin's hold on third place in New England Division II for the season, bringing their division record to 5-5 and their overall record to 7-5. Pleased with this performance, Tisdale stated, "We really pulled together this weekend, especially in the second game." The Polar Bears should be commended on a very successful season in their third year of existence.

Cross Country

(Continued from page seven)

time the Bowdoin women's team had run in the ECAC meet.

Pacing Bowdoin were freshman Marilyn Fredey and co-captain Hodgkin '89. Fredey, who placed seventh out of a field of 178 runners, and Hodgkin, 10th, were named to the All-ECAC team.

Adding to the Bowdoin showing was co-captain Rosie Dougherty, also a junior, who finished 19th.

Coach Slovensky has been impressed, with Fredey from the beginning, adding, "We haven't seen anywhere near the end of her potential."

"She has a lot of determination to run well," said Hodgkin.

Slovensky said Dougherty's improvement has been the greatest of the three this year. He said that while she had been running 50-60 seconds behind Fredey and Hodgkin all year, she narrowed that gap to 30 seconds last weekend.

Cross country awaits New England's

DAVE NUTE
ORIENT Staff

Twenty-six teams converged on Tufts University for the ECAC Division III Cross Country Championships last weekend. The Rochester Institute of Technology won the meet in which 175 runners participated. For the Bowdoin men's team, the meet was a building race in anticipation of next week's New England Division III Championships.

Bowdoin's number one runner, Tim Dillon, did not participate in the race, as he hopes to run well enough this weekend to qualify for national competition. Marty Malague finished first for Bowdoin in thirty-fourth place, with a time of 26:51.

Thirty-six seconds behind Malague was John Dougherty, who finished in fifty-second place.

Lance Hickey finished in fifty-sixth place, only two seconds behind Bowdoin's second man. Finishing the scoring for Bowdoin were Edward Beagan, 88th place, Ben Hale, 110th place, and James Anderson in 130th place.

In the overall scoring, Bowdoin finished eleventh with a team score of 311 points. Had the Bears run the entire team, they would have fared much better. Senior Colin Sweeney did not run due to illness, but he said, "We were not all running, but if we all had, the results would be much better. We're really looking forward to the Championships this weekend."

Coach Slovensky is very excited about the team's prospects for Saturday. "Since this race started in 1979, we've never placed in the top ten," he admits. "That is our goal-top ten."

Volleyball falls to Bates

TANYA WEINSTEIN
ORIENT Staff

The volleyball team played its final tournament of the season last Saturday. The team placed second in the Maine State Championships. Their final overall record stands at 16-13.

The tournament was hosted by the University of New England at SMVTI in Portland, and all of the Maine teams attended. Although Bates came in first place, Karen Andrew '90, Bowdoin's co-captain said "We played very well overall in the tournament."

In the first match, Bowdoin played against Thomas. They were able to beat Thomas in two games, 15-3 and 16-14. Coach Ruddy commented on the improvement of the team in that the second string players were able to beat Thomas' top players. This she said could not have happened a few weeks ago.

The next opposing team was the University of New England. Bowdoin lost the first game, 13-15, then was able to win the second game, 15-3. Dan Rush, the assistant coach, said, "In the third game we almost lost it. We were down, 12-14, and there was high pressure to win the next few points. We managed to come back and win, 16-14." Ruddy attributed this to the fact that the team was able to "hold together tally" and come out on top.

However, the team was unable to defeat Bates, the champion of the state tournament for the third year in a row. Bowdoin lost to Bates in two games, 11-15 and 6-15. Rush said "We gave Bates a good fight. In the first game we traded points all the way up, then they scored a couple of quick ones and went on to win the game."

Ruddy acknowledged that Bates is a good team. However, she felt that they are not as good as they have been in past years. She said, "Bates is not much more outstanding than we are...they didn't improve as much throughout the season as we did."

After the tournament, Michelle Melendez '91 and Jenny Wald '89 were named to the All-Tournament Team. Both members played extremely well. Andrew said, "Jenny played one of her best games. She was setting unbelievably."

Andrew and Abby Jealous '91 made the First Team All-State for their fine play throughout the season. Ruddy said that this was quite an honor, as "only 6 people out of 11 teams are selected." She commented that Andrew is the best athlete on the team, as well as an excellent captain.

Andrew felt that the season went well, despite the fact that

"earlier in the year we were inconsistent. We were having mental lapses, and we would fall apart and lose the game." She said that since then the team has been able to pull together. Rush agreed by saying "We've gained a lot of experience this year...the team shows more mental toughness now than there was earlier this season."

Ruddy said that strengthening the mental aspect of its game was one of the team's goals for the season and felt that it has been reached. She said that the team had a great season: "Our overall record is not overly impressive, but if you look at our schedule and the caliber of the teams we've played it is very significant." She was disappointed that the team was not selected to attend a regional tournament but is hopeful that the team will make it next year.

The members are confidently looking forward to the next season. Andrew said "We are only losing one senior next year and other people are returning from study abroad. We are going to be really good."

Coach Ruddy agreed, and added that the team is already twice as good as last year. She said that "If the entire team improves next year as much as it has this year, the future looks very bright."

Rugby

(Continued from page seven)

Because of this serious attitude, four senior Bowdoin rugbys were selected at the tournament for the New Zealand rugby tour in June. Vying for positions to partake in the madness are Andy Palmer, Randy Finn, Sandy McLean and Brian Feriso. This is an amazing opportunity for these guys for they will be competing against the New Zealand "Under 23's," the best New Zealand players under 23 years of age on the island and, perhaps the best rugbys in the universe.

Taking the proverbial torch from the graduation of seniors, Palmer, Finn, Feriso, Scott Erlenbourne, Scott Twitchel, Tim Devaney, McLean, Jim Savage and Jim Barton, are the newly elected officers of the club. Sophomore Joe "the Seal" McLean is president, sophomore Mark "Swanny" Swan is captain, freshman Mitch "Madman" Zuklie is treasurer, and freshman Greg "Earman" Linberg is vice-president. Also, the newly elected song master is Terrance

"Tumor" Rouse. This is good fire, no doubt about it.

As for the former president, Palmer stated with conviction that "...there is no doubt in my mind that I'll be playing rugby until I can no longer walk." Indeed only time will tell.

Co-captain Mark Smyth reminds us all that hockey season is fast approaching. Smyth will be a key figure in the Polar Bears' pursuit of the 1987-88 ECAC crown. Photo by Lori Bodwell of departing co-captains Nancy Delaney and Joanna Dewolf and senior Tiffany Poor. Cullen felt that these players made a commitment to the team that helped the entire team "play as a whole." With a plethora of players returning next year, however, the future of women's soccer still looks bright.

Soccer

(Continued from page seven)

Tontine Fine Candies

GOING HOME FOR THANKSGIVING?
IF NOT SENT THE FOLKS SOME "PETTIS FOURS" OR
A BOX OF THEIR SPECIAL CHOCOLATES. WE MAIL
ANYWHERE IN THE U.S.

We are in the Tontine Mall

CRUISE SHIPS NOW HIRING. M/F

Summer & Career Opportunities
(Will Train). Excellent pay plus
world travel. Hawaii, Bahamas,
Caribbean, etc. CALL NOW
206-736-0775 Ext.544F

Gateway to London and Beyond

ITHACA COLLEGE

London Center

- SEMESTER OR YEAR PROGRAM
- ITHACA COLLEGE CREDIT
- BRITISH FACULTY

Learn about British and European cultures through courses in literature, history, business, music, sociology, communications, politics, and much more. Special program offered in Drama.
Internships available to qualified students in international business services, communications, political science, and economics.
Visits to the theatre, museums, galleries, schools, social and political institutions are an integral part of the curriculum.

Applicants for Spring 1988

Please Call:
(807) 274-3308

OPINION

Review blues

On November 19 and 20 students will once again be given the opportunity to express their opinions on the subject of the fraternity review at forums to be held on campus expressly for this purpose. We urge all students to go to the meetings and let the administration know one way or another how they feel about the role fraternities play at Bowdoin and if or how that role should be modified. If not, you will have missed perhaps your last opportunity to air your views on the subject and will be left out of the decision-making process.

Fraternities are a major factor in determining, for good or evil, the shape of the campus and how the student body, fraternity members and independents alike, spend much of their time. The current review of the fraternity system, despite conflicting opinions and statements about its intent, means at least one thing: that those who plan to make any decisions about possible changes in the nature of the fraternity system at Bowdoin will have to listen to those who have to live with the consequences of these decisions: us.

Overseers, trustees, faculty and administration all have integral parts in determining what the college is and the direction it takes. This is, of course, as it should be. Students are here for only four years; it may well be that only after they are graduated and gone will they have time to reflect on the defining characteristics of the college and come to formulate an opinion of what makes Bowdoin special. This is the role that trustees and overseers serve; they do so well, and we thank them for their hard work and concern.

Faculty and overseers serve similar roles; while students are here for a few years, professors and administrators lend Bowdoin a continuity, a sameness over the years. We can come back to Bowdoin in a few years, and find the same academic and social characteristics that were here when we left, and that make Bowdoin a good school.

But, in the final analysis, we have to live here. The Bowdoin community stretches wherever Bowdoin alumni are, but the core is here in Brunswick, Maine. We make the school what it is now, and that also is as it should be. We have a right to determine the environment in which we live if we can, and so we have a duty to try.

The bottom line is that anyone who cares about the school should try and do what is best for it. That begins by articulating what is important about the school to those who make the decisions. If you don't the decision will be taken out of your hands, and you will have no one to blame for yourself.

LETTERS

Grammar

To the Editor:

In my role as Professor of English I would like to come to the defense of me in my role as President of the College. In your last issue, you quote me as saying that what matters is "the academics." The sentiment is right, but the language is not. The expression "the academics" is not good English—like "frats." I don't believe I used it. Language, after all, is for expressing ideas, and ideas matter so much that they deserve the best language. I think I said "the academic." There is a difference—diminishing rapidly perhaps, but still important to some of us.

Sincerely,
A. LeRoy Cresson

Attire

To the Editor:

As a former newspaper editor, I was disappointed in the puny response to my letter of October 23 in which I discussed the attire of female undergraduates. Some letters are sent to the editors in an effort to "stir the animals up" as Charles Anderson Dana (New York Sun) and Henry L. Mencken (Baltimore Sun) were wont to do. To have raised the hackles of but two of hundreds of Bowdoin coeds is an indication that I have lost my grip.

*Sic transit gloria mundi.

Cordially,
Alfred H. Fenton

*Loose translation: Gloria Mundi will have nothing to do with me.

Editor's note: "Sic transit gloria mundi" is translated from the Latin as "This passes away the glory of the world." It appears on the tomb of Sir Christopher Wren, St. Paul's Cathedral, London.

Exercise

To the Editor:

Your recent article and editorial concerning athletics at Bowdoin misrepresent my point of view. I do not suggest that exercise is the only role of athletics in a liberal arts setting, but rather that the role of athletics be moderated.

I must also disagree with your comments concerning what liberal arts "is about," and how your criteria apply to athletics. The first of these, "striving for excellence," is a characteristic that almost any educational institution, business, or organization would claim. A day spent in the music conservatory, for example, would provide convincing evidence that many outside the liberal arts context "strive for excellence." Therefore, though no one would deny its importance, this characteristic does not set liberal arts colleges apart, and could not be considered primary to its definition. And even if it were, the recent admissions report clearly shows that if many Bowdoin athletes were indeed striving, too many of them were also failing.

The second criterion, "personal self-enhancement," I assume from your discussion to be defined as "self-exploration" and "learning." It is not, however, the self that liberal arts should explore, but rather the world and how the self perceives the world; and it is not learning per se that distinguishes liberal arts, but rather, as Mr. Bok of Harvard reminds us, "learning how to learn." Although athletics may in some small way contribute to the achievement of these goals, they have not contributed enough to merit either course credit or a place among the distribution requirements.

Finally I must take issue with your comparison of athletics to the performing arts, as two "sides" of the same "self." Many elements of varsity sports—discipline, practice, quick adaptability, and teamwork—are indeed also aspects of the performing arts, but the performing arts demand much more: interpretive skills, historical and cultural knowledge, and esthetic sensitivity. A well-played game of lacrosse requires much less understanding of Native American culture than a good performance of a spiritual requires of Black American culture, just as Abner Doubleday is not to the first baseman what Shakespeare is to the actor. Your comparison also implies a parity of participation between the performing arts and athletics at Bowdoin, as if Joe Jock shows after practice and hops off to ballet class. In truth, the artistically inclined, competitive athlete is rare (there are three or four in our chamber choir of twenty-eight), and the ratio of athletes to performing artists at Bowdoin needs no comment (the few artists we do see at Bowdoin are a wonderfully hardy, tenacious and talented lot).

Do not interpret my remarks as the complaint of a snob—one of my favorite pastimes is following college football. I do not wish to see organized athletics removed from the liberal arts experience. I wish instead to see a more balanced liberal arts experience, one that benefits from greater diversity of interests, backgrounds, and talents. Moreover, I wish to see a college newspaper that does not sak for comment merely to create, through misquotation and misrepresentation, a convenient cardboard figure to knock down.

Sincerely,
Robert Greenlee

Editorial policy dictates that no letters to the editor will be printed unless signed. Also, a phone number must be included so the accuracy of all letters may be confirmed.

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

"The College exercises no control over the content of the student writings contained herein and neither it, nor the Administration, nor the faculty assume any responsibility for the views expressed herein."

Lori Bodwell...Editor in Chief

Kevin Wesley...Assistant Editor
Adam Najberg...News Editor
Rosemarie Dougherty...Assoc. News Editor

Tamara Dassanayake...Asst. News Editor
Eric Foushee...Business Manager
Alan Harris...Photography Editor
Mary Ann Lal...Photography Editor
Liz Millan...Asst. Entertainment Editor

Michael Botelho...Sports Editor
Jack Cahill...Editorials Editor
Susan Lyons...Contributing Editor

Kathryn Nanovic...Production Manager
Justin Priesendorf...Asst. Sports Editor
Stephen Reynolds...Features Editor
Sharon Smart...Entertainment Editor
Michael Townsend...Advertising Manager

Dawn Vance...Asst. News Editor

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

Published by

THE BOWDOIN PUBLISHING COMPANY

LORI M. BODWELL ERIC F. FOUSHEE
ALBERT P. MAURO, JR.

Published weekly when classes are held during the Fall and Spring semester by the students of Bowdoin College. Address editorial communication to the Editor, subscription communication to the circulation manager, and business correspondence to the business manager at The Bowdoin Orient, 12 Cleveland Street, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011, or telephone (207) 725-3300. The Bowdoin Orient reserves the right to edit any and all articles and letters. Subscriptions are $15.00 per year or $8.00 per semester. Past issues cannot be mailed.

POSTMASTER: Send address changes to The Bowdoin Orient, Moulton Union, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011.

Adam Najberg

Faculty should come out of wings

I came to college to become an educated human being. I've always thought learning meant more than four hours of classroom time and countless hours of homework and memorization. Maybe I'm wrong.

I can learn a great deal in the classroom, but learning does not end in that sheltered environment. Likewise, I can learn a great deal from my professors, but their contribution to my education should not end at 3 p.m. each day.

Too many professors pack up their briefcases at 3 p.m., not to be seen until office hours or the next class roll around. This is tragic, as they are depriving Bowdoin students of so much knowledge they have to share with them.

Professors have family lives. They are "real people." I understand this. What I don't understand is why a family life precludes a professor from contributing some of his time to the students outside of the classroom.

Not all professors shut themselves out to the needs of their students. However, it seems as though the same faculty members are always participating in student-organized activities.

It is a pity that only a handful of faculty members really take stock in the "whole student." They recognize that the classroom is a means rather than an end to an educated student.

I came to Bowdoin mainly because of its faculty. I am constantly awed by the depth of knowledge of each and every professor. I respect those professors who teach me four or five hours per week and patiently answer even the most asinine questions I throw at them.

I appreciate their dedication to teaching. However, I feel I am not getting enough out of their wide scope of knowledge.

Too few of the professors lecture outside of the classroom. Too many complain about the quality of The Orient and other publications, but offer little constructive criticism. Faculty members rarely submit viewpoints or make their opinions known.

While student turnout at Wednesday Chapel Talks fluctuates, faculty turnout remains constant. No more than a handful of faculty members turn up each week "to cheer or jeer," as Professor William Whiteside said was the case not too many years ago.

Faculty members write off athletes as contributing "absolutely zero intellectually to the college." How many professors have ventured down to the football field, or the soccer field or the field house to see what really inspires their students?

Even administration is not immune. The college claims it is dedicated to increasing minority enrollment at the college, yet the highest policy-maker present at Black Alumni Weekend forums was Dean of Students Kenneth Lewallen.

Interfraternity Council President Scott Milo pointed out that faculty-student communication is at an all-time low. Faculty and administration have closed their minds to groups and organizations for mistakes made in the past.

Faculty and administration are invited to dine and speak at fraternity houses. Yet, one faculty member, said Milo, refuses to enter Zeta Psi for a policy that was created and rescinded in 1973 - over 14 years ago.

The professors who feel commitment to students ends in the classrooms are depriving their students of a richness they deserve. Students really care and want and need assistance and opinions that can shape the rest of their lives. Not every student who passes through Bowdoin fits into the career-oriented student or the underachieving athlete. Some of us really care and want to see what the faculty has to offer outside of the classroom.

Sunday Special 11-4 - 30% off clothing
Something special for your Little One

Little Ones

- * Fine clothing - premie-6/7 yrs.
- * educational games and toys
- * shower gifts

Children's harps - beginners and professional models

149 Maine Street, Tontine Mall
 HRS: Mon-Thurs. 10 - 5:30 Fri 10 - 5 Sat & Sun closed

THE BRUNSWICK

729-8895
 216A Maine St.
 Mon-Sat. 9:30-6

Flower Shop

We Deliver
 Wire Service

Centrally located across from Bowdoin College

Now that you've gotten into Bowdoin, IBM can help you get more out of it.

The road to graduation is paved with term papers, lab reports, cramming, all-nighters and, of course, exams.

To ease that journey and awaken your professors to your exceptional abilities, we suggest the newest member of the IBM® Personal System/2™ family: the Model 25 Collegiate.

It's a high-powered personal computer with advanced graphics capabilities, designed to fit on your desk without adding to the clutter. And it comes with a generous 640 KB memory, two 3.5" diskette drives and an aid package every student can appreciate—a big discount, plus Microsoft® Windows 1.04, Write, Paint, Cardfile, IBM DOS 3.3 and a mouse.

Pop in the load-and-go diskette and your Model 25 Collegiate is set to help you write and revise long papers and illustrate your points by combining words and graphics. So your professors will draw favorable conclusions about your work.

For more information on the Model 25 Collegiate, visit the IBM Education Product Coordinator on campus.

You'll quickly learn how to get the most out of the IBM Personal System/2.

IBM

Microsoft is a registered trademark of the Microsoft Corporation. IBM is a registered trademark and Personal System/2 is a trademark of the International Business Machines Corporation. © IBM 1987.

Part-Time -
Home Mailing Program!
Excellent income!
 Detail, send self-addressed,
 stamped envelope.
 WEST,
 Box 5877, Hillside, N.J. 07205

HOMEWORKERS WANTED!
TOP PAY! C.I.
 121 24th Ave., N. W. Suite 222
 Norman, Oklahoma 73069

GRADUATE SCHOOL

Here's how liberal arts graduates can tally some impressive numbers: Bentley's Master of Science in Accountancy.

If your liberal arts background isn't paying off as liberally as you'd hoped, you should consider Bentley College's Master of Science in Accountancy.

The MSA program is designed to introduce the fundamentals of accounting, to convey an appreciation of business management, and to advance skills in the intelligent use of the concepts and methods of accountancy.

With the strong foundation supplied by a Bentley MSA, you'll have the credentials to change career paths into the public, private, or government accounting sectors, or to further your present career. Which is a liberal benefit indeed.

For further information, call
 (617) 891-2108.

Bentley College
 Graduate School Admissions
 Waltham, MA 02254

KEEP THE NOIDSM IN LINE

Call Domino's Pizza® for great pizza made just the way you want it. We know how to keep the NOID in line so he can't ruin your pizza. Domino's Pizza Delivers® in less than 30 minutes, so your pizza always arrives piping-hot and delicious. So Avoid The NOID™! Call Domino's Pizza today!

729-5561

26 Bath Road

OPEN FOR LUNCH

Sat. & Sun. at 11:00 a.m.

Our drivers carry less than $20.00.

Limited delivery area.

DOMINO'S
PIZZA

DOMINO'S
PIZZA
DELIVERS®
FREE.

$1.00

$1.00 off any pizza.
One coupon per pizza.
Expires: 11/22/87

Fast, Free Delivery
26 Bath Rd.
Phone: 729-5561

DOMINO'S
PIZZA

©1987 Domino's Pizza, Inc. NOID™ design in CLAYMATION® by Will Vinton Productions, Inc.

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

FIRST CLASS MAIL
U.S. Postage PAID
BRUNSWICK, ME
Permit No. 25

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

VOLUME CXVII

BOWDOIN COLLEGE, BRUNSWICK, MAINE, FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 1987

NUMBER 10

Students dismissed for suspension violations

LORI BODWELL
ORIENT Editor in Chief

Two Bowdoin students have been permanently dismissed from the college for violating the terms of a temporary suspension, according to Dean of Students Kenneth A. Lewallen.

On Thursday, Nov. 5, the two accused students allegedly sexually harassed two female Bowdoin students. The incident in question occurred during a fraternity party. The two females approached Dean of Students Fellow Bina Chaddha during the following weekend. After consultation, the females decided to bring the matter to the attention of Lewallen.

College policy as expressed in the Student Handbook specifically states that "Talking to any member of the college staff does not automatically start disciplinary actions." Lewallen first explained all the options available and the females opted to pursue the matter through the college, not municipal authorities.

After Lewallen questioned the men, the school formally charged the men with sexual harassment including sexual assault, assault and sexual threats and were placed under immediate temporary suspension pending a judicial hearing, according to Lewallen.

Under the Social Code, students who are placed under the immediate temporary suspension have been judged to "jeopardize the safety and welfare of the community" and are to leave Brunswick within 24 hours. A written stipulation of their suspension indicated that fraternities were considered part of the campus.

Because one of the men is a member of Chi Psi Fraternity, a single sex organization not recognized by the college, further action was taken to clarify the terms of the suspension. Lewallen approached Ed Pond '88, president of the fraternity and Chi Psi faculty advisor Manuel Alvarez to enlist the support of the organization. An oral agreement was reached that defined Chi Psi as part of the college community and therefore restricted under the suspension.

On Thursday, Nov. 12, Lewallen met with the two men, Alvarez and one of the men's parents. It was during this meeting that both men admitted to violating the terms of the suspension by returning to their fraternities. One of the men was a Beta Theta Pi pledge and had returned for a pledge activity on Tuesday, Nov. 10.

Lewallen consulted with the President of the College A. LeRoy Gresson and Dean of the College Paul Nyhus. As a result of the violations which "demonstrated a clear disrespect for the health and safety of the college community," both were permanently dismissed from the college, Lewallen said.

"If they didn't understand the seriousness of the suspension, they did understand the parameters," Lewallen said. Fraternities were "clearly off limits." Lewallen said the men were aware that Chi Psi had agreed to cooperate with school officials. "It was not just a suggestion not to be at Chi Psi."

Pond said Chi Psi had interpreted the agreement with Lewallen as a "strong suggestion" that the men not be allowed in Chi Psi but agreed with the purpose of the college's request. One of the men called Pond after spending the night in Portland. He sought advice and emotional support from the fraternity and was allowed to stay at Chi Psi on Tuesday. At this point, Pond said Chi Psi did not believe (Continued on page 12)

The following is a memo issued by Paul L. Nyhus, Dean of the College on Nov. 17. The memo was distributed to faculty, administrative staff and students.

In recent days serious disciplinary action was taken by the College. This memo is written in response to inquiries about the facts of the case and about college policies in matters of discipline.

After some deliberations, two women students reported to the Dean of Students that they were victim of a sexual assault in a fraternity. Upon hearing the first reports of the case, Deans Lewallen and Nyhus with the approval of President Gresson decided, based on the seriousness of the charges and the evidence in the case, to suspend the two men involved pending a judicial hearing. According to established procedures stated in the Student Handbook the case was to be heard by the Student Judiciary Board. The Dean of Students has the authority to accept or reject the recommendation of the Student Judiciary Board. Had the recommendation been rejected by the Dean the case would have been presented to the Administrative Committee.

One day after the two men were suspended they visited their respective fraternities, a direct violation of the Dean's suspension letter which included the fraternities. Thereupon the Deans with the President's approval dismissed the two students from the college permanently.

Although the specific charges in this case were never presented in a formal hearing, the severity of the disciplinary actions taken by the College demonstrates that acts of sexual assault are intolerable. We state emphatically that such acts are an outrageous violation of College disciplinary standards. Students found guilty of such offenses should expect to be dismissed from the College. Criminal charges are always a possibility.

Moving beyond this specific case, some prevalent misconceptions regarding sexual assault need to be challenged lest they mislead students. Alcohol consumption by the assailant as well as the previous social behavior of the victim is irrelevant to the case. Violence is never justified. Sexual intimacy is appropriate only when both parties give express approval and are capable of express approval. The intoxication does not justify an attack.

Two questions about college policies emerged from this case. They will be reviewed by the Administrative Committee. First, in cases of sexual assault, rape or other potential felonies, what should be the College policy? Second, should our procedures be altered so that the Student Judiciary Board is not involved at all in such cases, with the first hearing before the Administrative Committee or a new committee specifically charged with hearing cases of sexual harassment and assault?

Sexual harassment awareness heightened

ADAM NABBERG
ORIENT News Editor

Awareness of sexual harassment at Bowdoin College has never been higher. College administrators and students are unanimous in deprecating sexual harassment as an inexcusable crime, a crime that will not be tolerated on the college campus.

According to Dean of Students Kenneth A. Lewallen, the college policy on sexual harassment is clear. He said ignorance of the policy does not excuse an offender.

"It's (harassment) illegal. A student can't do it. We've got it explained... The policy is as clear as possible, without being explicit... We don't tolerate harassment," said Lewallen.

Pages 12 and 13 of the 1987-88 Student Handbook spell out college policy regarding harassment.

"The Bowdoin College community will not tolerate any form of sexual harassment, rape, or other behavior that threatens the dignity of any human being and undermines the integrity of the entire community," the policy reads.

Lewallen also said he believes educating students further on harassment issues will increase awareness to a problem that will not simply disappear.

Last year, the college published a leaflet containing graphic accounts of actual sexual assaults that took place on campus. The college also held "Women's Awareness Week" last semester, in an attempt to educate students on women's issues they might encounter, including lesbianism and sexual harassment. More events have been scheduled for this academic year.

This year the Dean of Students Office has published a pamphlet entitled, "Sexual Harassment: A Problem You Can Do Something About," to heighten awareness of the issue on campus. The pamphlet sums up college policy on sexual harassment and offers advice on avenues a victim of sexual harassment might pursue.

"An act of harassment is any action in which one person uses threats, force or coercion to undermine the freedom of another... Bowdoin College will not tolerate any form of sexual harassment. Alcohol, drugs, peer group pressure, promise of academic reward or ignorance of this policy will not under any circumstances be con-

(Continued on page 12)

ROSEMARIE DOUGHERTY
ORIENT Assoc. News Editor

Editor's note: Due to the sensitivity surrounding the issue of sexual harassment, the names of the students involved have been withheld.

Sexual assault happens at Bowdoin.

In an effort to show the hard reality and seriousness of this problem two Bowdoin women have come forward with their story.

The two women were sexually harassed and physically and verbally abused by two Bowdoin men who were well-known to them.

The two women, both juniors, were attending a party at a fraternity house when the incident occurred.

The women were standing talking in the main lobby of the fraternity, on the first floor, near the men's bathroom. The men, lifting one woman into the air and pulling the other, forced both women into the bathroom.

Both women struggled to escape but were not strong enough and their screams for help were not heard above the noise of the party. One woman was pinned to the floor and the other pinned against a locker. Both were held forcefully while physically and verbally attacked.

One woman managed to pry the door open and burst out. The other reached an arm out the door and called for help to someone she knew. A tug of war ensued as several friends pulled on her arms while one of the men kept trying to pull her toward him.

"Everyone near the bathroom looked over like something strange was going on, but many of them were drunk and since they saw the men were my roommate and supposed friend, they did not seem to believe it was anything serious. I was stunned," said one of the women.

A few minutes later the men appeared again and pulled this same woman back into the bathroom. The people at the party were still not aware of what was happening, she said.

Once again the woman was forcibly held, this time by both men.

"I fought as hard as I could; I screamed as loud as I could, but these people who I thought to be my friends for he past two years would not let me go."

The door was forced open from the outside by a male student who had sensed something odd was going on, and the woman scrambled away from her attackers.

She emerged with bruises, a slight bloody nose, and fingerprint marks on her arm. Both women went to the infirmary the following night to document their bruises, and later reported the incident to the administration.

Dean of Students Kenneth A. Lewallen asked all the involved students to prepare a written statement of what happened, and there were ten other students' statements filed other than those of the two men and two women directly involved.

"I think this was a unique case because we had so many witnesses. It's not just our word against theirs," said one of the women.

The other woman involved stressed the fact that they were juniors, "We've all been here, we've all known each other, and this still happened, that's what upsets me," she said.

Women relate harassment experience

Do you think the intellectual life at Bowdoin is declining?

BECKY AUSTIN
ORIENT Staff

Rudy Bethea '91

"No. I definitely think it hasn't changed that much. It just depends on who you hang around with. You only do what you want. If you want to be intellectual, then be intellectual."

Dan Smith '91

"It seems like people are being critical about it. I feel comfortable and that I'm being intellectually stimulated."

?

Pat Piscatelli '90

"No, I read some pretty profound things on bathroom walls."

Chuck Rupinski '88

"No, I don't. However, many do believe this is the case perhaps mistake pretentiousness for intellectualism."

Fraternity review forum held

DAWN VANCE
ORIENT Asst. News Editor

A predominantly fraternity crowd swarmed to Kresge Auditorium on Thursday evening to participate in the opening session of the Fraternity Review Committee's public hearings.

Thursday evening's speakers included college deans, professors, alumni, representatives of housing corporations and student members of fraternities. Issues addressed revolved around the role of women in fraternities, social life at Bowdoin, drunkenness, sexual harassment, academics and the role of the local vs. the national fraternities.

Chairman of the Fraternity Review Committee Merton Henry '50 kicked off the meeting with a statement of the committee's purpose: to review the recent history of Bowdoin's fraternities - their policies and practices pertaining to such considerations as membership, rushing, orientation, indebtedness, quality of leadership and support and the role of women.

Henry claimed this process would be "an objective review of the fraternities."

Acting Dean of the College Paul L. Nyhus appeared before the committee first. Nyhus addressed three problems which he found inherent in the fraternity system: the role of women in fraternities, the relation of fraternities to the academic program and the maintenance of discipline and a healthy social environment in fraternities.

In Nyhus' view many of the fraternities' problems with women stem from their affiliation with a national fraternity. Nyhus said, "Student leaders of fraternity house with national affiliations are caught in an impossible conflict. When they meet with Bowdoin deans, with the Student Life Committee and with Governing Boards Committees they are told to pursue a coeducational program enthusiastically. When they meet with representatives of the national fraternity they are told to pursue an all male policy exclusively. They are pulled in two opposite directions and the contradiction becomes greater every year...the time has come for the college to resolve this conflict."

Nyhus also discussed the relation of fraternities and academics. He said, "Even more serious has been the assault by such groups on the academic rules of the College." Nyhus referred specifically to the Beta Theta Pi house. He pointed out past allegations against members of the Beta House, including the ghost writing of term papers and cheating on examinations.

Dean of the Students Kenneth A. Lewallen showed strong support for the fraternities, although he acknowledged the existence of good and bad within the system. Lewallen's greatest concern centered around the disappearance of attentiveness and guidance within the fraternities. Lewallen suggested the possibility of a Greek dean or a dean who would spend some time directly involved with the fraternities.

Professor Barbara Kaster, too, addressed three problems which she found inherent in the fraternities. These problems include: college policies that insist upon the ambiguous second class citizenship of women in fraternities, the lack of social space other than the library, the Moulton Union, the gym and the fraternities and the toleration of sexual harassment within the fraternities.

Students who addressed the committee included a group of women headed by Psi Upsilon member Jennifer Goldsmith '90. This group presented a petition to the committee claiming that women in fraternities do acknowledge that some problems do exist but that these problems are not particular to fraternities and are inherent on campus and in society at large.

Members of Kappa Sigma fraternity help to keep the Bowdoin Pines free from litter.

Fraternity left holding the tab

TANYA WEINSTEIN
ORIENT Staff

Coke is a joke.

Members of the Alpha Kappa Sigma fraternity had been collecting tabs from returnable soft drink cans all semester in an effort to raise money for kidney dialysis. However, they recently discovered these tabs are worth a mere nickel, and that's only if they are still attached to a Coke can.

Fraternity member Frank Mooney '90 had heard from a friend in his hometown that an organization in Boston would pay for an hour of dialysis for every pound of tabs collected. His friend's sister needed this dialysis, and Mooney decided to help out by collecting tabs up at school.

Mooney did not know any of the details behind the can tab for dialysis, such as what organization was sponsoring it or to whom the tabs were supposed to be sent.

Fraternity members spent hours collecting tabs from friends, other fraternities and the Redemption Center in Brunswick. Approximately 12 pounds of tabs were collected.

A call to the Kidney Foundation, however, revealed there is no known organization that sponsors this tab drive. Kidney dialysis is covered solely through Medicare.

This rumor has apparently been circulating around various parts of the country, as the Kidney Foundation has received many similar calls.

Although Kappa Sigma's intentions were commendable, the Kidney Foundation knew of no organization providing dialysis for can tabs, rendering them virtually worthless.

College Briefs

"It's only paper" was the reaction of Bates College treasurer, Bernard Carpenter, in response to the recent stock market crash in which the college lost an estimated $6 million.

He explained that the college did not lose any actual cash money, and although the figure seems to indicate a substantial loss in potential income, the college was still in a strong position.

The Bates Student also devoted over a page to the exclusion of the College from a U.S. News rating of the 25 'best' national liberal arts colleges. Dean of Admissions William Hiss called the ratings "nice popularity contests" and President T. Hedley Reynolds called the poll a piece of "irresponsible journalism." Williams College topped the bill followed by Swarthmore and Carleton. Bowdoin was rated 12th.

Middlebury College Dean of Students Erica Wonacott revealed that four out of every five incoming freshmen had noted on the housing preference card that they did not want to room with a minority student. Wonacott said "These are people who need to learn something...I'd rather admit them and then work on trying to make them see what's wrong with their attitude."

Over 30 students and faculty members participated in a rally and 'die in' to protest the presence of Central Intelligence Agency recruiters on the Colby College campus last month. The demonstration, organized by the Colby Coalition for Political Activity was decrying the alleged role of the CIA in covert U.S. foreign policy operations.

Demonstrators brandished ten crosses corresponding to "illegal, covert actions of the CIA. As one student read aloud a description of each act, the cross bearer 'died'."

Three students at Bryn Mawr College, calling themselves APATHY have succeeded in suspending the activities of the student-run Self-Governing Association. The three walked into the weekly Sunday meeting of the SGA and read a "Statement of Purpose" in front of the Assembly. The students claimed that there is a lack of communications between the members of the Assembly and the student body.

And...capping off this week's college news, Amherst College's Campus Center Advisory Council unanimously approved the installation of condom dispensers in the bathrooms of the Campus Center.

Bowdoin students help the homeless

MARSHALL CARTER ORIENT Staff

Last February, the Brunswick Area Council of Churches (BACC) opened Tedford House, a shelter for the homeless in the center of town. Since the house opened, a handful of Bowdoin students have helped out at the house, many pulling the graveyard shift.

Two of these are Martin Jessiman '88 and Jay Pease '90, who agree that, in the words of Jessiman, "It's quite a different world from Bowdoin. This place is so understaffed we feel the need to help out."

"You never really encounter these people. I'm amazed at the number of people who don't know that there are homeless people in Brunswick," he said.

Many of the people who come into the house are families and high school students who are having family problems. Tedford House offers a warm place to sleep, dinner and breakfast for up to three days. However, with the house director's permission, residents may stay longer. According to Jessiman, it is "very rare that somebody stays only three days." Residents usually do not stay longer than a week.

Jessiman has been active at the Tedford House since the BACC started the program, Pease for almost as long. "Martin dragged me over here one night last spring," he said.

According to Jeff Sundberg '88, who coordinates Bowdoin student involvement in the program, there are about ten Bowdoin students who volunteer. Many, including Jessiman and Pease, work the 10 p.m. to 7 a.m. shift. Pease said it is "very easy volunteer work," and that the house's 11 p.m. lights-out policy allows those working the night shift plenty of time to study and sleep.

Tedford House's capacity is 15 residents, but on most nights, between two and four people use the facilities, but as the weather gets colder, the house becomes more crowded.

The shelter doesn't often reach its capacity, but on a recent night 12 people were in the house. Jessiman can't recall a time since the shelter opened where someone had to be turned away due to lack of space.

Though the work at the house isn't hard, it can be difficult to develop relationships with the residents. "It's hard not to be moved by the situations of some of these people," Jessiman said. But Pease added that "some people don't give a damn about you. They don't recognize the help you are giving."

"A lot of people have a lot of resentment," Jessiman said. But he keeps at it because his work is "some little thing to help" the community. He said that many people and businesses donate food to help the shelter. People in the community, including Bowdoin, are welcome to donate extra food.

Getting involved in the program is easy, Jessiman and Pease said. There is no longer a formal training period, so newcomers tag along in apprentice style to learn how the house is run.

Due to poor management and graduation, much of last year's staff is no longer working at the house. However, with the hiring of a paid director, "the shelter has really shaped up its act lately," said Pease.

A generous grant was given to the house by one of the churches in the BACC, so the house is financially stable now. But still, "there is a strong need for staff... especially for the overnight shift" Jessiman noted.

Bowdoin security enlisted the help of local firefighters in an effort to remove the Theta Delta Chi flag flying from the chapel. Their efforts were to no avail and the flag still flies today. Photo by Alan Harris

Swede speaks on swinish sustainability

Lisa Gardner and Alan Harris Special to the Orient

In a Monday lecture that could have truthfully been called "boaring," Economist Lars Drake told the college community just what would make Swedish farmers as happy as "pigs in a poke."

Drake, an economist from the Swedish University of Agricultural Sciences at Uppsala (currently on leave and working at Ohio State University), came to talk about Sweden's agricultural systems. In his two Monday lectures, "Happy pigs and Worried Politicians" and "The Value of Preserving the Swedish Agricultural Landscape" he outlined a policy that would move Sweden towards a more sustainable system of agriculture.

Sweden's current agricultural policy "may not be the worst" according to Drake, but has caused serious environmental problems. The policy protects farmers by import duties that are based on the farmers' cost of production. This has led to 'high intensity' production. Under current policy, farmers feeding livestock with grains are aware of those grazing their herds.

The need for grain production has meant putting Sweden's marginal lands into crop production, and relying heavily on use of fertilizer to maintain intensive farming. The fertilizer then creates a problem of nitrogen loss in the soil with runoff from surface water. The nitrogen, in turn, has a negative impact on the environment, causing such ill effects as fish kills.

The current policy has also led to less-than-happy pigs (and cows). Overbreeding and a poor diet, consisting mainly of grain, have produced many sickly animals. These effects, combined with high costs of food to consumers, overproduction and increased awareness of environmental concerns among the Swedes, have led to worried politicians who must reckon with the public in the upcoming election.

The changes Drake and his colleagues have suggested are minute and would not have a major impact on the agricultural industry, yet they could lead to the correction of the problems created by the intense production.

The proposal calls for a subsidy for the grassland in production. This would make it less expensive for farmers to graze their cows (and would decrease the need for cropland and fertilizers). The new policy also calls for an increased tax on nitrogen and a fee for sick animals sent to the butcher.

The new policy would appear to satisfy both man and beast in Sweden. Under the new policy, Swedish cows would be mooing with joy, because their livers would be relieved of damage caused by a high-grain diet. Swedish pigs would also be grunting in ecstasy, since this favors the production of cows. Bipedal Swedes would be content with preserved grasslands.

Drake predicted the net result would be a five to ten percent increase in grassland in Sweden. He said this would be a major and welcome change in the country.

When asked, "How important do you think it is to preserve the agricultural landscape?", during an opinion poll, Drake reported that the vast majority of Swedes responded that it was "very" or "fairly" important. There would be "preservation of endangered species and healthier cows mainly due to the increased in grazed acreage or grasslands."

The Swedes have a strong concern for the environment partly due to their more public view of private land. They can walk through and camp on their neighbor's land with out much trouble at all. The recent Chernobyl incident has brought attention to a local level the dangers posed to the environment and the need to worry their politicians about it. Perhaps this newly enlightened concern will prod Sweden

Lars Drake

FILM, POLITICS & SOCIAL CHANGE IN ASIA

January - May 1988

Faculty from Harvard University and the University of Illinois

Itinerary includes: India
China
Japan
Hong Kong

- travel and work closely with professors
- live with families in each country
- expand intellectual and personal awareness through comparative study in a variety of environments
- 16 credit hours of academic work studying film, politics and social change in Asia

For a catalogue and application contact:

Joan Tiffany, Director
International Honors Program
19 Braddock Park
Boston, MA 02116
617-267-8612

INTERNATIONAL HONORS PROGRAM

76 UNION STREET

BRUNSWICK CORSICAN

The Corsican in Brunswick
wants your business.

We are open 4 till 9 daily, except Tuesdays.

We are still offering our great pizza, hot sandwiches
soups and desserts.

Complete takeout service.

729-8117

DAWN VANCE

ORIENT Asst. News Editor

"It was an amazingly successful election - the most successful I've ever seen at Bowdoin," said Chairman of the Student Executive Board George Hillhouse '88 of Monday's freshmen class officer elections.

The class of 1991 flocked to the Moulton Union in force on Monday to vote for its class officers. Of the 362 member's of this year's freshmen class 237 or 60.4% showed up at the polls to vote.

Hillhouse announced the results of the election at the Student Executive board's Tuesday night meeting. The 1991 class officers for 1987-1988 include Tucker Shaw - President, Greg Castell - Vice President, Bart Acocella - Secretary, and Lisa Carter - Treasurer.

The remainder of Tuesday night's meeting afforded the board an opportunity to air complaints and offer suggestions. These complaints and suggestions centered upon the Bowdoin Women's Handbook, gym hours, the dining service, and student directories.

Member Tim Hughes '88 addressed the issue of the Women's Handbook. He informed the board that it had been pointed out to him the the handbook contains material that sheds bad light upon the fraternities. Hughes referred specifically to two phrases which appear in the handbook - "women can but do not elect to live in Kappa Sig, Zeta and Beta" and "sexual harassment happens in fraternities".

Hughes motioned that the board go to the publishers of the Women's Handbook and ask them to revise it, update it and reprint it this year making it more correct and removing all anti-fraternity inferences. The board passed this motion 11-1-0.

Members Hughes, Terry Rouse '90 and Jenn Yancey '90 will investigate this situation.

Member Rich Krasuski suggested that the board look into the extension of the gym hours at Sargent Gymnasium and also the Farley Field House. The Board will approach the athletic department to investigate the possibility of these complexes remaining open later into the evening.

Member Andrew Winter expressed concern over the delay in the printing of the Fall 1987 Student Directories. Winter will check with Director of Public Relations and Publications Dick Merserau as to the reasons behind this delay.

Members Hughes and Makowski '90 will check with the dining service as to the possibility of the addition of a microwave and toasters available during all mealtimes to the Moulton Union dining room and Wentworth Hall. Winter will ask about the reopening of the back deli line during dinnertime as was the case last spring.

The board will hold its next weekly meeting on Monday night rather than Tuesday night due to the Thanksgiving holiday.

Peter Hodum '88, is one of the many students who participated in the Bowdoin-Bates Blood Challenge to benefit the Red Cross. Photo by Alan Harris

Peggy's Typing Service
443-1267
Fast, Accurate, Reliable!
Affordable Rates!

+++++

Don't be a test turkey.

Want to knock the stuffing out of tests like the SAT, LSAT, GMAT, MCAT, GRE, NTE, CPA, or others? Don't let last-minute cramming keep you from testing your best.

Study with the world's biggest, the world's best test prep pros—Stanley H. Kaplan. Your future is at stake.

During nearly 50 years, Kaplan has helped over 1 million students increase their scoring power and test confidence.

So if you want to give thanks after your test, call us. And start gobbling up your competition.

KAPLAN
STANLEY H. KAPLAN EDUCATIONAL CENTER, LTD.
DON'T COMPETE WITH
A KAPLAN STUDENT—BE ONE

Bowdoin MCA⁺ class starts 1/24.
LSAT, GMAT, GRE classes forming now.

Get a score to be thankful for!

(617) 964-TEST

Tontine Fine Candies

GOING HOME FOR THANKSGIVING?
IF NOT SENT THE FOLKS SOME "PETITS FOURS" OR
A BOX OF THEIR SPECIAL CHOCOLATES, WE MAIL
ANYWHERE IN THE U.S.!

We are in the Tontine Mall

THE
BRUNSWICK

FLOWER SHOP

729-8895

216A Maine St.

Mon.-Sat. 9:30-6

We Deliver
Wire Service

Happy Thanksgiving to all our friends!
Centrally located across from Bowdoin College

HARVARD UNIVERSITY GRADUATE SCHOOL of DESIGN RECRUITING PRESENTATION on Graduate Programs in ARCHITECTURE LANDSCAPE ARCHITECTURE URBAN PLANNING and DESIGN

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 1
10:30 a.m.

Career Services Office
in the Moulton Union
(2nd floor)

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Lectures feature women in science

LIZZ MILLAN

ORIENT Asst. Entertainment Editor

Why aren't there more women in the science field? The reasons are numerous and varied, yet one seems to prevail: the lack of female role models. At Bowdoin College, for example, Patsy Dickinson, assistant professor of Biology, is the only female professor in a science department.

A new lecture series, "Women In Science," exposes Bowdoin students to female scientists who are achieving success in their fields. The program was initiated by Carey Phillips, assistant professor of Biology.

"I was at a conference last Spring and was speaking with some women scientists. We observed that many women entering the lab sciences are not as confident as their male counterparts. Bringing role models to Bowdoin seemed a good way to show women as well as men that women can be, and are good scientists," Phillips said.

"Through the seminars as well as informal meetings and dinners, the students really get a chance to interact with these women," Phillips said. Refreshments are served before each lecture providing additional time to meet and interact with the speakers.

Three women have come to Bowdoin this semester. Each has presented a seminar in their field of specialty. The seminars are aimed at all students; they are not limited to science majors. A female astronaut will be on campus in March to meet students and give a talk. Also coming are a molecular biologist, as well as a biochemist.

"We try to get women who are very good in their field and who are good speakers," Phillips said.

Interest on both sides has been strong. "I've received many calls from all over the country from women who are really interested in speaking and interacting with the students. We're limited only by funds," Phillips said.

Many Bowdoin students have been quite active as well. They have helped coordinate dinners and have participated actively in the seminars. Rosemary Roberts, assistant professor of Mathematics, Susan Bell, assistant professor of Sociology & Anthropology, and Janet Smith, assistant to the President, are faculty who have helped Phillips coordinate the program.

Not only does the program expose undergraduates to women in science, it provides them a good source of contacts. "Students meet these women and later on can seek them out for advice on graduate schools and other opportunities in the field," Phillips said.

All of this, it is hoped, will help foster a more positive attitude towards the sciences. According to Phillips, interest in the sciences is decreasing. Also, there still exists discrimination in the hiring and tenure processes. "The only way to solve these problems is to get more women actively involved in the sciences," Phillips said.

In addition to the Women In Science Series, other ideas for increasing interest in the sciences have been formulated. A summer science program has been discussed. This program would provide promising young high school students research opportunities in the lab sciences. High school students would work with members of the Bowdoin faculty. This, it is hoped, would initiate an early interest in the sciences.

Encouragement at every level is necessary. Women can be and are successful scientists. The Women In Science Series allows Bowdoin students to see this. These seminars and dinners offer an opportunity to meet extremely knowledgeable and talented scientists. Carey Phillips welcomes participation in the program from anyone interested. The location, time and date of each seminar is posted in the science building, as well as published in the Thymes and the news bulletin.

OUTING CLUB UPDATE

LIZZ LEONARD
ORIENT Contributor

The Outing Club is officially winterized and awaits your arrival into its equipment room located in the basement of Appleton Hall. Snowshoes, cross-country and downhill skis, ice axes, as well as the year round equipment such as tents, sleeping bags, and climbing ropes are among the range of things which are yours for the borrowing. Hours are Monday and Thursday 7-9PM and all rentals are free for Outing Club members.

For those interested in joining the Ski Club, there will be downhill and cross-country trips going off each weekend throughout the winter. The trips are free if you are an OC member, so pay your dues and sign up soon at the OC office on the second floor of Sargent Gym. There will also be a sign up sheet for those who wish to design and clear cross-country skiing trails on the College's property at Coleman Farm (2 miles from campus towards Harpswell). The trail blazing extravaganza will take place the weekend after Thanksgiving break.

If your field is rock-climbing, then you should head over to Sargent Gym where there is instruction on the climbing wall Monday through Friday 8-10PM and Sunday 7-9PM. This is a good opportunity to learn and practice climbing in preparation for Spring trips. Call Steve Greenberg at 443-2369 with questions.

In the meantime, Liz Siesler is leading an overnight cross-country ski trip along the Stratton Brook Road in the Carrabaset Valley this weekend. If the trails are low on snow, the group will hike on the Appalachian Trail across from Sugarloaf Mountain instead.

And to finish this weeks update, Jim Lentz' flytying class is progressing smoothly. Most recently, guest lecturer Coach Cullen instructed the class in tying Muddler Minnows, a complex fly of deer hair, red squirrel, turkey quills, and tinsel.

If you have ANY questions, please feel free to call Jim Lentz at x3325 or stop by the Outing Club office during any weekday.

Calendar

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 20

7:30 and 10:30 p.m. — Weekly Weekend Film Series. The Godfather, presented by the BFVS. $1 admission. Smith Auditorium.

8:00 p.m. — Masque & Gown presents Museum, by New York playwright Tina Howe. Pickard Theater. Admission free with Bowdoin I.D.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 21

7:30 and 10:00 p.m. — Weekly Weekend Films. The Godfather (Part II), presented by the BFVS. $1 admission. Smith Auditorium.

8:00 p.m. — Masque & Gown presents Museum, by New York Playwright Tina Howe. Pickard Theater. Admission free with Bowdoin I.D.

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 22

3:00 p.m. — Gallery Talk. "American Icons: Gilbert Stuart's Portraits of Jefferson and Madison." John W. Coffey, curator. Walker Art Building.

3:00 p.m. — Foreign Film Series. Ivan the Terrible (Part II), directed by Sergei Eisenstein; musical score by Sergei Prokofiev. Smith Auditorium.

8:00 p.m. — Lecture. "The Eustacy and Perils of Writing for the Theater." Tina Howe, New York playwright. Kresge Auditorium.

AFTER THANKSGIVING BREAK:

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 1

4:00—6:00 p.m. — The Bowdoin College Museum of Art will hold an annual holiday celebration. The Calderwood Consort will provide a seasonal music program, perform medieval and Renaissance pieces on period instruments. Drop by to enjoy refreshments and gift items available in the Museum Shop (students, faculty, and staff receive a 10% discount).

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 2

3:00 and 8:00 p.m. — Weekly Wednesday Films. Gates of Heaven (1978), presented by the BFVS. Smith Auditorium.

7:30 p.m. — "Traditional Leadership and Contemporary Challenge," a lecture by LaDonna Harris, president and executive director of Americans for Indian Opportunity.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 4

7:00 p.m. — BGSLA/BWA sponsored talk: "Why can't Sharon come home? Karen Thompson discusses the Sharon Kuwalski guardianship case, and the interrelationship between homophobia, disabled person's right, sexism, and other human rights issues."

MOVIE LISTINGS:

Evening Star Cinema (Tontine Mall)
Wish You Were Here, showing at 7:00 and 8:50 p.m.

Cinema City (Cooks Corner)

Fatal Attraction, showing at 6:45 and 9:00 p.m.

Dirty Dancing, showing at 7:05 and 9:05 p.m.

Cinderella, showing at 7:00 p.m. only

Running Man, showing at 7:05 and 9:05 p.m.

Upcoming

LaDonna Harris, president and director of Americans for Indian Opportunity, will visit Bowdoin Nov. 30 through Dec. 4, under the Woodrow Wilson Visiting Fellows program.

After

Jimmy '90
"I would be a Detist."

IF You COULD BE Anything in the World
WHAT Would You
BE?

"I would be a
NUCLEAR bomb so
I could REAP DESTRUCTION"

Fred Pinedriphthorp
"Golly, I guess I would just try to be a good boy."
What a Silly question.

Lisa Blagka '87
"I'd be a little butterfly, and live
ON a flower."

KATSEY TOWNSEND
ORIENT Staff

On October 19 Kay Carney drove her Toyota Tercel to Brunswick, her home for the next five weeks. Since then, Carney has directed 22 Bowdoin students in Tina Howell's play, "Museum," which will be presented at Pickard Theater this Friday and Saturday night. (See preview)

Carney left her hometown, New York City, upon the request of Ray Rutan, Bowdoin's Director of Theater, according to Carney, Rutan wanted to bring a woman's perspective to a student production with Howell's play and Carney's direction.

Seven years ago, Carney directed another one of Howell's plays, "The Art of Dining;" apparently, the production was a success in Howell's eyes, for the playwright recommended Carney to Rutan. Both artists share the belief that "the life of the imagination is an important thing for people to hold onto," according to Carney. Howell sends this message to her audience through "Museum," a comedy whose characters are full of eccentricities.

"Tina is satirizing consumerism in art...and the people who want to get a creative high from other people's already finished works. It is about how people cope with putting on a veneer of politeness. At the end, the boneyard art (in the museum) causes the polite veneer to fall away and the people to go crazy," Carney explained after a recent dress rehearsal.

Throughout Howell's play, the characters struggle to understand one artist's creative process. Similarly, the people acting in the play are working to understand their own creative process. For the past five weeks, Carney has been trying to stir this creative process. "This is a play about chaotic, wacky people in a museum, a prim, proper place. I've been trying to get the students to act wacky and be worried about this prim and proper place as actors.

"In some way, my process (of directing) is a non-directive one. I am more interested in facilitating than playing a parent figure. I challenge them to move and made choices on their own. The actors busted their asses in response to my challenge.

"As a director, I try to elicit responses as to what the script is about and then shape the play rather than coming in with preconceived notions. I see my job as that of a football coach. I get the actors into training, teach them moves and then let them behave and think in character in front of an audience.

The same principle is used in church or a circus."

From a director's perspective, Carney was willing to speculate on the job of an actor: "The job of the actor is to be present in the here and now, and that takes courage because they're not always in control.

They have to do it from the gut. To me an actor is like an emotional warrior. He or she has the emotional courage to reveal the self as he or she feels...and to go where others don't dare to go," said Carney.

Interview with Museum director Kay Carney

Modern art seminar.

Modern art.

Play review

Consumerism and art in Howell's Museum

SHARON SMART

ORIENT Entertainment Editor Where does one find a satirical illustration of modern societal views of art as material possession?—in Museum. Playwright Tina Howell's sardonic look at museum-goers, and the public in general, and their attitudes towards art, arrives sharply on the Pickard Theatre stage tonight.

As an unfinished work in progress seen during dress-rehearsal, the performance was smooth, with humorous banter well executed on the whole. As finished product before an audience, Museum can be expected to delight.

The viewer's attention is initially brought to focus on the set. The stage appears as a believable rendition of a modern museum: a white staircase descends from a balcony backed by a large sky-light, mauve pedestals support modern free-form sculptures, white benches stand before the inferred paintings. Multi-level structure and open design facilitate varied simultaneous conversations, activity, of the many characters—the museum-goers.

And presented is an engaging spectrum of characters. "Caricatures" may be more apt, as each seems to stand as exaggeration of a "type" or "category" of person who may be seen in a museum.

Among these, several were outstanding. Dave Mittel and Louie Frederick as a "gay couple", Will and Bob, whose pretentious criticisms of the museum's artworks form a lively and hilarious discourse. Frederick gives Bob the manner of a "Felix Ungar", playing well off Mittel's more extravagant portrayal. Both have fun with the roles, and this enjoyment carries over to the viewer.

Elizabeth Eggleston in a short appearance makes a memorable impression as Chloe Trapp, an "insightful tour guide". Eggleston's character casts forth sweeping insights into the "true nature" of art—her self-assured manner enables the esoteric monologues to carry over satirically, rather than bore.

Also enjoyable were many of the other performances: Charles Gibbs as Giorgio, a "Sippy/country club" portrayal; Sarah Williams as Liz, "the emphatic college student"; and Raiden Dillard as Fred Izumi, ever-present "photographer".

Generally, the overlapping conversations, juxtaposed exclamations and exhortations of the dialogue worked well. However, when cues were late and pauses over-long, tension was awkwardly formed. When performance of a stereotype became stereotyped performance, the satirical effect was lost. The dialogue was such that any lapse in the actors' humor and understanding of the role resulted in both artificiality and a distasteful appearance of unkind, prejudicial stereotyping.

Yet as intended by the playwright and as usually portrayed, the characters are numerous analogues of general trends in societal attitudes. As humorously stereotyped, they are made both more acceptable and more striking to the viewer—laughter and recognition are facilitated.

A salient and positive aspect of the performance is the ease with which the actors manage the complex physical/positional interactions of the action. Continual movement, single actors playing multiple roles, switching of staging focus, and multiple group dialogues/interactions, maintain interest at a peak level. The movement effectively conveys the continuation of societal dynamics within the context of the museum.

This backdrop in turn emphasizes the nature of the behaviors (flirtation, one-up-manship, self-congratulation, gossip, humor, showing-off), revealing them as both silly and somewhat disturbing—the characters' ability to continue self-focused attitudes in the context of the supposed universality of art reflects upon their attitudes towards art. They portray varied facets of the uses of art as tool of self-aggrandizement.

The director and actors' understanding of nature of the portrayals effectively communicates the humor and meaning of Museum to the viewer. With additional polishing of the rough edges, tonight's performance could prove exceptional.

High fashion comes to Maine

New York collections reviewed

Student enters world of fashion

SHARON SMART
ORIENT Entertainment Editor

Humphrey Oguda has done something he terms "very strange." He recently flew to New York to view this fall's presentations by major designers Oscar de la Renta and Carolina Herrera, and wrote a freelance review for the Kenyan magazine Presence.

"It was just an interest, an opportunity to do something crazy," he explained, himself somewhat surprised by the experience. Oguda's association with Presence began a few years ago when the magazine asked him to do several interviews with personalities in New York. This fall, he took the initiative to write to several important designers, requesting the opportunity to see the showings of their fall lines and review them for the magazine.

De la Renta and Herrera responded positively, sending him invitations. Oguda spent the week in New York City, attending the two half-hour shows, which were restricted to professional buyers, magazine writers, and photographers. He had hoped to gain admittance to Ralph Lauren's show as well, but was not able.

Of the designers, he points out "you've got to realize that each has his own style." And though high fashion may seem impractical in its extravagance, Oguda recognizes the "trickle-down effect" in fashion—more reasonable and accessible brand and department stores following the lead of the designers, bringing their styles in a modified form to the general public.

Of the experience: "I got to be in a world that you can never imagine yourself in," said Oguda. "I'd like to do it twice a year, and hope to go again in March for the spring showings."

Organza evening coat from Oscar de la Renta.

De la Renta, Herrera collections elegant

HUMPHREY W. OGUDA

Twice a year, the great designers of the world subject themselves to judgment from the world press and big buyers. In early spring, the fall/winter collections are shown; the spring/summer collections are shown in early November. During a short six week period, the press and buyers have to view collections in Tokyo, Milan, Paris, London and New York.

The shows are extremely important. Everything about them must be beautiful, impeccable—perfect. The models used are true professionals. They must present each designer's collection with the aim of convincing viewers that their designer will be the key designer of the season.

The New York spring/summer collections were introduced last week, and the major designers, Oscar de la Renta, Carolyn Rodam, Carolina Herrera, Calvin Klein, Bill Blass, Geoffrey Beene, and Donna Karan, presented their collections between the 30th of October and the 6th of November. The lengths both on and off the runway were short.

Herrera's show was one of the first of the season. It was a presentation of the most elegant renditions of the classics in day and evening wear. Her collection was based upon the theme of femininity at its freshest and most potent. The rose was her flower of the season. She also placed an emphasis on shape—if you have it, why not show it? Her daytime selections were short and snappy. Bolero jackets and check patterns in black, white, and navy were among her choices for the spring season. Her skirt lengths were short, trousers being available for those who chose not to show off their legs.

The collection was at its best in evening wear—ball gowns, both short and long were shown. Form-fitting dresses displayed the art of skillful dressmaking at its best. The petal sleeve dresses were outstanding. The hips and waist were sashed or draped, displaying an emphasis on curvaceousness. Among the most dramatic outfits presented were the short embroidered dresses with sashes that wrapped around the waist and then trailed behind the wearer. The shorts with overskirts were young in mood, and the colors of the evening were powerful, dramatic and alive. Herrera's collection was sophisticated and her details were a nice start to the season.

Oscar de la Renta's show on November 4 had every reason to be very well attended. A designer well known for his outstanding evening wear, he surprised the audience with one of the strongest day wear collections. His show brought to mind the life, romance and drama of Spain.

Daywear was clean and sharp. He used lots of checkered fabrics. His colors were basic: reds, blacks, whites. Bolero jackets were one of the centers of attraction. His daytime suits were worn with dramatic, classic hats. The lengths were all short. Buttons were important—they stood out in most of his daytime outfits. He also chose to emphasize form, presenting some of the most closely fitted dresses and jackets. There was a certain delicacy to the collection as well as a refinement evident in a powerful collection of what would appear to be the most basic outfits in a collection. His color in daytime was attention-grabbing: shocking pink jackets over navy dresses.

His evening wear was Spanish drama and elegance at its best. His outfits, form-fitting and vibrant in color were full flounces. Ruffles were a major element of evening wear. The floral colors were wild—bright reds, yellows and oranges. His white gown with a gold bolero jacket and his red-lace evening dress are wonderful examples of how far and wide de la Renta's skills can be applied. He took almost every form of evening wear possible and presented them in full color. Electric blue bodices and green short ruffled skirts are but a few examples of his creativity.

Both his and Herrera's collections were full of elegance, sophistication and also realistic creations for the upcoming spring and summer. They both suggested that we should have some fun.

Flamenco-inspired floral from Oscar de la Renta.

Daytime chic from Oscar de la Renta.

Behind the desk

ROBERT WILLAMEY
ORIENT Staff

"Good morning, Information, may I help you?"

This past August Lorrie MacKenzie was hired to fill the position of receptionist at the Moulton Union information desk. She is the first person to hold that position since it was terminated three years ago when the Union underwent administrative changes.

MacKenzie works at the Information desk every weekday from 8:30 a.m. until 5 p.m. Her job consists of selling stamps, directing students and visitors to appropriate destinations, updating the bulletin boards, and of course, answering the incessantly-ringing telephone. MacKenzie will average as many as 40 calls an hour. Since the college phone directory has not yet been distributed, many students have been forced to rely on the Information desk.

MacKenzie, who wouldn't reveal her age, except to say she is over 25 years old, was born in Presque Isle and later moved to Colorado, where she lived for the next 25 years. She and her husband recently moved back to Maine.

MacKenzie said the interaction with students is her favorite part of the job. There is never a dull moment when students are around. She also admitted she has received a few strange phone calls while on the job. One such call concerned a Brunswick resident whose pet fell down a well. Not knowing why this person called Bowdoin or whom to contact in town, MacKenzie transferred the call to the Environmental Studies Office.

Lorrie MacKenzie

According to Harry Warren, director of the Moulton Union, MacKenzie was hired this August, when she responded to an advertisement in the public newspaper. She was one of 33 applicants who applied for the position. Warren considers MacKenzie an unofficial hostess of the college. It is her job to make sure that things are going smoothly for all the visitors that cross her path, either in person or via the phone.

Warren pointed out MacKenzie is not the first person to hold this position. The job was created in 1965, when the first information desk was installed in the Union building. Prior to this the college's information center was located in Massachusetts Hall. Julie Messier was the first person to hold the position when the Union became the center for information, said

Warren.

Three years ago the monitor's job was facilitated, when the monitor's responsibility for booking events and rooms at the College was eliminated. It was at this time administration sought students to fill the position of the desk monitor. According to Warren students have done an excellent job in the past and should be commended for their work.

The very nature of having student monitors however posed a problem, said Warren. It was impossible to bring continuity to the position when several different students, all with varying personalities, work at different times behind the desk. In Warren's opinion, the administration wanted to bring homogeneity to the position, because it plays such an important role in the image of the college. Though the change in policy has cost several students a campus job and a higher price tag, Warren feels the college will do well with MacKenzie behind the desk.

"Bowdoin is well served and we are absolutely thrilled that you are here," said Warren of MacKenzie.

Safety Tip

Outdoor emergency telephones are designated by their red boxes and red light, illuminated at night. Notice where they are! Some outdoor locations are Coles Tower walkway, Brunswick Apartments, Harswell Apartments, Pickard Theatre, Mayflower Apartments, Pine Street Apartments, Dayton Arena, Pickard Field and near Curtis Pool.

Indoor locations include the elevators in Coles Tower and H&L Building and Hubbard Hall study.

Make a point of noticing these telephones in areas you frequent!

MACBEANS BOOKSHOP

your personal bookstore

New fiction & non-fiction, hard cover & paperback
Greeting cards (including UNICEF's)
Crane's stationery & thesis & resume papers

PACKAGE EXPRESS CENTER ship anything anywhere
We specialize in special orders, and we are nearby
114 Maine Street, Brunswick, ME 04011 tel. 207/725-8516

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 20,

9:30 p.m.

the
BEAR NECESSITY

Bylaws amended

Students who deign to enter the musty archives of Bowdoin College may find a recent addition to the college's age-old bylaws. Those students who don't make the trek will find the same change appearing in next year's Student Handbook in the excerpt of the college's bylaws appearing on the first page of the booklet.

The Executive Committee of the Governing Boards investigated the wording of the bylaw and brought its findings before the Governing Boards. The Boards approved the committee's suggested change and the bylaw and bylaw excerpt appearing in the handbook will be altered. The committee recommended the addition of the words 'sexual orientation' to the college's discrimination disclaimer. The bylaw will read (approximately)

"No test with respect to race, color, creed, national origin, sex or sexual orientation shall be imposed in the choice of Trustees, Overseers, officers, members of the Faculty, or any other employees, or in the admission of students..."

According to President of the College A. LeRoy Greason the Boards recognized a need to address an issue of the times.

"The committee was motivated by a decision to make clear to the college community that we don't wish to discriminate on that basis (sexual orientation)," said Greason.

Sunday Special 11-4 - 30% off clothing
Something special
for your Little One

Little
Ones

* Fine clothing - premie-6/7 yrs.
* educational games and toys
* shower gifts

Children's harps - beginners and professional models

149 Maine Street, Tontine Mall
HRS: Mon-Thurs. 10 - 5:30

Fri 10 - 5 Sat closed

KRISTINA'S
BAKERY RESTAURANT

Everyone's favorite for Breakfast,
Lunch & Dinner

Deliciously different menus
Delectable pastries
Friendly atmosphere
Outdoor dining in Summer
Fine wines, beers, specialty coffees
Cocktails

Open 7 days a week
at the corner of
Center & High St.
Bath, Maine 04510
(207) 442-8577

Need a campus job for next semester?

The Orient is looking for a
Circulation Manager.

The Circulation Manager must have a car and be able to work on Friday afternoons.

The job takes 4-5 hours per week and pays $30 per week.

For more information call the Orient at ext. 3300

Now... at Macbeans Music

COMPACT DISCS

... well over 1,200 of the
12,000-plus now available
If you don't see what you want,
let us get it for you

(That goes for LPs, Tapes and Videos, too.)

Maine's most enterprising Record Shop

The Tontine, 149 Maine St.
Brunswick, Maine 04011 • (207) 729-6513

SPORTS

Bears beat Colby, capture CBB

ERIC PALMQUIST
ORIENT Staff

It was not pretty. It was not easy. With four minutes remaining, it was not promising. Yet, when over, the Polar Bears had defeated the Mules from Colby 16-10, and thereby gave a fitting conclusion to what has been a season of extremes—tremendous highs and bitter lows.

Saturday contained a bit of both, and was a mirror image of the Bear's season. Like the first game of the year, when the Bears made a name for themselves with a stunning come-from-behind victory over Norwich, they opened the game by driving 64 yards down the field. Quarterback Ryan Stafford took it in from eleven yards out, giving the Bears an early 7-0 lead. It looked as if it would be an easy day against the winless Mules.

But as they had all year, the Polar Bears could not keep an opponent down on the road. After having one drive stopped by a Mike Burnett interception, Colby came back with a field goal after a fine goal line stand. Bowdoin faithful began to worry, as the swarming Colby defense had shut down the Bears since the opening drive, while showing an ability to move the ball on offense. It looked as if Bowdoin would dispell these fears, however, as they took the ensuing kickoff and rolled to Colby's seven yard line. But the bug that bit them all year, especially at a tough loss to Wesleyan, bit again. The Bears, as they would do on five other occasions, fumbled.

The tide of the game had turned. The Mules blocked a punt late in the half and drove down to the Bowdoin ten yard line. Only eight seconds remained. They elected to go for the touchdown, and it paid off as John McNinch took a Chris White pass into the endzone, sending his team to the locker room with a 10-7 lead.

It remained that way until the fourth quarter, when the Polar Bears received the ball at their twenty with just over nine minutes to play. Once again doing his best impersonation of Jim McMahon, Stafford, who had led the Bears to a last second victory over Bates the week before, took over.

He calmly drove the team down field, three times hitting Tom Bildeau for key yardage, and taking it on an option himself to the Colby ten.

He then gave the ball to the man who has come through for the Bears all season, senior tailback Gregg Bohannon. Despite playing the whole day with a separated shoulder, which kept him in obvious pain and hindered his ability to run, Gregg fought his way down to the one yard line, where Stafford snuck in for the winning score with only 3:47 to play.

It the Mules had any hopes of coming back the Bowdoin defense quickly squelched them, as Ken Fusco sacked White in the endzone for a safety.

The key to the game, as it has been all year, was the defense. It is unfair to mention only a few players as standout performers, for they played as a unit. A unit Coach Howard Vandersee claims is the best in NESCA football.

Though they lose their leading tackler in John Ollis, their captain in Chris Fitz, and standout defensive end Tom Traflet, the core of the defense returns next year. That is bad news, depending on which side of the ball you line up on.

The unsung heroes for the Polar Bears this year were the men on the offensive line. Led by senior center and co-captain Chip Davis, they opened holes for Bowdoin runners and protected Bear QB's all season. One need only look at Stafford's 921 yards passing, the Bear's 16 rushing touchdowns, or Bohannon's 1092 (Continued on page eleven)

The women's basketball team is shown here preparing for the upcoming season. Photo by Asaf Farashuddin

Freshman harrier qualifies for Nationals

TOD DILLON
ORIENT Staff

The transition from high school to college cross country is not always easy. For Freshman Marilyn Fredey, it has been a successful adaptation. Her performance last Saturday in the New England Division III National Qualifier at Southeastern Massachusetts University earned her the opportunity to compete this weekend in the Division III National Championship held at Hope College in Holland, Michigan.

In her first year of college cross country running, Fredey had to contend with longer races, difficult terrain, and more talented and experienced competition. Fredey comes from Sarasota, Florida where she only began running cross country as a Junior. She expressed nervous anticipation over tomorrow's race saying, "this is the first really big race that I have ever run in."

Fredey has had an exceptional season, and if these early performances are any indication of things to come, the future is indeed bright for both her and the team. With everyone returning next year, the women's cross country team will be a force to be reckoned with in Division III.

Fredey is the sole representative for Bowdoin at the Nationals, and she expressed disappointment that some of her upperclassmen are not making the trip with her.

Fredey attributes part of her success to team co-captain Deanna Hodgkin '87, who has helped Fredey make the transition to college running smoother.

Marilyn Fredey

Two Polar Bears receive All-American honors

Halfback Audrey Augustin '88 and back Kathy McCormick '88 have been selected to the Northeast Region Division III Field Hockey All-American team. The team is sponsored by Penn Monto, manufacturers of field hockey sticks and balls, and is selected by the College Field Hockey Coaches Association.

Tri-Captain Augustin, an All-State selection last year, was elected to the Northeast's first team on the All-American ballot. She scored six points this season (1-5-6) and was constantly instrumental in leading the Polar Bears to a fine 9-3-1 season. Augustin's regional achievements qualify her for possible national All-America honors to be announced later this month.

McCormick was named to the Honorable Mention All-America squad in the Northeast Region. She was the dominant player in a defensive unit which allowed only 14 goals all season. A tremendous player, McCormick's relieving of this honor is well deserved.

The men's hockey team prepares for the season opener against St. Anselm's next Tuesday in what should prove to be the start of an exciting season. Photo by Lori Bodwell

Bladesmen sharpen skills

DAWN VANCE
ORIENT Asst. News Editor

Men's hockey kicks off its 1987-1988 season on Tuesday November 24 at 7:30 P.M. in an away game at St. Anselm's. This contest will prove the first in a season of lengthy road trips and tough divisional rivalries for the polar bears.

This year's team finds itself faced with an impressive past record and the loss of an exceptional senior class to graduation. Last season's hockey team racked up a record of 21-5 (20-4 in ECAC East, 2nd place). Graduating seniors include the top two scorers in Bowdoin history, John McGough and John Wixtead, Mike McCabe, and defensive partners Jon Leonard and Adam Weinberg.

The Polar Bears do however anticipate a strong season again this year as 16 lettermen return to the team. These returning lettermen include seniors Tom Aldrich, Dave Dombrowski, Jamie Everett, Brendan Hickey, Captain Steve Ilkos, Roger Ladda, Ryan McGuire, Brad Rabitor, Captain Mark Smyth and Steve Thornton, juniors Steve Janas, Kevin Potter and Kevin Powers, and sophomores Alan Carkner, Jeff Gorman and Kurt Liebach.

Newcomers to this year's squad include junior Brandon Sweeney, sophomore Jim Pincok, and freshmen Brad Chin, Ray Duffley and Thomas Johannson. Other returning players include junior Gerry Kronin, and sophomores Mike Cavanaugh and Paul Nelson. Also likely to receive playing time are freshmen Craig Eaton and Jeff Wood.

The strength of this year's team will lie in its quickness up front and what men's hockey team coach Terrence Meagher describes as "excellent goaltending". The defense, however, is young and will say Coach Meagher "need some game experience". Meagher said, "We lost players to graduation - some players who played in key positions last season. We need somebody who can pick up the slack. We feel we have the individuals if they have the time to pick up that role."

With a solid nucleus of experienced players the polar bears are looking forward to the strong competition in the ECAC this year and are anticipating excellent hockey play. Coach Meagher, however has stressed that he is not using the past two hockey seasons as a meas-

(Continued on page eleven)

Challenging season awaits men's basketball

The men's basketball team will be led this year by senior Kevin Hancock. Photo by Asaf Farrashuddin

CHRISTOPHER BOONE
ORIENT Contributor

The Men's Varsity Basketball season begins at home Tuesday night against UMaine-Farmington. After two and a half weeks of formal practice, Head Coach Tim Gilbride (25-23), in his third year, says the outlook is optimistic but there are some serious questions that must be answered if the Polar Bears hope to improve on last season's 12-12 record.

The most pressing question concerns the loss of Chris Kiritsy '87, a two-year point guard for the Bears. "The loss of Chris Kiritsy will create a major void. In addition to averaging 16.7 points per game, Chris also did the majority of our ball-handling against full-court pressure and in end-of-the-game situations. How we react in those situations this year will be a major determining factor in our success," says Coach Gilbride. That void may very well be filled by Al Bugbee, a 6'0" freshman with whom Coach Gilbride is impressed. Another possible heir to Kiritsy is 5'10" Mike Burnett, a junior, who has proven ball-handling skills and tremendous athletic ability.

The blending of the experienced players and the new players is another question that must be addressed. Bowdoin's roster balances five returning seniors with five freshmen. "We have a fine group of returning players who should provide us with experience and a quality group of new players who should provide us with depth. How well these two groups blend together will be the key to our season," adds Coach Gilbride. And to further complicate matters, Steve Drigotas, a 6'4" three-year veteran forward is sidelined for at least the first game with a recurring knee injury. "Missing his experience at forward puts us further behind than we would be at this point with him in there," states Coach Gilbride.

The frontcourt is the strength of this year's squad, boasting 6'8" co-captain Joe Williams as its mainstay. A three-year stellar starter, Joe seems to be ready for his biggest season yet and that is no easy task.

Last season, Joe compiled a 15.8 point scoring average while averaging 9.3 rebounds a game as well. "Joe has worked very hard in the off season and looks very determined to have a successful senior year. We are looking for him to pick up on both his scoring and rebounding averages," said Coach Gilbride.

The forward position looks solid as well with seasoned veterans John Cole '88 and Phil Napolitano '88 adding ability and experience. Dan Train, a 6'6" freshman from Portland rounds out a devast-tating frontcourt. "At this time," Gilbride says, "Dan Train looks to play a lot and maybe start."

Co-captain Kevin Hancock leads a talented yet unproven backcourt. Hancock, an all-CBB performer last season, will be called upon for both leadership and scoring this year. With a 12.5 point scoring average and 81 assists, Hancock is most impressive from behind the three-point line.

"Kevin played very well at the end of last season and should have an outstanding senior year," states Gilbride. "His three-point shooting ability will make him a constant concern for opposing teams. If Kevin can continue this season he headed the last one (shooting confidently and thus being a threat every time he touches the ball), then that will open up alot for Williams and the rest of the frontcourt."

Rounding out the guard spots are Bugbee, Burnett and sophomore Mike Roque, who at 6'3" can play the small forward position as well.

The Bears will be put to the test right away, UMaine-Farmington, a team which defeated Bowdoin by four points last season, poses a serious threat. "They were tough last year and they're returning all their players with the addition of a big gun in the middle. They also boast two quick guards, a threatening situation to Bowdoin's slower shooting guards."

X-Men finish mixed season

DAVID NUTE
ORIENT Staff

The Men's Cross Country Team finished their season last week in competition at the NCAA Division III New England Regional Meet. The race was held at Southeastern Massachusetts University on a tough, snow covered, five mile course. Bowdoin runners placed fourteenth as a team, a full 230 points behind the first place 123 point performance of Saint Joseph's College.

Bowdoin's first individual finisher was Todd Dillon, who claimed twenty second place with a time of 26:14. This performance was not enough to grant Dillon the opportunity to participate in the NCAA Nationals, as only the first nine finishers were awarded this privilege. Dillon, however, finished only fifty seconds out of first place, and only twenty seconds behind the ninth place finisher.

The second runner from Bowdoin to cross the line was Marty Malague in seventy ninth place, running a distant seventy one seconds behind Dillon. Five seconds later John Dougherty in eighty second place. Dougherty was followed by Colin Sweeney and Lance Hickey who finished in ninetieth and ninety third places respectively. All team members who ran finished in the top half of the field, as there were 192 runners in the race.

The season at large has been a success for the team. With a team composed of three upper classmen and four freshmen, this year's effort can be seen as a truly building year.

Looking ahead, good things can be expected from freshman John Dougherty, whose efforts as the team's third man this year highlights his potential. Dougherty can look for strong support from his fellow freshmen on the team who all show promise as well. Finally, junior Todd Dillon can look forward to a great senior year. The team's top runner all season long shows great promise for the upcoming season.

"We did a lot better than last year - it was a building year," stated senior Colin Sweeney. "We didn't finish off as well as we wanted to, but the coach did a great job."

Women race to seventh place

DAVID NUTE
ORIENT Staff

Marilyn Fredey of Bowdoin's Cross Country Team has earned the right to run in the NCAA Division III Nationals. Fredey finished a strong ninth in last Saturday's Division III Regional Meet, where the top thirteen runners qualified for national competition.

Bowdoin's women finished seventh out of twenty six teams to end their season on a strong note. The team ran the snowy 3.1 mile course of Southeastern Massachusetts University, in the fifty degree week-end weather, to finish only 126 points behind the 111 point first place performance of Smith College.

Fredey ran a time of 19:42 while the Bear's second finisher Deanna Hodgkin place twentieth, only thirty seven seconds later. Of the 177 women in the race, Rose Dougherty placed fiftieth, forty three seconds after Hodgkin, while Kim Dirlam placed eighty third. Jennifer Snow, Gwen Kay, and Margret Heron all placed within twenty eight seconds of Dirlam to complete Bowdoin's team standings.

Everyone involved with Bowdoin's team feels that they had an excellent season. As Deanna Hodgkin states, "The season went well. We had lots of good races and the freshmen helped out a lot."

The team is looking ahead on two fronts, the first being to cheer Marilyn Fredey on to success in the nationals. Secondly, and in the long range, the team has several up and coming freshmen. Fredey is already running strongly, and she has an equally young and solid team behind her.

UNIQUE HOUSING OPPORTUNITY FOR FEMALE BOWDOIN STUDENTS

Rooms in beautiful, newly renovated lovely Colonial home very near campus. Bedrooms have charming antique pine and oak bureaus and desks, new oak beds, and large closets. Share 3 all-new stylish tile baths and lovely new contemporary kitchen with new appliances, new cabinetry, cathedral ceiling. Refinished pumpkin pine floors; natural refinished doors. Spacious, quiet and clean. Large rooms offered double occupancy, $900.00 per semester plus security deposit. Single occupancy, $1400 per semester. All utilities included. Especially charming space for a few particularly discerning students. This is not a place for parties, etc! Care to take a look?

Call Mr. Boudette 729-7577
or please leave a message at 729-8616

the Samuel
Newman
House

Behind COLES TOWER

7 South St., Brunswick, Me. 04011
For Reservations, call (207) 729-6959

BED & BREAKFAST

KEGS • WINE • BEER

LOWEST PRICES • OUTSTANDING SELECTION

HAVE A HAPPY, SAFE THANKSGIVING!

Cask and Ken

26 Rock Road, Brunswick, 729-4711 Mon., Sat. 10 to 6

AN INTERNSHIP IN LONDON

— in the Spring, Summer or Fall Quarter could help your career prospects

1988 dates:- Spring - April 11 - June 19
Summer - June 1 - Aug. 9
Fall - Sept. 5 - Dec. 11

Places available in: BUSINESS, POLITICS, LAW FIRMS, MUSEUMS, RESEARCH LABS, SOCIAL SERVICES,
HEALTH CARE, TOWN PLANNING, EDUCATION

Fees from $2,080 (inc. board & lodging) + credit + air fare

For further details and credit arrangements contact:
EPA USA Office, The Study Abroad Office
Marymount College, on Campus
Tarrytown, NY 10591
(914) 631-3200

Final football statistics

TEAM STATISTICS

Bowdoin	Opponents
152	First Downs 108
422	Rushes 354
1739	Rushing Yards 1182
1182	Passing Yards 1118
2921	Total Offense 2300
365.6	Total Offense/Game 287.5
23	Total Touchdowns 17
16	Touchdowns Rushing 7
04	Touchdowns Passing 7
192	Passes Attempted 174
88	Passes Completed 78
45.8	Completion Pct. 44.8
07	Had Intercepted 12
50/1714	Punts/Yards 51/1873
34.3	Punt Average 36.7
29/15	Fumbles/Lost 25/9
54/462	Penalties/Yards 45/400
16.5	Quarterback Sacks 18

SCORE BY QUARTERS

	1	2	3	4	TOTAL
Bowdoin	50	35	19	60	162
Opponents	46	41	21	23	131

PUNT RETURN

Player	No.	Yards	Avg.	Long
Cavanaugh	11	36	3.3	8
Bohannon	8	64	8.0	14

KICKOFF RETURNS

Player	No.	Yards	Avg.	Long
Cavanaugh	19	350	18.4	35
Cronin	05	53	10.6	16
Popeo	04	62	15.5	32
Hayden	01	04	4.0	4

PUNTING

Player	No.	Yards	Avg.	Long
Kirch	34	1242	36.5	71
Hartnett	14	479	34.2	57

INTERCEPTIONS

Player	No.	Yards	Avg.	Long
McLaughlin	4	79	19.8	72*
Burnett	3	13	4.3	8*
Sanders	2	25	12.5	23
Conroy	2	21	10.5	21
Fusco	1	17	17.0	17
Ollis	1	0	0.0	0

*Return for TD

RUSHING

Player	Att.	Gain	Loss	Net	Avg.	TD	Long
Bohannon	205	1146	54	1092	5.3	11	47
Stafford	72	278	106	172	2.4	2	18
Kirch	52	323	133	190	3.7	2	47
Ledbury	31	144	2	142	4.6	0	24
Deveaux	31	94	13	81	2.6	0	11
Cronin	18	43	8	35	1.9	1	10
Popeo	7	23	00	23	3.3	0	5
Hartnett	3	3	5	-2	0.0	0	2
Sheehan	2	4	0	4	2.0	0	3
Cavanaugh	1	2	0	2	2.0	0	2
Bowdoin	422	2060	321	1739	4.1	16	47
Opponents	353	1477	295	1182	3.3	7	40

PASSING

Player	Att.	Com.	Int.	Yards	TD	Pct.	Rating
Stafford	137	65	06	921	03	47.4	102.4
Kirch	56	25	01	261	01	44.6	83.7
Bohannon	01	00	00	00	00	00	00
Bowdoin	194	90	07	1182	04	45.8	96.27
Opponents	174	78	12	1118	09	44.8	98.77

PASS RECEIVING

Player	No.	Yds.	Avg.	TD	Long	#/Game
Hayden	19	270	14.2	0	36	2.4
Herrmann	16	188	11.6	0	24	2.0
Cavanaugh	15	306	20.4	02	64	1.9
Bohannon	14	174	12.4	0	45	1.8
Bilodeau	7	89	12.7	1	14	0.9
Deveaux	6	36	6.0	0	11	0.9
Ledbury	4	45	11.3	1	17	0.7
Sousa	4	32	8.0	0	20	0.6
Cronin	2	28	14.0	0	14	0.3
Gans	1	14	14.0	0	14	1.0
Bowdoin	88	1182	13.6	04	64	11.0

Football

(Continued from page nine)

yards rushing, to know that they more than did their job.

All told, Bohannon rushed for over a 100 yards in every game, gained 1,330 total yards, and carried the ball 205 times—all Bowdoin records. He racked up two Golden Helmet awards, while leading the Polar Bears to a fine 5-3 record. The team will miss him next season, but as opponents can attest this year, there is always someone to surprise you.

Hockey

(Continued from page nine)

uring stick for his expectations for this year's squad. Meagher said, "I do not want to put any pressure on anyone to say that we're going to do the same as we have the last two years - those were special years and we're just looking forward to the best year we possibly can."

Meagher continued, "A 20 win season is a measuring stick in college hockey. I would be wrong to expect the team to do that."

Again this year the pressure is good and the expectations are high for Bowdoin hockey. Meagher stressed, "Every year we look forward to the season... we will not set a number of wins we'd like to see... we're going to concentrate on getting better as a team... it's unfair to expect the 20 win season measuring stick for college hockey... it's time to move on... I expect the team to do well and I want to do the best job we can possibly do."

Bowdoin	7	0	0	9-16
Colby	0	10	0	0-10

	Bowdoin	Colby	receiving	catches	yards
first downs	23	10	Bilodeau	3	54
r-yds.	60-231	37-104	Herrman	2	31
passing yds.	143	134	Cavanaugh	2	23
catt-l	13-23-0	12-27-2	Hayden	2	11
punts-avg.	7-34.3	7-36.7
pen-yds.	5-34	1-10
fum-lost	6-4	3-1

Bowdoin	att	yds.	TD's
rushing	26	104	0
Bohannon	20	84	2
Stafford

passing	att	comp	TD's
Stafford	23	13	0

Bowdoin-Stafford 11yd. run
Colby-22 yard FG
Colby-McNinch 10yd. pass from White
Bowdoin-Stafford 1yd. run
Bowdoin-Fusco safety of White

Intramural sports schedule

A-League Basketball

11/22	Morrell Gym	1:00	Baxter Force vs. L.N. Penetration
		2:00	Kappa Sig vs. Alfredo's
		3:00	Deke vs. Beta

B-League Basketball

11/23	Morrell Gym	7:00	Zete vs. 4B
		8:00	Late Night vs. Penetration
		9:00	Baxter Force vs. Pointers

12/1	Morrell Gym	7:00	Kappa Sig vs. Booter's
		8:00	H-O-P vs. Pointers
		9:00	Baxter Force vs. Pilers

12/1	Sargent Gym	7:00	Zete vs. Late Night
		8:00	Psi U vs. 4B

Co-Ed Basketball

11/23	Sargent Gym	7:00	Randomness IV vs. Winthrop
		8:00	Maine Moguls vs. Delta Sig

A-League Hockey

12/3		10:00	Beta vs. T.D.
------	--	-------	---------------

B-League Hockey

11/30		10:00	T.D. vs. Zete
12/3		9:00	Deke vs. Beta

Co-Ed Hockey

11/23		9:00	Delta Sig vs. Chi Psi
		10:00	Migratory Game Fishes vs. Zete

11/30		8:00	Kappa Sig vs. Moore-Ons
		9:00	A.D. vs. Mother Puckers

Volleyball

11/22	Sargent Gym	1:30	Psi U vs. Deke
		2:30	SigFigs vs. Coleman Rammers

STUDIO

3 Bowker St.
Brunswick, Me.

725-2694

Within walking distance
of campus.

only $7 with Bowdoin ID

Tontine Hair Fashions

207-729-5475

BOWDOIN STUDENT DISCOUNT
FOR HAIRCUTS
BRING I.D.

Flowers by Knowles

We offer a complete

florist service.

15 Jordan Ave.

725-2461

SNOW WAY.

Snow better way to keep your eyes clear than with a new pair of Bolle ski goggles from the great selection at Coastal Opticians—specially priced all this month!

Coastal Opticians

138 Maine St., Brunswick
729-4481

Sexual Harassment

(Continued from page one)

sidered an excuse for an infraction of this policy," the pamphlet reads.

The educational process has increased awareness of sexual harassment, but area counselors feel more can be done to educate people on sexual harassment. Though there were no reported cases of sexual harassment heard by the Student Judiciary Board last year, the issue has not gone away.

During last year's Women's Awareness Week, posters billing a film on lesbianism were defaced. A recent incident of alleged sexual harassment also has drawn the attention of the college community.

Director of the College Counseling Service Patricia S. Rathbone feels the education program sponsored by the college is a step in the right direction, but the program must be expanded. She feels the definition of sexual consent is still a "grey area" to many college students and must be explained to them.

"A lot of students don't know what constitutes sexual consent. A lot of students don't know that a person who is drunk can't consent. You can't assume a student at Bowdoin knows about it (consent)," said Rathbone.

Assistant Dean of Students Ana Brown said she feels the college does have a problem with sexual harassment and agrees awareness to the problem should be heightened through a continuous educational process.

"There could be more (education). We've got to educate males and females in a variety of roles as to what sexual harassment is... It (the process) should be ongoing. Having a 'one shot' guest speaker doesn't make an impression. Sexual harassment has no place in our society and worse yet (even less) in an educational institution, where it does not support goals of an educational institution," said Brown.

Brown also said Bowdoin's small size may keep victims from coming forth with their unpleasant encounter. Brown said the college tries to offer as much support and comfort to a victim as possible.

Audrey Alexander, director of the Bath-Brunswick Rape Crisis Health Line, said the issues of sexual harassment and assault are more extensive than many people realize. She cited statistics gathered by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the National Coalition Against Sexual Assault, showing sexual assault as "the fastest growing violent crime in the country."

Alexander believes a prevailing attitude dilutes the crime of sexual assault and hampers the educational process. She also believes many "myths" stand in the way of reducing assault and harassment. She said the educational process must be expanded to put a stop to this "crime of violence."

"The educational process is inadequate. We've got to make not just the men, but make the women aware (of harassment and assault)... the present situation is a product of a society that holds an attitude... if men don't view harassment as a right, they don't view it as harassment. They view it as witty or clever," said Alexander.

"The definitions between the sexes as to what constitutes harassment are different... Many men don't view (their action) as assault. They rationalize and say, 'she asked for it...' this is what's known as victim-blaming... The crime (of assault) reflects violence, anger, and a need for power or domination. It is a crime of violence, not of passion," said Alexander.

Bowdoin women agree that sexual harassment and assault are major issues of concern. Some women feel the social environment at Bowdoin reflects a sexism prevalent in today's society and said this sexist attitude makes women hesitant to come forward with problems.

"I think the majority of cases are never reported. There is a huge stigma against bringing issues up. By and large, most of what happens people are not aware of," said Kimberly Surkan '90.

"Sexual harassment is not just rape or attempted rape, it's anything offensive or degrading to women... There's sexism in society, so there's sexism at Bowdoin. Sexism is a form of harassment," said Rachel Dobkin '90, president of the Bowdoin Women's Association.

Bowdoin College has had few reported incidents of sexual harassment or assault in the last two years. However, this is one statistic where even one case is too many. Further, how many cases go unreported or never appear before the Judiciary Board?

Educational programs continue to expand in order to enlighten the public.

Dismissals

(Continued from page one)

the man's staying at the house a violation of the "suggestion" made by the college. It was not until later that missalsPond said the written terms of the suspension. The letter made it "pretty clear" that the men were not supposed to be in fraternities, Pond said.

Nyhus said the college was forced to take "severe and prompt action" in response to "extremely serious and repeated violations of the college disciplinary standards."

On Nov. 17, Nyhus issued a memo to the faculty, administrative staff and students regarding the case. The memo explained the reasoning behind the permanent dismissal and addressed the issue of sexual harassment in general stating "specific charges in this case were never presented in a formal hearing, the severity of the disciplinary actions taken by the College demonstrates that acts of sexual assault are intolerable."

Although the men were never brought before the Judiciary Board on sexual assault charges, college policy dictates that their college transcripts will indicate permanent dismissal from the college and will be accompanied by a note explaining the circumstances the prompted the action.

Chairman of the Judiciary Board Samuel Shepherd '88, endorsed the actions of the college. Shepherd said the dismissals were "fully within the dean's power," and "in no way circumvented the J-Board process without proper authorization." The board was prepared to hear the case on Friday, Nov. 13.

The men were not able to be reached for comment.

A Likely Yarn
90 UNION STREET
BRUNSWICK, ME 04011
(207) 725-2147

Coming Workshops Saturdays 9 - 12

Nov. 28 - Finishing Techniques

Dec. 5 - Two-color Knitting

Dec. 12 - Christmas Decorations

call for details and sign up!

HOMEWORKERS WANTED!
TOP PAY! C.I.
121 24th Ave., N. W. Suite 222
Norman, Oklahoma 73069

Now that you've gotten into Bowdoin, IBM can help you get more out of it.

The road to graduation is paved with term papers, lab reports, cramming, all-nighters and, of course, exams.

To ease that journey and awaken your professors to your exceptional abilities, we suggest the newest member of the IBM® Personal System/2® family: the Model 25 Collegiate.

It's a high-powered personal computer with advanced graphics capabilities, designed to fit on your desk without adding to the clutter. And it comes with a generous 640 KB memory, two 3.5" diskette drives and an aid package every student can appreciate—a big discount.

plus Microsoft® Windows 1.04, Write, Paint, Cardfile, IBM DOS 3.3 and a mouse.

Pop in the load-and-go diskette and your Model 25 Collegiate is set to help you write and revise long papers and illustrate your points by combining words and graphics. So your professors will draw favorable conclusions about your work.

For more information on the Model 25 Collegiate, visit the IBM Education Product Coordinator on campus.

You'll quickly learn how to get the most out of the IBM Personal System/2. IBM

Microsoft is a registered trademark of the Microsoft Corporation. IBM is a registered trademark and Personal System/2 is a trademark of the International Business Machines Corporation. © IBM 1987.

CRUISE SHIPS NOW HIRING. M/F

Summer & Career Opportunities (Will Train). Excellent pay plus world travel. Hawaii, Bahamas, Caribbean, etc. CALL NOW: 206-736-0775 Ext.544F

TYPISTS - Hundreds weekly
at home! Write: P.O. Box 17
Clark, New Jersey 07066

1988 MOUNTAIN SUMMER JOBS

Challenging, rewarding outdoor positions. Trail crew, Backcountry Shelter Caretakers, and Volunteer Program Staff (Camp Coordinator, Cook, Field Crew leaders). White Mountains, Berrishes, Catskills. Wage, room and board, other benefits.

Details/application from Appalachian Mt. Club
Trails Program, Box 298,
Gorham, N.H. 03581

Part-Time -
Home Mailing Program!
Excellent income!
Detail, send self-addressed,
stamped envelope.
WEST,
Box 5877, Hillsdale, N.J. 07025

Dressmaking - Tailoring
Alterations of all kinds
leather, suede, fur
Custom-made suits
11 Cedar St, Brunswick
M-F, 7 to 5; Sat, 7:30 to 12:30
725-5305

BIG RED Q PRINTING

next to the College

- stationery
- resumes
- posters
- newsletters

212E Maine Street
Brunswick
729-4840

OPINION

David H. Otto

Justice at Bowdoin?

Editor's note: The names of the Bowdoin students involved in this incident have been deleted at their request or on advice of legal counsel.

I am writing in response to the alleged sexual harassment charges and the eventual permanent dismissal from Bowdoin of _____ and _____.

To set the record straight for the gossiping masses, the dismissal resulted from their supposed breaking of an Immediate Temporary Suspension issued by Dean Lewallen as a result of sexual harassment charges filed against them. As stated in Article 4 of the Code of Student Conduct and Social Responsibility: "The Dean of the College or the Dean of Students may require that a student leave the campus prior to formal disciplinary hearings. The Dean may take this action if he or she believes that the continued presence of the student at Bowdoin will jeopardize the safety and welfare of the community, or that the student's presence appears contrary to the best interests of the campus environment. A student under immediate temporary suspension must normally leave Brunswick within 24 hours of notification by the Dean."

This viewpoint is not debating whether or not the Temporary Suspension was broken or not. That issue will be fought out in court. My focus is on Dean Lewallen, Dean Nyhus, and President Greason's decision to expel the two students for breaking a Temporary Suspension in light of their sexual harassment charges.

It has been my understanding that in the American system one is innocent until proven guilty. Through my own personal experiences with Dean Lewallen and through talking with many friends who have been involved with J-Board charges, I have discovered that this is not the case at Bowdoin. In the Bowdoin system one is guilty until he can prove his specific degree of guiltiness or maybe even complete innocence.

The case in question is a perfect example of this. Expelling a student for breaking a Temporary Suspension resulting from charges that have not been proven is a crime itself, especially when neither of these individuals have had any previous behavioral problems. In fact their Bowdoin records are outstanding both academically and athletically. What if the J-Board hearing had taken place and they were both charged with crimes resulting in a suspension of a semester or two, or maybe even found innocent? If this was the case then Dean Lewallen, Dean Nyhus, and President Greason sent two innocent individuals to their deaths. These serious sexual harassment charges were obviously taken into consideration by the administration for a mere breaking of a temporary suspension. This is not justice and reflects poorly on our administration and school. I suggest the administration should have notified the J-Board of the broken temporary suspension and let them make the appropriate changes in their sentence after hearing the case. After all, is not the goal of our school's justice system to have students judged by their peers? The administration showed no regard for, or faith in, this system.

In addition to the entire idea of Bowdoin having an immediate temporary suspension is ludicrous. The administration expects a student to go find a hotel room in Freeport or Portland, away from the support and advice of their friends, advisors, teachers, coaches, the school chaplain, and fraternities and simply self-destruct by himself. What if a student on temporary suspension commits suicide? My guess is that Bowdoin would be hit with a lawsuit so big it would make the endowment look like pennies. I think the school should rethink this policy.

The saddest part of this whole nightmare is that neither student will have the chance to present their case and story to their J-Board peers and to the Bowdoin community. They are gone! Their reputations and memories lie in the gullible, gossiping Bowdoin masses.

The deans and the president knew this case was too hot to go in front of the J-Board. They knew the students had a strong case that would not result in permanent expulsion as many of the different groups on campus wanted. They knew this was not a typical sexual harassment case, but a very complicated event in which a large variety of factors had to be taken into consideration. The administration acted in their own best interest, not those of the students in question. The administration took the easy way out. They kept the case out of the J-Board and the eye of public scrutiny. They yielded to the pressure from various groups on campus that wanted to see the men expelled. By expelling them on the technicality of breaking temporary suspension, they saved the school the publicity of having sexual harassment problems on campus.

This is not the way to run a college. The case should have been heard by the J-Board and the true facts known. The school community could then have reevaluated itself and corrected the problems that lead to sexual harassment misunderstandings and prevent future happenings. It was wrong for the administration to find a quick solution to this case at the expense of the students involved.

Dean Lewallen, Dean Nyhus, President Greason, this is not a game. You are playing with people's lives and futures.

Dawn Vance and Liz Millan

Executive Board reflects lethargic student body

On November 10, Chairman of the Executive Board George Hillhouse '88 addressed an issue which seems inherent throughout the life of the Bowdoin College student body: lethargy. Hillhouse suggested that this lethargy may stem from the absence of issues which have engaged the student body. He said that perhaps the board is no longer a reactive one as it has been in the past and that it is time for the board to make active decisions - that it take the initiative to consider issues not posed by the administration.

This lethargy, however, is not strictly an Executive Board problem; rather, it is one that extends to the student body itself. Perhaps what Hillhouse suggested to the Exec Board could also be urged of the student body: that it stand up and take a stance on issues or simply become more involved in what is going on on campus. Rather than being a reactive body the students, too, could become an active body and create issues for themselves.

One such issue which deserves not only the attention of the Executive Board but of the students since it pertains directly to them is the creation of a student center. The Student Life Facilities Committee held a forum on Thursday, November 5 which dealt with such a possibility. This forum was not widely attended. How can the administration discern the wants and needs of the student body if it is not allowing its voice to be heard? Twelve voices are hardly representative of the totality of the student body.

If the students want something done they can't just sit back and complain among their friends. They must come forward and let their voices be heard.

One of the reasons presented for the poor turnout at the forum was a failure of communication - students didn't know that the forum was taking place. This failure of communication in turn stemmed from a lack of centrality. A student center would alleviate this problem by bringing the students and activities closer together.

A student center most likely would bring students into more contact with one another. But would this necessarily lead to more involvement in activities? Would the creation of this new student center suddenly generate interest and involvement in activities where previously little existed?

Although the proposed student center would provide something some view as desperately needed on this campus - centrality - it would not necessarily lead students to greater involvement and the desire to generate change rather than simply reacting to it. It is the students themselves who must stand up, take a stance on issues and let their opinions be heard. They can not rely on the creation of a building to serve this function for them.

Involvement stems from the students and it is now, perhaps years before the ground for a student center is broken, that attitudes can change and students can assume an active stance rather than simply reacting to their environment. Students must assume the responsibility of making active decisions. They must stop watching things happen and start making the things they want to see happen themselves.

Letter

To the Editor:

I would like to clarify a few misconceptions printed in Mr. Richard Lindahl's article and Mr. John Cahill's editorial concerning the role of athletic ratings in the admissions process. First, the Admissions Committee Report on Athletics did not "demonstrate that athletes with excellent ratings had indeed been preferred to students with superior academic credentials." This statement implies that the central analysis of the report compared admitted students with athletic ratings on their admissions records to students who were either rejected or put on the "wait list." This is simply not true. The committees report compared some of the athletes' credentials to those of other non-rated students in their class. I respect the position of the majority of the Admissions Committee and I acknowledge the tremendous effort of all those involved in researching and writing the report. However, I personally feel that the conclusions of the report were predetermined and inconclusive. Furthermore, despite Mr. Cahill's contention, limiting the number of athletic ratings to 200 is a rather radical departure in the admissions procedure. I dissent from the majority's opinion because I fail to see the purpose behind such a strict limitation.

If the purpose behind the majority's recommendation is to alleviate some of the problems associated with "edges" in the admissions process, then would it not be reasonable to evaluate all edges that are considered in the process. Students who receive athletic ratings are presumably similar to other students awarded edges because of their special talents or unique potential. The similarity resides in the fact that "edge" students are not admitted solely because of that edge. Every student who is admitted to Bowdoin deserves to be here. Every student that is admitted to Bowdoin is, indeed, a RISK, but a risk with credentials. There are many high school students who are admitted to Bowdoin with outstanding academic records. The Bowdoin Admissions Office does an excellent job of identifying that "something" extra in the students that it admits. Having worked with the administration in a number of areas, I have become quite familiar with the tremendous respect accorded to Bill Mason and his staff. To insinuate that his office is admitting unqualified applicants is deplorable and an insult to the integrity of the entire Bowdoin community. Admission, by definition, means discrimination in one form or another, but not sacrifice.

If the purpose behind the majority's recommendation focuses on a concern about the academic performance of athletes once they arrive at Bowdoin, I would again assert that the recommendation is inconsistent. I urge the majority, the zero-option proponents, and the faculty to be comprehensive in evaluating the "P-minus student" population. I emphasize the word "student" as opposed to the perjorative term of "jock," because, contrary to popular belief, there are students at Bowdoin who are not athletes that are "P-students." If the faculty is concerned with this "P" situation, it needs to take a comprehensive look at the factors that contributed to the problem. It is difficult to predict how students will perform at Bowdoin. Not all "P-students" are athletes; not all athletes are poor students. Indeed, most are not. So called "jocks" can be and have been James Bowdoin Scholars, class presidents, Executive Board Chairmen, Rhodes Scholar candidates, student representatives and activists, thespians, artists, musicians, and the list goes on. It is crazy to think that a portion of the "P-population" can be eliminated by restricting athletic ratings. Poor academic performances need to be evaluated on many different levels, taking into account a variety of factors, including course load, study habits, social environment, pressures and even substance abuse. These are probably the most important factors affecting student performances after they arrive at Bowdoin and have nothing to do with the admissions process.

I would like to reiterate that I have the utmost respect for the opinion of the majority of the Admissions Committee members that advocated the 200 plan. However, I urge the faculty to ask themselves if such a restrictive limitation can be justified given the incomplete nature of the Admissions Report on Athletics. I am not saying the report is without merit. Indeed, the number of ratings is large and, perhaps, difficult to manage. However, the Athletic Department and Admissions Office can work out a workable number for themselves!

In closing I would like to echo Robert Greenlee's sentiments about the Orient's misquotations and lack of professionalism. I was quoted against my very explicit wishes. I expressed my feelings about not being quoted not only to Richard Lindahl but also to his assistant editor, Kevin Wesley. Mr. Lindahl's article was full of misquotations, misrepresentations, and out and out false information. Furthermore, before John Cahill writes an editorial he should have a firm understanding of what he is writing about. Perhaps some of the Orient staff, should consider researching before printing. By the way, my name is spelled Ann this is the fourth time you have misspelled it in print.

Sincerely,

Ann Marie St. Peter

Direct solutions

This week a statement was issued by Dean of the College Paul Nyhus outlining the details surrounding the expulsion from the college of two men accused of sexual assault and violating a temporary suspension meted out by the deans. In the letter, which was circulated to all students, faculty, and administrative staff, Dean Nyhus outlined fully who made the decision to separate the two men from the college and the rationale behind the dismissal.

Often it is difficult to follow the course of action which is both wise and ethical. In his letter, the Dean made clear the process which led to the decision, the parties who made that decision, and the administrative mechanism which permitted to be made. While some may disagree with the punishment, it can not be said that Nyhus tried to hide the facts, avoid responsibility or controversy, or "pass the buck." We may now criticize the administrative policies of the college or the manner in which the officers of the officers of the college applied them, but no one can say there was an attempt to hide the incident or downplay its seriousness and reflection on the college community. Nyhus's actions in this respect are in our opinion above question or reproach.

However, while we laud the fact that a comprehensive and clear statement was issued, we are disturbed by the last paragraph of that letter. The first disturbing aspect is mention of revising the college's policy regarding police notification in the case of rape, sexual assault, or other serious felonies. We believe that the college should have no policy of notification. Being a member of a college community does not remove us from the rest of society, nor does it deprive us of our right or power to make decisions. In this case, the victim is always the final arbiter of notification of the police, and the college should keep its own house.

Secondly, we condemn in the strongest terms the Dean's suggestion that such cases should be removed entirely from the purview of the Student Judiciary Board. It might well be a good idea to have a specially trained board to investigate cases of sexual abuse, but that panel should have no decision-making power. It should merely report its findings in an objective manner to the Judiciary Board, who will then carry out their duty. Sexual assault and harassment are serious offenses, but removing them from the normal due process of the college's disciplinary system is fair neither to the victims nor the accused. Despite the temptation to hide the shame of sexual abuse, putting it in its own special cupboard aggravates rather than solves the problem.

Schedule fairness

When the faculty voted last week to move the Chapel Talk series to Friday instead of Wednesday mornings, they made a mistake that will damage their own credibility as well as injuring one of the Interfraternity Council's efforts to satisfy demand on the part of the faculty and administration to intensify fraternity involvement in the intellectual life of the campus.

The faculty voted that chapel talks should be moved from Wednesday to Friday because there are classes during the 10 a.m. time period when the talks are presently scheduled. We agree with Ross Baker '90, IFC coordinator for the program, who feels that the Friday time slot will decrease student attendance at the lectures. Students leaving for weekend trips, members of travelling sports teams, and those responsible for coordinating the college's weekend activities will be far less likely to attend on Friday than on Wednesday, and outnumber those 200 or so students in the Wednesday 10 a.m. classes.

Another concern is that the same professors who say that no non-academic activities should be scheduled during the 8 a.m. to 3 a.m. class period seem to have trouble coordinating their schedules with those of the student body. We mean specifically those who can not contain their classes to the time frame they insist student groups adhere to rigidly. Many professors schedule not only occasional movie viewings, conferences or discussion sections, but regular weekly class periods outside that time frame. They force students to choose between taking their classes and participating in extracurricular activities which may meet at the same time. We do not imply that these activities take any precedence over academics. We ask only that the faculty adhere fairly to the agreement they made with the student body regarding what time is reserved for classes and what time for other activities.

Another concern is faculty approval of a proposed scheduling plan for next year which would have classes meeting on the hour throughout the day, with no break for meals. If the faculty chooses to approve this plan, they will have no justification for demanding the removal of chapel talks to Friday. Concern has been expressed by faculty and administration that the school is becoming too big to cater to the needs of individual groups. If the school makes no allowances for these groups, they may not make scheduling demands of them.

Letters

Professor Steven Cerf walking in the rain. Photo by Greg Merrill

Silhouette

To the Editor:

Greg Merrill's evocative photo in a recent Orient of German professor Steven Cerf inevitably brought to this reader's mind Otto Bohler's well-known silhouette of Johannes Brahms, enclosed. The composer habitually ate at a Viennese restaurant, "zum roten Igel," or the Red Hedgehog, which explains the creature above his left foot; is Cerf too on the march to a favorite eatery? Brahms' Homburg, cigar, and beard are mere accessories that could easily be added to Cerf for more verisimilitude. In matters that count, however—pose, gait, stature, and general air of confident forward motion—the two pictures bear a remarkable resemblance.

Sincerely,
John F. Loud '51

Brahms

Criticism

To the Editor:

Mr. Najberg requests constructive criticism of the Orient by the faculty. My reply is that the editors learn to use proper English grammar. Although the president's spoken words were misquoted, the Orient editors misprint even my written words—presumably to edit them—and in the process put poor grammar not only in the president's mouth but also in my pen.

A passage from my letter to the Orient reads "this characteristic does not set the liberal arts college apart, and could not be considered primary to its definition." The passage appears in the Orient as "this characteristic does not set liberal arts colleges apart, and could not be considered primary to its definition." May I remind the editors that the "s" in "its" does not make "it" plural?

If Mr. Najberg finds athletic events intellectually stimulating, perhaps he and his fellow editors should attend them more faithfully in order to improve their ("its") grammar. I for one will continue to enjoy sports for what they are: an entertaining respite from intellectual pursuits.

Sincerely,
Robert Greenlee

Thanks

To the Editor:

Please pass along our sincerest thanks to all those members of the various fraternities who volunteered their time and energy to insure the success of our recent annual Halloween Goblins Parade and Creepy Creature Parties. It is a very big program, if not the biggest for us, and can be quite hectic and confusing. There is no way we can offer programs of this magnitude without the help of volunteers.

The Parks and Recreation Department receives much credit for the success of these special events, but we believe in passing the credit on to those who help with the actual presentation. The Bowdoin College Interfraternity Council was, once again, a key part in insuring that the parade and parties were a success, as in past years.

Again, please extend my appreciation to all of those who worked. We look forward to working with the Inter-Fraternity Council again next year.

Sincerely,
George M. LeVeque
Assistant Director
Brunswick Parks and Recreation Department

Letters

Compliment

To the Editor:

I would like to compliment Mr. Alan Harris on the fine article he did on the Bowdoin Pines. It was accurate, well-written, and pointed out the interesting valuable resource that many of us don't even realize we have. I hope that as a result of Alan's article more people will partake of the beauty of this area and gain an appreciation for one of the last major forested areas in the middle of Brunswick that is still available for the College and community use.

Fortunately for the College Professor Wheelwright came forward and expressed some concerns about the work that was being done in this area. As a result of his interest and valuable input we are reconsidering our directions for this area as Alan pointed out in his article. The Physical Plant is always interested in input into the management of its resources. I would invite any others that may have some concerns or interests that they would like to express in this area to please contact me at 3311.

Sincerely yours,
David N. Barbour
Director of Physical Plant

Fashion

To the Editor:

I hope the rest of the campus is as sick of listening to Mr. Fenton's soliloquies as I am. A former newspaper editor should know that in order to "sue up the animals" he/she must present an issue of relevance and importance. Attempting to spur controversy by critically analyzing the dressing habits of Bowdoin women is pointless and pathetic. Whether the women wear three dollar army fatigues or hundred dollar pants from Bloomingdale's formulates no apparent point. Yes, it seems Mr. Fenton has "lost" his "grip" in picking a topic which Bowdoin students have risen above without even a hackle. "Semper Ubi Sub Ubi."

Sharon Yandian

Editor's note: "Semper ubi sub ubi" is a Latin pun which all classics majors and graduates of Catholic high schools should know. "Semper" means always; "sub" means under; "ubi" means where.

Dining

To the Editor:

We were very concerned when we read in a recent issue of the Orient that at least one student is unsatisfied with the quantity and quality of the vegetarian fare. We realize that we can not please "all of the people all of the time" but we would like to think that we are meeting our mission of providing wholesome, nutritious meals for Bow-doin students.

Because we want to treat each student diner as our guest, we are anxious to hear comments and criticisms. To enhance communication between student diners and Dining Service, we established the Dining Service Student Advisory Committee last year. All students on board are sent an invitation to join the group at the beginning of each semester. Those who are interested but can not attend on a consistent basis are welcome to attend any meeting. We are presently meeting on Monday mornings at 10:00 a.m. in the Small Dining Room at Moulton Union and we occasionally meet in the evening instead.

The topics of our discussions range from the content of bag lunches, holiday dinner menus, and theme meals to, in this case, the comments made by the student in his letter. To address these problems, the Dining Committee generated a number of ideas that we intend to act upon, including:

1. Conducting a vegetarian food preference survey,
2. Providing a more accessible "Suggestion Box" or bulletin board and
3. Publicizing the existence of the Dining Service Student Advisory Committee

This semester's Dining Service Student Advisory Committee includes: Pam Butler, Patrick Coughlin, Monique DaSilva, Tamara Dassanayake, Barie-Lynn Dolby, Kathryn Groothuis, Douglas Hoffer, Gwen Kay, David Wilby.

Again, we do welcome and need student input regarding criticisms, suggestions, concerns, and praise about your Dining Service.

Sincerely,
Larry Pinette
Dining Service Director
Mary Lou Kennedy,
Assistant Director

Patriot

To the Editor:

I've got to agree with Chris Briggs and the Bowdoin Patriot:

In the line of duty,
In the line of fire,
A heartless heart
Is the proper attire.

Mike Howe

Due to the large number of complaints regarding alleged misprints in recent weeks, the Orient has changed its policy regarding these complaints. Instead of writing a letter to the editor, anyone with questions about the accuracy of an article concerning him should contact the Orient at ext. 3300 to arrange a conference with the editorial board. To a newspaper, these are serious allegations about a serious misfeasance, and we intend to treat them as such.

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

"The College exercises no control over the content of the student writings contained herein and neither it, nor the Administration, nor the faculty assume any responsibility for the views expressed herein."

Lori Bodwell...Editor in Chief

Kevin Wesley...Assistant Editor
Adam Najberg...News Editor
Rosemarie Dougherty...Assoc. News Editor

Michael Botelho...Sports Editor
Jack Cahill...Editorial Editor
Susan Lyons...Contributing Editor

Tamara Dassanayake...Asst. News Editor
Eric Foushee...Business Manager
Alan Harris...Photography Editor
Mary Ann Lai...Photography Editor
Liz Millan...Asst. Entertainment Editor

Kathryn Nanovic...Production Manager
Justin Priendorf...Asst. Sports Editor
Stephen Reynolds...Features Editor
Sharon Smart...Entertainment Editor
Michael Townsend...Advertising Manager

Dawn Vance...Asst. News Editor

Production Staff: Vincent Jacks, Andrew Appel
Advertising Staff: Michelle Campagna, Kim Maxwell

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

Published by
THE BOWDOIN PUBLISHING COMPANY
LORI M. BODWELL ERIC F. FOUSHEE
ALBERT P. MAURO, JR.

Published weekly when classes are held during the Fall and Spring semester by the students of Bowdoin College. Address editorial communication to the Editor, subscription communication to the circulation manager, and business correspondence to the business manager at The Bowdoin Office, 12 Cleveland Street, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011, or telephone (207) 725-3300. The Bowdoin Orient reserves the right to edit any and all articles and letters. Subscriptions are $15.00 per year or $8.00 per semester. Past issues cannot be mailed. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to The Bowdoin Orient, Moulton Union, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011.

Wreath out and touch someone.

All Wreaths
can be shipped by us.

Order
EARLY.

Fresh Balsam Wreath - $15.00
Ecstasy Wreath - our most popular aromatic wreath Everlasting Wreath - Generously made with an intricate blend of dried flowers $21.50 - $38.50 - $45.00
Grape Vine Wreath - Natural grape vine with a spray of dried flowers and matching bow. Different sizes.
Christmas Wreath - Handcrafted of German stationery and different shades of ribbon for the holidays or year-round. $28.50
Cone Wreath - Different Sizes

Arrangements for Thanksgiving, Christmas

Balloon Bouquets & Fruit Baskets

Pauline's Bloomers

Tontine Mall, Brunswick

To order call: 725-5852

Major credit cards accepted

Meet Macintosh.™

Andy Palmer, Bowdoin senior, will introduce interested students and faculty to Apple's powerful Macintosh™ personal computers. Andy is available three times a week in the Computer Center of Hubbard Hall.

Bowdoin College students have two great models to choose from at special prices. The Macintosh Plus, which comes with one 800K disk drive, 1 megabyte of memory, keyboard and mouse.

And the Macintosh SE, which comes with either two built-in 800K drives, or one drive and an internal 20-megabyte hard disk. As well as choice of keyboards.

Whichever you choose, Apple offers a one-time, affordable student purchase price.

See the Macintosh in action at the Computer Center.

Meet Andy and Save over $200 on Macintosh system purchased by
Jan. 15

Authorized Dealer

Coastal Computer CENTER

MAINE'S largest Apple® dealer.

16 Forest Avenue, Portland 774-0741

The Tontine Mall, Brunswick 729-0298

This advertisement was designed, typeset and produced on an Apple LaserWriter™ personal computer and printed on an Apple LaserWriter™ printer. Apple and the Apple logo are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. Macintosh and LaserWriter are trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc.

condy gifts christmas cards ornaments
stocking stuffers holiday clothing accessories sweaters gift wrap paper bags tags ribbons bows pottery candles toys collectibles crabtree & Evelyn

why do
you think they call it

THE WORKS

141 MAINE ST. 729-8064
BRUNSWICK, ME 04011

Buy a printer with your Macintosh and conserve paper.

A Macintosh[®] personal computer and an Apple ImageWriter[™] II printer will save you hours of time. Not to mention gallons of correction fluid and reams and reams of paper.

And, if you buy both now, the first ream of paper you'll save will have a lovely green glow.

You'll save a bundle of cash when you purchase an ImageWriter II printer along with your choice of a Macintosh Plus or a Macintosh SE. Either way you'll be able to turn out beautifully written and beautifully printed papers.

And we'll even try to help you pay for your purchase with a variety of financing options.

We feel compelled to tell you, though, that a deal like this can't last forever. So it's a good idea to see your campus microcomputer center today. And join the conservation movement.

The power to be your best.[™]

MOULTON UNION BOOKSTORE

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

FIRST CLASS MAIL
U.S. Postage PAID
BRUNSWICK, ME
Permit No. 25

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

VOLUME CXVII

BOWDOIN COLLEGE, BRUNSWICK, MAINE, FRIDAY, DECEMBER 4, 1987

NUMBER 11

Fraternities not rushing to rush

TANYA WEINSTEIN
ORIENT Staff

Second semester is quickly approaching, and amidst the scramble to select courses, fraternity members are already thinking about a second semester rush.

While most fraternities are having second semester rush, several of the larger fraternities have decided against it citing both the success of first semester rush and the time commitment involved as reasons.

Both Delta Kappa Epsilon (Deke) and Beta Theta Pi (Beta) had approximately 36 drops this semester, and feel that this is a sufficient amount for their respective houses. Kevin Hancock '88, president of Deke this semester, said, "Rush is a big commitment. It takes up a lot of time...we prefer to do it once a year."

Mike Augustini '89, president of Theta Delta Chi (TD), said that the house has not yet decided whether or not to have a second semester rush, as they had a large drop class of 26 this semester. He said the house hopes to make a decision in the next week or so.

Alpha Kappa Sigma (Kappa Sig) is not having an official Rush next semester, according to house member Ken Fusco '89. The house had 17 drops this semester, and Fusco said, "This is a really big class for us, so we don't need to rush next semester. We will concentrate on a few people that we would like to see drop." He added that Kappa Sig usually has a second semester rush, but has traditionally had smaller drop classes in the past.

Zeta Psi (Zete), with 11 drops first semester, will be rushing again in January. However, it will be on a smaller scale than last semester, according to house president Val Foti '89, "We are going to rush those people who have shown an interest in the house already. Rush is an exhausting period for the house so we want to keep it small scale." Foti also said that Zete usually gets an average size drop class second semester, and is expecting about 10-15 drops.

Chi Psi will also be having a second semester rush. Ed Pond '88, house president, said there were eight drops this semester and "we're going to try to get another eight to ten." He said Rush will basically be the same thing as this semester, with functions such as study breaks during the evenings.

Alpha Phi, the sorority, will be participating in rush functions. The house got four new members this semester, and is hoping for more. According to president Kate Adams '89, next semester's rush will be "more casual and low key."

Peter Gergely '89, president of Psi Upsilon (Psi U), said that the house will also be participating in rush. He said however that "Rush for us is pretty low key...it will be about the same as last semester." He said that the number of drops first semester were "a little low, but second semester there should be quite a few more."

Delta Sigma's (Delta Sig's) president Alan Macintyre '90 also expects more drops next semester. He said this semester there were six drops, and "next semester we expect about ten at the most." Of rush activities he said, "It will be the same as last rush...we're kind of loose about it. We'll have parties and movies, and try to think of fun things like showing the movie on the side of the house like we did this year."

Alpha Rho Upsilon (ARU) president Kirk Lawton '89 expects fewer drops next semester. He said rush will be on a smaller scale, and will be more casual as "most people have already been around to the house." The house had seven drops this semester, and is ideally looking for five to six next semester.

Alpha Delta Phi (AD) house member Rob Follett '88 also expects fewer drops. AD had 16 drops this semester, and Follett said that "second semester is more low key...we are shooting for probably half that number." He described their second semester Rush as being "typically informal, small scale rush...we will probably have fewer parties and more invitation-type only things at the end."

Many house members believed that the Fraternity Review Committee presently evaluating the fraternity system will not have an effect on rush or the amount of drops. Hancock said, "The success of this year's rush shows that dry rush and fraternities being under pressure does not affect the amount of drops." Fusco agreed, saying people's decisions will not be influenced by the committee. Said Fusco, "People here are wise enough and old enough to make their own decisions."

Others are concerned with the influence the committee might have on potential drops. Lawton said, "I'm not sure how independent views the committee...it will affect rush somewhat depending on what the freshmen think" (Continued on page 13)

Crewmen working for Robert St. Hilaire Masonry of Auburn had to build stairway to heaven in order to remove the TD flag flying between the spires of the Chapel. The flag was placed there at the beginning of October by the mysterious campus Spiderman. Photo by Alan Harris.

Early decision on the rise

MARSHALL CARTER
ORIENT Staff

The Bowdoin College Admissions Office has received the highest number of Early Decision (ED) applications in ten years for the class of 1992, according to Director of Admissions William R. Mason.

Four hundred and twenty applications were received this year, compared to 391 for the class of 1991, a 7.4% rise. The number of ED applications has been "increasing fairly regularly" in recent years said Mason.

He mentioned several factors that may have caused the increase. "I'm hearing that there's been so much in the press about getting into college," so pressure to make early choices can come from society and parents. He cited recent articles in U.S. News and World Report and USA Today which focused on the college selection process.

Early Decision seems to be an attractive option to more and more students. "I've talked to a lot of secondary schools in the Northeast, and the counselors are amazed at the increase in the number of students applying early," said Mason. Bowdoin has also seen a large increase in the number of high school upperclassmen visiting campus. Visiting may cause an extreme reaction, either positively or negatively. A prospective student may be very attracted to the school when he visits and may decide to apply early as a result.

Despite the increase in ED applications, Mason said that he anticipates no change in the standard by which students are accepted.

"We bring the same yardsticks" from the past, Mason said, and "we keep the standards very high." Early Decision applicants will be accepted, deferred, or rejected based on their qualifications, and the 7.4% increase will have little impact on the chances of an individual student's chances of acceptance.

No quotas are set for ED admissions, as they are in the spring when (Continued on page 13)

Chemistry class travels beyond text

TAMMARA DASSANAYAKE

ORIENT Asst. News Editor

As end-of-semester blues begin to hit, many of us begin to question where all the hours spent poring over inanimate textbooks lead to?

Chemistry 231, an innovative new course which was offered for the first time this fall, is an attempt to introduce students to the fascinating and challenging world beyond the textbook.

Each of the 10 students enrolled in the course is researching a hitherto unexplored area of science. "The real fun of the course is that each student is approaching unknown ground...nobody knows the answers," said Visiting Professor of Chemistry, Clarice M. Yentsch, who is also a Research Scientist with the Bigelow Laboratory for Ocean Sciences in Boothbay Harbor.

The course is funded by a $50,000 grant from the Exxon Educational Foundation in cooperation with Bigelow Labs. It evolved due to concern that small colleges which tend to attract a large percentage of the "brightest students" have methods of teaching which do not sufficiently emphasize research.

"Most science students in the smaller schools are premed and do not have the opportunity to try research," said Yentsch. Thus the best students are often concentrated in the professional areas.

The course aims to introduce such undergraduates to exciting developments in scientific research by giving them access to "state of the art instrumentation, special reagents and qualified research scientists" at Bigelow.

"It's a sort of structured independent study" said Yentsch, the difference being that the class meets regularly as a group to discuss their progress and findings. Students decide on an original research project based on their interests. "Some [students] knew exactly what they wanted to do at the beginning of the semester but others decided after exploring the literature available," said Yentsch.

Cytochemistry is the study of living cells and the chemical processes which occur within them. With the facilities available at Bigelow, students can examine the functioning of living cells in situ.

Yentsch cited three features of Bigelow as unique. It is the first oceanographic lab to have phytoplankton bank, the Provasoli-Guillard Center for Culture of Marine Phytoplankton. The center collects species of phytoplankton (microscopic plant life found floating in the oceans and fresh water) from all over the world then grows them and ships them out to researchers.

Another of the unique facilities offered is the J. J. MacIsaac Flow Cytometry/Sorting Facility. The sophisticated instrumentation available here has revolutionized the study of cytochemistry and makes it possible to simultaneously study as many as six parameters at a speed of over 2000 cells per second. Previously, using the electron microscope, only a fixed number of specially prepared cells could be examined at one time.

From microscopic to macroscopic. The Remote Sensing Image Analysis Facility monitors the persistent and transient features of the world's oceans and serves as a information center for oceanographers.

Thus the 10 Bowdoin juniors and seniors who are taking the course are having the opportunity to work at one of the best equipped oceanographic centers in the country.

Five of the students are working with various strains of phyto plankton.

Wendy Brown '89 is studying the preference of slime molds and phytoplankton for different methods of feeding by following the path of fluorescent nutrients into the cells.

Elizabeth Mann '89 and Colin Sweeney '88 are examining the characteristics of populations of two competing flagellates when nutrient and light availability is varied. Sara Mayo is comparing the variability in populations of phytoplankton and Lisa Aufranc '88 is experimenting with new methods of culturing phytoplankton using methods previously associated with bacteria culture.

Two students, Joshua Bloomstone '89 and Scott Farrel '88 (Continued on page 13)

Do you think Bowdoin's course offerings are adequate?

BECKY AUSTIN
ORIENT Staff

Scott Beless '89

"Yes, I do. But sometimes the pre-registration doesn't allow students to get the courses they want.

Ned May '91

"They look adequate, but you can't get into any of them as a freshman."

Mike Augustini '89

"No, I don't. There are not enough creative writing courses."

Jessica Welt '89

"I think they're adequate, but the important survey courses should be offered more often."

Glen Waters '89

"Yes, I think they are. At a large university you have a larger selection, but the benefits of a small college and enthusiastic professors compensate for any reduced course selection. And besides, you can always do an independent study."

Stonestreet calls for student reaction

DAWN VANCE

ORIENT Assistant News Editor

John Stonestreet '88 called for student participation in the fraternity review process at Wednesday morning's Chapel Talk. Stonestreet said, "This is our fraternity system. It is being reviewed. Don't just sit around and discuss it and wait for something to happen... because when that something does happen you might not like it and it could have been prevented."

Stonestreet addressed an issue much on the minds of the members of the Bowdoin College community these days - the future of the fraternity system. Stonestreet expressed optimism that the fraternity review committee would not recommend what many have feared and suggested: the abolishment of fraternities.

In relation to this Stonestreet said, "These people will not, I repeat will not recommend the abolishment of fraternities to President Greason. The current fraternal system is too strong that it would make no practical or financial sense for the college to rid itself of fraternities. Nor does the college currently have the necessary facilities to make such a drastic move."

Instead, Stonestreet suggested five possible reforms that the committee may consider. These reforms include the requirement that fraternities abolish their national ties, the setting of a minimum grade point average to drop and to maintain to remain an active member at a fraternity, the setting of standards of behavior for fraternities, a change regarding single sex institutions, and the college taking a much tighter grip involving fraternities and the functions that they provide.

Stonestreet urged that the student body carefully consider the consequences of any such reforms and their implications for the fraternal system. Stonestreet asked of these reforms, "Would they help reduce the problems that are attributed to fraternities today?" He cited these problems as drunkenness, sexual harassment, the unequal treatment of women and the anti-intellectual influence of fraternities.

Stonestreet claimed for the most part that they would not. Regarding the requirement that fraternities abolish their national ties and the alleged unequal treatment of women Stonestreet said, "I truly do not believe that the abolishment of national affiliations will play any role in correcting a problem that many people feel including 90% of the women in fraternities is not related to the fraternities themselves but rather problems society as a whole is facing today."

One possible reform upon which Stonestreet concentrated revolved around what he termed as a definite change regarding single-sex institutions. Stonestreet said, "Most likely this reform will state that there will not be allowed any single-sex institutions. This would mean the immediate closure of Chi Psi and the sorority Alpha Phi."

Stonestreet stressed the need for greater choice among the fraternities and sororities at Bowdoin. He said, "Chi Psi and Alpha Phi have tried to provide some choice yet the college will not recognize them and their existence is very much in jeopardy."

Stonestreet expressed the opinion that women should have the choice between a coeducational fraternity and a sorority and that men, too, should have the option of a coeducational fraternity or an all male fraternity. On this issue Stonestreet said, "Continually hear how women on campus drop at a fraternity but would much rather be a member of a sorority. They drop at the houses simply because it is better than nothing. I don't think this is right."

He continued, "The Governing Boards made a mistake when they decided not to allow sororities on campus. Isn't it time that someone accepted responsibility for this mistake and corrected it?"

Stonestreet encouraged the student body to submit its thoughts to the fraternity review committee. In conclusion Stonestreet said, "I would like you all to be active about this, to think about these reforms and if you feel that one of these reforms is unnecessary or unfair write to the committee and tell them... the people on this committee are willing to listen... the hearings are over but the review is far from over... Don't wait till March to react - react now."

Ruben Milliken '89 hangs chandelier decorations as part of Monday's Christmas decorating party held in the Maine Lounge of the Moulton Union. Photo by Alan Harris

Safety Tip

Bowdoin College has taken many steps to prevent fires and to respond to fires. You should know how you can take measure to protect yourself by both preventing fire hazards and responding in the event of a fire.

Most student have electrical appliances that produce heat. These include hair dryers, cooking devices and yes, the common light bulb! A frequent cause of fire is the placement of flammable materials near or on top of these devices. A hair dryer rested on a counter top near tissue, a hot plate left on and unattended or a cloth draped over a lampshade to decrease the light can all cause ignition. Be aware of where you are using heating devices and be sure to place them in an area free of combustible materials.

CANDLES??? A firefighter's nightmare! Fires caused by candles usually result from the candle being placed near a curtain or bedcovers. If you must use candles, place them on a non-flammable surface (a plate) in an area where the will not be knocked over or reach things that burn.

What if there is a fire? Plan what you will do. The first step, if you observe smoke or an actual fire is to PULL THE FIRE ALARM. DO NOT TAKE TIME TO INVESTIGATE THE SOURCE. Seconds count! If the fire is readily identifiable as a small contained conflagration, such as a trash can, you may attempt to extinguish it using a fire extinguisher after you have pulled the alarm. However, if the fire does, go out after initial bursts from the extinguisher, leave the area. When in doubt, get your body out!

The person who pulled the fire alarm should meet the Security and/or fire apparatus outside and identify the location of the fire, thus assisting the firefighters.

You may assume that you will never have to use emergency evacuation routes in the event of a fire, however you should know at least two ways out of your residence. Smoke travels many times faster than fire and will take your breath away quickly and may kill you shortly thereafter. Do not try to run through thick smoke but do exit in the alternate route. Stay low as smoke fills the upper levels first. I you open your door and the corridor is filled with thick smoke, stay in your room, close the door and seal it with towels and YELL out the window.

Every so often you should take a few moments and consider just what you would do in the event of a fire. Keeping this information fresh and up-to-date can be great value in the event of a fire.

(Special thanks this week to Brunswick Fire Chief Gary Howard, for his input and suggestions.)

Fraternity referendum proposed

Charter review and referendums have proved the order of the day at the Student Executive Board's last two weekly meetings.

At its November 23, 1987 meeting the board reviewed the charters of six organizations. These organizations include the Bowdoin Literary Society, the Crowler, the Quill, the Bowdoin Review, WBOR and the Bowdoin Orient. All of these organizations maintained their FC-1 statuses except for the Bowdoin Literary Society which the board chose to downgrade to an FC-2.

Member Andrew Winter '89 asked that the board downgrade the charter of the Bowdoin Literary Society from FC-1 to FC-2 because its constitution did not fit the FC-1 charter stipulations set forth in the Handbook of the Student Assembly. In suggesting this, however, Winter said, "This downgrade to an FC-2 does not imply inferior status and will in no way hinder the organization."

The board therefore decided to downgrade the Bowdoin Literary Society to FC-2 status.

The board considered the possibility of downgrading the Quill to FC-2 status also because there was some question about whether it, too, did not completely meet FC-1 stipulations. The board, however, decided that this was not necessary. Member Tim Hughes '88 said, "I don't think the Quill should be downgraded from an FC-1 to an FC-2 since its main purpose is to publish a literary magazine."

The board found no reason why the other four organizations should not maintain their FC-1 statuses.

At its Dec. 1, 1987 the board considered the possibility of conducting a schoolwide referendum in relation to the current fraternal system. This referendum proposed by member Mark Peluso '88 would question the student body's sentiments as to whether the colleges should allow those fraternities which currently have national affiliations to maintain them and whether the student body ought to have the option to join single-sex organizations.

Peluso said of this referendum, "What I'm offering is a choice for women to enjoy national recognition."

It is possible that the board will conduct a referendum along these lines early next semester.

Wilson Fellow discusses Indian rights

The noble savage and the drunken injun. Feather headdresses and kids toys. Stereotypes that not only today's American Indian but American society needs to dispel. In a lunch interview Thursday afternoon, LaDonna Harris, executive director of Americans for Indian Opportunity and this year's Woodrow Wilson Fellow, frowned when questioned about white stereotypes of North American Indian culture. Whether Billy Jack communicating with nature or drunken males driving rusted pick-ups across the reservation.

A Comanche, a former vice-presidential candidate for the failed third party option of the 1980 elections, the Citizens' party, and a former director of the now disassociated Indian bank, Harris quickly dispels the stereotype with a hint of anger inflecting her predominately cheerful enthusiastic voice, "stereotypes are perpetuated by an uninformed press, media, and public. Sensationalism and negatives sell. More informed, in-depth writing and general education will get rid of these misconceptions."

Harris had emphasized similar sentiments, that Indians are judged on pre-conceptions and not facts or understanding, in her first lecture at Bowdoin, a Struggle and Change dinner/discussion Tuesday night, "Indian culture is seen as frozen in time—in the early 1800's. This definition, as any definition, limits a culture. Every culture changes. The Indians have to decide what is worth saving."

Fully accredited community colleges affiliated with reservations, says Harris more excitedly as she is now discussing the real aspects of modern Indian culture, play an important role in maintaining cultural traditions and educating Indians for practical jobs and vocations: "Community colleges are a product of my generation going to college, coming back and becoming involved in tribal government. The colleges incorporate the needs of the community."

"For instance, the Winnebagos needed trained people for canneries. The college taught classes relevant to local job opportunities."

Elder tribesmen teach traditions and the colleges have begun to create phonetic written languages for traditionally verbal languages, says Harris. "Their has been a 'Renaissance' in Indian culture. The Native American Church is growing...we used Comanche flutes at our daughter's wedding...there is an outburst of creativity happening."

Many tribes have broken out of the mold of reservation isolation and dependency on Federal funds. "The Mississippi Chactaws are the seventh largest employer in the state. The Winnebago's are a food self-sufficient. The Penobscott and Pasaquatis of Northern Maine are developing their land resources. Despite lack of Federal recognition, the Micmacs are developing an arts (basket making) industry."

As for the Micmacs lack of Federal status, Harris says, "the Micmacs are a quirk of history [they have no legal claims to lands] but that doesn't make them less Indian. Federal status allows for educational and health services, therefore it is also in the best interests of Maine for the Micmacs to get Federal dollars."

Dealing with Indian cultures is not an end in itself for American society, says Harris; understanding differing cultures will help the United States' government learn how to deal with foreign affairs more efficiently and justly. "The implications of our work as an organization for North American Indians reach into a larger international system...supporting a 'democracy' doesn't take certain things into account. Guatemala has the cruelest treatment of Indians, yet the U.S. supports this country and denounces its neighbors."

Furthermore, Harris believes traditional forms of Indian government have contributed to American democracy in the past—"the Iroquois impressed Franklin, Jefferson, and Locke"—and offer possibilities for improving it today. "There are other ways of being more democratic," says Harris, "than majority rule. Majority rule allows many people, anyone not in the majority, to feel alienated. The establishment of the consensus system of Indian governments on small scale governments will involve everyone in democratic participation—everyone benefits and the country is stronger for it."

Harris delivers lecture on Native American rights

Cynthia Lazo
Orient Contributor

Bowdoin students heard about an often overlooked aspect of American civil rights - Indian opportunity, when LaDonna Harris came to Bowdoin Wednesday.

Harris has been involved in non-profit organizations as a volunteer for over twenty-five years and is now working full time as executive director of Americans for Indian Opportunity. Harris is a member of the Comanche Indian tribe.

Harris' first organizational work for the Indian cause was with an organization of Oklahomans for Indian Opportunity which was eventually established state-wide. Initially, support for the organization was hard to find within Oklahoma due to the split between the Indian tribes of the western half of the state and those of the eastern half.

A meeting was held at the University of Oklahoma, which Harris attended, concerning the relations between blacks and whites and between labor and management. When the question of Indian rights was raised, the response was simply that no such problems existed and that the matter was being handled by the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

In the early 1960's, Harris met with professors from the University of Oklahoma twice a week in her home, once to discuss Indian issues and once to discuss the black community and the white community and the problems concerning their interrelations.

The group worked to open up public facilities to all people, regardless of race. After three years, restaurants were integrated into this effort. As the group became more successful, the meetings were moved to the Indian boarding school. The group worked hardest to break into the eastern Indian community because of the attitudinal problems within its five major tribes. Finally the organization became recognized state-wide and incorporated the easterners into the project.

After several years Harris moved to Washington and branched out to other non-profit committees. She became particularly involved in women's rights and issues, organizing a Women's Political Caucus. Harris said, "Some people called me a non-profit conglomerate because they got a two-in-one out of me," a minority as well as a woman.

When asked to comment on obtaining money from foundations to support non-profit organizations such as Americans for Indian Opportunity, she said: "I felt like a street walker in New York" going from foundation to foundation and from corporation to corporation trying to get donations.

Harris strongly encourages internships in Washington. Said Harris, "Our experiences with interns are the most valuable re-

STOWE TRAVEL

MID COAST MAINE'S MOST COMPLETE TRAVEL AGENCY
A TRAVELERS NATIONAL NETWORK AGENCY
GROUP TRAVEL SPECIALISTS • BUSINESS ACCOUNTS
INCENTIVE TRAVEL • CRUISES • AMTRAK • AIRLINES
VCR CASSETTE TRAVEL LIBRARY • VALATION PACKAGES
GREYHOUND • WESTERN UNION
$150,000 AUTOMATIC FLIGHT INSURANCE
"ALL SERVICES AT NO EXTRA COST"

725-5573

9 PLEASANT ST. BRUNSWICK

Call toll free in Maine 1-800-522-9990

8:30 - 5:30 DAILY
9 - 2 SAT. (SUMMER)
9 - 4 SAT. (WINTER)

Little Ones

Children's harps - beginners and professional models

Something special
for your Little One

* Fine clothing - premie-6/7 yrs.
* educational games and toys
* shower gifts

149 Maine Street, Tontine Mall

HRS: Mon-Thurs. 10 - 5:30

Fri 10 - 5 Sat closed

Best Chinese Food in town!
Present this coupon and get a free order of egg rolls with every takeout order!

THE ATRIUM

Cooks Corner, Brunswick,

729-5555

Expires December 20.

The Best
College Roommate
Money Can Buy.

To get ahead at Bowdoin, it helps to choose a brilliant roommate. Like a Macintosh™ personal computer. And for the holiday season Apple is offering up to $200 off the already affordable purchase price. And now Bowdoin students have two great models to choose from at these special prices.

The Macintosh Plus, which comes with one 800K drive, 1 megabyte of memory, keyboard, and mouse.

And the Macintosh SE, which comes with either two built-in 800K drives, or one drive and an internal 20-megabyte hard disk. As well as a choice of keyboards.

Whichever you choose, Apple offers a one-time, affordable student purchase price. Purchase information available from Andy Palmer at the computer center in Hubbard Hall or contact Dana Melick at Coastal Computer Center (729-0298).

Moulton Union Bookstore

© 1987 Apple Computer Inc. Apple and the Apple logo are registered trademarks of Apple Computer Inc. Macintosh is a trademark of Apple Computer Inc.

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Video investigates US-USSR relations

"Women to Women," a videotaped live television dialogue between an audience of women in Boston and an audience of women in Leningrad will be shown in Smith Auditorium, Sunday at 7 p.m. Topics of discussion will range from equal rights, jobs, religion, war, peace, politics, to sex.

Dr. Alex Kozulin, psychologist and psychiatrist from the Medical School and the Department of Psychology, at Boston University, will offer commentary on the broadcast and monitor a panel composed of women from the Bowdoin College community.

According to research conducted on USA-USSR space bridges (live television dialogues between American and Soviet Citizens), one of the most popular myths today is the "view that face-to-face communication between 'ordinary people' from different cultures leads to understanding, acceptance, and ultimately a willingness to peace. However, there is evidence from anthropological and sociological studies of inter-ethnic and cross-cultural communication that face-to-face interaction does not necessarily have any such effect. In many instances such encounters lead to a reinforcement of stereotypes and prejudices, not to their mitigation." (Sarah Michaels, Harvard University, James P. Gee, Boston University).

The reason for this negative interaction is that each group interprets the other according to its own cultural identity and therefore does not really see what is being shown or hear what is being said.

One of the issues to be addressed by this showing of "Women to Women" is how to help Bowdoin viewers overcome stereotyping and preconceived notions of their Soviet counterparts. As a recent Russia emigre and member of the Institute of Psychology, Soviet Academy of Pedagogical Sciences, Kozulin will bring to this evening first-hand experience and knowledge of life in the Soviet Union. His role will be to lessen the effect of stereotyping and facilitate understanding by supplying information and cultural cues to the audience in advance of the film and by answering questions afterwards.

Panel members will respond to Kozulin's commentary, raise questions of their own and take questions from the floor.

The event is sponsored by the Russian Department, Committee on Lectures and Concerts and by the Bowdoin Women's Association.

News from the Gulf of Maine

Once again it is the Christmas season, and we are sending out another Gulf of Maine newsletter. The building is not currently for sale, we have a sidewalk, and we're not going out of business. We do have a few things to communicate with you.

If it works well, we may continue to have sporadic events. Now that we live in Nobleboro it is a long drive to the store to open for events on Sunday. We will offer the following events:

Dec. 6, Sunday, 3 p.m. — A poetry reading by Stefan Hyner and Gary Lawless

Dec. 13, Sunday, 3 p.m. — A reading and publishing party for Stephen Petross's Spirit of the Stone Thrown to the Bottom of the Lake. Both events are free and open to the public.

Colin Sargent and Gary Lawless will be at at Raffle's Cafe in Portland, Thursday, Dec. 17 at 7 p.m. This will be a publishing party for Colin's new book from Coyote Love Press.

There are two special titles for Christmas, Stephen Petross's, mentioned above, and Break the Mirror by Nanao Sakaki, from Japan. This is his selected poems, just published by North Point Press.

Other titles include a new Ruth Moore reprint from Blackberry, Speak to the Winds. New paperbacks include Louise Erdrich's Beet Queen, Margaret Atwood's Handmaid's Tale, Homage to the Sun

by Markides, and Voices of Our Ancestors by Dhyani Ywahoo. New hardcovers include Annie Dillard's American Childhood, Starhawk's Truth or Dare, Paul Hawken's Growing a Business, Farley Mowat's Crow on Dian Fossey Woman In the Mist, Bruce Chatwin's Songlines, Ursula Le Guin's Buffalo Gals, and Randy Shilt's And the Band Played On. We also have a Beryl Markham fall season, with her two books West With the Night and The Splendid Outcast, as well as the new biography Straight On Till Morning.

Students film Bowdoin

Richard Lindahl, Jr.
Orient Staff

Oh, if only I could touch the sky... The lyrics of "Mr. Blue Jay" have been echoing through the corridors of Moore Hall for several weeks. It is one of the musical compositions that will be featured in a film being made by Bowdoin students about the college.

"We want to capture things that are particularly special about Bowdoin," says Adam Hallem '91 about the film.

Hallem and his crew, Scott Dedrick '90 and Todd Broselow '90, will begin filming scenes representative of life at Bowdoin this weekend. Hallem, the director of the film, envisions a finished product of about ten to twelve minutes in length.

Many colleges and universities around the country provide videotapes upon request to prospective applicants who might not be able to make campus visits. However, they often are little more than viewbooks with moving pictures that reveal little about the character of the institutions.

"We are going to stray from the generic college film format," says Hallem.

Also distinguishing this project from others is the total artistic control that the students producing the film possess.

"Usually students don't do these films," says Hallem.

Dedrick has produced video projects in the past, including one which he sent with his application to Bowdoin two years ago. A guitar player, clarinetist, and saxophonist, he is composing much of the music that will eventually be the score of the film.

Broselow is the team's film and video expert. He has been an intern at Telefilm in Philadelphia, assisting in all aspects of film and video production.

The crew plans to film as many different aspects of the Bowdoin community and its coastal surroundings as possible.

On campus filming sites will include laboratories, the Chapel, the Visual Arts Center, and dormitories. Buildings such as the Afro-Am center and the Women's Resource Center will be included to represent the multi-faceted nature of life at Bowdoin.

"We're going to do something special with the Walker Art Museum," says Hallem. "We're going to film the art there in an artistic way." He notes that the architecture of the museum lends itself well to filming.

The crew emphasizes the film will be more than just a stew of film clips set to music. The film will be full of "stylish shots," assures Hallem.

For instance, the crew plans to follow a shot that ascends the columns in front of the Visual Arts Center with a descent of some trees.

Students and faculty in action will be an important part of the film. The crew intends to collect film spots of sports events, the Dining Service, the Game Room and Pub, and events that happen at Bowdoin such as the Special Olympics. Student activities such as camping and blood drives will also be shown.

Off-campus areas that affect student life at Bowdoin will also be presented.

"We'll show some of Portland, some beaches, definitely some snow, Bailey's Island," Hallem speculates, "but we're not going to show Shop 'N' Save!"

The crew will be filming until the spring of '89. Hallem (MU 234) welcomes any suggestions about people, places, or activities to be filmed.

Calendar

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 4

7:00 p.m. — Lecture. "Why Can't Sharon Come Home?" Karen Thompson, department of physical education, St. Cloud State University, Minnesota. Sponsored by the BGLSA and the BWA. 7:30—10:00 p.m. — Weekly Weekend Films. 9 1/2 Weeks. Presented by the BFVS. Smith Auditorium, $1 admission.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 5

7:30—10:00 p.m. — Weekly Weekend Films. Eating Raoul. Presented by the BFVS. Smith Auditorium, $1 admission. 8:00 p.m. — "You're Gonna Love Tomorrow: An Evening of Stephen Sondheim." A musical review featuring the lyrics and music of composer Stephen Sondheim. Gibson Hall. Admission is free.

9:00 p.m. — The Island Band performs Reggae in the Pub.

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 6

2:00 p.m. — "You're Gonna Love Tomorrow: An Evening of Stephen Sondheim." Gibson Hall.

3:00 p.m. — Foreign Film Series. La ciudad y los perros (The City and the Dogs). Spanish with English subtitles. Based on the novel by Mario Vargas Llosa. Smith Auditorium.

3:00 p.m. — A poetry reading by Stefan Hyner and Gary Lawless. Gulf of Maine Books, 61 Maine St.

7:00 p.m. — Video/Discussion. A video film of "Spacebridge" dialogue between audiences of women in Boston and in Leningrad, moderated by Phil Donahue and a moderator in Leningrad. Following the film, a panel, including Alex Kozulin, Soviet emigre, and psychologist/psychiatrist, Boston University Medical School; Leah Shulsky, teaching fellow in Russian; and Jane Knox, associate professor of Russian, discusses cultural and social issues for women in both countries. Smith Auditorium.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 7

7:30 p.m. — A symposium of Bowdoin students and faculty members will discuss Allan Bloom's best-selling critique of American higher education, The Closing of the American Mind. The featured speaker will be Joseph Prabhu, associate professor of philosophy at California State University, Los Angeles, whose topic will be "Bloom's Platonic Cave-In". Faculty Room, Massachusetts Hall.

8:00 p.m. — The Bowdoin College Community Orchestra will perform in Pickard Theater. The program includes Bach's Brandenburg Concerto No. 3, the third movement from Beethoven's Symphony No. 3, the first movement from Schubert's Symphony No. 6, a string octet by Robert Lombardo, and "Hymn and Fuguing Tune No. 16" by Henry Cowell. The Orchestra is composed of Bowdoin students, faculty, staff, high school students, and community members. Admission is free.

8:00 p.m. — Weekly Wednesday Films. The American Friend, directed by Wim Wenders, and starring Bruno Ganz and Dennis Hopper. Smith Auditorium.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 10

5:00 P.M. — The annual Holiday Dinner for students will be held in Wentworth Hall, until 7:00, and in the Moulton Union, until 6:15. This will be special candlelight dinner. The menu will include appetizers, choice of Duck à l'Orange, Broiled Scallops Florentine, or Vegetable Quiche; homemade breads and cake for dessert. Everything will be served at the tables with the exception of the main course. The dinner is for board students only, and guest passes will not be honored.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 11

4:00 p.m. — The Chamber Choir will present its annual Christmas Vespers in the Bowdoin Chapel. The Vespers program will feature German music of the Renaissance with scripture lessons read by A. LeRoy Greason, President. The choir will sing 16th-century music by Michael Praetorius, Hans Leo Hassler, Ludwig Senfl, and Johann Walter. The audience will be invited to join in singing traditional Christmas carols. Admission is free. (The program will be repeated at 8:15 p.m.)

MOVIE LISTINGS

The Evening Star Cinema (Tontine Mall)

Princess Bride, call 729-5486 for times

Cinema City (Cooks Corner)

Fatal Attraction, showing at 6:45 and 9:00

Running Man, showing at 7:05 and 9:05

Hello Again, showing at 7:10 and 9:10

Cinderella, showing at 7:00 only

Dirty Dancing, showing at 9:10 only

Pine Cone Productions

Iceberg Recording Artist

HEATHER BISHOP IN CONCERT

evening 11 8:00 p.m.

First Parish Unitarian Church

425 Congress St., Portland

$10 advance — $12 at door

General Admission

Modern art on the quad? Photo by Alan Harris

BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed

candy gifts christmas cards
ornaments
stocking stuffers jewelry
swatch watches holiday clothing
accessories
sweaters gift wrap paper bags tags ribbons bows pottery candles
toys
collectibles crafter & evelyn

why do
you think they call it

THE WORKS

141 MAINE ST. 729-8064
BRUNSWICK, ME 04011

MACBEANS BOOKSHOP

your downtown personal bookshop

We have a wonderful selection of GIFT BOOKS
and Brunswick's finest CHRISTMAS CARDS
and beautiful GIFT WRAPPINGS
and PUZZLES and GAMES
and NOVELTIES and you-name-it...

We ship almost anything almost anywhere from
our PACKAGE EXPRESS CENTER.

Do all your gift buying and shipping here, and stroke Silas, too.

MACBEANS BOOKSHOP
134 Maine Street 725-8516

* In fact, it expires on January 15, 1988. So don't procrastinate! © 1987 Apple Computer, Inc. Apple and the Apple logo are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. and Macintosh, ImageWriter and The Power to be your best are trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc.

Buy a printer with your Macintosh and conserve paper.

A Macintosh™ personal computer and an ImageWriter™ II printer will save you hours of time. Not to mention gallons of correction fluid and reams of paper. And, if you buy both now, the first ream of paper you'll save will have a lovely green glow with Presidents on it. So here's the deal: You'll save a bundle of cash when you purchase an ImageWriter II printer along with your choice of a Macintosh Plus or a Macintosh SE. Either way you'll be able to turn out beautifully prepared papers. And we'll even try to help you with a variety of financing options. We feel compelled to tell you, though, that a deal like this can't last forever.* So it's a good idea to see your campus microcomputer center today. And join the paper conservation movement.

The power to be your best™

MOULTON UNION BOOKSTORE

Graphic courtesy of Domino's Pizza, Inc.
"Noid" is a trademark of Domino's Pizza Inc.

ADAM NAJBERG

ORIENT News Editor

"Good evening, Domino's Pizza, may I help you?"

This cheerful greeting is heard over 2000 times weekly by Bowdoin College students, Brunswick residents and United States Navy personnel stationed at the Brunswick Naval Air Station.

The Brunswick franchise of Domino's Pizza delivers 200 pizzas on weeknights and over 400 on Friday and Saturday nights. One-third of these deliveries are made to the college campus, with virtually all deliveries after 9 p.m. going to the college.

How does the staff of slightly more than 20 manage to get the pizzas you order to you on time and piping hot? The Orient decided to find out. In order to meet with the company's stringent automobile insurance regulation, I had to take a job as a delivery boy for a night. The following are excerpts from my experiences on the night of Tuesday, December 1.

9:30 p.m.: I arrived at the store on Bath Road and was ushered into manager Daniel Stone's office. "Dan," as he told me to call him, pulled out a ream of paper. "This is your application," he said. I waded through the forms. Automobile registration, insurance, car maintenance, uniform policy, delivery policy; you name it, and it was there.

9:40: Dan showed me around the store. He pointed out the refrigerator where massive quantities of dough and cheese were stored. "Every pizza is cooked fresh," he said. Next, Dan showed me how to take a phone order. He then introduced me to Manager in Training Kim Vose and employee John Hodgkins who had just made, cooked and boxed a pizza for delivery. 9:55: I donned my orange, blue and white Domino's shirt and my orange baseball cap. Dan handed me a name tag that read, "ADAM," and I was ready to roll. Our destination - Coles Tower 12C and 14D. The orders for two pizzas and three cokes had come in while I was changing from my civilian clothes.

10:01: The pizzas came out of the oven. John sliced and boxed them, and cident? I wasn't even wearing clean underwear. "What time is it, Dan," I asked. Dan, the old pro, told me we would deliver the two pizzas with time to spare. My breath fogged the windshield. Dan told me to calm down. As we reached the corner of Bath Road and Federal Street, I noticed the traffic light was out of commission. The light flashed red. Be careful, I warned Dan silently. I gripped the dashboard until my knuckles showed white. Dan made his turn safely.

10:10: We cruised into the tower parking lot. Dan, cool as a cucumber, opened the hot box in the back seat of the car and removed the pizzas. I could see the steam rising from the gaudy boxes. Dan checked the order slips on the box, picked up the cokes and reminded me to lock the door. "Company policy," he explained.

10:12: The tower elevator made us wait. I tapped my foot impatiently and hit the elevator's "up" button every few seconds just to remind it we were on a time schedule.

10:15: The doors slid open and we stepped in. My hands were shaking as I hit the button marked "12." The elevator climbed slowly to the 12th floor. We got off and found 12C. Dan knocked on the door. I breathed a sigh of relief. We had made it with time to spare. Next stop, the 14th floor.

10:16: The elevator climbed to the 14th floor, we made our delivery, and we were off the hook. Dan told me it was time to return to the store for our next order and to make change. As the elevator brought us closer to the tower lobby, I mopped the cold sweat off my brow and realized we were about to repeat the entire, nerve-racking procedure once again.

Undercover delivery boy "avoids the Noid"

Mmmmmmmmmmmmmmmmmmm!!

we were off. In my exuberance I had forgotten the 30 degree temperature. Dan handed me a padded orange coat as I walked through the door to the parking lot. He put the pizzas in the hot box and the cokes on the floor, we buckled our seat belts and Dan hit the ignition.

10:04: We were on the road when it struck me. What if we delivered the pizzas late? What if we were in a car ac-

Inside the Domino's dynasty

ADAM NAJBERG
ORIENT News Editor

The sign reads, "Rule Number One: The customer is always right. Rule Number Two: If the customer is wrong, see Rule Number One..."

Domino's Pizza is the largest pizza delivery chain in the world. Thomas S. Monaghan, the owner and principal stockholder of the company began operating in 1965 with one store. Since then, the operation has burgeoned to include 4090 franchises in ten countries, including Japan, West Germany, Australia, Honduras, Puerto Rico, Hong Kong, Costa Rica, Canada and the United Kingdom.

Monaghan's company has pizza delivery down to a science. Last year Domino's sold approximately 160,000,000 pizzas. The company feels confident enough to guarantee delivery in 30 minutes or less and offers a partial refund for late delivery. This and the satisfaction guarantee are stamped on each one of the company's Howard Johnson-esque boxes.

The Brunswick franchise upholds the high standards set by the company and is constantly rated one of the top two stores in Maine. The Domino's in Brunswick is owned by William Giff, who leaves day-today operations to Store Manager Daniel Stone.

Stone, who took over the managerial position in April, is another success story. He left a West Virginia College and began to work for Domino's over two years ago under the company's Manager in Training program. He expects to own his own franchise within the next few years.

Pizza dough comes in mass quantity from the company commissary in two sizes. The dough is stored in a refrigerator kept at a constant 40 degrees Fahrenheit until it is ready to be "proofed." Proofed dough is removed from refrigeration and allowed to expand in a yeast reaction. Every pizza ordered is cooked fresh and dough is not kept for more than five days.

Mozzarella cheese is shipped in $30 bags, and other toppings are replenished often. Toppings are first weighed by new employees to ensure consistency. As employees become more experienced, Stone said, "they get to know how much cheese or pepperoni goes on a pizza."

Stone said consistency of the product quality is the key to a Domino's

pizza.

"We want our customers to get a piece of the topping they ordered at every bite. We want to put out a consistent product," said Stone.

Variety may be the spice of life for some companies, but not for Domino's. Stone said Domino's does one thing well and will stick to it. Domino's stores are only allowed to sell pizza in two sizes with specified toppings and Coca Cola in one. Simplicity keeps the operation running smoothly, said Stone.

Stone also said the majority of Domino's employees in Brunswick are navy personnel who work part-time with the permission of the navy.

Employment standards are set high at Domino's. Employees are trained in a variety of jobs, including pizza-making, dough stretching and delivery. The majority of the store's employees, who now total over 20, are trained for delivery.

In order to work for Domino's, employees are required to have a car that meets state and company safety standards and liability insurance. Cars are checked weekly and all mechanical (Continued on page seven)

Jim goes HOME

Pizza

(Continued from page six)
problems must be corrected before an employee is allowed to work again.

Employees must not have more than two moving violations (speeding tickets) and must not receive more than two while on the job. One form signed by employees urges them to follow rules of the road, obey traffic signals and drive defensively. Domino's drivers are not speed demons. How then, do 90 percent of the pizzas ordered get to their destination on time?

Stone showed The Orient how the Brunswick Domino's manages to maintain a 90 percent success rate.

When a customer calls in an order, the Domino's employee marks down the order and goes to work. The dough is stretched, placed on a wire baking tray and topped with tomato sauce, cheese and other toppings. The pizza is placed in Bakers' Pride gas ovens and cooked for seven to nine minutes at 600 degrees Fahrenheit. The pizza is removed from the oven, sliced, boxed, labelled and is given to a deliveryman.

The deliveryman places the pizza in a "hotbox," located in the back seat of his car. The pizza remains in the box until the deliveryman reaches his destination. The deliveryman then removes the pizza from the box and places it in an insulated warming bag.

Part-Time -
Home Mailing Program!
Excellent income!
Detail, send self-addressed,
stamped envelope.

WEST,
Box 5877, Hillsdale, N.J. 07205

Now ... at Macbeans Music

COMPACT DISCS

... well over 1,200 of the
12,000-plus now available
If you don't see what you want,
let us get it for you

(That goes for LP's, Tapes and Videos, too.)

Maine's most enterprising Record Shop

The Tontine, 149 Maine St.
Brunswick, Maine 04011 • (207) 729-6513

HOMEWORKERS WANTED! TOP PAY! C.I.

121 24th Ave., N. W. Suite 222
Norman, Oklahoma 73069

TYPISTS - Hundreds weekly
at home! Write: P.O. Box 17
Clark, New Jersey 07066

Suzie Q Shop

Dressmaking - Tailoring
Alterations of all kinds
leather, suede, fur
Custom - made suits
11 Cedar St, Brunswick
M-F, 7 to 5; Sat, 7:30 to 12:30
725-5305

Wreath out and touch someone.

All Wreaths
can be shipped by us.

Order
EARLY.

Fresh Balsam Wreath - $15.00
Eucalyptus Wreath - our most popular aromatic wreath
Everlasting Wreath - Generously made with an intricate blend of dried flowers, $21.50 - $38.50 - $45.00
Grape Vine Wreath - Natural grape vine with a spray of dried flowers and matching bows. Different sizes.
Christmas Wreath - Handcrafted of German station cones and different shades of ribbon for the holidays or year-round. $28.50
Cone Wreath - Different Sizes

Arrangements for Thanksgiving, Christmas

Balloon Bouquets & Fruit Baskets.

Pauline's Bloomers

Tontine Mall, Brunswick
To order call: 725-5882
Major credit cards accepted!

BIG RED Q PRINTING

- stationery
- resumes
- posters
- newsletters

212E Maine Street
Brunswick
729-4840

1988 MOUNTAIN SUMMER JOBS

Challenging, rewarding outdoor positions. Trail crew, Backcountry Shelter Caretakers, and Volunteer Program Staff (Camp Coordinator, Cook, Field Crew leaders). White Mountains, Berkshires, Catskills. Wage, room and board, other benefits.
Details/application from
Appalachian Mt. Club
Trails Program, Box 298,
Gorham, N.H. 03581

A Likely Yarn

90 UNION STREET
BRUNSWICK, ME 04011
(207) 725-2147

NOW HERE!

More Maine Sweaters (for adults)
from the author of *Maine Woods
Woolies*. There is still time to knit for Christmas. Also see us for a wonderful array of gifts for the knitter, including Gift Certificates.

19" color television sets available 30 day guarantee

$125

The Atrium

Cooks Corner, Brunswick, 729-5555

FILM, POLITICS & SOCIAL CHANGE IN ASIA

January - May 1988

Faculty from Harvard University and the University of Illinois

Itinerary includes: India
China
Japan
Hong Kong

- travel and work closely with professors
- live with families in each country
- expand intellectual and personal awareness through comparative study in a variety of environments
- 16 credit hours of academic work studying film, politics and social change in Asia

For a catalogue and application contact:

Joan Tiffany, Director
International Honors Program
19 Braddock Park
Boston, MA 02116
617-267-8612

INTERNATIONAL HONORS PROGRAM

What has a great memory and comes with a real handy trunk?

Guess again.

If you buy an IBM Personal System/2[™] Model 25 by the end of this year, you'll not only get a substantial student discount, we'll throw in a nifty extra.

A sturdy, metal footlocker with brass trim, 16" x 16" x 20".

The computer is a great way to keep on top of your class work. It'll store lots of stuff you need to remember. And the trunk is real handy for holding most everything else.

It's a neat idea that's yours for peanuts.

To take advantage of this special deal, contact your on-campus IBM Education Product Coordinator. But don't wait too long. This special offer expires December 31st.

The IBM Education Product Coordinator

Contact John Balling
Hubbard Hall
725-3785

IBM[®]

Offer limited to qualified students, faculty and staff who purchase an IBM Personal System/2 Model 25 through their IBM Education Product Coordinator on or before December 31, 1987. Offer applies to the IBM Personal System/2 Models 8525-001, 8525-003, 8525-004, 8525-012, and 8525-015. Trunk quantities are limited. IBM reserves the right to substitute a unit of comparable value. Allow 6 to 8 weeks for trunk delivery. Personal System/2 is a trademark of IBM Corporation.

SPORTS

Polar Bears skate to 3-1 mark

ERIC PALMQUIST
ORIENT Staff

The ruler by which most Bowdoin sports are gauged becomes much longer when used to measure the success of the hockey squad, which traditionally is an ECAC power. This year appears to be no different as the Bears have jumped out to a 3-1 record.

The loss stands out especially because it came at the hands of the dreaded Beavers of Babson, Bowdoin's arch-rival and the team many consider to be the class of the ECAC this year. The Polar Bears will remember last year's surprising playoff loss to the Beavers at Dayton Arena, while Babson recalls the Bear's 6-3 championship victory two years before.

The game was a typical Bear-Beaver clash as it was a defensive affair studded by excellent goal-tending. Babson opened the scoring just 3:40 into the game as All-American center Tom Sasso beat Brad Rabor, but the Bears answered back on a power play goal by senior forward Steve Thornton from Tom Aldrich and freshman

Brad Chin.

It looked as if the teams would play a scoreless second period, but with only twenty seconds remaining John Herlihy scored on a deflection off a point shot. It was all the Beavers needed. Rabor kept the Polar Bears close with stellar net-minding in the third period and throughout the game (31 saves), but the Bears were unable to score again.

Despite the loss, the game was possibly Bowdoin's best of the season. They opened the year with a win over the Hawks of St. Anselm, a game in which six different Polar Bears scored. After a shaky first period which the Bears were lucky to come out of with a 1-1 tie, they feasted on the Hawks, peppering the nets for five goals and numerous near-misses. Rabor stopped everything he saw (24 saves), and the Bears had their first win, 6-1.

They then opened the home season with a sloppy 9-7 victory over a stubborn crew from UCONN. The tide of the contest was set when the Huskies took the opening faceoff and beat goalie Steve Janas after just (Continued on page ten)

Polar Bear Roger Ladda (left) and teammates battle for loose puck in front of St. Anselm goal. Bowdoin won 3-2 at Dayton Arena Tuesday night. Photo by Lori Bodwell

Women's hoopsters dunk Bates

TOD DILLON
ORIENT Staff

Entering into the second week of the 1987-88 season, the women's basketball team stands at 2-1 with wins against the University of Maine-Farmington and Bates while the sole loss came at the hands of a strong Tufts squad.

The women quickly got their season off to a solid start last Tuesday with an impressive 82-45 trouncing of UMF. With lingering memories of UMF's one point victory last season still in their minds, the Polar Bears left no doubt that they would avenge the loss. Led by outstanding defensive play which created numerous uncontested breakaways the Bears put on a clinic for the hapless visitors.

The Bears were led by co-captain Kimberly Lemieux, who poured in 23 points and pulled down 9 rebounds. She got help from Stephanie Caron; 18 points, 8 rebounds, and Nicky Comeau; 16 points, 6 rebounds. Susan Ingram added 10 points and Carrie Drake dished out 10 assists to contribute to the rout. Bowdoin shot a tremendous 78.4% from the floor while UMF shot 48.5%.

The Jumbos from Tufts University came to Morrell Gymnasium on Saturday and proved to be too tough for the Polar Bears. Bowdoin led 33-25 going into the locker room at the half but the visitors rallied in the second half, buoyed by 20 points from the free throw line, to overtake the women, 66-57. Bowdoin was hurt by the fouling out of both co-captain Nancy Delaney and Susan Ingram. Caron and Comeau led the Bears with 19 points each with Comeau pulling down 12 rebounds in a losing cause. Lynn Smith led Tufts with 21 points and 14 rebounds as the Bears dropped to 1-1.

The Polar Bears travelled to Lewiston on Wednesday evening to match up against the Bates College Bobcats. Despite a sluggish performance, the Bears held off the hosts to record a 52-47 victory.

Lemieux said of the team's display, "We did not play as well as we could have, we were lucky to be playing Bates and not a stronger team." The game was close throughout with the Bears holding a 5 point lead at intermission, 27-22.

That slim margin was quickly erased early in the third quarter as the Bobcats applied a full court press and switched from a zone to man-to-man defense. The Bears overcame the change and gradually regained the lead. Lemieux attributed it to clutch outside shooting down the stretch.

Bowdoin once again was led by the junior trio of Lemieux, Caron, and Comeau who had 15, 14, and 13 points respectively. Comeau picked up another 12 rebounds to bring her team-leading season total to 30.

The women's next game places them in Worcester and pits them against WPI on Saturday afternoon where they will be hoping to up their record to 3-1.

Suzanne Walker '91 makes the save as center Sarah Russell '91 looks on. Bowdoin lost to Colby 4-3 in overtime Tuesday. Photo by Mary Ann Lai

Colby stifles comeback

TONY JACCACI
ORIENT Staff

The women's varsity hockey team dropped its first two games to Dartmouth and Colby last week in what may have proved to be the two toughest games of the season. The team is very young as five players on the first two lines of offense and defense are freshmen. As coach Robert Jones stated "It is definitely going to be a building year." The women travel to Colby this weekend where they will participate in the Colby Invitational.

The Polar Bears opened their season two days before Thanksgiving as they hosted the Big Green of Dartmouth and lost by a score of 4-1. Dartmouth played very well together and its experience allowed them to dominate the less experienced Bowdoin team. Many of the Bowdoin freshmen played cautiously in their first college game and gave the Dartmouth net-minder a relatively easy day as they were reluctant to shoot.

Coach Jones believes that with time, the freshmen will learn to "throw the puck at the net." Once the shots begin to come, the goals will soon follow. Freshman (Continued on page ten)

Shane Engstrom dives in rare form. Photo by Alan Harris

Swimmers sink rivals

JON DEVINE
ORIENT Contributor

Last weekend, the Bowdoin men's swimming team sank Babson while the women downed Clark in their first intercollegiate meets of what promises to be an outstanding season in the pool.

On the women's side, the margin of victory was a convincing 41 points, as the women defeated their opponents, 147-106. Coach Charlie Butt named Leslie Preston, Jane Philips, Jessica Lydon, Becky Palmer (who took 3 events), and Elizabeth Deitz as team members who performed well, making specific mention also of diver Lisa Jacobs.

The next meet for the women is against Tufts, a team Coach Butt describes as "a real challenge," because the team has been division champs for the past three years. For the men, last weekend's meet was equally lopsided, as the Bears crushed Babson, 109-77, despite "easing up at the end."

Outstanding performers for the team included Tom Francoeur (who cut 5 seconds off of his previous best time in the 50 yard freestyle), Captain Ed Pond, diver Shane Engstrom (one of several members of Bowdoin's growing and improving diving squad), as well as freshmen Tim Coultas, and Doug O'Brien.

Coach Butt anticipates a tough meet this Saturday against Tufts, saying that Bowdoin needs "an outstanding meet" to upset the highly-rated Tufts swimmers.

All in all, however, both the men's and women's teams are expected to fare well this season. Coach Butt believes that the teams should be able to at least equal (and hopefully improve upon) last year's performances at the New England's competition, in which the women finished third and the men fifth.

Bobcat arsenal overpowers Bowdoin

CHRISTOPHER BOONE
Orient Staff

The Polar Bears' Men's hoops squad has played three games, compiling a record of 1-2 with a win over UMaine-Farmington and losses to Tufts and Bates.

The win over Farmington was involved dramatic comeback, as the Polar Bears were down 24-8 at one point during the first half. The final score was in Bowdoin's favor, 72-68.

The victory resulted, to a great extent, from the stellar play of center Joe Williams. Williams' performance included a quiet 28 points and 8 rebounds and featured a crowd-pleasing two-handed dunk.

But Williams' performance was not a single-handed effort by any means. Two freshmen proved that they were able to face the challenges of college hoops. Al Bugbee showed poise and talent in directing the team from the point guard position with a team-leading 7 assists and 15 points of his own. And Dan Train, a sure-handed forward led the team in rebounds with 11.

Phil Napolitano added the spark that the Bears needed, pumping in 10 points and hauling in 3 rebounds at the crucial moments of a Bowdoin mini-comeback in the first half.

Joe Williams shined again in a loss to the Tufts Jumbos Saturday night, 78-72. Williams shot 9 of 13 from the floor for 21 points as well as hauling in 10 rebounds.

Kevin Hancock came alive with 16 points including three three-pointers. Bugbee again led the team with 7 assists and Napolitano again pumped in 10 points.

The Polar Bears were in for a rude shock on Wednesday night as they travelled to Lewiston to face the Bobcats of Bates. New Bates Head Coach Rick Boyages, a former Bowdoin star, has put together an impressive arsenal that sunk the Polar Bears handily, 91-64.

The crowd was at least as formidable as the opponents as constant distractions from the Bates' students forced 25 turnovers by the Bowdoin squad.

Williams once again turned in a stellar performance with 21 points and 14 rebounds, both team highs. Train added 10 points and 11 rebounds to help the Polar Bear cause. Mike Burnett played well during his limited playing time, adding 8 points and some much-needed ball-control.

The Bears will travel to face a tough WPI squad on Saturday night and Maine Maritime on Wednesday.

Next Thursday, at 7 p.m., the Men's Hockey Team will face off against Ishockeyklubben VITA HASTEN, a Division I team from the Swedish professional ranks.

This exhibition contest will be a special evening for local hockey fans as VITA HASTEN, based in Norrkoping, Sweden, has two recent Bowdoin graduates on its roster, 1986-87 Co-Captains Jon Leonard and John McGeough.

VITA HASTEN has raced to a 12-0 start in Division I league play. They barely lost to the U.S. Olympic Team in an exhibition. Professional hockey in Sweden is divided into tiers, with Division I level falling just below the high-salaried Elite League. VITA HASTEN plans to move up into the Elite bracket next season. The team is here as part of a five game U.S. college tour.

It will be a showcase event as the senior-laden Polar Bears face the most impressive competition they will see all season. The ceremonies will begin at 7:00 p.m. Ticket prices have been announced at $5 general admission, $4 for faculty and staff, and $3 for all students. Tickets may be purchased at the Bowdoin College Athletic Office, the Dayton Arena, and at Sports East in the Topsham Fair Mall.

THE
BRUNSWICK

FLOWER SHOP

Centrally located across from Bowdoin College

729-8895
216A Maine St.
Mon.-Sat. 9:30-6

We Deliver
Wire Service

UNIQUE HOUSING OPPORTUNITY FOR FEMALE BOWDOIN STUDENTS

Rooms in beautiful, newly renovated lovely Colonial home very near campus. Bedrooms have charming antique pine and oak bureaus and desks, new oak beds, and large closets. Share 3 all-new stylish tile baths and lovely new contemporary kitchen with new appliances, new cabinetry, cathedral ceiling. Refinished pumpkin pine floors; natural refinished doors. Spacious, quiet and clean. Large rooms offered double occupancy, $900.00 per semester plus security deposit. Single occupancy, $1400 per semester. All utilities included. Especially charming space for a few particularly discerning students. This is not a place for parties, etc! Care to take a look?

Call Mr. Boudette 725-8290
or please leave a message at 729-8616

SKATES • SKATES • SKATES AND MORE SKATES!

Come in for a great selection
of hockey and figure skates!

A Great Christmas Gift For
A Maine Winter!!

212 Maine St., Brunswick 725-8675

j&s sports center

YOUR FOUR SEASON DEALER
212 Maine Street • Brunswick 725-8675

Men's hockey

(Continued from page nine)

31 seconds. Not to be outdone, senior co-captain Steve Ilkos tied it up just 18 seconds later, leading the Bears to a 4-2 first period advantage.

Bowdoin continued the pressure, building their lead up to 5-2, but the Huskies kept coming back. Ilkos kept the Polar Bears ahead, however, as he filled the net with five goals, tying a Bowdoin record, most of them on deft passes from Thornton. Despite stopping only eleven shots, Janas continued his amazing ECAC winning streak, which now stands at 18 straight over three seasons.

Coach Terry Meagher continued last year's pattern of alternating goalies, bringing Janas back to face St. Anselm again at home after Rabiator had faced Babson just two days before. The game had taken its toll, however, and the Polar Bears were never able to get on track, eking out a 3-2 win.

Janas proved his earlier outing was no fluke as he continually turned away well placed shots by the Hawks. He was helped out when Dave Dowbrowski rifled a goal just 3:25 into the contest. Janas' saves redeemed the defense and kept the Bears in the lead the rest of the way.

Steve Thornton poked in a goal off an Ilkos rebound to up the Polar Bear lead to 2-0 after two periods. Despite their sluggish play they seemed in command against the 1-6 Hawks. But in the middle of the third period Janas came out of net and was knocked over by a Bear defenseman, leaving it open for the first St. Anselm goal. The small Dayton Arena crowd began to get nervous.

Kevin Potter iced the game, however, on one of the strangest goals one is likely to see this year. His shot from the blue line was a rainbow, a soft line drive that landed gently in the net for a 3-1 Bear lead. The Hawks added a goal with nine seconds left, but it was too late.

The Polar Bears travel to New England College this Saturday, then return home on Thursday for a game against Vira Haasen of Sweden, a club that features former Bears Jon Leonard and John McGeough, Bowdoin's all time leading scorer. They are the only Americans on the squad, and their return to Dayton should be worth watching.

Women's hockey

(Continued from page nine)

Suzanne Walker turned in a superb day in the nets for the Black and White but was beaten several times by fine team play from the Dartmouth squad. The lone Bowdoin goal came from freshman Sarah Russell assisted by sophomore Sheila Carroll.

Bowdoin lost its second game to Colby in overtime by a score of 4-3. Colby jumped out to a 3-1 lead as the Mules thoroughly outplayed the Polar Bears. The first Bowdoin goal was scored by Carroll.

The Polar Bears stormed back in the third period and outshot Colby, 10-6. The hustle paid off as captain Kathy McCormick and Carroll each netted goals to send the game into overtime. It took Colby only 6 seconds to score in the overtime, however, as the Bowdoin comeback was stopped short. The final was 4-3.

Once again, Walker was impressive in the net as well as freshman Laura Folk and sophomore Karen Crehore on defense. The season is young for the team and as the Black and White gain more experience, success is sure to follow.

RESEARCH OPPORTUNITIES

If you plan to start a research career upon graduation, start your job search at Tufts University, Boston Campus.

Tufts' Boston Campus is comprised of the Medical School, Dental and Biomedical Schools, the Sackler School of Biomedical Sciences, and the U.S.D.A. Human Nutrition Research Center.

We have an ongoing need for science graduates in a variety of exciting medical science research areas.

December graduates should contact us to be considered for current openings, those graduating in the Spring may send us a resume for future opportunities.

Tufts offers an excellent salary and benefits package including tuition assistance.

All interested candidates should send a resume to Tufts University Personnel, 200 Harrison Ave., Boston, MA 02111, or call (617) 958-6600. An Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer.

TUFTS UNIVERSITY
BOSTON

Kevin D. Hancock '88 has received the 1987 Curtis E. Chase Memorial Fund Award. The scholarship was established in 1968 to honor the late 1st Lt. Curtis E. Chase '65, the first Bowdoin graduate to die in Vietnam. It is presented annually to a Bowdoin senior who is "a man of promise with the qualities of leadership that make for citizenship in the best American tradition."

Hancock is co-captain of the men's varsity basketball team. He has earned varsity letters and varsity numerals in basketball.

Hancock is majoring in history and government and has been a dean's list student. He is also president of Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity.

Under the terms of the Curtis E. Chase Memorial Fund, the scholarship is given to a senior who realizes "the importance of serving the United States to a best of his ability. He shall be a well-rounded man, active in sports, and a student eager to learn."

Men's Varsity Hockey 1987-88

Tuesday 11-24-87	St. Anselm W 6-1
Friday 11-27-87	University of Connecticut W 9-7
Saturday 11-28-87	Babson L 2-1
Tuesday 12-1-87	St. Anselm W 3-2
Saturday 12-5-87	New England College A 7:30
Wednesday 12-9-87	Colby A 7:00
Thursday 12-10-87	Vita Hasen (Sweden) H 7:00
(Tickets: $5 general admission, $4 faculty and staff $3 students)
Friday 1-8-88	Rochester Institute of Technology A 7:30
Saturday 1-9-88	Rochester Institute of Technology A 7:30
Tuesday 1-12-88	UMass-Bost A 7:30
Friday 1-15-88	Lake Forest A
Saturday 1-16-88	Lake Forest A
Tuesday 1-19-88	Merrimack A 7:30
Friday 1-22-88	Williams H 7:00
Saturday 1-23-88	Holy Cross H 4:00
Tuesday 1-26-88	Salem State A 7:30
Friday 1-29-88	Norwich H 7:00
Saturday 1-30-88	Middlebury H 3:00
Friday 2-5-88	Union A 7:30

Saturday 2-6-88	Hamilton A 3:00
Tuesday 2-9-88	Salem State H 7:00
Friday 2-12-88	Boston University A 7:00
Saturday 2-13-88	Amherst A 4:00
Wednesday 2-17-88	Colby H 7:00
Saturday 2-20-88	Babson A 3:30

Photo by Lori Bodwell

Intramural Schedule

A-League Basketball

12/6 1:00	Morrel Gym	Baxter Force vs. Beta
2:00	Morrel Gym	Kappa Sig vs. Deke
3:00	Morrel Gym	L.N. Penetration vs. Lodgers

Co-ed Basketball

12/7 7:00	Sargent Gym	Randomness IV vs. Maine Moguls
8:00	Sargent Gym	Zete vs. Winthrop

A-League Hockey

12/7 8:00	Beta vs. Deke
-----------	---------------

Co-ed Hockey

12/7 9:00	Delta Sig vs. Outlaws
10:00	Migratory Game Fishes vs. Chi Psi

Volleyball

12/6 1:30	Sargent Gym	Psi U vs. Moore-Ons
-----------	-------------	---------------------

BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed

PARENTS!

Give your college student a very special care package! An Ice Cream Cake from Ben & Jerry's for birthdays, study breaks, exams, surprises, rainy days...

Call and order your cake today.

Free Delivery (207) 725-2723

96 Maine Street, Brunswick

CARLOS CASTANEDA
don Juan returns—in this, the most magical and entrancing of all Carlos Castaneda's books.

He gives us once again don Juan in his role as teacher, master of sorcery and transcendental trickster—wise, infuriating, capable of working miracles and playing practical jokes, but always seeking the wisdom of the warrior, and teaching it by means of riveting stories that are at once magic and art.

THE POWER OF SILENCE
Further Lessons of don Juan

SIMON AND SCHUSTER
A BANTAM BOOK

THE "CLUBBUSTERS" $3.99 EACH

NO CLUB HASSLES ! NO CLUB GIMMICKS ! PLUS POSTAGE

USE THIS PAGE OR A PHOTOCOPY AS YOUR ORDER FORM. MARK AN "X" IN BOX NEXT TO YOUR SELECTIONS.

CUT OUT AND MAIL ENTIRE PAGE

WHITESNAKE GEFEN GHS 24099 (9 98)	WHITESNAKE SLIDE IT IN
WHITNEY HOUSTON AMSTA AL 8405 (9 98)	WHITNEY RADIO K.A.O.S.
DEF LEPPARD MERCURY 830 675 1/POLYGRAM	HYSTERIA DARK SIDE OF THE MOON
PINK FLOYD COLUMBIA OC 40559	A MOMENTARY LAPSE OF REASON ONE WAY HOME
SOUNDTRACK RCA 8408 1 R (9 98)	DIRTY DANCING NO PROTECTION
SOUNDTRACK SLASH 25629/WARNER BROS. (9 98)	LA BAMBA BEVERLY HILLS COP II
JOHN COUGAR MELLENCAMP MERCURY 832 465 1/POLYGRAM	THE LONESOME JUBILEE ALPHABET CITY
U2 ISLAND 90581/ATLANTIC (9 98)	THE JOSHUA TREE BABYLON AND ON
HEART CAPITOL PJ 12546 (9 98)	BAD ANIMALS TOP GUN
DANNY WILSON VIRGIN 90596/ATLANTIC (8 98)	MEET DANNY WILSON BIG GENERATOR
RITCHIE VALENS HINO DEL FI RINLP 70178/CAPTOL (8 98)	THE BEST OF RITCHIE VALENS GO ON...
RUSH MERCURY 832 464 1/POLYGRAM	HOLD YOUR FIRE ELECTRIC
SOUNDTRACK MADONNA SIRE 25411/WARNER BROS. (9 98)	WHO'S THAT GIRL WENDY AND LISA
FLEETWOOD MAC WARNER BROS. 25471 (9 98)	TANGO IN THE NIGHT TIFFANY
R.E.M. IRS 42059/MCA (8 98)	DOCUMENT LICENSED TO ILL
GRATEFUL DEAD AMSTA AL 8452 (9 98)	IN THE DARK STRANGEWAYS, HERE WE COME
EUROPE EPC 8FE 40241/E.P.A.	THE FINAL COUNTDOWN FASTER PUSSYCAT
KENNY G. AMSTA AL 8-8427 (8 98)	DUOTONES KISS ME, KISS ME, KISS ME
LISA LISA & CULT JAM COLUMBIA FC 40477	SPANISH FLY INTO THE FIRE
AEROSMITH GEFEN GHS 24162 (8 98)	PERMANENT VACATION KEEP YOUR DISTANCE
ANITA BAKER ELEGRA 50444 (8 98)	RAPTURE BANGIN'
GREAT WHITE CAPITOL ST 12545 (8 98)	ONCE BITTEN BACK IN THE HIGH LIFE
KISS MERCURY 832 626 1/POLYGRAM	CRAZY NIGHTS GRACELAND
SOUNDTRACK ATLANTIC 81767 (9 98)	LOST BOYS SO
MOTLEY CRUE ELEGRA 60725 (9 98)	GIRLS, GIRLS, GIRLS BEST OF THE DOORS
THE CARS ELEGRA 60747 (9 98)	DOOR TO DOOR A LETTER FROM ST. PAUL
HUEY LEWIS & THE NEWS CHRYSALIS OV 41534	FORE! CONTROL
RICHARD MARX ELEGRA 60747 (9 98)	RICHARD MARX CROWDED HOUSE
BON JOVI MERCURY 830284 1/POLYGRAM	SLEEPY WHEN WET ROCK YOU TO HELL
EXPOSURE AMSTA AL 8441 (8 98)	EXPOSURE LIFE AS WE KNOW IT
CUTTING CREW VIRGIN 90573/ATLANTIC (8 98)	BROADCAST JONATHAN BUTLER
GENESIS ATLANTIC 81641 (9 98)	INVISIBLE TOUCH SENTIMENTAL HYGIENE
POISON LONGMA ST 12523/CAPTOL (8 98)	LOOK WHAT THE CAT DRAGGED IN DARKLANDS
CINDERELLA MERCURY 830076 1/POLYGRAM	NIGHT SONGS
BODEANS SLASH 25629/REPRISE (8 98)	OUTSIDE LOOKING IN
PET SHOP BOYS (EM-MANHATTAN 46972 (8 98)	ACTUALLY
BILLY IDOL CHRYSALIS OV 41620	VITAL IDOL
SUZANNE VEGA A&M SP 5136 (8 98)	SOLITUDE STANDING
NAJEE (EM-MANHATTAN ST 17241 (8 98)	NAJEE'S THEME
DAVID BOWIE (EM-MANHATTAN PJ 17267 (9 98)	NEVER LET ME DOWN
SPYRO GYRA MCA 42044 (8 98)	STORIES WITHOUT WORDS
W.A.S.P. CAPITOL CLT 48053 (8 98)	LIVE IN THE RAW
BANANARAMA LONDON 828 061 1/POLYGRAM	WOW
PRINCE PNOLEY PNO 25577/WARNER BROS. (15 98)	SIGN 'O' THE TIMES
WHITNEY HOUSTON AMSTA ALB-8212 (8 98)	WHITNEY HOUSTON
GLORIA ESTEFAN & MIAMI SOUND MACHINE EPC DE 40769/E.P.A.	LET IT LOOSE
38 SPECIAL A&M 3910 (9 98)	BEST OF 38 SPECIAL-FLASHBACK
MADONNA SIRE 25442/WARNER BROS. (9 98)	TRUE BLUE
SOUNDTRACK MCA 6214 (9 98)	MOONLIGHTING
ECHO AND THE BUNNYMEN SIRE 25552/WARNER BROS. (8 98)	ECHO AND THE BUNNYMEN
SWING OUT SISTER MERCURY 832 213 1/POLYGRAM	IT'S BETTER TO TRAVEL
SAMMY HAGAR GEFEN GHS 24144 (9 98)	I NEVER SAID GOODBYE
DEBBIE GIBSON ATLANTIC 81780 (8 98)	OUT OF THE BLUE
WHITESNAKE GEFEN GHS 4018 (8 98)	SLIDE IT IN
ROGER WATERS COLUMBIA FC 40795	RADIO K.A.O.S.
PINK FLOYD HARVEST SMOG 1163/CAPTOL (9 98)	DARK SIDE OF THE MOON
HOOTERS COLUMBIA OC 40659	ONE WAY HOME
STARSHIP GRANT 6413-1/GFCA (9 98)	NO PROTECTION
SOUNDTRACK MCA 6207 (9 98)	BEVERLY HILLS COP II
ABC MERCURY 832 391 1/POLYGRAM	ALPHABET CITY
SQUEEZE A&M SP 5161 (8 98)	BABYLON AND ON
SOUNDTRACK COLUMBIA SC 40323	TOP GUN
YES ATCO 90522/ATLANTIC (9 98)	BIG GENERATOR
MR. MISTER MCA 6276 1 R (9 98)	GO ON...
THE CULT BEGGARS BANQUET 759E 25555/WARNER BROS. (8 98)	ELECTRIC
WENDY AND LISA COLUMBIA SFC 40862	WENDY AND LISA
TIFFANY MCA 5793 (8 98)	TIFFANY
BEASTIE BOYS DEF JAM FC 40238/COLUMBIA	LICENSED TO ILL
THE SMITHS SIRE 25459/WARNER BROS. (8 98)	STRANGEWAYS, HERE WE COME
FASTER PUSSYCAT ELEGRA 60730 (8 98)	FASTER PUSSYCAT
THE CURE ELEGRA 60737 (13 98)	KISS ME, KISS ME, KISS ME
BRYAN ADAMS A&M 3907 (9 98)	INTO THE FIRE
CURIOSITY KILLED THE CAT MERCURY 832 025 1/POLYGRAM	KEEP YOUR DISTANCE
THE OUTFIELD COLUMBIA OC 40619	BANGIN'
STEVE WINWOOD ISLAND 25448/WARNER BROS. (8 98)	BACK IN THE HIGH LIFE
PAUL SIMON WARNER BROS. 25447 (9 98)	GRACELAND
PETER GABRIEL GEFEN GHS 24088 (8 98)	SO
THE DOORS ELEGRA 60345 (12 98)	BEST OF THE DOORS
THE SILENCERS MCA 6442 1 R (8 98)	A LETTER FROM ST. PAUL
JANET JACKSON A&M SP 3905 (9 98)	CONTROL
CROWDED HOUSE CAPITOL ST 12485 (8 98)	CROWDED HOUSE
GRIM REAPER MCA 6250 1 R (8 98)	ROCK YOU TO HELL
REO SPEEDWAGON EPC FC 40444/E.P.A.	LIFE AS WE KNOW IT
JONATHAN BUTLER JIVE/MCA 1032 1-2/MCA (8 98)	JONATHAN BUTLER
WARREN ZEVON VIRGIN 90603/ATLANTIC (8 98)	SENTIMENTAL HYGIENE
THE JESUS AND MARY CHAIN WARNER BROS. 25456 (8 98)	DARKLANDS

We Are Not A Club !
WE ONLY SELL CASSETTES!! WE ACCEPT
 PERSONAL CHECKS OR MONEY ORDERS
POSTAGE & HANDLING: ALL ORDERS MUST INCLUDE
 THREE DOLLARS & FIFTY CENTS (3.50). NO MATTER HOW
 LARGE OR SMALL THE ORDER. ALL ORDERS SHIPPED
 FIRST CLASS MAIL. TAPES ARE 100% GUARANTEED.

NAME _____
 ADDRESS _____
 CITY _____ STATE _____ ZIP _____

MAKE CHECKS PAYABLE TO:
 Students Publishing
 PO BOX 4649
 FORT LAUDERDALE,
 FLORIDA 33338

$3.99 x =
 CATALOGUE (1.00)
 POSTAGE & HANDLING $3.50
 TOTAL ENCLOSED

☐ Yes! Please send me your 1987 catalog with over 7000 titles. I have enclosed $1.00 extra for postage.

Chemistry

(Continued from page one)

are working with diseased mammalian cells. Bloomstone is studying the effects of various therapeutic agents such as interferon on malignant cancer cells, while Farrell is working with calcium regulation in cystic fibrosis.

Alan Iverson '88 is working with two strains of bacteria, mutant and wild, comparing their cell size and the chemistry and Peter Gergely '89 is doing a study of the grazing habits of muscles in tidal areas such as the Bowdoin owned Coleman Farm Banding Station. Scott Libby '88 is working with autot-

Harris

(Continued from page one)

sources we've ever had in Americans for Indian Opportunity." She mentioned that her organization gets a lot of interns from Dartmouth College, which was originally founded to educate Indians and which has recently been trying to bring back some elements of its Indian origin.

Harris believes that a student gains from Washington internships "glimpses of going and working on the Hill" as well as exposure to Congress and how it works. She encourages young Indian people to spend at least two years working in Washington because "everybody's life is affected by what goes on in Washington and one ought to know how it works."

There are hundreds of non-profit organizations in Washington which offer valuable experience for college students. Some of those named by Harris are groups interested in policies in Central America, refugee work, Middle Eastern groups, Women's groups, political action groups, children's foundations, environmental groups, and peace organizations.

"Networking" within these organizations is crucial for those involved in their own organizations because without recourse to substantial monetary resources, connections become indispensable," said Harris.

Harris concluded with her thoughts on a Liberal Arts education. "I do believe in a Liberal Arts education, with a well-rounded education you're a fuller person," said Harris. She added that it is important for students to be exposed to a lot in order to find out what direction they want to go in.

Harris encouraged Bowdoin students, and all college students, to get involved in a political campaign because it is an experience that cannot be obtained anywhere else. She also compared politics to non-profit organizations, in the respect that both aim to bring about social change.

In LaDonna Harris' opinion, anyone with good ideas can find the funds to create a non-profit organization. She advised students not to hesitate to ask. "Most politicians or non-profit people like to help students, both because it's good politics and because they find pleasure in trying to point students in the right direction."

Harris' final advice was this: "Don't be afraid to do something that doesn't appear to be exactly what you want to do. Look at it as a stepping stone toward what you ultimately want to do."

CRUISE SHIPS NOW HIRING. M/F

Summer & Career Opportunities (Will Train). Excellent pay plus world travel. Hawaii, Bahamas, Caribbean, etc. CALL NOW: 206-736-0775 Ext.544F

ated methods of image analysis.

Yentsch said that she is very pleased with the success of the projects so far and feels that the students have gained a lot from this

Admissions

(Continued from page one)

an accepted student may or may not matriculate at Bowdoin. If the Admissions Office feels they can accept enough ED students to fill half of the class of 1992, then they will do so. However, Mason does not think that this will happen.

Currently, the Admissions staff is reviewing the applications, and so far, Mason sees a strong pool of applicants taking strong academic programs, including Advanced Placement classes. The responses are scheduled for mailing on December 15, 1987.

Rush

(Continued from page one)

Foti agreed, saying, "I hope it doesn't influence freshmen's decisions...I can see how it would."

Augustini disagreed that it would influence freshmen, saying "I don't think it's a real serious threat that they're going to abolish fraternities", so freshmen shouldn't be worried about dropping.

Adams also felt that the committee will not affect the amount of drops. "The committee has put fraternities in a much more focused center for everyone...people are looking at the good and bad points. As far as I'm concerned, fraternities are an asset to this campus and that's bound to get across to freshmen."

BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed

Give.

WE'RE FIGHTING FOR
YOUR LIFE

American Heart
Association

KRISTINA'S
BAKERY RESTAURANT

Everyone's favorite for Breakfast,
Lunch & Dinner

*Deliciously different menus
Delectable pastries
Friendly atmosphere
Outdoor dining in Summer
Fine wines, beers, specialty coffees
Cocktails*

Open 7 days a week
at the corner of
Center & High St.
Bath, Maine 04530
(207) 442-8877

Limited number of rooms available for
Bowdoin Commencement
Advanced Reservations Required

Atrium Motel

Cooks Corner, Brunswick, Maine
729-5555

Flowers by Knowles

Get ready for Christmas!
We have poinsettias, Christmas
plants and wreaths.

Deliver anywhere with FTD service!

15 Jordan Ave.

725-2461

Get the perfect hairstyle for your lifestyle!

Call the Plaza today, and visit
us at our new location, next
to the White Seal Laundry.
Walk ins welcome

DOWNTOWN PLAZA
COIFFURES

MON. THRU WED. 8:30 to 5
THURS. AND FRI. 8:30 to 5, SAT. 8:30 to 5
174 MAINE STREET - 725-8853

PLAZA
COIFFURES

MONDAY THRU FRIDAY 8:30 to 5
SATURDAY 8:30 to 5
725-8856 - COOKS CORNER

NEED TO DOCTOR YOUR MCAT SCORE?

If your MCAT score needs a shot in the arm, come to the experts in test preparation—Stanley H. Kaplan. Our test-taking techniques and educational review will help you be in top condition test day. We'll not only sharpen your scientific knowledge, but your reading, problem-solving, and essay-writing skills too. Summer courses are registering now. So call the best in test prep—Kaplan. And get an MCAT score that you deserve.

KAPLAN

STANLEY H. KAPLAN EDUCATIONAL CENTER LTD.
DON'T COMPETE WITH
A KAPLAN STUDENT—BE ONE

Maine class forming now - enroll now & study in any
Kaplan center over winter break!
(617) 964-TEST

OPINION

National Equality

The fraternity system at Bowdoin has come under fire from many quarters this semester. Some of the criticism has been justified, and some has been gratuitous. But the result of the criticism to date has been to make the fraternities come out of their corner swinging, and most of their blows have been well-aimed and above the belt, if perhaps a bit overdue. Chapel talks sponsored by the Interfraternity Council and cooperation with administration and the Fraternity Review are fine examples of the prudent measures fraternities have taken in dealing with those who seem to desire to permanently alter the system.

But this week two disturbing developments took place on campus, and we hope that they are not reflective of the attitude of the system or fraternity members on the whole. The first was at the most recent Executive Board meeting, when Mark Peluso mentioned that he was planning a poll of the student body to determine their feelings on the continuation of nationally affiliated fraternities at Bowdoin and the possibility of single-sex organizations. The second was John Stonestreet's chapel talk Wednesday on fraternity reforms and their future at Bowdoin. Stonestreet questioned the efficaciousness of several proposed reforms and defended the presence of national fraternities at Bowdoin.

Taken together, these two developments may mean stormy days ahead for the review process which has gone so smoothly thus far. Usually we favor precedence of student opinion in making decisions of this kind, but we feel that the referendum proposed by Peluso can do nothing but stir up trouble. Coeducation has had a rough row to hoe at Bowdoin, and still has progress to make before the sexes are on equal footing at the college. Sexual prejudice is still a problem, and polarization of the sexes through the return of single-sex institutions of any kind will accomplish nothing except setting the college back ten years.

National fraternities definitely have a place at Bowdoin, as long as their local chapters comply with the rules of the college in terms of integration of the sexes. The marriage of these two worlds has been successful at Bowdoin for more than a decade, but Stonestreet and Peluso's proposals would mean a return to the days before women were entitled by the rules of the college to all the same privileges that men are.

Tara Dooley Justice?

Yes, David H. Otto, as your article clearly demonstrates, justice at Bowdoin is questionable. But how? Is it that two Bowdoin men were denied their rights to be judged by a judiciary board of their peers? It is possible that their peers would have found them not guilty.

Perhaps Bowdoin's concept of temporary suspension is "ludicrous." Obviously the administration does not consider either the inconvenience of finding interim accommodations or the hazard of the suicidal student.

Maybe Deans Lewallen and Nyhus, as well as President Greeson are unaware of the maxim that one is innocent until proven guilty. They probably enjoy "playing with people's lives and futures."

Or was justice denied because:

The college administration mercifully dismissed these students on suspension violations and did not give the J-board the opportunity to tarnish their records by recommending expulsion for sexual assault.

The dispute was confined within Bowdoin's boundaries and the two men were not imprisoned. But how is the system at Bowdoin College inefficient to deal with rape and sexual assault or harassment justly?

The one of attitude toward sexual assault. In your Opinion, David Otto, you claim that "the school community could then have reevaluated itself and corrected the problems that lead to sexual harassment misunderstandings and prevent future happenings." This was not a "misunderstanding." According to the Orient coverage these women cried for help, struggled to free themselves, and as a result had bruises, bloody noses, and fingerprint marks on their arms. This was a violent and aggressive attack. To a certain extent, the college contributes to this image of sexual harassment. It created a body of student called the "Peer Relations Support Group." The group previously was the "Sexual Harassment Peer Counselors." Does the group understand sexual harassment at Bowdoin to anything other than a form of violence?

The second problem is alluded to by Otto. "The administration acted in their own best interest, not those of the students in question." Ignoring the reference to the administration, I ask, what interests, of which students are in question? When an individual is sexually assaulted their autonomy over their own body is violated. Because such an assault involves the body it is an extremely personal form. Because the assault is of a sexual nature, the personal and private aspects are intensified. Therefore, it seems to me that it is most important to protect the interests of the victims. A judgement by peers or a re-evaluation by the school community does not respect the interests of the victim. Instead such a system continues to victimize the victim. This is especially true at Bowdoin College, where privacy sometimes is impossible and scrutiny by peers inevitable.

At the end of his memo, the Dean of the College Paul H. Nyhus addresses this issue. Apparently the Administrative Committee will review the college's policy toward rape and sexual assault, as well as the Student Judiciary Board's role in the policy. Mr. Nyhus's recommendation to form a distinct committee to hear sexual assault cases is a necessary proposal. Such a board should be specially trained members of different parts of the community. The victim should be granted an advocate to act as an intermediary or to provide support throughout the reviewing process.

In this case of alleged sexual assault, as well as in all other cases, "the saddest part of the whole nightmare" is not tied to the fate of the accused's interests. The justice process (when it is not purposefully evaded) is geared towards the accused's interests. Given the sensitivity of rape and sexual assault cases, justice needs to be aimed at not revictimizing the victim. David H. Otto, your article perpetuates the dubious nature of justice at Bowdoin.

Contrary to the attitude expressed in Otto's article, I know that there is a large community who support these two women in their decision to make their case public. We respect your decision. It must have taken tremendous courage. The dog went to school. She hated it. Then she left school.

Letter

To the Editor:

As the parent of one of the victims of the sexual assault by two male students I feel compelled to respond to the "Opinion" of David H. Otto, "Justice at Bowdoin."

In his opinion Mr. Otto reveals not only a great insensitivity to the victims but a startling ignorance of the facts of this horrendous event. To set the record straight, what happened in the bathroom of that fraternity house was not a "sexual harassment misunderstanding." By any definition, in any court of law, two men physically assaulted and attempted to rape my daughter and her roommate. Only because an alert male student intervened did they escape being raped. Their account is corroborated by every eyewitness to the event.

According to Mr. Otto, the "saddest part of this whole nightmare" is the fact that the students will not have the opportunity to present their case to the J-Board. What is overlooked, of course, is that there was no hearing before the J-Board because the students, by violating the very clear suspension order, chose not to have such a hearing. Frankly, we feel cheated that those men escaped facing their victims and the overwhelming evidence against them, in a public forum composed of their peers. It was not the administration that took the easy way out, but those two men. That is consistent with their actions all along. Never have they accepted responsibility for what they have done. Indeed, they have dismissed this vicious assault as some kind of a party prank. At this writing, they still have not even so much as apologized directly to my daughter and the other woman involved.

While I am sure the men are suffering from the disciplinary action taken against them, this was brought on by their own actions and in no way can be compared to the totally gratuitous suffering of two wholly innocent victims.

Sincerely,
Stephanie Wald

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

"The College exercises no control over the content of the student writings contained herein and neither it, nor the Administration, nor the faculty assume any responsibility for the views expressed herein."

Lori Bodwell...Editor in Chief

Kevin Wesley...Assistant Editor
Adam Najberg...News Editor
Rosemarie Dougherty...Assoc. News Editor

Michael Botelho...Sports Editor
Jack Cahill...Editorials Editor
Susan Lyons...Contributing Editor

Tamara Dassanayake...Asst. News Editor
Eric Foushee...Business Manager
Alan Harris...Photography Editor
Mary Ann Lai...Photography Editor
Lizz Millan...Asst. Entertainment Editor

Kathryn Nanovic...Production Manager
Justin Friesendorf...Asst. Sports Editor
Stephen Reynolds...Features Editor
Sharon Smart...Entertainment Editor
Michael Townsend...Advertising Manager

Dawn Vance...Asst. News Editor

Production Staff: Vincent Jacks, Andrew Appel
Advertising Staff: Michelle Campagna, Kim Maxwell

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

Published by

THE BOWDOIN PUBLISHING COMPANY

LORI M. BODWELL ERIC F. FOUSHEE
ALBERT P. MAURO, JR.

Published weekly when classes are held during the Fall and Spring semesters by the students of Bowdoin College. Address editorial communication to the Editor, subscription communication to the circulation manager, and business correspondence to the business manager at The Bowdoin Orient, 12 Cleveland Street, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011, or telephone (207) 725-3300. The Bowdoin Orient reserves the right to edit any and all articles and letters. Subscriptions are $15.00 per year or $8.00 per semester. Past issues cannot be mailed. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to The Bowdoin Orient, Moulton Union, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011.

Thanks

To the Editor:

Again, it is time for a blood drive thank you letter to those who helped make this past drive another success. We collected 222 pints which was far below our estimated total, but wonderful considering the drive was the same day as Oxfam. I would like to thank the Moulton Union kitchen staff for all their help and patience, Lynn Ruddy for securing the gym for us, Physical Plant for helping with last minute problems, the very helpful Brunswick businesses, and lastly all those who gave their time and effort to the drive. We have two more drives this year, and I hope they can be the biggest ones we have ever had. As an important side note, we collected more than Bates...again!

Sincerely,

Andy Bernstein '88

Fraternities

To the Editor:

This letter is in regard to the speech made by Dean Nyhus on Nov. 19 at the Fraternity Review Forum. As freshmen, we were both appalled and disgusted at the immature and unprofessional manner in which Dean Nyhus approached the fraternity issue. His unqualified allegations against the fraternities based on rumors and hearsay from some years ago do not accurately represent the situation at the present time. And unqualified accusations they must be, for he based his speech on misquoted students' statements and fraternity stereotypes. In doing this, he embarrassed not only himself, but Bowdoin College as a whole. It is sad that the administration will go to these extreme lengths to close the fraternities.

Sincerely,

Kathy Johnson '91

Alan Parks '91

Policy

To the Editor:

I seldom consider the college in communal terms except when its underpinnings are violated, and I honestly believe that this demonstrates how much I take the delicate balance of our community for granted. I'm also sure that I represent a typical sensitivity to the issue. The issue of sexual assault and rape at Bowdoin has received only sporadic attention during my years here, although it has been a looming concern the entire time. It seems that changes in college policy regarding sexual assault will be modified only when the issue has been unfortunately reactivated. I praise Dean Nyhus' decision to issue a memorandum explaining the recent disciplinary action taken by the college against two students implicated in a sexual assault case and also, for raising some very poignant and important questions concerning disciplinary procedures. I am sure that everyone at Bowdoin is disturbed that this type of pathetic, deviant behavior occurs at an institution which is theoretically a community of well-educated young individuals who would hope to be above this sort of criminal perversity. For these reasons, I believe College policy should make available immediately the strictest disciplinary action possible for such offenses against the individuals of this community.

Dean Nyhus raises two questions which should be addressed promptly and given the fullest consideration. First, "what should be the College policy regarding notification of the police?" I would suggest that, with the consent of the victim, if found guilty by either the Student Judiciary Board or the Administrative Committee, the police should always be notified. This should be carried out procedurally, as a distinct aspect of such disciplinary action. Such action will provide not only the maximum punishment of the College, but the threat of legal punishment as well. A crime committed within the College walls is still a crime, and Bowdoin should not provide insulation against the procedures adopted by society to treat such incidents.

The second question raised by the dean is "should our procedures be altered so that the Student Judiciary Board is not involved at all in such cases." I would support the removal of this responsibility from the Student Judiciary Board in favor of placing such cases before the Administrative Committee or a new committee composed entirely of faculty members. Despite the fact that our Student Judiciary

Board members are supposedly chosen for their qualities of jurisprudence, faculty review of such cases would reduce to a minimum any possible subjectivity perhaps resultant of students judging students. College officials are more likely to implement the strictest disciplinary action available when warranted — permanent dismissal — which will presumably be a major deterrent to such acts of violence. Students who object to such a readjustment of the current system should remember: "The Dean of Students has the authority to accept or reject the recommendation of the Student Judiciary Board."

I do not believe that an issue as pressing as rape and sexual assault requires weeks of student debate. It is in the interest of everyone who lives and studies at Bowdoin to take the necessary steps towards achieving the maximum deterrence and penalties for such "outrageous violations." I would be embarrassed if this real dilemma should become an abstract issue of student concern over the supposed usurpation of their judicial powers.

Michael Szajkowski '88

Athletics

To the Editor:

Several years ago, I served on the Committee on Athletics. At that time, the complaint against many of the coaches was that they did not recruit hard enough or widely enough. Since then, they have obviously made considerable strides in doing exactly what they were told to do by this institution.

Perhaps in the academic disciplines need to increase our efforts to attract students, especially those who now end up going to Harvard, Yale, Amherst, Williams, and Wesleyan. But to do that, we would have to work as hard as the coaches have been.

I hope the faculty will see that excellence in any area of College activity enhances us all and mediocrity diminishes us all.

Christian P. Potholm
Professor of Government

Now that you've gotten into Bowdoin, IBM can help you get more out of it.

The road to graduation is paved with term papers, lab reports, cramming, all-nighters and, of course, exams.

To ease that journey and awaken your professors to your exceptional abilities, we suggest the newest member of the IBM® Personal System/2® family: the Model 25 Collegiate.

It's a high-powered personal computer with advanced graphics capabilities, designed to fit on your desk without adding to the clutter. And it comes with a generous 640 KB memory, two 3.5" diskette drives and an aid package every student can appreciate — a big discount, plus Microsoft® Windows 1.04, Write, Paint, Cardfile, IBM DOS 3.3 and a mouse.

Pop in the load-and-go diskette and your Model 25 Collegiate is set to help you write and revise long papers and illustrate your points by combining words and graphics. So your professors will draw favorable conclusions about your work.

For more information on the Model 25 Collegiate, visit the IBM Education Product Coordinator on campus.

You'll quickly learn how to get the most out of the IBM Personal System/2.

IBM

Microsoft is a registered trademark of the Microsoft Corporation. IBM is a registered trademark and Personal System/2 is a trademark of the International Business Machines Corporation. © IBM 1987

KEGS WINE BEER
and now COLA

JOLT COLA

"all the sugar
and twice the caffeine"

Cask and Ken

36 Bath Road, Brunswick, 729-8711 Mon. Sat. 10 to 6

Let
Senter's
Be
Your Santa

Present this Coupon to Receive

20% off

Any One Item. Good 'til Dec. 24

One item is defined as one item as priced. For example:
A woman's suit is one item. A skirt & matching jacket would be two items as priced. No other coupons or discounts apply

Senter's

SIGNED, SEALED, DELIVERED,

$1.00

$1.00 off any pizza.
One coupon per pizza.
Expires: 12/20/87

Fast, Free Delivery
26 Bath Rd.
Phone: 729-5561

Includes all applicable state and local taxes.

When Domino's Pizza Delivers[®], we guarantee that you'll get a hot, delicious pizza. If you are not satisfied with your pizza, call and let us know within 30 minutes after delivery. We'll deliver another pizza, free, or refund your money.

Return of at least one-half pizza required.

Our drivers carry less than $20.00.
Limited delivery area.

26 Bath Road
Phone: 729-5561
OPEN FOR LUNCH:
Sat & Sun. at 11:00 a.m.

©1986 Domino's Pizza, Inc.

DOMINO'S
PIZZA
DELIVERS[®]
FREE.

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

FIRST CLASS MAIL
U.S. Postage PAID
BRUNSWICK, ME
Permit No. 25

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

VOLUME CXVII

BOWDOIN COLLEGE, BRUNSWICK, MAINE, FRIDAY, DECEMBER 11, 1987

NUMBER 12

1987 Bowdoin graduates John McGeough (20) left, and Jon Leonard (6) right, returned to Dayton Arena as members of Sweden's Div. 1 Vita Hasten hockey team. Polar Bear Steve Thornton (4) center, scored two goals in an explosive second period as Bowdoin fell to the Swedes 5-3. Freshman Jeff Wood scored Bowdoin's first goal. Photos by Lori Bodwell

Fraternity women attempt united front

CYNTHIA LAZO
and
TANYA WEINSTEIN
ORIENT Staff

For the first time in the history of Bowdoin fraternities, women fraternity members are making an effort to come together to represent themselves and have a voice in the fraternity system.

Women in Support of Bowdoin Fraternities (WISOB), a new organization, is headed by Jennifer Goldsmith '90, a member of Psi Upsilon (Psi U) fraternity, which recognizes women members on both the local and national levels. Psi U is the only nationally affiliated fraternity on campus that has women filling national officers' positions.

Goldsmith, who was recently elected the president of the College's Interfraternity Council (IFC), presented the idea of a group concerning women in fraternities to the IFC early this semester. She felt women in the college's fraternity system have not been adequately spoken for in the past.

With the formation of the Fraternity Review Committee, Goldsmith asked the IFC representative from each fraternity house to choose a woman who could represent the house. These women comprise the original members of the WISOB. At the first meeting, a petition was drawn up to be presented to the "blue ribbon" fraternity review committee currently investigating "the direction" of Bowdoin fraternities.

According to Goldsmith, women are "tired of hearing the administration and the college community using women as a scapegoat for the problems in the fraternity system.

The petition the women developed states: "We, the undersigned, feel that the position of women in fraternities has been incorrectly portrayed in the past. It has been assumed that women are mistreated, discriminated against, and abused by the fraternal system. We believe that although there are problems, these problems are not uniquely related to fraternities, rather they are problems throughout campus and society. We the women of Bowdoin fraternities are frustrated by the constant reference to the treatment of women as the major problem of our fraternity system. We support the Bowdoin College fraternities and feel they have enhanced our college experience in both an social and educational matter."

The petition was written by Goldsmith, Michelle Passman '90 and Jennifer Stern '88 of Beta Theta Pi (Beta), Caragh Fitzgerald '90 of Alpha Rho Upsilon (ARU), Angela Hansen '88 of Alpha Kappa Sigma (Kappa Sig), and Andrea Tsacoyeanes '88 of Theta Delta Chi (TD).

Beta house, which had 45 women members last year and has 52 this year, has had no women living in the house for the last two years. TD, with 18 women members also has no women living on premises. Both fraternities have assured the College that they do not forbid women from living in the houses. ARU and Kappa Sig, both local fraternities, maintain coed living arrangements.

Approximately 90% of all women in fraternities who were approached supported the group. Women at Delta Sigma, another local fraternity, did not sign the petition. A large majority of the women members of Zeta Psi fraternity had problems with the wording of the petition, and therefore created a similar, reworded petition.

Those who signed the "Zeta corollary" agreed with the basic points of the petition, but see serious problems within the fraternity system that need to be confronted. These women, along with many of those female fraternity members who decided against signing the petition, felt that they "do not know what is going on in other houses and did not want to represent them all," according to Goldsmith.

WISOB does not aim to solve individual problems within individual houses, said Goldsmith. The group is opposed to having outside forces come in to, each house to point out its specific problems, said Goldsmith.

When the members of WISOB were introduced by the chairman of the review committee Merton Henry '86 at the Fraternity Review Committee public hearing, they were referred to by Merton as "girls" who were going to "do their little show." To Goldsmith, this statement does not show sexual bias on the part of the committee, but that sexual prejudices are everywhere. "This is what our committee is trying to say," she said.

TD member Tsacoyeanes, dissatisfied that the administration has failed to recognize recent changes in fraternities, pointed out that the situation for women at TD is completely different now than it was when she first joined. "I am able to do things in TD now that I never even thought of doing when I was a freshman."

When Tsacoyeanes was a freshman, TD consisted of two separate entities under one roof: TD, the men's organization, and Delta Theta Delta, the women's organization. Each had its own officers, although only the men were recognized as the official house officers.

At the end of Tsacoyeanes' sophomore year, the men of TD decided that they wanted to become a single sex organization. During the first week of last fall semester, the women disbanded.

When college administration refused to recognize TD as a single-sex organization, the house again decided to include women, but to create a very different system from the previous one.

(Continued on page 12)

Petition receives mixed response

MARSHALL CARTER
ORIENT Staff

There are two reasons why all women in fraternities did not sign the petition put forth by Women in Support of Bowdoin Fraternities (WISOB).

The majority of non-signers are members of Zeta Psi (Zeta) and Delta Sigma (Delta Sig). They did not sign the document either because of differences of opinion about the content or through miscommunication between the fraternities resulting in incomplete awareness of the existence of the document.

In short, the petition said that the role of women in fraternities at

Bowdoin College has been misrepresented in the past and that fraternities have "enhanced our college experience in both a social and educational matter."

The problem of disagreement in content mainly concerned members of Zeta. "There was miscommunication so that Zeta (women) couldn't make it to the meetings when they wrote up the petition," said Jen Yancey '90, a Zeta. As a result, the viewpoints of many Zetas were not incorporated into the document. When WISOB presented it to the women of the house, "we agreed with what they were trying to say, but it wasn't clearly expressed," said Yancey.

Melissa Malkin '89, also a Zeta, added, "we didn't want to put our names to it if it was vague." However, several Zeta women did sign the document. To incorporate the views of the house, the Zeta corollary was written, which agreed with much of the original document but dealt with additional issues not mentioned in the petition.

According to members of Delta Sig, the women in the house did not sign the document because it wasn't accessible to them. "They (the petitioners) never came over here," said one Delta Sig. Another (Continued on page 12)

What do you do to relieve exam stress?

Scott Brown '88

"The first thing that comes to mind is that wonderful Dale Carnegie quote 'avoid worry at all costs.'"

Shannon Johnson '90

"I play 'Paradise by the Dashed Board Light' and think of the Baxter gang."

Lisa Wlodarski '89

"I cry."

Camilla Terwilliger '89

"I chain smoke."

Greg Lipitz '88

"Work for the sake of doing well on an exam will only contribute to more stress. So if you feel stressful, don't work—watch a movie, play golf, go to the synagogue."

Series to question Bowdoin party life

ADAM NAJBERG
ORIENT News Editor

Bowdoin College will be saying "no" to drugs during the week of January 24 to 30. During that week the college will hold a series of lectures under the heading of "The Bowdoin Party Life..."

The weeklong lecture series, which will be sponsored jointly by the Bowdoin College Alcohol Peer Advisors and the Interfraternity Council, is designed to address drug and alcohol related topics.

The keynote speaker will be Lonise Bias, mother of the late Len Bias. Bias was an All-American basketball player with the University of Maryland. He died of cocaine intoxication the day after being drafted by the Boston Celtics.

Ms. Bias will speak in Pickard Theater on Monday, Jan. 25.

Other speakers will include Patrick McManus '76, a recovering alcoholic and a member of Beta Theta Pi, Kathleen Gildea-Dinzeo of the University of New Hampshire Counseling Center, Dean of Students Fellow Bina Chaddha and Amy Dean, author of Students at Risk.

Topics addressed in the lectures will be "Drinking at Bowdoin," "Liquor and Your Love Life," "College Students From Alcoholic Families: What Can Be Done" and "Quarters, Thumper and Fuzzy Duck."

Jack Cooley '88, co-chair of APA, has helped organize the weekend. "I believe it illustrates a unique moment when fraternities/independents and many campus organizations have pooled their resources together."

The drug awareness week program will also feature skits on college party life, health information in topics ranging from stress management to safe sex, alcohol flavored ice cream, a booth offering cures for a hangover, an open forum, an open lunch and a film series.

Films screened during the week will be shown in Smith Auditorium. Featured films include "Lady Sings the Blues," "The Rose," "All That Jazz" and "Sid and Nancy."

Board members resign

DAWN VANCE
ORIENT Asst. News Editor

The Student Executive Board ended its fall semester by accepting the resignations of board members Andrew Winter '89 and Joe Gulino '89.

The resignations of Winter and Gulino became effective at the close of the meeting. Both Winter and Gulino will be studying away next semester.

Tuesday night's topics of discussion also included plans to ask President of the College A. LeRoy Gresson to appear before the board, the Women's Handbook and an article published by the New York Times.

The board is planning to invite Gresson to appear at one of its weekly meetings next semester so that it can pose questions to him. The board has established a committee to arrange this meeting between the President and the Execs. Committee members include Jason Easterly '90, Suzanna Makowski '90, Richard Krasuski '90 and David Spohr '91.

Some concerns were expressed that Gresson's appearance had the potential to turn into an inquisition, or at the very least, a free-for-all with the board and audience alike firing questions at the president. Member Tim Hughes said, "If it turns into a free-for-all that would be regrettable."

Student Activities Coordinator Bill Fruth speculated on the board's reasons for inviting the college president, who was reported as "unavailable for comment" in the New York Times article that appeared on Sunday, November 30.

"I'm wondering what the purpose is of asking the President to come in here to listen to the anger of the Exec Board," said Fruth.

Board members defended their reasoning and explained why they felt it important to have Gresson come before the board.

"The purpose of bringing him in here is to have a calm, civil, questioning period," said Makowski.

The Women's Handbook Committee reported that it had attended a meeting of the Bowdoin Women's Collective to question why certain ostensibly offensive phrases appear in the Women's Handbook. These phrases related to the claim that women do not live in Kappa Sigma, Zeta Psi and Beta Theta Pi fraternities, and that sexual harassment happens in fraternities.

The Bowdoin Women's Collective agreed to amend the statement concerning the claim that women do not live in certain fraternities, but were adamant in their refusal to change the sexual harassment statement. On this point member Elizabeth Yarnell said, "They said that because sexual harassment does in fact occur in fraternities that it was fair to leave it there."

"It doesn't matter what we think... it's their booklet, we have no right to change it," continued Yarnell.

Easterly did not agree. "They pick fraternities as a haven for those who would participate in sexual harassment," he said.

Winter, however concurred with Yarnell in saying that the board has no right to force a change on this point.

"The idea of a college is that it is a place for the free flow of ideas... you can close your ears and say you don't want to listen but you can't discriminate against what they want to say," said Winter.

The board decided the Women's Handbook Committee had completed its task and thus voted to dissolve the organization.

The board voted to send a letter to the New York Times on behalf of the student body in response to an article that appeared in that publication on November 29, 1987. This article concerned the future of the fraternity system at Bowdoin. The board delegated the writing of the response to Easterly, but all interested board members will be allowed to aid him in this task.

Two board members in particular expressed concern over such a response. Jenn Yancey '90 said, "I think we should be a little careful about what we're doing... we don't want to bring out more bad points about fraternities."

Winter suggested that any response at all equalled the overblowing of the situation. He categorized the current fraternity situation as "paranoia."

"There is a state of paranoia about anything that might smack of anti-fraternity bias. It's not worth keeping alive for eternity - which is exactly what a letter would do. Let it rest," said Winter.

Again Easterly disagreed. He cited examples of colleges that have eliminated fraternities from their campuses as reasons to continue debating the topic of Bowdoin fraternities.

"Paranoia perhaps... but anybody who is aware of the deaths (of fraternities) at Colby and Amherst knows they came very suddenly," said Easterly.

Dobkin cites lack of understanding

RICHARD LINDAHL
ORIENT Staff

People "force each other into molds" of role-playing based upon external appearances, said Rachel Dobkin '90 in her Chapel Talk entitled "Sexism at Bowdoin."

Dobkin expressed dismay at the tendency for men and women to not try to understand the differences between their two sexes, rather than utilize the differences as "a place to meet," she said.

Dobkin characterized prejudice in general as a "lack of understanding" that stems from a lack of interaction between those who are prejudiced and those against whom they discriminate. If prejudiced people had more contact with those who are unlike themselves, they would realize the inconsistency of their views, she said.

Interaction between the sexes at Bowdoin, however, "occurs where the most sexism occurs," Dobkin said. Dormitories and fraternities are the places where the sexes most often meet, she said.

Dobkin criticized the practice of "scooping" as exemplary of the limited understanding and interaction between the sexes. She said the practice shows little respect for the feelings of the other individual involved and does nothing to enhance understanding between the genders.

Dobkin said she sees Bowdoin as a place where sexist practices can be changed. The college's small size, the willingness of the students to change, the leadership potential of the students, the college's relative isolation from the rest of society and the access of students to the many governing boards of the college community were listed by Dobkin as indicative of the power students have to change sexist practices at the college.

Cooducational floors and bathrooms in more dormitories would help to "remove the mystique" of the opposite sex, Dobkin said. She also advocated more lounges where males and females could interact.

Incoming classes should be made more aware of gender issues at the college, Dobkin said.

Dobkin noted racist comments would not be tolerated in any context, but sexist characterizations such as "the Wellesley school of sexually frustrated women" are seen as humorous.

Students harassed by phone

Bowdoin students living in Smith House, a College owned dormitory at 59 Harpswell Street, have been harassed by anonymous phone calls.

Head of Security, Michael Pander, said the College has increased security patrols in the vicinity of the house and has added safety precautions to the physical structure. In addition, the College met with the residents of Smith House to inform them of the necessary security measures.

Pander urges all Bowdoin students to hang up immediately after identifying a harassing phone call; do not try to identify the caller. Pander added that all calls of a suspicious nature should be reported to Bowdoin security officials directly.

What do we have that the rest of Wall Street doesn't?

Explore the opportunities for analysts in Investment Banking

Please submit resumes to Ben Conway
Prudential-Bache Capital Funding,
One Seaport Plaza, New York, NY 10292

Prudential-Bache Capital Funding

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Miscellania approaches 15th birthday

ANGELA DAIGLE
ORIENT Staff

Founded in 1973, Miscellania, Bowdoin College's all-female singing group, will celebrate their 15th anniversary next year.

A music major, Linda Blanchard '88, is the group's current music director, and has been singing with Miscellania since the fall semester of her freshman year.

She finds her position as director "challenging and rewarding... it's good experience." Her jobs include arranging music, running rehearsals and overall organization. She admits, however, that "it's a general group effort."

Other senior members include Alice Hufstader '88, a member since fall '84 and Maggie Patrick, a member since spring of '86.

The underclassmen members are: Sonja Thorpe '89, Hope Hall '90, Michelle Passman '90, Amy Winton '90, Tamara Mallory '90, Alison Aymar '90 and Kristen Wright '91, the newest member to the group. Absent for the semester are Sarah Thorpe '89, and Erica Toren '89. Hall is treasurer and Winton serves as business manager.

In the past, Miscellania has toured mostly in New England. However, two years ago, the group was hired by a hotel in Aruba. They performed 15 concerts in 7 days. Blanchard and Hufstader remember "singing outside, a hundred yards from the ocean."

Most recently, during October break, Miscellania went on tour and appeared in concert at Brown University, The Wheelock School, before a group of Bowdoin Alumni in Rhode Island, and Harvard Square. They finally finished their tour by singing at the Head of the Charles in Boston.

According to Hufstader, their concert at the Charles brought them, "a lot of really nice reaction from alumni for being there." The alumni that were present invited Miscellania to sing at the Bowdoin Alumni concert in Boston this spring.

Along with their many other commitments, Miscellania is continually performing, free of charge, for charitable events and organizations, such as the Bath Children's Home, nursing homes and Bowdoin Alumni functions at Breckinridge.

In addition to concerts and charity, the group finds time to rehearse for one and a half hours each of five days a week. The beginning of each rehearsal consists of business, past and present. The group then vocalizes with warm up exercises, such as scales. Finally, the rest of the rehearsal time is filled with practicing songs and learning new parts.

According to Blanchard, "everyone in the group has extremely different musical tastes." Passman added, "that's why our set is so varied, there's something for everyone." The members of Miscellania enjoy performing a variety of musical selections such as current pop hits and revivals of old tunes such as Motown classics. According to Amy Winton, the music that they prefer to perform are "the ones that the audiences like the best."

A selection of their favorite music is featured in a tape, "Fashionably Late", which Miscellania made two years ago and can be found in the M.U. Bookstore.

On the issue of school recognition, Hufstader said, "We're not officially recognized, we don't have an advisor, credit or money but when we go on the road and when we sing for alumni, we represent Bowdoin."

Even though they are not "officially recognized" by the campus, Miscellania is allowed to use school facilities. However, the group receives no financial support. All funding comes from alumni, which helps to pay for their expenses, not their singing time.

In order to increase financial resources for touring purposes and to possibly fund the recording of a new tape, Miscellania has begun to offer singing birthday-grams in dining halls, fraternities, etc. They were recently seen in Wentworth serenading Jack Cahill. "We love birthday-grams—we want people to know we're out for the campus," said Winton.

On being a member of Miscellania, Patrick commented that it is a "valuable experience to be in the group... it's completely democratic and you come away with an ability to deal with people." Most importantly, however, Winton said, "We have a lot of fun!"

Tomorrow, Miscellania and the Meddiebempsters will be giving a Christmas concert in Pickard Theatre at 7:30 p.m.

Miscellania members rehearse five days each week.

Calendar

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 11

7:15 p.m. — Studio Show of student and faculty dances and works in progress from dance technique and repertory classes. Dance studio, Sargent Gymnasium.

7:30 and 10:00 p.m. — Weekly Weekend Films. Magnificent Seven, presented by the BFVS. Smith Auditorium. $1 admission. 8:00 p.m. — "Steps and Moves". Becky Arnold and four dancers will present premiere and revival jazz and modern works in two special performances in the Portland Dance Center's Studio 1. Admission is $6 for adults and $5 for students and senior citizens. 25A Forest Avenue, Portland. Call 773-2562 for tickets and further information.

8:15 p.m. — Vespers Services. Lessons read by A. LeRoy Gresson, president. Chamber Choir will perform German music of the Renaissance, and invite the audience to participate in singing traditional Christmas carols. The Chapel. Free admission.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 12

7:30 and 10:00 p.m. — Weekly Weekend Films. Raging Bull, presented by the BFVS. Smith Auditorium. $1 admission.

8:00 p.m. — "Steps and Moves". Dance performance (see above for info).

MOVIE LISTINGS

Evening Star Cinema (Tontine Mall)
The Princess Bride, showing at 7:00 and 8:55
Cinema City (Cooks Corner)
Fatal Attraction, showing at 6:45 and 9:00
Hiding Out, showing at 7:10 and 9:10
Running Man, showing at 7:05 and 9:05
Chinella, showing at 7:00 only
Dirty Dancing, showing at 9:10 only

Dance Days Dance

SHARON SMART
ORIENT Entertainment
Editor

The Division of Dance of the Department of Theater Arts is making an effort towards achievement of a higher profile. Newly established this fall, the Division is "interested in establishing a base, letting people know what we have to offer," said June Vail, assistant professor and director of Dance.

"Dance Days", on December 1 and 2, provided an opportunity for students to see videos of dance performance and programs, as well as to sign onto a mailing list to receive information about upcoming performances, field trips, special classes. An information table was set up in the Moulton Union. Vail said: "Lots of people signed up and expressed interest in knowing what's going on. The turnout was encouraging, as we are concerned with educating the college community about what the Dance Program offers now."

Three additional events have also been designed to increase awareness of dance at Bowdoin. Last Wednesday, a Lindy/jitterbug demonstration and class took place. Paul Sarvis and June Vail demonstrated the dance. "It was really fun—many people attended... we used 40's swing and 50's rock and roll music, lots of Buddy Holly and Elvis Presley. We will do another such class next year," said Vail.

Dancer Becky Arnold guest-taught a jazz class on Friday afternoon. Arnold is a talented dancer, having participated in the post-modern and jazz movements in New York during the 50's—70's. Her experience enabled her to bring a different perspective to the class, in which her enthusiasm carried over to the dozen students who learned her jazz steps and unusual Ball hand movements. At present, Arnold runs her own classes in a studio in Andover, Massachusetts.

The final dance event of the semester will be tonight's Studio Show. Comprising the performance will be works and works in progress. Included are two finished segments from the repertory class, several fragments of dances being created within the technique classes, a dance by Cindy Sperry and Leslie Stone, '88, which they have prepared for the American College Dance Festival at Bates in February, and three short selections by members of Vail's choreography class. Gwyneth Jones, Paul Sarvis, and Vail will perform "Light House Keeping", a dance set to complete the show.

The Studio Show will begin at 7:15 p.m. and run less than one hour so as not to conflict with the Vespers Services. Informal, it will be held in the dance studio in Sargent Gymnasium.

Progress on the possible minor in Dance is uncertain. "We need a base of enough students already interested before establishing a minor... sort of 'chicken and egg' problem. I also need feedback as to the specific interests of the students. A general creative arts minor is also a possibility—it would be a way of making all the Arts more accessible to everyone as part of a Liberal Arts education," explained Vail.

THE "CLUB BUSTERS"

NO CLUB
HASSLES!NO CLUB
GIMMICKS!

$3.99

EACH
PLUS POSTAGE

USE THIS PAGE OR A PHOTOCOPY AS YOUR ORDER FORM. MARK AN "X" IN BOX NEXT TO YOUR SELECTIONS.

CUT OUT AND MAIL ENTIRE PAGE

WHITESNAKE GEFEN GHS 24099 (9 98)	WHITESNAKE	WHITESNAKE GEFEN GHS 4018 (9 98)	SLIDE IT IN
WHITNEY HOUSTON ARISTA AL 8405 (9 98)	WHITNEY	ROGER WATERS COLUMBIA FC 40795	RADIO K.A.O.S.
DEF LEPPARD MERCURY 830 675 1/POLYGRAM	HYSTERIA	PINK FLOYD HARVEST SHMSI 1163/CAPTOL (9 98)	DARK SIDE OF THE MOON
PINK FLOYD COLUMBIA DC 40599	A MOMENTARY LAPSE OF REASON	HOOTERS COLUMBIA DC 40655	ONE WAY HOME
SOUNDTRACK RCA 840A 1-R (9 98)	DIRTY DANCING	STARSHIP GRUNTY 6413 1/POLYGRAM	NO PROTECTION
SOUNDTRACK SLASH 25605/WARNER BROS. (9 98)	LA BAMBA	SOUNDTRACK MCA 6207 (9 98)	BEVERLY HILLS COP II
JOHN COUGAR MELLENCAMP	THE LONESOME JUBILEE	ABC MERCURY 832 391 1/POLYGRAM	ALPHABET CITY
MERCURY 835 655 1/POLYGRAM		SQUEEZE A&M SP 5161 (9 98)	BABYLON AND ON
U2 ISLAND 90581/ATLANTIC (9 98)	THE JOSHUA TREE	SOUNDTRACK COLUMBIA SC 40323	TOP GUN
HEART CAPITOL PJ 12546 (9 98)	BAD ANIMALS	YES ATCO 90522/ATLANTIC (9 98)	BIG GENERATOR
DANNY WILSON VIRGIN 90596/ATLANTIC (9 98)	MEET DANNY WILSON	MR. MISTER RCA 6276 1-R (9 98)	GO ON
RITCHIE VALENS RHINO DEL FI 88LP 70178/CAPTOL (9 98)	THE BEST OF RITCHIE VALENS	THE CULT BIGGARS BANQUE 1/SIRE 25555/WARNER BROS. (9 98)	ELECTRIC
RUSH MERCURY 832 464 1/POLYGRAM	HOLD YOUR FIRE	WENDY AND LISA COLUMBIA BFC 40862	WENDY AND LISA
SOUNDTRACK-MADONNA SIRE 25411/WARNER BROS. (9 98)	WHO'S THAT GIRL	TIFFANY MCA 5793 (9 98)	TIFFANY
FLEETWOOD MAC WARNER BROS. 25471 (9 98)	TANGO IN THE NIGHT	BEASTIE BOYS DEF J&M FC 40238/COLUMBIA	LICENSED TO ILL
R.E.M. IRS 42059/MCA (9 98)	DOCUMENT	THE SMITHS SIRE 25449/WARNER BROS. (9 98)	STRANGERS HERE WE COME
GRATEFUL DEAD ARISTA AL 8452 (9 98)	IN THE DARK	FASTER PUSSYCAT ELEKTRA 60730 (9 98)	FASTER PUSSYCAT
EUROPE EPC MC 40241/E.P.A.	THE FINAL COUNTDOWN	THE CURE ELEKTRA 60737 (13 98)	KISS ME, KISS ME, KISS ME
KENNY G ARISTA AL 8-8427 (9 98)	DUOTONES	BRYAN ADAMS A&M 3907 (9 98)	INTO THE FIRE
LISA LISA & CULT J&M COLUMBIA FC 40477	SPANISH FLY	CURIOSITY KILLED THE CAT MERCURY 832 025 1/POLYGRAM	KEEP YOUR DISTANCE
AEROSMITH GEFEN GHS 24162 (9 98)	PERMANENT VACATION	THE OUTFIELD COLUMBIA DC 40619	BANGIN'
ANITA BAKER ELEKTRA 60444 (9 98)	RAPTURE	STEVE WINWOOD ISLAND 25448/WARNER BROS. (9 98)	BACK IN THE HIGH LIFE
GREAT WHITE CAPITOL ST 12565 (9 98)	ONCE BITTEN	PAUL SIMON WARNER BROS. 25447 (9 98)	GRACELAND
KISS MERCURY 832 626 1/POLYGRAM	CRAZY NIGHTS	PETER GABRIEL GEFEN GHS 24088 (9 98)	SO
SOUNDTRACK ATLANTIC 81767 (9 98)	LOST BOYS	THE DOORS ELEKTRA 60345 (12 98)	BEST OF THE DOORS
MOTLEY CRUE ELEKTRA 60725 (9 98)	GIRLS, GIRLS, GIRLS	THE SILENCERS RCA 6442 1-R (9 98)	A LETTER FROM ST. PAUL
THE CARS ELEKTRA 60747 (9 98)	DOOR TO DOOR	JAMET JACKSON A&M SP 3905 (9 98)	CONTROL
HUEY LEWIS & THE NEWS CHRYSLER CV 41534	FORE!	CROWDED HOUSE CAPITOL ST 12485 (9 98)	CROWDED HOUSE
RICHARD MARX (MR. MANHATTAN PJ) 53049 (9 98)	RICHARD MARX	GRIM REAPER RCA 6250 1-R (9 98)	ROCK YOU TO HELL
BON JOVI MERCURY 830284 1/POLYGRAM	SLIPPERY WHEN WET	RED SPEEDWAGON EPC MC 40444-E.P.A.	LIFE AS WE KNOW IT
EXPOSE ARISTA AL 8441 (9 98)	EXPOSURE	JONATHAN BUTLER AVE RCA 1032 1/POLYGRAM	JONATHAN BUTLER
CUTTING CREW VIRGIN 90573/ATLANTIC (9 98)	BROADCAST	WARREN ZEVON VIRGIN 90603/ATLANTIC (9 98)	SENTIMENTAL HYGIENE
GENESIS ATLANTIC 81641 (9 98)	INVISIBLE TOUCH	THE JESUS AND MARY CHAIN WARNER BROS. 25650 (9 98)	DARKLANDS
POISON ENIGMA ST 12523/CAPTOL (9 98)	LOOK WHAT THE CAT DRAGGED IN
CINDERELLA MERCURY 830076 1/POLYGRAM	NIGHT SONGS
BODEANS SLASH 25629/REPRISE (9 98)	OUTSIDE LOOKING IN
PET SHOP BOYS (MR. MANHATTAN PJ) 46972 (9 98)	ACTUALLY
BILLY IDOL CHRYSLER CV 41620	VITAL IDOL
SUZANNE VEGA A&M SP 5136 (9 98)	SOLITUDE STANDING
NAJEE (MR. MANHATTAN PJ) 17241 (9 98)	NAJEE'S THEME
DAVID BOWIE (MR. MANHATTAN PJ) 17267 (9 98)	NEVER LET ME DOWN
SPYRO GYRA RCA 62046 (9 98)	STORIES WITHOUT WORDS
W.A.S.P. CAPITOL CLT 48053 (9 98)	LIVE IN THE RAW
BANANARAMA LONDON 828 061 1/POLYGRAM	WOW
PRINCE PAULEY PARK 25577/WARNER BROS. (15 98)	SIGN 'O' THE TIMES
WHITNEY HOUSTON ARISTA AL 84212 (9 98)	WHITNEY HOUSTON
GLORIA ESTEFAN & MIAMI SOUND MACHINE EPC MC 40769/E.P.A.	LET IT LOOSE
38 SPECIAL A&M 3910 (9 98)	BEST OF 38 SPECIAL-"FLASHBACK"
MADONNA SIRE 25442/WARNER BROS. (9 98)	TRUE BLUE
SOUNDTRACK MCA 6214 (9 98)	MOONLIGHTING
ECHO AND THE BUNNYMEN SIRE 25557/WARNER BROS. (9 98)	ECHO AND THE BUNNYMEN
SWING OUT SISTER MERCURY 832 213 1/POLYGRAM	IT'S BETTER TO TRAVEL
SAMMY HAGAR GEFEN GHS 24144 (9 98)	I NEVER SAID GOODBYE
DEBBIE GIBSON ATLANTIC 81780 (9 98)	OUT OF THE BLUE

We Are Not A Club!

WE ONLY SELL CASSETTES!! WE ACCEPT

PERSONAL CHECKS OR MONEY ORDERS
 POSTAGE & HANDLING: ALL ORDERS MUST INCLUDE
 THREE DOLLARS & FIFTY CENTS ($3.50). NO MATTER HOW
 LARGE OR SMALL THE ORDER. ALL ORDERS SHIPPED
 FIRST CLASS MAIL. TAPES ARE 100% GUARANTEED

NAME _____

ADDRESS _____

CITY _____ STATE _____ ZIP _____

MAKE CHECKS PAYABLE TO:
 Students Publishing
 PO BOX 4649
 FORT LAUDERDALE,
 FLORIDA 33338

$3.99 x =

CATALOGUE (1.00)

POSTAGE & HANDLING

$3.50

TOTAL
ENCLOSED
☐ Yes! Please send me your 1987 catalog with over 7000 titles. I have enclosed $1.00 extra for postage.

ALAN HARRIS

ORIENT Photography Editor Bowdoin has its own salt water farm. Or part of one. Coleman Farm is located just three miles from campus by bicycle. The farm was purchased in 1968 probably because it was a deal and the college needed room for expansion. The college has, however, only managed to hang onto 80 of the original 355 acres. They are, however, an incredible 80 acres.

The land is off Harpswell Street on Middle Bay Road. The big old white farm house is what old Mister Pennell built in 1778. The house is now a longer Bowdoin's but the Livesays, who live there now, don't mind Bowdoin students coming by (just keep their driveway clear). Mrs. Livesay, by the way, works at OCS. Bowdoin's land is a strip that includes 60 feet on either side of the path. To get to the path either go through the Livesay's driveway and head down the path by their barn into the woods, or go straight through the path, (it leaves the road by the red house and leads into the woods) be polite as you pass and be nice to the greeting crew of dogs.

The path takes a meandering kilometer down to the shore. It was originally used by John Pennell for his oxen to haul boats that he built down to the shore in the late eighteenth century. This is according to Ramsey McPhillips who did a neat paper on Coleman Farm's history for an Ecology class in 1978. The farm changed hands several times before it became G. E. Coleman's in 1934. Coleman managed to fix up the place and raise chickens for and international company that produced much of the world's breeding chicken's there. The company was bought out and Coleman could no longer support the farm. He was happy to find Bowdoin College amidst the developers that wanted the property.

Bowdoin never developed much of the property, but sold off bits and pieces of it. There were students living there once; artists

The college science departments and the Outing Club have made extensive use of the land. Chuck Huntington and the biology department have been running a bird-banding station out of a spacious chicken shack the Livesays have provided. The introductory biology classes go down in the spring to see what they can see, which has in the past included an Upland Sandpiper (a 'beautiful' bird that lands with its wing outstretched above its head according to Huntington).

Bluebird have nested along the fence, and Deer and Moose can be ogy departments takes several classes down to the salt marsh to see the tidal flat environment and ogle at the Presumpscot clay formation, which is some unique sedimentation that formed back when Maine was below water and began rising up. They also look at the erosion of the steep bluffs that jut out into the marsh. The E.S., geology, and chemistry department make use of the land mostly through independent work by students. Peter Gergely is working on the marsh mussels. The Outing Club also uses the land for courses

For the rest of us the farm is there for a break; it's not far from campus and except for the navy planes and the occasional Clammer rumbling through the path it's quiet. The path passes first through some pine and oak with bramble of blackberries, raspberries and orange touch-me-nots underneath. Huntington has his mist net lanes here and Gervais has his berry patches for her study along this stretch. There are huge puddles in the ruts of the path that are full of frogs in the spring. There are odd metal pieces and caved-in shacks from the chicken years. Half-way down the path is a pond that Coleman put in during the 40's. There can be waterfowl, herons and turtles there if you walk up quiet enough. The drain spout empties on the other side of the path and the branches that are near by. Down on the bluffs at the path's end you can look over the salt marsh with green and brown streams flowing through it. During the year you can see sandpipers and plovers scurrying around the mud, looking for dinner.

There's plenty else to see, and other paths off the main one, and it is hoped students will go down and see for themselves. McPhillips wrote nearly ten years ago that "... the coming years will bring, I hope, an increased student awareness of the property's value as an educational and recreational tool, and will thus prove to be more than just a valuable parcel of saleable land to Bowdoin College's financial administrators."

Photo by Alan Harris

Having fun with science and nature in salt marshes finding inspiration away from campus. They were caught growing marijuana and the house was closed to Bowdoin students. In the years that have followed Bowdoin has sold all but a quarter of its room to expand.

seen. The ecology and ornithology classes both make use of the farm for labs and projects. Biology students, like Jen Gervais, conduct independent field projects at the property. Professor Laine of the E.S. and Geollike the winter camping course, and the Leadership Training course. Coach Lentz, the club's advisor, is presently working on some cross-country ski trials, and would appreciate any interested people to join in.

like the winter camping course, and the Leadership Training course. Coach Lentz, the club's advisor, is presently working on some cross-country ski trials, and would appreciate any interested people to join in.

Exploration of empty space?

Committees and intellectuals discuss the "American Mind"

LIZZ MILLAN

ORIENT Asst. Entertainment Editor

President Greason made references to it during convocation, it was the subject of Professor Geoghegan's Chapel Talk, it has also been at the top of the New York Times best seller list for weeks. What is it? Allan Bloom's "The Closing of the American Mind", a book which attempts to explain how higher education has failed democracy and impoverished the soul's of today's students.

Once again the book became the center of attention. On Wednesday, December 9, a symposium was held, featuring Joseph Prabhu, associate professor of philosophy at U.C.L.A. Panel members from the Bowdoin college community—Cordon Buffone '88, William D. Geoghegan, professor of religion, Larry D. Lutchmansingh, associate professor of art, Todd Feinsmith '88 and Scott Mendel '90—discussed Bloom's book following Prabhu's opening lecture, "Bloom's Platonic Cave-In." The symposium was moderated by Larry H. Simon, assistant professor of philosophy.

Massachusetts Hall was filled, although considering attendance demographics, the interest of the faculty was not quite matched by the students.

Prabhu contends that the book does not describe the Closing of the American Mind, rather the "Closing of an American Mind." Prabhu described Bloom's work as a "strange, ill-assorted book. Part pop psychology, jerniad and intellectual history, its sections do not fit together particularly well.

"The tale is a long familiar one by now... many students are functionally illiterate, most lack the rudiments of a sound liberal education, moral standards are declining, the old work ethic seems to have evaporated and been replaced by the desire for instant and easy gratification. What is new is that no one before has had the breath-taking imagination and the nerve to argue that the blame for all this should be placed at the feet of Messrs. Nietzsche and Heidegger names that most Americans can barely spell, leave aside having read."

Prabhu questions Bloom's grounds for the explanations he provides as to the roots and solutions to these problems. Bloom's arguments, according to Prabhu, reflect the closing of his mind and not the closing of the American mind.

Lutchmansingh analogized the situation of many of today's students to that of a tourist. The traveler goes from country to country in search of the richness of that area while the tourist sees the world through the eyes of a travel brochure. Education should be sought for its own sake, the traveler, and not for the grade or job which it will help to secure, the tourist. Lutchmansingh indicated that this attitude of half-heartedness is a systematic one. He doubted that this half-hearted attitude would be accepted by members of a sport's team where the effects of such an attitude would be so clearly visible. He went on to describe the problems of disunity so prevalent in our educational system.

Mendel questioned Bloom's criticisms of the eighties student: "today's students are 'nice and empty' according to Bloom but who is at fault?" He stated that many of the students with whom he had spoken were unsure of the motives behind Bloom's writing. He questioned these motives as well as Bloom's assertions: "Have the students ceased to study or has the university ceased to teach?" Mendel referred to the reasons why students study the areas they do—Economics is one of the most popular majors at Bowdoin, while philosophy has the fewest number of majors. Even Bowdoin, says Mendel, a liberal arts college which encourages diversity in course selections, cannot prevent society from permeating its ideals into the minds of the students. Students today, Mendel said, are concerned about life after Bowdoin much resembling the tourist about which Professor Lutchmansingh spoke, they view knowledge not in terms of its own virtue, rather in what it will bring them later. This, contended Mendel, is not the fault of the university nor is it the fault of the student, it lies in a problem of the society.

Buffone explained the reason for his participation in the discussion: "I have seen the problems discussed in Bloom's book here at Bowdoin. The solution to these problems begins with a discussion of them." Buffone had some basic criticisms with Bloom's book; he questioned Bloom's openness as well as his acceptance of cultural differences.

Feinsmith said his interest in the book was sparked upon an examination of the table of contents. He felt many of the issues raised in the book would be pertinent as he was a student at the kind of school about which Bloom wrote. The book, however, left him with an empty feeling—he was not satisfied with the book. Bloom spoke of the hoarding of intellectual treasures, provided a listing of great philosophers knowledge of which the student today is ignorant, said Feinsmith, yet did not provide the reader with a mode for action. "He listed all of the things we are deprived of, comparing us to the Europeans—our culture is not European."

Professor Geoghegan criticized Bloom's "dubious tracing to the Europeans for our faults as we do a fine job of providing our own faults." Geoghegan chose to view the book as "Love In Bloom", presenting the audience with the question, "Are we lovers anymore?" Geoghegan was referring to the Platonic notion of love, that is the love between student and teacher which fosters the intellectual process. Geoghegan defends Bloom's notion that this eros is indeed missing from our universities. The three most important words of Bloom's book, according to Geoghegan, are found in the dedication, which reads: "To My Students." The student/teacher relationship is essential the rest is context." Geoghegan said. This is why Bloom's book is so important, it focuses on this import (Continued on page seven)

Love and Rockets:

Bauhaus clones themselves, ough

STEPHEN GEVEDON
ORIENT Contributor

About 6 years ago Bauhaus came along. If anyone has seen The Hunger the opening scene has "Bela Lugosi's Dead" playing in the background and Peter Murphy prancing about on the screen being artsy. That's Bauhaus. Well Bauhaus, the band, is gone. Unfortunately all those sappy pseudo-intellectuals that latched onto Bauhaus' self-indulgent moaning, to give their rather morose existences meaning, are still around and aren't really clued into that fact.

However, Bauhaus is gone and Love and Rockets are the new thang. (Basically Bauhaus, less Peter Murphy a.k.a. Capt. Pretentious) Love and Rockets have shed the black clothes and pancake make-up but seem to have held on to a semblance of musical integrity. Unlike certain other personalities that have branched off and explored new ground i.e. Billy Idol, Mick Jagger, etc.

Love and Rockets are, if you will the lighter side of Bauhaus. This is not to say that they consider themselves fluff. Oh, no. They still have "something to say." Yet it would seem that intellectualism is a little easier to swallow when not mired knee-deep in soppy self-pity. Earth, Sun, Moon, their latest album sports a cosmic feel. Songs with titles like, "The Light", "Everybody Wants To Go To Heaven", "Earth, Sun, Moon" and lyrics to match make this fairly evident. Certainly these people seem to take themselves seriously. Their lyrics are predictably indecipherable.

"The Mirror people one day shall be free laugh at you and laugh at me

The Mirror people know not how to cry

so they scream, the Mirror people scream inside,"

Who are these "Mirror People", where do they come from, what do they do on Sunday afternoons, are they related to the folk you'll find at 7-11 at around 4:30 in the morning, and most importantly when will they leave?

But these are merely philosophical digressions that need not be pursued at this point in time. The rest of the album is filled with thought provoking lyrics like the ones above, that is if you bother to listen to them. I'd say the most appealing thing about this album are the actual tunes themselves. Pretty melodies juxtaposed—I learned that in my Art class ooh. ahh—with a good beat that you can sink your grubby little fingers into. There is a bit of T. Rex in here and one song in particular sounds suspiciously like Gary Glitter, and that's cool... Dude.

I guess this album's pretty good, I mean I'd buy it, but then again I also own a three piece white suit with a black shirt. Look, why don't you get some progressive radio station to do an album sides Sunday or something equally queer (look, it's just a figure of speech, OK?) and record over your "Abba's Greatest Hits" tape... I dunno you could do worse for yourself and pick up Bon Jovi's latest.

birds) and Steve Berlin (of Los Lobos), The Paladins has that "feel" to it that seems to have disappeared from rock & roll. Mostly that grinding, sweaty overly sexual thump which was responsible for thousands of the little urchins who were born in the late fifties. I think that it's also feedback and

The Paladins:

A
Tex-Mex Fest

frayed wire, but I'm not about to rain on their parade.

So, Bottom line is, this isn't going to change your life. It won't take your brand new CD player to its outer limits. All the songs sound pretty much the same. But that's exactly what they want. And they've figured out exactly what's wrong with rock & roll today. What the Paladins have done with this record is to reach up there, grab a hold of "the big stick", and yank it right out. And I think that's good. Maybe Huey Lewis'll quit.

Sergeant Safety says
"Lock your doors"

Before leaving for Christmas break take a few minutes and decide what not to leave in your room or apartment. We suggest that you bring jewelry, electronics, photographic equipment or other items of value with you or leave them luggage to assist common carriers in returning your bags in the event of a foul-up. Carry with you a bag with valuables rather than checking it.

As an extra precaution, carry some extra cash or travelers checks separate from your purse or wallet.

This will give you "rescue money" should if you lose your wallet or purse.

The men and women of Bowdoin College Security wish you a safe and happy holiday season.

with a friend who will be here during vacation period. While all buildings are locked and checked during the inter-session, you'll feel better having taken an extra step.

Be sure to unplug all electrical appliances when you leave to decrease fire hazards or potential damage from surges should the power be interrupted and restored during the break.

Lock your doors and windows and, if you are in an apartment, leave the heat on, though lowered to prevent pipe freeze-ups.

Makesure your family knows of your travel plans and call them if you are delayed. This saves a lot of worry and unnecessary "missing persons" reports.

If you are taking public transportation, place your name and address inside as well as outside all

Intellectual

(Continued from page six)
tance.

Geoghegan urged those students interested to become more involved with addressing the problems relevant to Bowdoin. The Intellectual Endeavor Subcommittee of the Class of 1988 has been formed to provide and promote discussions in the area of intellectual enrichment or lack thereof. Several discussions have been planned for next semester.

PETE

We're Fighting For Your Life.

WE'RE FIGHTING FOR
YOUR LIFE

American Heart
Association

Circa 1821
the Samuel
Newman
House
7 South St., Brunswick, Me. 04011
For Reservations, call (207) 729-6959

BED & BREAKFAST

Limited number of rooms available for
Bowdoin Commencement
Advanced Reservations Required

Atrium Motel

Cooks Corner, Brunswick, Maine
729-5555

THE
BRUNSWICK
FLOWER SHOP
SEASON'S GREETINGS
Centrally located across from Bowdoin College

729-8895
216A Maine St.
Mon.-Sat. 9:30-6

We Deliver
Wire Service

What has a great memory and comes with a real handy trunk?

Guess again.

If you buy an IBM Personal System/2[®] Model 25 by the end of this year, you'll not only get a substantial student discount, we'll throw in a nifty extra.

A sturdy, metal footlocker with brass trim, 16" x 16" x 20"

The computer is a great way to keep on top of your class work. It'll store lots of stuff you need to remember. And the trunk is real handy for holding most everything else.

It's a neat idea that's yours for peanuts.

To take advantage of this special deal, contact your on-campus IBM Education Product Coordinator. But don't wait too long. This special offer expires December 31st.

The IBM Education Product Coordinator

Contact John Balling
Hubbard Hall
725-3785

IBM[®]

Offer limited to qualified students, faculty and staff who purchase an IBM Personal System/2 Model 25 through their IBM Education Product Coordinator on or before December 31, 1987. Offer applies to the IBM Personal System/2 Models 8525-001, 8525-004, 8525-012, and 8525-015. Trunk quantities are limited. IBM reserves the right to substitute a unit of comparable value. Allow 6 to 8 weeks for trunk delivery. Personal System/2 is a trademark of IBM Corporation.

SPORTS

Bears show Colby no mercy

Kurt Liebich (11) attacks the Mule's defense in Bowdoin's 5-1 thrashing of Colby. The Bears triumphed despite the raucous behavior of the Colby fans. The game was stopped several times to clear oranges thrown onto the ice by the Bears supporters. Photo by Lori Bodwell.

Seniors have never lost to Mules

ERIC PALMQUIST
ORIENT Staff

"You can't teach speed." Somebody great once claimed. That adage was never more evident than Wednesday night when the Polar Bears traveled to Colby and skated around the Mules for a 5-1 victory.

From the beginning it was clear that the Bears were at the top of their game. With the Mules two men down, Brad Chin rammed home the first goal at just 4:25 of the first period, giving the Bears a lead they would never relinquish. The rest of the period was played in the Colby zone, with Mule goalie Jim Reduto covering the puck off rebounds or scrambling to his feet after numerous close calls.

Despite Bowdoin's dominance, it looked as if the Mules might escape the first period down only one goal. But with just over a minute remaining the Polar Bears finally converted. Roger Ladda slapped a Derek Eaton pass into the corner of the net, giving the Bears the momentum heading into the second period.

That momentum immediately made itself apparent, as Chin took the opening faceoff from Steve Thorton and raced in alone on Reduto. Chin faked him into committing himself and deposited the puck in the net, giving the Bears a very comfortable 3-0 lead.

Colby was playing at home, however, and there is no bigger rival for them than Bowdoin, so the Mules hustled their way into the game, only to be denied on outstanding efforts by goalie Steve Janas. He had faced only three shots in the first period, but was now forced to perform at a higher level of play. He proved up to the task as he gloved a slapshot headed for the corner of the goal and then stopped a breakaway attempt to break Colby's spirit.

Their spirit was further damaged when a bench penalty was called on them because fans began throwing oranges, tennis balls, and even a fish onto the ice. Soon afterwards Kevin Powers slapped a head-on shot into the net, a goal that forced the Mules to switch goalies, down 4-0.

The Polar Bears skated through the third period basically unscathed. The Mules ruined Janas' shutout midway in the period, re-

(Continued on page ten)

Swimmers mar Tufts' perfect season

JON DEVINE
ORIENT Staff

"This was one of the best days in Bowdoin swimming history," said a beaming Coach Charlie Butt of last weekend's men's and women's victories over powerful rival Tufts. Both wins came quite unexpectedly, and were a good indication of the tremendous talent that Bowdoin possesses this season.

For the women, this was a win that nobody could have foreseen. According to Butt, the women were 18-20 point underdogs on paper. But this considerable advantage was erased by the Bowdoin team, as they pulled off a 136-132 victory over a Tufts team that had not lost a meet in nearly three years.

Described as "a real team effort" by Coach Butt, last weekend was marked by several outstanding performances. In the 1000 yard freestyle, Sarah Bullock and Diana Chute "set the tone for the rest of the meet" by finishing 1-2 over a highly touted Tufts swimmer.

In addition, Becky Palmer took first in both the 100 and 200 yard breast stroke events, setting new college records and qualifying for Nationals in both races.

Other standouts included captain Leslie Preston, Jessica Lydon, Maureen Neill, Holly Claiborn, and the entire diving squad, which took the 2,3, and 5 positions in the competition.

On the men's side, the Bears also overcame what appeared to be a Tufts advantage, crushing the Jumbos by over 30 points.

The first event proved crucial for Bowdoin, as swimmers Jon Treadwell, Kevin Fitzpatrick, John Watson, and Bob Paglione took the 400 yard medley relay by dropping 6 seconds from their time last week.

Also early in the meet, Tim Coultas and Alan Harris placed 1-2 in the 1000 freestyle, Coultas taking 20 seconds off last week's time and far outdistancing his nearest competitor.

Another impressive performance was turned in by Tom Francoeur, who took two events with what Coach Butt called two "very fast times." The divers for the team also fared quite well, with both Shane Engstrom and Will Lensen leading the way. Finally, three freshmen butterflyers "put the meet away" for the Bears. John Watson, Dave Morey, and Dan Stevens placed 1-2-3, leaving the Tufts team far behind.

The most important part of last week's effort, said Butt, was the fact that Bowdoin "swam from behind all day" to finish strong in all of the events.

The Bears will next compete against swimming powerhouses Amherst and Williams after training in Puerto Rico during the semester break.

Women trounce BU, 9-0

TONY JACCACI
ORIENT Staff

The puck is starting to drop favorably for the women's varsity hockey team as the Polar Bears won three games last week while only dropping one.

Coach Robert Jones feels that the team is beginning to come together and form a strong unit. He stated that the "passing is excellent as well as the movement away from the puck." The Black and White do not play again until after Christmas break when they travel to MIT.

When Bowdoin entered the Colby invitational tournament last week with an 0-2 record, the team was hoping to reverse its past misfortunes. In the first game on Friday, Bowdoin faced MIT and beat the visiting squad by a score of 5-1. Bowdoin totally dominated this game from the first face-off as the passing was quick and accurate. Sheila Carroll (8 goals on the weekend) played especially well on offense while freshman Laura Folk was shining on defense.

The Polar Bears played two games the following day and in the first game, Bowdoin crushed Boston College by a score of 9-0. The Black and White, dominated the game and executed their game plan to perfection. In fact, BC did not have a shot on net during the entire contest. Lynn Manson turned in an excellent day on defense for the Bears.

The next foe in the tournament was Boston University who fell by a score of 6-0. This game was perhaps the finest match of the tournament for the Bears as everything seemed to click. Once again Sheila Carroll continued her scoring onslaught as she relentlessly peppered the BU goal. When the tournament ended, Bowdoin found itself in a three-way tie for first place with Colby and UVM but did not take home the blue ribbon because of a goal-difference ratio.

The following Sunday Bowdoin came home to host the Bulldogs of Yale in a tough 6-1 loss. The team was exhausted from the weekend tournament and after Yale went up 5-1 after two quick goals in the third period, the Bears found the opposition to be too much. Coach Jones stated that the frustrating thing was the fact that "we were a better team than if we had played them on Friday instead of Sunday, we could have won."

Overall, the weekend was a success for the team as they were "saturated in hockey" which coach Jones feels helped the team finally come together. The Polar Bears do not play for six weeks until they travel south to face MIT.

Squash player practices triple railer in preparation for long season ahead. Photo by Mary Ann Lal.

Squash nets victories

JUSTIN PRISENDORF
ORIENT A&S Sports Editor

This year's men's squash team is off to a fantastic start. With victories over Colby, Babson, and Bates, the team's record is now 3-1.

"Our only loss so far was to M.I.T. They were much stronger than I had expected," said Coach Ed Reed. The Polar Bears will have a chance to avenge themselves when they meet M.I.T. again in late January. "I am very optimistic about the rest of the season. The team is really improving; we'll be ready for M.I.T.," he added.

Highlights from the first three victories have included exceptional play from Gary Robbins '90, in the #1 spot, and from Eric Loeb '90, in the #2 position. "Eric was injured last season, but this year he's coming on strong," said the coach.

Captain Stuart Strong is very happy about the team's success so far. "Eventhough it is very early in the season, we are already working well together as team." Strong attributes part of the team's success to their depth.

At the beginning of next semester, the team has crucial home matches against Tufts, West Point, and Amherst.

The women's team has only had a match to date against Harvard. The Crimson simply overpowered Bowdoin. "Erika Gustafson won her match in the number one spot," said Coach Reed. "I say without hesitation that she is the best women squash player that I have ever coached. What she now needs is more competition."

When the team returns in January, they will first face Amherst and Colby on the road at Amherst.

Hockey stars return

Editor's note: Last night a Swedish Division I professional ice hockey team, Vita Hasten, played the Polar Bears. The Swedish team's roster included two former Bowdoin hockey captains, John McGeough and Jon Leonard. Both players saw a good deal of action in Vita Hasten's 5-3 defeat of Bowdoin. Despite falling behind, 4-0, the Bears answered back with three quick goals in the later stages of the second period. However, Vita Hasten managed to hold off the Bears in a very fast-moving third period scoring once more to account for the final 5-3 margin. A complete update will appear in next issue. The following are excerpts from an interview with them.

Orient: How long have you been in Sweden?

Leonard: We left the U.S. about four months ago for preseason training. We also needed some time to get used to living in another country; Swedish is a very tough language to pick up.

Orient: How about the European brand of hockey? Has it been a fluid transition?

McGeough: Everything's different. Some of the style we play here is similar, but you get a bigger rink and concentrate on the skating and puck control a little more; it's a much more wide open type of game. Individual skill is really emphasized. Weaving is the biggest change; you're all over the ice. This type of hockey takes some getting used to.

Orient: Are you seeing a lot of playing time?

McGeough: We usually have four lines, and three of them play each game. Both Jon and I have seen some playing time in almost every game.

Orient: How long is your season?

Leonard: We play about thirty-five games during the regular season. Every Wednesday and Sunday we have games. Right now we are 14-3, so this trip is kind of a good way to break up the season.

Orient: What are your future plans?

Leonard: We both have year contracts; anything could happen. It's all up to the team. Personally, I would like to keep playing for a couple of more years - as long as I still enjoy it.

Orient: Have you enjoyed playing in Sweden so far?

McGeough: It's a great experience. You get to go to another country, they take care of some of the expenses, and you see the country in a way that a tourist never would.

Men's track outpaced by Jumbos

DAVE NUTE
ORIENT Staff

The men's indoor track team is off and running for the 1988 season. Last Saturday the team inaugurated the new Farley Field House indoor track facilities, hosting a meet against Tufts University and Fitchburg State.

Fitchburg State did not provide the strong competition the Tufts squad did. In the end Bowdoin gained sixty-eight points to the ninety-one points of Tufts. Fitchburg captured only nine points for all its efforts.

Several memorable performances were turned in by Bowdoin athletes, such as the 7.8 second, school record setting dash of Eric Gans in the 55 meter hurdle. Daniel Brakewood has improved dramatically in the off season, capturing second in the 800 meter run with a time of 1:58.9, a scant 3.1 seconds behind the victor, Todd Dillon. With a come-from-behind sprint in the last 100 meters of the 1000 meter run, Colin Sweeney squeaked to a 5 second victory.

The field events also saw some fine individual Bowdoin performances, such as the 5'10" high jump of Thomas Morriane, and the 5'8" jump of his teammate Steve Todd Dillon '89 outdistances Rob Feldner of Tufts enroute to a win in the 800 meters. Bowdoin lost to Tufts but defeated Fitchburg State convincingly. Photo by Lori Bodwell.

Clegg. Track Coach Slovenski termed Clegg a "great new prospect." Finally, Damon Guterman pole vaulted 13 feet, to clear his nearest opponent by six inches and win the event.

The success of the team must surely be due in part to the splendid new facilities of the Farley Field House. The efforts of the college to improve upon the previous facilities of the Hyde Cage must be recognized for their successful completion.

Research saves lives.

WE'RE FIGHTING FOR
YOUR LIFE

American Heart
Association

Kaplan's FREE MCAT Seminar

If you're thinking about Med School, Stanley H. Kaplan can show you what's ahead at a free MCAT Seminar.

Our test experts will tell you all you need to know about this career-shaping exam.

- A section-by-section analysis of the MCAT
- How the MCAT fits into the application process.
- When you should take the MCAT

■ How to score more on the MCAT

Be sure to be at our Seminar — it could be fatal to miss out!

KAPLAN
STANLEY H. KAPLAN EDUCATIONAL CENTER LTD.

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 20

7:00 PM

LANCASTER LOUNGE

MOULTON HALL

Paul Nelson (22) fights for position in front of the New England College goal. Bowdoin crushed NEC 9-3 to up their record to 5-1. Photo by Lori Bodwell.

Hockey

(Continued from page nine)

sulting in a hailstorm of assorted fruits onto the ice, but Tom Aldrich countered minutes later on a power play to end any hopes of a comeback.

The game was the second consecutive fine effort the Bears have put out, as on Saturday they had routed New England College, 9-3. In that game, which before its commencement looked to be an excellent contest, New England scored first and seemed to be rolling, but the Bears scored the next six goals, including four in a span of 2:05 in the first period, to put the game out of reach.

Kevin Powers led the Bowdoin attack with two goals and two assists, while Brad Raboritor was excellent in net, turning away twenty enemy shots. All told, seven Polar Bears found the net and fifteen scored points, resulting in the biggest win of this young season.

Coach Terry Meagher has to be happy with the way his crew has played going into Christmas break, giving the fans the hope that this team might be jelling into an excellent squad. They do not play again until January at RIT.

Bowdoin 2 2 1-5
Colby 0 0 1-1

1st period:

Goals: 1. Bow, Chin (Thornton, Powers) 4:25 2. Bow, Ladda (Eaton) 18:38

2nd Period:

Goals: 3. Bow, Chin (Thornton) :05 4. Powers (Johansson, Nelson) 10:54

3rd Period:

Goals: 5. Col, Elders (McCarthy, Rickards) 11:20 6. Bow, Aldrich (Cavanaugh, Thornton) 13:46 shots on goal:

Bow - 36
Colby - 26

saves:
Bow - Janas 25
Col - Reduto 11, Guerreiro 20

Wreath out and touch someone.

All Wreaths
can be shipped by us.

Order
EARLY.

Fresh Balsam Wreath - $12.95
Eucalyptus Wreath - our most popular aromatic wreath
Overlark Wreath - Generously made with an intricate blend of dried flowers, $21.95 - $38.50 - $45.00
Grape Vine Wreath - Natural grape vine with a spray of dried flowers and matching bow. Different sizes.
Christmas Wreath - Handcrafted of German statice comes in different shades of ribbon for the holidays or year-round. $28.50
Cone Wreath - Different Sizes

Arrangements for Thanksgiving, Christmas

Balsam Boughs & Fruit Baskets

Pauline's Bloomers

Tontine Mall, Brunswick

Tel: 664

To order call: 725-5952

Major credit cards accepted

Tufts tops tracksters

DAVE NUTE
ORIENT Staff

On Saturday, Dec. 5, the tennis courts of the Farley Field House were transformed into a surface pocked with long jump sand pits, high jump mats, and a shot put arena.

The opening of the women's indoor track season began here in a triangular meet with Tufts University and Fitchburg State. Tufts beat the Bears with 99.5 points to Bowdoin's 51.5. Fitchburg State lost the meet, by a wide margin scoring only 20 points.

Although the team did not win the meet, several strong personal performances by Bowdoin athletes certainly made the day a worthwhile venture. Deanna Hodgkin placed first in the 5000 meter run with a time of 18:14.9 to set a new school and field house record.

Personal bests continued throughout the meet. Coach Slovenski called the 1500 meter run the "best race of the day." Bowdoin runners captured four out of the top five places, in an event that found Rosemarie Dougherty the victor with a time of 5:07.3. Gretchen Herold was a close .2 seconds behind Dougherty, while Margaret Heron placed fourth only four seconds later.

Rosie Dougherty '89 leads Margaret Heron '91, Gretchen Herald '90, and Kim Dirlam '91 in the 1500. Dougherty went on to win with Herold claiming second. Photo by Lori Bodwell

Later, in the 800 meter run, Tanya Bynoe won the event with a time of 2:20.9 to set a new field house record. Finally, Anja Kangerieser finished second in the 1000 meter run, and in doing so set a new school record with a time of 3:12.0.

The women's team is off and running to a great start, despite its loss to Tufts. The distance events, in particular, are sure to yield some more great times and record setting performances.

BLOOM COUNTY

Berke Breathed

BIG RED Q PRINTING

next to the College

- stationery
- resumes
- posters
- newsletters

212E Maine Street
Brunswick
729-4840

SKATES • SKATES • SKATES AND MORE SKATES!

Come in for a great selection
of hockey and figure skates!

A Great Christmas Gift For
A Maine Winter!!

212 Maine St., Brunswick 725-8675

j&sports center

YOUR FOUR SEASON DEALER

212 Maine Street • Brunswick 725-8675

19" color television sets available
30 day guarantee

$125

The Atrium

Cooks Corner, Brunswick, 729-5555

BEST OF LUCK ON FINAL EXAMS!

Remember JOLT, the eye-opening COLA, with TWICE the caffeine to keep you alert during studies.

HAVE A HAPPY, SAFE HOLIDAY.

WINE-BEER-CHEESE-KEGS-ICE

MACBEANS BOOKSHOP

your downtown personal bookshop

We have a wonderful selection of GIFT BOOKS

and Brunswick's finest CHRISTMAS CARDS

and beautiful GIFT WRAPPINGS

and PUZZLES and GAMES

and NOVELTIES and you-name-it...

We ship almost anything almost anywhere from
our PACKAGE EXPRESS CENTER.

Do all your gift buying and shipping here, and stroke Silas, too.

MACBEANS BOOKSHOP
134 Maine Street 725-8516

The Best College Roommate Money Can Buy.

To get ahead at Bowdoin, it helps to choose a brilliant roommate. Like a Macintosh™ personal computer. And for the holiday season Apple is offering up to $200 off the already affordable purchase price. And now Bowdoin students have two great models to choose from at these special prices.

The Macintosh Plus, which comes with one 800K drive, 1 megabyte of memory, keyboard, and mouse.

And the Macintosh SE, which comes with either two built-in 800K drives, or one drive and an internal 20-megabyte hard disk. As well as a choice of keyboards.

Whichever you choose, Apple offers a one-time, affordable student purchase price. Purchase information available from Andy Palmer at the computer center in Hubbard Hall or contact Dana Melick at Coastal Computer Center (729-0298).

Moulton Union Bookstore

© 1987 Apple Computer, Inc. Apple and the Apple logo are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. Macintosh is a trademark of Apple Computer, Inc.

Fraternities

(Continued from page one)
Under this new system, women were given equal rights as house members on the local level. However, no women are currently living in the TD house and women are neither recognized as members, nor can they be elected to office on the national level.

One of the Review Board's concerns about women in fraternities has been the issue of sexual harassment. According to Goldsmith, a distinction must be made between sexual harassment within a fraternity and sexual harassment at a fraternity party. She does not believe that fraternities breed sexual harassment. In fact, "Many women feel safer in their own fraternity houses than anywhere else on campus," said Goldsmith.

Fraternities are cited because they are the major center of social life on campus, but sexual harassment would be no less prevalent in any other social center, said Goldsmith.

"Since women are in fraternities these problems of sexual discrimination are out in the open and that's why I think the Bowdoin system is very positive," said Goldsmith, "we do not want fraternities to close down because of women."

BLOOM COUNTY

Petition

(Continued from page one)

acknowledged that they had come to the fraternity but it was on a day when there was no meal service in the house and no women were around.

When the writers of the petition approached Lynn Vogelstein '88 away from the house, she replied that she would not personally support the document, but that they were free to approach other Delta Sig women. Efforts to do so were apparently incomplete, as several members, when questioned about their views, said that they had never heard of the document.

Some women, however, did not agree with the document's content. Heather Freund '91, a member of Delta Sig, said, "I think that fraternities are conducive to it (sexual harassment and poor treatment of women) but they are not solely responsible. Many other women agreed that the problem would not disappear if fraternities were not part of the social system at Bowdoin."

by Berke

Breathed

BLOOM COUNTY
by Berke
Breathed

* In fact, it expires on January 15, 1988. So don't procrastinate! © 1987 Apple Computer Inc. Apple and the Apple logo are registered trademarks of and Macintosh, ImageWriter and The power to be your best are trademarks of Apple Computer Inc.

Buy a printer with your Macintosh and conserve paper.

A Macintosh™ personal computer and an ImageWriter™ II printer will save you hours of time. Not to mention gallons of correction fluid and reams of paper. And, if you buy both now, the first ream of paper you'll save will have a lovely green glow with Presidents on it. So here's the deal: You'll save a bundle of cash when you purchase an ImageWriter II printer along with your choice of a Macintosh Plus or a Macintosh SE. Either way you'll be able to turn out beautifully prepared papers. And we'll even try to help you with a variety of financing options. We feel compelled to tell you, though, that a deal like this can't last forever.* So it's a good idea to see your campus microcomputer center today. And join the paper conservation movement.

The power to be your best.™

MOULTON UNION BOOKSTORE

Veggie alternative gives bag lunch new life

ROBERT WILLAMEY
ORIENT Staff

Somebody new is tossing salad fresh each day. This time it's our very own Bowdoin College Dining Service, reportedly, "the Best in the East," that has joined the verdant lunch line.

One of the many changes taking place in Dining Service this year is increased attention paid to the bag lunch program. While many of the changes introduced by Director of Dining Services Larry Pinette have been aimed at rectifying abuses within the system that led to last year's enormous deficit, the bag lunch program was expanded to meet the needs of the student body.

In order to make the program more efficient it was necessary to move the entire operation to Moulton Union. Bag lunches can no longer be obtained at Wentworth Hall, said Mary Lou Kennedy, assistant director of Dining Services. The Moulton Union was chosen as the bag lunch center because it is centrally located and better suited for such an operation.

Wentworth Hall, however, will still play an important role in the bag lunch enterprise. The colorful new chefs salads, which include lettuce, ham, turkey, radish, green pepper and cheese, are prepared daily at the larger dining facility and brought over to the Union.

This year Dining Service has increased the variety of sandwiches that may be requested as well as adding a number of new options. In past years students requesting bag lunches could either choose two sandwiches, two cookies or a piece of fruit, and a beverage. Another option allowed students a yogurt, cookies and a beverage. This year students can choose one of three options ranging from two sandwiches and two pieces of fruit, or a yogurt and sandwich with a choice of dessert, to a chef's salad and a yogurt or dessert. All meals still include beverages.

The program was made more flexible in an effort to meet the diverse tastes of those asking for bag lunches. It is also the hope of the Dining Service that the bag lunch program will alleviate the overcrowding problem that both lunchrooms experience during lunch hours.

Pinette estimates that over one hundred students request bag lunches a day since the new policy took effect. The new salad option seems to be a hit as well drawing nearly fifty students during the heavily congested lunch hours. The new deli line at the Union, though not a bag lunch option, is yet another change aimed at attracting more students to the Union and a way from the more popular Wentworth Hall.

Many students have responded positively to the changes in the program. Andrew Deane says, "It's a really good idea. For the longest time bag lunches were not an option if you wanted to eat. It was something you had to do in certain situations. I would still like to see some hot food items though."

Eric Palmquist believes that the program is a step in the right direction of alleviating the congestion at Wentworth, "I like the new policy because the people at the Tower are busy enough. They should not have to worry about making bag lunches. The people at the Union do not serve as many people and can afford the extra work."

While most students praise the efforts of the Dining Service there are those that feel it might jeopardize the quality of the food. Colm Sweeney says, "My only concern is that the quality of the food may be going down as a result of some of the special services they are providing."

FILM, POLITICS & SOCIAL CHANGE IN ASIA

January - May 1988

Faculty from Harvard University and the University of Illinois

Itinerary includes: India
China
Japan
Hong Kong

- travel and work closely with professors
- live with families in each country
- expand intellectual and personal awareness through comparative study in a variety of environments
- 16 credit hours of academic work studying film, politics and social change in Asia

For a catalogue and application contact:

Jean Tiffany, Director
International Honors Program
19 Braddock Park
Boston, MA 02116
617-267-8612

INTERNATIONAL HONORS PROGRAM

Let
Senter's
Be
Your Santa

Present this Coupon to Recieve

20% off

Any One Item. Good 'til Dec. 24

One item is defined as one item as priced. For example: A woman's suit is one item. A skirt & matching jacket would be two items as priced. No other coupons or discounts apply

Senter's

Little Ones

149 Maine Street, Tontine Mall

Something special
for your Little One

30% off boys clothing, 2T - 7

Open Sunday 12 - 5

HRS: Mon-Thurs. 10 - 5:30 Fri 10 - 5 Sat closed

Best Chinese Food in town!

Present this coupon and get a free order of egg rolls with every takeout order!

THE ATRIUM

Cooks Corner, Brunswick,
729-5555.

Expires December 20.

Tontine Hair Fashions

207-729-5475

BOWDOIN STUDENT DISCOUNT
FOR HAIRCUTS
BRING I.D.

Flowers by Knowles

Get ready for Christmas!
We have poinsettias, Christmas
plants and wreaths.

Deliver anywhere with FTD service!

15 Jordan Ave.

725-2461

UNIQUE HOUSING OPPORTUNITY FOR FEMALE BOWDOIN STUDENTS

Roomsin beautiful, newly renovated lovely Colonial home very near campus. Bedrooms have charming antique pine and oak bureaus and desks, new oak beds, and large closets. Share 3 all-new stylish tile baths and lovely new contemporary kitchen with new appliances, new cabinetry, cathedral ceiling. Refinished pumpkin pine floors; natural refinished doors. Spacious, quiet and clean. Large rooms offered double occupancy, $900.00 per semester plus security deposit. Single occupancy, $1400 per semester. All utilities included. Especially charming space for a few particularly discerning students. This is not a place for parties, etc! Care to take a look? Call Mr. Boudette 725-8290 or please leave a message at 729-8616

HOMEWORKERS WANTED!

TOP PAY! C.I.

121 24th Ave., N.W. Suite 222
Norman, Oklahoma 73069

TYPISTS - Hundreds weekly
at home! Write: P.O. Box 17
Clark, New Jersey 07066

Part-Time -
Home Mailing Program!
Excellent income!
Detail, send self-addressed,
stamped envelope.
WEST
Box 5877, Hillsdale, N.J. 07205

CRUISE SHIPS

NOW HIRING. M/F

Summer & Career Opportunities
(Will Train). Excellent pay plus
world travel. Hawaii, Bahamas,
Caribbean, etc. CALL NOW:
206-736-0775 Ext.544F

Suzie Q Shop

Dressmaking - Tailoring
Alterations of all kinds
leather, suede, fur
Custom-made suits
11 Cedar St, Brunswick
M-F, 7 to 5; Sat, 7:30 to 12:30
725-5305

A Likely Yarn

90 UNION STREET
BRUNSWICK, ME 04011
(207) 725-2147

NOW HERE!

More Maine Sweaters (for adults)
from the author of *Maine Woods
Woolies*. There is still time to knit for Christmas. Also see us for a wonderful array of gifts for the knitter, including Gift Certificates.

OPINION

Too Many Cooks

Enough is enough.

Committees are formed in order to expedite the democratic process, to improve the welfare of one and all, to seek out and find answers. Yet at Bowdoin committee-mania is infecting one and all.

From fraternities to fruit plates, committees have sprung up every week this semester. Granted, many of the newly formed committees are valid worthwhile ventures which not only pursue but obtain results.

Yet the rash of committee upon committee has grown to the point where they waste more time and energy than it would take to simply address the problem directly. The lowlight came Tuesday night when the Executive Board formed a committee to arrange a meeting between President A. Leroy Greason and the Executive Board. Unlike most Executive Board committees which contain only three members, this Committee on Presidential Second Semester Meeting With the Execs (CPSSMWE) has four students.

While the Exec Board should be lauded for actively seeking Greason's opinion, does it really mandate a four-person committee to do so? Wouldn't a phone call or letter suffice?

The Execs mean well, certainly. But they are approaching a simple task in a manner that makes it a monumental task. If they need a committee to formulate an agenda for such a meeting, then they should question the need for the meeting itself. And if the problem is simply that of getting in touch with the president, here's a tip-off: his office is in Hawthorne-Longfellow. His number is in the book.

Manpower at a small college where students must devote a substantial part of their daily schedules to study is short. Ad hoc committees are fine for especially large problems, or those which might require some special skills to solve. But in the case of regular business, there are enough standing committees on this campus to deal with those aspects of college life that a committee should properly address.

When people familiar with parliamentary procedure wish to bury a problem, they often "send it to committee for further study." This is a polite way of saying they will discuss it to keep people who care happy, but they have no plans to remedy the problem. We do not claim that this is the intent of the Executive Board, or any of the various other committees on campus. But to be worth its salt, a committee must couple discussion with action. This we have yet to see.

Keith Supko, '90

Foreign Studies

It is time once again to choose courses for next semester, carefully considering distribution requirements. The more attentive students will have noticed one unfortunate change. The Foreign Studies requirement has become the Non-Eurocentric Studies requirement, yielding one net change: the study of the Soviet Union no longer meets the standard.

The purpose of the Foreign Studies requirement according to the old catalog was "to introduce students to cultures fundamentally different from their own to open their minds to different ways in which other people perceive and try to cope with the challenges of life. This intent remained unchanged in the switch to Non-Eurocentric Studies. With this in mind, let us consider Russia and the Soviet Union.

Russia has never been a free country—it has no Locke or Rousseau, nor has it more than marginally partaken of the Enlightenment which transformed the politics and culture of Western Europe. Feudalism ended in Russia just over a century ago when the serfs were freed in 1861. More recently, the Soviet Union emerged as the first nation to adopt a Communist system of government, one which has found wide appeal among the Third World and leftist intellectuals of the West up to the present day. And all the while the Soviet Union and the Russian Empire have been multi-racial societies. Only last year race riots erupted in Alma Ata when an ethnic Russian was appointed head of the republic party organization over a native Kazak. Even the most enlightened Soviet leader to date, Mikhail Gorbachev, suggested that America solve its racial problems by creating a separate state for blacks and minorities. Yet apparently none of this implies a culture fundamentally different from our own.

Furthermore, while this oversight of cultural differences is deplorable, the timing is still worse. Mikhail Gorbachev is instituting unprecedented reforms to his nation—among them multiple candidate elections, economic decentralization, unparalleled license for the press, attacks on omnipresent bureaucracy, admission of serious social problems, and an anti-corruption and anti-alcohol campaign. Unlike Khrushchev's reforms, Gorbachev's perestroika (reconstruction) was not prompted by the demise of a Stalinist legacy of total terror: we may be witnessing fundamental changes in the Soviet system along with the ascension if a new generation of leaders. To ignore these changes in a superpower with which our relations are more critical than ever constitutes a profound mistake.

The omission of the Soviet Union is still more ludicrous in light of some of the courses which satisfy the new requirement. Such include Afro-American Religion and Its Music: Redemption Songs, the Afro-American Critique of America, Race and Ethnicity, and Afro-American Literature. While these courses are by no means unworthy of study, the issue they raise does not concern a culture fundamentally different from our own—on the contrary, they represent a minority experience which is a product of our own American history and culture. Certainly Per-Colonial Africa treats of foreign culture, but what do we learn of Africa from redemption songs, or critiques of America by American black leaders, or black American literature?

Finally, if we assume that the cultures of Asia, Africa, and Latin America are fundamentally different from our own and thus require study, we must not assume that the Caucasian cultures of Europe are the same and can be overlooked. Russia is a case in point—and so are France, Germany, and Italy. While we focus on non-European societies, we cannot forget that American educators have recently lamented the low exposure of students to European heritage. Why not permit one foreign studies course on Europe and one on a non-European theme?

So let us be openminded—as to glasnost and Ostpolitik as well as Buddha and African politics.

Keith Supko '90

David Otto '89

Clarification

I wanted to apologize to the two Bowdoin women in my article "Justice at Bowdoin" displayed an insensitivity to the trauma that they have suffered. The purpose of the article was to discuss the Administration's handling of the case. However, after re-reading my article in light of the articles by Tara Dooley and Stephanie Wald, I feel a few statements I made were misinterpreted and need clarification. In this article I plan to clarify my controversial statement "Justice at Bowdoin" and the fact that I referred to the assault as a "sexual harassment misunderstanding."

I do not see this case as cut and dry as it has been presented. I am not ignorant to the fact that the assault resulted in "bruises, bloody noses, and fingerprint marks on their arms," and I truly believe the women's utter terror and suffering have been great. However, this is not a case of two men attacking two women, these two parties were best of friends and one of the males even lived in the same Coles Tower quad with the two women. They even had plans to live together next year in a house at Mere Point. I feel that to completely understand this attack and why it happened it is important to look at the relationships of these men and women.

This relationship was not a typical relationship that exists between men and women. The group was very relaxed and was constantly throwing back and forth explicit sexual jokes. I had witnessed some of this while visiting their quad in the tower. This kind of joking was common throughout the relationship. The sexual joking even went to the extent that at times one of the women would grab the man in the crotch as a joke. Both parties felt relaxed and comfortable with this (Continued on page 15)

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

"The College exercises no control over the content of the student writings contained herein and neither it, nor the Administration, nor the faculty assume any responsibility for the views expressed herein."

Lori Bodwell...Editor in Chief

Kevin Wesley...Assistant Editor
Adam Najberg...News Editor
Rosemarie Dougherty...Assoc. News Editor

Tamara Dassanayake...Asst. News Editor
Eric Foushee...Business Manager
Alan Harris...Photography Editor
Mary Ann Lai...Photography Editor
Lizz Millan...Asst. Entertainment Editor

Dawn Vance...Asst. News Editor

Michael Botelho...Sports Editor
Jack Cahill...Editorials Editor
Susan Lyons...Contributing Editor

Kathryn Nanovic...Production Manager
Justin Preisendorf...Asst. Sports Editor
Stephen Reynolds...Features Editor
Sharon Smart...Entertainment Editor
Michael Townsend...Advertising Manager

Advertising Staff: Michelle Campagna, Kim Maxwell
Cartoonists: Matt Samuelson, Alan MacIntyre
Features Staff: Larry Glenn, Kasey Townsend
Features Contributors: Suzanne Dever, Tucker Shaw

News Staff: Tanya Weinstein, Robert Wailamey, Becky Austin, Marshall Carter, Richard Lindahl, Jr.
News Contributors: Ed Amer, Lance Hickey, Cynthia Lazo, Charles Hassrick, Hannah Rahill, Elizabeth Gilliland, Christine Hong, Angela Daigle

Photography Staff: Ned May, Nina Roth, Eric Rice, Asaf Farashuddin, Bonnie Berryman, Dawn Bradford, Kelly Beckman, Robert Wailamey, Audrey Augustin, Amy Wilson

Production Staff: Vincent Jacks, Andrew Appel
Sports Staff: Eric Palmquist, Todd Dillon, Tony Jaccaci, Dave Nute, Jon Devine, Tanya Weinstein, Julie Felner, Christopher Boone, Jan Brekke, Matt Samuelson

Sports Contributors: Matt London, Chris Carlisle, Paula Sincero, Bonnie Berryman

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

Published by

THE BOWDOIN PUBLISHING COMPANY

LORI M. BODWELL ERIC F. FOUSHEE
ALBERT P. MAURO, JR.

Published weekly when classes are held during the Fall and Spring semester by the students of Bowdoin College. Address editorial communication to the Editor, subscription communication to the circulation manager, and business correspondence to the business manager at The Bowdoin Orient, 12 Cleaveland Street, Brunswick, Maine 04011, or telephone (207) 725-3300. The Bowdoin Orient reserves the right to edit any and all articles and letters. Subscriptions are $15.00 per year or $8.00 per semester. Past issues cannot be mailed. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to The Bowdoin Orient, Moulton Union, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011.

Harassment

To the Editor:

We are often frustrated by the ignorance of sexual harassment on campus, and were encouraged by the responses in last week's paper concerning the College's general policy on the issue. However, as members of the Peer Relations Support Group trained in counseling skills and well acquainted with sexual harassment, we would like to address a point Michael Szajkowski makes in his letter of last week. He writes, "I would suggest that, with the consent of the victim, if found guilty by either the Student Judiciary Board or the Administrative Committee, the police should always be notified." While we agree with his earlier statement that "College policy should always make available the strictest possible disciplinary action possible for such offenses against the individuals of this community," we want to stress that the decision to prosecute should be the victim's alone. While some may choose to take revenge on their attackers, many victims would rather put the incident behind them rather than having an impending trial hanging over their heads for what could be years, some victims prefer to go on with their lives.

Victims of sexual assault often feel powerless after the incident.

Otto

(Continued from page 14)
type of joking.

If these men and women did not have this unique, sexually relaxed relationship, the events of November 5 would never have taken place. The event began not as two men preying on two helpless women, but as a joke on two close friends. The joke consisted of embarrassing the two women by forcing them into the men's bathroom. Once the men had the women in the bathroom they decided to extend the joke by scaring them. This tasteless joke took the form of physically holding the women and verbally attacking them.

Due to the fact that the men were under the influence of alcohol, they could not judge how strong they were in comparison to the women nor how scared the women had become. The men felt that this joke was in line with the rest of the sexual joking that was typical in the relationship. However, the women, due to the fact that they were physically dominated and subjected to verbal abuse, truly believed that they were in danger of being raped. They did not see this as a joke. In retrospect it is hard for anyone to see how this whole incident escalated from a mere joke. The women drew a line in the sexual joking of the relationship, and rightly so. However, the men could not see this line. The women played an integral role in the escalation that eventually ended in this tragedy. This is what I meant when stating this event was a "sexual harassment For the College administration to thrust a case into the hands of the police without the victim's consent would do more harm than good. By making their own decisions on whether or not to prosecute, victims can begin to overcome their sense of helplessness.

In their re-evaluation of the judicial process concerning sexual harassment, we are confident that the members of the administration will take into consideration the effects of prosecution not only on the attacker, but the victim as well.

Ralph D'Agostino '88
Shannon Hurley '89
Greg Merrill '90
Peer Relations Support Group Members

Athletics

To the Editor:

The recent history of athletic recruitment policies is evidently something about which intelligent people may disagree totally. My own recollections differ entirely from those of Chris Potholm expressed in last week's Orient. As I recall things, several years ago it was decided that one way to avoid admitting marginal athletes might be to have all the coaches make efforts to identify well qualified applicants who might also be useful members of teams and encourage them to apply. Prior to this, some coaches had become ment misunderstanding."

I am not making light of sexual harassment and I am not stating that all this makes what happened all right. Even with the understanding of this unique relationship, what the men did was wrong and they should have been punished. The women were physically and verbally abused and have suffered greatly. However, the event was far from attempted rape. In light of this information justice was not given to the two men. True, the men's justice was secondary to that of the victimized women. Nevertheless, expelling the men, especially in the way the administration went about it, gave the men no justice at all.

This event, although extreme, is partially a result of the system. It is the result of the fact that the basic differences between men and women have been broken down as a result of coed quads, coed fraternities, etc. I am not referring to the equality of men and women, but rather the basic nature of what it means to be a man or woman, a nature that is biologically based and can affect the way we perceive the most simple situations. The fact that these men and women had a unique relationship, in addition to the fact that three of them lived together, dissolved the most basic differences that exist between men and women. The men viewed the women as their buddies, the way they would view another male. However they were not males, but involved in the process only after applications had been received. This policy seems now to have backfired and our efforts at athletic recruitment are apparently beginning to give the impression in the schools that Bowdoin is more interested in athletes than in scholars.

Letters

I hope the faculty will, in the absence of any data suggesting that athletic prowess predicts capacity for intellectual growth, vote to make athletic talent as irrelevant in the Admissions process as, for example, gender or financial need.

John F. Turner
Professor of Romance Languages

Homework

To the Editor:

Occasionally, seemingly minor events say so much as to overwhelm. Let's see how quickly you catch on. I was accosted recently by a fellow Bowdoin student who wanted information about a course I've taken. Or so it seemed. It soon became apparent that the student wanted more than my perspective to the course, something more substantial than my opinion. He was interested, you see, in getting solutions to old homework problems. Perhaps no one else knew had them. Reluctant as I was to acknowledge his attention, I gave him the benefit of the doubt. Then the friendly tones of the conversation lost meaning.

I explained that the homework accounted for the major part of the courses content. Being an upper level course, I didn't think the problems changed much from year to year. Therefore I don't feel it honest to give them out. This would cheat him, so to speak, by preventing him from learning as much as he might. More conspicuously, it would cheat his classmates. I wanted to escape an uncomfortable dialogue and give him a way out. But after I politely justified my answer, he asked again. "Are you sure (his emphasis) I can't look at your old exams and problems?" My reply became more emphatic. I might as well have spoke Swedish.

So it struck me that we have divergent ideas about learning. My protagonist said he saw nothing wrong with using old exams and problems to help "learn the material better." He remained silent, however, about the implications. Did it not occur to him that such conduct might be unfair if everyone didn't have access to the same material? Or do he and others like him continue this behavior because it makes for better grades with less involvement. Questions of integrity aside, does making the grade like that help one to become an intellectual person? Or does it instead beget conformity, teaching us to follow the beat of another up the ladder to reward. I kept these thoughts to myself. It's not that most of us don't love all peoples and pursue the truth, or like to look fine on paper. Credentials are important at Bowdoin, and what I'm suggesting is that the way we're socialized to think about them often does us a disservice.

We're privileged the opportunities to learn, think critically, and question. Yet a broad, anti-intellectual streak runs straight to the core of Bowdoin College. It probably always has. We live in a less than righteous world of course, though we still might influence the way we carry ourselves and learn. Why else are we here?

Meanwhile those cries of praise from the administration and admissions office seem a little pretentious. Bowdoin is a raisin cake, with sweet raisins scattered around moist dough. Seems to me our college would taste better with more aspiring raisins. Here's better wishing us better luck becoming sweet.

Dan Rosner '87

Colby fans

To the Editor:

Three Cheers for Colby College Fans!

I couldn't stop myself from writing this letter to the Bowdoin Orient, and, if I'm lucky, the Colby College Echo will get a copy too. How about those Colby hockey fans! They're such a classy act! I thought I would publicly congratulate these loyal and very supportive young men and women. They come out in herds to support their hockey team, sending the entire arena into a frenzy with their unique and educational cheers like "Raise your grades and Reapply," "Safety School," "Butt Pirates," or chants to taunt our goalie, actually believing that it really bothers the "Jan-Man."

And do they know their hockey? They sure do. Their team does a superb job forechecking, backchecking, or getting out of their zone in a flash, and the fans' cheer silently. But when a Colby player uses an artistic slash to the throat of the likes of Ashe or Ski, they cheer with vigor, clapping as the Colby player glides to the penalty box.

Their fans are so smart. Their loyalty is overwhelming. After being warned that any objects such as fish, tennis balls, oranges, etc. thrown on the ice will result in a penalty against Colby, the Colby fans very intelligently throw oranges on the ice on the next play, sending another player to the penalty box. What great fans!

Finally, three cheers for an extensively organized end of the game cheer. After Bowdoin fans started the acceptable "winning team, losing team" cheer, Colby countered with "Na, Na, Na, Na, Hey, hey, F _ Y _!" I am so impressed. It must have taken them all semester to come up with that one.

Get a clue Colby fans (and I use the term loosely)! Have some pride in yourselves and your school, even though Bowdoin was your first choice. When fans act in such a classless and abusive manner as Colby's fans did Wednesday night, I would be embarrassed to wear a Mule sweatshirt. Furthermore, when your team has tried so hard to play with such a powerful and superior squad like our Polar Bears, why end the game with an inexcusable way? You even "boo" your own coach, a super coach with a record that speaks for itself.

I want to congratulate a very classy, intelligent, and respectable Bowdoin team and crowd for a very respectable showing. When Colby comes to town in February and the Bears are thrashing them again, let's show them how real fans are supposed to act, supporting their team and coaches instead of embarrassing themselves, their school, alumni, and especially MY hometown! Way to go Bowdoin!

Jeff LaPlante
Waterville, Maine

New staff announced

The Bowdoin Publishing Company would like to congratulate the newly appointed editorial board. The new staff will begin production in January.

Spring 1988 Staff: Editor, Stephen Reynolds; Managing Editor, Kathryn Nanovic; In Depth Editor, Kevin Wesley; News Editors, Tamara Dassanayake and Dawn Vance; Sports Editor, Justin Preisendorfer; Entertainment Editor, Sharon Smart; Asst. Entertainment Editor, Liz Millan; Photography Editors, Alan Harris and Mary Ann Lai; Advertising Manager, Michael Townsend; Business Manager, Eric Foushee; Asst. News Editor, Tanya Weinstein; Asst. Sports Editor, Tod Dillon; Production Manager, Vincent Jacks; Executive Editor, Lori Bodwell; Columnist, Michael Botelho; Contributing Editor, Adam Najberg.

1987 Fall Orient Staff. Photo by Carl Strolle

ERASE YOUR HUNGER WITH
DOMINO'S
PIZZA

$1.00

$1.00 off any pizza.
One coupon per pizza.
Expires: 12/20/87

Fast, Free Delivery
26 Bath Rd.
Phone: 729-5561

Includes all applicable state and local taxes.

You're back hitting the books again. So let us remind you that there's no better food for thought than pizza from Domino's Pizza.

We'll rub out your munchies with hot, delicious, quality pizza delivered in less than 30 minutes after you've ordered. Nobody can do better than that!

So use the special discount coupon below and get back into the swing of school with a pizza from Domino's Pizza.

Our drivers carry less than $20.00.
Limited delivery area.
©1987 Domino's Pizza, Inc.

DOMINO'S
PIZZA
DELIVERS®
FREE.

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

FIRST CLASS MAIL
U.S. Postage PAID
BRUNSWICK, ME.
Permit No. 25

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

VOLUME CXVII

BOWDOIN COLLEGE, BRUNSWICK, MAINE, FRIDAY, JANUARY 29, 1988

NUMBER 13

"Balancing Act" performed skits exploring social use of alcohol and chemical dependency as a family disease. The Boston group's performance was one of many events during "The Bowdoin Party Life..." The week's purpose, according to Jack Cooley of the Alcohol Peer Advisors, was to raise awareness of alcohol and other drugs. Staff photo.

"Party life...?" raises drug awareness

DAWN VANCE

ORIENT News Editor

Substance abuse has increasingly attracted attention nationwide. This week's "The Bowdoin Party Life..." follows the national trend in its aim to promote awareness of alcohol and drug related issues among the Bowdoin college community.

This year's week-long focus upon alcohol and drug related issues, although not the first of its kind, has undergone significant changes. These changes have evoked greater student participation and interest than in the past.

This year's program has focused primarily upon alcohol. After last year's Drug Awareness Week the Alcohol Peer Advisors (APA) discovered that any attempts at generating awareness would evoke greater response if aimed at alcohol related issues. Jack Cooley, an APA and a major coordinator of this year's events said, "Last year's events were geared at other drugs - cocaine, heroin... people didn't come to the non-alcohol related events... people are more interested in alcohol related events. Alcohol is the most abused drug - it is the number one drug of choice on campus."

The name of this year's Drug Awareness Week - "The Bowdoin Party Life..." - itself demonstrates an attempt to appeal to the concerns of the Bowdoin student. Indeed, this week's events have captured the interest of the college community at large. President of the Inter-Fraternity Council Jennifer Goldsmith '90 said of "The APA made a very interesting schedule... it's pertinent to everyone... it deals with problems all people face."

Greg Hostetter '91 reflected the general student reaction toward this week in his comment upon Lonise Bias' speech. Hostetter said, "I went in thinking I don't have a drug problem... but what she had to say touched everyone."

"The Bowdoin Party Life..."

week-long series of lectures, presentations and special events concerning alcohol/drug related issues has attempted to reach all segments of the Bowdoin College community. It has provided a variety of issues for consideration to which everyone can relate.

This week has featured such events as Patrick McManus '76 speaking on "Drinking at Bowdoin", keynote speaker Lonise Bias, "The Balancing Act", "Booze Booths", and speakers Amy Dean and Kathleen Gildea-Dinzeo. Groups responsible for the organization of "The Bowdoin Party Life..." include the Alcohol Peer Advisors, the Inter-Fraternity Council, the Afro-American Society and the Student Union Committee.

Many of the ideas for the week's activities stemmed from a conference of the New England Alcohol Network (NEAN) held at Mount Holyoke College in October. (Continued on page 8)

"Moderate rush" divides administration

ADAM NAJBERG

ORIENT Contributing Editor

With spring semester underway the fraternity system is once again conducting rush.

Only this semester for the first time in recent years the college administration has officially recognized a second semester rush period. This official recognition of rush, however, has not been devoid of controversy.

The Inter-Fraternity Council (IFC), in seeking legitimacy for a second semester rush, drew up a proposal that called for a "moderated rush" on December 23 of last year.

This proposal stated that alcohol would be permitted Thursdays through Saturdays and "though alcohol will be permitted on a moderated basis at all other times, no kegs will be allowed on Sunday through Wednesday evenings."

The proposal further stated that adherence to the Sunday through Wednesday alcohol ban would "be monitored by fraternity members."

Houses participating in second semester rush include Alpha Beta Phi, Alpha Delta Phi, Alpha Rho Upsilon, Chi Psi, Delta Sigma, Psi Upsilon and Zeta Psi.

The fraternity members monitoring weeknight functions come from those four houses not participating in second semester rush: Alpha Kappa Sigma, Beta Theta Pi, Delta Kappa Epsilon and Theta Delta Chi said IFC president, Jennifer Goldsmith '90. Members of the monitoring committee, dubbed the "Goon Squad", have the authority to close down a weeknight party failing to comply with rush policy.

Goldsmith presented the proposal to Dean of Students Kenneth A. Lewallen on January 21. Goldsmith said the IFC sought a second semester rush because the smaller houses needed a second semester rush to increase their membership. Lewallen approved the IFC's proposal after discussing it with Goldsmith.

Dean of the College Jean Jervis and President of the College A. (Continued on page 8)

Obituary

G. Eric Moreau

G. Eric Moreau, 21, a junior at Bowdoin College, died in his room at Bowdoin College, Dec. 19, the apparent victim of suicide.

Born in Bangor, Nov. 15, 1966, he was the son of Guilford and Georgette Cloutier Moreau. He graduated from Presque Isle High School in 1985.

At Bowdoin, he was a chemistry major and a biology minor. He was a James Bowdoin Scholar his sophomore year and a dean's list student. Last year, he served as proctor of Appleton Hall.

He was active in Amnesty International and as an Alcohol Peer Advisor.

In high school he was a member of the varsity chess team.

He was a member of St. Mary's Catholic Church in Presque Isle.

In addition to his parents, he is survived by a brother, George A. Moreau of Gorham; a sister, Michelle S. Moreau; and a paternal grandmother, Nomie Berube, both of Presque Isle.

A funeral Mass was held Wednesday, Dec. 23, 1987 at St. Mary's Catholic Church in Presque Isle. A spring burial will be in North Main Street Catholic Cemetery, Presque Isle.

A memorial service will be held in the Bowdoin College Chapel today at 3:30 p.m. Friends are invited to attend.

Buying Bowdoin books?
Better bring bucks ...p.3

Jay paper strikers stop at Bowdoin on "Caravan '88" ...p.6

Interview with French
Poet Marie Etienne ...p.7

Hockey loses to Salem State...p.13

Martin Luther King remembered...p. 5

Lonise Bias speaks against alcohol and drug abuse

TAMARA DASSANAYAKE
ORIENT News Editor

The "greatest love of all" is the love we should have for ourselves, said Lonise Bias, mother of late All-America basketball star Len Bias. Bias delivered the keynote address of "The Bowdoin Party Life...", a week long program dealing with drug and alcohol related issues, on Monday night.

Since her son died of a cocaine related heart attack 18 months ago, Bias has been "on the road", talking to young people all over the country and "sowing the seeds of choice" in the minds of her audiences.

"It took one man to save millions... Len Bias has done more in death than if he had won 10 championships," said Bias.

A born-again believer and member of the 700 Club, Bias believes that God has given her the strength to "stand strong in these difficult times. I would much rather be at home with my family, sitting there with the cover over my head saying, 'Why Len? Why my baby?', but you've got to keep going," said Bias.

Bias feels that many young people today are unhappy with themselves or their future, and have no direction in life. "I know who I am today. I've done the hardest thing I have ever done, and that's buried my baby," Bias said young people need to depend upon themselves and to discover "the greatest love of all which lies within them."

She warned against confusing peer pressure for friendship using the recent Michael Jackson video "Bad" as an example. "Everyone who grins in your face is not your friend... 'friends' will accept you for what you are... you don't have to do something to be accepted... 'Look' at the people who are your 'friends' and find out who they really are, said Bias.

Bias encouraged her audience to "say no to anything wrong, not just to drugs. The only way to learn to respect yourself and to earn the respect of others is by "standing up to peer pressure."

"Anyone can go along with the group, but who'll dare to be different?" she asked.

Bias also brought the experiences of her other three children since Len's death to the audience's attention. Her son Jay who appears to be following Len into the world of basketball has often been harassed on account of his brother's drug-related death but he "has made it in spite of it," she said.

Bias used the example of her son Jay to stress the maintenance of a sense of faith and hope in oneself as essential to dealing with life successfully.

Lonise Bias speaks in Pickard Theatre Monday night.

Winter's Weekend begins

MARSHALL CARTER
ORIENT Staff

As the frigid temperatures indicate, winter is definitely with us and appropriately enough so is Winter's Weekend. The Student Union Committee has planned a weekend full of "Fire and Ice" said Chairman Daniel Courcy '90.

"A lot of people have worked really hard," said Courcy. SUC has planned several new activities, including a bonfire and hayrides on the quad. In addition, there will be a snow sculpture contest involving all of the fraternities and dormitories, tug-of-war, broom hockey, and an ice cream boat, a full-sized canoe filled with ice cream, whipped cream and assorted topping.

Planning began in late November, and included a trip to a convention in Hartford, Connecticut to scout talent. The result of this trip is a dance at Wentworth Hall Saturday night featuring The Boyz. There will also be a Heat Miser look-a-like contest. Prizes for all Winter's Weekend contests will be gift certificates to Ben & Jerry's.

Bowdoin College Dining Service (BCDS) is also gearing up for this weekend, starting with an Italian theme dinner tonight (not Saturday night as the posters and cards say). Preparations began Tuesday, and the BCDS staff is excited about serving the meal.

"We like doing special things like this," said Chef-Manager Ken Beaulieu, adding, "it's also a break for us from the normal everyday routine."

The buffet style dinner will feature a choice of veal or chicken as the main course as well as a wide assortment of pasta dishes and salads. Italian desserts will cap off this meal, served from 5:00 pm to 7:00 pm at Wentworth and the Moulton Union.

Several Bowdoin athletic teams are competing this weekend, including today's hockey and basketball games against Norwich, at 7:00 pm and 8:00 pm respectively.

Hey Super Bowl Fans! Don't worry about taking time out from the game this Sunday to eat in one of the dining halls. Don't even worry about having to order pizza! Chef-Manager Ken Beaulieu of the Bowdoin College Dining Service has made a hot meal pick-up program available to sports fans on this fateful Sunday. Dinner will be available to take out in handy styrofoam containers. Just flash your ID (you've got to anyway!), pick up your meal, and head back to your room to root for your team.

TANYA WEINSTEIN
ORIENT Asst. News Editor

For the past two years, a fundraiser started by President of the College, A. LeRoy Greason has provided scholarships for two black South African students. At the beginning of this semester, Greason again asked the Bowdoin community to support the program.

Aid requested for South African Blacks

The program, started by the New England Board of Higher Education, encourages colleges throughout the area to raise money for scholarships. A bi-racial committee in South Africa chooses black South African students who are awarded full scholarships to study at one of the five integrated universities. The program funds approximately 35 scholarships a year.

During the first year of fundraising at Bowdoin, the students involved were able to raise $2800. President Greason then matched the amount from special funds. This enabled Bowdoin to present scholarships to two black South African students. One student is presently attending Rhodes University, while the other is studying at the University of Natal.

Coles Tower asking for donations.

Greason said he also wrote letters to faculty and the Bowdoin community asking for their support. Sizeler said of the effort, "I think it was a great thing and really successful."

Sizeler also said that one of the South African students sent a letter saying that he was doing very well in his studies. "He was very thankful and said that he couldn't have done it without us."

Greason expressed strong feelings about this cause. He said, "It is out of these scholarships that the black leadership will come."

He also commented upon the strong student reaction to Bowdoin's divestment from South Africa, and pointed out that students are showing enthusiasm for this cause, however only six people showed up at a meeting last week to discuss fundraising.

Greason said, "When the Governing Boards voted to divest there was an expression of concern that we not walk away from the problem after we divest." He felt that these scholarships would ensure that the Bowdoin community did not walk away. He said, "We have to do things more positive" than simply divest.

Mvelase Mahlaka '91, a black South African student currently enrolled at Bowdoin, agreed that these scholarships are a step in a more positive direction. He said that although divestment has obvious advantages, its main disadvantages lie in its hurting the blacks as well. He said, "In the long run it is supposed to help them but it hasn't been proven yet."

Mahlaka said that education provides an effective means of approaching the situation. He said, "It is the only meaningful way in which Bowdoin as an institution can express its indignation and concern for the situation in South Africa."

"Do you think 'wet' rush is hypocritical in light of last semester's successful 'dry' rush?"

A. LeRoy Greason, President of the College

The question of hypocrisy aside, I think it is wrong for fraternities to serve alcohol to students under 21. That's contrary to state law.

Tim Armstrong '90. House Manager, Delta Sigma

No, because freshman have been drinking for a whole semester. It would be hypocritical not to let them drink for this random two week period.

Jennifer Goldsmith '90. President, IFC

The nature of second semester rush is different in that the people rushing have been here a semester and a different group of people are being rushed. There are more upperclassmen and freshman who are already familiar with the fraternities.

Jeffrey Patterson '90. President, Beta Theta Phi

I support dry rush 100%. It was a very successful policy this fall. I don't understand why we've abandoned a successful dry policy.

Buying Bowdoin books? Better bring bucks

Your book bill for the Spring '88 semester could run as high as $466.20 for four classes, or as low as $0.

A survey of book prices for classes taken from the Spring '88 Moulton Union Bookstore book list shows 15 classes whose books total over $70, including four classes with totals over $100. However, the list also shows four classes that require no texts.

A student taking five classes could spend as much as $561.40 on required readings, while an ambitious student, with permission from the dean, could spend as much as $654.10.

Three of the 15 most expensive classes have all of the required readings on reserve in the library and another has one of the required books on reserve.

The most expensive class, according to the books listed as being required in the list is Mathematics 1815, the third class in the three-semester calculus course. The required texts total $123.10, however the principle $70 text is the same as is used in several other calculus courses.

English 316 is the second most expensive class, at $121.35. None of the texts are on reserve.

The third most costly class is History 255, at $117.10. All of the books for this class are on reserve.

Rounding out the top four is Music 102, at $104.65. The book list includes books that are useable for other music courses. The principle book and workbook, totalling $45.35, can be used in four music classes.

One-third of the 15 most expensive classes are in the History department.

Total prices for texts are incomplete for several classes due to the absence of prices for texts that have not yet arrived. Prices for the required books may also be lower subject to the availability of used books.

Four courses are listed in the book list as "No Books Required." Greek 102, Music 361, Physics 320 and Sociology 213 require no texts from the bookstore.

Not figured into class costs are studio art, individual music performance and photography courses. Costs for these classes often depend on the individual student and the quality of materials.

Costs can range up to $300 for some art courses.

Also not included are supplementary costs for classes and optional texts. For instance, Greek 305's listing consists of only optional books totaling at least $100. Other costs include lab fees in the Music and Chemistry departments.

Bowdoin's financial aid office uses an average, per-year cost of $400 for books in figuring out a student's need, according to a guide to financial aid.

Based on a departmental average, Environmental Studies courses for the Spring '88 are the costliest at an average of $72.45. Music courses averaged second highest at $64.87. The History department courses averaged $63.27 and Asian Studies department classes cost $58.85. Government courses ranked eighth, behind Classics, German and French. Department averages do not reflect books listed as not available yet on the book list.

The average for all courses is $41.27, making an average year of Bowdoin books cost $330.16.

-Data compiled by Andrew Appell and Al Mauro

Budget hits $40m

DOUG JONES

ORIENT Contributing Editor
President Greason's budget proposal for next year cleared its most difficult hurdle without major changes last Saturday when the Financial Planning Committee voted unanimously to recommend it, according to Treasurer of the College Dudley Woodall.

Though the budget can still be changed by the Executive Committee or the Governing Boards, both of which will review it before it is approved, in the past most major changes have been made by the Financial Planning Committee.

"What we took to the [Financial Planning Committee] is what is essentially being recommended to the Executive Committee," Woodall said.

Though details of the roughly $40 million budget will not be released until after the March 4 meeting of the Governing Boards when final changes are made and approved, interviews with Woodall and Director of Budgets Fred Quivey gave a broad overview of the document.

The budget includes a proposed tuition increase for next year. The actual figure will not be released until March, but the increase will be comparable to increases expected at other schools similar to Bowdoin.

Woodall said the tuition figure was agreed upon after a "big debate" in which the issue was "discussed from every possible angle."

Faculty and staff will receive

(Continued on page 12)

Counselling helps cope with suicide

After the initial grief, sorrow, anger, confusion and curiosity, the student body seems to be dealing G. Eric Moreau's death by not dealing with it.

The college administration, however, has confronted his suicide directly, not wanting there to be any confusion relating to the circumstances of Eric's death. "The administration made a quick, clear decision to let students know exactly what happened. There was no attempt at a cover-up," said Counseling Service Director Pat Rathbone.

"Initially, I think a lot of students were upset and many still are," said Rathbone. "They had questions about what happened and what could have been done. It has surprised me, however, how little talk there has been this semester."

People should not blame themselves for Eric's death, said Rathbone. "This was not an incident that anyone could have done anything about. He made a definite decision to kill himself. He chose to ingest something that kills immediately. There was nothing anyone could have done. No one should feel guilty."

The typical signs of suicidal tendencies can easily go unnoticed in a college community. Depression, withdrawal, increase in alcohol and drug use and changes in eating and sleeping habits are commonplace, especially during finals. "We accept that students will be depressed, but if looking at Eric's death is to do us any good, we must be more vigilant and commit ourselves to not accepting anything," said Rathbone.

There are concrete actions students, faculty and administration can undertake to attempt to prevent a suicide. The first, according to Rathbone, is to talk to the person whom you believe to be suicidal. If a person says, even in a joking manner, "I can't take this any more," respond by asking, "Do you mean you're thinking of killing yourself?"

Don't ignore the warning signs of suicide, said Rathbone. If you are afraid to ask or think the problem has progressed beyond anything you can do, call the Counseling Center where four trained people are there to help students and faculty. "Anyone in this office is willing to talk and help, and everything is completely confidential," she said.

NEW!!

Film Developing In 45 Minutes!
Why Wait Any Longer?

MERCURY PHOTO
Quality Film
Developing...Fast!

Kodak® Mini Lab System 25 processor
Newest Kodak paper and chemicals
Kodak Colorwatch quality control links
our lab with Rochester for
unsurpassed results.

Second set free if you bring in this ad.

good thru Saturday, Feb. 6

1-95 (EXIT 24) & ROUTE 196, TOPSHAM, ME.

PASSPORTS
WHILE
YOU WAIT

PARENTS!

Give your college student a very special care package! An Ice Cream Cake from Ben & Jerry's for birthdays, study breaks, exams, surprises, rainy days...

Call and order your
cake today.

Free Delivery (207) 725-2723
96 Maine Street, Brunswick

Both on-campus and off-campus organizations sponsored "Booze Booths," providing personal health-care information. Staff photo.

Survey asks for hangover cures

BOOZE BOOTH RESULTS

1. Water before bed.....79
2. Aspirin before bed.....58
3. Exercise.....19
4. Coffee.....13
5. Sex (if still able).....13
6. Eating bananas.....12
7. Eating graham crackers.....10
8. Shots of liquor next morning.....8
9. Swallowing vitamins.....7
10. Cold shower.....7

Anyone that has had more to drink than their body can adequately handle and metabolize has no doubt experienced the phenomenon known as a "hangover". What causes this, and how can it be treated?

There are several contributing factors, that cause this general malaise.

1. Alcohol suppresses the production of certain hormones and leads to an increase in urinary output. Quantity of fluid excreted exceeds fluid intake. Headaches, cotton mouth and dragon breath are partially related to this overall state of body and cellular dehydration.
2. Nausea and stomach upsets often accompany hangovers. Alcohol breaks down the protective lining of the stomach and leaves it exposed to irritants. Heavy drinking, often associated with excessive consumption of 'junk food', can slow down the whole digestive process and cause vomiting.

3. The 'jitters', or increased heart rate may also be experienced. This may be due to increased caffeine consumption in the form of mixers or due to dehydration.

4. Chemical substances called congeners which are often used to produce variations in taste, smell and color in alcohol can be very toxic in small amounts. The ingestion of these substances may lead to allergic reactions, swellings and palpitations.

These are just a few of the responses to excessive alcohol consumption. The cures for a hangover are few and far between. Abstinence or responsible drinking is the only way to avoid a hangover. The following are simple remedies that may help, but only temporarily.

1. Non-alcoholic liquid intake can replace the fluids lost by increased urinary output and vomiting while a return to a normal diet will replenish some of the minerals and salts that have been excreted.

2. Aspirin may reduce the inflammation caused by dehydration, but will at the same time cause further irritation of the stomach wall. In fact, the use of aspirin may directly cause stomach bleeding and ulcers.
3. Tylenol is less irritating to the stomach, but is also a less effective anti-inflammatory agent.
4. Rest is also helpful, giving the body a chance to repair and replenish itself.

It should be evident from the above list of causes and cures that drinking alcohol at a rate exceeding your body's ability to metabolize it will result in a state of intoxication. Once this has happened, the hangover will be an inevitable, unavoidable consequence.

Note: These are the results of the 'booze booths' held on January 22 as a part of "The Bowdoin Party Life..." accompanied by "Hangovers - Causes and Cures" written by Dan Buchan, Physician's Assistant of the Dudley Coe Health Center.

Alum discusses effects of alcohol

DAWN VANCE
ORIENT News Editor

"The Bowdoin Party Life..." kicked off its week-long series with a presentation at Beta Theta Pi fraternity on Sunday night. The evening's presentation featured recovering alcoholic Patrick McManus '76 speaking on "Drinking at Bowdoin".

McManus, a member of Beta Theta Pi and a four year letterman on the varsity football team while attending Bowdoin, stressed the conduciveness of the college's environment to drinking. McManus said, "Up here you could drink, no one bothered you... the environment was conducive to developing habits that will haunt you later."

McManus pointed out that Bowdoin's seclusiveness further compounds the development of drinking problems. "The environment is so seclusive up here that it's easy to say 'that's (drinking) what you do in college... I'll quit when I get out,'" McManus said.

Although McManus continually emphasized, "I drank less than many of the people I knew when at Bowdoin," he pointed out he had realized his drinking problem by junior year. McManus informed the audience that he never passed out or blacked out in his four years at Bowdoin - however, in his last few years he drank what he referred to as, "a small six pack at night watching TV".

The realization of his drinking problem came McManus said, "when I would drink at night and would not necessarily want to be." McManus continued, "I was supposed to be here studying and that was the Catch-22."

In relation to his drinking McManus said, "I never performed up to my potential while I was here... my performance was certainly impaired here... no doubt the drinking impacted on my attitude seriously." Yet in his four years at Bowdoin no one ever pointed out his drinking problem to him. "No one in four years up here ever said, 'You're drinking too much,'" McManus said.

McManus continued to drink for a year and a half following his graduation from Bowdoin. At age 23 he started a program to overcome his problem and today he is an attorney.

He concluded with a warning, "Bowdoin is a nice place to start - to start bad patterns... Bowdoin is a good place for prepping you for having problems later."

Joining McManus were three recovering students from Holy Cross and Clark University. These three students, Marty, Amy and Michael addressed questions posed by the audience.

The three students talked frankly about their personal experiences with substance abuse and the process through which they have struggled to overcome their habits. All of them had advice to offer the audience.

"Junior year in high school I knew I had a problem and my friends knew. I was a blackout drinker - I used to say, 'You black out, you pass out, and you figure it out the next day'... When you're an alcoholic you have to hit a bottom... mine was emotional. I hated not knowing what I did - I had to deal with the embarrassment... it had to stop for me," said Marty.

He continued, "I knew I had a problem because I had to think about my drinking and my drug use... all you have to do is get help - it's not that hard... if you do have a problem, don't drink, stop, get help."

Amy, too, spoke of hitting a bottom before acknowledging the existence of her problem. "Like Marty's, mine was mainly an emotional bottom. It dawned on me how serious it was that I couldn't stop... for me the most important step was realizing the problem - admitting my powerlessness over drugs and alcohol," said Amy.

After recognizing her problem and seeking help she said, "Now I am constantly reaching new changes within myself... I am learning to deal with people on a normal level... I like myself, my friends... I trust my friends - in the past I couldn't trust anybody with a dime or my life."

DRESS SALE

One great look after another for 9 to 5 and after! NOW

30% to 50% OFF
NOW

CANTERBURY

FOR MEN'S AND WOMEN'S APPAREL
Monday, thru Saturday 9:30 to 5:00
Cantu Center Shopping Center, Brunswick

SALE

30% off entire store | 40% off entire store

 benetton

56 Main Street, Freeport
* Not included: Fragrance, 1988 Spring merchandise or bears

FIORUCCI

88 Main Street, Freeport
Located under Boston Traders

Sat. Jan 30 and Sun. Jan 31

Students and faculty remember Martin Luther King, Jr.

VINCENT JACKS

ORIENT Production Manager
Friday, January 29th, Bowdoin students, faculty, and Brunswick community residents participated in a day-long celebration in honor of the Reverend, Doctor Martin Luther King, Jr. The theme of the celebration was "Living the Dream: Let Freedom Ring," sponsored by the African-American Society and co-ordinated by Pamela Herbert '90, and Shelby Cogdell '91.

The day of events began at 10 a.m. with a memorial service in the chapel. The Bowdoin African American Society Gospel Choir led the service in a congregational singing of the Black National Anthem: "Lift Every Voice and Sing," and two other selections: "We Shall Overcome" and "Hallelujah, Salvation, and Glory."

Oral presentations were delivered by the African-American society members and Sociology professor Frank Wilson. At 12 p.m. an informal lunch with former Maine state legislator and former president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), Gerald Talbot, took place.

The luncheon was directly followed by the releasing of balloons in the Quad, commemorating King and his accomplishments in the Civil Rights Movement. The day was then concluded with an hour long talk by Talbot and a panel discussion, featuring New England residents. These residents represented a range of ethnic groups from Black American and Franco-American to Hispanic American and Native American.

The Afro-Am. Society's intent in organizing such an array of events is to enhance the awareness of Bowdoin and Brunswick community residents of Martin Luther King Jr. They encouraged all to participate in several of the planned affairs.

Adrienne Hatten '90, president of the African-American Society, spoke about her hopes to provide insight to those who want to understand the hostilities that continue to exist between races and various ethnic groups. "I feel it is our [those who understand the significance of the Civil Rights Movement] obligation to educate those who are un-ware of such accomplishments and struggles."

King represents this figure - this milestone, that played an a significant role in the development of history. "But King was just a man..." responded a student when I asked him if he agreed with King's birthday being recognized as a national holiday. True, he was just a man, but he was a man wrought with determination to see the love of God universally expressed. King wanted freedom and equality for all individuals, and was a patient to see his dream - the dream of all nations - come true.

Gayle Pemberton, Associate Professor of English and Acting Director of African-American Studies program, stated the goal she would like to see reached in the outcome of this Martin Luther King, Jr. Celebration: "I would like to see a renewed sense of the importance of cultural diversity in the college and in our culture as a whole."

Sarah Stoycos, class of 1988, said that non of her history books in highschool even mentioned the name of Martin Luther King, Jr. "As I grew older it became sort of a responsibility for me to learn about him."

"He did so much for the Civil Rights Movement," said Adrienne Hatten, president of the Afro-Am. Society and class of 1990, "that I can not help but feel obligated to give him the recognition he deserves."

Dangerous asbestos removed from fraternities

STEVE COOK ORIENT Contributor

Have you ever run your hands across the ceiling in the magazine stacks of the library? If you have, you may have noticed the creation of a small "snow flurry" where your fingers touched.

What probably didn't attract your attention, however, were the tiny flakes of asbestos which followed the air currents into your mouth as you breathed, lodging themselves in the walls of your lungs. The very slow process, very slightly accelerated by the flakes, of the production of cancerous cells in your body probably also escaped your observation.

For smokers, the risk further increases. David Barber, head of Physical Plant who conducts the asbestos removal program at Bowdoin, warns smokers are "playing with a lit fuse with a stick of dynamite at the end."

About five years ago, this type of "friable" asbestos was found in many buildings on the Bowdoin campus, as well as in the fraternity houses.

Physical plant began a removal plan to reduce the risk of inhalation by students and staff. Since then they have removed all of the friable asbestos in poor condition found in the public areas. There are still remains of the asbestos in the steam tunnels, equipment rooms, and in a few very high places in the heating plant. Barber said there isn't much traffic in those places, and when people do go into the tunnels, they wear a full body suit and carry their own supply of oxygen. These hazardous areas are scheduled for asbestos removal this summer.

Barber added that there is asbestos remaining in Searles Hall, Hawthorne-Longfellow Library, the Visual Arts Center (VAC) and Wentworth Hall, but this asbestos does not present a threat. Searles Hall has some on the pipes, but it is in good condition. Therefore, Physical Plant has no plans for removal until the 1990's, when other renovations will be done on the building.

In the library, asbestos levels are measured every six months. The last reading, taken just before classes began this semester, measured the level at 0.005 fibers/milliliter. Although EPA standards are set at 0.2 f/ml, if levels near 0.1, Barber said that Physical Plant would take action to reduce the asbestos by either wetting it down or removing any weak spots.

The VAC, completed in 1974, contains asbestos in a sealed area, where it consequently presents no threat. Wentworth Hall too retains asbestos, but not in the friable form - it is contained in the ceiling tiles.

The fraternities have also adopted a course of action to reduce this health hazard. By last summer, four fraternities - Alpha Kappa Sigma, Alpha Rho Upsilon, Theta Delta Chi and Zeta Psi had their asbestos removed. Over this past Christmas break, Delta Kappa Epsilon, Delta Sigma, and Psi Upsilon also had the asbestos removed from their houses.

Beta Theta Pi is conducting tests around its house in the coming week to assess the urgency of removing its asbestos. Alpha Delta Phi and Chi Psi are hoping that their national corporation will deal with the matter this semester. Only Alpha Beta Phi has not had to address the issue.

Superintendent of Mechanical Services for Physical Plant, John DeWitt said the removal of asbestos is hardly a job to tackle on one's own. In fact, although there are several staff members of the college who have been trained for the job, the college and fraternities almost exclusively contract out the job to other companies.

When preparing to remove asbestos contractors seal the area to be affected and seal their own bodies with suits and oxygen tanks. They then proceed to remove the asbestos with a special vacuum. Every surface in the sealed area is vacuumed in order to get all the asbestos fibers.

Upon completion of the job, asbestos removers must take a shower, removing their body suits under the running water. Rather than allowing the asbestos to simply flow down the drain into the normal sewer systems, the shower water and the vacuumed asbestos are sent to Hamden, Maine, the site of the only treatment facility in the state. Here they are properly disposed of

WINTER • SPRING • SUMMER • FALL STUDY FOR ONE YEAR OR LESS AT OXFORD

Several Colleges of Oxford University have invited WISC to recommend qualified students to study under the tutorial system as Visiting Students or Associate Students for one year or for one or two terms. Upper Sophomore status is required, and graduate study is available.

Integrated student housing, social activities, tours offered by WISC. A special summer session is directed by WISC.

Past student evaluations available.

INTERN IN WASHINGTON SUMMER 1988

Pre-professional program: internships in Congress, the media, the White House, think tanks, etc. Related courses in Government or Journalism.

The Washington International Studies Center
Room 713A, 901 Six Street SW
Washington, DC 20024
(202) 337-9378/9379
(EO/AA)

Brunswick Oriental Restaurant

$15 orders to go

Dancing every Thursday,
Friday and Saturday nights!

72-74 Maine St. 729-1616

Sent with love, the beauty of flowers can convey the message of love this Valentine's Day with the F.T.D. Lovanote Bouquet or the F.T.D. Crystal Bow Bouquet. Both are done with fresh flowers in reusable containers.

Both bouquets and a variety of other arrangements, roses and plants for any budget are available from Pauline's Bloomers.

Please call early for prompt delivery.
WE DELIVER - WIRE SERVICE

Pauline's Bloomers

Trenton Mall, Brunswick
To order call: 725-5952
Major credit cards accepted

TYPING and WORD
PROCESSING
REPORTS, RESUMES, etc.
CALL 729-6796

1980 BMW 320i
79,000 original miles
Air Conditioning, Sunroof
AM-FM Stereo Cassette, alloys.
Asking $5995
725-4726

TYPISTS - Hundreds weekly
at home! Write: P.O. Box 17
Clark, New Jersey 07066

Part-Time -
Home Mailing Program!
Excellent income!
Detail, send self-addressed,
stamped envelope.
WEST,
Box 5877, Hulsides, N.J. 07205

CRUISE SHIPS NOW HIRING M/F

Summer & Career Opportunities
(Will Train). Excellent pay plus
world travel. Hawaii, Bahamas,
Caribbean, etc. CALL NOW:
206-736-0775 Ext.544F

A Likely Yarn
90 UNION STREET
BRUNSWICK, ME 04011
(207) 725-2147

Anniversary Sale-
10% off, storewide
from Feb 2 to Feb 20

THE
BRUNSWICK
FLOWER SHOP

729-8895
216A Maine St.
Mon.-Sat. 9:30-6

We Deliver
Wire Service

Centrally located across from Bowdoin College

TONTINE
HAIR FASHIONS
207-729-5475

visit our two stylists, Paul and Gail,
in the Tontine Mall
BOWDOIN STUDENT DISCOUNT
FOR HAIRCUTS - BRING I.D.

Interested in being a
PROCTOR?

come to an information session and find out all about PROCTORING!
Wednesday, February 3, 1988 at 4 p.m. in Maine Lounge or
Thursday, February 4, 1988 at 6 p.m. in Maine Lounge.
Applications available at info sessions
Questions? See Ana Brown, Asst. Dean of students.

Nassau/Paradise Island
CANCUN, MEXICO

"SPRING BREAK"
FEBRUARY 27 - APRIL 10, 1988

WEEKLY DEPARTURES FROM $279.00

COMPLETE PACKAGE INCLUDES:

- ROUNDTRIP AIR FROM NEW YORK, PHILADELPHIA AND BOSTON TO NASSAU/ PARADISE ISLAND AND CANCUN, MEXICO. OTHER CITIES AVAILABLE.
- ROUNDTRIP TRANSFERS FROM AIRPORT TO HOTEL.
- 7 NIGHTS HOTEL ACCOMMODATIONS.
- WELCOME RUM SHUFFLE AT PORT HOTELS (NASSAU).
- ONE HOUR RUM (NASSAU) OR TEQUILA (CANCUN) PARTY.
- THREE HOUR CRUISE WITH UNLIMITED RUM PUNCH AND ON BOARD ENTERTAINMENT (NASSAU/ PARADISE ISLAND).
- THREE BEACH PARTIES (ONE WITH FREE LUNCH) MUSIC AND ACTIVE IPH (NASSAU).
- EXCLUSIVE FREE ADMISSION TO THE PALACE, WATERLID AND THE DRUMBEAT CLUB (NASSAU).
- COLLAGE MEET PROVIDED BY THE BOWDOIN TOURIST OFFICE.
- ON LOCATION PROFESSIONAL TOUR ESCORT.

FOR MORE INFORMATION CONTACT:

AMERICAN TRAVEL SERVICES, INC.

458 GLENBROOK ROAD STAMFORD, CT. 06906

1-800-231-0113 or (203)967-3330

ORGANIZE A SMALL GROUP AND EARN A FREE TRIP!

Striking UPIU members from Jay, Maine discuss their six-month walk-out from International Paper Company in the Maine Lounge. Staff photo.

UPIU strikers bring campaign to Bowdoin

Striking United Paperworkers International Union (UPIU) members from Jay, Maine, discussed their six-month walk-out from the International Paper Co. (IP) and presented their corporate letter writing campaign to Bowdoin students Tuesday afternoon.

The campaign is directed at executives serving concurrently on the IP and other corporate boards. UPIU member Bruce Stevens hopes to get "IP back to the bargaining table." The UPIU talk at Bowdoin is part of the Brunswick/Bath stop of "Caravan '88"—a tour of striking Jay UPIU workers travelling throughout the northeast to "raise public awareness and support for the IP strikers," said Stevens.

"We have had thousands of letters go out already," said another UPIU member John Chouinard, "but we want thousands more."

Currently, UPIU members at IP mills in Mobile, Alabama; Lock Haven, Pennsylvania; Depere, Wisconsin and Menasha, Wisconsin are on strike along with the mill workers in Jay. IPIU workers in Mobile were the first to strike in March, 1987, when IP did not accept a current contract extension submitted by the local union. IP wanted the union to agree to a new contract which included personnel cutbacks.

The UPIU in Jay has been carrying out negotiations with IP since December 1986. Rejecting IP's offer—similar to the one presented to the union in Mobile—by a 97% vote on June 12, 1987, the Jay UPIU local went on strike. "The company refused to extend a successful contract in a year when they reported a $305 million profit," says Stevens.

According to Stevens, there were several reasons for the walk-out: the loss of job seniority, a Christmas shutdown in a swing shift mill where a typical worker spends 65 hours a week and 39 Sundays a year, a cut in wages and the elimination of 178 jobs.

"It's very difficult for me to cut somebody working in the mill next to me everyday for years," says UPIU member Joe Langlais. Because the mill operated at a maximum production level, says Langlais, it would be dangerous to "have already hard working people be responsible for more work than they can handle."

Negotiations with IP are currently at a stalemate, according to Chouinard, partially due the presence of replacement workers—called "strikebreakers" or "scabs"—by the striking IPIU—hired by IP to run the mill the day the union went on strike. Advertisements for replacement workers ran in local newspapers a week before the strike and now IP considers some of the replacements as permanent workers, according to Stevens.

Stevens does not believe the mill is operating safely or at a maximum production rate. He said a Standard & Poor analyst was not allowed to tour the plant. In late August, the mill released an undetermined amount of chemicals into the Androscoggin, covering the river with foam.

Chouinard says the spill was avoidable; "They [replacements] didn't know what they were doing. They should have rerouted the chemicals. Things like this have come up before. If you know what you're doing everything is fine."

TANYA WEINSTEIN
ORIENT Asst. News Editor

Last semester a mysterious male phone caller harassed the students living at Smith House.

According to Assistant Dean of Students Anna Brown, the unidentified caller repeatedly called at odd hours, asking mainly to speak to women students. Brown believes that the caller is not a Bowdoin student, because the calls have been identified as coming from off-campus.

Several students, disturbed by the calls, approached Brown with the problem. Pat Brackely '89, a resident of Smith House, reported however, that at least a week passed before the administration took the students seriously and decided to act upon the situation. Bowdoin Security performed a security audit on the house, checking all locks, doors, lighting and the general safety of the house.

Students in the house became increasingly concerned for their safety with the continuing persistence of the caller. Coupled with an attempted break into the house by a recent intruder, Brackely said many students did not feel safe at night. He himself felt that the caller might try to break into the house. However, Brown said that she did not think that the caller would enter the house.

Steps were taken to set the students living in the house at ease and to feel more comfortable. Michael Pander, head of security, spoke to all the house members. Brown said the students were advised as to how to handle the phone calls and what to do if anyone ever entered the house. She said, "We wanted the students not to be paranoid but to be aware of the situation."

Security also added safety features to the house. The front door, usually locked after midnight, now remains locked at all times, and only students with a key can enter. Peepholes were added to the doors so students can see who is at the door before they open it. Security men are also now making extra rounds past the house, and the Brunswick police are aware of the situation.

All phone calls to the house are routed through an operator so the caller can not get through directly to the students. However, according to Amy Hamilton '89, who often spends time at the house, this does not work as well as expected because students often pick up the phone.

Anonymous caller harasses
Smith
House
residents

ENTERTAINMENT

Theatrics enhance Renaissance music of Calliope

ANGELA DAIGLE
ORIENT Contributor

On Wednesday night, Calliope, a Renaissance band from New York City, appeared in concert at Kresge Auditorium.

Named for the mother of Orpheus and the Chief of the Muses, Calliope has been praised for being "the freshest breeze on the Renaissance band scene." In the past, the ensemble has appeared at New York's Alice Tully Hall, the Library of Congress in Washington, D.C., as well as in every major Renaissance festival in this country. The group has also recorded three albums entitled "Calliope Dances," "Calliope Festival" and "Bestiary," a work written for them by Peter Schickele.

All together, the members of Calliope perform on over 40 instruments, most of which date back to the Renaissance period.

The four members of Calliope include Lucy Bardo who specializes in strings and who currently is Director of the Collegium Musicum at Temple University in Philadelphia. Lawrence Benze, who plays low brass, winds, and lute, also performs with the Brooklyn Philharmonic and with the Santa Fe Opera Orchestra. A member of the St. Louis Brass and Summit Brass, Allan Dean plays high brass and winds and is presently teaching at Indiana University Bloomington. Finally, Ben Harms, who plays percussion, strings, and winds for the group, also performs with the Steve Reich Ensemble, American Ballet Theatre and the Metropolitan Opera in N.Y.C.

On the way to Bowdoin, the members of the group encountered some difficulties when their luggage was accidentally sent to Syracuse. As a result, they did without their stage costumes as well as some of their Renaissance instruments. Luckily, the Bowdoin College Music Department lent them the use of their modern instruments, such as the trombone, so that the show could go on as scheduled.

Calliope's Bowdoin College concert began with "Chomicinamento di gioia," an anonymous piece from 14th century Italy. For this piece, the musicians used the recorder, a transverse woodwind instrument with a flute-like sound, the vielle, a medieval version of a fiddle similar to today's violin, and percussion. The combination of these Renaissance instruments gave the piece a sound similar to that of present-day Indian ragas.

Next, Calliope played a group of pieces from the late 15th century "Burgundian" period. Characterized by pieces written usually for two or three instruments, the Burgundian band music is interesting for its variety of moods. Favorite Burgundian instruments include a shawn which is an outdoors instrument similar to today's oboe and a sackbut, a forerunner of today's trombone.

Calliope closed the first half of their concert with a series of Dances published by Pierre Attaignant and which are typical of the mid-16th century. The dances, probably intended for entertainment during or after an upper-class festivity, are rich in harmonies and culminate in gradually increased tempo.

In the last segment of their concert, Calliope performed Bestiary, a music theater piece. Composed by Peter Schickele in 1982, Bestiary uses the visual and aural characteristics of the instruments to ensure a narrative effect on the audience. At the same time, the members of the group act as singers and mimes as well as instrumentalists.

Set on a stage, bare except for five chairs and a few scattered instruments, Bestiary creates the song settings and narrations with texts from the Middle Ages and the Renaissance.

In Bestiary, the musicians and their instruments imitate the shape and sounds of animals in a group of musical pieces which include "Overture," "Frogs," "The Elephant," "The Hedgehog," "The Unicorn," "The Whale," "The Butterfly," "The Bee" and "Finale (The Dove)."

In each piece, the musicians act out a narration with the use of narration and their instruments. In

"The Elephant," the musicians relate the story of a lost elephant by playing the krumphorn which has a lower end curved like an elephant's trunk. "The Unicorn" tells the story of a unicorn caught flirting with a young maiden who happens to be playing the vielle in the woods. By moving from horns to cornets (woodwind instruments with turned up ends) to recorders, the performers captured the metamorphosis of a catapillar in "The Butterfly."

Members of the Bowdoin and surrounding communities enjoyed the unique sounds of Calliope. Not only was the audience pleased by the groups pleasant blending of medieval sounds, but was also amused by the musician's creative performance of the musical theater of Bestiary.

Boston ensemble performs "Balancing Act"

LIZZ MILLAN

ORIENT Asst. Ent. Editor

A strip of tape outlining a rectangle on the stage in Kresge Auditorium on Tuesday night, provided the setting for the "Balancing Act," a series of skits performed by four actors from Boston.

The scenes performed focused on the problems and effects of chemical dependency on the family. Originated in Minnesota ten years ago, the act has been presented by the Performer's Ensemble in Boston for the last four years.

The group—Maggie Steig, Kippy Goldfarb, Michael O'Brien, and Stephan Benson—was brought to Bowdoin as part of Alcohol Peer Advisors and the Inter-fraternity Council-sponsored week. "The Bowdoin Party Life...?"

The rectangle served as the center around which some of the skits revolved. It served as the playing board of a game intended to create a physical picture of the unbalance which may be created by one person's drug use.

The rectangle represented an imaginary raft which had to be kept in balance. This "raft" would sink if not balanced by the effort of the other participants. As soon as one actor stepped into the rectangle, another one had to step onto it in order to balance it. This exercise allowed the audience to observe how a person's drug use can move one from one's own center, and in the process send others off balance as well.

Another exercise used to illustrate the disruption and confusion caused by substance abuse was simultaneous monologue. All four actors delivered monologues at the same time, demonstrating the limited listening skills we possess. The frustration experienced by one who is constantly bombarded with more than one speaker was also experienced via this exercise.

tions to the issues raised was presented following the performance. This discussion also gave the audience an opportunity to voice their opinions of the skits.

The skits did raise pertinent issues, yet the manner in which some of these issues were presented was, at times, unimaginative. The "balancing act" game provided the show with a fresh idea, but it seemed silly when presented as a game people would actually play. It

French poet reads works

GENEVIEVE ANDERSON and TRISHKA WATERBURY
ORIENT Contributors

"It is so strange to write...You have to be pushed by something very strong," Marie Etienne says hesitantly in soft French. She speaks from experience, as she is one of France's leading contemporary poets. Her poetry is an evocative mix of the sensual and the visual frequently inspired by dramatic figures. On her first visit to America, Etienne read her work last Thursday night in Chase Barn.

Etienne was first published in a literary magazine in 1976. She claims it is easy to get published in general. In order to establish a reputation, however, she had to move to Paris, "because in France, if you are involved in the arts you must go to Paris."

Much of the inspiration for the content of her poems comes from theater, which she studied in Paris. She becomes interested in a character within a play, and adopts his or her voice in a poem. She is most interested in female characters, but does not limit herself to them. Often the poem is in the form of a monologue or soliloquy. It seems to her, she says, that many events which occur are inspired by fate, and she draws on these occurrences frequently. She says she was not inclined to write like anybody else because "imitation does not produce anything worthy." She admires many artists, most of whom do not write.

"In Paris one is able to build up a network of contacts and friends with similar interests. It is a terrifying and lonely prospect to write alone, but with the support of other writers my work becomes much easier," Etienne says competition helps motivate her rather than discourage her.

Writing just "came to her," Etienne says, with her new perceptions from studying theater. "It was very surrealist and subconscious, like automatic writing...I had the impression that it was somebody else who was writing through me. I wrote things I never thought I knew."

She cites an example in which she wrote a poem that included a line she had written instinctively. The line read (loosely translated): "The stone Agath with a heart of Crystal." At first, she says, she thought it was nonsense. When she showed the poem to a geologist friend of hers, he asked her how she ever knew that "Agath" did indeed have a center made up of "Crystallite." "It is almost as if in certain states of Performers strike precarious balance. Staff photo.

Many different types of scenes were depicted. Issues of drunk driving, therapy, and family problems were each covered.

"The purpose of these skits is to raise issues; we don't try to provide solutions," actor Michael O'Brien said.

A discussion of possible soluwas quite effective in depicting the physical turmoil that an individual's problem with drugs can have on an entire family.

The "Balancing Act" brought with it a number of strengths balanced with a share of weaknesses, leaving most of the audience somewhere in the middle.

She claims that in France, there is less of a distinction between male and female writers than in America. Most French women writers attempt to stay away from the "feminist" label, says Etienne, because they are afraid of not being taken seriously. Etienne does not believe that because women are stereotypically considered more openly emotional than men they make better writers. "Emotion is interesting as long as it is controlled," she says.

In her work, Etienne says she writes with a desire to complete an incomplete picture: "There has to be a feeling of something missing, that you are working towards filling in." The desire, according to her, is not to actually have a complete picture, but to constantly be striving for completeness.

Marie Etienne. Photo by Alan Harris.

Rush

(Continued from page 1)
LeRoy Greason spoke out against the IFC policy sanctioned by Lewallen. Jervis expressed disapproval of a "wet rush" in any form due to potential legal and social problems.

After discussing the IFC proposal, she made several suggestions to Lewallen which the final rush policy did not incorporate.

Jervis said of the rush proposal, "Serving alcohol to minors is illegal... Another effect of a wet rush is that it can cause students join a fraternity for the wrong reason. That's not a good thing for students."

When polled for the question of the week, Greason expressed similar views on this semester's wet rush.

The relatively trouble-free second semester rushes of the past two years provided Lewallen with justification for his sanctioning of the rush policy. Although the college normally sanctions only first semester rush said Lewallen, several houses have unofficially adopted the two semester rush system over the last two years.

Lewallen approved the IFC's "moderated rush" policy because he considered it "different from first semester (rush)."

"Clearly a first semester rush is where the college has the greatest supervision... In the past alcohol abuse has affected the new students' introduction into the community. Now, in the second semester, relatively few people are 'new'... also, 50 percent of second semester drops are upperclassmen or redtops, so I'm less concerned. They are not new to the community. I argue that the presence of alcohol at functions will have fewer destructive effects," said Lewallen.

Lewallen called himself "a realist" in approving the IFC proposal. He said introducing a second semester dry rush policy would have been artificial, because most second semester drops have been "hanging around" the house of their choice and have spent a year or more "in close membership" with house members.

"Asking them (dropping students) to not continue the same activities for two weeks somehow seems artificial."

Goldsmith agreed with Lewallen's reasoning for the sanctioning of the rush policy. She said the IFC did consider Jervis' suggestions, but decided not to alter the policy.

Lewallen acknowledged the existence of a difference of opinion between he and his co-workers, Jervis and Greason. He admitted a possible error in policy-making and said he will "take responsibility" for his decision. Despite his sanctioning of the proposal, he said he now has second thoughts. He praised the IFC, however for wanting to handle rush in a responsible fashion.

"The IFC came to me and wanted to have a formal rush and to do it responsibly... I was trying to do the right thing... (Unrecognized) second semester rush has caused me fewer headaches in the last few years than first semester rushes. What made this a problem was the IFC's desire to formalize its policy... I did commit myself to most of the proposal. The Dean (Jervis) and the President may have different views, but I'm taking responsibility. The policy will be more clear in the future, however," Lewallen said.

Lewallen voiced his approval of the "goon squad" yet pointed out the college's continuing expectation of the fraternities not to serve, purchase or provide a place for minors to drink alcohol during weekend parties.

"Party life...?"

(Continued from page 1)
NEAN has provided the channel through which a multitude of groups have convened to deal with alcohol abuse issues.

NEAN's main purpose is to promote awareness. Similarly, "The Bowdoin Party Life..." aims at awareness. The week does not focus upon the preaching of abstinence but rather the encouragement of responsibility. Goldsmith said, "We want to promote responsible drinking... you don't have to abstain... you have to know your limit and stay in control."

The APA, which hopes to increase its membership to 85 by the end of spring semester, has a number of follow-up activities to this week already in the planning stages. Besides recruitment drives and outreaches in the fraternities, the APA will sponsor theme lunches on Tuesdays at 12:30 in Coles Tower to provide forums for discussion. In addition, the APA and IFC are working together to plan an alcohol-free weekend later this spring.

The main objective of this week is not to achieve specific goals but to generate thought and discussion among the student body. As Cooley has pointed out, "Even if we don't change habits, this week has been successful because we have promoted awareness... we have started discussion... we must have awareness before we change behavioral patterns."

This week has also succeeded in bringing together a multitude of campus organizations and the faculty for the purpose of discussing a problem which affects the entire college community. Co-chairman of the APA Joe Akeley said, "The cooperation between all the organizations, the monetary support, publicity, people, attendance... it's just been an incredible response from everyone."

The organizations which have teamed together to make the "Bowdoin Party Life..." possible hope that this week will have created a lasting impression upon the student body. Whether students heed or ignore the week's messages, this week has compelled students to consider their own behavioral patterns.

Goldsmith said, "We want people to remember this week... this week should linger until next year."

Mere discussion of alcohol/drug related issues has proved a significant step forward. Dean of Students Fellow Bina Chadda points out, "There has been a heightened awareness of problems related to drugs and alcohol... 10-15 years ago on this campus you could not discuss what we've discussed this week - people would laugh... now people are coming out."

The widespread attendance of "The Bowdoin Party Life..." events itself shows that people are no longer laughing. Instead, they are starting to listen.

Give a hoot.
Don't pollute.

Forest Service, U.S.D.A.

UNIQUE HOUSING OPPORTUNITY FOR BOWDOIN STUDENTS - MALE or FEMALE

Rooms in beautiful, newly renovated lovely Colonial home very near campus. Bedrooms have charming antique pine and oak bureaus and desks, new oak beds, and large closets. Share 3 all-new stylish tile baths and lovely new contemporary kitchen with new appliances, new cabinetry, cathedral ceiling. Refinished pumpkin pine floors; natural refinished doors. Spacious, quiet and clean. Large rooms offered Single occupancy, $1400 per semester plus security deposit. All utilities included. Especially charming space for a few particularly discerning students. This is not a place for parties, etc! Care to take a look?

Call Mr. Boudette /25-8290

or please leave a message at 729-8616

The Bowdoin Restaurant and Lounge

Experience Fine Dining

Great Steaks, Veal and Fresh Seafood

Serving dinner from

5 - 9 Sunday-Thur:day

5 - 10 Friday and Saturday

Serving lunch from

11:30 - 2 Monday - Friday

115 Maine Street, Brunswick 725-2314

FRIDAY- Happy Hour 5-7, food and drink specials. 10 p.m.- Tom Acousti
SATURDAY-Special Winter's Weekend hours: 1-3 p.m. Specials!

76 UNION STREET BRUNSWICK CORSICAN

The Corsican Restaurant welcomes Bowdoin students back. We are open 11-9 daily, closed Tuesdays, and are open Sundays 4-9. Jan. 31 - Super Bowl Sunday Special. call for details - 729-8117

729-8117

the Samuel Newman House
Circa 1821
BEHIND COLES TOWER
7 South St., Brunswick, Me. 04011
For Reservations, call (207) 729-6959

BED & BREAKFAST

BIG RED Q PRINTING
next to the College

- stationery
- resumes
- posters
- newsletters

212E Maine Street
Brunswick
729-4840

CALENDAR

WINTER'S WEEKEND
FRIDAY, JANUARY 29
 7:00 p.m. — Men's hockey vs. Norwich

8:00 p.m. — Men's basketball vs. Norwich
 9:00 p.m. — Bonfire with hot cider and doughnuts on the Infirmary Quad

9:30 p.m. — Performance by comedian Barry Crimmins, in Main Lounge, Moulton Union.
SATURDAY, JANUARY 30
 11:30 a.m.-3:00 p.m. — Winter games on the Quad.

1:00 p.m. — Women's basketball vs. Babson.

3:00 p.m. — Men's hockey vs. Middlebury.

3:00 p.m. — Judging of snow sculptures.

3:30 p.m. — Men's basketball vs. Middlebury.

5:00 p.m. — Theme dinner in Wentworth Hall.

8:30 p.m.-12:30 a.m. — Dance in Wentworth Hall with music by The Boyz, and a Heat Miser look-alike contest.

MARTIN LUTHER KING JR. CELEBRATION

FRIDAY, JANUARY 29
 10:00-10:30 a.m. — Martin Luther King Jr. memorial services in the chapel.

12:00-12:45 p.m. — Informal lunch with Gerald Talbot, former Maine State legislator and former president of NAACP-Portland, in Mitchell West, Wentworth Hall.

12:55 p.m. — Release of balloons in honor of Martin Luther King Jr. on the Quad.

2:00-2:30 p.m. — A talk by Gerald Talbot, former Maine State legislator and former president of NAACP-Portland, in Daggett Lounge, Wentworth Hall.

3:00-4:00 p.m. — Panel/ Discussion on "Civil Rights: Past and Present". The panel includes a Black American, a Native American, an Hispanic American, and a Franco-American. Held in Daggett Lounge, Wentworth Hall.

MUSIC

FRIDAY, JANUARY 29
 10:00 p.m.-midnight — Performance by Tom Acousti, pianist, in The Pub.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 1
 12:30 p.m. — Music at Noon-and-a-Half features Tim Smith on the clarinet, in Room 101, Gibson Hall.

EXHIBITIONS

"Max Beckmann: Master-prints": Installed in the Bowdoin Museum's Temporary Exhibition Gallery, the exhibit features 45 prints, including drypoints, woodcuts, and lithographs by Beckmann (1884-1950), one of the foremost masters of German expressionism. The show includes a number of works from the early 1920's, Beckmann's most productive period as a graphic artist. It will run through March 20.

"Martha Diamond: Paintings": Exhibited in the Bowdoin Museum's 20th-Century Gallery, this is Diamond's first major exhibition outside of New York City.

An exhibition of color landscapes by Brunswick photographer Frank Brockman will be on display through February 29 in the Lancaster Lounge, Moulton

Union.

"Martin Luther King: A Retrospect 1963-1968": A Civil Rights pictorial exhibit on Friday, January 29, 9:00 a.m.-7:00 p.m., at the Afro-American Center Library. Made available compliments of the Schomburg Library of New York.

MOVIES

FRIDAY, JANUARY 29
 7:30 and 10:00 p.m. — All That Jazz: In recognition of Drug Awareness Week, two films including effects of substance abuse will be shown. Tonight, the exciting vitality of All That Jazz will dance across the silver screen. Starring Roy Scheider, this semi-autobiographical film is from Bob Fosse, the director of Cabaret and

Wall Street, showing at 6:45 and 9:00 p.m.

Broadcast News, showing at 6:45 and 9:00 p.m.

Three Men and a Baby, showing at 7:10 and 9:10 p.m.

Couch Trip, showing only at 7:15 p.m.

Throw Momma From the Train, showing only at 9:15 p.m.

OUTING CLUB
SUNDAY, JANUARY 31
 Cross-Country Night-Ski: Ski under the full moon on the backwoods trails in Bowdoinham. Participants will leave by 6:30 p.m. and should expect to return about 10:00 p.m. If interested, contact Pat Coughlin.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 5
 Daytime Ski Outing: A trek is

"Frau mit Kerze," a woodcut by Max Beckmann on exhibit in the Bowdoin Museum of Art.

Lenny. This winner of five Academy Awards should be a great show.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 30
 7:30 and 10:00 p.m. — Sid and Nancy: Another great show follows on Saturday night, continuing in the substance abuse theme. The powerful modern tragedy of the Sex Pistols' Sid Vicious and his girlfriend Nancy Spungen will be shown. This week's movies are co-sponsored by the BFVS and the APAs.

ALL WEEK

Evening Star Cinema (Tontine Mall)

Dancers, showing at 7:00 and 9:05 p.m.

Cinemas Four (Cooks Corner)

CALL WILBUR'S CANDY FOR BALLOON DELIVERY

Come in for all your Valentine Favorites!

Valentine Candy Valentine Pops
 Heart Shaped Tins Chocolate Moose

Tontine Fine Candies

Traditional & Unique Candies
 Open Extended Hours for Valentine's

WILBUR'S CANDY TONTINE FINE CANDIES
 13 Bow Street Tontine Mall
 Freeport, ME Brunswick, ME
 865-6129 / 865-4071 729-4462

LOOKOUT POINT HOUSE

Harpwell, Maine

(207) 833-5509

WINTER SPECIAL

2 days - 2 nights

MAP plan- double occupancy -

2 people - $150.00

or

Rooms by the month

on the sea

eight miles from Bowdoin

Winter's Weekend '88

Fire & ICE

Friday, January 29

7:00 p.m. Snow variety hockey vs. Norwich
 8:00 Women's variety basketball vs. Norwich
 8:30 Bowdoin vs. Bates of South (cont.) with hot cider and doughnuts
 10:15 Political satire Battle of Britain appearing in Savage Honor in the Pub with Tom Acousti

Saturday, January 30

11:30 a.m. Activities on the Quad: Hibernian, Celtic
 1:00 p.m. Bowdoin vs. Bates, 1st Year and Bowdoin vs. Bates
 2:00 p.m. Bowdoin vs. Bates (cont.)
 3:00 Women's variety basketball vs. Middlebury
 4:00 Snow variety hockey vs. Middlebury
 5:00 Victor Shustov vs. Bowdoin 1988
 6:00 p.m. Dinner at Bowdoinham, Bowdoinham
 11:00 a.m. The Boys and a Fire Watch book after concert planned from 2 to 4:00 p.m. on the trail on River Road, which falls within Brunswick's famous ski area along the Androscoggin. An Outing Club Van will drive to the snow-packed trails. Sign up at the OC office.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 6

Acadia Park Trip: At 7:00 a.m., a group will depart for Acadia National Park prepared to cross-country ski, or hike up around Cadillac Mountain, depending on snow conditions. Either way, the trip will take you through a beautiful island park that combines outstanding mountain and ocean views. It is an overnight trip so those participating won't return until 6:00 p.m., Sunday. Cost is $5 for members.

THE "CLUBBUSTERS" $3.99 EACH PLUS POSTAGE

NO CLUB HASSLES!
NO CLUB GIMMICKS!

USE THIS PAGE OR A PHOTOCOPY AS YOUR ORDER FORM. MARK AN "X" IN BOX NEXT TO YOUR SELECTIONS.

CUT OUT AND MAIL ENTIRE PAGE

WHITESNAKE GEFEN QHS 24099 (9 98)	WHITESNAKE SLIDE IT IN
WHITNEY HOUSTON ARISTA AL 8405 (9 98)	WHITNEY RADIO K.A.O.S.
DEF LEPPARD MERCURY 830 875 1/POL YGRAM	HYSTERIA DARK SIDE OF THE MOON
PINK FLOYD COLUMBIA OC 40599	A MOMENTARY LAPSE OF REASON ONE WAY HOME
SOUNDTRACK RCA 8408 1 R (9 98)	DIRTY DANCING NO PROTECTION
SOUNDTRACK SLASH 25405/WARNER BROS. (9 98)	LA BAMBA BEVERLY HILLS COP II
JOHN COUGAR JUBILEE CAMP MERCURY 832 455 1/POL YGRAM	THE LONGSOME JUBILEE ALPHABET CITY
U2 ISLAND NOSA ATLANTIC (9 98)	THE JOSHUA TREE BABYLON AND ON
HEART CAPITOL P 12548 (9 98)	BAD ANIMALS TOP GUN
DANNY WILSON VIRGIN 90556 ATLANTIC (9 98)	MEET DANNY WILSON BIG GENERATOR
RITCHIE VALENS RHINO DEL FIRM P 70178 CAPITOL (9 98)	THE BEST OF RITCHIE VALENS GO ON
RUSH MERCURY 832 464 1/POL YGRAM	HOLD YOUR FIRE ELECTRIC
SOUNDTRACK-MADONNA SIRE 25611/WARNER BROS. (9 98)	WHO'S THAT GIRL WENDY AND LISA
FLEETWOOD MAC WARNER BROS. 25471 (9 98)	TANGO IN THE NIGHT TIFFANY
R.E.M. IRS 42055 RCA (9 98)	DOCUMENT LICENSED TO ILL
GRATEFUL DEAD ARISTA AL 8452 (9 98)	IN THE DARK STRANGEWAYS, HERE WE COME
EUROPE EPIC 6042241/E.P.A.	THE FINAL COUNTDOWN FASTER PUSSYCAT
KENNY G ARISTA AL 8 8427 (9 98)	DUOTONES KISS ME, KISS ME, KISS ME
LISA LISA & CULT JAM COLUMBIA FC 40477	SPANISH FLY INTO THE FIRE
AEROSMITH GEFEN QHS 24162 (9 98)	PERMANENT VACATION KEEP YOUR DISTANCE
ANITA BAKER ELETTRA 60444 (9 98)	RAPTURE BANGIN'
GREAT WHITE CAPITOL ST 12565 (9 98)	ONCE BITTEN BACK IN THE HIGH-LIFE
KISS MERCURY 832 626 1/POL YGRAM	CRAZY NIGHTS GRACELAND
SOUNDTRACK ATLANTIC 61767 (9 98)	LOST BOYS SO
MOTLEY CRUE ELETTRA 60725 (9 98)	GIRLS, GIRLS, GIRLS BEST OF THE DOORS
THE CARS ELETTRA 60747 (9 98)	DOOR TO DOOR A LETTER FROM ST. PAUL
HUEY LEWIS & THE NEWS CHRYSALIS OV 41534	FORE! CONTROL
RICHARD MARX EMI-MANHATTAN ST 53049 (9 98)	RICHARD MARX CROWDED HOUSE
BON JOVI MERCURY 830264 1/POL YGRAM	SLIPPERY WHEN WET CROWN REAPER
EXPOSE ARISTA AL 8441 (9 98)	EXPOSURE ROCK YOU TO HELL
CUTTING CREW VIRGIN 90573 ATLANTIC (9 98)	BROADCAST LIFE AS WE KNOW IT
GENESIS ATLANTIC 81641 (9 98)	INVISIBLE TOUCH JONATHAN BUTLER
POISON VIRGIN ST 12523/CAPITOL (9 98)	LOOK WHAT THE CAT DRAGGED IN JONATHAN BUTLER
CINDERELLA MERCURY 830076 1/POL YGRAM	NIGHT SONGS SENTIMENTAL HYGIENE
BODEANS SLASH 25429/REPRISE (9 98)	OUTSIDE LOOKING IN DARKLANDS
PET SHOP BOYS EMI-MANHATTAN 46592 (9 98)	ACTUALLY
BILLY IDOL CHRYSALIS OV 41620	VITAL IDOL
SUZANNE VEGA ADM SP 5136 (9 98)	SOLITUDE STANDING
NAJEE EMI-MANHATTAN P 1724 (9 98)	NAJEE'S THEME
DAVID BOWIE EMI-MANHATTAN P 17267 (9 98)	NEVER LET ME DOWN
SPYRO GYRA MCA 42046 (9 98)	STORIES WITHOUT WORDS
W.A.S.P. CAPITOL CLT 48053 (9 98)	LIVE IN THE RAW
BAHAMAMAMA LONDON 828 061 1/POL YGRAM	WOW
PRINCE PAMEL PAMEL 25577/WARNER BROS. (15 98)	SIGN 'O' THE TIMES
WHITNEY HOUSTON ARISTA AL 8 8212 (9 98)	WHITNEY HOUSTON
GLORIA ESTEFAN & MIAMI SOUND MACHINE EPIC OC 40769/E.P.A.	LET IT LOOSE
38 SPECIAL ADM 3910 (9 98)	BEST OF 38 SPECIAL-"FLASHBACK"
MADONNA SIRE 25442/WARNER BROS. (9 98)	TRUE BLUE
SOUNDTRACK MCA 6214 (9 98)	MOONLIGHTING
ECHO AND THE BUNNYMEN SIRE 75557/WARNER BROS. (9 98)	ECHO AND THE BUNNYMEN
SWING OUT SISTER MERCURY 832 213 1/POL YGRAM	IT'S BETTER TO TRAVEL
SAMMY HAGAR GEFEN QHS 24144 (9 98)	I NEVER SAID GOODBYE
DEBBIE GIBSON ATLANTIC 61780 (9 98)	OUT OF THE BLUE
WHITESNAKE GEFEN QHS 4018 (9 98)	SLIDE IT IN
ROGER WATERS COLUMBIA FC 40795	RADIO K.A.O.S.
PINK FLOYD HARVEST SMAS 1163 CAPITOL (9 98)	DARK SIDE OF THE MOON
HOOTERS COLUMBIA OC 40659	ONE WAY HOME
STARSHIP GRUNT 6413 1/POL YGRAM	NO PROTECTION
SOUNDTRACK MCA 6207 (9 98)	BEVERLY HILLS COP II
ABC MERCURY 832 391 1/POL YGRAM	ALPHABET CITY
SQUEEZE ADM SP 5161 (9 98)	BABYLON AND ON
SOUNDTRACK COLUMBIA SC 40323	TOP GUN
YES ATCO 90522/ATLANTIC (9 98)	BIG GENERATOR
M.R. MISTER RCA 6276 1 R (9 98)	GO ON
THE CULT BEGGAR'S BANQUET/SIRE 25555/WARNER BROS. (9 98)	ELECTRIC
WENDY AND LISA COLUMBIA FC 40842	WENDY AND LISA
TIFFANY MCA 5793 (9 98)	TIFFANY
BEASTIE BOYS DEF JAM FC 40238/COLUMBIA	LICENSED TO ILL
THE SMITHS SIRE 25448/WARNER BROS. (9 98)	STRANGEWAYS, HERE WE COME
FASTER PUSSYCAT ELETTRA 60730 (9 98)	FASTER PUSSYCAT
THE CURE ELETTRA 60737 (13 98)	KISS ME, KISS ME, KISS ME
BRYAN ADAMS ADM 3907 (9 98)	INTO THE FIRE
CURIOUSITY KILLED THE CAT MERCURY 832 025 1/POL YGRAM	KEEP YOUR DISTANCE
THE OUTFIELD COLUMBIA OC 40619	BANGIN'
STEVE WINWOOD ISLAND 25448/WARNER BROS. (9 98)	BACK IN THE HIGH-LIFE
PAUL SIMON WARNER BROS. 25447 (9 98)	GRACELAND
PETER GABRIEL GEFEN QHS 34088 (9 98)	SO
THE DOORS ELETTRA 60345 (12 98)	BEST OF THE DOORS
THE SILENCERS RCA 6442 1 R (9 98)	A LETTER FROM ST. PAUL
JANET JACKSON ADM SP 3905 (9 98)	CONTROL
CROWDED HOUSE CAPITOL ST 12485 (9 98)	CROWDED HOUSE
GRIM REAPER RCA 6290 1 R (9 98)	ROCK YOU TO HELL
RED SPEEDWAGON EPIC FC 40444/E.P.A.	LIFE AS WE KNOW IT
JONATHAN BUTLER JIVE/RCA 1032 1/POL YGRAM	JONATHAN BUTLER
WARREN ZEVON VIRGIN 90603 ATLANTIC (9 98)	SENTIMENTAL HYGIENE
THE JESUS AND MARY CHAIN WARNER BROS. 25636 (9 98)	DARKLANDS

We Are Not A Club !
WE ONLY SELL CASSETTES!! WE ACCEPT
PERSONAL CHECKS OR MONEY ORDERS
POSTAGE & HANDLING: ALL ORDERS MUST INCLUDE
THREE DOLLARS & FIFTY CENTS (3.50). NO MATTER HOW
LARGE OR SMALL THE ORDER. ALL ORDERS SHIPPED
FIRST CLASS MAIL. TAPES ARE 100% GUARANTEED

NAME _____
ADDRESS _____
CITY _____ STATE _____ ZIP _____

MAKE CHECKS PAYABLE TO:
Students Publishing
PO BOX 4649
FORT LAUDEDALE,
FLORIDA 33338

$3.99 x = _____
CATALOGUE (1.00)
POSTAGE & HANDLING $3.50
TOTAL ENCLOSURE

☐ Yes! Please send me you 1987 catalog with over 7000 titles. I have enclosed $1.00 extra for postage.

SPORTS

Polar Bears drop in ECAC standings

Mike Botelho

ERIC PALMQUIST
ORIENT Circulation Manager

Superbowl Expectations

I'm hoping for something different this season.

Each year I've stocked up on the finest selection of pre-game, during-the-game and post-game snacks ranging from such delicacies as Frito brand corn chips and Wisconsin cheddar cheese to Wise potato chips and Slim Jim beef sticks, with an always ready supply of Tuborg gold. (Roommate John has the homemade brew stored away in the closet, just in case.) In addition to their individual statistical data, I've absorbed crucial and highly relevant background information about every participant—the names and ages of their close relatives, pets and neighbors, their favorite gourmet dishes, most hated Shakespearean villains, favorite board games, and their most awkward moments in grammar school. I've picked up some trivial tidbits as well. I've carefully prepared myself psychologically for what is always a long-awaited event, purged my mind of all extemporaneous thoughts and concerns, concentrating on nothing else but the brutal confrontation at hand. I do not, in any way, plan to deviate from this traditional ritual described above. However, I do hope that the central event demanding such preparatory activities will differ from previous years.

That central event to which I refer is the Super Bowl, which has customarily been a super bore. Especially, over the past five years, the results of Super Bowl contests have been truly forgettable. They have displayed the absolute domination of one team over another.

Although last year, Denver led the NY Giants 10-9, at halftime, the NFC Champs came roaring back, transforming what was once a close game into a blowout. Speaking of blowouts, what Patriot fan can forget the Chicago Bears' humiliating 46-10 drubbing of New England in 1986? Remember in Super Bowl XIX when the San Francisco destroyed Miami by 22 points or when the Raiders pummeled the Redskins by 29 in Super Bowl XVIII? I didn't think so.

Despite a generally lackluster history, the Super Bowl has had some shining moments: a cocky, self-assured Joe Namath leading the AFL Jets to a stunning 16-7 victory over the heavily favored Colts in Super Bowl III, the acrobatic exploits of Pittsburgh's Lynn Swann (4 receptions, 161 yards) in his team's 21-17 defeat of the Dallas Cowboys, and Washington's eccentric running back John Riggins, barreling over Miami for a record-breaking 166 yards in a 27-17 win in Super Bowl XVII.

Over its highly celebrated twenty-one year existence, the Super Bowl has often failed to live up to its lofty expectations. After two full weeks of pre-game hype,

(Continued on page 12)

Hockey is a rough sport, requiring total effort and concentration at all times. One mistake can lose a game. If a team is not mentally prepared they can be beaten on any night. Such was the case with the overworked Polar Bears, who had played six games before the start of the semester and two over the weekend, and therefore stumbled Tuesday against the Salem State Vikings, 5-2.

Coach Terry Meagher pinpointed the problem. "I think in the last couple of games we were a little tired. We played a lot of games in a short period, but the effort has been good and I am looking forward to a good stretch run."

The Polar Bears did strike first on a goal by Mark Smyth, but then Salem State took over. They scored twice in eleven seconds at the end of the first period for a 3-1 lead, then netted the first score of the second stanza, Jim Pincock, who has been playing excellent hockey of late, tried to revive the Bears with a late goal, but the Vikings held on.

The loss can be traced to the past weekend's games, which were unexpectedly tough. On Friday night the Ephraim of Williams shot out to a quick 3-0 lead, silencing a packed house at Dayton Arena. They did not silence the band, however, which was threatened with a penalty for playing during the action, forcing them to vocalize their notes.

Pincock brought the fans and his team back into the game, however, with two goals in two and a half minutes, and Tom Aldrich knotted the score to begin the third period. It looked as if the Bears were headed into overtime when Johansson found the net on a slap shot for the 4-3 victory.

Carrie Drake '91 initiates Bowdoin fast break in impressive win against UNE. Photo by Bonnie Berryman.

Women's basketball shines

TOD DILLON
ORIENT Asst. Sports Editor

Beginning the 1988 portion of the season in the same manner that they ended 1987's, the women's basketball team has upped their record to 10-1 and are currently riding a 9 game winning streak. As of late the Bears have had to deal with a grueling schedule but it has not seemed to cause a demise in their playing level.

On Friday night Colby-Sawyer

Tom Aldrich '88 goes for a rebound in front of Holy Cross cage. Photo by Lori Bodwell.

Saturday would prove to be even tougher, as the Crusaders from Holy Cross came to Dayton with a mission of victory. They sandwiched goals by Aldrich and Paul Nelson with tallies of their own, then took the lead midway through the second period with a textbook 3 on 2 rush. It looked like the teams would go to the locker room that way, but John Ashe scored his first goal of the year with just twenty seconds to play to tie it up.

The teams exchanged goals in the third period, with goalie Steve Janas making a series of spectacular saves as time ran out, to send the game into overtime. It was there that Steve Ilkos scored his team leading 17th goal to win it for Bow-doin, 5-4.

Over break, while most of us were hitting the slopes, the bars, or just the bed, the Polar Bears traveled to far and exotic places to do battle with enemy icers. The first trip was to Rochester, New York, to play a pair of games with R.I.T. The Bears managed to overcome travel difficulties to take the first game 7-4, but lost the second penalty filled contest 5-2, as Janas suffered his first ever ECAC loss despite making 41 saves.

It was then off to Boston to try to black out the tough Beacons of U-Mass 'Boston. Bowdoin played close for two periods, then blinded the Beacons with three third period goals, the game winner coming from Steve Thornton, his 50th career goal. Brad Raboritor turned a way 25 shots to preserve the 5-3 victory and send the Bears to the Forester Classic in Chicago with high hopes.

The Polar Bears entered the tournament as three time champs, and proved their might with an 11-1 win over Augsburg College. Johansson put in four goals as the Bears scored a record seven times in the second period to put the game away. They then won the tournament the next day with a 9-1 trouncing of Middlebury. Eight players scored for the Bears, who once again took control in the second period, scoring five times.

They then had to face their toughest opponent of the year, the Warriors of Merrimack. The Warri-

(Continued on page 12)

Grapplers tangle with foes

MATT SAMUELSON
ORIENT Staff

Wrestling. What first comes to mind? Sweat, blood, muscle and inch thick foam mats. It is a competition unsurpassed since the wild and somewhat twisted but nevertheless glorious days of the Greco-Roman empires, and what sick competition it is.

This is not a sport for the passive temperament. It is for angered, hell-bent individuals who readily answer to the age-old challenge of human physical domination. Such gladiators of the terra foama know no bounds.

It is, however, a sport to be given due respect and admiration as was evident in this past Wednesday's match against the University of Massachusetts (Boston).

U Mass won the match 33 to 12 but that score does not tell the entire story. In a number of individual competitions Bowdoin was seconds away from point victories when U Mass pulled out an extra burst of strength and pinned Bowdoin for a victory.

Bowdoin freshman, Pat Horgan, wrestling in the 160 weight class, can painfully attest to this. He dominated his U Mass opponent 8 to 5 until the last 25 seconds of the third period in which U Mass performed a swift reversal and won the contest by a pin.

Bowdoin wrestlers Bruce Campbell and Jeff Kent showed rare form and crushed their opponents mercilessly. Campbell, '90, wrestled the 177 weight class and ruled over his U Mass opponent finishing him off with a score of 7 to 2.

Kent, '89, wrestling in the 190 weight class entered the ring hungry for blood and completely shut out his U Mass match 6 to 0.

Campbell and Kent had both taken on Divisions 1, 2 and 3 in a tournament at MIT last weekend both emerging from the bloody heap in fourth place overall.

Next week the real contest will be held at Worcester Polytechnical Institute. According to Bowdoin coach Bill Hale, this will be the toughest match up the Polar Bears will see this season.

Bowdoin women's swim team wins decisively over Amherst and Williams. Photo by Alan Harris.

Men sink, women swim

JON DEVINE
ORIENT Staff

Since their return from Puerto Rico during the semester break, the men's and women's swimming teams have faced stiff competition, squaring off against such swimming powerhouses as Amherst and Williams.

The women, an incredible success story this season, prevailed in both contests, though favored to lose to each of their meets to stronger opponents. The men, unfortunately, lost both times, but swam so well against the two teams that Coach Charlie Butt expects to be challenging for the New England Division III Championships here at Bowdoin on March 5-7.

In the women's meet against Williams on Saturday, victory was up for grabs until the final two events, in which Bowdoin failed to win. Coach Butt said, "we needed a 1-2-4 finish in the 200-yard individual medley to even remain in contention." Bowdoin was equal to the task, finishing 1-2-3 to take the lead, a lead they preserved with a great swim in the final event.

Standouts for the women this week included Sarah Bullock and Jane Phillips (who each achieved personal bests in the 1000-yard freestyle), Becky Palmer, Amy Wakeman, and Holly Clayborn.

For the men, Saturday's contest was not quite so momentous, as they lost in a meet that was hard-fought by both squads. "Williams," said Coach Butt, "was simply a stronger team," and he remained extremely "pleased" with the way the men swam.

Swimming well for the Bears were: Andy Auerbach (who surpassed his previous personal bests in both the Amherst and Williams meets), and Tom Francouer, who swam extremely well in two sprint events, taking first in both against Williams.

Skaters have mixed success

TONY JACCACI
ORIENT Staff

The puck is starting to drop favorably for the women's varsity hockey team as the Polar Bears won three games last week while only dropping one. Coach Robert Jones feels that the team is beginning to come together and form a strong unit. He stated that the "passing is excellent as well as the movement away from the puck." The Black and White do not play again until after Christmas break when they travel to MIT.

When Bowdoin entered the Colby invitational tournament last week with an 0-2 record, the team was hoping to reverse its past misfortunes. In the first game on Friday, Bowdoin faced MIT and beat the visiting squad by a score of 5-1. Bowdoin totally dominated this game from the first face-off as the passing was quick and accurate. Sheila Carol (8 goals on the weekend) played especially well on offense while freshman Laura Folk was shining on defense.

The Polar Bears played two games the following day and in the first game, Bowdoin crushed Boston College by a score of 9-0. The Black and White, dominated the game and executed their game plan to perfection. In fact, BC did not have a shot on net during the entire contest. Lynn Mansin turned in an excellent day on defense for the Bears.

The next foe in the tournament was Boston University who fell by a score of 6-0. This game was perhaps the finest match of the tournament for the Bears as everything seemed to click. Once again Sheila Carol continued her scoring onslaught as she relentlessly peppered the BU goal. When the tournament ended, Bowdoin found itself in a three-way tie for first place with Colby and UVM but did not take home the blue ribbon because of a goal-difference ratio.

The following Sunday Bowdoin came home to host the Bulldogs of Yale in a tough 6-1 loss. The team was exhausted from the weekend tournament and after Yale went up 5-1 after two quick goals in the third period, the Bears found the opposition to be too much. Coach Jones stated that the frustrating thing was the fact that "we were a better team and if we had played them on Friday instead of Sunday, we could have won."

Overall, the weekend was a success for the team as they were "saturated in hockey" which coach Jones feels helped the team finally come together. The Polar Bears do not play for six weeks until they travel south to face MIT.

Hockey

(Continued from page 11)

ors had won 18 games playing a Division I schedule, and they pushed Janas to the limit immediately, blasting at him 27 times in the first period alone. He turned away 25 of them, however, allowing the Polar Bears to tie the score on goals by Kevin Powers and Ilkos. Merrimack proved to be too much, though, as they scored four times to take a 6-2 victory.

This is another big weekend for the Polar Times, who play the Norwich Cadets tonight and Middlebury again on Saturday. Both games will be broadcast on WBOR.

ECAC Standings (as of 1/24)

EAST	WEST
Merrimack	Elmira
Norwich	Plattsburgh
Bowdoin	Oswego
Babson	R.I.T.

Botelho

(Continued from page 11)

the Super Bowl attains a billing so grand and exalted that it can not hope to fulfill such high prospects. Without question, Super Bowl XXII appears to be a very equal matchup (Las Vegas picks Denver by 3 points.) Both the Broncos and the Redskins are playing their best football in what has been a very unusual NFL season. Yet, neither of these is as dominating as the two previous Super Bowl champs, the Giants of 1986 or the Bears of 1985. In the AFC Championship, Denver held off a gutsy comeback bid by the Cleveland Browns (0, woe to Ernie Byrner) to win 38-31 and clinch a place in the California sun. Washington, much like Denver, halted a potential game-tying drive by the underdog Minnesota Vikings at the goal line to preserve a 17-10 victory. Although, on paper, Super Bowl XXII promises to be a close, competitive contest, appearances have proved to be very deceiving come Super Bowl time. Indifferent to which team is the ultimate victor, this writer would like to see a game whose outcome is not decided five minutes into the second half.

Perhaps, in a season where construction workers and taxi drivers battled with the likes of Steve Largent and Andre Tippett and where a well-known hobbyist, Bo Jackson, made a big hit in the Raider backfield, another surprise may arise in the NFL - a truly super Super Bowl! Perhaps, this Sunday a game will be played meriting all the pre-game hoopla, press and media attention which it actually attracts. Perhaps, this game will go down to the wire, with time running out, fans, coaches and TV spectators at their feet in anticipation, Elway marching down the field, the game's outcome riding on one final play...

And if not, there is always Calgary and the Winter Olympics.

(Prediction: In my opinion, John Elway is the key to this game. As Elway goes, so go the Broncos. His athletic prowess, instincts and slick maneuverability should keep him away from Mann, Manley and Company and give him ample time to throw bullets to his fine corps of receivers. The Redskins are tough, and Joe Gibbs is one of the best in the business. However, Elway has led the Broncos to victory all season long, and I truly believe this is his year. The magic of Elway will prevail, Denver by 6.)

America the Beautiful.

Give a hoot.
Don't pollute.

Forest Service, U.S.D.A.

Budget

(Continued from page 3)
raises as in most years. The increases are based on comparisons with salaries at other colleges and on individual merit.

Woodall would not compare this year's raises to previous years but did say the salaries for entry-level positions are "not as competitive as we (the administration) would want them to be."

The budget also includes salaries for several new faculty, notably in the geology and physics department and a new director of personnel.

The budget will include funds to double the number of proctors in college dormitories. Woodall and Quivey said the idea was received "warmly" and unanimously agreed on by the committee.

The stock market's decline at the end of last year, during which Bowdoin lost an estimated $20 million during the months of September and October, will not affect this year's budget, Woodall said.

Were the decline to continue

Bowdoin's financial position would be weakened, but the treasurer's office is not treating last October's stock market plummet as an indication of further decline in the market. "None of us believe that is the case," Woodall said.

The Executive Committee of the Governing Boards will review the budget next week before it is given final consideration by the Governing Boards on March 4 where they will vote on its final approval.

CROSS COUNTRY SKIS MORE OLYMPIC MEDALS THAN ANY OTHER SKI!

adidas

ADIDAS Comp Skater Package $239.99

*169.99 *components equal $300

ADIDAS Citizens Skater Package $179.99

*179.99 *components equal $300

JARVINEN Basic Package $99.99 *$89.99

*components equal $140

SPORTS

TOPSHAM FAIR MALL
(207) 729-1800

Open 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Mon-Sat Sunday afternoon, noon to 5 p.m.

SPRING BREAK
NASSAU/PARADISE ISL AND
from $279.00

Package Includes: Roundtrip Air,
Transfer, 7 Nights Hotel, Beach
Parties, Free Lunch, Cruise, Free
Admission to Nightclubs, Taxes
and more!

Cancun Packages Also Available
Organize a small group-earn a
free trip. Call A.T.S.

1-800-231-0113 or 203-967-3330

CORONA BEER

IMPORTED FROM MEXICO
$5.55 six $22.00 case add tax and deposit to each
NOW AVAILABLE!

Basketball

(Continued from page 11)
sisted in the effort by the rest of the junior trio; Stephanie Caron added 16 points and Nicky Comeau tossed in 10. Sue Ingram and Eileen Carter each added 6 to the rout.

Bowdoin's ninth win, at the expense of Middlebury College, began inauspiciously with the Bears holding a five-point lead at half. The second half proved to be a different story as the Polar Bears came alive. Sparked by Ingram and Lemieux the women pulled away in strong fashion. As she has been doing often, Lemieux was the leading scorer with 22 points. 12 of those came in the final 20 minutes of play. The three C's; Comeau, Caron, and Carter, aided in the victory with 14, 8, and 6 points respectively.

Returning to Brunswick to play on Monday night the Bears wasted no time in dispatching UNE. Comeau led the onslaught with a game high 22 points as Bowdoin went out to an early lead and never was challenged. Lemieux tallied 17 points, Caron 11 points and 5 assists, and Ingram kicked in 7 points while hauling down 11 rebounds. Also in on the scoring for the Bears were Bigelow with 8, Carter with 4 and Drake with 3.

On Thursday the women put their winning streak on the line against Husson College, who are carrying a 10-3 record into the contest. Unfortunately the game took place after the paper went to press so the results were not available in time. However, if the women continue to play at the same level the streak should be assured.

Eric Gans blasts out of the blocks and goes on to win the 55 meter hurdles. Photo by Lori Bodwell.

Track outdistances Colby

DAVE NUTE
ORIENT Staff

The Men's Indoor Track Team squared off at home last Saturday in a tri-team meet with Colby College and the University of New Hampshire. The new semester brought with it many individual successes, but in the end UNH claimed victory with a team score of 88 points. Bowdoin scored 49 points to place second, beating Colby by 18 points.

Individual bests abounded for the Polar Bear squad. David Novaria placed first in the long jump with a jump of twenty-one feet, three inches. Eric Gans won the 55 meter hurdles in a quick 7.8 seconds, followed by Rob McCabe's 1 minute 9.1 second dash to victory in the 500 meter event. And to complete the field events, Kevin O'Keefe won the high jump at 6 feet, and Damon Guterman vaulted into the winners circle after soaring 13 feet in the air.

The best race of the day, perhaps the best of the year, according to track Coach Slovenski, was to follow. In the 400 meter relay, the Bowdoin team of Polikoff, Marcello, Noel and McCabe ran a flawless race. With one perfect handoff after another, the Bowdoin squad stayed neck and neck with the UNH team. After falling slightly behind in the third leg of the race, Noel handed the baton to Rob McCabe. With a burst of speed, McCabe came from behind to win the race by only .1 (one tenth) of a second, for an overall time of 3 minutes, 38.8 seconds.

Tonight the Bears are in Boston to face the ever impressive squad from M.I.T..

STOWE TRAVEL

MID COAST MAINE'S MOST COMPLETE TRAVEL AGENCY

A TRAVELERS NATIONAL NETWORK AGENCY
■ GROUP TRAVEL SPECIALISTS ■ BUSINESS ACCOUNTS
■ INCENTIVE TRAVEL ■ CRUISES ■ AMTRAK ■ AIRLINES
■ VCR CASSETTE TRAVEL LIBRARY ■ VACATION PACKAGES
■ GREYHOUND ■ WESTERN UNION
■ $150,000 AUTOMATIC FLIGHT INSURANCE

"ALL SERVICES AT NO EXTRA COST"

725-5573 8:30 - 5:30 DAILY
9 - 2 SAT. (SUMMER)
9 - 4 SAT. (WINTER)

9 PLEASANT ST BRUNSWICK

Call 1-800-522-9990 toll free in ME.

BICYCLES

Fuji, Univega, Peugeot, Trek, Shogun
PROMPT, EXPERT SERVICE • CUSTOM BUILT WHEELS
EXERCISE EQUIPMENT & ROWING MACHINES
ALL - TERRAIN BICYCLES & CROSS COUNTRY SKIS
TRADE INS & USED BIKES
CYCLING CLOTHING AND HELMETS • CUSTOM BICYCLES SET UP

Until March 1
Wed. - Sat., 10 - 5:30 | After March 1
Friday Nites till 8 | Mon. - Sat., 10 - 5:30

442-7002

ROUTE 1 WOOLWICH
(ACROSS FROM MACLEMAN SUBARU & PEUGEOT)

Research works.

WE'RE FIGHTING FOR
YOUR LIFE

American Heart
Association

Put your degree to work
where it can do a world of good.

Your first job after graduation should offer you more than just a paycheck. We can offer you an experience that lasts a lifetime.

Working together with people in a different culture is something you'll never forget. It's a learning experience everyone can benefit from.

In Science or Engineering, Education, Agriculture, or Health, Peace Corps projects in developing countries around the world are bringing help where it's needed.

If you're graduating this year, look into a unique opportunity to put your degree to work where it can do a world of good. Look into Peace Corps.

Recruiters at Bowdoin

- * Film/Information Session: Tuesday, Feb. 9, at 7:30 pm in New Moulton Union Conference Rm.
- * Information Booth: Wednesday, Feb. 10, from 9:00 - 1:00 pm in Moulton Union Student Activities Room
- * Interviews: Wednesday, Feb. 10. Sign up in your Office of Career Services.

The toughest job
you'll ever love

PEACE CORPS

OPINION

How something simple turns ridiculously complex

For the first time in recent years, college administration has officially sanctioned a second semester rush period. Instead of becoming an historic and pleasant event, however, the two week period has grown into a great, big, ugly mess.

It all started when Interfraternity Council (IFC) President Jennifer Goldsmith '90, brought a rush policy proposal to the desk of Dean of Students Kenneth A. Lewallen. The proposal called for a "moderated rush," with non-alcoholic parties and events on weeknights, Sunday through Wednesday, and business as usual from Thursday through Sunday nights. The IFC sought merely to legitimize a practice that had been going on unofficially for the past two spring semesters. Lewallen okayed the proposal and immediately opened himself up to second-guessing from his colleagues.

Dean of the College Jean Jarvis expressed her disapproval of wet rush in any form, because wet parties could easily lead to the serving of alcohol to minors, and a wet rush might cause students to join a fraternity for the wrong reason - drinking. She suggested modifications to the proposal that would have made the second semester rush dry, but these suggestions were not incorporated into the final rush policy.

President of the College A. LeRoy Greason broke his sacred and self-imposed vow of fraternity silence long enough to shoot the legs out from under Lewallen. Greason called a wet rush policy "wrong" because serving alcohol to students under 21 is "contrary to state law." In doing so, he neglected to acknowledge Lewallen's support of the wet rush policy.

Lewallen praised the IFC for "wanting to act responsibly," and by sanctioning the organization's rush policy, he legitimized a practice that had proceeded relatively uneventfully over the past two spring semesters. Lewallen said he made his decision based on the smaller size of a second semester rush and the responsibility and good intent displayed by the IFC. Further, Lewallen pointed out a second semester rush should be handled differently, because "50 percent" of second semester drops come from the upper three classes, and because most "drops" have been "hanging around" the house of their choice for a semester or more, participating in house events. Asking them to change their lifestyles for two weeks, said Lewallen, seemed "artificial" and unreasonable.

The IFC had the right idea by coming to Lewallen. Bowdoin fraternities are already in a precarious position, and the IFC did not want to compound fraternity problems by conducting an irresponsible rush. The council presented a reasonable proposal to Lewallen, who made an administrative decision.

Now, because of sniping from other upper-level administrators, fraternities are being pulled in two opposite directions - one pro-alcohol and one anti-alcohol. In addition, Lewallen has urged the fraternities not to serve or provide a place for consumption of alcoholic beverages after allowing fraternities to participate in an official wet rush.

Lewallen had every right to make the decision he finally did, and rightfully said he stands behind it. It is unfair for his colleagues to publicly question his proposal. The difference of opinion between co-administrators has fraternity presidents scratching their heads questioningly and has caused Lewallen to look over his shoulder, second-guessing himself. Lewallen's sanctioning of the rush proposal was within his right as Dean of Students, and he deserves the courtesy of not having to justify his decision to others.

Just as President Greason never specified to the college community exactly why he dismissed ex-Dean of the College Robert Wilhelm and refused to take a stand on the proposal to limit the number of high school athletes rated by Bowdoin coaches, Lewallen has the right to make a decision in peace. He had the students' best interests in mind when he made the decision, as he normally does.

Lewallen's decision to approve the IFC's rush policy gave the organization the guidance it publicly sought.

Neither the IFC nor Lewallen deserves to be subjected to the second-guessing of and desertion by the college's top two administrators, who have taken the word "community" out of the phrase "college community," by hiding behind the safety of state law.

Gee, when people work together, nice things can happen

It has been said that the two best ways to bring students together at Bowdoin is to hold a home hockey game or have a campus-wide party. Yet this week, the efforts of several organizations, specifically the Interfraternity Council and the Alcohol Peer Advisors have produced an incredibly well-organized and timely series of programs, The Bowdoin Party Life...?

The efforts of Jack Cooley '88, Joe Akeley '90 and Susan Chandler '90 of the APAs and Scott Milo '88 and Jennifer Goldsmith '90 of the IFC should be commended for their attempts of raising the difficult issues of substance abuse and attacking them head on.

The week-long series of programs, which ironically coincides with second semester rush, has brought several new perspectives to the campus concerning alcohol and drug abuse, and how such problems affect the Bowdoin campus. The program has also attempted to address problems related to substance abuse, such as sexual harassment, stress and eating disorders.

Programs as diverse as a seminar on sexually-related alcohol problems and the keynote address by Lonise Bias generated packed audiences and approving responses. The range of topics covered illustrates that the organizers were intent on exposing as many students and faculty to a set of problems which is very real on the Bowdoin campus.

The organizers were smart enough not to preach at us (although Bias did), and gave us entertainment as well, ranging from skits to free alcohol-flavored ice cream.

Indicative of the unifying spirit behind the week was the forum sponsored Jan. 24 at Beta Theta Pi, when Patrick McManus, a Bowdoin alumnus and recovering alcoholic, told his story to a crowded living room of students. Joining him were recovering alcoholics and drug addicts at Clark University and the College of the Holy Cross. Their stories, more than any others, made the issues all too real.

Even more powerful, however, is the fact that groups ranging from the IFC to the College Republicans helped to sponsor the series. Such multi-lateral support is a sign of strength for the college, and a unique occurrence on campus.

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

"The College exercises no control over the content of the student writings contained herein and neither it, nor the faculty assume any responsibility for the views expressed herein."

Editor
Managing Editor
News Editors
In-depth Editor
Entertainment Editor
Sports Editor
Photography Editors

Stephen Reynolds
Kathryn Nanovic
Tamara Dansonayake, Dawn Vance
Kevin Wesley
Sharon Smart
Justin Prisdorf
Alan Harris, Mary Ann Lai

Asst. News Editor
Asst. Sports Editor
Asst. Entertainment Editor
Contributing Editor
Senior Editors

Tanya Weinstein
Tod Dillon
Lizz Millan
Albert Mauro
Lori Bodwell, Michael Botelho

Business Manager
Advertising Manager
Production Manager
Circulation Manager

Eric Foushee
Michael Townsend
Vincent Jacks
Eric Palmquist

Bowdoin Publishing Company
Lori M. Bodwell, Eric F. Foushee,
Albert P. Mauro, Stephen Reynolds

Published weekly when classes are held during the Fall and Spring semester by the students of Bowdoin College. Address editorial communication to the Editor, subscription communication to the circulation manager, and business correspondence to the business manager at the Bowdoin Orient, 12 Cleveland Street, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011, or telephone (207)725-3300. The Bowdoin Orient reserves the right to edit any and all articles and letters. Subscriptions are $8.00 a semester or $15.00 a year. Past issues cannot be mailed. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to The Bowdoin Orient, Moulton Union, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011.

Letters to the Editor

Response to Otto's letter

I question your responsibility in printing David Otto's opinion entitled "Clarification." David Otto does have a right to his opinion. However to support that opinion he presented suggestions and speculations as if they were facts. His conclusions are based on hearsay at best, and at the very least they are irrelevant to the events of November 5, 1987. Given the sensitive nature of the issue, I cannot understand why "The Bowdoin Orient" would print this information without any investigation of Otto's statements. Never did anyone contact me or the other victim to find out whether these claims were indeed true. Clearly the editor has the ability to determine what is and what is not printed. This was demonstrated by the editing of Otto's first opinion, "Justice at Bowdoin," wherein the names of the two men involved were deleted. The Orient's irresponsibility is heightened by the format of Otto's opinion. Printed in bold face type, separated from other letters to the editor, the message conveyed is that Otto's remarks represent an editorial position.

I was astounded by David Otto's first opinion, "Justice at Bowdoin." I could not believe that someone would dismiss what I experienced as horrible and terrifying to be a "sexual harassment misunderstanding." Even in his "clarification," he claimed that "what occurred behind the bathroom door was far from attempted rape."

David Otto was not even in the bathroom, and he never asked me or the other victim what happened. The fact is that I was forcibly dragged towards the bathroom by two men who were my "friends." I screamed at them to let me go and fought as hard as I could to get away. The struggle was so fierce that my nose began to bleed. One of the men got on top of me as both screamed, "We're going to f--- you." After I broke free the first time, the men lifted me off the floor and dragged me back into the bathroom, securing the door shut with a foot, one man tugged at my pants, and stuck one of his hands between my legs while the other held my arms. Again, I screamed for them to stop and fought to get free. The incident ended only when another male student forced the door open. If this was just a "joke" then it would not have been necessary for another male friend to force his way into the bathroom in order to stop it.

David Otto's assumption about what happened that night ignores two fundamental points that were made in the memo issued by Dean Nyhus on November 17, 1987: "Alcohol consumption by the assailant as well as the previous social behavior of the victim is irrelevant to the case. Violence is never justified."

However, David Otto believes our friendship is relevant to the case. Of course, he had only visited our Coles Tower quad just a few times during the Fall semester when the only man present was the one who lived there. Yet, in his "Clarification," Otto makes statements about a friendship which he has had a minimal direct contact with. Then, he attempts to use these claims to blame two innocent people for the violent, unwanted actions taken against them.

In Otto's next attempt, he confuses explaining the men's behavior with excusing it. He states, "Due to the fact that the men were under the influence of alcohol, they could not judge how strong they were in comparison to the women nor how scared the women had become." Clearly he recognizes here that what happened was not a joke. But this does not remove their responsibility for their actions.

Finally, I have more faith in man's basic nature than Otto does. I believe that men and women can live together and view each other as "buddies." But unlike Otto, I expect more mutual respect and trust from them.

Jenny Wald '89

After reading David Otto's letter of "Clarification," I was struck by his statement "...to completely understand why it happened it is important to look at the relationship of these men and woman." I am greatly disturbed by the suggestion in this quote that there are relationships in which the outright abuse of women can be condoned.

Joyce M. Morrissey '88

Which group has the higher SAT average?

Admitting Athletes

Recently I have read that some faculty members believe the College is permitting a certain overemphasis on athletics, particularly in the admissions procedure. Since Bowdoin's won-lost record against its traditional opponents appears to be well balanced, the recruiters can't have been doing a very handsome job.

Bowdoin has a long history of admitting presumably talented people whose academic qualifications may have appeared marginal. I have known writers, poets, playwrights and, yes, hallbacks who edged into the College because the admissions people thought their skills were important to a well-rounded under graduate body.

I am a prime example. When I matriculated, the venerated Dean Paul Nixon told me that, while I was totally hopeless in math, the fact that I was earning a living as a reporter on a daily newspaper helped tip the scales in my favor. I'm still hopeless in math, but I think I put out a good Orient for the times. I fear that some members of today's faculty wouldn't approve of me at all.

When exceptions are made in admissions decisions, the athlete seems to be the most suspect. A marginal ballerina or baritone can slide through without comment, but not a defensive tackle or a goalie. A college needs both to be "well-rounded."

I live near a school—the University of Miami—where the foxes of athletics have taken over the henhouse of academia. It's a miserable sight, and I deplore it. The faculty of that school knows what overemphasis truly is.

If the faculty members at Bowdoin who are worried about an occasional winning team are simply trying to apply a consistent level of mediocrity to the College, let them take a look at the Chemistry Department, whose recent experiments have met with worldwide acclaim. Is Bowdoin trying to become the University of Miami of chemistry? Donald F. Barnes '35

Impersonal Services

A tragic thing is happening on this campus. What was once a prestigious, personal college is becoming yet another unyielding bureaucracy. Many of us have enjoyed walking to Wentworth or Moulton Union, eagerly expecting the fine fare that those two institutions have provided over the last few years. When we arrived we were enthusiastically greeted by a cheerful member of the dining service, sometimes even by name.

Recently, such a pleasant excursion has been marred by the persistent, impersonal question: "DO YOU HAVE YOUR ID?" Often students who were once addressed by name are now reduced to nothing more than a number on a plastic card. In direct contrast to the small liberal arts atmosphere which Bowdoin has consistently prided itself on, students are now being treated as one might expect at a large university.

Are the students going to idly sit back while Bowdoin comes under the grips of a monolithic bureaucracy?

The answer is an emphatic NO. Bowdoin students must resist it before it is too late. Beginning at Monday lunch we urge all students to come to terms with this matter by arriving at the dining service with their ID cards in hand. Before being asked to show the IDs, we suggest that all students simply hand the Dining Service representative their ID, without stating their number. Let the Dining Service carry their policy to its ultimate end. If they want to see your ID, have them read the number themselves.

Unfortunately, those who will directly suffer are the checkers at the door, who are not responsible for the policy. We apologize for any inconvenience that this will cause them.

Frank Days '88, Frank Dean '88

The Bowdoin Orient welcomes all letters to the editor. Letters of 350 words or less will be considered for publication first. The Bowdoin Orient reserves the right to edit letters. All letters must be signed and include an address and telephone number where the author can be contacted for verification. Anonymity is seldom granted.

COMING SOON

Not so long ago, in a galaxy not so far away, America's number 1 pizza delivery company made students an offer.

If your group orders more pizzas than competing groups, you'll win a free pizza party!

It's so easy to play. Call your nearest Domino's Pizza store for details.

Domino's
Pizza
Delivers™...

DORM WARS™

THE GROUPS:

- | | |
|----------------------------------|--|
| 1. Coleman Hall | 9. Brunswick Apartments |
| 2. Hyde Hall | 10. Pine Street Apts. and Harpswell Apts. |
| 3. Appleton Hall | 11. KAPPA SIG, DEKE, ZETE and PSI U houses |
| 4. Maine Hall | 12. Mayflower Apts. and CHI PSI and DELTA SIG houses |
| 5. Winthrop Hall | 13. Baxter, Burnett, Copeland and Smith houses |
| 6. Coles Tower Floors 3-8 | 14. Moore Hall |
| 7. Coles Tower Floors 9-15 | |
| 8. AD, ARU, TD, and BETA houses. | |

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

FIRST CLASS MAIL
U.S. Postage PAID
BRUNSWICK, ME.
Permit No. 25

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

VOLUME CXVII

BOWDOIN COLLEGE, BRUNSWICK, MAINE, FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 1988

NUMBER 14

SAFC weighs fee hike

DAWN VANCE
ORIENT News Editor

Despite a ten dollar increase for the 1987-1988 academic year, the student body may soon witness another hike in the student activities fee, according to Student Activities Fee Committee (SAFC) Chairperson Cindy Heller '88.

The necessity of an additional increase in the fee is due to a shortage of funds available to SAFC for its 1987-1988 allocations. When drawing up its 1987-1988 budget appropriations in September, SAFC encountered this shortage. It responded by cutting the budgets of the 40 student run organizations which had requested funding.

After adding up the requests of all the organizations and accounting for additional spring and/or year appropriation requests, SAFC found it necessary to cut $35,593 from the total amount requested.

SAFC subsequently began its appropriations with a review of each organization's budget. Following this review, SAFC resorted to the drastic cutting of all 40 organizations' proposed budgets. In its presentation of allocations for the 1987-1988 academic year to the Student Executive Board at the beginning of the fall semester, SAFC apologized for the budget cuts.

Upon completion of its budget cuts SAFC earmarked $12,450 for organizations requesting further allocations in the spring. In addition, a $1500 buffer was retained. The buffer has since risen to $4000 through the collection of parking fees.

Despite these reserve funds, money available for allocations has remained tight and SAFC has found itself unable to grant many organizations the full amounts of

(Continued on page nine)

Steve Janas '88 saves a Norwich shot. The Polar Bears defeated the Norwich Cadets 5-4, Saturday. The next day the Polar Bears beat Middlebury 9-1. See story page 7. Photo by Lori Bodwell.

Political unrest in Sri Lanka temporarily postpones ISLE

TAMARA DASSANAYAKE
ORIENT News Editor

Continuing ethnic violence and political instability in Sri Lanka have led to the postponement of the Inter Collegiate Sri Lanka (ISLE) Program, one of only three study away programs conducted by the college.

According to Professor of Religion John Holt, "uncertainty about civil order during the forthcoming presidential elections" was the major consideration leading to the decision.

Since the violence erupted in July '83, "we have been continuously asked to justify our [ISLE] program's presence in the country," said Holt. "We want to act responsibly" and "not put students at increased risk," he added.

The decision to temporarily suspend the program was made by a committee composed of faculty from the six participating colleges; Bates, Bowdoin, Carlton, Colby, Hobart and William Smith and Swarthmore. However, "there were several people who still wanted to go ahead with the program," said Holt.

"I feel confident that Sri Lanka is turning the corner," said Holt. Plans are presently being made to expand the scope of the fall '89 semester. "It is also a good time to rethink the structure of the program," he said.

Holt conceived the idea for the program in 1981 and subsequently circulated his proposal among colleagues at various colleges who had research interests in South Asia. According to Holt his idea was aimed at producing a "good study away program which did justice to both cultural and academic areas." Holt pointed out that Sri Lanka was chosen as the venue of the program for several reasons. It has a pluralistic society harboring four major religions and has played an important role in the evolution of Buddhism for over 2500 years.

According to Holt, Sri Lanka also served as a "role model" as it was a "nation on the verge of making great economic strides after its emergence from colonial rule." The "fascinating dynamics of the resulting cultural change" made Sri Lanka an "exciting" place to be in said Holt.

Other advantages of settling on Sri Lanka included the relatively small size of the country, the friendly "accommodating" people and "the large number of world class faculty at the University of Peradeniya," said Holt.

The program has been in existence since fall '82. Each year, a group of approximately 20 students accompanied by a faculty member spends a semester in the country.

For the first part of the semester, students attend classes at the University and live with a family in the area. During the remainder of the time, students undertake an independent study on an aspect of the country or culture which interests them.

The American faculty who travel to Sri Lanka carry out research and also "help to develop the Peradeniya curriculum" and Sri Lankan faculty in turn "help enrich the offerings at home," said Holt. The semester at Peradeniya "has been the most rewarding teaching experience of my life so far," he added.

The Sri Lankan experience has been a "pivotal" force for many students. "Students have a more realistic sense of how religion is practiced...many find it disillusioning and are forced to reassess the meaning of religion," said Holt.

"They [students] also start re-examining American culture and their self images which are often rooted in the American middle class," said Holt.

"Students must be willing to commit themselves completely and examine the program very closely before they decide to go," said Administrative Assistant for the fall '87 program, Joyce Morrissey '88. Morrissey was in Sri Lanka for a second time last semester after visiting the country as a student in the fall '86 program.

Although the prevailing violence is not directed at foreigners, she said, the situation was "more tangible" this year. A few days after the group arrived in Sri Lanka, the parliamentary complex was bombed and curfew was declared for several days. Several houses in the city of Kandy, where the ISLE center is located were also bombed.

The Art of Black Dance and Music Ensemble.

Arts Festival celebrates Black history

TAMARA DASSANAYAKE
ORIENT News Editor

Black Achievement is the theme of the 19th annual Black Arts Festival, a month-long program aimed at raising awareness of Afro-American culture.

The festival is organized by the Afro-American Society and sponsored by a number of both on and off campus organizations said President of the Afro-American Society, Adrienne Hatten '90.

According to Hatten, the aim of the program is "to show what blacks are doing - not just in athletics, but in literature, the sciences and the arts."

The program begins Saturday, Feb. 6 with a performance by "The Art of Black Dance and Music Ensemble" in Pickard Theater. The ensemble is led by its founder, DeAlma Battle, who has staged traditional dance and music performances for audiences throughout the country.

On Feb. 10, Donald Bogle, film historian and commentator will speak on "Stereotyped Black Film Stars" in Kresge Auditorium. He will also speak to students in a course run by the Women's Studies program. Bogle is the author of Brown Sugar: Eighty Years of America's Black Female Superstars and Toms, Coons, Mulattoes, Mammies and Bucks.

A "Rap Session" directed at minority students entitled "Where do Minorities Fit Into the College Scene?" will be held at the John Brown Russwurm Afro-American Center on Saturday, Feb. 13. Minister of Culture of the Afro-American Society, Marita Thompson '90, invites all minority students and any other member of the college community to participate in the discussion.

Floyd B. Barbour '60, the Bowdoin Black Alumni Series Speaker for 1988, will present a lecture entitled "Exit - Pursued by a Bear." Barbour, Professor of English and Director of Afro-American Cultural Affairs at Simmons College will speak on Tuesday, Feb. 16 in Beam Classroom.

"The Past, Present and Future of Blacks in the Sciences" will be the topic under discussion on Wednesday, Feb. 24, in Daggett Lounge. Chemist Elbert Hayes of British Petroleum, Ohio, will preside.

The Festival also incorporates two "Black Cuisine Dinners" served in conjunction with the Bowdoin College Dining Service, two theme movies and a Bowdoin/Colby/Bates dance.

Rounding up the festival on Saturday, Feb. 27, the Maine Mass Gospel Choir, the Mount Zion Holy Temple Mass Choir and the Bowdoin Afro-American Society Choir

(Continued on page nine)

What is your reaction to the "Silent Protest" against the required showing of ID's at meals?

BECKY AUSTIN
ORIENT Staff

Merrey Greason '91
It wasn't the checkers' fault. There should be another way of going about doing it.

Steve Bowler '89
I want to hear Larry Pinette sing Elvis Presley's songs.

Paul Korngiebel '88
It's ridiculous to take out frustrations on people who don't make rules.

Lisa Bourassa '88
It's good they protested but I think the Bowdoin Dining Service has lost a lot of money so they had to find some way to control it.

Easterly proposes J-Board reform

DAWN VANCE
ORIENT News Editor

Have you committed any honor code or social code violations? If you have, you may have rendered yourself ineligible to serve on the Student Judiciary Board.

At its Tuesday night meeting the Student Executive Board discussed a proposal presented by member Jason Easterly '90 which would, if accepted, render students who have committed honor or egregious social code violations ineligible for service on the J-Board.

According to Easterly's proposal, a list of J-Board candidates will be presented to the Dean of Students prior to the submission of the final nomination list to the Exec Board.

Any candidates with records indicating previous violations of the honor or social codes will not be eligible to serve as members of the J-Board. Egregious violations of the social code which will be deemed unacceptable include rape, assault, burglary and serious verbal abuse.

The board will consider Easterly's proposal as a constitutional amendment at its next weekly meeting.

Chairperson of the Student Activities Fee Committee (SAFC), Cindy Heller '88, appeared before the board Tuesday night to announce the completion of SAFC fund allocations to all chartered student organizations.

Despite the earmarking of $12,450 for distribution in the spring and an additional buffer of $4,000, Heller reported that SAFC was not able to grant several organizations the funds they had requested.

Heller attributed the shortage of funds to an abundance of good programming ideas by the 40 chartered student organizations and not to unfair allocation of funds by the SAFC.

Heller added that several complaints had arisen over the lack of funding. One organization also complained of being stifled because certain others were receiving a large proportion of the funds. Heller therefore suggested the possibility of setting more rigid guidelines to determine the amount of funding organizations receive and why.

She said SAFC will hold a meeting next week to determine how to set about gauging student reaction to the hike in activity fees. Heller suggested the likelihood of SAFC conducting both an open forum and a student opinion poll for this purpose.

Heller informed the board that once SAFC has submitted its recommendation for an increase in the activity fee to Dean of the College Jane Jervis, she will in turn present it to the Board of Trustees. The Board will make the ultimate decision as to any increase.

In other business, Easterly informed the board he and member Suzanna Makowski '90 had drawn up an agenda with possible topics of discussion for the board's meeting with President of the College A. LeRoy Greason. The board has requested the presence of Greason for a 45 minute question and answer session at its Feb. 16 meeting.

During its open forum the board responded to the dining service's mandatory identification policy. Makowski said she would draft a petition to the administration on behalf of the student body addressing this policy.

Easterly suggested a more direct, radical solution for amending the present "No ID, No Eat" policy. Easterly's solution? "I invite people to boycott the Moulton Union and Coles Tower and to eat at the fraternities," he said.

The board granted an FC-4 charter to Students for George Bush headed by Michael Smith '89.

The board also discussed plans for its upcoming election to fill the three vacant seats. Candidates for these positions include Albert Mauro '89, Daniel Courcove '90, Mitchell Zuklie '91, Serena Zabin '91, Robert Smith '91 and Todd Remis '89. The board will conduct elections on Monday, Feb. 8 from 11 am-1 pm and 5-7 pm at Coles Tower and the Moulton Union.

val of 12 students each.

Other students opted to study abroad in countries such as Ecuador, Columbia and the West Indies.

Do not worry if the program you are interested in asks for a minimum grade point average. Since Bowdoin does not compute an average, the registrar will attach a sheet with an explanation of the Bowdoin grading system along with your transcript.

Brown believes that the fact that Bowdoin does not compute GPAs makes it possible for more students to study away.

Interested students should stop by the third floor of Hawthorne-Longfellow to look at approved programs. Brown has walk-in hours Monday, 3-4 p.m.; Wednesday 11 a.m. - noon; Friday, 3-4 p.m. with no appointment.

Also available to students is a book of departmental guidelines for majors and student recommendations of programs and a list of addresses to write to for more information about programs sponsored by other schools.

ID policy starts protest

ANGELA DAIGLE
ORIENT Staff Writer

The recent crackdown in the dining service's mandatory I.D. policy has led to an outburst of student protest.

With the institution of the dining service's policy this year requiring the showing of I.D. cards at mealtimes at Wentworth Hall and the Moulton Union the Bowdoin I.D. has suddenly become a vital necessity for enjoying campus cuisine. Student failure to bring I.D.'s to meals has recently led the dining service to crack down upon its policy and the institution of a "No I.D., No Eat" corollary.

Students have received this tightening of policy with a wave of protest. Within the past week two students in particular, seniors Frank Days and Frank Deans have organized a protest against the new mandatory I.D. policy.

Days and Dean aimed their attack at the strictness of the new policy and what they deemed insufficient publication of the dining service's reasons for its policy.

Days' and Dean's protest consisted of a letter to the Orient in which they expressed their views and a "silent protest" during which they passed out leaflets asking people to hand their I.D.'s to the checker rather than offering their student numbers. Dean said of their efforts, "We got a pretty good response." This was especially true at Wentworth Hall.

The efforts of Dean and Days resulted in a long talk with Director of Dining Service Laurent Pinette and his assistant Mary Lou Kennedy which afforded each side an opportunity to express its views. Dean and Days requested that the dining service publish statistics explaining their policy and that alternative forms of identification be accepted.

Pinette responded to these requests by saying, "We are not looking for a battle." He explained that the mandatory I.D. policy is designed to "protect the money of the bulk of the student body." Kennedy added, "We can't keep the cost in a reasonable range without control."

According to Pinette, the new policy is essential to the identification of students and to ensure that their board is not being transferred illegally.

Pinette said that the flexibility of the dining plan in its inclusion of partial board creates some problems because students "by hook or by crook" frequently use someone else's identification number to eat when they don't have board.

Kennedy estimated that last year approximately $95,000 in revenue was lost due to abuse of the system. The option of a full board plan without breakfast as well as money for absentee meals going to fraternities contribute to this loss.

Pinette said that on weekends as many as 200 free meals were served because of misused I.D.'s. As a result, Kennedy said that for the first time ever the dining service ended last year "in the red." She said, "We have to do something to keep costs reasonable. We can start by making sure that people who are eating are the people who should be eating."

Every year board plan rates are determined based on projections of future food costs and on data of past board costs. In order to keep the overall price lower, a certain number of absentee meals are figured into the board budget.

Therefore, Kennedy said that the misuse of I.D.'s has "the accumulative effect of raising board plan prices for everyone."

The money obtained from the missed meals contributes to events such as theme dinners, decorations and informative handouts. These handouts include those recently passed out at the "Bowdoin Party Life...?" booze booth.

With this new I.D. policy, Kennedy stated that abuses and costs can be avoided and the dining service can "make the best of the money that we do have and therefore compete with off campus facilities."

According to Pinette, the mandatory I.D. policy "helps to slow down abuse of the system." In curbing this abuse, he hopes to "hold back the cost of board" which in turn will "be fair to everyone (the people who pay for board) and protect the system as a whole."

The new I.D. system is not designed to penalize or to police, said Kennedy. She added, "There are 15 cases per week that we could bring to the J-board if we wanted to be policemen." She said that an alternative would be to institute a fining system similar to the ones of other colleges. Instead, the dining service chose to make I.D.'s mandatory because "the I.D. is a fact of life."

According to Kennedy, the dining service is hoping to install an I.D. machine in the near future. At the moment, Kennedy is trying to find a system most compatible with the computer system which the college is currently installing.

The system would be coordinated between the different departments of the college, such as the bookstore and the library, and would probably use a bar code to read I.D.'s. Pinette said, "It would be the ideal situation."

Study away deadlines approach rapidly

TANYA WEINSTEIN
ORIENT Asst. News Editor

If you are a sophomore who is thinking about studying abroad next semester, get ready to pick up your pen and start filling out applications.

Some study away programs had deadlines as early as January. However, most applications are due in March. Ana Brown, assistant dean of students, suggests that before applying to programs a student should "get in contact with their academic advisor and the department chair of their major" to see what programs will be able to fill the needed requirements.

An important form to fill out is the request form for permission to study away from the Recording Committee. This must be returned to the registrar's office before spring break whether a student wishes to go away fall or spring semester next year.

Brown also recommends that "people check in with the financial aid office as their plans to study away come into being." She said that some students believe that they cannot study away if they are on financial aid. However, grants and loans can be transferred to other programs.

Bowdoin has over 100 approved programs located in 28 countries. Brown said that typically 150-200 students study away in a given year. She said that although "a fair proportion will go away for the entire year, most go away for one semester or the other."

During the 1987-88 academic year, 227 juniors participated in study away programs. Over half of the students decided to study at universities in the United States.

Jim Anderson '88 who studied at the University of Oregon last year said that he decided to stay in the United States because "Many people go out of the country...but I had never even seen the West Coast before."

Approximately 10-20 students participated in the 12 College Exchange program of New England liberal arts colleges.

England proved the most popular country, with 46 juniors participating in programs there. Twenty-four students spent semesters in Italy, while Germany, France, Spain and Scotland all saw their

Debate continues over use of empty space

STEPHEN COOK
ORIENT Contributor

Swimmers and runners have long ago abandoned the Curtis Pool and the Hyde Cage for their new home in the Farley Field House. Yet the debate continues over what purposes those large empty spaces should serve.

Since the opening of the new athletic complex at Farley Field a lot of mental juggling has taken place over how best to utilize the Curtis Pool and Hyde Cage. There is by no means a simple solution to the problem, however, since the lack of space on campus has been felt by all. Subsequently, conflicting claims have arisen over this available space.

According to Moulton Union Director Harry Warren, who is a member of the Student Life Facilities Committee (SLFC), "the need for a student center [is] vital, crucial."

Laurent Pinette, director of dining service, pointed to the dining service's need for space. With Wentworth Hall operating far above its intended capacity, Daggett Lounge must be used every day at lunch so students may eat, although it was intended for meetings and other purposes. And still people must sit on the floor.

Although Dean of Planning and Administration Thomas Hochstetler agreed that solving the problem of dining space was urgent, he noted that the various academic departments are feeling the crunch, too. As an example of this crunch he posed the question, "If the History Department wanted to hire a new professor or invite a visiting professor where would we put them?"

Staff photo.

Who gets the space then, when many people can make a rightful claim? This question cannot be answered yet, because there are other factors involved besides need.

First of all, the pool and cage won't be worked on until plans go through for the proposed science center. The science center would be created through the joining of Sills and Cleveland Halls. Should this happen, the Physics, Biology,

Hall.

Next on the administration's list of priorities is the creation of more dining space. This may take shape as part of a student center or may require more urgent action, such as the building of an addition to Wentworth Hall.

A third place begging for space is the computer center. Although understocked with terminals, it is so crowded that the two new personal computers recently purchased cannot even be set up for the students' use.

Hochstetler described the debate over space as a kind of "decision tree," whereby each decision branches out to encompass certain possibilities, while eliminating others. What to do with the pool and cage is higher up in the tree, and plans for them must wait until the lower limbs are dealt with.

Despite other needs much support has arisen for the creation of a new student center. SLFC made a list of suggestions for a student center from a student forum held in November. Some of the spaces and functions desired were a large open multipurpose-purpose area to fit 1,000 people, a film-viewing room with comfortable seating for 400, small rooms for meetings and studying, a snack bar, a centralized mail system, a game room, a TV area, and offices for student organizations.

Hochstetler included the bookstore as something that might also move into the new facility. Pinette proposed not only placing a pastry shop in there, but perhaps an entire dining facility.

How best to use the available space is an issue still in need of a resolution. Whatever will become of it, it will not happen very soon. Although many agree as to the urgent need for a student center no official plans have gained acceptance.

The proposals of the Student Life Facilities Committee will remain on hold at least until the Governing Boards meet in March. Once the Governing Boards have decided upon the budget these proposals among others may finally provide the solution to the ongoing space debate.

TV show 'Chronicle' features two Bowdoin personalities

LISA KANE
ORIENT Contributor

Next week, "Chronicle", a news magazine program which broadcasts in the Boston area, will air a program featuring members of the Bowdoin community in a special interest story.

Channel 5 in Boston will broadcast the program on Feb. 11th at 7:30 pm. Featured guests include Laurent Pinette, director of dining services, and Edmund J. Benjamin, senior security guard at the Walker Art Museum.

The six-year-old "Chronicle" appears Monday through Friday night with co-hosts Peter Mehegan and Mary Richardson. It frequently features special interest stories regarding various sections of New England.

According to Mehegan, he was pursuing stories in the Bath/Brunswick area and it was convenient to investigate people from the Bowdoin College community. Mehegan said, "I was looking for interesting people... I wasn't doing a profile on the college."

Mehegan contacted Dan Shapiro, director of public relations, for suggestions. Shapiro suggested. Pinette and Benjamin because "they both had interesting backgrounds and have accomplished a great deal at Bowdoin."

Shapiro commented that he was pleased with the media coverage of the Museum and the Dining Service. He sees it as an opportunity for free advertising for the college in the Boston area.

Pinette was also pleased with the publicity. However it came as no surprise to him. In his two years of service as Director of the Dining Service he has received a barrage of favorable media coverage from various other sources. Other media coverage has included a write up in Newsweek's "On Campus" magazine and the cover of last December's Alumni magazine.

Mehegan interviewed Pinette and toured the dining facility. Pinette explained to him the success behind Wentworth dining. The dining service's secret? It takes care not to waste food so it can afford fresh fruit and vegetables, an offering not available at many other colleges.

Pinette said the dining service also takes advantage of natural resources by serving seafood frequently. In addition, Pinette's staff try to stay ahead of the industry by experimenting on their own.

Benjamin has worked in security for the past 15 years. He spent his first four to five years stationed in a patrol car but has held his current job as Senior Security Guard for the Walker Museum for the past 7 years. He sees himself as a "protector" figure for the valuables in the museum.

Benjamin explains that besides his normal duties as a guard he makes an effort to talk to students, who commonly refer to him as "Uncle Benji."

STUDIO

3 Bowker St.
Brunswick, Me.

725-2694

Within walking distance of campus.

MEN $7.00
WOMEN $12.00
with Bowdoin I.D.

MAINE'S FAVORITE BAKERY & RESTAURANT

WINTER HOURS:
Wed.-Thurs. 8-9 Fr.-Sat. 8-9:30 Sun. Brunch 9-2

KRISTINA'S

160 Center Street, Bath 442-8577

76 UNION STREET BRUNSWICK CORSICAN

We are open 11-9 daily,
closed Tuesdays, and
are open Sundays 4-9.
Come in for your favorite
calzone or pizza.

729-8117

On February 14th . . .
Make A Statement

THE BRUNSWICK FLOWER SHOP

216A Maine Street
Brunswick • 729-8895

Wire Service

New Dean of College Jervis takes office

KEVIN WESLEY
ORIENT In-Depth Editor

New Dean of the College Jane L. Jervis began her duties at Bowdoin Jan. 4, replacing Robert Wilhelm, who was fired by President A. LeRoy Greason in 1986. Paul Nyhus served as acting dean of the college last semester.

Jervis comes to Bowdoin after five-and-a-half years as dean of students at Hamilton College. She noted that there are several similarities between Bowdoin and Hamilton.

"Both are small, liberal arts colleges in remote areas, with highly motivated students, very loyal alumni and a good faculty," she said.

As she has only been at the college for a few weeks, Jervis' impressions of Bowdoin are still being formed. "Bowdoin seems, as an institution, to have a great deal of confidence in itself," she said.

Jervis has not had the opportunity to meet with many students yet, but considers their input important.

During her time at Hamilton, Jervis saw many changes. She cited incidents concerning coeducation, fraternities and minority issues with which she was directly involved. As Hamilton dean of students, she closed down three fraternities for one year after repeated violations ranging from drug dealing to hazing. She also helped establish two sororities.

Last fall, approximately 40 students entered the administration building at Hamilton and refused to leave for three days. In defiance of a restraining order, 12 students remained in the building, and were suspended by Jervis.

The issue is now in the New York State Supreme Court, and the students have been reinstated, pending appeal. According to Kanchalee Svetvilas, former news editor of the Hamilton Spectator, "This is going to be a big deal, because this is going to affect students all over the state."

Svetvilas said that two fraternities are now on suspension at Hamilton — Chi Psi and Delta Kappa Epsilon (Deke). Deke had been a repeated violator of college regulations, and it is doubtful that the fraternity will be reinstated.

Chi Psi was suspended this past fall by Jervis for serving alcohol to minors.

When asked if she would suspend fraternities at Bowdoin if similar violations occurred, she replied, "Yes. I do not have a great deal of tolerance for stupid and dangerous student behavior, from anybody."

Jervis opposes a wet rush, saying that the college cannot condone an activity (drinking) which is illegal for 75 percent of the student body. She does however recognize the burden which fraternities must bear of being the focal points for campus social life.

"The fraternities bear the brunt of responsibility for social life. The college is guilty in abdicating their responsibility to the portion of students not in fraternities," she said.

She says that her role concerning fraternities will be more defined when the fraternity review board makes its final recommendations. "My role would be to implement whatever conclusions they come up with," she said.

She said the main goal of an institution such as Bowdoin is "to prepare students for life in a multicultural world." For this reason, Jervis would like to see area study courses (Asian studies, woman studies, Afro-American studies and Latin American studies) become more integrated with the core curriculum.

"It ought to be a process of opening doors and showing to you inviting pathways that you'll want to explore the rest of your life... But we can only open the doors."

Our 3rd Annual Blowout Sale promises to be the Very Best Ever, with Drastic savings on all contemporarily sportswear, shoes, accessories & basics. Buy now, wear now & Save:

URBAN OUTFITTERS
Regularly to $62
now $8 to $24
the entire collection

DENIM
Iced bleached destroyed et al
from Paris Blues, Calvin Klein, Gibaud & more
JEANS
40 to 65% off

PANDEMIONUM
Easy care/easy wear dyed cottons
 40 to 60% off

SAVE ON:
CAMBRIDGE DRY GOODS
STREET LIFE
WORLDS APART
MEXX
& MUCH MORE!

Rayons!
Stonewashed skirts
& baggy pants
& ultra soft tops
$5 to $15

MICHEL SPORT SLASHED!
EXAMPLES
Woven Blazer
Was $40 Now $16
Woven Skirts
Was $39 Now $14
Asst. Skirts
Were $35-42 Now $14

SOFT COTTON SHIRTINGS from Voodoo & French Connection
Reg to $42
Only $15

ESPRIT SPORTSWEAR
fall, winter & early spring collections
30% to 65% off

BLOWOUT '88

Better dresses
from top makers $10
to $35!
Reg. to $98 retail

Putumayo jumpers • romantics • skirts •
Reg. $33 to $72
Now $12 to $33

WASHED TWILLS
from 108° F
Were Now
slim skirts $32 $11
raglan tops $35 $12
stripe shirts $28 $9

SWEATERS!
SWEATERS!
SWEATERS!
Natural fibers, top quality • best designs
CHEAP!
CHEAP!
CHEAP!

★ ★ ★ ★ ★
$10 rack
w/ unreal savings up to 90% on this 'n' that
★ ★ ★ ★ ★

MEN'S SPORTSWEAR
→ 1/2 price
Compulsive, Gibaud,
International News
Compulsive, Gibaud, International News

ESPRIT SHOES & BOOTS
50 to 75% off
Terrific buys, limited sizes

jewelry!
belts!
bags!
scarves! 1/2
price

5 Days Only

Tuesday, February 2nd
thru Saturday, February 6th!
Don't miss
Brunswick's
Sale event of the year

ALL SALES
FINAL!

THE WORKS

141 Maine Street
Brunswick, Maine
729-8064

TYPING and WORD PROCESSING
REPORTS, RESUMES, etc.
CALL 729-6796

TYPISTS - Hundreds weekly
at home! Write: P.O. Box 17
Clark, New Jersey 07066

1980 BMW 320i
79,000 original miles
Air Conditioning, Sunroof
AM-FM Stereo Cassette, alloys.
Asking $5995
725-4726

CRUISE SHIPS
NOW HIRING. M/F

Summer & Career Opportunities
(Will Train). Excellent pay plus
world travel. Hawaii, Bahamas,
Caribbean, etc. CALL NOW:
206-736-0775 Ext. 544F

BIG RED Q PRINTING
next to the College

- stationery
- resumes
- posters
- newsletters

212E Maine Street
Brunswick
729-4840

Part-Time -
Home Mailing Program!
Excellent income!
Detail, send self-addressed,
stamped envelope.
WEST
Box 5877, Hultside, N.J. 07205

SPRING BREAK
NASSAU/PARADISE ISLAND
from $279.00

Package Includes: Roundtrip Air,
Transfers, 7 Nights Hotel, Beach
Parties, Free Lunch, Cruise, Free
Admission to Nightclubs, Taxes
and more!

Cancun Packages Also Available
Organize a small group - earn a
free trip. Call A.T.S.

1-800-231-0113 Or 203-967-3330

Give a hoot. Don't pollute.
Forest Service, U.S.D.A.

ENTERTAINMENT

One Acts

Good efforts end in mediocre evening

SHARON SMART
ORIENT Entertainment Editor

If you are looking for a jarring experience this weekend, the One Acts are what you seek. Tonight and Saturday, Masque & Gown presents Landscape, directed by Scott Crocker, '88, and American Buffalo, with Emily Lensen, '88, directing. Though precisely, professionally conceived and performed, each play failed to offer much enjoyment.

Landscape portrays two people who have moved somewhere far beyond communication to a wasteland of lost love. In a bare kitchen setting, husband and wife talked past, through, around one another with sometimes wifely, always broken and repetitive discourse. Laura Farnsworth, '88, compelled the viewer with her soliloquy on a past affair, herself apparently consumed by the memory to the point of oblivion to her husband's presence. Expressive facial and body language added to the tangibility of her state.

As the somewhat silly, personable husband, complete with bowler hat, Louie Frederick, '90, gave a gratifying, if less than moving, performance. Much more within reality's bounds than his wife, his focus was musing—his casual affair, a walk in the park. Through the husband could be discerned the disintegration of their past relationship; the husband perceived and was abruptly angered by his wife's emotional distance. She, in all ways, had moved to a place beyond him.

Yet despite the realism of the acting, Landscape did not achieve the full impact of which potential was evident. The slow, sometimes dragging, pacing broke tension built between the characters. And the pictureshown was so disappointed and bleak as to border on the unappealing, rather than excite full sympathy.

With a mood swing from calm into frenzy, American Buffalo followed. James Savage, '88, Paul Adelstein, '91, and William Baker, '88, created a scene more expected on television than in a theater. The actors, especially Adelstein, handled the fast, curse-ridden dialogue well, capturing the street-wise humor and bearing of the character. Yet the plot, of thieves planning a "job", was cliché.

More interesting was the discourse between Savage and Adelstein, as Don and Teach. Engaged in a constant conversational power struggle, they built and carried the tension which gave the play its interest and spontaneity.

The emotionalism of the ending was lost in the abrupt and vaguely motivated previous mood changes, however. From banter, to yelling, violence, then calm, then sadness, the long—one and a half hour—play overreached the possibilities offered by a one act framework, leaving the viewer with admiration for the performers, and a headache. A different choice of play would perhaps have been better appreciated.

Jim Savage and Bill Baker perform in "American Buffalo." Photo by Mary Ann Lai.

Afro-Am Society sponsors 19th Black Arts Festival

LIZZ MILLAN
ORIENT Asst. Ent. Editor

The planning began last April, and is now complete. Starting February 6 and continuing until February 27, the Bowdoin College community will reap the benefits of the efforts of the Afro-American Society which have resulted in the Nineteenth Annual Black Arts Festival.

Marnita Thompson, Minister of Culture of the Afro-American Society, has headed the organization of the activities. She has not worked alone; there has been a great effort on the part of many others.

The Black Arts Festival is a month long series of presentations honoring black achievement. The kick-off of the festival took the form of the Martin Luther King celebration. "We were pleased with the events of last week. Although attendance was poor at some of the events, we feel that those who did attend found the presentations worthwhile," Adrienne Hatten, president of the Afro-American Society said.

Through various forms of entertainment, including dance, music, theatre and science, the group hopes to "...attempt to make the Bowdoin community more aware of black achievement, past and present. We want to demonstrate that there exist many aspects encompassed in the black culture," Hatten said.

"If there are things people don't know, we want them to know. If there are things that people have known and forgotten, we want them to remember because we remember," she added.

The Art of Black Dance and Music Ensemble will be presented tomorrow. The performance will be held at 2:00 p.m. in Pickard Theatre by this group from Boston. A workshop by the performers will follow, in order to give students a keener insight into the musical and dance forms.

Insight to the stereotyping generated through the film industry will be provided by keynote speaker Donald Bogle. Bogle, author, film historian and commentator, will speak on stereotyped black film stars. His movie, Brown Sugar, will be shown on Tuesday night in the Afro-American Center at 8:00 p.m. Bogle will speak on Thursday evening in Kresge Auditorium at 8:00 p.m.

Other high points of the Black Arts Festival include a Black Cuisine Dinner sponsored by the Dining Service, on Monday, February 8. Also of interest: a rap session entitled "Where do Minorities Fit Into the College Scene?"; a talk by Floyd B. Barbour '60 included as part of the Bowdoin Black Alumni Series, initiated earlier this year after the Minority Alumni Weekend in October; Dr. Elbert Hayes, a chemist from British Petroleum presentation of "The Past, Present, and Future of Blacks in the Sciences".

Additionally, The Wiz will be shown later this month. The Festival will conclude with a Gospelfest on February 27.

Much of what is presented during this festival was chosen to convey a specific message. "We, of course, want people to enjoy themselves at these events. There is a broad range of talent of which we urge all to take advantage. Yet we also wish to do more than merely entertain. Through these presentations, we hope to spread the knowledge of the achievements of the black culture," Hatten explained.

She continued: "Coming to Bowdoin has made me aware of how archaic some people's ideas are. 'Do you have an extra bone in your foot?' and 'What do you eat for Thanksgiving?' are questions I have been asked by students here."

These events are hoped to generate a greater sense of awareness. "We don't want people to be stifled by prejudices which come about through ignorance."

"I know people have had it with a awareness—drug awareness, health awareness, career awareness, but we have some great talent coming and I hope everyone will take advantage of the many events," Hatten said.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 5

7:30 and 10:00 p.m. — The BFVS presents Play It Again Sam, in Smith Auditorium. Admission is $1. Tonight begins the BFVS' Woody Allen weekend. In Play It Again Sam, fanatic film buff Woody Allen finds inspiration in the hard-boiled advice of Humphrey Bogart as to how to succeed with women. Based on his Broadway play, the screenplay is by Allen. Directed by Herbert Ross, the cast includes Allen, Diane Keaton, Tony Lacy, and features Jerry Lacy as Bogart. 8:00 p.m. — Masque & Gown present an evening of One Acts: Landscape by Harold Pinter, directed by Scott W. Crocker '88; American Buffalo, directed by Emily B. Lensen '88.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 6

2:00 p.m. — A performance by the Art of Black Dance and Music Ensemble is sponsored by the 19th Annual Black Arts Festival: Black Achievement. It will be held in Pickard Theater. Admission is $3 for the general public and free with a Bowdoin I.D. 7:30 and 10:00 p.m. — The BFVS presents Sleeper, in Smith Auditorium. Admission is $1. The weekend continues with this zany comedy. Woody Allen stars as Miles Monroe, who, after minor surgery, wakes up 200 years in the future. Directed by Allen, the screenplay is by both Allen and Marshall Brickman. The cast features Allen, Diane Keaton, John Beck, Marya Small, and Bartlett Robinson.

8:00 p.m. — Masque & Gown present an evening of One Acts: Landscape by Harold Pinter, directed by Scott W. Crocker '88; American Buffalo, directed by Emily B. Lensen '88.

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 7

3:00 p.m. — A lecture on "The Imagery of Max Beckmann's Prints" will be given by Margot Clark, associate professor of the history of art, University of New Hampshire, in the Visual Arts Center.

Calendar

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 5

8:30 p.m. — Minoru Tamba, Consul General of Japan in Boston, Woodrow Wilson Visiting Fellow, will speak on "Japan and the U.S.: What Lies Ahead?", in Daggett Lounge, Wentworth Hall.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 11

7:30 p.m. — "The Economic Promise of Alternative Agriculture" will be discussed by Patrick Madden, professor of agricultural economics, Pennsylvania State, in Beam Classroom, V.A.C. This is the second lecture of the Sustainable Agriculture in New England: Alternatives, Challenges, and Choices series.

8:00 p.m. — "Glasnost: A Year Later" is the topic of a panel discussion, in Daggett Lounge, Wentworth Hall. Panelists will be faculty members Knox and Huskey of Bowdoin and Browne and Richter of Bates College.

EXHIBITIONS

"Max Beckmann: Masterprints": Installed in the Bowdoin Museum's Temporary Exhibition Gallery, the show includes a number of works from the early 1920's, Beckmann's most productive period as a graphic artist.

"Martha Diamond: Paintings": Exhibited in the Bowdoin Museum's 20th-Century Gallery, much of the work was inspired by the architectural environment of Manhattan. Both shows will run through March 20.

An exhibition of color landscapes by Brunswick photographer Frank Brockman will be on display through February 29 in the Lancaster Lounge, Moulton Union.

PERFORMANCE

FEBRUARY 11 and 12 — 7:00 p.m. — The Talking Dog by John Guare and The Unsung Human by Paul Kozak, two short plays directed by Paul Kozak, will be presented at the Tree Cafe, 45 Danforth Street in Portland. Admission is $3 and tickets are available at the door. Call 774-1441 for further information.

FEBRUARY 5, 6, 7 — 8:00 p.m.

on Sundays — The Mad Horse Theatre Company, Theatre of Fantasy, 50 Danforth Street, Portland, presents two One Act plays. The Line, by Israel Horowitz, is a comedy about waiting in line and the result of flaunting societal rules as to line dynamics. The Indian Wants The Bronx, first presented off-broadway with stars Al Pacino and John Cazale, studies "juvenile alienation and xenophobia (fear of foreigners)." Call 775-5657 for ticket information. The One Acts will continue Thursday-Sunday, through February 28.

FEBRUARY 11, 12, 13 — 8:00 p.m.

Three Pair: Bridgeman/Packer, Creach/Koester, Long/Capps, an evening of duets by some of the best pairs in the field of modern dance, will be presented by the Portland Dance Center. At the State Street Church, 159 State Street in Portland, admission is $7.50 for students for Thursday and Friday and $8.50 for Saturday. Call 773-2562 for ticket reservations and further information.

MOVIES

Evening Star Cinema (Tontine Mall)

Dancers, showing at 7:00 p.m.

In The Mood, showing at 9:10 p.m.

Cinemas Four (Cooks Corner)

Eddie Murphy: Raw, showing at 7:05 and 9:05 p.m.

Broadcast News, showing at 6:45 and 9:00 p.m.

Three Men and a Cradle, showing at 7:10 and 9:10 p.m.

Couch Trip, showing at 7:15 and 9:15 p.m.

Nickelodeon Cinemas (1 Temple St., Portland)

Broadcast News

House of Games

For Keeps

Missing in Action III

The Couch Trip

The Whales of August

Empire of the Sun

THE "CLUBBUSTERS" $3.99 EACH PLUS POSTAGE

NO CLUB HASSLES !  NO CLUB GIMMICKS !

USE THIS PAGE OR A PHOTOCOPY AS YOUR ORDER FORM. MARK AN "X" IN BOX NEXT TO YOUR SELECTIONS.

CUT OUT AND MAIL ENTIRE PAGE

WHITESNAKE GEFEN QHS 24099 (9 98)	WHITESNAKE	WHITESNAKE GEFEN QHS 4018 (8 98)	SLIDE IT IN
WHITNEY HOUSTON ARISTA AL 8405 (9 98)	WHITNEY	ROGER WATERS COLUMBIA FC 40795	RADIO K.A.O.S.
DEF LEPPARD MERCURY 830 675 1/POLYGRAM	HYSTERIA	PINK FLOYD HARVEST SMOASH 1163/CAPTOL (9 98)	DARK SIDE OF THE MOON
PINK FLOYD COLUMBIA DC 40599	A MOMENTARY LAPSE OF REASON	HOOTERS COLUMBIA OC 40659	ONE WAY HOME
SOUNDTRACK RCA 8408 1 R (9 98)	DIRTY DANCING	STARSHIP GRANT 6413 1-4/RCA (9 98)	NO PROTECTION
SOUNDTRACK SLASH 25605/WARNER BROS. (9 98)	LA BAMBÁ	SOUNDTRACK MCA 6207 (9 98)	BEVERLY HILLS COP II
JOHN COUGAR MELLENCAMP MERCURY 832 465 1/POLYGRAM	THE LONESOME JUBILEE	ABC MERCURY 832 391 1/POLYGRAM	ALPHABET CITY
U2 ISLAND 90581/ATLANTIC (9 98)	THE JOSHUA TREE	SQUEEZE A&M SP 5161 (8 98)	BABYLON AND ON
HEART CAPITOL PJ 12544 (9 98)	BAD ANIMALS	SOUNDTRACK COLUMBIA SC 40323	TOP GUN
DANNY WILSON VIRGIN 90558/ATLANTIC (9 98)	MEET DANNY WILSON	YES ATCO 90522/ATLANTIC (9 98)	BIG GENERATOR
RITCHIE VALENS RHINO DEL/IMP 70178/CAPTOL (8 98)	THE BEST OF RITCHIE VALENS	MIL MISTER RCA 6276 1 R (9 98)	GO ON
RUSH MERCURY 832 464 1/POLYGRAM	HOLD YOUR FIRE	THE CULT BEGGARS BANQUET/SIRE 25555/WARNER BROS. (9 98)	ELECTRIC
SOUNDTRACK-MADONNA SIRE 25411/WARNER BROS. (9 98)	WHO'S THAT GIRL	WENDY AND LISA COLUMBIA BFC 40862	WENDY AND LISA
FLEETWOOD MAC WARNER BROS. 25471 (9 98)	TANGO IN THE NIGHT	TIFFANY MCA 5783 (8 98)	TIFFANY
R.E.M. IRS 42059/MCA (8 98)	DOCUMENT	BEASTIE BOYS DEF J&M FC 40238/COLUMBIA	LICENSED TO KILL
GRATEFUL DEAD ARISTA AL 8452 (9 98)	IN THE DARK	THE SMITHS SIRE 25449/WARNER BROS. (9 98)	STRANGEWAYS, HERE WE COME
EUROPE EPC INC 40241/E.P.A.	THE FINAL COUNTDOWN	FASTER PUSSYCAT ELECTRA 60730 (8 98)	FASTER PUSSYCAT
KENNY G. ARISTA AL 8-8427 (8 98)	DUOTONES	THE CURE ELECTRA 60737 (13 98)	KISS ME, KISS ME, KISS ME
LISA LISA & CULT J&M COLUMBIA FC 40477	SPANISH FLY	BRYAN ADAMS A&M 3907 (9 98)	INTO THE FIRE
AEROSMITH GEFEN QHS 24162 (8 98)	PERMANENT VACATION	CURIOSITY KILLED THE CAT MERCURY 832 025 1/POLYGRAM	KEEP YOUR DISTANCE
ANITA BAKER ELEKTRA 60444 (8 98)	RAPTURE	THE OUTFIELD COLUMBIA OC 40619	BANGIN'
GREAT WHITE CAPITOL ST 12545 (8 98)	ONCE BITTEN	STEVE WINWOOD ISLAND 75448/WARNER BROS. (8 98)	BACK IN THE HIGH-LIFE
KISS MERCURY 832 626 1/POLYGRAM	CRAZY NIGHTS	PAUL SIMON WARNER BROS. 25447 (9 98)	GRACELAND
SOUNDTRACK ATLANTIC 81747 (9 98)	LOST BOYS	PETER GABRIEL GEFEN QHS 24088 (8 98)	SO
MOTLEY CRUE ELEKTRA 60725 (9 98)	GIRLS, GIRLS, GIRLS	THE DOORS ELEKTRA 60345 (12 98)	BEST OF THE DOORS
THE CARS ELEKTRA 60747 (9 98)	DOOR TO DOOR	THE SILENCERS RCA 6442 1 R (8 98)	A LETTER FROM ST. PAUL
HUEY LEWIS & THE NEWS CHRYSLIS OV 41534	FORE!	JANET JACKSON A&M SP 3905 (9 98)	CONTROL
RICHARD MARX EMI-MANHATTAN ST 53049 (8 98)	RICHARD MARX	CROWDED HOUSE CAPITOL ST 12485 (8 98)	CROWDED HOUSE
BON JOVI MERCURY 830264 1/POLYGRAM	SLIPPERY WHEN WET	GRIM REAPER RCA 6290 1 R (8 98)	ROCK YOU TO HELL
EXPOSE ARISTA AL 8441 (8 98)	EXPOSURE	REO SPEEDWAGON EPC INC 40444/E.P.A.	LIFE AS WE KNOW IT
CUTTING CREW VIRGIN 90573/ATLANTIC (8 98)	BROADCAST	JONATHAN BUTLER J&M RCA 1032 1-4/RCA (8 98)	JONATHAN BUTLER
GENESIS ATLANTIC 81641 (9 98)	INVISIBLE TOUCH	WARREN ZEVON VIRGIN 90603/ATLANTIC (8 98)	SENTIMENTAL HYGIENE
POISON ENHMA ST 12523/CAPTOL (8 98)	LOOK WHAT THE CAT DRAGGED IN	THE JESUS AND MARY CHAIN WARNER BROS. 25456 (8 98)	DARKLANDS
CINDERELLA MERCURY 830076 1/POLYGRAM	NIGHT SONGS
BODEANS SLASH 25629/REPRISE (8 98)	OUTSIDE LOOKING IN
PET SHOP BOYS EMI-MANHATTAN 46972 (8 98)	ACTUALLY
BILLY IDOL CHRYSLIS OV 41620	VITAL IDOL
SUZANNE VEGA A&M SP 5136 (8 98)	SOLITUDE STANDING
NAJEE EMI-MANHATTAN ST 17241 (8 98)	NAJEE'S THEME
DAVID BOWIE EMI-MANHATTAN PJ17267 (9 98)	NEVER LET ME DOWN
SPYRO GYRA MCA 42046 (8 98)	STORIES WITHOUT WORDS
W.A.S.P. CAPITOL CLT 48053 (8 98)	LIVE IN THE RAW
BANANARAMA LONDON 828 061 1/POLYGRAM	HOW
PRINCE PASELY PARK 25577/WARNER BROS. (15 98)	SIGN 'O' THE TIMES
WHITNEY HOUSTON ARISTA AL 8-8212 (8 98)	WHITNEY HOUSTON
GLORIA ESTEFAN & MIAMI SOUND MACHINE EPC DC 40789/E.P.A.	LET IT LOOSE
38 SPECIAL A&M 3910 (9 98)	BEST OF 38 SPECIAL-"FLASHBACK"
MADONNA SIRE 25442/WARNER BROS. (9 98)	TRUE BLUE
SOUNDTRACK MCA 6214 (9 98)	MOONLIGHTING
ECHO AND THE BUNNYMEN SIRE 25597/WARNER BROS. (8 98)	ECHO AND THE BUNNYMEN
SWING OUT SISTER MERCURY 832 213 1/POLYGRAM	IT'S BETTER TO TRAVEL
SAMMY HAGAR GEFEN QHS 24144 (9 98)	I NEVER SAID GOODBYE
DEBBIE GIBSON ATLANTIC 81780 (8 98)	OUT OF THE BLUE

We Are Not A Club !

WE ONLY SELL CASSETTES!! WE ACCEPT
PERSONAL CHECKS OR MONEY ORDERS
POSTAGE & HANDLING: ALL ORDERS MUST INCLUDE
THREE DOLLARS & FIFTY CENTS (3.50). NO MATTER HOW
LARGE OR SMALL THE ORDER. ALL ORDERS SHIPPED
FIRST CLASS MAIL. TAPES ARE 100% GUARANTEED

NAME _____
ADDRESS _____
CITY _____ STATE _____ ZIP _____

MAKE CHECKS PAYABLE TO:
Students Publishing
PO BOX 4649
FORT LAUDERDALE,
FLORIDA 33338

$3.99 x = _____
CATALOGUE (1.00)
POSTAGE & HANDLING $3.50
TOTAL ENCLOSED

☐ Yes! Please send me you 1987 catalog with over 7000 titles. I have enclosed $1.00 extra for postage.

SPORTS

Mike Botelho

That other ice sport

This month in Calgary, Alberta, curling will be making its long-awaited debut, as a demonstration sport, in the Winter Olympic Games. However, the sport of curling is nothing new to our northern neighbors. Canadians have long been exposed to "curling fever" as evidenced by the remarkable ticket sales realized in past weeks. The 21,000 tickets available for the six days of curling competition sold out faster than those for hockey or for any other sport besides figure and speed skating.

What makes this sport so fervently adored by Canucks of all ages, shapes and socio-economic backgrounds? We will address that later. First, I'd like to explain curling to those readers who might be somewhat unfamiliar with it. Curling, it is believed, initially developed in Scotland, 400 years ago. How and for what reason it came about are problems which have long baffled the most able and renowned sports historians.

Curling is played on ice and resembles shuffleboard; 42-pound granite "stones" are slid across a 126 foot-long sheet of ice toward a bull's eye or "house". Unlike shuffleboard, however, curlers use their hands to gently deliver the stones toward the target. (The stone is released with a twist of the wrist causing it to "curl" toward the house.) Players glide down the ice before sending the stone. Once the stone is sent, two teammates move alongside it, scrubbing the ice furiously with brooms in order to speed up or redirect the shot. This particular aspect of curling makes it truly unique.

Teams consist of four members. Members from each team are given two throws apiece during an inning or "end". Ten innings constitute one entire match. The object of the game is to position one's stones as close to the bull's eye as possible while knocking the opponent's stones away from the target area. Points are awarded to the team whose stones are closest to the bull's eye.

Greatly intrigued by the growing popularity of curling in the United States, I sought to talk with people who had experienced the thrill and excitement of a sport that I knew so little about. When asked to discuss his first encounter with curling, Joshua A. Bloomstone, a frequent visitor of the Meadowbrook Curling Club in Montreal West, Quebec, explained, "It was fascinating, like darts on ice, bowling and shuffleboard all in one, but better."

Bloomstone continued, "I had never seen anything like it before." When he first lifted a stone in his friend's garage, Bloomstone was wholly consumed by "curling fever." "I was compelled to play this game." Needless to say, Bloom-

(Continued on page eight)

Polar Bears demote Cadets, 5-4

ERIC PALMQUIST
ORIENT Circulation Manager

The hockey team faced one of their biggest challenges of the year last Friday, as they took on the hungry and talented Norwich Cadets, a team that had hustled its way to second place in the ECAC East, one step above Bowdoin. The Polar Bears had just come off a listless effort at Salem State, and if there was ever a time to worry, Friday was it.

But the fears never materialized, as the Bears outbanged the aggressive Cadets on the boards and took advantage of spectacular goaltending to strip the Cadets, 5-4.

The man responsible for the victory was goaltender Steve Janas, who turned away numerous fast breaks and well angled slapshots affording his teammates the time needed to overcome a poor start and take control.

The puck spent the first five minutes of the game in the Bowdoin end, with only the fine work of Janas preventing a Norwich goal. When the Polar Bears woke up and began to exert pressure of their own, only the fine play of Norwich goaltender Tim Collins and some lucky breaks (two shots hit the post) kept the game scoreless after one period.

The second period began just as the first had ended, with non-stop action and furious checking. Norwich struck first blood on a breakaway goal, but Mark Smyth answered back just 45 seconds later on a beautiful feed from Mike Cavanaugh. The Cadets were stunned, and Steve Ilkos took advantage of their lapse in intensity to score just 22 seconds later.

A team like the Cadets can never be counted out, however, and they pulled off another fast break goal to tie the score. The furious pace of the contest seemed to tire the Polar Bears, who were almost burned a few times on Cadet rushes.

Craig Eaton (7) and Roger Ladda (6) contribute to constant barrage on Norwich goal. Photo by Lori Bodwell.

The game winning goal soon followed, as Steve Thornton slipped through two defenders and circled behind the net to ram home an unassisted goal and give the Bears the lead after two periods, 3-2.

The third period was as furious as the rest, but the superior play of the Polar Bears prevailed, as they used goals by Thornton and Jim Pincok to survive a heart stopping barrage of shots as time ran out. The Cadets pulled their goalie enabling them to blast away at Janas for the final minute, only to be denied them once again.

On Saturday the Polar Bears faced off against Middlebury, a team they had bested earlier in the season, 9-1. Some feared that after Friday's game the Polar Bears were ripe for an upset, but Thornton put an end to that thought with his 56th career goal, as Kevin Powers, Roger Ladda, and Brad Chin all added first period tallies to put the game out of reach. Steve Ilkos put in his 19th goal of the year, and Jeff Gorman netted his first career hat trick to round out the Polar Bear scores and give them the win, 9-2.

The Bears are away this weekend, making a New York road swing to the Colleges of Union and Hamilton, but return home on Tuesday to try to revenge their earlier loss to Salem State.

Captain Kathy McCormick (20) fights for the rebound in front of Boston College goal. Photo by Lori Bodwell.

Cagers lose to USM in OT

CHRISTOPHER BOONE
ORIENT Staff

"We've been playing good basketball as of late," said Head Coach Tim Gilbride of his men's hoops squad, but adds, "and we've lost some tough ones." Anyone in the larger-than-usual crowd Wednesday witnessed both of these statements come true as a rolling Bowdoin lost an overtime heartbreaker to the Huskies of USM.

The Polar Bears were coming off a big weekend, with convincing wins over both Norwich and Middlebury. Norwich saw the emergence of Bowdoin's latest threat in its scoring arsenal as junior Mike Burnett pumped in 29 points, 17 in the first half alone. "Mike Burnett has stepped in (for an injured Al Bugbee) and done a fine job. His passing and shooting forces opponents worry about more than just one person," said Gilbride.

And worry they must. Joe Williams continued his dominance at the center spot and joined Kevin Hancock and Steve Drigotas in double figures with 18, 15 and 12 points respectively. The rebounding leader was Williams with 16. Drigotas added 6 rebounds to his total, including 4 in key moments to seal victory for the Polar Bears.

Saturday night saw the Bears squad hold on to a well-executed victory, 72-67. Burnett once again led all scorers with 21 points. Williams ended the game with 19 and Hancock pumped in 11.

Drigotas hauled in 7 rebounds to lead the team and Hancock dished out 6 assists. "Kevin's been calling for and handling the ball alot more lately and its opening up opportunities for alot of the other players," said Gilbride.

The most thrilling and certainly most heartbreaking of games occurred on Wednesday night, however, as the Bears bowed to USM, 103-100. With but three seconds left in regulation, the Huskies completed a full-court pass that USM guard Mike Francoeur snagged and converted into two points in the face of three Bowdoin defenders.

"USM is one of the best teams in New England and we played a solid all-around game with them. We could be looking back at a great victory right now," said Gilbride.

Williams, with 39 points and 15 rebounds was stalwart for the Polar Bears. Hancock added 26 and Burnett 17 to the losing cause. Drigotas cleaned the glass for 12 rebounds and Hancock led the game with 13 assists. Bowdoin continues its home stand with a game tomorrow night against Clark University at Morrell at 7:30.

Skaters achieve mixed success

TONY JACCACI
ORIENT Staff

The Women's Varsity Hockey team played like Dr. Jeckell and Mr. Hyde over the past two weeks as the team has put in performances which have ranged from excellent to fair. The Polar Bears took to the road and dropped three games to MIT, Brown, and Middlebury, trounced UVM, lost to Colby and then finally crushed Boston College. The team's record is currently 5-7 and Bowdoin hopes to improve this record as they battle with Dartmouth College next Monday.

"Our last six games? It was a rollercoaster" stated coach Bobby Jones on his team's performance as of late. The ride began with a fall as Bowdoin travelled to MIT. The game began well for the Polar Bears as they went up 2-1 in the second period with goals from Sara Russell and Sheila Carroll. MIT came storming back, however, and quickly went ahead by a score of 3-2. Bowdoin was hustling but seemed to be lacking the anticipation of plays. Despite the fact that Bowdoin had beaten MIT earlier in the season by a score of 5-1, this game belonged to MIT.

Bowdoin flew into their next game against Brown looking like a different team. After two periods, Bowdoin trailed Brown by a score

(Continued on page eight)

Babson snaps Bears' winning streak

JIM ANDERSON
Orient Contributor

Bowdoin women's basketball team suffered two tough losses this week, breaking a ten game winning streak and setting their record back to 11-3.

The first of the week's games came against 9th ranked Babson. Bowdoin entered as the favorite but Babson left the winner of a 54-52 squeaker. The sad fact about the streak breaking loss was that it wasn't so much Babson's superior play as it was Bowdoin's inability to score that spelt defeat for the Bears.

Head Coach Harvey Shapiro cited his team's lack of mental intensity during the first thirty minutes and Babson's ability to capitalize on it as crucial factors in determining the final outcome. The lack of concentration coupled with a 21 percent field-goal shooting effort caused the Bears to fall behind by as many as 15 midway through the second half. Not only a loss, but a blowout appeared imminent.

Bowdoin, as though finally awakening to the task at hand, reached down and began to fight back. Sparked by some hard nose defense and the scoring of Stephanie Caron '89, who scored a game high 19, and Kim Lemieux '89, who added 16, the Babson lead began to shrink. With six seconds left the lead had dwindled to one at 53-52. Bowdoin had possession of the ball and was in position to complete their comeback. The remaining six seconds consisted of a string of players from each side going to the foul line to shoot one and a bonus. Bowdoin, could not cash in on either opportunity while Babson managed one with a second remaining giving the visitors a hard fought 54-52 victory.

Things did not look good for the Polar Bears to break its one game losing streak on Wednesday night as they entertained a tough University of Southern Maine team. Shapiro noted that to upset the 3rd ranked team in New England and 12th nationally, Bowdoin would have to play flawless basketball against a bigger and tournament-tested squad.

USM was too much for the Polar Bears who found themselves on the short end of a 59-48 decision. Bowdoin's defense kept them in the game as it came up with many first half steals, led by Lemieux with 4. The Huskies went to the offensive glass and scored numerous times on offensive rebounds, but could only manage a 22-18 lead 17 minutes into the game.

USM got its running game going just before the half and scored on three fast breaks to open up a 28-18 half time lead. Nikki Comeau '89, fired in 11 of Bowdoin's first 18 as the rest of the team struggled to get on track.

In the second half the teams traded scoring spurts, USM getting the better of them, and the Polar Bears found themselves down by 16. Bowdoin promptly cut that in half, but could get no closer. USM went back to its punishing inside game and stopped the Bowdoin run.

Lemieux and Comeau kept Bowdoin faithful in their seats until the end. Comeau finished with a game high 19 while Lemieux continued her fine season chipping in with 15 points and 8 rebounds. In the end it was USM's greater depth, size and experience that produced the final result.

The team seeks to get back to their winning ways on Monday, February 8 as they travel to St. Joseph's College to take on the Lady Monks.

Botelho

(Continued from page seven)
stone has yet to play curling. However, the ecstasy which he felt that one day is indicative of the pleasure and enjoyment which new curling enthusiasts have recently discovered.

I also talked with Linda Clark, an active member of the Superior Curling Club in Superior, Wisconsin. From this particular club comes the men's U.S. Olympic team, including the legendary Bud Somerville, the lone inductee of the U.S. Curling Hall of Fame in Chicago, Illinois. When asked what she believes are the major reasons for curling's increasing popularity, Clark responded that it provided "good exercise" and "lots of fun." She said that the club allows its members to curl competitively in an environment conducive to healthy social interaction. Because curling will be shown to large U.S. audiences tuned into ABC's Olympic coverage, Clark feels that such exposure will enhance its popularity in this country.

The fifty-one year old Somerville will lead a very experienced U.S. men's squad against some stiff competition in Calgary. The Americans are picked by experts to finish second behind a very strong Canadian unit. However, the men from Superior are confident that their combined 108 years of experience will more than compensate for their feeble limbs and robust beer bellies. 275 miles south of Superior in Madison, Wisconsin, is the home of the U.S. women's Olympic team. The squad of the Madison Curling Club was a surprise winner over former national champ Seattle and runner-up St. Paul thus clinching the opportunity to represent the United States in Calgary. High school freshman curler, Erica Brown, at fifteen years of age, may be the youngest participant in the Winter games this year.

I sincerely hope that, in some way, I have enlightened and stimulated the interest of the less informed majority of Americans about the many exemplary attributes of curling. Hasn't the time come that we give curling its just due here in the good ol' U.S. of A.? That we flock to our nearest curling club and become lifetime members? That we learn to appreciate and value this fine sport as our Canadian counterparts have? After intensive research and pensive, invigorating discussion, I am ready to engross my very being in this highly esteemed athletic event. Now all I need is a partner, anxious like myself to enjoy all that curling has to offer.

"Curling, anyone?"

Women's Hockey

(Continued from page seven)
of 2-0. The Polar Bears were playing excellent hockey and were skating with the Brown team through the first two periods. Erin Miller played superbly in net for the Black and White as she came up with some amazing saves. The third period was a different story, however, as Brown went on a 6 goal scoring binge that ended the game in an 8-0 decision. The score does not indicate Bowdoin's play as Coach Jones felt that this game was one of the finest games this year.

The team's next foe was Middlebury and the offense just didn't seem to click for the Polar Bears as the hosts emerged victorious with a 4-1 decision. Suzanne Walker played a very good game in goal; several of Middlebury's scores were tallied by forwards who were not covered in front of the Bowdoin net. The lone goal for the Polar Bears came from Shelia Carroll who is currently Bowdoin's leading scorer.

On Saturday the offense came alive as Bowdoin rolled over UVM and won by a score of 8-2. The Bears got their game in gear as they disposed of the hapless Catamounts. The win pulled the Bears out of a four game slide.

Next on the schedule for the women was a trip to Waterville to play Colby. The team played a strong game despite falling to the Mules by a score of 4-0. The Polar Bears just couldn't seem to put the puck into the net after executing good passing. The scoring drought did not last long as the Bears returned to Dayton arena and decimated Boston College 10-1 to the delight of the partisan crowd. This Monday, the Bears will travel to Hanover, New Hampshire to take the ice against Dartmouth.

Correction

Last week, an outdated version of the women's hockey article was inadvertently run in place of the intended article. We apologize for our error.

Polar Bear Games on WBOR

2/5 vs. Union 7:30 p.m.
2/6 vs. Hamilton 3:00 p.m.
2/12 vs. Boston University 7:00 p.m.
2/20 vs. Babson 3:30 p.m.

DELIVERS TO BOWDOIN COLLEGE

PIZZAS - SANDWICHES - SALADS

DINNERS

EXAMPLE:

Regular Cheese Pizza $2.20
add $.55 per topping

Large Cheese Pizza $5.50
add $1.00 per topping

no minimum

free delivery

SPECIAL

BUY ONE LARGE PIZZA OR
ANY $5.00 ORDER AND GET
A LITER OF PEPSI AT NO
EXTRA CHARGE

725-9753

MON - THUR
5:30 - 9:30

FRI - SAT
5:30 - 10:30

SUN
5:30 - 8:30

BICYCLES

Fuji, Univega, Peugeot, Trek, Shogun

PROMPT, EXPERT SERVICE • CUSTOM BUILT WHEELS

EXERCISE EQUIPMENT & ROWING MACHINES
ALL - TERRAIN BICYCLES & CROSS COUNTRY SKIS
TRADE INS & USED BIKES

CYCLING CLOTHING AND HELMETS • CUSTOM BICYCLES SET UP

Until March 1
Wed. - Sat., 10 - 5:30
Friday Nites till 8

After March 1
Mon. - Sat., 10 - 5:30

442-7002

ROUTE 1 WOODWICH
(ACROSS FROM MAELMAN SUBARU & PEUGEOT)

KEGS

729-0711

OFFERED BY ADVANCE RESERVATION

THE LOWEST PRICES ON KEGS - BEER - WINE

Cask and Ken
26 Bath Road, Brunswick, 729-0711 Mon., Sat., 10 to 6

SAFC

(Continued from page one)

their requests this spring. Heller reported that complaints had arisen over this lack of funding.

Heller added, however, that the SAFC did let organizations know funding would be tight after the completion of its first budget appropriations in the fall. Upon completion of its September appropriations SAFC had already allocated 85% of its funds because a majority of organizations had come to SAFC in the fall for yearly vs. block funding.

Heller also explained the shortage of money was not due to bad organization by the SAFC. Rather, it reflected an abundance of good programming ideas by student run organizations. "SAFC is the most organized it's been so far this year. The shortage of funds shows good programming and diverse ideas - it's not a matter of not allocating money fairly enough," she said.

Heller indicated that the growth in the strength of student organizations and their corresponding needs for additional funding could not be met without an increase in the present student activities fee.

"We have a lot of groups with great ideas but we can't fund them. Bowdoin has one of the lowest activities fee of any college... if we are going to become competitive with other colleges of our size and caliber we're going to have to up our fee above last year's and by considerably more than $10," said Heller.

According to Heller, SAFC will be making its recommendation for an increase in the student activities fee to Dean of the College Jane Jarvis within the next two weeks. Jarvis will in turn present the recommendation to the Board of Trustees who will make the final decision concerning any increase in the fee.

Heller also said SAFC will meet next week to determine how to set about gauging student reaction as to the fee hike. SAFC will most likely conduct a student opinion poll and hold an open forum for student discussion of the issue.

Arts

(Continued from page one)

will come together for "Gospelfest" which features Afro-American gospel singers in concert.

This year's program is "only the tip of the iceberg," said Hatten. The Society is planning a year round schedule of activities for '88/'89 to celebrate its 20th anniversary.

DR. WILLIAM R. OUELETTE

DR. BRIAN L. DANIELS

OPTOMETRISTS

Eye Examinations Optical Services

Specializing in Contact Lenses

Pleasant Street Professional Building

53 Pleasant Street, Brunswick

Telephone 725-2161

Little's WINTER CLEARANCE

30%-50% off all clothing

149 Maine Street 729-6642 M-Th 9:30 - 5:30 Fri 9:30 - 4

Flowers by Knowles!

Valentine's Day Flowers
for that special someone!
Call us today!

15 Jordan Ave.

725-2461

CALL WILBUR'S
CANDY FOR BALLOON
DELIVERY

Come in for all your Valentine Favorites!

Valentine Candy Valentine Pops
Heart Shaped Tins Chocolate Moose
Featuring Tom's homemade chocolate roses

Tontine Fine Candies

Traditional & Unique Candies
Open Extended Hours for Valentine's

WILBUR'S CANDY TONTINE FINE CANDIES

13 Bow Street
Freeport, ME
865-6129 / 865-4071

Tontine Mall
Brunswick, ME
729-4462

UNIQUE HOUSING OPPORTUNITY FOR BOWDOIN STUDENTS - MALE or FEMALE

Rooms in beautiful, newly renovated lovely Colonial home very near campus. Bedrooms have charming antique pine and oak bureaus and desks, new oak beds, and large closets. Share 3 all-new stylish tile baths and lovely new contemporary kitchen with new appliances, new cabinetry, cathedral ceiling. Refinished pumpkin pine floors; natural refinished doors. Spacious, quiet and clean. Large rooms offered. Single occupancy, $141/2 per semester plus security deposit. All utilities included. Especially charming space for a few particularly discerning students. This is not a place for parties, etc! Care to take a look?

Call Mr. Boudette 725-8290
or please leave a message at 729-8616

You've thought about it.

You've tried to imagine what it would be like.

You know it would be exciting. And a challenge. And quite possibly the most rewarding experience of
your life...

Three Americans overseas in Asia, Africa and South America speak frankly on what Peace Corps life is like for them.

It isn't easy and it isn't for everyone—they'll tell you that up front.

But if you've ever considered going overseas in the Peace Corps, then now is your chance to see and hear for yourself what could be "the toughest job you'll ever love."

Note: Former Peace Corps volunteers will be on hand to answer questions following the 25 minute film. And it's free!

Recruiters at Bowdoin

- Film/Information Session: Tuesday, Feb. 9, at 7:30 pm in New Houlton Union Conference Rm.
- Information Booth: Wednesday, Feb. 10, from 9:00 - 1:00 pm in Moulton Union Student Activities Room
- Interviews: Wednesday, Feb. 10. Sign up in your Office of Career Services

U.S. Peace Corps

The Movie

"The Toughest Job You'll Ever Love"

A Likely Yarn
90 UNION STREET
BRUNSWICK, ME 04011
(207) 725-2147

Anniversary Sale-
10% off, storewide
from Feb 2 to Feb 20

OPINION

Open forum missing

The Bowdoin College Executive Board has once again dug itself another hole leading to obscurity and impotence.

Wednesday night's candidate forum for the three empty spots on the board was an exercise in futility. Posters around campus advertised the event for Wednesday night in Kresge Auditorium. The candidates' petitions said the forum was to take place at the Maine Lounge.

Kresge Auditorium was scheduled for a film at 7:30 p.m., which required setting up the film and testing at 7:15 p.m. Several candidates arrived to find nothing.

Candidates who made it to the Maine Lounge handed in their petitions with 50 signatures of fellow students and were told "Thanks, you can go now," by board member David Spohr '91.

In past years, candidate forums for the Executive Board have been held, but poorly attended. Students might have been apathetic enough to ignore the forum, but could at least read about the candidates and their views in the Orient's coverage of the event.

This semester, however, the candidates were not even given the chance to give their opinions and reasons for running to anyone.

Six candidates are running for three spots on the board this semester, compared to 17 persons running for 15 spots last semester. Students might have become interested in the Executive Board, but the board seems not to be interested in them.

As a result, the Executive Board has given in to the apathy they claim to fight against. They seem not to care about themselves. The board's main source of power is through student support and this botched forum does little to help the board's strength.

The board's neglect of the forum also serves to render the elections a name recognition contest. Without a forum to discuss or even put forward issues, the candidates will be relying mainly on popularity.

This is no way to run an election.

The candidates should demonstrate their qualifications for the board by overcoming the board's failings and bringing issues to the forefront.

Overzealous reporting

Overzealous newspaper reporting can sometimes cause problems for both itself and the subject it reports. The editorial "How something simple turns into something ridiculously complex" which appeared in last week's issue is the perfect example. Differences between College administrators concerning Spring semester rush were exaggerated out of proportion and context. What was reported as a major division within the administration was in actuality a difference of opinion and judgement.

The editorial polarized administrative viewpoints, portraying Dean of Students, Kenneth A. Lewallen the champion of the Inter-Fraternity Council and Dean of the College, Jane Jervis the agent of the administration. Neither characterization is accurate. Both deans approached the issue of a "moderate" rush from different, but carefully thought-out, professional perspectives.

Differences of opinion for whatever reasons—personal, legal, or professional—occur everyday. Good decisions depend upon examination of all sides of a problem. Certainly the administration deserves to examine all issues from a variety of reasonable angles without overblown and unwarranted criticism from the press.

Wicked Sticks by

Greg Morrell

Editors' note: Greg Morrell's and Marc Sven's photographs will alternate every issue and appear in this spot.

No ID, no eat

In the sixties—the golden age of student demonstrations—students barricaded themselves into campus buildings demanding civil rights, removal of troops from Vietnam and other idealistic measures. Monday morning 1988, students stood outside the Moulton Union and Wentworth dining halls "silently protesting" the injustice that irks the 80s Bowdoin student—the Bowdoin College Dining Service's "No ID, no eat" policy.

A protest or a temper-tantrum? It's hard to differentiate. Flyers distributed Monday morning advocated a trivial form of civil disobedience—"let the Dining Service Representatives read the card [ID] without your verbal assistance"—while failing to provide reasons why such action was necessary.

A glimmer of explanation appeared in a letter to The Orient last week; organizers of the "protest" mentioned the new ID policy created an impersonal relation between students and Dining Service employees. This accusation touched a sensitive chord in many. But was it necessary to retaliate against employees who have little to do with policy-making?

The complaining students were right that there is a problem with the dining service policy, but they did not get the right problem.

The students said the system is impersonal, however, they fail to recognize that it is not the checkers' responsibility to memorize the name and number of each student and rely on their memory to spot persons abusing the system.

Presenting identification is impersonal only when both students and Dining Service make it so. When somebody checks out a reserve in the library and shows identification, no hassles arise and students do not stage pamphlet campaigns or chain themselves to the doors of Hawthorne-Longfellow.

The students also complained about inconvenience of carrying an ID to meals.

ID's, however, are small and lightweight—skillfully engineered to fit inside a wallet or a pocket. Just as one takes a pencil to class, an ID can easily be transported to the dining hall.

The real problem seems to be in the execution of the policy.

However, the policy is often carried to extremes, ignoring common sense. Several students have complained that a checker at the door, knowing them by name, has puched in their ID number and asked to see their IDs, which they were lacking and could not eat without.

It also seems that the checkers rarely even check to see that the ID matches the student. Usually they only check to see that the student has some piece of plastic to flash.

What angers students is that they give their number to the checker, who punches it into the computer and is able to see the student's name on the screen. However, if a student cannot produce something that looks like an ID card to flash he or she may not eat, not even if the student produces other forms of ID to corroborate their identity.

Some argue that at other schools, ID cards have a magnetic strip which must be read by a computer in order to get the number. With a system such as this, a "No ID, no eat" policy makes sense. However, when the system relies merely on producing something that will pass for your ID, students cannot take it seriously if the dining service does not.

Still, the easiest way to avoid unpleasant confrontations is to carry your ID.

Dining Service operates on a strict budget which makes quality meals and occasional popular specialty dinners, such as lobster bakes and the Winter's Weekend "Italian" night, possible. Before whining over the "no ID, no eat" policy, students should decide whether they want to continue to enjoy good food or consume "impersonal" production line food similar to the K-rations scooped out in large university cafeterias.

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

"The College exercises no control over the content of the student writings contained herein and neither it, nor the faculty assume any responsibility for the views expressed herein."

Editor
Managing Editor
News Editors
In-depth Editor
Entertainment Editor
Sports Editor
Photography Editors

Stephen Reynolds
Kathryn Nanovic
Tamara Dassanayake, Dawn Vance
Kevin Wesley
Sharon Smart
Justin Prisdorf
Alan Harris, Mary Ann Lai

Asst. News Editor
Asst. Sports Editor
Asst. Entertainment Editor
Contributing Editors
Senior Editors
Production Manager

Tanya Weinstein
Tod Dillon
Lizz Millan
Albert Mauro
Lori Bodwell, Michael Botelho
Vincent Jacks

Business Manager
Advertising Manager
Advertising Staff
Circulation Manager

Eric Foushee
Michael Townsend
Michelle Campagna, Nancy Eckel,
Kim Maxwell
Eric Palmquist

*Bowdoin Publishing Company
Lori M. Bodwell, Eric F. Foushee,
Albert P. Mauro, Stephen Reynolds

Published weekly when classes are held during the Fall and Spring semester by the students of Bowdoin College. Address editorial communication to the Editor, subscription communication to the Circulation Manager, and business correspondence to the Business Manager at the Bowdoin Orient, 12 Cleveland Street, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011, or telephone (207)725-3300. The Bowdoin Orient reserves the right to edit any and all articles and letters. Subscriptions are $8.00 a semester or $15.00 a year. Past issues cannot be mailed. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to The Bowdoin Orient, Moulton Union, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011.

The Bowdoin Orient welcomes all letters. Due to space limitations, letters of 300 words or less will be considered for publication first. Letters not printed the week submitted will be put on waiting list with top priority for the next issue. The Bowdoin Orient reserves the right to edit any letter due to space limitations. All letters must be signed and include the address and telephone number where the author can be contacted for verification.

LETTERS

Defining sexual harassment: additional responses to Otto's viewpoint

In his most recent letter (Dec. 11) Mr. Otto apologized for his insensitivity to the popular theme "Justice at Bowdoin." However, he manages to accomplish just the opposite. Mr. Otto's spiel subjects his readers, unfortunately, to his own emotional upheaval rather than focusing on the issue—sexual harassment. This is very sad.

It is tragic that Mr. Otto further victimizes the victims when he decided that "the women played an integral role in the escalation that eventually ended in this tragedy." Unfortunately, he has joined the "educated" ignorant who perpetuate this view. He ludicrously infers that these women deserved and wanted to be beaten up and traumatized. Such a statement is precisely the one that haunts victims of sexual harassment who search for an answer to their abuse. The thought that they could have possibly caused the infliction or in a sick way they somehow deserved it only exacerbates the pain. Nude or clothed, drunk or sober, special friend or special foe, no victim asks to be a victim.

It is important to remember that the men had friends in many different capacities at Bowdoin. Some who perhaps knew them in their quieter demeanor, others in their rambunctious drunken state. Or as these women did, in both capacities. It is clear that these men need help, one that extends beyond the Bowdoin community. Writing an article which attempts to slander the women in hopes that the administration will change its decision is benign. One can only hope that this was just one man's lamentation on the loss of a brother. But why do we have to be the subject of the story? Mr. Otto wrote the letter that was celebrated as an article. Yet it seems that in whatever capacity, it should have never been printed on the grounds of harassment—again.

Sharon Yandian '88

David Otto's most recent erudition on male-female relations proves that despite the gains made towards women's equality, there still exists rampant sexism. That he suggests that abuse can be accepted—even anticipated—when a woman permits a relationship to go out of the bounds of "normalcy"—as he defines normalcy—is frightening. As for the rest of Otto's "clarification," it is so ludicrous that it merits no further response.

Lisa M. Bourassa '88

David Otto's letter of Dec. 11 was indeed a "clarification"; it made clear that his stance on the issue of sexual harassment is oppressive and lacking in reason.

I ask David Otto, and those who think they agree with him, to put themselves in the shoes of the women who were harassed. And, I ask those who found David Otto's article disturbing to put themselves in the shoes of the two men charged with harassment. I tried to perform this exercise in empathy. I could not, however, get over my puzzlement: I am not able to think it's acceptable to humiliate my friends, to hurt them, to make them cry—even when I'm drunk—although apparently the two men, and their champion, David Otto, are.

But how, in any way, does "sexual joking" and being "sexually relaxed" make the use of coercion, the blatant disregard of the women's wills justifiable?

Implicit in David Otto's remarks are an attitude that certain kinds of relationships between men and women alter the basic rules of interaction between people. It would be inconceivable for them to attack male friends in such a way, although David asserts "the men viewed the women as their buddies, the way they would view another male."

The incident began as a "joke," which the women obviously didn't think was funny. An account printed in the Orient stated that the women resisted and screamed. But something suggested to these men that it was O.K. to frighten and overpower these women... according to Otto, because they were women and because they were "buddies." Absurd! Would they bully male friends, perhaps physically weaker ones, even after they were bruised and bleeding? No! Society would say there was something maladjusted in the behaviors of these young men.

Yet, because the victims were women, the actions of the men are not totally unacceptable to the David Otto's of our community.

We have come a long way in our attitudes towards sex, sexism, and gender relations; evidently, however, some people still take a stance that subjugation of women by men is defensible.

Jan Clough '88

Jervis clarifies views on moderate rush

I write to clarify my views on rush, alcohol, the law and college policy.

The purpose of rush is to attract new members to the fraternities. Prospective members are likely to be freshmen or sophomores, virtually all under 21. If fraternities serve alcohol at rush parties, they must either refuse to serve it to their special guests or they must break the law (and Bowdoin's social code). Why would fraternities want to place themselves in the position of having to make such a choice? And why do they want the college to put a seal of approval on their doing so?

In a society governed by law, individuals may choose whether to obey the law. If they choose to disobey, they know that they may face the consequences. They may, indeed, disobey in order to face the consequences and so dramatize the unjust laws. Or they may simply hope not to get caught.

The situation is more complex for organizations such as fraternities, the IPC or Bowdoin College. Officers of those organizations are trustees of the group and, as trustees, have responsibilities to past, present and future members. If an organization or one of its officers approves of an activity by the members of the organization, then the organization itself also becomes responsible for that activity and, by extension, is liable for any harm that may result from it.

Let me give an example: Suppose an individual causes injury to another and is held liable, in the courts, for that injury. Damage awards in personal suits may range into the millions of dollars. All the property of the injurer may be seized and his or her future earnings attached. If a fraternity sponsored the activity that resulted in the injury, then in addition to the property of the fraternity might be seized (the house and all the assets) as well as the present and future assets of officers (both undergraduate and alumni). Similarly for the IPC and the College. If the activity that resulted in the injury were illegal, then all parties would be subject to criminal as well as civil penalties.

Institutions simply cannot sanction illegal activities. There is too much at stake. For fraternities or the IPC to do so is to put them at institutions at risk. For to do so is to put your college at risk.

I have spoken so far only about legal considerations and consequences. These are quite clear. But individuals that can be held legally responsible can also be held morally responsible. We all ought to be governed by a standard of concern for one another that is higher than that imposed by the law. The events of the week-long series "The Bowdoin Party Life," highlighted for all of us the personal, family, and social costs of irresponsible alcohol use. I would hope that organizations as well as individuals would take the lessons of that series to heart.

Jane Jervis
Dean of the College

BARC volunteers needed

When's the last time you had the opportunity to dance the "hokey-pokey," play "duck, duck, goose," or "red-rover, red-rover"? Except for the first few weeks of school, chances are you haven't had the opportunity to meet 25 to 30 interesting people who would like very much to be your friend.

You can have both the occasion to meet new people and experience all these events and more with BARC. BARC stands for Bowdoin Assisting the Retarded Community, and it is one of the many volunteer service organizations at our college.

BARC consists of two parts—a Saturday recreation program and an evening social program. The Saturday recreation program is held from 10:30-12:00 upstairs in the Sargent Gym. Many of the participants are in training for the Special Olympics held on campus in the spring. It is the job of the BARC volunteer to offer support and guidance during the activities. Athletic skill is not required—only good humor.

The evening program is designed to help mentally retarded adults develop socialization and independent living skills. Once a week, BARC volunteers meet with retarded clients from a group home. Activities such as Valentine's Day Party, movies, sports events and barbecues are planned and do not require a major time commitment (usually two hours an event).

It is refreshing to get off campus and be with people who truly appreciate you and in turn will mean a lot to you as special and genuine friends. You can start this Saturday in the Sargent Gym. If you have any questions or want a schedule, you can contact Lisa Brenner, MU Box 107, or this semester's coordinator, Mary Beth Coolidge, MU Box 91.

Also, I am looking for at least three volunteers to help coordinate the Special Olympics which are held at the end of April at Whittier Field. It does not have to be a big time commitment and will definitely be a rewarding experience. Please call me if you are interested in volunteering. Thank you.

Lisa Brenner '88

Not so long ago, in a galaxy not so far away, America's number 1 pizza delivery company made students an offer:

If your group orders more pizzas than competing groups, you'll win a free pizza party!

It's so easy to play. Call your nearest Domino's Pizza store for details.

Domino's
Pizza
Delivers™

DORM WARS™

The Contest:

Domino's Pizza will award free, 30 large pizzas and $75.00 cash for liquid refreshments, to the group purchasing the most pizzas starting Thursday, Feb. 4, 1988 and running through Sunday, Feb. 14, 1988.

The Rules:

1. Carry-out orders and all deliveries made from your area's Domino's Pizza store will be counted if we are given your group's name and address.
2. Any pizza over $10.00 will be counted twice.
3. The winning group's name will be published in the local newspaper.
4. The location and time of the party will be convenient to both the winners and Domino's Pizza.
5. The 30 pizzas will be 2-item pizzas. The winner will have the choice of items. The pizzas do not have to be the same.

Fast, Free Delivery

26 Bath Rd.
Phone: 729-5561

Our drivers carry less than $20.00.
Limited delivery area.

©1982 Domino's Pizza, Inc.

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

FIRST CLASS MAIL
U.S. Postage PAID
BRUNSWICK, ME.
Permit No. 25

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

VOLUME CXVII

BOWDOIN COLLEGE, BRUNSWICK, MAINE, FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1988

NUMBER 15

Faculty calls for unlimited athlete ratings

STEPHEN COOK
ORIENT Staff

The faculty has reached its decision on the issue of admissions and athletic ratings. This decision, however, has not come without arousing its fair share of discontent.

Many members of the faculty have expressed discontent at the process and handling of the admissions and athletic rating issue which reached its culmination at Monday afternoon's faculty meeting. After two years of debate on what many have perceived as a very important issue, the faculty voted to allow the athletic staff to continue to rate an unlimited number of athletes.

The athletic staff, however, may only rate prospective students "1" or "1+," an indication that an applicant would participate at the varsity level Freshman or Sophomore year.

Two faculty members in particular, Professor of Government Janet Martin and Professor of History Daniel Levine voiced their displeasure with the decision. Both felt Monday's decision did not indicate the true position of the faculty. They pointed to the relatively low turnout (about seventy people) at the meeting, the disproportional number of coaches attending, and the fact that the decision did not come until late in the day, when many who had parental responsibilities had already left.

"I was surprised... it was not indicative of the faculty opinion," said Levine, who chaired the Admissions Committee.

Student representative to the Admissions Committee Steven Curley '88, who cosigned an alternate proposal to the committee, voiced disappointment at the number of faculty who attended. He expressed his annoyance at the use of the word "discrimination" in reference to the athletes.

"It is a discriminating process... in favor of academic excellence," said Curley. To argue that athletes are discriminated against, he said, is to lose sight of the primary goal of the admissions process.

At the meeting, four proposals were submitted for review by the faculty. The first, the "majority opinion," supported by Levine and Professor of History Paul Nyhus, called for a limitation of 200 names to be sent to the admissions office, each one with either a 1 or 1+ rating. This limitation was part of an effort to align Bowdoin's admissions process with that of comparable schools.

Curley's minority report, cosponsored by Professor of Mathematics Steve Fisk, called for the complete removal of the athlete rating system, asking that no list of names be submitted to the Admissions Office by the Athletic Department.

Another minority report was submitted by Professor of English Barbara Kaster, who refused to comment.

The fourth report, written by Coach John Cullen and Anne St. Peter '89, cancelled the 200 person limit, calling for the continued unlimited rating of athletes. The faculty voted to accept Cullen's and St. Peter's proposal.

Monday's decision by the faculty may not indicate final discussion of this issue. The proposal accepted passed by less than a ten percent margin of the vote and given the opinion of many that the vote was not indicative of the true majority, the issue is not yet closed. The decision will be reviewed at the end of the year, pursuant to the stipulations of the winning proposal.

Courcey, 3 others, elected to execs

KEVIN WESLEY
ORIENT In-Depth Editor

After a series of mix-ups involving the second-semester elections, four students were elected to Executive Board posts on Wednesday.

Sophomore Dan Courcey ran away with the election, garnering 39.1 percent (145) of the 371 votes cast. Other new members, with vote totals and percentages in parentheses, are Todd Remis '89 (62, 16.7%), Al Mauro '89 (55, 14.8) and M. Todd Breslow '90 (29, 8.8).

Seven candidates were vying for the four spots, which were vacated by Andrew Winter, Dana Bureau and Joe Gulino (all juniors) and David Spohr '91, who resigned this past week.

On Sunday, all seven candidates spoke in Kresge Auditorium, many detailing intricate plans for the semester. Approximately 20 people were in the audience.

While Courcey was the clear winner, the vote totals for Remis and Mauro were much closer. Both Mauro and Remis were studying in Europe last semester.

The closest race was for the final spot, with Breslow narrowly defeating Serena Zabin, a freshman first-time candidate. Breslow gained 33 votes to Zabin's 31.

There were several veterans who were running for the Executive Board this semester. Both Remis, and Scott Townsend, a junior, served on the Board last year. Remis was elected in the fall, while Townsend was elected in a similar interim election last spring.

In addition, freshman Rob Smith was making his second bid at an Executive Board post. He ran last semester unsuccessfully.

Three of the four newly elected candidates are members of fraternities, with Mauro the sole independent winning a post. Courcey is a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon; Breslow, Delta Sigma; and Remis, Theta Delta Chi.

Ben Paris '91 casts his vote in the Exec Board elections held Wednesday. Photo by Mary Ann Lai.

The election, which was originally to be held Monday, had to be moved as a result of an error in the balloting procedure. Originally the required number of signatures to be a candidate was listed as 50. However, according to George Hillhouse, the actual number of required signatures was 75.

Spohr, who originally was running the elections, was replaced by Elizabeth Yarnell '91, who organized the voting and tabulation procedures.

Hillhouse sent a letter to all the registered candidates and explained the need for the additional 25 signatures. Additional candidates were also allowed to join the race. Breslow and Scott Townsend entered the race after the nominations were reopened.

(Townsend submitted only 25 signatures, noting in Article VII of the Constitution of the Student Assembly that only 25 names are needed for an interim election.)

Election Results

Dan Courcey '90	145
Todd Remis '89	62
Albert Mauro '89	55
M. Todd Breslow '90	33
Serena Zabin '91	31
Rob Smith '91	26
Scott Townsend '89	19

Rush garners 60 drops

TANYA WEINSTEIN
ORIENT Asst. News Editor

Despite the initial controversy over this semester's wet rush policy, second semester rush proved highly successful for all of those houses which participated.

According to Dean of Students Kenneth Lewallen, there were no reported problems of breaking Inter-Fraternity Council policy. Lewallen said, "Second semester rush is far more low keyed. No trouble was anticipated or encountered. No incidences of misconduct came to my attention."

He added, "The IFC and the houses participating deserve credit for it."

Jennifer Goldsmith '90, president of the IFC, agreed that rush went smoothly. She said, "I thought it went wonderfully. Every house abided by the rules... there was complete cooperation, especially by the houses that weren't rushing."

Delta Sigma had the highest number of drops this semester, with a total of 17. Zeta Psi had 10 drops. Chris Meyer '89, House President, said of rush, "I think it had a really slow start but things picked up the second week...it was highly successful."

Alpha Delta Phi also had 10 drops. The president, Susan Young '89, said that she felt having a wet instead of a dry rush made no difference for her fraternity. She said, "All our events during the week were dry anyway so it had no bearing."

Psi Upsilon received 6 new members; Chi Psi got 8 drops. Ed Pond '88, House President, said "Rush went very well...I don't think it (wet rush) really changed things that much."

Alpha Rho Upsilon had 4 drops this semester. President Kirk Lawton '89 said rush "didn't seem to be that exciting...it was half-hearted - the whole Fraternity Review thing sapped everyone's spirits."

Lawton did not think that a wet rush influenced the number of drops. "It didn't make a difference - it was pretty dry around here anyway" (Continued on page nine)

Proctor numbers double

ANGELA DAIGLE
ORIENT Staff

The proctor system will undergo several changes in the coming year. In order to break down the high student to proctor ratio, a proctor will be assigned to each floor of the dormitories.

Currently, the ratio of students to proctors is 40 to 1, but an additional 12 proctors will lower that ratio to twenty to one. According to Ana Brown, assistant dean of students, "We are looking at more leadership positions for people on campus."

Brown said that in response to complaints, she met with Dean of Students Kenneth Lewallen last November to discuss a variety of ideas on the proctor situation. A few weeks ago, the preliminary budget for their proposal was approved.

As a result of their efforts, Lewallen and Brown decided to increase the number of proctors from 15 to 27 and to allow current proctors to apply for a second year.

The 12 additional proctors will each need separate rooms, usually occupied by sophomore students. As a result, exchange students, who usually live in freshmen housing, would be placed in Coles Tower.

Next year, the number of Resident Assistants will also increase. Brown hopes to have 3 or 4 R.A.'s in the Tower in order to establish a contact with the Dean's office as well as to take care of custodial and security matters. The Thompson interns currently located in the Tower take care of mostly administrative details such as (Continued on page nine)

What do you think of the Executive Board?

BECKY AUSTIN
ORIENT Staff

Todd Caulfield '89
"It gives people an opportunity to work out their political and sexual frustrations."

Tony Gosselein '90
"What's the Executive Board?"

Jenckyn Goosby '91
"I think they need to be a little more public about what they do and who they are."

Doug Kreps '91
"People should take it more seriously because it gives students a say with the administration and trustees."

Class-overcrowding aggravates both students and faculty

AL MAURO
ORIENT Contributing Editor

The following is the first of a two part series on class overcrowding. This week's article deals with class and departmental overcrowding and some of their causes. Next week's article will look at pre-registration difficulties and possible solutions to the problem.

Overcrowding is a complex problem with many different symptoms and, even more solutions. The problem ranges from difficulties in registering for courses to overcrowded classes to lost class time due to registration matters.

Overcrowding is a problem for students and faculty alike and there is no one solution to get rid of the problem.

According to preliminary figures released by Dean of the College Jean Jervis, 16 courses had more students pre-registered than could be accommodated by existing limits.

The figures also show that one course this semester has over 100 students, six courses have from 75-100, and 18 courses have 50-75.

Many of the classes experiencing a registration crunch are in the Government and History departments.

History Department Chairman Daniel Levine said his department is feeling the crunch more this year. "All the courses are bigger than they are meant to be," he said.

With the retirement of Professor William Whiteside next year, Levine expects the situation to get worse. He said that although a teacher was hired this year in anticipation of Whiteside's retirement, the number of courses and students served will drop from this year.

Levine said departments like history and government tend to be service departments. He said that the departments serve not only their own majors but also a significant number of students taking courses outside of their major since fewer specific skills are necessary for a mid-level history class than a mid-level chemistry course.

Levine said that some teachers' popularity increases their class size. He also said that some large classes tend to get larger because some students expect a large lecture course to less demanding than a smaller one.

However, Levine said most of the blame for crowded classes and over-registration problems lies with the abundance of enrollment limits on classes.

Levine said he thinks enrollment limits are approved without considering the effect on the enrollment situation overall. Even though a limit make sense for a certain class, it is often not fair to put the burden on other departments to take up the spill-over, he said.

History courses are limited in size to 75 students, while the government department has a limit of 50 students on all courses.

"Make government and English (departments) take people as freely as anyone else," he said. He said he sees nothing in government courses inherently different enough to merit the limit.

Professor John Rensenbrink, chair of the Government Department, said that his department was also experiencing overcrowding difficulties. "We have had a continuing problem for years meeting all the demands of students," he said.

Rensenbrink said the department does not have enough "person power." The Government Department consists of seven teachers this semester, having lost one professor who was visiting last semester.

Temporary relief seems to be in sight, according to Rensenbrink. He said the department is counting on receiving approval to hire an additional teacher for next year.

The government department has experienced a tremendous surge in popularity in the last 10 years and now has more majors than any other department. The number of faculty has not increased accordingly.

"If you have a trend with a department being oversubscribed, it's time to make policy decisions," he said.

Rensenbrink said that although the enrollment limit of 50 on government courses might add to the problem, it was born out of necessity. He said the limits were needed to help out teachers already swamped in an overcrowded department.

The enrollment limit was approved as a short-term transitional device, he said. Although the departmental limit is 50, Rensenbrink said many teachers have made exceptions this semester and have taken larger enrollments.

Rensenbrink said he feels some of the problems arise from a current fascination with the double major. He said that many students feel compelled to graduate with two majors, thus increasing the number of majors departments have to deal with.

A stronger single-major program with a strong minor, said Rensenbrink, is superior to stretching classes over two majors. It also would take a lot of the strain off the departments.

Rensenbrink said he is sometimes frustrated when he helps a student squeeze into a class to complete a major only to find that it is his second major.

President packs his bags

CECILIA HIRSCH
ORIENT Contributor

President of the College, A. LeRoy Greason recently relocated to Johnson House, previously the residence of the Dean of the College.

Greason lived in the house located at the corner of Maine and Boody streets from 1966 to 1975, when he served as Dean of the College.

When he was appointed president in 1981, he decided not to move into the traditional president's residence at 85 Federal St. He found it to be "not the best house to move into," especially as it is located at the busy intersection of Bath and Federal streets.

Greason also recognized the need for extra administrative space and the house was instead allocated to the development and alumni fund offices.

Former Dean of the College, Robert Wilhem resided in Johnson House until his departure last summer. During the fall semester, the house was used for official functions.

Two student fellows, Bina Chaddha and Kelly McKinney, were invited to live there as a "security measure," said Greason. They used the second floor of the three-story house and were responsible for looking after it.

This created a controversy as neither was paying rent or utilities, a privilege other fellows questioned. The two have since found new housing arrangements.

President Greason's new residence: Johnson House. Photo by Jessica Weil.

According to Greason, present Dean of the College Jane Jervis was "not excited" about residing in an official college house. The Greasons decided to move into the vacant house, thus ending the practice of "commuting to our own receptions."

"It's a nice old house," said the president, as he recounted its history. It was built in the 1840's by Mr. Boody (after whom Boody St. has been named) for the price of $5,000.

The house was chiefly inhabited by Professor of Modern Languages, Henry Johnson (class of 1874), who taught at the college from 1877 to 1918. The house was named in his memory when it was bequeathed to the College in 1957. It was registered as a historical landmark in 1975.

Greason added that he is "enjoying" the house and finding the spacious rooms beautiful and ideal for entertainment.

Asked if he believed in an official house for the president of the college, he stated, "Probably more than at the beginning of my term." He explained the need for official space for receptions and a house on campus where important visitors can feel welcome.

OCS offers job help

TANYA WEINSTEIN
ORIENT News Editor

Summer seems a long way away. However, according to the Office of Career Services application deadlines for summer jobs and internships are fast approaching.

The resource room in O.C.S. is filled with listings of available jobs and internships throughout the country. Complete job descriptions together with other pertinent information such as location, salary, necessary qualifications and where to send a resume are listed in the summer jobs binder according to occupation.

In addition, separate listings of occupations located in major cities, such as Boston, New York City and Washington D.C. are also available. For those seeking employment outside the United States, there is a separate binder for jobs and internships abroad.

O.C.S. Fellow Jennifer Mendelson suggests that students should begin to look for summer employment as soon as possible, as some deadlines have already passed. If you are starting from scratch, "Basically you can come in and just look around on your own," said Mendelson.

Once you have an idea of what you are looking for, there are two counselors and two student assistants available to help you explore the possible options.

The interns can also give you some helpful hints for preparing your resume if you have never written one before. The O.C.S. is open 8:30 am to 5 pm daily, and in addition the resource room is also open on Thursday evenings 8-9:30 pm.

Other resources include three national internship directories, a binder with complete listings of resorts, restaurants and lodges and a separate Cape Cod area directory. In addition, there is a Federal jobs directory and Career Directories.

Another resource that Mendelson says has been helpful in the past is the student surveys of previous jobs. She said, "We keep track of summer jobs people have had in the past. It's been helpful in that the student knows that the job does exist, who to contact, and students they can talk to about the jobs."

The O.C.S. also conducts another service called the Bowdoin Job Development Program. Alumni are asked to send information about their current jobs, and if they would be interested in helping a Bowdoin student obtain a position at their work place. "They cannot necessarily give you a job," Mendelson says, "but they may be able to help."

Mendelson added that O.C.S. continually receives news of new openings, and passes all this information to the students through the weekly bulletins. She emphasized, "It is really important for students to read the bulletin and come in for information on a specific job."

Beginning Feb. 19, a series of weekly sessions will begin entitled "Summer Options Luncheon Series." Every Friday at 12:30 students will come in and talk about their various job experiences. O.C.S. will have information available in that particular field for those interested.

Fruth heads conference addressing student leadership

DAWN VANCE
ORIENT News Editor

Campus leaders are firing up. At least that is what this past weekend's leadership conference indicates.

On Saturday Feb. 6, the Office of Student Activities headed by Coordinator William J. Fruth sponsored a workshop for student leaders at Cram Alumni House. A total of 24 student leaders representing such organizations as fraternities, Student Union Committee, class officers and the Afro-American society attended the day-long program.

Saturday's schedule of activities consisted of presentations by Barbara Babkir, director of Career Services, and Barbara Tootle of Ohio State University, and an informal open forum with a number of campus administrators. These administrators included Dean of the College Jane L. Jervis, Dean of Students Kenneth A. Leuwall, Assistant Director of Dining Service Mary Lou Kennedy, Director of Security Michael Pander, and Chairman of the Student Activities Fee Committee Cindy Heller '88.

The leadership conference kicked off with a presentation by Babkir. She addressed the topic "How do you Lead?" by utilizing the Myers Briggs Type Inventory (MBTI) as a means of understanding different styles of leadership. Students who attended the conference were asked to take the MBTI and return it to Fruth's office by Tuesday, February 2.

Students were given the MBTI so that they might better understand their leadership styles and personality types and how they impact upon the process of influencing and leading. Said Fruth, "The students were given the MBTI so they could understand more about themselves as individuals and would know more about how to work and communicate with others in different groups in more efficient ways."

Tootle's presentation aimed at the attainment of creativity. Entitled "Creativity Counts," Tootle's program focused on "Innovation as a 'cure' for many leadership ills" and was designed at provoking and entertaining the participants. Students were challenged to come up with new leadership techniques, fresh meeting strategies and different approaches to problem solving.

Fruth, who played an important role in organizing Saturday's activities, said of the leadership conference, "We wanted to touch base on three main focuses: the personal, the organizational and the informational." He pointed to the MBTI, creativity and the panel discussion with campus administrators as examples of each.

Fruth credited Scott Milo '88 and Beth Calciano '88 with much of the idea behind the leadership conference and stressed that the workshop had been in the making for a while. "Much of the idea for the conference came from a discussion I had with Scott and Beth last spring... it was something we (the Student Activities Office) had wanted to do for a while... it was a perceived need of campus organizations - it's an investment in the future."

The reactions of two students who attended Saturday's workshop characterized the success of the leadership conference. President of the Inter-Fraternity Council Jennifer Goldsmith '90 said, "It was great - I was pleasantly surprised. Both of the seminars were incredible and having the administration there to talk to was great... a widespread workshop with Tootle would be great for everyone."

Jenny Andrus '90 said, "The conference was a good sign that there's a solid group on campus who want to motivate people - it has gotten people in leadership positions and potential leadership positions fired up. The next step is for people who were at the conference to carry that motivation over to the rest of the campus."

Other leadership conferences will be held possibly in the late spring and early fall semesters at a time when "people are settled in but able to use some of this material they have learned and to apply it down the road," according to Fruth. The possibility exists of another conference in the late spring once organizations have chosen their new leaders for the fall semester.

Tamba speaks on US-Japan relations

LISA KANE
ORIENT Contributor

Minoru Tamba, Consul General of Japan in Boston, made his second appearance at Bowdoin on February 8th and 9th to talk with students and faculty and to lecture the general public on "Japan and the U.S.: What lies ahead?"

While at Bowdoin Tamba visited Professor Smith's Asian Studies History of Zen class where he discussed the significance of Zen in modern Japan.

Tamba also conversed with a group of Professor Huskey's students on the topic of "The Life of a Diplomat in Moscow" and met informally with students and teachers at a reception given in his honor. At 8:30 he gave a lecture addressing the question, "Japan and the U.S.: What Lies Ahead?"

Tamba attempted to defend Japan against what he perceived as common false assumptions particularly regarding the issue of trade. Said Tamba, "There are lots of misconceptions about Japan that are widely shared in the U.S." He went on to admit that many misconceptions about the U.S. exist in Japan as well.

Tamba expressed his shock at the huge impact of the Japanese culture on the American way of life and indicated that the same held true for Japan.

Before attempting to explain the origins of some of the common misconceptions that have arisen, Tamba said, "I think we can safely say that overall U.S. and Japanese relations have never been better....We have a broad relationship going far beyond trade." He then delved into the topic of trade by pointing out the inevitability of the two countries having problems simply due to the immense amount of trading that they engage in.

Tamba illuminated what he believes to be one of the most prominent misconceptions — that Japan is to blame for many of the problems relating to the U.S. trade deficit. Tamba emphasized his belief that Japan is much more liberal and less restrictive than Americans believe, pointing to Japan as one of the largest consumers of U.S. agricultural products as well as manufacturing products.

Tamba blamed poor public relations as one of the main reasons the U.S. has a false impression of the trade situation. He pointed to the Japanese culture as a "culture of understatement", where silence is considered virtuous. The Japanese also exhibit a weakness in communicating in foreign languages. These two factors have stunted the needed improvements in the country's public relations efforts.

Tamba also commented that the media concentrates on the failed businesses in Japan rather than those which succeed. He insisted that the export figures are complicated and often misleading since American companies like IBM, Lipton, Delmonte, Schick, and Pampers have prospered under the category of Japanese exports because they actually make their products in Japan.

Tamba explained that in a country with such a large population, competition is intense and naturally there will be some failures. He feels most Americans are ignorant of companies that are successful in Japan because the companies do not want to share their secret, while those which fail rationalize their errors by blaming Japan.

Minoru Tamba. Photo by Jessica Welt.

Tamba discussed an essential difference between Japanese and American companies: "Americans tend to think of profit...in a very short time." He emphasized the need for American companies to adjust their products. As an example he spoke of Mattel's transformation of the "Barbie" doll into a less sexy figure, causing a great increase of sales of the doll in Japan.

Tamba, who graduated from Tokyo University Faculty of Law and who received his MA in Russian Studies at Harvard University, sees his own purpose as filling the gap of misunderstandings that exist between Japan and the U.S.

Fish featured in food fest

Dining Service will launch its second annual Fish Festival with a SeaFest Dinner on Tuesday, Feb. 16 at Wentworth Hall.

In addition to the serving of a wide variety of fresh fish the evening will include a slide show of Maine fishing scenes, a Mako shark cooking demonstration, seafood served from a boat, a smelt shack and the "Claws Diner Theater" in Daggett Lounge. Prizes will be awarded including a day-long Lobster fishing expedition for two, dinner certificates for local restaurants and live lobsters packed in ice for your next trip home.

The Moulton Union will serve luncheon fish specials weekdays from Wednesday, Feb. 17 through Tuesday, Feb. 23. These special meals will feature fish selections found at local restaurants including the Stowe House, the Muddy Rudder, the Great Impasta, Taste of Maine and Graziano's.

LOOKOUT POINT HOUSE

Harpwell, Maine

(207) 833-5509

WINTER SPECIAL

2 days - 2 nights

MAP plan - double occupancy

2 people - $150.00

or

Rooms by the month

on the sea

eight miles from Bowdoin

TONTINE HAIR FASHIONS 207-729-5475

visit our two stylists, Paul and Gail,
in the Tontine Mall
BOWDOIN STUDENT DISCOUNT
FOR HAIRCUTS - BRING I.D.

There is nothing that says love like flowers. They make the perfect Valentine's gift. And Pauline's Bloomers, Tontine Mall, Brunswick, Me., has the beautiful sweetheart bouquet just for the occasion. We also have a nice assortment of cut spring flowers, roses and blooming plants. What a sweet way to say I Love You. Just call us at 725-5952 or come in. We deliver and we will be open until 8:00 p.m. Feb. 10-12 and Sunday the 14th all day.

TONTINE MALL - 149 MAINE STREET
BRUNSWICK, MAINE 04011
TELEPHONE 725-5952

Pauline's
Bloomers

76 UNION STREET BRUNSWICK CORSICAN

We are open 11-9 daily,
closed Tuesdays, and
are open Sundays 4-9.
Come in for your favorite
calzone or pizza.

New purchases expand computer capacity

MARSHALL CARTER
ORIENT Staff

The word processing and mainframe computer capacity available to the Bowdoin community was expanded last semester when the College acquired a wide range of new computer equipment.

In addition, Bowdoin is in the process of implementing the BITNET system, an inter-university network that allows the exchange of documents between member institutions.

The purchase of the new equipment was done both out of present need and capability for expansion, according to John Balling, academic users services coordinator of the Computer Center.

For word processing, six new IBM model 50 microcomputers were purchased, along with five Apple Macintosh SE and a Macintosh II. In addition, 25 Digital VT 220 and ET 330 terminals, already owned by the college, were hooked through the mainframe, increasing the number of word processing stations from eight to 37.

A new Apple LaserWriter, an IBM Page Printer, and a DEC laser printer have also been purchased for printing.

The majority of these computers have been placed in either Hubbard or Adams Hall. Despite this increase in the number of terminals, Balling stressed that the Computer Center will still be crowded at peak times.

According to Balling, the college's mainframe computing capacity has been expanded over

Pat Coughlin '89 uses one of the new Macintosh SE's in the computer lab. Photo by Alan Harris.

100 percent with the December acquisition of a new VAX 83-50. Assistant Director of the Computer Center Mark Nelsen said the VAX 83-50 and the other machines "utilize more modern software—the stuff that people want."

"We're trying to provide the latest equipment," said Balling. The purchase of different kinds of computers was necessary because users in different areas of study prefer different kinds of machines, he added.

The purchase of the new equipment is estimated at between $250,000 and $300,000. Nelsen added that more new equipment was in the budget for next year. Other plans for expanding the college's computer network include an on-line catalog for the college's library holdings.

Bowdoin College should be a part of the BITNET system by next week. Implementation began about three months ago. This system allows each institution hooked up to the network to exchange documents on the mainframe.

Donald Bogle addresses black stereotypes in film

MARSHALL CARTER
ORIENT Staff

According to Donald Bogle, the history of blacks in film is as old as American film itself. However, as he told a crowd of about thirty Wednesday night in Kresge Auditorium, talented black actors and actresses have traditionally been confined to stereotypical roles that limit their potential.

"Black movie history is quite long and extraordinarily extensive," said Bogle. Up until the last three decades, black performers were cast in one of five categories, including what he terms the submissive, good natured "Tom," the tricky "coon," the tragic mulatto, the "manny," and the strong, sexual "buck."

Up until 1949, these were the only roles that were available to blacks, including talents like Sam Lucas, James B. Lowe, Steppin Fetchit and Bill "Bojangles" Robinson. In fact, the roles of black characters were often played by white actors in blackface, like Al Jolson in the classic film "The Jazz Singer."

The black film world saw its first real dramatic star in Sidney Poitier, who emerged in the 1950's. However, Poitier was not writing the scripts, and as a result he was often portrayed as a "modernized Tom," making great sacrifices so that his white friends would live. This theme which Bogle classifies as "black self-sacrifice" resulted in heroic, but stereotyped characters.

American film has also stereotyped black women said Bogle. Often cast as the tragic mulatto, the end of the movie finds these women unfulfilled. He cited actresses Lena Horne and Dorothy Dandridge as examples. Before these mid-century actresses women were commonly de-sexed and deglamorized.

The Eighties, according to Bogle, have seen the first "authentic black movie superstars." Bogle pointed out, however, that actors like Eddie Murphy and Richard Pryor are often cast as the supporting actors, with the purpose of stealing the show from the white lead actor.

This was the case with Nick Nolte in Murphy's first film, "48 Hours." One trend that Bogle has noticed is the tendency for black actors to be "romantically stranded" in their roles, while the white actors have relationships.

Bogle is presently a professor at Rutgers University, where he teaches a course entitled "Minorities in the Mass Media." He is considered one of the country's leading authorities on blacks in American popular culture.

He is the author of two books entitled "Toms, Coons, Mulattos, Mammies, & Bucks: An Interpretive History of Blacks in American Films" and "Brown Sugar: Eighty Years of America's Black Female Superstars." The latter has been made into a four part documentary for the Public Broadcasting Service (PBS), while the former won the Theatre Library Association Award as Best Film Book of the Year. Bogle has also written for several major magazines and has appeared on shows such as "Donahue" and "Today."

Get a sweetheart of a score.

Does your exam have a crush on you? If so, kiss your fears goodbye with the best test prep anywhere—Stanley H. Kaplan.

For nearly 50 years, students have loved Kaplan's test-taking techniques and educational programs.

Our courses have increased the confidence of over one million students boosting their scoring power on the SAT, LSAT, GMAT, MCAT, GRE, NTE, CPA and others.

So say, "Kaplan, be my test prep." You just might get a Valentine from someone special—like the school of your choice.

KAPLAN
STANLEY H. KAPLAN EDUCATIONAL CENTER LTD.

DON'T COMPETE WITH A KAPLAN STUDENT—BE ONE

Classes forming now in Portland for LSAT and GMAT June exams. Call now to reserve your place. (617) 964-TEST (Collect)

CALL WILBUR'S
CANDY FOR BALLOON
DELIVERY

Come in for all your Valentine Favorites!

Valentine Candy Valentine Pops
Heart Shaped Tins Chocolate Moose

Featuring Tom's homemade chocolate roses

Tontine Fine Candies

Traditional & Unique Candies
Open Extended Hours for Valentine's

WILBUR'S CANDY TONTINE FINE CANDIES
13 Bow Street Tontine Mall
Freeport, ME Brunswick, ME
865-6129 / 865-4071 729-4462

A Likely Yarn
90 UNION STREET
BRUNSWICK, ME 04011
(207) 725-2147

Anniversary Sale—
10% off, storewide
from Feb 2 to Feb 20

Quit smoking.

WE'RE FIGHTING FOR
YOUR LIFE

American Heart
Association

BARGAINS FOR STUDENTS
Bargain Balcony
Boutique
55 Plus Center, Brunswick
Open Mondays, Tuesdays and
Thursdays, 10 to 3

Part-Time -
Home Mailing Program!
Excellent income!
Detail, send self-addressed,
stamped envelope.
WEST
Box 5877, HILLSIDE, N.J. 07205

CRUISE SHIPS
NOW HIRING. M/F
Summer & Career Opportunities
(Will Train). Excellent pay plus
world travel. Hawaii, Bahamas,
Caribbean, etc. CALL NOW
206-736-0775 Ext.544F

SPRING BREAK
NASSAU/PARADISE ISLAND
from $279.00
Package Includes: Roundtrip Air,
Transfer, 7 Nights Hotel, Beach
Parties, Free Lunch, Cruise, Free
Admission to Nightclubs, Taxes
and more!
Cancun Packages Also Available
Organize a small group—earn a
free trip. Call A.T.S.
1-800-231-0113 or 203-967-3337

TYPING and WORD
PROCESSING
REPORTS, RESUMES, etc.
CALL 729-6796

TYPISTS - Hundreds weekly
at home! Write: P.O. Box 17
Clark, New Jersey 07066

ENTERTAINMENT

Imagery of Beckmann prints interpreted

LISA WLODARSKI
ORIENT Contributor

On Sunday, Margo Clark, an Associate Professor from the University of New Hampshire presented a slide lecture, "The Imagery of Max Beckmann's Prints." This was presented in conjunction with the Walker Art Museum's current exhibit, "Max Beckmann: Masterprints," which will be on view through March 20.

Clark was the ideal choice for a lecture on Beckmann. She studied his work for her Doctoral dissertation at Washington University in St. Louis, and has lectured extensively and published many articles about the artist.

At the outset of her presentation, Clark commented that Beckmann's work "is remarkable for its retention of a wide range of ideas." The main idea to keep in mind, however, is that the prints in this exhibit were executed in Germany between 1914 and 1922. They reflect the effect of World War I on German society, during which a sense of tradition was lost and individuals felt powerless in a social system more complex than they could understand. Said Clark, "[Beckmann's works] are a commentary of life in his time."

A theme that is evident in many of Beckmann's works is the question of appearances and what stands behind them. Said Clark, "Max Beckmann thought that the essential problem of humanity is seeing beyond the duality of appearances." His choice of subjects reflects this, as does the style in which he conceived them. He did not attempt to idealize, rather, he meant to draw people beyond the world of appearances to the thoughts behind them.

Clark began her slide presentation by showing the evolution of Beckmann's style. She maintained that the artist began his career, as Picasso did, conservatively. He initially painted momentous events such as the sinking of the Titanic in 1912. He later moved to Berlin and adopted the "modern historical" style of painting.

Beckmann's work as a medical orderly during the war was the subject of or inspiration for most of his wartime and postwar work.

Said Clark, "Max Beckmann experienced severe traumatic stress syndrome [during World War I] and that contributed to a major stylistic shift in his work."

This change in style, from the 'old school' to a narrative of his contemporary culture, meant that his audience would also change. He began to concentrate on print-making rather than painting—which was the medium through which he was best known—because, Clark explained, "printmaking was a way of reaching a younger... less affluent audience."

In fact, Max Beckmann's exposure in America was due largely to the publishing of a lithograph (print) portfolio by his New York dealer, Curt Valentin, in 1946.

The second major change in Beckmann's style was a result of his growing involvement in esoteric literature and philosophy. Also, he began to look outside Western philosophy to Eastern thought.

Said Clark, one goal Beckmann tried to achieve through his art was "transforming personal pain... he wondered how such all-knowing God could create such a messed-up world."

In the exhibit, one can find evidence of all these factors at play in Beckmann's work. Clark maintained that he often used the image of carnivals and cabarets as "an expression of the ridiculous leading to the sublime." The carnival prints in the exhibit depict performers who seem disillusioned and despondent.

Beckmann described the recurring nature of history as an organ grinder's tune, in which the same tunes keep coming back, and the carnival was how he symbolized this.

Some of Beckmann's prints were based on famous older works. Clark showed a slide of one of his prints "Yawning," in which the composition parallels Bosch's "Christ Carrying the Cross." However, Beckmann depicted the figures as the society elite, bored and yawning at their surroundings. In many of the exhibit's prints, dress is meant to be an indicator of the social status of the subject.

Clark pointed out that Beckmann "saw the world as a stage... and he regarded his own personality as a role he played." The exhibit includes several of his self-portraits. In each, he portrayed himself as a different character. Also, he put his own image—in different roles—into many of his other drawings and paintings.

The most relaxed, somewhat peaceful print in the exhibit is "Frauenbad," an image of women in a bath. The mood in this scene is appropriate because the women are sheltered from the turmoil of the public world, which is the central theme of most of the prints in the exhibit.

"Frau Mit Kerze," a woodcut by Max Beckmann.

LARRY GLENN

ORIENT Staff

Johnathan Richman and the Modern Lovers - Modern Lovers 88 (Rounder Records)

There's one event which, in my mind at least, sums up the phenomenon that is Boston's most endearing cult figure, Johnathan Richman. It was this fall at the Tree Cafe in Portland—lots of you were there. He was about to do a slow encore, and he said something to the effect of "... I don't usually like to do this, because everybody gets all drunk and stuff, and they start yelling and blurch it all out..." Here we are at this hip rockin' club, everyone's reeling, and this guy's up there on stage telling us not to blurch it all out! How can you not love him?

Everybody has a soft spot for Johnathan, even if they've never heard him. It's there, they just don't know it yet. He's the man you love to love. His childlike naivete and boundless optimism have never failed to put me in a good mood. When things get real bad, I just slap a Modern Lovers album on the turntable, and everything seems to be a little better.

Seventeen years ago, he recorded his first album, The Modern Lovers, with his band of the same name. Intensely minimal rock and roll, combined with very, uuh, quirky, lyrics (for example, the original version of "Pablo Picasso (was never called an asshole)" you probably remember it from Repo Man) destined the album to be pretty much overlooked—remember, those were the days of Jethro Tull and Led Zeppelin.

Record Reviews

There were a few who did hear and appreciate what the Modern Lovers were doing. And those people went on to form bands with names like Television, Blondie, The Ramones, The Clash, and the Sex Pistols. Johnny Rotten once said that the only band he ever liked was the Modern Lovers.

That was Johnathan's nasty period. Saying "asshole." Then he went on to put out a whole bunch of records full of songs that seemed to be so childish that just about everyone was genuinely weirded out.

For example, "Hey There Little Insect" - "Hey there little insect, please calm down—so we can have fun and fool around!" But gradually, people began to come around, and think that his stuff was... neat.

Modern Lovers 88 is his latest album of really catchy doo wop/rockabilly/funky/happy tunes. Great stuff. Lots of wangedy-wangs and diddley-wahs. It sort of, bounces, I guess. The lyrics are going to be the most problematic part of the album. People have been ripping apart his lyrics for years. They're so simple and childlike that it seems like there must be some kind of deeply hidden inner socio-economic subtext. Well, honestly, there's not. Take "I Have Come Out to Play," for example. It's about just that. Goin' outside to play after dinner. Ridin' your bike. "Gail Loves Me" is about, well, how Gail loves him. But it's not in the egotistical power-trip sense at all. He's just happy that she loves him. In Johnathan's world, love is good and happy and fun—not, as most of the world seems to think, an accident waiting to happen.

I dunno. Maybe they're right, but it's a hell of a lot nicer to look at it Johnathan's way. I think that if he got elected president instead of one of these Hart/Kemp/Bush/Dole/Simon/Robertson/DuPont/Gephardt idiots, we could just sit down with the Russians over a chocolate shake and work things out.

STEVE GEVONON

ORIENT Contributor

The Sisters of Mercy - Floodland

Life is s---y. We all know that. You generally don't get what you want and when you do it's too small and you have to go to the return window in some overcrowded understaffed sweaty department store. And there bear witness to a Darwinian horror show of consumerism in its ugliest form.

I'll tell you something. I'll bare my soul for a bit, in print, if you don't mind...

Presently, I'm an eternity away from my "significant other", and hysterically depressed surely comes close to describing the state of mind I'm in these days. Consequently, I'm not too receptive to other people's moans and groans about what a godawful world this is. I've got my problems, and, like most people, I feel that my problems surpass those of others by a few light years.

This all relates back to this album I'm listening to while I write this. The Sisters of Mercy have released "Floodland." The Sisters, as those of us who're hip to the new music groove call them, have been around since the early eighties, and have carved for themselves a little (perhaps even significant) niche in the gloom doom/gothic crevice of rock 'n' roll.

Spawned from the same muck & mire as Joy Division/New Order, Bauhaus, Alien Sex Fiend, and Dead or Alive, the Sisters have cultivated deep, somber vocals, gaug, pale faces, and Black, lots of Black, to give themselves an aura, if you will, of seriousness. That is to say, that we are meant to, sort of at least, take them and what they have to say seriously.

OK. When I'm 16, 17, 18 (19, even) and my biggest worry is my new zit on the end of my nose, I'll go for it. And I did. However, all of this singing of introspection and manic depression which invariably comes to the conclusion that their lives (the Sisters) are more deep, profound, and generally meaningful than mine... well, ah... well, it wears thin. Awwfully quick. Like fecal matter through a goose.

"Floodland." Well, if you've listened to the Sisters before, it's more of the same old stuff. Andrew Eldritch is singing from somewhere around his kneecaps, the production is heavy and lush, and their little electronic friend is thumping out the beats as usual. It's probably the most fun member of the band to hang around with...

Calendar

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 12

7:30 and 10:00 p.m.—The BFVS presents The Lord of the Rings, in Smith Auditorium. Admission is $1. Based on novels by J.R.R. Tolkien, its plot involves different races competing for possession of the powerful rings. A Ralph Bakshi epic, the movie is done in fantastic animation. (—Allegria McNeally)

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 13

3:00 p.m.—The Afro-American Center sponsors a rap session, taking as its topic "Where Do Minorities Fit into the College Scene?"

7:30 and 10:00 p.m.—The BFVS presents Highlander, in Smith Auditorium. Admission is $1. The weekend's fantasy continues in this thriller. Immortal antagonists wage fierce winner-take-all battle for knowledge and power for all the ages. Directed by Russell Mulcahy, the screenplay is by Gregory Widen, Peter Bellwood, and Larry Ferguson. The cast features Sean Connery, Christopher Lambert, Roxanne Hart, Clancy Brown, and Beatie Edney. (—Allegria McNeally)

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 14

3:00 p.m.—A Gallery Talk on "Exemplary Women: The Allegorical Figures in the Walker Art Building Murals" is given by John W. Coffey, curator, in the Museum of Art, Walker Art Building.

3:00 p.m.—Mona Lisa (in English) is presented by the Language Media Center in Smith Auditorium. The film stars Bob Hoskins, Cathy Tyson, and Michael Caine.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 15

All Day—OCS presents undergraduate summer job opportunities: East Over Resorts (jobs), and Equicor, a Boston based insurance firm (internships).

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 16

7:30 p.m.—Floyd B. Barbour '60, associate professor of English and director, Afro-American Cultural Affairs, Simmons College, Boston, is the featured speaker for the 19th Annual Black Arts Festival: Black Achievement. Barbour will speak in Beam Classroom, Visual Arts Center.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 17

3:00 and 8:00 p.m.—The BFVS presents its Weekly Wednesday Film, Matter of Heart, in Kresge Auditorium. Admission is free. This film is a profound glimpse into the life and genius of the original thinker, Carl Gustav Jung. Far more than a biography, Matter of Heart probes the intellect and soul of Jung to reveal a fuller perspective of his work and influence in the psychological world.

12:30 p.m.—A Gallery Talk, "Still Life with Earthenware Vessel", is presented by Thomas B. Cornell, professor of art, Walker Art Building.

EXHIBITIONS

"Martha Diamond: Paintings": Exhibited in the Bowdoin Museum's 20th-Century Gallery, much of the work was inspired by the architectural environment of Manhattan. It will run through March 20.

"Laura McPhee: Photographs" is on display in the Walker Art Building. It will run through February 28.

An exhibition of color landscapes by Brunswick photographer Frank Brockman will be on display through February 29 in the Lancaster Lounge, Moulton Union.

MOVIES

Evening Star Cinema (Tontine Mall)

Wallstreet, showing at 7:00 and 9:10 p.m.

THE "CLUBBUSTERS"

NO CLUB
HASSLES!

NO CLUB
GIMMICKS!

$3.99
EACH
PLUS POSTAGE

USE THIS PAGE OR A PHOTOCOPY AS YOUR ORDER FORM. MARK AN "X" IN BOX NEXT TO YOUR SELECTIONS.

CUT OUT AND MAIL ENTIRE PAGE

WHITESNAKE GEFEN QHS 24099 (9 98)	WHITESNAKE	SLIDE IT IN
WHITNEY HOUSTON ARISTA AL 8405 (9 98)	WHITNEY	RADIO K.A.O.S.
DEF LEPPARD MERCURY 830 675 1/POLYGRAM	HYSTERIA	DARK SIDE OF THE MOON
PINK FLOYD COLUMBIA DC 40599	A MOMENTARY LAPSE OF REASON	ONE WAY HOME
SOUNDTRACK RCA 6408-1 R (9 98)	DIRTY DANCING	NO PROTECTION
SOUNDTRACK SLASH 25405/WARNER BROS. (9 98)	LA BAMBA	BEVERLY HILLS COP II
JOHN COUGAR MELLENCAMP MERCURY 832 465 1/POLYGRAM	THE LONESOME JUBILEE	ALPHABET CITY
U2 ISLAND 90581/ATLANTIC (9 98)	THE JOSHUA TREE	BABYLON AND ON
HEART CAPITOL P 12546 (9 98)	BAD ANIMALS	TOP GUN
DANNY WILSON VIRGIN 90596/ATLANTIC (8 98)	MEET DANNY WILSON	BIG GENERATOR
RITCHIE VALENS (H&M) DEL. FI RNLP 70178/CAPITOL (8 98)	THE BEST OF RITCHIE VALENS	GO ON...
RUSH MERCURY 832 464 1/POLYGRAM	HOLD YOUR FIRE	ELECTRIC
SOUNDTRACK-MADONNA SIRE 25411/WARNER BROS. (9 98)	WHO'S THAT GIRL	WENDY AND LISA
FLEETWOOD MAC WARNER BROS. 25471 (9 98)	TANGO IN THE NIGHT	TIFFANY
R.E.M. IRS 42059/MCA (8 98)	DOCUMENT	LICENSED TO ILL
GRATEFUL DEAD ARISTA AL 8452 (9 98)	IN THE DARK	THE SMITHS SIRE 25449/WARNER BROS. (8 98)
EUROPE GEFEN WFE 40241/E.P.A.	THE FINAL COUNTDOWN	STRANGEWAYS, HERE WE COME
KENNY G ARISTA AL 8447 (8 98)	DUOTONES	FASTER PUSSYCAT ELECTRA 60730 (8 98)
LISA LISA & CULT JAM COLUMBIA FC 40477	SPANISH FLY	FASTER PUSSYCAT
AEROSMITH VIRGIN QHS 24162 (8 98)	PERMANENT VACATION	KISS ME, KISS ME
ANITA BAKER ELECTRA 60444 (8 98)	RAPTURE	INTO THE FIRE
GREAT WHITE CAPITOL ST 12565 (8 98)	ONCE BITTEN	CURIOSITY KILLED THE CAT MERCURY 832 025 1/POLYGRAM
KISS MERCURY 832 626 1/POLYGRAM	CRAZY NIGHTS	KEEP YOUR DISTANCE
SOUNDTRACK ATLANTIC 81767 (9 98)	LOST BOYS	THE OUTFIELD COLUMBIA DC 40619
MOTLEY CRUE ELECTRA 60725 (9 98)	GIRLS, GIRLS, GIRLS	BANGIN'
THE CARS ELECTRA 60747 (9 98)	DOOR TO DOOR	STEVE WINWOOD ISLAND 25448/WARNER BROS. (8 98)
HUEY LEWIS & THE NEWS CHRYSALIS OV 41534	FORE!	BACK IN THE HIGH LIFE
RICHARD MARX (M&M) HATTAN ST 33049 (8 98)	RICHARD MARX	PAUL SIMON WARNER BROS. 25447 (9 98)
BOB JOVI MERCURY 830264 1/POLYGRAM	SLEEPY WHEN WET	GRACELAND
EXPOSE ARISTA AL 8441 (8 98)	EXPOSURE	PETER GABRIEL GEFEN QHS 24088 (8 98)
CUTTING CREW VIRGIN 90573/ATLANTIC (8 98)	BROADCAST	SO
GENESIS ATLANTIC 81641 (9 98)	INVISIBLE TOUCH	THE DOORS ELECTRA 60345 (12 98)
POISON (M&M) ST 12523/CAPITOL (8 98)	LOOK WHAT THE CAT DRAGGED IN	BEST OF THE DOORS
CINDERELLA MERCURY 830076 1/POLYGRAM	NIGHT SONGS	THE SILENCERS RCA 6442 1 R (8 98)
BODEANS SLASH 25429/IMPRESO (8 98)	OUTSIDE LOOKING IN	A LETTER FROM ST. PAUL
PET SHOP BOYS (M&M) HATTAN 44972 (8 98)	ACTUALLY	JANET JACKSON A&M SP 3905 (9 98)
BILLY IDOL CHRYSALIS OV 41620	VITAL IDOL	CONTROL
SUZANNE VEGA A&M SP 5136 (8 98)	SOUTIDE STANDING	CROWDED HOUSE CAPITOL ST 12485 (8 98)
NAJEE (M&M) HATTAN ST 17241 (8 98)	NAJEE'S THEME	ROCK YOU TO HELL
DAVID BOWIE (M&M) HATTAN PJ17267 (9 98)	NEVER LET ME DOWN	RED SPEEDWAGON EPIC FE 40444/E.P.A.
SPYRO GYRA MCA 42046 (8 98)	STORIES WITHOUT WORDS	LIFE AS WE KNOW IT
W.A.S.P. CAPITOL CLT 48053 (8 98)	LIVE IN THE RAW	JONATHAN BUTLER JIVE/MCA 1032 1 J/MCA (8 98)
BAHANARAMA LONDON 828 043 1/POLYGRAM	WOW	JONATHAN BUTLER
PRINCE (M&M) PARK 25577/WARNER BROS. (15 98)	SIGN 'O' THE TIMES	SENTIMENTAL HYGIENE
WHITNEY HOUSTON ARISTA ALB 8212 (8 98)	WHITNEY HOUSTON	THE JESUS AND MARY CHAIN WARNER BROS. 25454 (8 98)
GLORIA ESTEFAN & MIAMI SOUND MACHINE EPIC DE 40766/E.P.A.	LET IT LOOSE	DARKLANDS
38 SPECIAL A&M SP 5110 (9 98)	BEST OF 38 SPECIAL-"FLASH-BACK"
MADONNA SIRE 25442/WARNER BROS. (9 98)	TRUE BLUE
SOUNDTRACK MCA 6214 (9 98)	MOONLIGHTING
ECHO AND THE BUNNYMEN SIRE 25577/WARNER BROS. (8 98)	ECHO AND THE BUNNYMEN
SWING OUT SISTER MERCURY 832 213 1/POLYGRAM	IT'S BETTER TO TRAVEL
SAMMY HAGAR GEFEN QHS 24144 (9 98)	I NEVER SAID GOODBYE
DEBBIE GIBSON ATLANTIC 81780 (8 98)	OUT OF THE BLUE

☐ Yes! Please send me your 1987 catalog with over 7000 titles. I have enclosed $1.00 extra for postage.

We Are Not A Club!

WE ONLY SELL CASSETTES!! ^{3%} WE ACCEPT
PERSONAL CHECKS OR MONEY ORDERS
POSTAGE & HANDLING: ALL ORDERS MUST INCLUDE
THREE DOLLARS & FIFTY CENTS (3.50). NO MATTER HOW
LARGE OR SMALL THE ORDER. ALL ORDERS SHIPPED
FIRST CLASS MAIL. TAPES ARE 100% GUARANTEED

NAME _____
ADDRESS _____
CITY _____ STATE _____ ZIP _____

MAKE CHECKS PAYABLE TO:
Students Publishing
PO BOX 4649
FORT LAUDERDALE,
FLORIDA 33338

$3.99 x = _____
CATALOGUE (1.00)
POSTAGE & HANDLING $3.50
TOTAL ENCLOSED

SPORTS

Mike Botelho

Hulkamania— The end of an era

My faith and confidence have been shattered.

Once a firm believer and avid supporter of the World Wrestling Federation (WWF), I have come to seriously question the goodness of its cause and its very legitimacy as a respectable international institution.

In my youth, I looked up to the charismatic personalities of Rowdy Roddy Piper, Sergeant Slaughter, Jesse "The Body" Ventura, the Junk Yard Dog, Mr. Wonderful (Paul Orndorff) and George "The Animal" Steele. To me, these fine athletes exemplified the noble heroism and highest virtues found in professional sports.

The WWF always captured the thrill and drama that I found so lacking in other athletic contests. Yet, it was devoid of the corruption and financial scandals which have often plagued professional sports. I viewed it as a pure, clean sport whose primitive innocence remained unadulterated by the ills of other big time athletics.

However, such past convictions have blown up in my face. Intense disillusionment dwells within me. A dark, heavy cloud hangs over the once proud World Wrestling Federation. It has sunk to the abysmal depths of gloom and despair. The darkest hour for WWF fans appears at hand.

What has brought on such a dismal forecast?

This sudden change of fortune has arisen because of those events which transpired last week. On Friday night, Andre the Giant stripped former champ, Hulk Hogan, of his WWF belt in championship action. It was not the result which bothered me, but the way in which that result occurred.

Although I was reluctant, at first, to discredit the WWF, I am fairly certain that some wrongdoing was done that Friday night. At one point in the match, Hogan had pounded the Giant into submission and had him pinned for well over three counts. However, the referee was looking the other way, on the other side of the ring, and thus overlooked the pin. Andre then began to hammer Hulk and managed to pin him to the canvas. The referee proceeded to call the Hulkster down for three counts although his left shoulder was clearly off the canvas floor.

At the end of the fight, to my amazement, a second referee entered the ring. I knew then that something was askew. I quickly realized that the original ref was a fake, and that the "official" referee was the one who had just arrived.

Andre the Giant and this phony ref had "robbed" Hogan of a title that the champ had justly retained! This imposter had been bribed to give the crown to Andre. (There was some speculation that he even had expensive plastic surgery done in order to look like the real ref.) Imagine, the limits to which a criminal mind will go.

(Continued on page eight)

Polar Bears avenge loss to Salem State

ERIC PALMQUIST
ORIENT Circulation Manager

They say that the lust for revenge is bitter, but that the taste is sweet. If that is the case then the Polar Bears washed a bad taste out of their mouths Tuesday night by defeating the Salem State Vikings, 3-2.

It was a battle for the home ice advantage in the opening round of the play-offs, and it was a chance to regain some pride after suffering a 5-2 loss to the Vikings earlier in the season. It was also a chance to recover from a disappointing road trip to New York State, where the Bears defeated a weak Union team but lost to a fired up squad from Hamilton.

Salem State appeared to be too strong the Polar Bears once again when they jumped out on top with a goal off a face-off just four minutes into the game. But the Bears came back minutes later when Kevin Powers took a feed from Kevin Potter and linemate Steve Thornton to tie the score. It was the sixth power play goal in the last three games, a welcome sight after an earlier string of 0 for 23.

The teams settled down to play excellent physical hockey, and it was not until the fourth minute of the second period when Steve Thornton took a Jim Pincock pass, circled behind the net, and found Steve Ilkos alone out front for the goal that the Bears had a lead they would never relinquish.

The Bears then picked up their play, as they harassed the Vikings' zone continually; however, they came up empty each time. Finally, midway through the third period, with the Polar Bears up a man, Mark Smyth rammed home a rebound in front of the net that appeared to seal the victory. But just 25 seconds later the Vikings answered back with a goal of their own, and the game was tight once more.

This set the stage for the late game heroics in which the Polar Bears fought off a Viking power play, a 4 on 3 disadvantage, and a brief 6 on 4 disadvantage to finally ice the puck with 8 seconds left and seal the victory. Goaltie Steve Janas was excellent in net, and received fine support from a revamped defensive crew featuring newcomers Brandon Sweeney and Ray Diffley.

Alan Carkner (9) and Steve Ilkos (20) break-up Salem State attack. The Bears were able to hold off the Vikings 3-2. Photo by Lori Bodwell.

The defensive changes were forced when John Ashe and Alan Carkner were injured during the game with the Skating Dutchmen of Union. Ashe strained the ligaments in his knee, and Carkner suffered a minor concussion that blurred his vision. Their absence was evident in the Hamilton game, where the Bears were outshot 36 to 25 and tired noticeably early in the third period.

Hamilton opened the scoring one minute into the game, but goals by Roger Ladda and Pincock put the Polar Bears up after the first period. The Continentals tallied two goals in 36 seconds to rally late in the second period to regain the lead, but Steve Thornton knotted the score to open the third period. The lack of defensemen took its toll, however, as the Bears tired and allowed two late goals to lose, 5-3.

The trip to Union did see the rebirth of the Polar Bear power play, which had disappeared like a Maine summer. In that game the Bears got power play tallies from Mike Cavanaugh, Potter, Ilkos, two from Thornton, and a regular goal from Ladda to win, 6-3. Ilkos' goal was the 50th of his career, joining him with Thornton as career 50 goal scorers on this year's squad.

The Polar Bears travel to Boston University tonight, then invade Amherst to take on the Lord Jeffs tomorrow. Their final regular season home game will be Wednesday against arch rival Colby.

Basketball falls to 11-4

JIM ANDERSON
ORIENT Contributor

Bowdoin women's basketball team continued its downward trend, dropping a heart breaking 82-79 decision to St. Joseph's College. The loss, which dropped Bowdoin to 11-4, was the second time in the last three outings that the final few seconds determined the outcome. Different bounces of the ball at critical moments easily could have had a significant effect on Bowdoin's win-loss record.

Bowdoin continued its disturbing habit of falling behind early and was forced to play catch up in the latter stages of the game. St. Joe's, noted for playing wide open, fast break basketball caught the Bears on their heels enough times to open up a 51-42 halftime lead. The teams pushed the ball at one another consistently throughout the half, attributing for the unusually high score.

In the second half the defenses began to tighten and the pace of the game subsided. The Bears found themselves down by as many as 12 during the half but used exceptional shooting from the floor to keep the game within reach. Captain Nancy Delaney stated that their 53 percent shooting kept them in it. Although the defense held the Lady Monk's to about 40 percent a sizeable rebound advantage, especially off the offensive boards, in favor of St. Joe's kept Bowdoin at bay.

Bowdoin made one final rush in the last 5 minutes. The last-ditch effort was led by Kim Lemieux who scored 15 of her 23 points in the final 20 minutes. The Bears managed to close to within one at 80-79 with under a minute remaining. In the waning seconds St. Joe's knocked in 2 clutch free throws to widen the margin to three. Bowdoin had a chance to tie, but a three pointer by Lemieux, the first 3-point shot attempted by any Bowdoin player this year, fell short as time expired.

Once again Bowdoin's front line dominated the team scoring and rebounding. The quartet of Lemieux, Nikki Comeau, Stephanie Comeau and Sue Ingram combined for 71 of Bowdoin's 79 points. Comeau led the way with a career-high 26 while Caron and Ingram each chipped in 11 points and 8 rebounds.

The team hits the road this weekend for a pair of games. They face Eastern Connecticut College on today then challenge Connecticut College on tomorrow. Hopefully the change of scenery will be accompanied by a change in Bowdoin's luck and end this present three game slide.

Swimmers prepare for upcoming New Englands

TORREY THAYER
ORIENT Contributor

Last weekend, the men's and women's swim team took to the road as they headed south to grapple with Wesleyan. The women emerged victorious to preserve their undefeated record, now at 6-0, while the men were edged by one point in a very close meet.

The women's team has emerged as a dominant force in division III competition and Wesleyan proved no match for Bowdoin as the Polar Bears soundly beat their hosts. Some of the best performances were put in by captain Sarah Bullock, Leslie Preston, Jane Phillips, Holly Clayborne and Maureen Neill. Bullock swam a 1:13.68 in the 1000 free while Phillips swam a 5:38.32 in the 500 free. Neill swam the 50 free in 26.7 and has emerged as one of the team's sprinters. Judy Snow also had a good day and was a double winner.

The men, on the other hand, were plagued with injuries and in the words of coach Charlie Butt "didn't swim very well." The men's meet came down to the end, but when the waves had settled in the pool, Wesleyan emerged victorious. Tim Coultas was a double winner and Keith Farrington also swam very well for the Polar Bears. The men hope to do better when they travel with the women's team to MIT this weekend.

An integral part of the team which receives little attention is the diving squad. This year, the team that consists mostly of rookies is improving with every meet. Julie Asselta, Lisa Jacobs, Harvey Wheeler and Liz Johnson are diving well for the women while Shane Kyle Appell '88 picks the fastest line through the gates enroute to a strong performance. Photo by Mary Ann Lai.

(Continued on page eight)

Young ski team fares well

TOD DILLON

ORIENT Asst. Sports Editor
Led by solid performances by Holly Russell '91 and Bob Frenchman '89 in the alpine events and co-captain Angus Badger '89 and Colm Sweeney '88 in the nordic ones, the men's and women's ski teams did well at the Johnson State Carnival in Craftsbury, Vermont last weekend.

Russell led the way on the slopes as she recorded a 1st in the giant slalom and a 2nd in the slalom as the women claimed 3rd out of ten teams. On the men's side Frenchman took 4th in the GS and 6th in the slalom. Co-captain Cordy Snyder '88 placed 13th and Kevin Creamer captured 16th in the slalom while seniors Kyle Appell and Ted Arleo took 10th and 18th in the GS. The combined performances helped the men to a 3rd place showing as well. Snyder commented that the team "is looking forward to the upcoming meets."

Previously at the Colby-Sawyer Winter Carnival the team had a few strong individual showings. Russell once again captured 1st in the slalom while co-captain Laura Haddad '88 and Booka Smith '90 claimed 9th and 10th in the GS. On the men's side Appell lay claim to 5th in the GS.

On the nordic side there were some fine races as well at Johnson State. Led by Badger the men claimed second in the relay. Sweeney, a senior who previously had never skied diagonally, did extremely well as did Mark Spencer '88.

The women's relay captured third with a strong performance, especially since some of the older, more experienced skiers were absent. Ginny Aden '91, Alison Foster '91 and Dawn Vance '90 combined to beat out all but two other schools. According to Badger Foster had a tremendous race as she has never skied much prior to this year.

Prior to skiing at the Johnson State meet the team competed at the MIT carnival. Co-captain Pam Butler skied well and captured 10th while fellow captain Badger raced to a strong 4th. The men's relay took 4th and the women's cruised to 5th.

Swimming

(Continued from page seven)
Engstrom, Will Lensen, Nick Sowolski and Bill Dow are the top men. Lensen, in his first year, has improved greatly and has been placing high for Bowdoin consistently.

Bowdoin will host the New England championships this year as 300 swimmers from across New England will travel to Brunswick to slug it out for the top spot. The women will swim from the 25th to the 27th of February while the men swim from the 4th to the 6th of March.

Track finishes third in state

BRETT WICKARD
ORIENT Contributor

Last Saturday the men's track team took third place in the Maine State Meet with a performance that surpassed last season's result.

University of Maine at Orono, with 87 points, once again beat all other competitors combined. Bates College was second with 46, the Polar Bears totaled 24 points while Colby struggled with only 15.

Co-captain Chris Lacke began the Bowdoin scoring with a 4th place in the 35lb weight throw. Dave Novaria hit his best jump of the season in the long jump to claim third while Tod Dillon, suffering from the flu, placed third in the 1500 meter run.

Eric Gans missed the NCAA qualifying time by one tenth of a second in his victory in the 55 meter high hurdles. Dub Brakewood, who is "coming back from injury" according to Coach Pete Slovenski, placed 4th in a highly competitive 800 meter field. Lance Hickey had an impressive run in the 5000 as he captured 3rd place. Bowdoin's 4x400 relay squad 5 raced to second with a season best time. Damon Guerman rounded out the Bear's scoring with a 3rd place in the pole vault.

"We're making progress. The guys are working hard, and we had some good performances last week," Slovenski commented. This weekend in the Colby Bates Bowdoin tri-meet the men's team will have their last chance at qualifying for the New England Division III championships.

The women competed in the Bates-Bowdoin-Colby-Smith Invitational in Lewiston on Saturday. The Bears, with 45 points, lost a close meet to Colby (56 points) and Bates (52 points) while outdistancing Smith's (30 points).

Donna Ingham led the scoring with wins in the 20lb weight throw and the shot put. Sandra Scibely also placed well in the two events. Both the 4x200 and 4x800 relay teams were victorious. Co-captain Anya Kannengieser outprinted her competition in the 600. Deanna Hodgkin hung on to place third in both the 1500 and 1000. Gwynn Kay paced herself to a 2nd in the 3000 while Kristen O'Keefe charged to 3rd in the 600.

Other Bowdoin points were scored by Sarah Clodfelter (4th-55m dash), Margaret Heron (4th-800m run), Gretchen Herold (4th-1000 yard run), and the 4x400 relay team who took fourth.

Tonight, the women will be host the Maine State Meet at the Farley Fieldhouse and will be looking to knock off Bates and Colby.

Thomas and Clark upend Bears

CHRISTOPHER BOONE
ORIENT Staff

The Men's basketball team lost two games this week to drop their overall record to 8-11, erasing all hopes of gaining a bid for post-season playoff action.

Clark University rolled into Morrell Gym as one of the highly touted teams of the New England Division III scene. Behind the offensive power of Kermit Sharp, Clark's run-and-gun weapon, they blew past the Bears in a convincing fashion, 106-89. Sharp ended the game with 35 points.

The loss saw yet another big game for the Bears' dominating center, Joe Williams. With 29 points and 13 rebounds, Joe was outstanding. Another front-liner had a great game: Steve Drigotas showed he could mix it up to the tune of 16 points, 13 rebounds and 4 assists. Kevin Hancock paced the Bears with 6 assists in a quiet game for Bear guards.

The squad then travelled to Waterville to take on Thomas College in what turned out to be a hauntingly similar game for Bowdoin. Thomas' premier man, Duroche, scored 35 points to sink the Bears 102-83.

Big Joe mirrored his Clark game stats with 29 points and 13 rebounds. Joe's consistent play has kept him squad in a lot of games this year. His stats this year prove he is one of New England's premier players, averaging over 22 points and almost 11 rebounds per game, and he will not go unnoticed in post-season laurels.

The backcourt came alive at Thomas with Mike Burnett scrapping for 18 points and Kevin Hancock adding 9. Hancock led the team with 5 assists.

The hoopsters travel this weekend to face Eastern Connecticut on tonight and Connecticut College tomorrow afternoon.

Women squash opponents to capture Howe Cup

Bowdoin's women's squash team invaded Yale University last weekend and captured the 1988 Howe Cup.

A complete team effort helped the Polar Bears register a perfect 5-0 record in Division III competition and a 14th place overall finish in a field of 27 teams.

Bowdoin made its mark early in the tournament, crushing Vassar 6-1 in the opening round of competition. Erika Gustafson '90 paced the Polar Bears as she outlasted her opponent through four tough games.

After dispensing Vassar easily, the Polar Bears faced their arch rivals from the north, the Mules of Colby. Team captain Laura Bongiorno '88 led the charge as Bowdoin handed the Mules a crushing 7-0 defeat.

The going was not so easy, however, in the latter stages of the tournament. Colgate threatened to mar the Polar Bears perfect record as Bongiorno fell to their number two player. Bowdoin was able to rally behind victories by Kristin Zwart '89 and Susan Moore '90 en route to a 5-2 victory.

Bowdoin jumped out in front of Hamilton 3-0 before dropping the next three matches. Beate Blenneman '88 struggled to victory as the Polar Bears edged out Hamilton 4-3.

In the crowning match of the competition, Bowdoin's top five players notched victories over their opponents from Cornell to lead the team to a 5-2 victory and a 5-0 record.

The Polar Bears defeated their opponents by a combined score of 27-8. Gustafson was 5-0 (15-6 in total games), Bongiorno 4-1 (12-3), Zwart 5-0 (12-5), Moore 4-1 (12-5), Margaret Bogart '90 4-1 (12-5), Blenneman 4-1 (14-7), and Caitlin Hart '91 1-4 (7-14).

Botelho

(Continued from page seven)

I was livid, shocked and confused. How could this insidious undertaking happen in the WWF, a league which prided itself on fair play and clean, wholesome fun? It has humiliated an organization which has been free of major controversies since I can remember.

It most certainly is a dark, morbid day in professional wrestling. But how long must we wait until the sun shines again?...

We're Fighting For Your Life.

American Heart Association

Study in Italy this Summer

TRINITY COLLEGE
ROME
CAMPUS

Hartford, CT
06106

Roman Art & Civilization
"The Crime of Galileo"
Comparative Literature

JUNE 4-JULY 15

Write also for details on Fall and Spring Programs

CROSS COUNTRY SKIS

MORE OLYMPIC MEDALS THAN ANY OTHER SKI!

adidas

ADIDAS Comp Skater Package $239.99

*$169.99 *components equal $300

ADIDAS Citizens Skater Package $179.99

*$129.99 *components equal $200

JARVINEN Basic Package $99.99 *$89.99

*components equal $140

SPORTS

TOPSHAM FAIR MALL

(207) 729-1800

Open 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Mon-Sat Sunday afternoon, noon to 5 p.m.

BICYCLES

Fuji, Univega, Peugeot, Trek, Shogun

PROMPT, EXPERT SERVICE • CUSTOM BUILT WHEELS

EXERCISE EQUIPMENT & ROWING MACHINES

ALL-TERRAIN BICYCLES & CROSS COUNTRY SKIS

TRADE INS & USED BIKES

CYCLING CLOTHING AND HELMETS • CUSTOM BICYCLES SET UP

Until March 1
Wed. - Sat., 10 - 5:30
Friday Nites till 8

After March 1
Mon. - Sat., 10 - 5:30

442-7002

ROUTE 1 WOOLWICH
(ACROSS FROM MCELMAN SUBSAR & PUGGETT)

Proctors

(Continued from page one)
organizing the desk monitors and mail. Brown also plans to add another R.A. at Brunswick Apartments, as this year there is only 1 R.A. for 100 students.

Brown hopes that the R.A.'s got more involved in support. She plans to raise their compensation since the $50 a month that the R.A.'s currently receive is an "embarrassing" amount.

Brown also stressed that the intended changes in the proctor system have "nothing to do with fraternities... it is a question of how to build a residential life on campus where there is a healthy atmosphere for studying and socializing in dorms." She hopes that having a proctor on every floor of the dorms will help to "develop closer relations and community ties within the dorms."

Maureen Rayhill '89, proctor of Coleman, feels that the new changes may "disturb the dorm as a whole" by dividing the dorm up into four little groups, which can be negative." She added that students might feel overwhelmed by the supervision since "freshmen come here at the age of 18 ready to be on their own."

Rayhill added that "the role of a proctor is to be available and helpful in addressing the student's needs and also to be aware of what is going on in the dorm... if a problem gets to big, hopefully someone will come for help and in that sense I think that two people can be enough."

Rayhill believes that administration, in looking out for the students best interests, is placing a greater emphasis on coordinating social activities within the dorms. This involves a significant time commitment as well as a very large responsibility. She suggests an alternative solution of two proctors as well as a social coordinator and a social committee within each dorm.

Pam Butler '89, proctor of Moore Hall, believes that the "four proctor" system should be tried out. "The proctors can be more aware of problems on the floor because they have less people," said Butler, "I think it will establish more dorm unity."

Christine Hong '90, a resident of Appleton, believes that the changes "would definitely be beneficial... just because if you look at the time considerations, it's too much responsibility for two people." Brown added, "I'd like to emphasize that they [this year's proctors] are doing a very good job, but it must be overwhelming for a full time student with academic careers, athletic obligations, extracurricular activities and sometimes even fraternity commitments."

Rush

(Continued from page one)
way," he said.

Alpha Beta Phi has 5 new pledges. President Wendy Carlson '90 said, "Second semester rush has traditionally been a strong rush for us. This one proved to be just as successful as past rushes."

She commented about the policy this semester, "I don't think a wet rush was necessary in attracting people to our house."

At the IFC meeting this week, the idea was presented for a single rush period during second semester in the future. Goldsmith said that it was "definitely a possibility", but that further discussion will take place in the individual houses as well as in IFC meetings.

Lewallen expressed strong feelings about a second semester rush. He said, "From my perspective anything but a delayed rush is objectionable", as the freshmen are placed under much pressure during the first few weeks of school. He added, "The more I see, the more I am convinced that it is needed."

On February 14th . . .
Make A Statement

THE BRUNSWICK FLOWER SHOP

216A Maine Street
Brunswick • 729-8895

Wire Service

the Samuel
Newman
House
BEHIND COLES TOWER
7 South St., Brunswick, Me. 04011
For Reservations, call (207) 729-6959

BED & BREAKFAST

STOWE TRAVEL

MID COAST MAINE'S MOST COMPLETE TRAVEL AGENCY
A TRAVELERS NATIONAL NETWORK AGENCY
■ GROUP TRAVEL SPECIALISTS ■ BUSINESS ACCOUNTS
■ INCENTIVE TRAVEL ■ CRUISES ■ AMTRAK ■ AIRLINES
■ VCR CASSETTE TRAVEL LIBRARY ■ VACATION PACKAGES
■ GREYHOUND ■ WESTERN UNION
■ $150,000 AUTOMATIC FLIGHT INSURANCE
"ALL SERVICES AT NO EXTRA COST"

725-5573 8:30 - 5:30 DAILY
9 - 2 SAT. (SUMMER)
9 - 4 SAT. (WINTER)

9 PLEASANT ST. BRUNSWICK

Call 1-800-522-9990 toll free in ME.

Little's WINTER
CLEARANCE

30%-50% off all clothing

149 Maine Street 729-6642 M-Th 9:30 - 5:30 Fri 9:30 - 4

BIG RED Q PRINTING
next to the College

- stationery
- resumes
- posters
- newsletters

212E Maine Street
Brunswick
729-4840

CAPE COD CAMP
COUNSELORS

The Cape Cod Association of Children's Camps is represented by 20 resident and day camps, all offering rewarding summer employment opportunities to male and female applicants. For individual camp information and brochure call (617) 428-2577 or write: CCACC, Camp Burgess, Stowe Rd., Sandwich, MA 02563

DELIVERS TO BOWDOIN COLLEGE

PIZZAS - SANDWICHES - SALADS

DINNERS

EXAMPLE:

Regular Cheese Pizza $2.20
add $.55 per topping

Large Cheese Pizza $5.50
add $1.00 per topping

no minimum

free delivery

SPECIAL

BUY ONE LARGE PIZZA OR ANY $5.00 ORDER AND GET
A LITER OF PEPSI AT NO
EXTRA CHARGE

725-9753

MON - THUR
5:30 - 9:30

FRI - SAT
5:30 - 10:30

SUN
5:30 - 8:30

OPINION

Athletics and admissions

The choice has been made, and the Bowdoin faculty has voted to continue to prioritize athletics in the admissions process, while avoiding the real admissions issue.

On Monday, the Bowdoin College faculty voted to accept a minority proposal on athletics in admissions. The amendment, proposed by Coach John Cullen and Ann St. Peter '89, recommends that an unlimited number of rated athletes be considered in the admissions process. The report argued that by limiting the number of rated athletes, discrimination will occur.

The real discrimination, however, is occurring in other areas. Music, drama, art, in fact every academic discipline, suffers as a result of this proposal.

The Cullen-St. Peter minority report says that by maintaining a "no ceiling" approach to admissions, "the Athletic Department (is) in line with all departments at Bowdoin College."

The truth is that the Athletic Department is unlike any other departments on campus, and has been given an unfair advantage in the admissions game. By placing no ceiling on rankings, the faculty is committing a major penalty for having too many jocks on the ice.

Giving the athletic department unlimited rating numbers hardly de-emphasizes athletics. Even if the athletic department were prudent enough to rate only top-notch athletes — those "immediate impact types" — they still will create an athletically dominated admissions process.

Cullen and St. Peter argue for the wrong reasons. Freedoms of speech aren't being violated. No one is telling the coaches who they can and cannot rate. There is no conspiracy to drive athletics out of Bowdoin College.

The Cullen-St. Peter amendment conflicts with a resolution passed in September by the faculty which said athletics plays "too important a role in admissions decisions at Bowdoin."

The majority of athletic coaches spend much of their time recruiting players, watching videotapes, and talking with high school coaches. Their job profiles are designed to promote recruiting.

If the faculty wants to maintain a well-rounded and diverse student body, then let them allow art professors to attend high school art shows. Allow music professors to attend All-State music festivals. Allow science professors to scout out prospective chemistry majors at science fairs.

The academic professors are not allowed the same liberties in the recruiting game. The demands which are placed on them are too great to be able and adequately "recruit" students.

Academic professors must teach at least two courses per semester, prepare lectures, meet with student advisees, serve The Admissions Office will alert a coach when a prospective athlete is on campus, but how often are music professors told when a strong soprano or virtuoso violin arrives?

The problems are many. Cullen and St. Peter, have missed the mark with their proposal, and lost sight of the original concept. Their proposal should be tossed aside. Secondly, the faculty should be ridiculed for passing the amendment, which has done nothing to relieve the athletic-admissions emphasis problem publicized in September. Thirdly, the Admissions Office and the faculty should stop whining about the number of athletes at Bowdoin and take active steps in the recruiting of students from all disciplines.

Finally, the administration should take measures which would give faculty members the available tools to recruit students.

The Bowdoin Scream By M. Sven.

Social space needed

College-provided social space at Bowdoin is sparse and everyone knows it.

Recently the Orient received a letter from the College Research Group requesting a description of Bowdoin's social life for use in a catalog of U.S. colleges. A Barron's college guide clone—scrutinized by thousands of high school seniors searching for the perfect school—the book, The Right College 1989 will soon be available in every shopping mall bookmart. This is what the accurate social life entry should look like if the book's editors do not tamper with what was submitted.

College Social Life and Facilities: The Moulton Union is allegedly the College's social center. A game room with four pool-tables, several warped cue-sticks, a pinball-machine—lavishly equipped with flashing lights, stereo sound, and a 35 decibel siren—and a ping-pong table is located on the lower level of the complex. Students often, well sometimes, watch television for four or five minutes in a 7' x 8' room on the main floor.

A television lounge also exists in the 16-story Coles Tower, but it is often mistaken for an empty bathroom.

There are three general campus gathering spots: the library, dorm rooms, and the Dining Halls during mealtime. If one belongs to a fraternity, one generally hangs out there.

On weekends the campus gravitates towards fraternity parties. If you don't want to attend a frat-party every weekend, then go to the Union. Stand outside the pub and listen to the band through the doorway because the room only seats 35 people.

Bowdoin does not have adequate college-operated student social facilities. Changes in the drinking age and budget constraints have allowed Bowdoin College to enjoy having the fraternities monopolize the campus social life. This system is cost effective for the college, but impractical. Besides the majority of the student body being independent, the fraternities cannot be expected to provide varied and quality entertainment for the entire campus every weekend (beer guzzling and loud music can get monotonous.)

Plans for a student center to be located in the now vacant Hyde Cage and Curtis Pool are under consideration by the Student Life Committee; dining space is critically lacking and expansions need to be made somewhere to accommodate students. Furthermore, finalizations for the long-awaited science center are awaiting acceptance by the Governing Boards in March.

All these projects require money—more than the budget probably has available. Obviously, a modern science center is more important to the college than a social center, yet plans to improve student life should not be waylaid entirely. The college does not need a multi-million dollar funplex. A building where students could congregate, comfortably see live bands, comedians, dance groups etc., or just socialize would suffice.

College-provided entertainment. Photo by Susannah Moy.

The Bowdoin Orient welcomes all letters. Due to space limitations, letters of 300 words or less will be considered for publication first. Letters not printed the week submitted will be put on waiting list with top priority for the next issue. The Bowdoin Orient reserves the right to edit any letter due to space limitations. All letters must be signed and include the address and telephone number where the author can be contacted for verification.

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

"The College exercises no control over the content of the student writings contained herein and neither it, nor the faculty assume any responsibility for the views expressed herein."

Editor
Managing Editor
News Editors
In-depth Editor
Entertainment Editor
Sports Editor
Photography Editors

Asst. News Editor
Asst. Sports Editor
Asst. Entertainment Editor
Contributing Editors
Senior Editors
Production Manager

Business Manager
Advertising Manager
Advertising Staff

Circulation Manager

Bowdoin Publishing Company Lori M. Bodwell, Eric F. Foushee,
Albert P. Mauro, Stephen Reynolds

Stephen Reynolds
Kathryn Nanovic
Tamara Dassanayake, Dawn Vance
Kevin Wesley
Sharon Smart
Justin Prisendorf
Alan Harris, Mary Ann Lai

Tanya Weinstein
Tod Dillon
Lizz Millan
Albert Mauro
Lori Bodwell, Michael Botelho
Vincent Jacks

Eric Foushee
Michael Townsend
Michelle Campagna, Nancy Eckel,
Kim Maxwell
Eric Palmquist

Published weekly when classes are held during the Fall and Spring semester by the students of Bowdoin College. Address editorial communication to the Editor, subscription communication to the Circulation Manager, and business correspondence to the Business Manager at the Bowdoin Orient, 12 Cleveland Street, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011, or telephone (207)725-3300. The Bowdoin Orient reserves the right to edit any and all articles and letters. Subscriptions are $8.00 a semester or $15.00 a year. Past issues cannot be mailed. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to The Bowdoin Orient, Moulton Union, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011.

LETTERS

Political apathy?

With the nation's attention turning to New England for the next series of presidential primary elections, I feel compelled to write this letter. The Orient has failed us again. This is 1988—and the outcome of the coming election will affect every one of us dramatically in the next four years. Yet how many articles has "the oldest continuously published college weekly in the United States" published in which the election campaigns were even mentioned? I dare say there are probably foreign student papers that have given more attention to the United States' election year.

We are lucky in Maine to have same-day registration voting. It is a simple process: one goes to the municipal building on Federal Street on or before election day, and from there to vote at a designated location determined by district. I am therefore appalled at the extremely small number of students who bother to exercise their right to vote. If we do not take advantage of the freedom our country allows us, it can be removed. A democracy in which none or few vote is not a democracy. In my view, the political apathy demonstrated by Bowdoin students has reached an extremely dangerous level; if we are any indication of the future of this country, there are going to be some tough years ahead.

Kim Surkan '90

Fieldhouse rules

In light of recent complaints concerning availability of the Farley Field House and new pool, I am happy to inform the campus that changes have been made. Last semester, outside-group use limited the hours Bowdoin students and faculty could use the facilities. When complaints were made, the Athletic Department responded quickly and ameliorated the situation. Special thanks go to Director Sid Watson and Coach Lynn Ruddy.

As it stands now, while the same outside-groups will be able to use the facilities, either their hours have been reduced or they will accommodate Bowdoin students in some manner. For example, while Brunswick High is practicing, a Bowdoin student may still use the two inside lanes for running as well as have access to two tennis courts.

While these changes may seem small to some, we must keep in mind our commitment to public relations within the surrounding communities. By scheduling the outside-group use at dinner times, and allowing Bowdoin students access during these times, availability has been greatly increased. Furthermore, we must recognize that these facilities are still in their infancies and will need time to work out the kinks.

The Athletic Department has assured its commitment to Bowdoin students and will look for ways to make the facilities even more accessible. I urge any student planning to use the fieldhouse or pool to call there and check for new times and to call Coach Ruddy, who will be happy to discuss any problems that arise.

Mark Peluso '88
Chairman, Student Senate

The saga continues: No ID, No Eat...Will it ever end?

Last week many students on this campus showed there [sic] displeasure at the Dining Service's policy of "No ID, no eat." To some, this display was a "protest"; to others a "temper-tantrum." Despite these conflicting labels, it was clear that a number of students were concerned about the issue, as many choose to make what was admittedly a "trivial form of civil disobedience."

In the Orient of February 5th, an editorial on the opinion page raised several questions about the protest which had undoubtedly risen in the minds of many students. First of all, many students complained that the action was taken out on the wrong people. As we mentioned in our original letter of January 29th, we regretted the inconvenience this would cause the checkers at the door. Thus action was simple and caused little real difficulty to the checkers. It made the administration aware of the concern of the students, as well as getting students to discuss the issue.

The significance of the issue was also cast in doubt. While it certainly does not merit the weight of other issues, both on and off campus, Bowdoin is a microcosm. This policy is indicative of a trend which is contrary to Bowdoin's advertised image, namely a small liberal arts school. The Dining Service is one of those institutions which students have a great deal of contact with, and like all institutions, performs a vital role in the education of the students here. To maintain the atmosphere which Bowdoin prizes, it is necessary for the Dining Service to remain a part of that system. A policy such as "No ID, No eat" is not in accord with such an atmosphere.

The article also question [sic] the exact aim of the protest. To clarify our position, we are not opposed to ID's, nor to the Dining Service's request to see them upon entering. What we are opposed to is the manner in which this policy has been carried out. By making a policy of "No ID, No eat" the Dining Service has imposed an extremely bureaucratic measure where one is not required. What's more, the policy was put in place without a glimmer of explanation. At a school of this size, it is hardly outrageous to suggest that the administration owes some justification when it begins to change the rules. As a result of the action, the policy was given some explanation, as Larry Pinette and Mary Lou Kennedy took the time to explain the policy not only to us, but to the Orient as well.

As far as the policy is concerned there are several important considerations which the Dining Service has neglected, and which we think are important.

Is this uncompromising policy necessary? We suggested to the Dining Service the possibility that other ID's could be used as substitutes when a Bowdoin ID is not available. The current policy is only designed to ensure a person has an ID, while the real question is whether that person has paid for the meal. Other ID's accomplishes this task just as efficiently as a Bowdoin ID, and a list of chronic offenders could easily be kept.

Is this policy effective? Ms. Kennedy stated that the policy was imposed to insure some measure of control as well as making sure that the "people who are eating are the people who should be eating." If cutting down cheating is there [sic] primary concern, there are certainly better ways to go about it. Student's flash ID's as they go in, and there is no guarantee that the ID's match the name, or the numbers match.

As it stands, the policy punishes individuals who have legitimately forgotten or temporarily misplaced their ID's instead of the students who are violating the system. For someone living at the fringes of the campus (or off campus), forgetting or misplacing the ID means one of three things: going back to get it, going to security for a temporary ID, or missing a meal entirely. Getting a temporary ID means missing a meal. Both of these alternatives represent punishment for what most would agree is a minor indiscretion.

Instead the Dining Service should deter cheaters. Kennedy suggested that as many as 15 cases a week could be brought before the J-Board, but that the Dining Service didn't want to act as a "policeman." If this is true, students are left wondering, "why not?" Board bills are inflated not by the student who legitimately forgets his/her ID, but by the students who are stealing from the Dining Halls. This is in clear violation of the Honor and Social Code, and as such should be pursued by the Dining Service.

Enforcement is the only deterrent to the students who are stealing. Checking ID's does not provide deterrent, and in fact is only a minor obstacle. By prosecuting cases the Dining Service would be providing a reasonable deterrent which would cut down on stealing, and therefore limit board bills.

Frank Dean '88, Frank Days '88

Thank goodness for the arrival of the no ID/ no eat policy. I remember with disdain the days when I would enter the tower or union dining rooms and be greeted with, "Hello, Kevin" and a smile. Good thing that's over. The pleasure of pulling my ID from my pocket it's always there is second only to that of anticipating the glory of the inevitable and magnetic card readers which will replace the less efficient number '91 machines.

The class of '91 must be especially excited—absolutely no threat of embarrassing personal interaction with those over social dining service employees. Flash the card grab the food. It's easy! It's simpler for the chefs also. They no longer know our names (why should they?), so they can concentrate on making the sandwiches just right. Making the perfect pita sandwich must, after all, constitute the pinnacle of fulfillment for any worker in the dining service.

I will personally thank Larry Pinette for every dollar he saves for the critically acclaimed Bowdoin College Dining Service. In fact, I'd like to have my parents present at the ceremony in which, after the card readers have paid for themselves, he hands the obsolete biomass their notices of termination. I guess only my dad can come, though, seeing as I have only one guest ticket. But it's O.K., my mom is perfectly content with a ring-ding or two from her purse. Let's face it, a penny saved is a penny earned. I'll know true progress has been made when the college follows Larry Pinette's (Director of the critically acclaimed Bowdoin College Dining Service) lead and automates entrance to college classrooms and restroom facilities.

Kevin Daner '88

HURRY! CONTEST ENDS SUNDAY 2-14-88

Not so long ago, in a galaxy not so far away, America's number 1 pizza delivery company made students an offer.

If your group orders more pizzas than competing groups, you'll win a free pizza party!

It's so easy to play. Call your nearest Domino's Pizza store for details.

Domino's
Pizza
Delivers™...

DORM WARS™

The Contest:

Domino's Pizza will award free, 30 large pizzas and $75.00 cash for liquid refreshments, to the group purchasing the most pizzas starting Thursday, Feb. 4, 1988 and running through Sunday, Feb. 14, 1988.

The Rules:

1. Carry-out orders and all deliveries made from your area's Domino's Pizza store will be counted if we are given your group's name and address.
2. Any pizza over $10.00 will be counted twice.
3. The winning group's name will be published in the local newspaper.
4. The location and time of the party will be convenient to both the winners and Domino's Pizza.
5. The 30 pizzas will be 2-item pizzas. The winner will have the choice of items. The pizzas do not have to be the same.

Fast, Free Delivery

26 Bath Rd.
Phone: 729-5561

Our drivers carry less than $20.00.
Limited delivery area.
©1982 Domino's Pizza, Inc.

Suggestions in 'White Paper' jeopardize Science Center plans

TAMARA DASSANAYAKE
ORIENT News Editor

Student life facilities and academic space take priority over the proposed $21 million Science Center in a possible alternative to the sequencing of projects under the ongoing capital campaign.

Two alternative strategies which differ "primarily in their approach to the sequencing of major capital projects to meet the most urgent needs now facing the College" are suggested in "A White Paper on Planning for Bowdoin" prepared by Chairman of the Trustees Leonard W. Cronkhite, Jr. and President of the College A. LeRoy Greason.

"The strategies outlined in the paper are just an airing of the possibilities," said Greason. "They [the strategies] are in no way binding, nothing has been decided."

The paper which will be presented to the Governing Boards at their March 4 and 5 meeting, lists the College's most pressing needs as student life, academic space and a new science center.

In an accompanying letter to members of the Board, Greason said, "At the March meetings, you will be asked to set the directions in which the administration ought to move — both the priorities of our needs and the methods for financing them."

According to the Paper, the "first strategy is that of seeking remedies on each of these fronts sooner rather than later" while taking into consideration the "availability of funds" and problems attendant to relocation and construction.

The second strategy which the college has "implicitly" been following is "that of concentrating our efforts and resources in the short term on the completion of the new Science Center and to address the other needs only at such time as it becomes clear that we can successfully complete the science complex."

The report added, "The first strategy has the merit of dealing in a relatively short time frame with a whole range of fairly serious problems" whereas the second has the "disadvantage of separating the planning for student life space and academic space from the fiscal environment."

The prioritization of the College's needs comes in the wake of a "real need for student social space and dining space," said Greason, in a telephone interview from Naples, Florida where he is meeting with Alumni in the area.

"We need to examine our priorities and options now... if we made a commitment to build the science center, other projects would have to be put on hold," said Greason.

According to the Paper, other reasons for the review include the presence of unexpectedly unutilized space in the Hyde/Cage/Curtis Pool area and the actual cost of the proposed science center which exceeds "earlier and less cautious estimates by some $12 million." The Cage/Pool area was initially to be the sight of the new athletic facility and the sciences were allotted a total of $11.8 million out of the total campaign target of $56 million.

Treasurer of the College, Dudley H. Woodall pointed out that although the College has been proceeding with plans for a science center, the White Paper represents what is "perhaps" a reassessment of the College's most immediate needs and capabilities."

The time frame associated with each of the two strategies has also been investigated. However, Woodall said it was "extremely difficult" to gauge the time necessary for the completion of either project due to the incomplete and complex nature of the plans.

If the science center were to be approved in March, Woodall estimated that it would be at least six months before construction could actually begin.

"Under optimal conditions" the construction would require approximately two years. This period of planning and construction would be accompanied by a corresponding delay in developing the student life/academic space needs of the college, said Woodall. In such circumstances, small scale renovations in Hyde/Cage and changes in class scheduling would be implemented to ease the space and dining "crunches" respectively.

Dean for Planning Thomas Hochstetler said the student life facility would address student needs for a central and extensive facility around which students

(continued on page 9)

Science Faculty reacts to report

President Greason's "White Paper" did not come as a surprise to the science faculty; Bowdoin's need for social and academic spaces have been widely known issues on campus for the past year.

The report—issued two weeks before the Governing Boards meet in March—suggests that the long expected science center be waylaid has disconcerted for some faculty members.

"The general tone of the report lessens the probability of a new science center as the plans now stand," said Ronald Christensen, associate professor of chemistry and chairman of the department.

"The timing of [the report], given that we have been planning the center for years, seems last minute... the communication could have been better."

"It clearly means a resorting of priorities," said Professor of Chemistry, Samuel Butcher.

The White Paper suggests funds from the Campaign for Bowdoin could be used for multiple improvements such as student life facilities, academic space and a science library, instead of investing all the money into one project—the $21 million dollar science center.

Before the report issued this week, it was generally assumed, according to Christensen, that a science center accommodating all the sciences in one complex would be the college's first priority after completing the Farley Fieldhouse.

John Howland, professor of biology and chairman of the department, said a new science facility is one of Bowdoin's primary needs as present facilities are antiquated. "Searles Hall is a 19th century science building and Bowdoin is approaching the 21st century. It's difficult to run experiments safely—Searles doesn't have a single legal fume hood," he said.

Besides antiquated facilities, space to conduct classes and experiments is limited in both Cleveland and Searles. Approximately one fourth of Bowdoin students major in the sciences and both Howland and Christensen claim classroom space is inadequate. "Compared to Amherst, Williams, Bates and Colby—schools we consider our equals—Bowdoin's science facilities, in general," says Christensen, "are

(continued on page 9)

Execs approve activities fee increase

DAWN VANCE
ORIENT News Editor

If the Student Executive Board has any say, the student body will witness an increase of $30-$50 in the student activities fee for the upcoming 1988-1989 academic year.

Chairman of the Student Activities Fee Committee (SAFC) Cindy Heller '88 appeared at the board's Tuesday night meeting to present SAFC's recommendations as to a possible fee hike. These recommendations call for a $30-$50 increase for the coming year.

Heller presented two alternative recommendations which the SAFC is proposing to Dean of the College Jane L. Jervis. The first proposal calls for a $30 increase for the 1988-1989 academic year. This increase is the minimum with which SAFC would be able to fund budgets at the total amount requested this year. The fee would then be subject to review in the spring of 1989.

The second proposal allows for a $50 increase for the 1988-1989 and 1989-1990 academic years. This hike of $50 would not be subject to any additional increase until the spring of 1990. According to a letter submitted to the board it is SAFC's contention that, "A $50 increase for the next two consecutive years would bring SAFC's budget to the level of other colleges of our size and caliber and enable SAFC to encourage more creative and diverse programming."

Many members of the board expressed objections to the fee hike. Member Daniel Courcay '90 said, "I don't know if students should submit to an increase so that Bowdoin can become more competitive with other colleges... maybe SAFC should do some housecleaning first."

Member Mark Peluso '88 also voiced his objections. Peluso said, "I think we should shoot this down... that $30 should go to a building or something that will enrich our lives... SAFC shouldn't be made into a money pit."

After much deliberation the board voted 8-5-0 to recommend the $30 increase.

In other business, member Albert Mauro '89 drew the attention of the board to the "White Paper," a report prepared by Chairman of the Board of Trustees Dr. Leonard W. Cronkhite, Jr. and President of the College A. LeRoy Greason. This report concerns the Capital Campaign Fund.

The "White Paper" indicates that the college's prioritization of needs has changed. These needs include student life, academic space, and the proposed science center. According to the proposals of the "White Paper" the science center may no longer prove to be the college's number one priority. The alternative strategy places student life and academic space first on the list.

Mauro said of the report, "The school is reevaluating its priorities. I think the students should have a say in this... we have the potential to be the best intermediary between the students and the administration—we have to let the administration know what students want."

The board will conduct an open forum in Kresge Auditorium on Feb. 24 or 25 to gauge student reaction to this prioritization of the campus' needs. The board will submit its findings to the Governing Boards of the college when they convene on March 4-5.

Senior Scott Erlenborn appeared before the board as a representative of the Bowdoin Rugby Football Club (BRFC). Erlenborn expressed his objection to the administration's banning of spring rugby.

Erlenborn said, "I feel that the Bowdoin Rugby Club is being discriminated against by the administration in its not allowing us a spring season... we've been refused on iffy grounds."

Chairman of the board George Hillhouse '88 questioned the president's authority to ban the spring season. He said, "I don't know how or why Greason assumed the authority to deny rugby a spring season."

Peer Relations Support Group sponsored "Sexual Harassment: A Forum for Men and Women" Thursday night in Daggett lounge. Dean Lewallen, Dean Jervis, Mike Rosenzweig, campus counselor, and a representative from the Bath/Brunswick Rape Crisis Center discussed sexual harassment and its impact at Bowdoin. Staff photo.

Barbour recalls Bowdoin experience

STEPHEN COOK
ORIENT Staff

In the continuation of the Black Arts Festival activities, Floyd Barbour '60 came back to Bowdoin last Tuesday to give an interesting and amusing talk entitled "Exit, Pursued by a Bear," touching on the events of his life to "tell the truth as I knew it."

The title of the speech, he said, was inspired by the famous stage director of the same name in William Shakespeare's play, Winter's Tale.

Barbour grew up in Washington, D.C., where he attended Dunbar High School, a segregated "black elitist" school. He was encouraged to apply to Bowdoin by a teacher who saw his potential, and he matriculated in 1956, the only black in his class.

He arrived in Brunswick, expecting to see a one-shack campus. When he walked up the hill to the college, single suitcase in hand, he couldn't believe the beauty, with the welcoming Bowdoin sun over the walkway. His roommate was Irish, from "a dirt road in Maine." Barbour became good friends with the boy's whole family, a relationship which he would have thought to be very unlikely, given his color.

That experience has made him resistant to pass judgement based on anyone's heritage, because people are individuals before they are a race, creed, or color.

Though there were signs of racism on campus, he was not harassed greatly. One case he mentioned was being rushed by Alpha Tau Omega, until they saw him. However, Alpha Rho Upsilon, "All Races United," was a fraternity willing to accept him.

His academic pursuits took a permanent turn towards literature and writing upon enrolling in a freshman English seminar taught by Professor A. LeRoy Greason. As an English major, he wrote for both the Quill and the Orient, and became editor of each. He also wrote plays for One Act competitions.

His dramatic interests began early, and he told of the frustrating one hour train ride in Washington, D.C. just to get to a black-audience theater which would show the current movies. He grew up dreaming about seeing the opening of "My Fair Lady" on Broadway, or the plays of Tennessee Williams.

Barbour is now the Director of Afro-American Cultural Affairs at Simmons College, and teaches Black Literature and Black Drama at Boston University and Simmons. He continues to play an active role in the theater scene, for example as an advisor to the B.U./Huntington Theater Young Critics.

His writing ability proved useful in his years after Bowdoin. In the late 1960's, he and others were very concerned that the Black movement was losing momentum, and they felt a strong need to assert it again. So he helped create a book entitled The Black Power Revolt, which defined the term "Black Power" coined by Stokely Carmichael. Later, he collaborated with fellow Bowdoin graduate Henry Martin to write The Black 70's. He is working on a third book of black issues.

Barbour also touched on what his

Floyd Barbour '60 spoke last Tuesday evening about his experiences as a Black at Bowdoin in a speech entitled "Exit, Pursued by a Bear." Photo by Alan Harris.

Barbour's life means to him now, at age 50. "You never think you'll live to 50, so you don't prepare for it." He said it was a strange feeling for him to walk around the campus, to see memorials and dedications to professors and students he knew. These familiar people have become symbols of the students, distant figures of achievement.

In the final remarks of the lecture, he put the role of the pursuing bear into perspective. "The Bowdoin bear is not pursuing us to torture us. It is pursuing us to empower us."

Greason calls for less apathy, more aid

STEPHEN COOK
ORIENT Staff

President of the College A. LeRoy Greason congratulated the efforts of a few people and challenged the apathy of the rest of the college community in his Chapel Talk on South Africa last Friday.

"Are six students concerned or are 600?" he asked, referring to the low attendance at this year's organizational meeting on how to raise consciousness and support the powerless majority of non-whites in South Africa.

Greason pledged for Bowdoin to support two of the 55 students assisted by the New England Board of Higher Education. This organization includes 40 members dedicated to educating South African students. Each student's tuition costs $2800, which comes from student, faculty, and staff donations. Greason asked again for continued support to get these potential leaders through the university.

As concern for the policy of apartheid grew in America, awareness on campus grew as well. Demands on campus for divestment could not be ignored, said Greason. The Executive Board passed a motion with faculty and student support asking for divestment, and a shanty was erected on the Quad demonstrating student protest.

As a result, Bowdoin adopted a new policy, the "Sullivan principles." It supports investments only in companies which would work to "get rid of apartheid, support the building of schools and hospitals, treat employees equally and which makes no sales to the South African military."

However, Greason said this policy was not effective, so new action had to be taken. While he said that "no one was ever suggesting that apartheid was anything but a moral outrage," he noted that there was debate as to whether total divestment in South Africa was necessarily a good idea.

Greason said that just purging the college of association with South Africa was not enough. Bowdoin College began funding Black students so that they could attend one of the five "open" universities in South Africa.

He invited all the members of the college community to meet and discuss ways to raise the needed funds. 50 people attended the first year, 25 last year, and only six showed up this year.

Greason congratulated the work of those who have helped. He also mentioned the Run for South Africa, scheduled for May 1, where he hopes to collect more than $1000, the sum raised from last year's run.

Greason called for more volunteers, and asked anyone interested to leave their name at the President's office. Help is needed to end legalized racism, he concluded, which is "a threat to all of us."

Jervis suggests solutions for overcrowding

AL MAURO
ORIENT Contributing editor

The following is the second in a two-part series on class overcrowding. Last week's article dealt with class and departmental overcrowding and some of their causes. This week's article looks at pre-registration difficulties and some possible solutions to the problem.

Overcrowding is a problem with no easy solutions.

"The question of course size is a balancing act," said Dean of the College Jane Jervis. "Many students say we need more government professors, but that is only at the expense of somewhere else."

"When you decide to design a curriculum that has some breadth, you are making a decision to allow some classes to get larger," she said.

Jervis said the problems come from different reasons. Some result from popular classes, some from temporarily understaffed departments, and some from popular professors, she said.

However, Jervis said many of the problems stem from the pre-registration process.

"Twenty percent of pre-registrations are phony," Jervis said, because most students enroll for five classes when they only intend to take four. This results in inflated pre-registration figures for classes and apparent overcrowding.

Jervis said the reason for most of the over pre-registration is because students fear they might not get pre-registered for all the courses they want, so they pre-register for more as a back-up.

Registrar Rhoda Z. Bernstein said a change is being planned for the schedule of pre-registration for the spring semester. One plan has registration cards with course selections indicated, returned to the students Nov. 18. The other date the registrar's office is working towards is to return registration cards to students Dec. 2.

Previously, registration cards were not returned to students until they return from winter vacation. Bernstein said the only problem with earlier pre-registration is asking departments for their course offerings earlier.

Jervis believes moving the date of pre-registration would solve many of the problems. Students would have less of a sense of panic in trying to find classes at the last minute, she said.

With students knowing their schedule before Christmas, Jervis believes students will have more time to work with the professors to solve enrollment problems.

Giving students more time to work out problems might result in a more even distribution of students among courses, she said. Early registration also would limit the confusion usually found in the first several days of class, increasing class efficiency.

Jervis offered several ideas on how to offset and discourage class overcrowding. However, she noted that most possible solutions would cause a loss of flexibility.

Students could be limited to enrolling only in the courses for which they pre-registered, she said, or any schedule changes after classes start could be made a difficult process, in order to discourage excessive shopping-around.

Jervis also suggested the possibility of an on-line computer registration process where students waited in line, according to lottery-allotted positions to choose their courses.

However, Jervis cautioned that these solutions are only suggestions. "No solution is without its costs," she said.

Several partial remedies for class overcrowding are being proposed by the Recording Committee.

A report by the committee recommends adding several periods during the day to increase the number of available slots. Classes on Mon./Wed./Fri. would be held hourly from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. and Tues./Thurs. classes would be held every hour and a half, from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m.

By scheduling periods through lunch, the committee hopes to more evenly distribute the dining service's lunch.

Jervis hopes that these measures, along with more equal distribution of classes throughout the schedule will result in a partial solution to the over-crowding. She said the changes should also allow better course selection for the students.

"Everybody is careful to schedule things so you don't have to make choices. That is not life," Jervis said. "Life is about making choices and evaluating choices."

Would you prefer to see the proposed science center or student life facilities including housing, dining, and a social center built first?

BECKY AUSTIN
ORIENT Staff

Jen Andrus '90

"As much as I'd like to see a new science center, I think that a new student center and dining services are of more immediate importance."

Sheila Fargis '89

"I think I'd take care of the student facilities because there should be somewhere people can meet without such an emphasis on academics or alcohol."

Jen Weinstein '91

"I think we should build the science building first because it would be good to have all the sciences unified in one building."

Sarah Holloway '88

"The student center because science is for losers."

Bowdoin College Dining Service treated students on board to a festival of fish Tuesday night. Shown here Dining Service employee serves fried shrimp from a rowboat in Wentworth Dining Hall. Photo by Lori Bodwell.

Afro-Am discusses student minorities

LIZZ MILLAN
ORIENT Asst. Ent. Editor

Where do minorities fit in on the Bowdoin Campus? This was the question addressed on Saturday, Feb. 13 at a rap session sponsored by the Afro-American Society.

The rap session presented those students and administrators who attended with an opportunity to discuss the problems of the minority situation at Bowdoin and possible solutions. Those present indicated that problems certainly do exist.

Assistant Director of Admissions Leon Braswell said of the rap session, "I think a lot of things came out. It demonstrated that there is a need to address the issues - for white and black students."

The black students who attended described incidences they had encountered with racism on campus.

Many agreed that these incidences had stemmed from ignorance.

"I don't think most students at Bowdoin are aware of the issues raised at Saturday's meeting of being a minority on a primarily white campus. A greater awareness of these issues will help bring about a better understanding and a healthier college community," said Frederick Lipp '88 who serves as proctor of Winthrop Hall.

Lipp proposed dorm discussions as a means of generating a keener sense of awareness on campus. Many participants vocalized the urgent need for such activities.

Increasing racial awareness begins with increasing racial presence. Many students present expressed their dissatisfaction with the lack of cultural diversity on campus.

"Bowdoin seeks well-rounded individuals, yet when we come, Bowdoin allows us to become square-jawed. When you're constantly surrounded by people just like yourself, it's easy to close yourself off to different cultures," said President of the Afro-American Society Adrienne Hatten '90.

President Greason cited many examples of Bowdoin's commitment to racial diversity, such as the diversity of the admissions officers as well as the institution of Minority Alumni Weekend. Minority Sub-rosa Weekend was pointed to as further indication of the administration's concern with minorities.

Braswell said, "The admissions office does what it can, but only through the efforts of the entire Bowdoin College community can we hope to make real progress." say. What we can do is make Bow-

Students call for cash

LISA KANE
ORIENT Staff

Volunteers are taking to the phones in a series of student phonathons in an attempt to raise money from alumni for this year's Alumni fund.

The phonathons are led by Development Office Fellow Jeff Winey and nine pre-selected student phonathon leaders. A total of 13 phonathons are scheduled for this semester to raise money from alumni. The money from this fund is used annually for the college's operating expenses. "Most students don't realize that your tuition only covers about 60 percent of what your education costs," said Winey.

Phonathons have proved to be a success in the past. In the 1986-1987 series of phonathons, participants raised $2.2 million and had an alumni participation rate of 58.4 percent. This year Winey hopes to raise a total of $2.5 million and achieve an alumni participation rate of 60 percent.

The phonathon on Feb. 15 began with dinner and was followed by a student-run training session. At the training session, leaders Susan Anderson and Nina Schwartz explained the process involved in calling alumni and soliciting pledges. A "phonemat" which lists information on the Bowdoin Alumni Fund and which gives specific instructions for the crucial telephone call was handed out.

Anderson and Schwartz also emphasized politeness and discussed how to answer commonly asked questions. They also warned students not to take rejections personally.

About 14 students participate in each phonathon which usually lasts until 9:30 p.m. After the students have been instructed, they are given data sheets which list the name, address, major and other relevant information about the alum they are to call.

After the student places a call, they fill out the sheet and add it to a collective pile from which a running total of the pledges is calculated. Anybody can volunteer and all participants receive a free meal, t-shirt and a long distance call at the end of the night. A dinner for two is also provided for the student that collects the most amount of money and the student who collects the most amount of pledges.

According to Winey and students involved, there are many other benefits to participating in the phonathons. Last year, John Sharkey '87 was asked to a job interview and eventually given his present job through a phone conversation with an alumnus.

The majority of the students agreed that they enjoyed talking with alumni. "As a future graduate it's interesting to hear what other graduates are doing now," said Christopher Watson '88. Winey also mentioned that many of the alumni who actively support the program now started out working as students in phonathons.

Phonathons will take place on Feb. 22-24, 29; March 1, 2, April 12, 13, 18-20. Those interested should contact Jeff Winey at the Development Office.

Security recovers loot lost in library

LORI BODWELL
ORIENT Senior Editor

There were more than books missing from the library last week.

On Feb. 10 Bowdoin College security responded to a call from a library official reporting the theft of a wallet.

The wallet, belonging to a Bowdoin student, had been removed from a zipped compartment of a bookbag. Upon investigation the security officers Sergeant John Alexander and Patrol Officer Arthur Dunlap stopped two juveniles who were seen in the area prior to the theft and had remained in the library, according to Head of Security Michael S. Pander.

The two girls, both age twelve and Brunswick residents, were interviewed by security in conjunction with the Brunswick Police Department. After confessions by the juveniles, the officers were able to recover the missing wallet and $62.50 along with an additional wallet, two bookbags, and a radio, Pander said.

The juveniles also led the officers to a wallet hidden outside a lockerroom door at Dayton Arena according to Pander.

A subsequent search of the stacks in the Hawthorne-Longfellow building by library staff recovered two more wallets that had been stolen during the same period.

The juveniles were turned over to the Brunswick police.

Both Pander and Assistant Librarian Judith R. Montgomery stressed that this was in isolated incident, but urged students and staff to be aware of the problem and to report any missing items to security. Montgomery said a thorough search of library has been made, but it is possible that additional items may still be found.

The library is available for use by local patrons and the College would "not want to restrict access because of one incident," said Pander.

Montgomery said the library staff is alert to the types of people coming into the library and is working with security to make the library a safe place. She warned student not to leave valuables, including items such as honors projects, on carrels.

Although safety is always a concern for the library staff, Montgomery added that most students do not realize the danger to the collection brought about by consuming food and beverages in the library.

The London Theatre Program

of SARAH LAWRENCE COLLEGE and the
BRITISH AMERICAN DRAMA ACADEMY
at Regent's College, Regent's Park, London

A unique opportunity for college students to study with Britain's leading actors and directors. Acting study and performance, supplemented by academic work. Full academic credit is provided for either a semester or a year. For details and an application, call (914) 337-0700 or write:

The London Theatre Program, Box BBOW
Sarah Lawrence College, Bronxville, N. Y. 10708.

Study Abroad ITHACA COLLEGE LONDON CENTER

- SEMESTER OR YEAR PROGRAM
- ITHACA COLLEGE CREDIT
- BRITISH FACULTY

COURSES — British and European studies are offered in literature, history, art history, drama, music, sociology, education, psychology, communications, and politics. Special program offered in theatre. Internships available to qualified students in international business, social services, communications, political science, economics and theatre.

Visits to the theatre, museums, galleries, schools, social and political institutions are an integral part of the curriculum.

For further information write or call International Programs Ithaca College Ithaca, New York 14850 607-274-3306

Please send information about the Ithaca College London Center to:

NAME _____ ADDRESS _____
PHONE _____ SCHOOL _____ YEAR _____ MAJOR _____

Return to: Office of International Programs, Muller 218, Ithaca College, Ithaca, NY 14850

LOOKOUT POINT HOUSE

Harpswell, Maine
(207) 833-5509

WINTER SPECIAL

2 days - 2 nights
MAP plan - double occupancy
2 people - $150.00
or

Rooms by the month

on the sea

eight miles from Bowdoin

Goldsmith faces challenge of IFC presidency

This is the first in a weekly series of articles profiling those people who contribute, in various ways, to the character of Bowdoin College.

KEVIN WESLEY

ORIENT In-Depth Editor

The new president of the Interfraternity Council feels that the most important part of her job is keeping the entire campus unified.

Jennifer Goldsmith '90, was elected president of the IFC last semester, and since then has been inundated with a flood of issues ranging from second semester rush to alcohol awareness week.

The issues concerning fraternities have been a hotly debated subject all year, and Goldsmith realizes the fraternity system going through a time of change.

She perceives herself as much more than a representative of the fraternal system, but a unifier of the student body.

She first began going to IFC last year, and quickly recognized the potential which the committee had. "I started to realize that the fraternities could work together. If we all work together we can be a strong voice," she said.

That optimism has continued since her election. Since last semester, she has seen a better attitude amongst IFC members. "People are hearing about a lot of positive changes with the IFC. There's definitely a feeling of 'Let's do something,'" she said.

Despite a review committee which will make final recommendations to President A. LeRoy tion. She also realizes that change will occur, including "changes no one is going to like."

"I think people (on the IFC) are willing to work to change if the people asking us to change are willing to work with us," she said.

Controversy has been par for the course during her term so far, and the review committee has only been one distraction. Along with overseeing this semester's rush, Goldsmith said the IFC is already organizing next year's rush.

Goldsmith has been instrumental in implementing reforms in the fraternity system even before her election. Last semester, she founded Women in Support of Bowdoin Fraternities, a self-help group intended for fraternity and independent women.

She said the support she has received from the college community has been overwhelming. She said past IFC Presidents Dan McGovern '88 and Scott Milo '88. "I give a lot of credit to Scott," she said, "He's walked me through many steps. He's been very supportive and very supportive."

Goldsmith said the administration, especially Dean of Students Kenneth A. Lewallen has been wonderful. "You couldn't ask for a better dean," she said.

The respect is mutual. "My relationship with Jenny has been extremely positive," Lewallen said. "I'm surprised that she has such administrative savvy at such a young age."

Jennifer Goldsmith. Photo by Susannah Moy.

Lewallen said her "non-confrontative approach" in dealings with administrators has been advantageous so far. "She's practical. She knows what will work and what will not work."

Adding that she has improved relations with the press and how to represent the IFC, Lewallen said

Goldsmith "recognizes the necessity for reform."

Fellow IFC leaders have also been impressed so far. "She's really motivated for action," said Wendy Carlson, president of Alpha Beta Phi. "She wants to make the IFC more of an action-oriented body. She seems like a really strong leader."

Campus profiles

She also sees a majority of the student body, including independents, supporting the fraternity system.

"I think fraternities recognize change has to come in certain ways," she said in a recent interview.

A member of Psi Upsilon, Goldsmith has found her new position challenging yet hectic.

Geason next month, Goldsmith said the IFC has not been obsessed with the evaluation. "I have to say the review committee has done a fine job," she said.

"I honestly feel they're not going to do anything that isn't in the best interests of the college."

Goldsmith hopes that she and the IFC have a chance to contribute to Geason's final recommenda-

BARGAINS FOR STUDENTS
Bargain Balcony
Boutique
55 Plus Center, Brunswick
Open Mondays, Tuesdays and
Thursdays 10 to 3

CRUISE SHIPS
NOW HIRING. M/F
Summer & Career Opportunities
(Will Train). Excellent pay plus
world travel. Hawaii, Bahamas,
Caribbean, etc. CALL NOW
206-736-0775 Ext.544F

WAKE N' BAKE
NEGRIL, JAMAICA
SPRING BREAK
$479 - INCL. AIR, 7 NIGHTS, PARTIES AND TAXES.
CALL 1-800-426-7710

Mark your calendars!

MassMutual
the nation's 11th largest Life Insurance Company will be on your campus
February 24
to interview May 1988 graduates.

Career Opportunities exist in -Management Development
-Real Estate
-Sales
-Computer Programming
Training Programs.

If you possess good academic credentials, communicate well and have ambition to work for a progressive company that offers vast growth opportunities, be sure to attend an information session on February 23.

ALL INTERESTED STUDENTS ARE WELCOME.

Stop by your Career Planning and Placement Office for more details.

February 1988

S	M	T	W	T	F	S
	1	2	3	4	5	6
7	8	9	10	11	12	13
14	15	16	17	18	19	20
21	22	23	24	25	26	27
28	29

Typesetting & Design
for Resumes & Stationery

98 MAINE STREET, BRUNSWICK 729-5650
Upstairs from Benoit's

STUDIO

3 Bowker St.
Brunswick, Me.

725-2694

Within walking distance
of campus.

MEN $7.00
WOMEN $12.00
with Bowdoin I.D.

ENTERTAINMENT

'You Can't Take It With You' humors

SHARON SMART
ORIENT Entertainment Editor

Masque & Gown's production of You Can't Take It With You was fully engaging. Replete with energy, fun, and ceaseless complexities of action, the performance excited laughter as well as sympathetic understanding of the obvious "theme."

As aptly summarized by the lines of Grandpa, David Callan, '91, the query and advice centered within the play takes the form: "You get your indignation from doing all the things you don't want to do. Where does the fun come in?...You can't take it with you!" Blatant, trite as the message is, the performance vehicle through which it gains presentation effectively worked the audience into a mood sympathetic to and accepting of its melodrama—by the time the simplistic plot unfolded, triviality had become charm, and identification and delight with the characters was wholly conducive to respect for their thematic construction.

The activities of the family about which the play is written, and a few days in their unconscious, 1935 lifestyle, provided a clear picture of what it is to be individualistic. Within a stage setting reminiscent of Grandma's house, all aspects of family life, exaggerated and odd, were played out.

A collection of eccentrics, the roles created a varied, romping comedy. The energy of the performers carried the situations, wallowing in the silly exchanges and events to such an extent as to compel the audience to do so as well. Hilarity generally resulted.

For sheer enthusiasm, Amy Loyd, '90, as the "perky" daughter Essie, and Cory Burns, '88, a vocal Russian ballet master Kolenkhov, distinguished themselves. Each performed at the capacity of an aerobic workout, maximally entertaining.

The melodrama characteristic of old movies was celebrated, corny and cliché-ridden as it was, to full effect by the young lovers Alice, Margot Downs, '91, and Tony, Chris Salleroli, '90. Breathless ingenuousness and carefully staged gestures infused predictability with high humor.

Omnipresent were Elizabeth Mullen, '88, as Penny, and Callan

(Grandpa). Each played well off the many other cast members, Mullen especially consistently maintaining her character throughout the potentially eclipsing bustle of many of the scenes. Callan acted somewhat as commentator upon the activities, and effectively so, yet his voice and carriage did not adequately capture the intended advanced age of Grandpa.

Intricate interaction, constantly changing stage positions, and the use of a complex set complete with many props, was handled well. Director David Mittel, '89, executed a stylish and professional choreography. Several scenes all cast members to perform simultaneously within the limited space of the G.H.Q. Playwrights Theater. Separate dialogues and wildly varied occupations engaged the audience's attention, yet somehow managed not to fall into disorder.

The overall experience provided laughter and an elevated mood—triviality became comic without provocation of cynicism. And the light humor affected acceptable communication of a message of enjoyment.

Masque and Gown's production of 'You Can't Take It With You' premiered last night. The play continues tonight and tomorrow at 8 p.m. Photo by Mary Ann Lai.

Prospective art professor presents portfolio

LISA WLODARSKI
ORIENT Contributor

Next year, in the Art Department, there will be two openings for studio art professors. One new instructor will be chosen to fill the two-year teaching position, vacated by Kevin Donahue, and one will be selected as a visiting faculty member, while Mark Wieth, associate professor, will be on sabbatical.

On Tuesday, Diane Sophrin, a member of the Fine Arts faculty at the Rochester Institute of Technology, presented a slide show and lecture about her work and teaching methods. She was the third and final candidate, chosen from the 150-160 who applied and the 30-40 candidates who were actually considered for the positions, to give such a lecture.

These final three were chosen because they had the best portfolios as judged by the Art Department. The purpose of the presentations was to give faculty members and students a chance to evaluate the candidates and perhaps provide some input into the decision of who will be chosen.

Sophrin's credentials indicate that she is a well-qualified candidate to teach at Bowdoin. She earned her B.A. in Fine Arts from the State University of New York at Binghamton, and has studied at the Jan van Eyck Academy in the Netherlands. She has had several one-person exhibits, at places such as the Portland Library and at Rochester University.

Sophrin described her technique as based on doing a preliminary sketch very quickly, to "capture the essence" of what is in front of her and identify certain characteristics and features of the subject. Drawing, she said, is "very important in my painting; it's the core of my work." She blocks "everything at once," not starting in one place and working from there.

After this exploratory stage, she will begin to scrutinize the subject more carefully. The result of this process is to convey a relationship between the artist and subject, thus between the viewer and the work.

The subjects in which she has characteristically taken an interest in depicting have been figures and the relationships between them, interior scenes, and town and cityscapes.

"I am intrigued," she said, "with...the contrast between things that are beautiful and the things I consider ugly."

Sophrin has taught drawing, painting and design to fine arts majors as well as to students taking the courses as electives. Her teaching, she said, is very structured. She emphasizes intense scrutiny of the subject, the use of tone and value (contrasts of light and darkness) and she teaches students to block their pictures quickly and then go in and refine the details. Also, she tries to help students achieve a growing familiarity with the craft itself.

In answer to questions posed by students and faculty at the end of her lecture and slide show, Sophrin described her philosophy of drawing and painting. "For me," she said, "art is about life, in one way or another." She assumes that artists should have a connection with the world—with their environment and with other people.

The other two candidates who gave slide lectures were Ingrid Cappozzoli and Robert Andriulli. Of Cappozzoli, a studio art major who attended her presentation commented that it did not encompass a very wide range of technique, and she did not effectively describe what she did show. To the same student, Andriulli, who exhibited mostly landscape paintings, did not display a wider range of style but was more articulate in conveying his message.

Calendar

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 19

7:30 and 10:00 p.m. — The BFVS presents Breaking Away, in Smith Auditorium. Admission is $1.

8:00 p.m. — Masque & Gown presents You Can't Take It With You, directed by David J. Mittel '89, in the G.H.Q. Playwrights' Theater, Memorial Hall.

9:30 p.m. — Bill Turner performs in The Pub.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 20

1:00 p.m. — The Bowdoin Archaeological Field School in Murlo, Italy is the subject of a meeting held in the Peucinian Room, Sills Hall. Meet with Director of excavation, Dr. Erik Nielsen at this informal talk about Bowdoin's summer program in Murlo, Italy. Earn one Bowdoin credit towards your degree; excavate the Etruscan site, called Pogio Civitate.

7:30 and 10:00 p.m. — The BFVS presents The Graduate, in Smith Auditorium. Admission is $1.

8:00 p.m. — Masque & Gown presents You Can't Take It With You, directed by David J. Mittel '89, in the G.H.Q. Playwrights' Theater, Memorial Hall.

10:00 p.m. — The 19th Annual Black Arts Festival: Black Achievement sponsors a Bowdoin/Bates/Colby dance in the Afro-American Center.

Amnesty International will hold a Pub Night in The Pub. Time to be announced.

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 21

2:30 p.m. — Anthony Belmont '60, medical director, Metropolitan Life Insurance, speaks on AIDS. He will also present a video and answer questions raised during the video. The talk will be held in Daggett Lounge, Wentworth Hall.

3:00 p.m. — The Language Media Center sponsors The Virgin Spring (Swedish with English subtitles), a film directed by Ingmar Bergman, in Smith Auditorium.

3:00 p.m. — A Gallery Talk on "Still Life with Earthenware Vessel by Lennart Anderson" is presented by Thomas B. Cornell, professor of art, in the Museum of Art, Walker Art Building.

8:00 p.m. — Opening of works by Lisa W. Aufranc '88 and Stuart B. Strong '88, in the Visual Arts Center.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 22

7:30 p.m. — Photographer Laura McPhee presents a lecture, in conjunction with the current exhibition "Laura McPhee: Photographs". Lecture will be given in the Beam Classroom, VAC.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 24

3:00 and 8:00 p.m. — The BFVS presents La Souffriere (God's Army) in Kresge Auditorium. Admission is free.

EXHIBITIONS

"Martha Diamond: Paintings": Exhibited in the Bowdoin Museum's 20th-Century Gallery, much of the work was inspired by the architectural environment of Manhattan. It will run through March 20.

"Laura McPhee: Photographs" is on display in the Walker Art Building. John A. and Helen P. Becker Gallery. It will run through February 28.

"Max Beckmann: Masterprints" is on display in the Walker Art Building, Temporary Exhibition Gallery, through March 20.

An exhibition of color landscapes by Brunswick photographer Frank Brockman will be on display through February 29 in the Lancaster Lounge, Moulton Union.

Student works from the fall semester hang in the Visual Arts Center.

"The Indecisive Moment", works by Lisa W. Aufranc and Stuart B. Strong '88, is on display in the Visual Arts Center.

"The History of the Pejepscot Region" exhibit is on display at the Pejepscot Museum, 159 Park Row, Brunswick. The exhibit provides a comprehensive treatment of the area's historical developments from pre-settlement to the present featuring photographs and artifacts from the Pejepscot Historical Society's collection. Hours are Monday-Fridays, 10:00 a.m.—3:00 p.m.

PERFORMANCES

March 15 — 8:00 p.m. — Frank Zappa performs at the Cumberland Civic Center. Tickets are on sale at the Box Office, or call Ticketron 1-800-382-8080. Reserved seats are $16.50.

February 19 — Urban Blight (ska rock, funk) performs at the Tree Cafe, 45 Danforth St., Portland.

February 20 — The Rain performs at the Tree Cafe, 45 Danforth St., Portland.

February 20 — 9:00 p.m. — Country Joe McDonald of Country Joe and the Fish fame appears for one show only at Raoul's Roadside Attraction, 865 Forest Avenue, Portland. Tickets are available at Raoul's and Mid-Town Records, 207 Main St., Biddeford.

February 19—21 — 8:00 p.m., Sunday 2:30 p.m. — The Portland Players present Death Of A Salesman, by Arthur Miller, at the Thaxter Theater, 420 Cottage Rd., So. Portland. For tickets and information call 799-7337 or 799-7338.

MOVIES

Evening Star Cinema (Tontine Mall)

Wallstreet, showing at 7:00 and 9:10 p.m.

Cinemas Four (Cooks Corner)

Good Morning Vietnam, showing at 7:00 and 9:05 p.m.

Shoot to Kill, showing at 7:05 and 9:05 p.m.

Three Men and a Baby, showing at 7:10 and 9:10 p.m.

Moonstruck, showing at 7:05 and 9:05 p.m.

THE "CLUBBUSTERS" $3.99 EACH

NO CLUB HASSLES! NO CLUB GIMMICKS!

PLUS POSTAGE

USE THIS PAGE OR A PHOTOCOPY AS YOUR ORDER FORM. MARK AN "X" IN BOX NEXT TO YOUR SELECTIONS.

CUT OUT AND MAIL ENTIRE PAGE

WHITESNAKE GEFEN QMS 24099 (9 98)	WHITESNAKE SLIDE IT IN
WHITNEY HOUSTON ARISTA AL 8405 (9 98)	WHITNEY RADIO K.A.O.S.
DEF LEPPARD MERCURY 830 675 1 (POLYGRAM)	HYSTERIA DARK SIDE OF THE MOON
PINK FLOYD COLUMBIA DC 40599	A MOMENTARY LAPSE OF REASON ONE WAY HOME
SOUNDTRACK RCA 6408 1 R (9 98)	DIRTY DANCING NO PROTECTION
SOUNDTRACK SLASH 25405/WARNER BROS. (9 98)	LA BAMBA BEVERLY HILLS COP II
JOHN COUGAR MELLENCAMP MERCURY 832 455 1 (POLYGRAM)	THE LONESOME JUBILEE ALPHABET CITY
U2 ISLAND MOSES ATLANTIC (9 98)	THE JOSHUA TREE BABYLON AND ON
HEART CAPITOL P 12548 (9 98)	BAD ANIMALS TOP GUN
DANNY WILSON VIRGIN 905 96 ATLANTIC (9 98)	MEET DANNY WILSON BIG GENERATOR
RITCHIE VALENS (HARDY DEL) 10178 CAPITOL (9 98)	THE BEST OF RITCHIE VALENS GO ON
RUSH MERCURY 832 484 1 (POLYGRAM)	HOLD YOUR FIRE ELECTRIC
SOUNDTRACK MADONNA SRS 25411/WARNER BROS. (9 98)	WHO'S THAT GIRL WENDY AND LISA
FLEETWOOD MAC WARNER BROS. 25471 (9 98)	TANGO IN THE NIGHT TIFFANY
R.E.M. 101 42055 MCA (9 98)	DOCUMENT LICENSED TO R.L.
GRATEFUL DEAD ARISTA AL 8452 (9 98)	IN THE DARK STRANGEWAYS, HERE WE COME
EUROPE EPC 861 40241 E.P.A.	THE FINAL COUNTDOWN FASTER PUSSYCAT
KENNY G ARISTA AL 8427 (9 98)	DUOTONE KISS ME, KISS ME, KISS ME
LISA LISA & CULT JAM COLUMBIA EC 40477	SPANISH FLY INTO THE FIRE
AEROSMITH GEFEN QMS 24162 (9 98)	PERMANENT VACATION KEEP YOUR DISTANCE
ANITA BAKER ELECTRA 60444 (9 98)	RAPTURE BANGIN'
GREAT WHITE CAPITOL ST 12545 (9 98)	ONCE BITTEN BACK IN THE HIGH LIFE
KISS MERCURY 832 626 1 (POLYGRAM)	CRAZY NIGHTS GRACELAND
SOUNDTRACK ATLANTIC P 1767 (9 98)	LOST BOYS SO
MOTLEY CRUE ELECTRA 90725 (9 98)	GIRLS, GIRLS, GIRLS BEST OF THE DOORS
THE CARS ELECTRA 90747 (9 98)	DOOR TO DOOR A LETTER FROM ST. PAUL
HUEY LEWIS & THE NEWS CHRYSLER (9 98)	FORE! CONTROL
RICHARD MARX 101 MANHATTAN ST 12241 (9 98)	RICHARD MARX CROWDED HOUSE
BON JOVI MERCURY 830264 1 (POLYGRAM)	SLEEPY WHEN WET ROCK YOU TO HELL
EXPOSE ARISTA AL 8441 (9 98)	EXPOSURE LIFE AS WE KNOW IT
CUTTING CREW VIRGIN 90573 ATLANTIC (9 98)	BROADCAST JONATHAN BUTLER
GENESIS ATLANTIC 81641 (9 98)	INVISIBLE TOUCH SENTIMENTAL HYGIENE
POISON (HIGMAN ST 12523) CAPITOL (9 98)	LOOK WHAT THE CAT DRAGGED IN DARKLANDS
CINDERELLA MERCURY 83076 1 (POLYGRAM)	NIGHT SONGS
BODEANS SLASH 25425 (HIGMAN ST 12523) CAPITOL (9 98)	OUTSIDE LOOKING IN
PET SHOP BOYS 101 MANHATTAN ST 12241 (9 98)	ACTUALLY
BILLY IDOL CHRYSLER (9 98)	VITAL IDOL
SUZANNE VEGA A&M SP 5136 (9 98)	SOLITUDE STANDING
NAJEE 101 MANHATTAN ST 12241 (9 98)	NAJEE'S THEME
DAVID BOWIE 101 MANHATTAN ST 12241 (9 98)	NEVER LET ME DOWN
SPYRO GYRA MCA 20444 (9 98)	STORIES WITHOUT WORDS
W.A.S.P. CAPITOL CLT 48053 (9 98)	LIVE IN THE RAW
BAHANARAMA LONDON 828 081 1 (POLYGRAM)	WOW
PRINCE PASELY PARK 25577/WARNER BROS. (15 98)	SIGN 'O' THE TIMES
WHITNEY HOUSTON ARISTA AL 8212 (9 98)	WHITNEY HOUSTON
GLORIA ESTEFAN & MIAMI SOUND MACHINE EPC DE 40749 E.P.A.	LET IT LOOSE
38 SPECIAL A&M 3910 (9 98)	BEST OF 38 SPECIAL-"FLASHBACK"
MADONNA SRS 25442/WARNER BROS. (9 98)	TRUE BLUE
SOUNDTRACK MCA 6214 (9 98)	MOONLIGHTING
ECHO AND THE BUNNYMEN SRS 25592/WARNER BROS. (9 98)	ECHO AND THE BUNNYMEN
SWING OUT SISTER MERCURY 832 213 1 (POLYGRAM)	IT'S BETTER TO TRAVEL
SAMMY HAGAR GEFEN QMS 24144 (9 98)	I NEVER SAID GOODBYE
DEBBIE GIBSON ATLANTIC 81780 (9 98)	OUT OF THE BLUE

☐ Yes! Please send me you 1987 catalog with over 7000 titles. I have enclosed $1.00 extra for postage.

We Are Not A Club!

WE ONLY SELL CASSETTES!! WE ACCEPT PERSONAL CHECKS OR MONEY ORDERS

POSTAGE & HANDLING: ALL ORDERS MUST INCLUDE THREE DOLLARS & FIFTY CENTS (3.50). NO MATTER HOW LARGE OR SMALL THE ORDER. ALL ORDERS SHIPPED FIRST CLASS MAIL. TAPES ARE 100% GUARANTEED

NAME _____

ADDRESS _____

CITY _____ STATE _____ ZIP _____

MAKE CHECKS PAYABLE TO:
Students Publishing
PO BOX 449
FORT LAUDERDALE,
FLORIDA 33338

$3.99 x =
CATALOGUE (1.00)
POSTAGE & HANDLING $3.50
TOTAL ENCLOSURE

SPORTS

Bears maul Mules 9-3

ERIC PALMQUIST

ORIENT Circulation Manager

Over the years the Bowdoin-Colby hockey rivalry has developed into one of the biggest games of the year at the Dayton Arena. This year, the contest had all the makings of a good one. The Polar Bears were without their two leading scorers, as both Steve Ilkos and Steve Thornton were down with injuries, and some felt that after a tough game against Division I Boston University the Bears might be ripe for an upset.

It was not to be. The Polar Bears clamped the Mules for four first-period goals and coasted to an easy 9-3 victory.

The game initially looked like it was going to resemble the scrappy affairs of past years, as both teams came out looking for blood. The Bears scored first after surviving heavy pressure by the Mules when Tom Aldrich blasted a slapshot into the right corner off passes from Ray Diffley and Brandon Sweeney. Colby answered right back, however, as they beat Steve Janas just 45 seconds later to tie it.

That was the last hurrah for the Mules, as the Polar Bears racked up the next four goals. Kurt Liebhich touched off the sparks as he circled behind the net and fed Mike Cavanaugh in front for a score that gave the bears a 2-1 lead. Then, as the period was winding down, Kevin Potter skated in alone for a breakway goal. Before the capacity crowd could end their cheers the Bears were on the board again, however, this time when Cavanaugh put a slapshot into the upper right hand corner of the net off a faceoff from Tom Aldrich.

The second period belonged to Mike Cavanaugh, as he completed his hat trick with an unassisted goal to put the Bears up 5-1, but Colby answered back when they flipped a rebound by a shell-shocked Janas to stay in the game. It was 5-2 going into the third period, and the Polar Bears were about to feast.

Kurt Liebhich iced the game just two minutes into the last period off feeds from Mark Smyth and Mike Cavanaugh, and the three combined again a few minutes later, this time with Smyth picking up the goal. Cavanaugh's assist on the play gave him six points for the game and helped put the Bears up, 7-2.

Aldrich picked up a loose puck just a few seconds later and rifled it home, and Brad Chin followed up one of the few Mule tallies with a score of his own off a rebound to complete the action. Steve Janas played another fine game in net, stopping 23 shots in all. But the night belonged to Mike Cavanaugh, who showed himself to be yet another threat in Coach Meagher's growing arsenal.

The B.U. game showed how powerful those weapons could be, as the Polar Bears played the Division I power straight up for two and a half periods despite the loss of Thornton, who had twisted a knee the night before at Amherst. When Kevin Powers scored to open the third period after earlier marks from Jim Pincock and Thomas Johansson the game was tied 3-3, and with Brad Raborit guarding the nets, it was anyone's game.

It was the superior size of the B.U. players that wore the Polar Bears down in the end; however, as they tallied two late scores to win, 5-3. It had taken a major league effort by Raborit to keep the game close, but just to stay in the game with the Terriers was a victory for the Bears, who had just thoroughly mauled the Lord Jeffs of Amherst 9-3.

In that contest Amherst broke out on top, but were then smothered by a deluge of goals in the first and second periods that gave the Bears a 7-1 lead. Aldrich, Ilkos, Smyth, Chin, Jeff Gorman, and Steve Thornton (twice) all registered tallies in those periods, and Gorman struck again with Kevin Powers in the third to seal an easy 9-3 win. Steve Janas and Ryan McGuire split the time in net, turning away 16 shots between them.

Tomorrow is another big game for the Polar Bears, who travel to Babson to try to revenge an earlier defeat. This game will be important in determining the berths for post-season play.

Mike Cavanaugh (21) attacks the Colby goal in the second period to complete a hat trick. Photo by Lori Bodwell.

Brandeis dropped by cagers

CHRISTOPHER BOONE
ORIENT Staff

The men's basketball team dropped two games in a snow-plagued weekend but roared back on Tuesday night to overwhelm a solid Brandeis squad.

The snow forced the Polar Bears to cancel their Friday match, but the team was able to make it to the game against the Camels of Connecticut College on Saturday. The Bears appear to have been snowed under again as Connecticut rolled to a handy 81-66 victory.

Bowdoin posted five players in double figures: Burnett led the way with 18 points; and Drigotas, Cole, Kryger, and Williams ended the game with 10 points each. Williams hauled down 7 rebounds to lead the Bears but rebounding seemed to be what was lacking as team totals indicate a 34-28 edge for the Camels.

Sunday's game at Eastern Connecticut was much of the same as Bowdoin once again was outbounded and outscored, 39-30 and 90-71 respectively. Eastern Connecticut had seven players with 7 points or more and that simply proved to be too much for the Bears. Al Bugbee stormed back however, scoring 19 points in only 20 minutes to lead all Bowdoin scorers. Williams tossed in 15 points to aid the cause. Steve Drigotas led all Bowdoin rebounders with 6 and Big Joe hauled in 5.

So after this dismal weekend capping a five-game losing streak for the Polar Bears, the 92-72 trouncing of Brandeis was all the sweeter. "After the two losses to the Connecticut teams, we needed a victory. Against Brandeis we were able to execute our offense well and on defense we applied the pressure that resulted in many fast-break baskets," said Coach Tim Gilbride.

Bowdoin had command of the game the whole way, jumping out to a 10-2 lead and behind the 15 point first-half effort of Kevin Hancock, opened up a solid 44-26 lead. Hancock ended the game with 20 points, Al Bugbee added 13, John Cole pumped in 12 and Mike Burnett had 10.

Joe Williams continued his season-long tear, finishing the game with 14 points, 7 rebounds and 8 blocked shots. Mike Kryger dished out 7 assists.

The team has the weekend off and plays their final home game against Bates College on Monday night. They then travel to Colby to finish the season on the following Saturday. Bowdoin lost to both squads earlier in the season and seek revenge.

Track team takes second

BRETT WICKARD
ORIENT Staff

Last Saturday the women's track team captured 2nd place in the state meet, tying Bates College, while the University of Maine at Orono ran away with championship. UMO tallied 118 points while the Polar Bears and the Bobcats settled for 49 apiece.

The 4x200 relay of Theresa O'Hearn '88, Beth Hale '90, Heather Wood '91, and Tonya Bynoe '88 began the scoring for Bowdoin with a 2nd place finish. Amidst a tight 400 meter crowd, O'Hearn edged her way into 4th. Katesy Townsend '90 grabbed a 4th as well in the 600m. Freshman Sarah Clodfelter sprinted her way to a 5th in the 55m dash.

Bowdoin's dominance proved to be in the 800m run as they captured 1st, 3rd, and 5th places. Bynoe led the way with a school record that not only crushed the field but earned her a place in the Div III nationals as well. Kristen O'Keefe '90 and Melissa Quimby '91 ran strongly as well to gain the 3rd and 5th places.

Once again Anja Kannengeiser proved to be the class of the field in the 1000m while it took a state record to defeat Deanna Hodgkin in the 3200m run. Hodgkin took 2nd while Gwen Kay '91 captured 5th.

O'Hearn, Wood, Kannengeiser, and Bynoe teamed up in the 4x400 and narrowly missed breaking the school record enroute to a win. The 4x800 squad of Quimby, Margaret Heron '91, Paula Sincero '90, and O'Keefe rounded out the Bears' track points. In the weights Donna Ingham '90 and Sandra Scibelli captured some much needed points. Ingham took 2nd in the shot and 3rd in the weight throw while Scibelli captured 5th and 4th.

The men were also active last Saturday as they matched up against perennial rivals Bates and Colby. The Bears ended up in the middle with Bates taking the meet. Dave Novaria '90 led the way with a 1st in the long jump while Eric Gans '88 set another personal record as he ran a way with the 55m hurdles. Senior Steve Polikoff hung on to capture the 400m run and Damon Guterman '89 outvalued his rivals to lay claim to 1st in the pole vault.

The relay teams too had strong performances. Seniors Colles Stowell, Rob McCabe, and Polikoff teamed with Bob Noel '91 to take the 4x400 while the distance medley squad of Marty Malague '90, Pete Holtz '91, Jeff Iverson '88, and John Dougherty '91 took 1st.

Gary Robbins warms up before men's squash upsets Amherst. Photo by Bonnie Berryman.

Squash squishes Tufts

BLAIR DILS
ORIENT Contributor

The men's squash team earned their two biggest wins this winter giving the Bears confidence heading into the season finale National Tournament, as they knocked off perennial powerhouses Tufts and Amherst.

The biggest win was the encounter with the Jumbos of Tufts. After splitting the first eight matches, the outcome depended on the outcome of no. 1 player Gary Robbins' match. A victory would mean the first Bowdoin win over Tufts in recent memory. Robbins prevailed 3-1, clinching the 5-4 victory. Many in the squash circles view the win as tainted because Tufts was without the services of a few top players.

The second big victory came more recently as the Polar Bears edged the rival Lord Jeffs of Amherst. Similar to the Tufts match, the victory would come down to one last match. While Robbins, Eric Loeb '90, Ben Cohan '88, and Rutherford Hayes '91 all beat their counterparts, Scott Hirsch '90, Aaron Caplan '90, Pete Cook '89 and Ross Baker '90 did not fare as well. The entire match then rested on the shoulders of the inspirational Stuart Strong '88. Captain Strong, playing with the experience of a senior, captured his match 3-2, pulling out Bowdoin's second important win in as many weeks.

Tufts and Amherst were not the only victims to fall to the Bears recently. Fordham and Wesleyan were easily handied as were intrastate rivals Bates and Colby. The lone blackmark in the recent record book was a loss to M.I.T.

The next match comes tomorrow as Bowdoin plays host to West Point, and then the Bears travel to Williams for the Nationals. With this recent success, very good things are expected come season's end.

BC falls to women skaters

TONY JACCACI
ORIENT Staff

This year's women's varsity hockey team is a much better team than the numbers indicate. Despite dropping two games last week to Dartmouth and Providence College by large margins, the Polar Bears played very well and were able to skate with both teams for most of the games. In between the two losses, however, Bowdoin destroyed Boston College 8-2 and so the problem for Bowdoin does not seem to be offense but rather experience.

Captain Kathy McCormick feels that the team has a tremendous amount of potential and it is merely a matter of ice time before the numbers begin to reflect the quality of players on the team. Coach Bobby Jones added that this year's schedule is significantly tougher and he too feels that the young team needs experience.

Two Sundays ago, Bowdoin traveled to Hanover, N.H. to play the Big Green of Dartmouth. The Polar Bears played a good game and after the first period, the score was 1-1. The Bowdoin goal came from Shelia "Gretzky" Carrol who has been on fire for the team all year. The second period went well for the black and white and the score was held to 3-1 after two.

In the third period however, Bowdoin's inexperience began to show as Dartmouth scored five goals (four of which were unassisted) to Bowdoin's one goal. Once again, it was Carrol putting the Polar Bears on the board as she netted her second goal of the game.

Katherine McCormick sets up play in opponents zone, en route to victory. Photo by Mary Ann Lai.

Suzanne Walker put in a fine game in the nets and came up with many key saves. When the game ended, the final was 8-2 in favor of the Big Green.

Bowdoin had no problem with Boston College last Saturday as they didn't even skate the first line. The game was a chance for everyone on the team to get playing time. Bowdoin took the game by a score of 8-2.

The Polar Bears did not have much fun the following day as they hosted Providence College, the number 3 ranked division I team in the east. Although the final score was 11-0, Bowdoin was not totally out of the game. As captain McCormick said "we proved that we could compete with them" and indeed that was the case as Bowdoin had several offensive attacks in which the puck hit the post.

The whole team has been improving and particular standout is freshman Mary Greason who is playing "very aggressive and physical hockey" according to Coach Jones. Another player who is coming on strong is sophomore Caroline Parks who scored a hatrick against BC on Saturday.

Tomorrow, the Black and White will play host to MIT as the team hopes to avenge the loss they suffered to the weaker MIT team earlier in the season. Sticks will clash, helmets will crunch; it will not be a game to miss.

Hoops lose on road

JIM ANDERSON
ORIENT Contributor

The Bowdoin Women's basketball team ventured out into the snowstorm over the weekend and perhaps wished they had remained within the friendly confines of the Pines. The Bears travelled to Connecticut for a pair of weekend games against Eastern Connecticut College and Connecticut College. Bowdoin was unable to break their present losing streak as they dropped both games. The present winless drought now extends to five games.

Due to the storm the team left a day late and thus began the trip at Connecticut College. The first half, usually a nemesis, found the Bears playing sound, fundamental basketball. The steady offense and the tight defense propelled Bowdoin to a 30-22 lead. Taking into consideration recent second half efforts, the signs pointed to a win.

The second half was a completely different story. And in the opinion of floor leader Nancy Delaney the referees played more than an incidental role in the turn around. The refs appeared to search out black uniforms and blow the whistle liberally. Due to some officiating three Bowdoin starters found themselves doing more second half spectating than playing.

All in all the Lady Camels were awarded 38 shots from the foul line compared to a modest Bowdoin total of 15. Connecticut took advantage of the lack of experience on the Bowdoin bench and outscored the Bears in the final twenty minutes by 17 to cruise to a 59-50 victory.

The front line of Kim Lemieux, Nikki Comeau and Stephanie Caron as usual dominated the scoring. The trio combined for 42 of the 50 points getting 17, 13 and 12 respectively.

The Bears trekked down the road the next day to face a tough and burly Eastern Connecticut squad. Connecticut established their game plan early: Play full-court man-to-man defense and go inside to their big people on offense. The strategy was successful from the opening tap to the final horn. Eastern Connecticut was able to dominate the boards at both ends of the floor and ran out to a 37-26 half time lead. Coach Harvey Shapiro had to wonder if there was any way to stop both Eastern Connecticut and the losing streak.

Apparently it was not to be, as Bowdoin was worn down by the relentless offensive and defensive pressure applied by Connecticut. Rebounding has been a trouble spot all year and playing against a strong and aggressive rebounding team was more than they could handle. The Bears could not put together any late runs and Eastern Connecticut rolled up a 72-52 victory.

The game was not without good efforts, however. As they have all year the Bowdoin front line carried the burden of the offense. Kim Lemieux turned in another fine performance with 20 points and 9 rebounds. Stephanie Caron kicked in 11 points and 7 boards and Nikki Comeau added 10 points and 10 rebounds.

The Bears return to action on Monday, playing host the Bates Bobcats in Morrell Gym. Nancy Delaney feels that the team will respond well to the upcoming CBB opponent, especially since Bowdoin knocked off Bates in a tight game earlier in the season.

DELIVERS TO BOWDOIN COLLEGE

PIZZAS - SANDWICHES - SALADS

DINNERS

EXAMPLE:

Regular Cheese Pizza $2.20
add $.55 per topping

Large Cheese Pizza $5.50
add $1.00 per topping

no minimum

free delivery

SPECIAL
BUY ONE LARGE PIZZA OR
ANY $5.00 ORDER AND GET
A LITER OF PEPSI AT NO
EXTRA CHARGE

725-9753

MON - THUR
5:30 - 9:30

FRI - SAT
5:30 - 10:30

SUN
5:30 - 8:30

Pauline's Bloomers

Toronto Mall, Brunswick, 725-5952

QUALITY FLORAL SERVICE

Anniversary, Birthday, Hospital, Wedding, Sympathy, Holiday, All Occasions

Flowers, Plants & Gifts

We Deliver

Wire Service

Balloons & Candy

Major Credit Cards Accepted • Open 6 days 9:00 to 5:30

WINE BEER CHEESE KEGS ICE

THE FINEST PRODUCTS AT THE LOWEST PRICES.
FOR THOSE WITH UNCOMPROMISING TASTE!

A BOWDOIN TRADITION SINCE 1717

Cask and Ken

26 Bath Road, Brunswick, 725-9711 Mon, Sat., 10 to 6

BICYCLES

Fuji, Univega, Peugeot, Trek, Shogun

PROMPT, EXPERT SERVICE • CUSTOM BUILT WHEELS

EXERCISE EQUIPMENT & ROWING MACHINES

ALL-TERRAIN BICYCLES & CROSS COUNTRY SKIS

TRADE INS & USED BIKES

CYCLING CLOTHING AND HELMETS • CUSTOM BICYCLES SET UP

Until March 1
Wed. - Sat., 10 - 5:30
Friday Nites till 8

After March 1
Mon. - Sat., 10 - 5:30

442-7002

ROUTE 1 WOOLWICH
(ACROSS FROM MCLAN SUBARU & PEUGEOT)

White Paper

(Continued from page one)

Hochstetler said the Moulton Union does not fulfill that role presently. "The Moulton Union can be compared to a living, while the new space would be a family room," Hochstetler said.

Hochstetler said the Hyde Cage could be retrofitted relatively inexpensively to serve as a student center, and the pool area's shape suggests a theater or auditorium. Hochstetler said Carleton College recently converted an athletic facility for student use.

If the Board voted to implement the multi-faceted approach, the first step would be the preparation of finite plans for the development of student life and academic space.

According to Woodall actual construction on the science library, the only part of the science complex which lends itself to segmental construction, "could be started very soon, possibly as early as later this fall." Building on the other areas of the plan would start, "at the very earliest," next spring, he said.

The planning costs of approximately $600,000 which have gone into developing the science center so far would be redeemed when the college did decide to start building. "It is important to realize that we are not dropping the science center, just delaying it," said Woodall.

The necessity for choosing between the science complex and other space needs has arisen due to limitations in funding and the complexity involved in handling several large projects simultaneously. The financial considerations associated with each of the strategies are also outlined in the Paper.

With regard to student life, expansion to dining facilities and social space are identified as the "most critical" needs. Expansion of the existing facility at Wentworth Hall and the Cage/Gym/Pool renovations have estimated costs of $2.3 and $5.8 million respectively.

Another priority is the need for academic space. "As the facility continues to grow, the need for additional office space...has reached critical levels," stated the Paper. Space is also necessary for the relocation of departments presently housed in Sills Hall which will eventually be incorporated into the science center.

The third priority is the development of the science center. "It is unfortunate that the design of the Science Center does not lend itself to segmental construction," states the Paper. The only segment which can be constructed independently is the library, of which the cost "is $3 million as opposed to a total construction cost of $21 million for the entire center."

According to Woodall, the College has several options for financing whichever plan the Governing Boards decide to adopt. Approximately $15 million is currently available for "unrestricted purposes" and the institution could also borrow on the tax exempt market to cover the costs.

"It is reasonable for us to pass along both capital and operating costs to students (via tuition charges) for the facilities they utilize," said Woodall. "Providing first class facilities for students requires continuing investment in capital...it is unreasonable to expect other sources to fund such projects completely," said Woodall.

Science Faculty

(Continued from page one)

sub-standard."

Butcher said chemistry faculty additions next fall will require space for offices, research experiments and classrooms in the already overcrowded Cleaveland Hall.

As the science program grows in size and with the times, said Butcher, new equipment will require even more space. "Practically, research could be done in either a hut out by the Bowdoin pines or a new science facility," says Butcher, "it makes no difference in terms of chemistry. The point is, though, additional space is necessary."

The planned science center intends to place all the sciences in one building to accommodate and promote interdisciplinary studies. Yet because the center's design requires major expenditure and cannot be constructed in segments—"the whole point of the building is to integrate the sciences and it can't be done in segments," said Howland—the "white paper" suggests financing a $3 million science library instead.

A library is needed; "we have to scramble to keep books on the shelves," said Butcher, but "the centralized science library loses some of its value if the sciences departments are still in two separate buildings."

Plans for the science center have not been entirely dismissed. Christensen says an appeal "will certainly be made to the Board of Trustees or President to reiterate the issue."

"We have spent a pile of money on it already," said Howland. "We have started the project and it seems silly to stop now."

Typists—Hundreds weekly at home! Write: P.O. Box 17 Clark, New Jersey 07066

DR. WILLIAM R. OUELETTE

DR. BRIAN L. DANIELS

OPTOMETRISTS

Eye Examinations

Optical Services

Specializing in Contact Lenses

Pleasant Street Professional Building

53 Pleasant Street, Brunswick

Telephone 725-2161

Part-Time -

Home Mailing Program!

Excellent income!

Detail, send self-addressed, stamped envelope.

WEST

Box 5877, Hulsdale, N.J. 07205

1933 GROWLER

4 ISSUES

BEYOND CLASSIC/CHERRY

CONDITION.

415-532-3260-WELLS

CAPE COD CAMP
"COUNSELORS"

The Cape Cod Association of Children's Camps is represented by 20 resident and day camps, all offering rewarding summer employment opportunities to male and female applicants. For individual camp information and brochure call (617) 428-2577 or write: CCACC, Camp Burgess, Stowe Rd., Sandwich, MA 02563

BIG RED Q PRINTING
next to the College

- stationery
- resumes
- posters
- newsletters

212E Maine Street
Brunswick
729-4840

Little nes

WINTER CLEARANCE

30%-50% off all clothing

149 Maine Street 729-6642 M-Th 9:30 - 5:30 Fri 9:30 - 4

CREATE

The perfect hairstyle for your lifestyle!

Call the Plaza today,
and visit us at our new location next to the White Seal Laundry

Walkins
Welcome

DOWNTOWN PLAZA
COIFFURES

MON. THRU WED. 8:30 to 5
THURS. AND FRI. 8:30 to 8 SAT. 8:30 to 5
176 MAINE STREET 725-8853

PLAZA
COIFFURES

MONDAY THRU FRIDAY 8:30 to 5
SATURDAY 8:30 to 5
725-8000 CORNER

Now For Success. Macintosh.

Be competitive this semester. An Apple® Macintosh™ personal computer will give you the edge you need to stay ahead. Your writing and research skills enhanced, term papers will never look better.

Apple offers Bowdoin College students a tremendous advantage - a one time affordable price. Two great models to choose from:

The Macintosh Plus, which comes with one 800K drive, 1 megabyte of memory, keyboard and mouse.

And the Macintosh SE, which comes with either two built-in 800K drives, or one drive and an internal 20-megabyte hard disk. As well as a choice of keyboards.

Whichever you choose, Apple's one-time affordable student price will make it possible for you to compete more powerfully.

Purchase information is available from Brett Wichard at the computing center in Hubbard Hall. His hours are Monday, Wednesday, and Thursday 8-10 p.m. Sunday 7-10 p.m.

Bowdoin College Moulton Union Bookstore

The power to be your best.™

Apple and the Apple logo are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. Macintosh and The power to be your best are trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc.

Authorized Dealer

OPINION

Weighing the options

Bowdoin is presently going through one of the most dynamic phases in its history. The $56 million Campaign for Bowdoin was in itself an ambitious venture, but the projects it was designed to undertake have proven to be even more so.

Earlier this week, the President's office distributed the "White Paper on Planning for Bowdoin" which outlines two alternative possibilities for the continuation of the campaign. One of the two strategies will be adopted when the Governing Boards convene in March. The decision of the Boards has the potential to effect the life of every member of the Bowdoin community.

Should the college continue to emphasize the science center as the primary and most pressing need of the college? Or is the reprioritization of necessities outlined in the White Paper the path to follow?

The decision is by no means an easy one. Student welfare, academic integrity and millions of dollars are at stake.

Initially, $11.8 million of the funds collected were to be allotted to the sciences, specifically, for the construction of a new Science Center. The new facility would not only provide space for expansion but would also integrate all four of the science departments under one roof. According to a recent publication of the Campaign for Bowdoin, "especially exciting is the prospect of a new science facility to replace the old and scattered buildings in current use...Adequate facilities for the sciences will become a reality at Bowdoin, allowing us to stay on in front in this crucial field."

At present the campaign total stands at $45 million. The sciences have attracted less than $1 million.

The impact of the campaign on Bowdoin has undoubtedly been tremendous. The scholarship pool is richer by $12.5 million, 15 new teaching positions have been established, new academic programs have been initiated and the completion of a new, multi-purpose athletic facility was celebrated in the fall.

As the campaign evolved and planning for the science complex began it became obvious that the costs involved would be far in excess of those initially accounted for. At last count the total cost of construction was estimated at an astronomical $21 million.

At this point in the college's development, the administration has realized the critical need for immediate construction of student and academic spaces. Presently, dining rooms overflow at peak hours and on campus 'social space' for 1,350 students is limited to two insignificant television rooms, a game room and the 'pub'.

At the same time, a vast area of prime space lies unused. The Hyde Cage and Curtis Pool have been out of bounds and unused since the inauguration of the new field house. A perfect answer to the space problem?

Life, however, is not so simple. As the Paper points out "The sum total of these efforts will far exceed the current Campaign for Bowdoin." A choice is necessary.

The importance of a new science center cannot be denied. But can the college afford to wait several more years for an expansion of student and academic space? Which will better serve the interests of the College?

The questions are difficult and require serious and thoughtful consideration. Although the contents of the Paper are not in themselves binding, they have the potential to instigate significant changes in the College.

With just two weeks to go before the Governing Boards meet, the college community must carefully evaluate its needs. The decisions made in March will affect Bowdoin for years to come.

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

"The College exercises no control over the content of the student writings contained herein and neither it, nor the faculty assume any responsibility for the views expressed herein."

Editor
Managing Editor
News Editors
In-depth Editor
Entertainment Editor
Sports Editor
Photography Editors

Stephen Reynolds
Kathryn Nanovic
Tamara Dassanayake, Dawn Vance
Kevin Wesley
Sharon Smart
Justin Prisenord
Alan Harris, Mary Ann Lai

Asst. News Editor
Asst. Sports Editor
Asst. Entertainment Editor
Contributing Editors
Senior Editors
Production Manager

Tanya Weinstein
Tod Dillon
Lizz Millan
Albert Mauro
Lori Bodwell, Michael Botelhof
Vincent Jacks

Business Manager
Advertising Manager
Advertising Staff

Eric Foushee
Michael Townsend
Michelle Campagna, Nancy Eckel
Kim Maxwell
Eric Palmquist

Circulation Manager

Bowdoin Publishing Company
Lori M. Bodwell, Eric F. Foushee,
Albert P. Mauro, Stephen Reynolds

Published weekly when classes are held during the Fall and Spring semester by the students of Bowdoin College. Address editorial communication to the Editor, subscription communication to the Circulation Manager, and business correspondence to the Business Manager at the Bowdoin Orient, 12 Cleveland Street, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011, or telephone (207)725-3300. The Bowdoin Orient reserves the right to edit any and all articles and letters. Subscriptions are $8.00 a semester or $15.00 a year. Past issues cannot be mailed. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to The Bowdoin Orient, Moulton Union, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011.

Untitled.
Photo by
G. Morrel.

In search of volunteers

Three years ago, Live-Aid, U.S.A for Africa, and Little Steven's "I ain't going to play Sun City" attempted to raise popular consciousness on issues of starvation and apartheid in Africa. Donations to numerous charity organizations made shipments to Africa possible; public concern influenced U.S. companies to divest from South Africa. Even Bowdoin's microcosm—itsself resolving to divest holdings in South Africa—opened to the world.

Bowdoin—through the President's office—also decided to sponsor the college education of two non-white South African students each year. The money was not to come from interest earned off a large fund hidden in a bank vault; people would forget that the scholarship and apartheid existed. Instead, the money would be raised each year by student fundraising efforts—door-to-door campaigns, phonathons, etc. Student involvement would keep the issue of apartheid an important topic on campus in years to come.

President Greason, at Chapel Talk a week ago, said enthusiasm for the South African Scholarship fund had dramatically declined over the past year. Only six students, compared to forty in the past, volunteered to work on the fundraising committee this year.

Although the South African Scholarships may appear small at first glance, they are important to the students who receive them, non-whites struggling for equality in an oppressive environment. South Africa needs intelligent leadership to overcome its internal problems. The students educated by the scholarship can and will help.

Anyone interested in working for the South African Scholarships should contact the President's office.

Where is Miscellania?

The Meddiebempsters sang the national anthem at the hockey game Wednesday night. No big deal, right?

Not last year. One year ago this month, the Meddiebempsters, Bowdoin's all male acapella group, and Miscellania, Bowdoin's all female acapella group, argued over which group should sing the national anthem at Bowdoin's most popular sporting event, the hockey game. Miscellania had asked the Meddiebempsters if they could sing at half of the games—a request the Meddiebempsters denied, claiming it was their tradition to open every home hockey game.

Miscellania brought their case before President Greason. Bowdoin is a co-educational institution, they said, therefore both male and female singing groups should be able to perform at the hockey games. Greason agreed and a decision was reached where the home games would be split equally between the two singing groups.

So why hasn't Miscellania been heard in Dayton this year? Some members of Miscellania have cited a lack of interest. A spokesperson for the Meddiebempsters says Bowdoin's two acapella groups are currently discussing the situation once again. Greason has commented that nobody can or should force the group to sing; if no interest exists, he said, that's the way it is.

The situation is more peculiar than anything else. Apparently, Miscellania's goals have changed since last year, which is fine. A group should be able to decide what it wants to do without outside pressure. Still, one must wonder why the group did not act upon its right, granted by the college, to sing at the hockey games this year. Their decision is like a plaintiff winning a multi-million dollar court case and then refusing to accept the money due.

Correction: Last week's page one article on the faculty vote calling for unlimited athletic ratings included some inconsistencies. According to Lucie Teegarden, clerk at the faculty meeting, ninety faculty members attended the February faculty meeting. Four faculty members left early, but voted before they left. The final vote was 49-23.

The Bowdoin Orient welcomes all letters. Due to space limitations, letters of 300 words or less will be considered for publication first. Letters not printed the week submitted will be put on waiting list with top priority for the next issue. The Bowdoin Orient reserves the right to edit any letter due to space limitations. All letters must be signed and include the address and telephone number where the author can be contacted for verification.

LETTERS

Class overcrowding bothers everyone

Comments attributed to Professor Levine in last week's Orient may inadvertently left the impression that the Government Department is not carrying its fair share of the teaching load at Bowdoin. Nothing could be farther from the truth.

Indeed, despite the limits, we in Government are still teaching too many students. I will not bore you with the long report I took to the CEP last year. What is crucial is that in 1986-87, even with the 50 limits, the Government Department still taught more students per faculty member than did History. Both Government and History are far above College averages and we should be working to reduce enrollments in both departments.

The temporary 50-student limit was approved by the CEP after its exhaustive review of the Government Department in 1985-86, a review that indicated clearly the need to reduce the number of students enrolled in Government classes. Soaring class sizes threatened the quality of the classroom experience for students and imposed what, by any reasonable standard, was an inequitable teaching burden on members of the Department. New positions will help, but, as the CEP argued in its evaluation, may make only a marginal improvement as new students are attracted by a richer array of course offerings.

Why limits of 50? This is not a magic number, any more than is 75. We have all been willing to stretch "our" limits substantially. However, planning for 50, rather than 75, leads to very different assumptions about course structure and expectations. Having taught many of both, I find the smaller size (still mammoth for a quality small liberal arts college) provides a far more productive intellectual environment than numbers alone suggest. The History Department, with more faculty and fewer majors, apparently chooses to permit its large numbers to be concentrated in relatively few courses. So be it. The Government Department prefers lower limits, in part to help us distribute the departmental teaching load more equitably.

Bowdoin does have a course overcrowding problem. Class size limits are a response to that problem, not its source. Limits, however, will not provide a definitive solution. That is why, once again, the Government Department will ask the CEP for only a one-year extension of the limits of its B-level courses to permit the CEP to address the issue with the seriousness and the depth it deserves.

Allen L. Springer
Associate Professor of Government

Alumnus remembers scholar athletes

Emphasis on the matriculation of athletes at Bowdoin has prompted this letter.

In the late sixties, Bowdoin had some fine athletic teams. The athletes, as I remember them, were as hard working as those not participating in sports. They were recognizable in the library only by the grey t-shirts and socks. Many of them were looked upon as "student athletes" at the time. There were many James Bowdoin Scholars who were also athletes, and a high percentage on the Dean's List. They were indeed "scholar athletes."

There were many bus rides to Orono and Waterville when the athletes were doing physics assignments or translating French plays with minimal lighting along the trip. The athletic events were played and more studying continued on the return trips.

Having been out of Bowdoin now for twenty years, I do not know how times have changed with respect to standards of potential Bowdoin athletes. I do know that the athletic alumni (generic) from my era have distinguished themselves in law, medicine, the business world, and in academic circles. A part of this success must be attributed to the Bowdoin experience.

There are fond memories of running from the Seabees lab to the gymnasium to be late for Ray Bicknell's practice. The coach truly understood and there was never a need for explanation. Most coaches, I'm sure, had this same understanding. There was no pressure to win...it was totally enjoyable, worthwhile, and rewarding.

I do hope that Bowdoin continues to search for scholar athletes. The college will never get the reputation as a jock school. Perhaps some statistics on grades and performances of athletes relative to the school community might be appropriate!

Bob Parker '68

Blood drive falls short of goal

Bowdoin's third blood drive of the year is history and unfortunately, the turn-out was very mediocre. We had a total of 166 pints collected which was far short of the previous two drives as well as the projected figure of 250 we had hoped for. I wish to thank all those who donated, and encourage others to understand in the future the importance of this small sacrifice.

Some people deserve special mention because they have given their time and effort in making the blood drive here a success. They are Lisa Aufranc, Mary Cline, Heidi Snyder, Ron Frankel, Lewi Asrat, Maria Vandis, Scott Fairfield, David Zonana, Penny Huss, and Darl Ramler. I would also like to thank Rick and the Union staff, Joanne Levesque, Ralph D'Agostino, and Physical Plant.

I think people will be interested to know that of the large fraternities, Kappa Sig gave the most, and of the small fraternities, A.D. gave the most. And, as always, we beat Bates ... but not by much at all. Andy Bernstein '88

Rugby in the spring?

As a senior at Bowdoin, a varsity football letterman, and ex-president and captain of the Bowdoin Rugby Football Club, I would like to bring the following issues to your attention. President Greason is considering enforcing a ban on spring rugby for the third year in a row. The intentions of the initial ban were to limit a rugby program that was unorganized and irresponsible. The policy accomplished the task for which it was designed; however, the policy is now having a limiting effect on the Rugby Club and should be eliminated, i.e. the rugby team should be allowed to have a spring as well as a fall season. The club is effectively organized, and has rewritten its charter to take into account changes that were necessary to ensure coherent, effective organization in the future. Many of the problems that the Rugby club has had in re-establishing itself are due not to internal problems within the club, but rather to resistance from above, i.e. administration.

Club sports at Bowdoin seem to have a tough time surviving (rugby and crew), due to lack of backing by the Athletic Department and/or Administration. I will admit that at one point the Rugby team had internal problems, but the reaction of the Administration and Athletic Department was to eliminate the entire club rather than trying to help the club get back on its feet and support itself; which has done beyond all expectations.

Rather than opposing and questioning the character of the students on the rugby team, make things easy on a group of students (70 people between the men and women's clubs) who are trying to organize and express their interest in a club sport. Give the rugby team a spring season and help them to work hard in the future, this will be a positive experience for all those involved and will provide tremendous opportunity for students in the future who desire to play club sports.

The following issues pertain to the recent enforcement of a ban on spring rugby:

1. The track record of the Bowdoin Rugby Football Club over the past two years has been far excellence. Not one incident occurred that deemed disciplinary action by the club members themselves, much less the administration. This implies that the rugby teams have been successfully policing themselves.

2. The Bowdoin Rugby Club has proven that it is a well organized, well behaved, responsible organization. Membership in the New England Rugby Football Union, quality, consistent coaching, as well as enthusiastic, responsible, young leadership will ensure the consistency of such positive organization and attitudes in years to come.

3. The spring season allows a great number of students the opportunity to experience rugby who would not normally participate in any spring activity.

4. A spring season is imperative because the freshmen who have never played rugby before or who have only played one season need the experience of playing a spring season.

5. There is no conflict with the Athletic Department: field space is not an issue thanks to the new Farley Fieldhouse, trainers are not a problem. The cost of the rugby club to the school is minimal, we only ask the college to help pay for our coaching during the fall because the administration required a paid coach. The rest of our funds come from the Student Activities Fee Committee, and membership dues.

Let's take the good program that we have already established and ensure that it will continue in the future by standing behind the rugby club and supporting their effort and enthusiasm. The interest is there, and the club is not a burden to administration or the Athletic Department. Thus, we see no reason to limit play to one season.

Andy Palmer '88

Not so long ago, in a galaxy not so far away, America's number 1 pizza delivery company made students an offer.

If your group orders more pizzas than competing groups, you'll win a free pizza party!

It's so easy to play. Call your nearest Domino's Pizza store for details.

Domino's
Pizza
Delivers™...

DORM WARS™

The Contest:

Domino's Pizza will award free, 30 large pizzas and $75.00 cash for liquid refreshments, to the group purchasing the most pizzas starting Thursday, Feb. 4, 1988 and running through Sunday, Feb. 14, 1988.

THE WINNERS

COLEMAN HALL
88 PIZZAS

CONGRATULATIONS!!

Fast, Free Delivery

26 Bath Rd.
Phone: 729-5561

Our drivers carry less than $20.00.
Limited delivery area.
©1982 Domino's Pizza, Inc.

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

FIRST CLASS MAIL
U.S. Postage PAID
BRUNSWICK, ME.
Permit No. 25

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

VOLUME CXVII

BOWDOIN COLLEGE, BRUNSWICK, MAINE, FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 26, 1988

NUMBER 17

Admissions process begins

TANYA WEINSTEIN
ORIENT Asst. News Editor

The applications are in. The admissions process to select the members of a new freshman class has once again begun.

Continuing the trend of recent years, Bowdoin has received admissions applications from a strong pool of prospective freshman.

When compared to last year, 60 less applications were received this year. Associate Director of Admissions Janet A. Lavin said the number fluctuates from year to year and "the 1-2% decrease is insignificant."

To date, 3,638 applications have been received for the 1988-89 academic year. The final number will probably change, as applications from foreign students tend to come in a few weeks late.

Lavin said that over 70 black students applied this year. This number is up significantly from last

(Continued on page 9)

And this week's top story...Pat Benatar impersonators win the lyp-synch contest held in Kresge Auditorium Thursday night. Photo by Mary Ann Lai.

Spring Rugby season still possible

DAWN VANCE
ORIENT News Editor

Spring rugby is still a possibility. Recent developments indicate that the ruggers may be holding their spring season after all, despite the prevailing ban.

In a joint decision with the presidents of Bates and Colby Colleges, President of the College A. LeRoy Greason has decided to impose a ban on the Bowdoin Rugby Football Club's (BRFC) spring season.

The banning of spring rugby, however, is not a new development. Rugby's spring season has been banned for a number of years because, "The rugby team fell into a bad way with the administration for legitimate reasons," said rugger Scott Erlenborn '88.

The administration wanted to eliminate the rugby program entirely, but instead stipulated certain conditions which the team had to

(Continued on page 9)

Dartmouth Dean Bud Beatty compares fraternity systems

STEPHEN COOK
ORIENT Staff

Dean of Students Kenneth Lewallen and Dartmouth College Dean of Residential Life Bud Beatty fielded questions Wednesday night in an attempt to promote discussion between students and administration on the subject of fraternities and their role in the college community.

Speaking to an audience of about 30 students in the Main Lounge, Beatty described the fraternity system at Dartmouth and the recent changes that it has undergone. The Bowdoin and Dartmouth systems were then discussed and compared.

Although Dartmouth is home to sororities and both co-educational and single sex fraternities, Bowdoin is now in a similar situation as Dartmouth was a few years ago, said Beatty.

The fraternities are under scrutiny by faculty and administration, and though everyone agrees something must be done, there is no consensus. The Board of Trustees at Dartmouth eventually decided that elimination of the greek system would not be the best solution. They chose instead to leave it up to the students and administration to work out an adequate compromise.

According to Beatty, the college's answer to the "problem" was to compile a list of seven "minimum standards" of "leadership, membership, budget, program development, behavior, alumni, and physical plant," as outlined in the Constitution and Minimum standards for Co-ed, Fraternity, and Sorority Organizations.

One result of the implementation of these standards has been a $1.7 million bill for the fraternities to upgrade the conditions in their houses. Various lecture and musical series in the houses have also been initiated as a constituent part of the minimum standards.

As a part of the system, Beatty said the houses themselves had instituted a policy of not allowing freshmen to attend any social events in the fraternities during the Fall Trimester. Therefore, rush is not held until the Spring Trimester.

The response to the standards, when they were introduced, was less than warm. Now that the "kicking and screaming" stage is over, Beatty said that most fraternity members "will readily admit that if [the changes] didn't take place, they wouldn't be here today."

According to Beatty the system is still not perfect. He gave the houses an 80 percent rating because most of the fraternity sponsored activities such as academic and cultural events, community service, and promotion of brother and sisterhood, is "fantastic."

What brings them down is the remaining 20 percent said Beatty, which he described as "crappy." This part, he said, is also what most people identify fraternities with, and what will tarnish the good image they have worked hard to build.

How does this relate to Bowdoin? Beatty said that he had not come to "sell the minimum standards," but rather to present another option for the Bowdoin community to consider. Having described the Dartmouth alternative, he asked for student responses on what some of the specific problems are at Bowdoin.

Cheray Hogan '90 of Psi Upsilon expressed the view that the fraternities mistrusted the administration to some extent. The members sometimes feel as if they are made scapegoats for problems which are not exclusive to fraternities, she said.

Ian John '90 of Chi Psi cited sexual harassment as an example of a problem which is not inherent to the fraternities and occurs all over campus.

Beatty's suggestion: was for the fraternities to come up to the administration and ask, "What do you want us to do?" The administration, for its part, should play a moderator role, but encourage the fraternities to work out their own internal problems. "Students are highly suspicious of [the administration] as it is," he said.

Another problem cited was the fruitless efforts of some to get the faculty involved. Some students expressed the opinion that having a faculty advisor would be very helpful for the fraternities, for they would have an adult to talk to, and this would also promote better relationships with the faculty at large.

However, as it stands Maine state law makes the faculty advisor completely responsible for the actions of the fraternities, a risk that few professors would want to take on.

Beatty agreed that to get the faculty on their side would undoubtedly help the cause of the fraternity system. He added that according to the "deep pockets" theory of law suits, it would be the college, not the faculty, who would be the defen-

(continued on page 9)

Live freak show:

House of Freaks to perform Monday, see page 5

Undefeated women's swim team hosts New England finals, see page 7

If the presidential election were to be held tomorrow, who would you vote for and why?

BECKY AUSTIN
ORIENT Staff

John Nicholson '91
"Dole because I don't like any one else."

Greg Hostetter '91
"Paul Simon because I think he's the strongest democratic candidate right now."

Larry Heller '88
"You mean the United States?"

Kelley Charest '89
"Dukakis because he has a proven record in Massachusetts and he's strong on educational issues and social programming."

Execs reject party plan

DAWN VANCE
ORIENT News Editor

Due to a controversy concerning Mid-Semester's Madness the Student Executive Board has vetoed the Student Activities Fee Committee's (SAFC) mid-February appropriations.

Kevin Wesley '89 appeared at the board's Tuesday night meeting to present SAFC's recommendations for mid-February appropriations.

The appropriations included allocations to the Bowdoin Jewish Organization, Mid-Semester's Madness, the Bowdoin Women's Association and the Bowdoin Christian Fellowship. Controversy arose over the allocation of funds to Mid-Semester's Madness.

The controversy stemmed from Mid-Semester's Madness' lack of an organizational charter. Under the constitution of the Student Assembly, only those organizations with charters granted by the board can receive funds from SAFC. Since Mid-Semester's Madness is not a chartered organization, it can not rightfully receive the $800 it had requested from SAFC.

Many members of the board suggested that the $800 be granted to the Student Union Committee (SUC) because Mid-Semester's Madness falls under its jurisdiction. SUC could then transfer the funds to be utilized for Mid-Semester's Madness.

The board, however, voted 10-2-0 to disapprove SAFC's appropriation until the situation with Mid-Semester's Madness is clarified.

In other business, Steven Curley '88 who headed Students for Dukakis appeared before the board to discuss alleged illegalities in the Dukakis Presidential Campaign. Curley informed the board that campaign organizers had requested him and a number of other Bowdoin College students who had traveled to Portland, Maine to aid in the solicitation of campaign funds to pose as members of the White Pine Polling Agency.

As a result of what Curley described as the "unethicalness" of this campaign policy, he has withdrawn his support from the Dukakis Campaign.

Zachary Messite '90 who had traveled to Portland with Curley also expressed his displeasure, but pointed out that this type of incident frequently occurs in campaigns and that it "was not an issue." Messite said, "It's a part of the political game."

Members of the board also questioned the printing of the board's spring election results in a recent issue of The Orient. The board subsequently voted 6-5-1 to release only the names of those elected to the press in the future.

Deliberation ensued following this decision and led to another vote concerning the releasing of election results to the press. The board voted 7-4-1 not to rescind its earlier motion. It did vote, however, to allow representatives of candidates to take an active part in the counting of the ballots following an election.

Upon member Jason Easterly's '90 request the board will look into the extension of language laboratory hours.

The board voted 12-0-0 to continue looking into the possible installation of an optional linen fee.

The board has scheduled its Student Facilities Open Forum for Thursday, March 3 in Kresge Auditorium. The forum will be an opportunity for members of the college community to air opinion on the proposals outlined in the "White Paper" released last week.

Don, like any college, is a complex organization to run, and "if human relations are managed poorly, the College suffers, but if done well, it shows in the teaching, new student recruitment, the whole school."

The successful candidate will have experience in relevant areas of personnel management and will probably come from another college or university.

Woodall added that he was particularly looking to hire a qualified woman for the position because, "it [personnel] is a field in which women have had a particularly long history of involvement," and also because the College administration and staff is "currently underrepresented by women."

The application and selection process now underway is expected to result in a final selection at the end of April or early May.

Dukakis campaign coordinator resigns

Press and public alike have scrutinized presidential candidates the past year for "moral deficiencies"—from Gary Hart's cruise on the "Monkey Business" to Joseph Biden's xeroxed speech of a previous address by British Labour Party leader, Neil Kinnock.

Now, days before the Maine Caucuses, a former official of the Students for Dukakis organization on campus has charged the Dukakis campaign with unethical behavior.

Stephen Curley '88 resigned from his post as Bowdoin Vice Chair for Students for Dukakis, claiming the Dukakis campaign misrepresented itself during phone-calling campaigns.

On February 18, Curley and three other Bowdoin students working at presidential candidate Michael Dukakis' Cumberland County phone-bank and were asked to make calls to borderline Dukakis supporters; contacted earlier in the evening, Curley said they were told to identify themselves as employees of "White Pine Polling Project" and to solicit the individual's opinion. All four of the Bowdoin students refused to make the calls.

"White Pines is unethical," said Curley. He said that although Dukakis is not personally involved, "I can't separate the man from the machine. He chose the people and it's a reflection of his style."

Curley appeared before the Executive Board Tuesday night to explain his resignation and to encourage the Board to discuss the issue. He said the incident raises questions about student organizations that are involved with outside organizations, such as student campaign groups. Students for Dukakis and Students for Bush received special FC-3 charters from the Executive Board, but receive no Student Activities Fee allocations.

Kathi Rogers, Northwest regional manager for the Dukakis campaign, says in-house polling is a common practice used by all political campaigns. "Polling is used to collect statistical information only," said Rogers, as opposed to political canvassing where callers ask voters to support a candidate. Curley said Cumberland county Dukakis campaigners called registered Democrat voters and identified themselves as being from the "White Pine Polling Project" to obtain statistical information. Curley said that in misrepresenting themselves, they broke campaign ethics.

The Maine State Election Committee in Bangor said they have neither jurisdiction over, nor concern with in-house polling.

Curley has generated publicity for his resignation from the campaign organization.

An article ran on the front page of Brunswick Times-Record Tuesday about Curley and he said an interview was organized for WGME Channel 13.

Of the four Bowdoin students asked to make the polling calls, Curley is the only one who has publicly resigned from the Dukakis campaign. At the Executive Board open forum, Zack Messite '90, one of the students propositioned to become a White Pine pollster, said, "Nobody did any calling. It's not an issue. It's just part of the political game."

College Briefs

Southern New England residents will be making a new kind of donation at the local bank soon.

The town of Amherst, Massachusetts was selected to be the location of a branch office for the Biogenics Corporation, and will soon be in operation. The bank is looking for young virile men to donate sperm for the company's research. Already Amherst College students are lining up to participate in this "noble purpose," as one applicant called it.

Christianity can't seem to stay out of the news these days, and the reports have not been glorifying. Boston campuses have been the target of the highly criticized Boston Church of Christ, whose brand of proselytizing has many concerned. They begin with "love bombing," and then work to isolate the individual from all other social contacts besides the BCC.

Dean of Marsh Chapel at Boston University Robert Watt Thornberg called it "demonic and damaging to the student's sense of trust." Bob Terrential, the UMass-Boston leader for the BCC, retorted that "the BCC is simply evangelizing their belief like any other faith would."

Having trouble crossing the street? If you're small and slimy, Amherst has the solution. Environmentalist Richard Winston convinced the town selectmen to build tunnels to allow salamanders to cross safely after warm Spring rains. These salamanders migrate across the streets of Amherst to live and breed in the ponds for the Summer.

If salamanders aren't your taste, perhaps frozen fish would be more appetizing. However, according to the UMass-Amherst head of the Food Science and Nutrition Department, 99 percent of the frozen fish consumed in the U.S. is imported. This problem, he says, is indicative of developing weaknesses in the American food industry. Something must be done soon, lest another industry head "off shore."

Want to get off-campus housing next year? Wesleyan University fraternities are looking for residents. Chi Psi, Alpha Delta Phi, Delta Tau Delta, Eclectic, and Omega Kappa Alpha are all accepting non-member boarders. Much to their surprise, the living conditions tend to be fairly comfortable. Chi Psi boarder Brian Vogel '90, referring to relations with the fraternity brothers, said the "guys are really nice, really cool." He struggled to restrain his enthusiasm.

For those who can't get seats in the library on Sunday nights, you may yet be able to find a quiet space to study, but you will need a car to get there. UMass-Boston just opened the Troy Reading Room for student use. All were invited "to make use of the new facility whenever you have the time and inclination."

There's one fewer place in New England to go to on the weekend

now that Middlebury, Vermont's bar Brew's has closed down. Attributed to the reduced business from Middlebury College students, which in turn is due to the raised drinking age in the state, owner George Brewer cannot keep the place going. For shopping fans, the shutdown is a boon. Starting in September 1988, they will have an additional 10,000 square feet of store space to choose from, when the bar reopens as a "mini-mall."

At Connecticut College, it doesn't matter that Pepsi-Cola is not really the choice of the new generation. The choice made to buy only Pepsi products was by the administrative generation, in a money-saving move which contradicted the results of a campus-wide preference poll. Though Coca-Cola received just over 50 percent of the vote, Stephen Franks '88 wrote off the results as "arbitrary at best... the switch to Pepsi will save the college close to $2,000 a year."

Here's a late-breaking news flash: The results are in from Trinity College on the damage taken from the stock market crash. Though the college lost $16 million, mirth levels on campus were undaunted. In a report on the losses, the Trinity Tripod stated that "spirits at Trinity remain high."

—compiled by Stephen Cook

New administrator to be appointed

KATHERINE DEMING
ORIENT Contributor

A new administrative position, Director of Personnel, is in the process of being created at Bowdoin.

According to Treasurer of the College, Dudley H. Woodall, the newly appointed director would be responsible for "the development and administration of college-wide personnel policies and procedures."

The most important responsibility of the new administrator would be "facilitating human relations between the faculty, staff, and other personnel at the college," said Woodall. The responsibilities of the new position are presently being carried out on a part-time basis by several individuals.

Woodall, who is in charge of the selection process, feels that Bow-

"Beyond IQ" was the subject of a talk given by Robert J. Sternberg, IBM Professor of Psychology and Education at Yale University in Kresge Auditorium Tuesday night. Sternberg is one of the world's foremost authorities on the nature and assessment of intellectual abilities. Widely published, his research focuses on human intelligence, thinking, intellectual development, and applications of psychology to education. Photo by Dave Wilby.

Styrofoam cups to be replaced

TANYA WEINSTEIN
ORIENT Asst. News Editor

If you want to take coffee out of the Union in the future, you may no longer be carrying it out in a styrofoam cup.

According to Mary Lou Kennedy, assistant director of Dining Service, the president's staff has made the decision to get rid of styrofoam cups. Kennedy said that a chemical in styrofoam has been found to be "non-biodegradable and hazardous to the environment."

Although the chemical is not found in the styrofoam cups used by the Bowdoin Dining Service, Kennedy said the decision is being made "to make a statement" about the environment. She added that the president's staff wants to "contribute to an awareness of environmental issues."

The Dining Service has been asked to look into the alternatives available to styrofoam cups. In the mean time, Bowdoin still has a large supply which will last for a few months. During this time, other products being offered by different companies are being sampled and compared for cost and efficiency.

Various kinds of material are being looked into, although Kennedy said once the supply is gone "we will be switching to probably a paper product." However, she added, "paper is more expensive...it costs not quite double as much as styrofoam." With the added cost, it might become too expensive to continue to print the Bowdoin logo, she said.

Plastic cups are also being looked into as an alternative. The cost of plastic cups would also probably necessitate eliminating the logo. Neither the plastic nor the paper option is bio-degradable.

Kennedy said she would like to see more dishware used. However, the dishroom is not large enough to accommodate the amount of dirty glasses. Kennedy said, "If we had a larger dishroom we could use dishware...but we can hardly cope with the volume coming through now as it is."

Kennedy said a decision on the replacement for the styrofoam cups will be made once all of the options have been examined and the costs presented.

Pemberton to leave

BECKY AUSTIN
ORIENT Staff

Gayle Pemberton, visiting associate professor of English and Acting Director of the Afro-American Studies Program, may not be amidst the Bowdoin community next year.

Pemberton was initially hired for a one year position but was able to renew her contract when the position remained open last year. Her contract ends this year and she may be leaving the college this spring unless another position falls vacant.

Bowdoin has had a problem attracting minority professors and students despite its affirmative action policy, and now many feel Bowdoin is passing up a chance to keep a "great" professor.

Adrienne Hatten, president of the Afro-American Society said, "Losing Mrs. Pemberton will be a great loss for the college and the students and especially the Afro-American Society, both as a whole and individuals...nobody wants to see her go, nobody...when you get a person like Gayle, you don't just let her go. The politics of academics is ridiculous."

Pemberton insists that there is no problem. If she were to stay, it would be through the English department and there is presently no opening for her.

The department is looking for a professor who has published, and Pemberton did not apply for the position. She also has not tried to find a spot for herself to continue at Bowdoin. She said, "they came to me...I've been open to suggestions, but 'I'm willing to accept the potential that I won't be here next year.'"

Many students of Pemberton argue that the administration should find or make a position for her.

However, Dean of the College Craig McEwen said, "we can't and don't create positions for individuals."

The Afro-American Society has discussed different courses of action such as writing letters to the administration and campaigning to keep Pemberton. They hope to have the support of students outside the Afro-American Society as well.

Pemberton may not be here next year, but both students and administration agree that she has been a wonderful addition to Bowdoin. Dean of Students Kenneth A. LeWallen said, "She has been enormously effective in identifying and resolving problems associated with all students, but particularly minority student concerns."

"Gayle has given above and beyond any call of duty," said McEwen. In addition to teaching, Pemberton has contributed to numerous extra-curricular activities. Specifically, she headed a committee to form the Afro-American Studies 100 course, she has made plans and received grants for next year's 20th anniversary celebrations of the Afro-American Society and she has also served as leader of the minority student counselor committee.

Hatten referred to Gayle as "the mother of our [Afro-American] society...She is a very knowledgeable person who is willing to over-extend herself for all."

Pemberton is used to moving around a lot, and likes it. She was previously at Reed College and has been at Bowdoin for two years. "I have a wanderlust about me...it works for me." If this gets problematic, then she says she will pay for her "own point of view and the way in which I choose to live."

Police arrest WBOR guest DJ for criminal trespassing

Morrissey sings "hang the DJ" on vinyl. At Bowdoin College last week, the DJ just got thrown in jail.

The winner of a guest disc jockey contest sponsored by WBOR was arrested by Brunswick Police for criminal trespassing a half hour after he arrived at the campus radio station February 18. Brunswick Police have not released the suspect's name as the names of juveniles are kept confidential.

Bowdoin Security Sergeant John Alexander contacted WBOR Thursday evening, informing the radio station their contest winner had been placed on the trespass list. Alexander said he told the station the juvenile was placed on the trespass list after repeated warnings to leave campus.

WBOR music director, Larry Glenn '88, said he and Security agreed to allow the juvenile time to leave if he showed that evening.

When the juvenile arrived, Glenn said the juvenile told the WBOR staff it was his brother who had been put on the list. WBOR decided to let him go on the air at 9:30 p.m. At 9:50 p.m. a Security officer heard the juvenile on the radio; Security called Brunswick Police and the juvenile was arrested.

"It sort of offended me—security randomly kicking people off campus," said Glenn, "he was a punk. If he was wearing a yellow turtleneck it would have never happened."

Michael Pander, director of Bowdoin Security, said the juvenile was arrested for trespassing and not for his clothing or hairstyle: "He had been barred from campus."

Alexander had asked the juvenile to leave campus two times before he was arrested Thursday evening. Pander said a group of Brunswick youths the juvenile had been on campus with previously had repeatedly been cited by Bowdoin security for loitering both in the library and on the quad. "The campus is not a mall," said Pander, "nor do we intend to let it become one."

Pander said Brunswick police found a Bowdoin student's driver's license on the arrested juvenile. The owner of the license, according to Pander, said he had lost his wallet.

"I think security over-reacted," said Glenn, "they arrested, handcuffed and booked a seventeen year old kid for coming on campus...on the other hand, I think we at 'BOR over-reacted by asking the public to call Bowdoin Security and the Brunswick police."

THE
BRUNSWICK
FLOWER SHOP

729-8895
216A Maine St.
Mon.-Sat. 9:30-6

We Deliver
Wire Service

Centrally located across from Bowdoin College

the Samuel
Newman
House

BEHIND COLES TOWER

7 South St., Brunswick, Me. 04011
For Reservations, call (207) 729-6599

BED & BREAKFAST

Dorm fire drills scheduled

Fire drills will be held in residence areas on campus in the next few weeks. They will be held during evening hours in order for students to practice being able to exit a building quickly in case of fire.

During the drills, all students will be asked to evacuate the building as quickly as possible. Security personnel will check to see that everyone is outside before allowing students back in.

In Coles Tower, the C & D stairwells are advised as an exit route. The elevator should not be used during a fire, and firefighting efforts will be conducted by using the A & B stairwells.

Only one fire drill will be held in each residence area unless there is a delay in emptying the building. In this case, students may be subject to an additional drill at a later date.

FT. LAUDERDALE, FL. BREITENWOOD, NH.

SUITS CASE PARTY!!

~ FRIDAY (2/26) 9-12PM WENTWORTH HALL ~

$200 TICKET FOR A CHANCE TO WIN AND BRING A FRIEND TO EITHER PLACE.

DON'T FORGET TO BRING SUITS CASE!!

--Sponsored by Student Union Committee--

CALL WILBUR'S
CANDY FOR BALLOON
DELIVERY

Come in and see our white chocolate polar bears.

Tontine Fine Candies

Traditional & Unique Candies

WILBUR'S CANDY TONTINE FINE CANDIES
13 Bow Street
Freeport, ME
865-6129 / 865-4071

Tontine Mall
Brunswick, ME
729-4462

STOWE TRAVEL

MID COAST MAINE'S MOST COMPLETE TRAVEL AGENCY
A TRAVELERS' NATIONAL NETWORK AGENCY
■ GROUP TRAVEL SPECIALISTS ■ BUSINESS ACCOUNTS
■ INCENTIVE TRAVEL ■ CRUISES ■ AMTRAK ■ AIRLINES
■ VCR CASSETTE TRAVEL LIBRARY ■ VACATION PACKAGES
■ GREYHOUND ■ WESTERN UNION
■ $150,000 AUTOMATIC FLIGHT INSURANCE

"ALL SERVICES AT NO EXTRA COST"

725-5573
8:30-5:30 DAILY
9-2 SAT. (SUMMER)
9-4 SAT. (WINTER)

9 PLEASANT ST. BRUNSWICK

Call 1-800-522-9990 toll free in ME.

APPLICATIONS for PRE-ORIENTATION TRIP LEADERS for the Fall of 1988 are due

MARCH 18
at the Dean's Office.
Forms may be obtained
in Bina Chaddha's office,
3rd floor, H-L, today!
???s
call x3407.

Kaplan tells Eskimo tales

ALAN HARRIS
ORIENT Photography Editor

There was a time when there were no people.

Man arrived by falling out of the pod of a beach pea after four day's containment. Raven flew up and puzzled over the human. He had not expected anything from the beach pea. Now he had mankind to deal with. Standing there by the new creature, Raven transformed himself into a man by lifting his beak over the top of his head.

Raven created reindeer, caribou, and fish for people to eat and bears and mosquitoes to keep the people humble and wary.

This is the story that begins history for the Upiak Eskimos of the Bering Sea area. To tell the story right requires three days.

Director of the Arctic Studies Program and Assistant Professor of Sociology and Anthropology Susan Kaplan gave a much abbreviated version of this origin myth and also addressed the spirituality of the Bering Sea Eskimo in a lecture entitled "Raven's World—The Life of Bering Sea Eskimo People," Tuesday night.

The tools, hunting gear and ceremonial masks of the Eskimo were an important part of their society. Kaplan explained the care that went into the designing these artifacts, not only for the sake of utility, but also for their spirituality.

The Upiak believed animals would only allow themselves to be caught if they were certain the hunter would take care of their spirit. Everything from harpoon heads to dinner bowls were covered with circles, dots and other spiritual symbols. The dots were symbolic of a sometimes malevolent spirit called a tungot that would try to scoop up the prey or people. Recent times, however, have limited this belief to the gifted shamans who would turn into seals.

According to Kaplan, more has changed in the past few years for the Bering Sea Eskimos than their inability to transform into other animals. The native people are now part of a corporation set up by Congress's Alaska Native's Land Claims Settlement Act.

World view which has led to spiritually designed technology is not one that leads to a desire to claim lands that contain resources of value to other cultures, resources like Alaska's minerals, oil, and gas said Kaplan.

The native corporations too are not doing well, said Kaplan, with few turning a measurable profit. The corporations which are currently tax exempt will also face developmental taxes as of 1991, a further burden for them to handle. Thereafter, they may decide to sell shares to the public in an attempt to stay solvent. The Upiak will then no longer have a legal claim to the land and the culture that is so intimately connected to it, said Kaplan.

Kaplan ended by quoting one of the Upiak, "we are stewards, we are caretakers [of the land]," not the land's board-of-directors.

Obituaries

Albert Abrahamson

Professor of Economics Emeritus and former Dean of the Faculty at Bowdoin. Albert Abrahamson '26, died on Feb. 24th at the age of 82.

Abrahamson was a member of the faculty for 60 years. He began teaching Economics in 1928, and served as Dean of the Faculty during the 1969-70 academic year.

Abrahamson grew up in Portland where he attended public school. He graduated from Bowdoin in 1926 as a Phi Beta Kappa, and went on to receive his master's degree at Columbia University in 1927.

Besides teaching, Abrahamson also served in a variety of other positions. He worked as an economist with President Roosevelt's Cabinet Committee on Price Policy in Washington, D.C. in 1934-35. He held several government positions in Maine, and published numerous government reports in his field.

In 1983 Abrahamson donated a valuable gift to Bowdoin that enabled the College to construct an addition to the Hawthorne-Longfellow Library. The sixth floor study room in Hubbard Hall is named in his honor.

Bowdoin recognized his outstanding contributions to the college with an honorary doctor of science degree in 1971. An excerpt from the citation reads, "Few men have ever served their college and the wider community with more love and diligence than he has done."

President A. LeRoy Greason said of the late professor, "[He] will be remembered by former students as a dedicated teacher and a helpful friend...The College will remember him as a loyal alumnus and a generous benefactor."

Philip Brown

Professor of Economics Emeritus, Philip M. Brown, died Feb. 25th at Parkview Hospital in Brunswick at age 87.

Brown taught in the Economics department for 34 years, until his retirement in 1968. He served as the department chair from 1961-1963, and was clerk of the faculty for 21 years.

Brown was born in Rhode Island and attended Brown University. He graduated with a degree in economics in 1922 as a Phi Beta Kappa with final honors. He continued his graduate studies first at Stanford University and then at Harvard.

Brown taught at Brown University and Middlebury College as an assistant professor of economics before coming to Bowdoin in 1934.

Brown was active on campus and within the Brunswick community. At Bowdoin he served on a number of faculty committees and was a faculty member of the Bowdoin Publishing Company.

President A. LeRoy Greason remarked, "With professor Brown's death, Bowdoin has lost a friend who served the College faithfully for many years. He taught his courses with a clear sense of high standards, and he contributed to the institutional life through his active role on many committees and through over 20 years of service as clerk of the faculty. The Philip M. Brown Book Fund, established in his name, attests to the high respect with which he was held."

Brown is survived by his wife, the former Agnes Nearing Coombs of Brunswick; a stepdaughter, Dorothy Coombs MacKenzie of Brunswick; and several stepgrandchildren and stepgreat-grandchildren.

Robert Farquharson

Robert M. Farquharson '64, an Overseer of the College since 1983 and recipient of the 1985 Bowdoin Alumni Service Award died on Feb. 15th at the age of 45.

Farquharson served as director of the Alumni Fund from 1975-80, and as chairman of the Fund in 1979-80. He was president of the Alumni Council and the Alumni Association in 1982-83, and was then elected to the Board of Overseers. He served as chairman of the Nominating Committee for the Board, and was a member of the Development Committee of the Governing Boards.

Farquharson also served as chairman of the Class Campaign Committees in the Campaign for Bowdoin, directing individual class committees. He was involved in the admissions process as a member of Bowdoin Alumni, Schools and Interviewing Committees (BASIC), and was an advisor to the Career Services Office.

While attending Bowdoin, Farquharson served as president of Phi Delta Psi fraternity, Bowdoin Debate Council and was a member of the student council and several student/faculty committees. Upon graduating from Bowdoin in 1964, he continued his studies at the University of Chicago Law School and received his degree in 1967.

The Alumni Service Award, the highest honor awarded by the Bowdoin Alumni Association, was presented to Farquharson in 1985 in recognition of his outstanding contribution and leadership in alumni affairs.

Farquharson is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William R. Farquharson of Glenn Cove, New York and one brother, Colonel W. Ross Farquharson, Jr. of Annandale, Virginia.

ENTERTAINMENT

Live freak show: House of Freaks to perform Monday

LARRY GLENN
ORIENT Staff

House of Freaks got their recording contract because of the following they have acquired through their outrageous live performances on the L.A. club circuit. The Los Angeles Times said that they're "... become one of the most consistently exhilarating rock attractions locally since moving here from Richmond, Virginia." Apparently, these two gentlemen just lose their poo when they get onstage.

You may not have heard of them yet, but they're hot—very hot. The album smokes; for those of you to whom it matters, it's a number 2 on the independent charts, and they could very well get very big very soon.

All of this is very good news to you and me. Because, as you may have heard, WBOR is bringing the band here for a free live show! I'll get started on Monday around 8:30 p.m., in the back barn of Delta Sig (it's not a campus wide—it's free, open to the public, and there are no kegs). Rumor has it that NRI (Dans Malachuk & Hanrahan, Joe Ferlazzo, Chris Sewall & Frank Days) is opening, but who knows? Anyway, it should be an utter blast. So plan not to study after 8 on Monday, because this is definitely not going to be one that you're going to want to miss. Think about how cool you're going to feel somewhere down the line as you reminisce about having "seen 'em way back in '88..."

The album's press release calls House of Freaks' music "workingman's pop." I guess that's about the best way to describe it. Sort of rough electric guitar, Bryan

Harvey's soulful (i.e. can sing) vocals; yeah, pop music. But then we've got to take into consideration drummer Johnny Hott's thundering backbeat. He sounds like nothing so much as an African war dance being played from a freight train. Down and dirty stuff. This was not made for radio programmers to jam in front of Tiffany's sexless pre-pubescent mall rantings. And the lyrics. Could it be ... intelligence?

House of Freaks, despite their big, big sound, only consists of Harvey and Hott. That's it. No digital sampling, no synths, no session men. Just guitar and drums. Which is not at all what this stuff sounds like. I mean, it's big. I've seen five piece bands that sound like a kazoo convention next to these guys.

The two (beat with me here, I'm sort of putting this together from memory, i.e. don't quote me on this) met in Richmond, Virginia, having both played in lots of bands, ranging from industrial music to pure pop. I guess that they decided that it was time to do The Big Turnaround, and go back to the roots of rock & roll. So they got one guitar and a drum, and went at it. As you may expect, their sound is very much influenced by aged bluesmen like Howlin' Wolf, Lightnin' Hopkins, and Robert Johnson.

Lyrically, they manage to strike the same plaintive, dark tone as great blues. Dark, but without the simmering self pity of horrible blues. Images of trains, weird animals, graveyards, and of course, The Bomb, jump out at you from these songs. End result: a vision of a scary world that kind of makes you think about what might be under the bed.

"Crack in the Sidewalk", the opening cut, is a prime example. The song leaves you with the rather uncomfortable memory of stepping on that crack, just to see if mom would... As I said, dark stuff. But this is no adolescent heavy metal horror flick romp. These songs are fairly intelligent. I'd say that I saw Edgar Allan Poe and William Faulkner in these songs way before I'd say that I saw Bela Lugosi and Ozzy Osbourne. Not that I'd put their songs on a par with Poe or Faulkner (though they are very good), it's just that I can see the influence. It's that Southern weirdo sense of the macabre that you find in stuff like "A Rose For Emily" or The Narrative of A. Gordon Pym.

OK. Let's start to make an ass of myself, and these that we've established that these are more than the average pop tunes that we're dealing with here, let me hasten to add that this record can be a hell of a lot of fun. "Crack in the Sidewalk Rocks" out, "Dark & Light in New Mexico" has that great mod feel that The Jam had, and fantastic hooks about all over this record. Basically, what I'm getting at here is that "boogie" is a word which I would not refrain from using in conjunction with the name House of Freaks, or their album. Where you can't say "boogie", though, you'll find great soul primal blues, some C&W, and other little gems. I love it.

Don't forget - Monday night, 8:30, back barn, Delta Sig, free. Remember, it's not every week that you get to see one of the best bands in the country before you've even been to all of your classes yet.

House of Freaks.

Copernicus shocks and rocks

STEPHEN GEVEDON
ORIENT Contributor

It's 11:15 on Wednesday night. The deadline for another biting and heart-wrenching record review is rapidly approaching. The monotone, brain-searing tick-a-tock of the clock. (Actually it's more like the hideous buzz of an angry horde of Killer Bees. Remember "Killer Bees"? They were on they're way up from some nameless primordial South American jungle to inflict havoc and mayhem on Uncle Sam's waxing moon, creeping ominously across the dark and claustrophobic sky, shines its cold and evil light on the poor wretched souls that must inhabit this god-forsaken ball of dirt and water, otherwise known as the Earth. I sit in the production studio of WBOR underneath a fluorescent light that could make anyone's complexion look like a week-old pizza. I sit listening to Copernicus. No, not the philosopher/scientist who nearly got crucified for making a bit of sense and telling people the Earth was round. But rather, Copernicus, the ya-hoo from New York who periodically rents out some recording studio/hall—gets together with a bunch of equally frustrated pseudo-intellectuals—and "spontaneously make music." Copernicus makes the words. One such emotive gesture ("song," just wouldn't cut it) is called "Come to it." The lyrics? Well...here's a sampling: "Nothing Exists

Nothing Exists
Nothing Exists
Nothing Exists
There is no one
There is no one
There is no one..."

and so on. And so forth. Pretty good, huh? Copernicus is one of those guys whose entire life is so jam-packed, so filled up the yin-yang with deep and profound stuff, that he could "fart" and most every major crisis (and probably all of the minor ones) could be solved by examining that particular anal expulsion. Or at least he likes to think so. That's fine. Except when one starts releasing albums and allowing them to fester and suppurate in the public domain. If he wants to spew his philosophical gunk... I'll find a bathroom somewhere on US1 and go to it.

It's guys like these that make you want to take the entire "intellectual/academic growth thing" behind a dumpster with your sawed-off 30-30 and make it squeal. It's guys like this that make you ask that rhetorical question—"Is a little knowledge a good thing?" (In this case, the answer is an authority riddled "Negatory.") He does, however, make an outstanding argument for "Ignorance is Bliss". The thing that really dumbfounds me is the amount of good press that this shock-head is getting. People (supposedly knowledgeable and intelligent) are buying this trip. Let's face it, anyone can go into a studio and talk about nasty things until they're exhausted. Who cares. Generally when someone is rambling incoherently in your presence you tell them to go home and get some sleep.

You don't give them eight bucks for an album of their incomprehensible slop. Anyway, it's an election year and all you have to do is turn on your T.V. and you'll get hours of incoherent, uninspired gibberish from one of our future hopefuls, for free! Well...it's a fucked up world. So tell me something new.

Modern dancers participate in American College Festival

LIZZ MILLAN
ORIENT Asst. Ent. Editor

It all started last fall, when New York choreographers Art Bridgman and Myrna Packard worked with a group of eleven dancers, including four Bowdoin students. Hard work on the part of both dancers and choreographers paid off in the creation of a unique dance.

This dance won Bowdoin an honor in the American College Dance Festival. Held the weekend of February 5 at Bates College, the festival featured dancers and dances from all over the New England region. Thirty dances by fifteen different schools were performed.

"There was a real mix of colleges and universities—including some schools that have graduate programs in dance," said June Vail, assistant professor and director of Bowdoin's dance department.

Of these thirty dances, eight were chosen for a gala performance on the evening of February 6. Bowdoin earned the honor of presenting their dance in this performance.

Seniors Trinka Hamilton, Leslie Stone and Cindy Sperry as well as freshman Meighan Howard, represented Bowdoin in the dance. All of the dancers rehearsed long and hard in order to present a dance that was, according to Vail, "really wonderful."

Consisting of three parts, the dance was, "based upon certain movement motifs of pushing, pulling and lifting," described Vail. The music to which the dance was performed was provided by Ladysmith Black Mambazo, a South African singing group that backs up Paul Simon. "It's very warm music," Vail said.

The dance was not the only thing which received praise. Senior Leslie Stone was nominated by the judges at the festival for a summer scholarship. According to Vail, this nomination represents "a great honor."

After this string of successes, the dance group is gearing up for more graceful moves. The annual Spring Performance to be held April 15 and 16 is well underway. Now that credit is granted for enrollment in the dance classes, there is a variety of new talent. Many students will make their premiere appearances as dancers on the stage. "It will be a fun and exciting show," said Vail.

The students have been working hard, overseen by Cliff McGraham and Paul Sarvis, both professional dancers from Portland, and Vail.

"The dance program has become a lot stronger in the last year. I think it is important for the Bowdoin College Community to be aware of this strength," Vail said.

Record Review

nuclear family. I think the entire state of Texas was in mortal danger. If I am not mistaken this little national threat actually received a fair amount of "real" news coverage. It was, if I can recall, during a time in this nation's illustrious past when the American folk didn't have all that much to worry about. And, the media in its inimitable fashion stepped right in, took up the slack, and gave the American public something to get neurotic over. Makes you wonder doesn't it?

But that's enough of that, lets see...ah, yes...the monotone brain searing tick-a-tock of the clock. The

Sights and sounds: Feb. 26-March 3

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 26

7:30 and 10:00 p.m. — The BEVS presents Chinatown, in Smith Auditorium. Admission is $1.

Director Roman Polanski and scriptwriter Robert Towne take all the archetypal film noir characters of the 30's and bring them together in this meticulously crafted landmark film of the 70's. Polanski creates an ominous mood for a complicated tale of political corruption, murder, and incest. Winner of both an Acad-

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 28

3:00 p.m. — The Foreign Film Series continues with Le Beau Marriage by Eric Rohmer, in Smith Auditorium, Sills Hall.

3:00 p.m. — "The Yellow Earth," a controversial film exploring the condition of the Chinese peasantry before the Communist Liberation of 1949, is sponsored by the Symposium on Chinese Culture Today. The film will be shown free of admission at the Evening Star Cinema, Tontine Mall.

Douglas Worthen, flute; Julie Leven, violin; Anne Black, viola and violin; and Joan Esch, cello. Performance is done with authentic period instruments. Admission is $7 general public, and free with a Bowdoin I.D.

THURSDAY, MARCH 3

7:30 p.m. — The Women in Science Group, the Office of the President, and the Lectures and Concerts Committee sponsor a talk by Marsha Ivins, NASA flight project specialist. The lecture will be given in Kresge Auditorium.

EXHIBITIONS

"Martha Diamond: Paintings": Exhibited in the Bowdoin Museum's 20th-Century Gallery, much of the work was inspired by the architectural environment of Manhattan. It will run through March 20.

"Laura McPhee: Photographs" is on display in the Walker Art Building, John A. and Helen P. Becker Gallery. It will run through February 28.

"Max Beckmann: Masterprints" is on display in the Walker Art Building, Temporary Exhibition Gallery, through March 20.

An exhibition of color landscapes by Brunswick photographer

ing Churches, a play by Tina Howe and directed by Evan Yionoulis, will be presented at the Portland Performing Arts Center, 25A Forest Ave., Portland. Call 774-0465 for times and ticket information.

March 15 — 8:00 p.m. — Frank Zappa performs at the Cumberland County Civic Center. Call the box office, 207-775-3458, or Teletron, 1-800-382-8080. Reserved seats are $16.50.

OTHER

February 27 — The Maine Group Sierra Club sponsors a half-day cross country ski trip of groomed snowmobile trail from Mother Walker Falls through the Notch and back, six to ten miles, depending on the group. Easy ups and downs, some flat terrain through hardwoods and evergreens, with good views of surrounding peaks, the outing is for intermediate skiers. Fee is $3 for non-members. Call Joe Rankin at 645-3677.

March 3 — The Boston Museum of Science will be on campus to interview students who are interested in spending their summer with this organization.

Mannheim Quartet performs on Wednesday in Kresge.

emy Award and a New York Film Critics Award, it stars Jack Nicholson, Faye Dunaway, John Huston, Perry Lopez, John Hillerman, and Diane Ladd. (—Allegria McNeally)

9:00 p.m. — "Suitcase Party" dance, with the band In The Flesh, will be held in Wentworth Hall. Prizes of a trip for two to Florida, and second prize of a skiing trip for two to New Hampshire, offered.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 27

7:00 p.m. — Gospelfest with the Afro-American Gospel Singers: Maine Mass Gospel Choir, Massachusetts State Choir, and Bowdoin Afro-American Society Choir, sponsored by the 19th Annual Black Arts Festival: Black Achievement and Bowdoin Christian Fellowship. First Parish Church.

7:30 and 10:00 p.m. — The BEVS presents One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest, in Smith Auditorium. Admission is $1. The Jack Nicholson theme is continued in this dramatic story of a misfit who commits himself to an insane asylum and inspires the other patients to assert themselves. Based on the novel by Ken Kesey, it is directed by Milos Forman. The Screenplay is by Lawrence Hauben and Bo Goldman; the cast includes Nicholson, Louise Fletcher, Will Sampson, and Brad Dourif. (—Allegria McNeally)

3:00 p.m. — A Gallery Talk, "Martha Diamond: Recent Paintings", will be given by John W. Coffey, curator, in the Walker Art Building.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 29

7:30 p.m. — Edward Hawes, professor of history, Sangamon State University, gives a talk entitled "Saltwater Farming in Maine: A Traditional Sustainable System", in Beam Classroom, VAC.

TUESDAY, MARCH 1

7:30 p.m. — Students from Bowdoin and Colby present a string quartet recital, in Kresge Auditorium. The Bowdoin Quartet will perform Alexander Borodin's String Quartet in D Major, No. 2, and W. A. Mozart's String Quartet in C Major, K. 465, "The Dissonant." The Colby Quartet will perform Mozart's String Quartet in B-flat Major, K. 458, "The Hunt," and Franz Joseph Haydn's String Quartet in B-flat Major, Op. 50, No. 1. Admission is free to the public.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 2

7:30 p.m. — The Mannheim Quartet, an ensemble of virtuoso musicians, will present the sixth performance of the Concert Series in Kresge Auditorium. The program includes works by Mozart, Purcell, Orlando Gibbons, and other classical composers. The Quartet is an ensemble from the Boston area which includes Student art show: "The indecisive moment."

Frank Brockman will be on display through February 29 in the Lancaster Lounge, Moulton Union.

Student works from the fall semester hang in the Visual Arts Center.

"The Indecisive Moment", works by Lisa W. Aufranc and Stuart B. Strong '88, is on display in the Visual Arts Center.

"The History of the Pejepscot Region" exhibit is on display at the Pejepscot Museum, 159 Park Row, Brunswick. The exhibit provides a comprehensive treatment of the area's historical developments from pre-settlement to the present featuring photographs and artifacts from the Pejepscot Historical Society's collection. Hours are Monday-Fridays, 10:00 a.m.—3:00 p.m.

PERFORMANCES

February 24—March 13—Paint-

Please sign up in O.C.S.

MOVIES

Evening Star Cinema (Tontine Mall)

Empire of the Sun, showing at 6:45 and 9:25 p.m.

Cinemas Four (Cooks Corner)

Good Morning Vietnam, showing at 7:00 and 9:00 p.m.

Shoot to Kill, showing at 7:05 and 9:05 p.m.

Three Men and a Baby, showing at 7:10 and 9:10 p.m.

Moonstruck, showing at 7:15 and 9:15 p.m.

Nickelodeon Cinemas (1 Temple St., Portland)

The Last Emperor

Three Men and a Baby

Fatal Attraction

Ironweed

Action Jackson

Broadcast News

Call 772-9751 for times.

Chute discusses 'Beans of Egypt, Maine'

TESSA HADLOCK
ORIENT Contributor

Carolyn Chute, author of The Beans of Egypt, Maine, read from her unfinished second novel Used Auto Parts, and led a discussion last Friday. On the whole, the presentation focused on The Beans and its central descriptions of life in poverty and socially oppressive conditions.

Although capable of drawing descriptively from her own experiences, having grown up with material deprivation, Chute insisted that the characters and situations she created are wholly fictitious. Each section of The Beans is given an interpretation of poverty settings as viewed by a different character.

Thematically, the work has been variously interpreted as dealing with the effects of socially oppressive conditions, as well as of the gender oppression of women in particular. When asked as to whether the book was intended to focus on women, Chute responded that the story is one of class oppression, where women, as well as men, are oppressed a great deal. No gender-specificity was intended, but rather the oppression of people by people.

Of her own background and writing experience, Chute, a resident of Gorham, said that she had not initially intended to be a writer; having tried other jobs (potato farming, among other endeavors) and being unsuccessful, she decided she "might as well be a writer." First working as a freelance journalist for the Portland Evening Express and the Courier Free Press, she next wrote several short stories, and The Beans of Egypt, Maine. She expressed satisfaction with her work, talking briefly about the importance of precision of word choice, and about the editing process.

Lasting about one hour, the talk was informative and relaxed. The audience gained many new insights into The Beans. Her next book, Used Auto Parts, will be completed and published soon.

KATE'S STORE AND DELI

89 Harpswell Street
BEER - SODA - 10" and 16" pizza
convenience items

8 A.M. to 9 P.M. Mon thru Sat 9 A.M. to 8 P.M. Sunday

TONTINE HAIR FASHIONS

207-729-5475
visit our two stylists, Paul and Gail,
in the Tontine Mall
BOWDOIN STUDENT DISCOUNT
FOR HAIRCUTS - BRING I.D.

Support research.

American Heart
Association
WE'RE FIGHTING FOR
YOUR LIFE

SPORTS

Mike
Botelho

Olympics: What happened to the U.S. medals?

Something seems to be missing from this year's Winter Olympic Games.

Oh, it's had its share of stellar individual performances. Swiss Pirmin Zurbriggen's blistering victory in the men's downhill or Finland's Matti Nykanen's herculean dominance in the 70 and 90-meter ski jumps can attest to that.

Calgary has been the sight of some outstanding team achievements as well - the breathtaking talents of the Soviet skating tandem of Ekaterina Gordieva and Sergei Grinkov or the masterful precision of the U.S.S.R. hockey team.

These Olympics have also witnessed some rather comical, even bizarre happenings. Who will ever forget the less than spectacular, sub-human exploits of one, Michael "Eddie the Eagle" Edwards? (Who would like to forget his exploits?) The 24 year old plasterer of Cheltenham, England, has the noble distinction of finishing dead last in both the 70 and 90-meter ski jump. Because of Eddie's enthusiasm for ski jumping and his overwhelming ineptitude, he has become a favorite with the media and the Olympic audiences. And well he should be. Calgary has hosted a bobsled team consisting of a prince and a casino croupier for the first time in many a year. Prince Albert Alexandre Louis Pierre is the driver for Monaco's bobsled team. Although not royalty, the Jamaican bobsled team is creating some excitement of its own. Although picked by some experts not to win the gold, the Jamaicans, who sport a sprint champion, reggae singer and army captain, are committed to hard work and having some fun as well.

Yet, despite this long, varied list of featured sports activity, there seems to be one ingredient missing from this year's feast of Olympic competition. U.S. medals. Remember? Perhaps, competition would be a more apt term for what the United States has failed to demonstrate at the Calgary Games. As of this writing, the U.S. had compiled a miserly total of 4 medals (2 gold, 1 silver, 1 bronze). The Americans are on a pace that would leave them very close to the all-time low for medals won by a U.S. Winter Olympic team. In 1924 and 1936, the U.S. won 4 medals when the games had no more than half the events that they do today.

Although not normally a big winner in the Winter Olympics, the United States has had more bad breaks this year than in past Olympics. U.S. hopes and aspirations have taken numerous falls. Tragically enveloped speed skater Dan Jansen, a strong U.S. contender, throughout the Games. On the day of his first race, the 500-meter, Jansen learned of the death of his sister to leukemia. Visibly distressed, a sullien Jansen decided to

(Continued on page 8)

Undefeated women look to New Englands

TOD DILLON
ORIENT Asst. Sports Editor

The inaugural season in Farley Fieldhouse has been a good one for the women's and men's swim teams. The women are powering their way through an undefeated season and this weekend they are hosting the New England Div. III Championships in which they have a strong chance of winning. The entire team is performing well with standout races coming from co-captains Sarah Bullock and Leslie Preston, and freshman Amy Wakeman and Becky Palmer.

On Saturday the Bears faced the Bobcats from Bates and cruised to a 141-101 victory. Wakeman and Palmer teamed up with Judy Snow and Holly Claiborn to crush the frosh record in the 200 medley relay by over 3 seconds. Preston led a sweep in the 50m backstroke with Jenn Yancey and Laurie Small claiming 2nd and 3rd. Kristen Stover and Karen Zolnay combined to take 1-2 in the 50m breaststroke while in the 50m fly Claiborn proved to be tougher than the competition.

The firsts continued to add up for the Polar Bears as the meet progressed. In the 1000 free Diana Chute and Sarah Hartsock earned a well deserved 1st and 2nd respectively. The 200m relay team of Preston, Stover, Claiborn and Maurer Neill won convincingly by over 9 seconds. Bates could not manage a first in the 200 free or the 100 backstroke either as Palmer took the 200 and Small outclassed the field in the 100. Liz Dietz claimed 2nd in the 200 and Marisa Frieder took 3rd in the 100 to add to the Bear's rout.

Judy Snow '90 will compete against butterflies from 25 schools over the weekend. Photo by Alan Harris.

The 100m breaststroke and the 200m fly provided ample opportunity for the women to pick up some more points. Zolnay came through in the breaststroke while Bullock won the 200 fly with authority. Jane Phillips and Hartsock swam to solid seconds; Phillips in the 100 and Hartsock in the 200.

Bates' first win came in the 50 free but Neill made sure it would not be a sweep as she took 2nd. Lisa Jacobs led Julie Asselta to a 1-3 finish in the diving competition while Zolnay captured yet another 1st, this time in the 200 breaststroke. Snow rallied to claim the 100 fly while the 200 free relay of Amy Wilson, Yancey, Laura Maxon and Bullock finished a strong second.

Many other fine races were turned in as Kate Farrington and Elizabeth Costenbader took 2nd and 3rd in the 100 free and Small returned to claim 2nd in the 200 backstroke. Small expressed confidence in the team as they look forward to this weekend's competition. Said the junior, "Coach Butt has really made us feel confident

(Continued on page 8)

Bears fall to Beavers

ERIC PALMQUIST
ORIENT Circulation Manager

The Polar Bears finished off the regular season much the way they began it, with a tough, scrappy, low scoring affair against the Beavers of Babson. Last November, in Dayton Arena, Babson handed the Polar Bears their first loss of the year, 2-1. On Saturday they did it again, this time on their home ice, sending the Bears home with a 2-1 overtime loss.

Brad Rabor, coming off his brilliant game at Boston University, was once again stellar. After Ron Berren scored with eight minutes to go in the first period Rabor denied the powerful Beavers the net for the next 56 minutes, turning away over 30 shots in that span. It took a goal off a rebound by Tom Sasso, Babson's two-time Hobey Baker Award winner, at 7:49 of overtime to finally beat him.

The Polar Bears did not force the overtime until the third period, when Jeff Gorman slapped one into the top corner of the net off assists from Jim Pincock and Brandon Sweeney to tie it. Both goalies then survived charges to send the contest into overtime.

The loss dropped the Bear's ECAC East record to 15-5, good enough to garner them the third seed in the ECAC tournament which will determine the champion. Babson moved to 19-5 for the second seed behind undefeated

(Continued on page 8)

Steve Janas gets the call tomorrow night in opening round playoff action against A.I.C. Photo by Lori Bodwell.

Women's basketball beats Bates to end losing streak

JIM ANDERSON
ORIENT Contributor

The women's basketball team returned home to the familiar floor of Morrill Gym and at the same time returned to their winning ways. Bowdoin had played four out of their previous five on the road and in their only home game during the stretch they had to contend with a nationally ranked team. The Bears regrouped against Bates and hung tough in the final few minutes to come away with a 66-58 victory.

Bowdoin had been inactive over the past week so they had time to prepare for the Bobcats and to work on some soft spots, namely scoring from positions other than the forward spots and defensive rebounding. Up front the Bears dominated the boards at both ends. Kim Lemieux and Stephanie Caron each came away with 14 rebounds and Nikki Comeau added 9. The Bowdoin back court which generally receives little attention, either on the court or in the paper, added some unexpected punch as point guard Nancy Delaney found time between assists to toss in a career high 8 points.

Bowdoin led this one from wire to wire. However as the lead never expanded into the double digits, they had to fight to keep what they worked for. The first thirty-five minutes featured a Bowdoin lead that fluctuated from 4 to 9 points with neither team seemingly able to open up and put together sustained scoring spurts. Both teams were playing hard but they matched up so evenly that neither one could take control for any long period of time.

In the final five minutes Bates became more aggressive and the Bears knew that they would not be able to cruise to their first victory in half a dozen games. With just over three minutes remaining The Bowdoin lead was cut to one at 53-52. The teams traded baskets over the next minute but Nikki Comeau's two free throws with 2:27 left began a run of nine consecutive points which raised the lead to 64-54 and iced the game for Bowdoin.

The critical play came when Nancy Delaney picked off a Bates pass and fed Sue Ingram for the bucket and a free throw. The three-point play opened the lead to 60-54 and forced Bates to make up a lot of ground in little time.

Kim Lemieux turned in perhaps the best game of her superb season.

To go along with her rebound total she topped the Bears in scoring for the third straight game and the ninth time this season with 21. Nikki Comeau and Stephanie Caron, the only two other people to lead the team in scoring in a game this year, added 14 and 13 respectively.

The win, which raised Bowdoin's record to 12-6, kept alive a shot at a post-season bid in the NIAC tournament. According to co-captain Nancy Delaney a win in the final game against Colby would probably give Bowdoin an uphurd over several other teams attempting to squeeze into the final spot of the four team tournament. Although Bowdoin clipped Colby in an earlier meeting they expect a tough test up in Waterville tomorrow night.

Hockey upends MIT

TONY JACCACI
ORIENT Staff

The women's varsity hockey team had mixed results last weekend as they soundly beat MIT and then in turn, were soundly beat by Harvard. Bowdoin was in top form against MIT and avenged an earlier loss in the season. As the season winds down for the Polar Bears, the team is looking for victories in their last two games against U-Conn and Wesleyan.

Last Saturday, things started poorly for the Black and White in Dayton arena as a visiting MIT team jumped out to an early lead. Bowdoin stormed right back with Shelia Carroll netting her first of two goals of the day. The remainder of the first period and the second period went back and forth as the two teams battled for supremacy. Bowdoin was clearly the better team as they outshot MIT by 43-17 shots on the day, but the Polar Bears just couldn't put the puck into the net. Coach Bobby Jones felt that the team was going for the "ultimate pass" and that the Bears were not shooting terribly well.

The 1-1 tie did not last long in the third period when Bowdoin exploded for three goals in 38 seconds. Carroll scored another while Petra Eaton and Martha Bodner also beat the MIT net-minder for goals. Captain Kathy McCormick had three assists while Suzanne Walker played a good game in the nets. The game ended in a 4-1 decision as Bowdoin recorded the win. For their next game, Bowdoin traveled to meet a very strong Harvard team.

The Polar Bears never seemed to get into the game and were effectively dominated for most of the game by the Crimson. Coach Jones claimed that the team was just not concentrating and this was apparent in the final score which favored Harvard by a score of 9-0. Erin Miller and Suzanne Walker shared time in the nets, but the hosts just proved to be too much for the Black and White. Jones felt that freshmen Sarah Russell and Laura Folk played a good game and he added that they have been steadily improving with each game. The Polar Bears next foe is U-Conn and then they will end their season Wednesday.

Runners BU bound

Women's track

BLAIR DILS
ORIENT Contributor

The Bobcat Invitational at Bates College was the site of a recent meet for the Women's Track team, as the Polar Bears placed well, edging out the host for second place.

Senior Theresa O'Hearn was the shining point of the team as she registered a first in the 400m. race, and bolstered two relay teams, as they ran to victory in the 4x400 m. and the 4x200 m. races. Coach Slovinski said, "Theresa's having an exceptional season. She's a great competitor in three tough events for us every week."

O'Hearn, though, was not the only first place finisher for Bowdoin. Sandra Scibelli '89 outclassed everyone in the Shot Put as she won by 6 feet. Tonya Bynoe '88 and Anja Kannengieser '88 finished 1-2 in the 1000 m. event, both breaking the Bowdoin record which was previously held by Kannengieser. Bynoe had the better time of 2:44.46, beating the old mark by more than three seconds. Joining O'Hearn on the victorious relay teams were Heather Wood '91, Beth Hale '90 and Bynoe for the 4x200 and Wood, Kannengieser and Bynoe again for the 4x400.

The Polar Bears now look forward to the ECAC's at Bates College on March 4 and 5, and should do well if the Bobcat Invitational is any kind of indication.

Hockey

(Continued from page 7)

Merrimack (20-0). All teams which finish over .500 make the tournament, and this year eight made it out.

The Polar Bears will open at home against American International College, a team which finished 16-8 (the Bears were 17-7), yet in the tough, balanced ECAC found themselves ranked 56th. AIC boasts victories over Norwich (ranked fourth) and Babson, so they are dangerous foes for the Polar Bears.

Coach Terry Meagher explained, "It's great to have the home ice advantage to open up, but AIC is a great team, with lines as strong as we've faced all year. We'll

Men's track

BLAIR DILS
ORIENT Contributor

Last weekend, the men's track team competed in the New England Div. III Championships at M.I.T., placing 12th out of 25 teams. The Bears were three points behind Colby and finished two points ahead of Williams.

While the team as a whole performed solidly, Tom Dillon '89, Damon Guterman '89, and the Distance Medley Relay team turned in performances worthy of note. Dillon, racing in the 1000 m. event, finished second, losing in a very tight race. Guterman pole vaulted 13 feet, good enough for a 4th place finish. The most exciting event was the Distance Medley Relay, as the team placed third. Al Iverson ran the first 400 meters, John Dougherty '91 completed the 800 m. leg, Marty Malague '90 passed three other runners during his 1200 m. run, and freshman Peter Holtz finished with a strong 4:30 mile.

Coach Slovinski was most pleased with his runners, stating, "It was nice to see Marty Malague run well. And Tod Dillon has had knee problems but he is still one of the top runners in the league even with the problems." The runners and the rest of the team are now gearing up for the open New England's at BU tonight and tomorrow.

have to be at the top of our game to win."

Defenseman Sweeney added, "Any of the teams ranked 2-8 are capable of beating each other on a given night. Merrimack certainly stands alone, but they can be beaten."

He also feels that the keys to winning will be goaltending and defense, and Meagher agreed, explaining, "Goaltending is always a key in the playoffs."

Meagher will continue to rotate goalies, starting Steve Janas in net. Should the Bears win while Babson or Merrimack loses then the next game will be at home on March 2nd. If those teams win then the Polar Bears must go on the road, which is always tough in the playoffs.

Joe Williams(31) fights to get shot off in battle against Bates. Photo by Bonnie Berryman.

Bears lose to Bobcats at home

CHRISTOPHER BOONE
ORIENT Staff

The men's basketball squad suffered a close defeat in the hands of the Bates Bobcats at Bowdoin on Monday night. In a game that saw many lead changes, the Bobcats emerged victorious, 87-84.

Bowdoin came into the game looking to avenge a humiliating defeat in Lewiston earlier in the season. Bates boosted a large cheering section as the larger-than-usual crowd in the Morrell Gymnasium appeared to be partial to Bates.

Bates' Head Coach Rick Boyages, a 1985 Bowdoin graduate, has put together a well-oiled shooting attack with both depth and range. Bob Price, Steve Williams and Eric Johnson split 60 points as the Bobcats shot an amazing 11-23 from three-point land.

Bowdoin turned in some fine individual efforts as well. Joe Williams came up one point short in his last home game of becoming Bowdoin's third all-time leading scorer, pumping in 16 points. Big Joe also hauled down 9 rebounds and swatted 5 opposing shots. Steve Drigotas had a big game as well, shooting 5-9 from the field and winding up with 15 points and 8 rebounds. Mike Burnett and Kevin Hancock did all the backcourt scoring with 16 and 15 points respectively.

The game was close all the way, with Bowdoin down by one at the half and taking the lead until the 5 minute mark in the second half when Bates took over. With 8 seconds left and the Bears down by 5, Hancock stole the ball and Joe laid it in with three ticks still on the clock. Bates went to the line after a timely Mike Burnett foul and missed with one second left on the clock. Mike Kryger's last-ditch effort fell flat and the game was over.

Bowdoin travels to Colby to face a tough Mules' squad tomorrow, featuring the highest-scoring Division III scorer in the nation—Matt Hancock. Incidentally, Matt is the brother of Bowdoin's captain, Kevin, who will be playing in his last collegiate game. So come watch not only a battle for respect for Bowdoin basketball, but a battle for the bragging rights of Casco, Maine for years to come.

Swimming

(Continued from page 7)

and landed coming into the meet. We've had a great year and we should do well." The heaviest competition should come from the field of Amherst, Tufts and Williams as the Bears go for the title. If they swim the way they have this year, Bowdoin could find itself with a New England Championship swim team.

While the women have been tallying victory after victory the men have not lain idle. Save for some mid-season losses the men have had an outstanding season marked by strong performances and dedication. Co-captain Andy Auerbach pointed out that every member has been doing very well and this was evidenced by the 154-94 thrashing of Bates on Saturday.

The 200 medley relay of Jon Treadwell, Kevin Fitzpatrick, John Watson and Tom Francouer set the tone of the meet with a school record, besting the old by 1.5 seconds and Bates by over 8. The first were numerous for the men as well. Alan Harris, who Auerbach said is having a terrific season, captured the 1000 free over Tim Coulas who claimed 2nd. Doug O'Brien captured the 200 free, Chris Carlisle dominated the 100 backstroke, Fitzpatrick returned for a 1st in the 100 breaststroke, and co-captain Edward Pond swam to a strong win in the 200 fly.

Prior to the meet freshman Coulas, O'Brien, Dave Merritt and Dave Morey teamed up to impressively break the frosh record in the 800 free relay. Auerbach added to the slew of firsts with one in the 50 free and Carlisle won his second; claiming the 200 backstroke. Fitzpatrick one again made his mark as he outdistanced the competition in the 200 breaststroke. O'Brien and Coulas combined for a 1-2 in the 500 free while Watson added the last 1st in the swimming events as he took the 100 fly.

The Bears received two strong wins in the diving competition to contribute to the win. Will Lensen captured the 1m board and Shane Engstrom proved to be too strong in the 3m event.

The men will have the weekend off as they prepared for their New England's next week. The competition for the women begins today as the seek to contend for the championship.

Botelho

(Continued from page 7)

go on with the race. After jumping the gun in his first start, Jansen suddenly fell to the ice while making his first turn. Four days later, in the 1000-meter, Jansen was off to a world record pace but slipped again, this time with just 200 meters to go in the race. Dan Jansen's Olympic dreams ended in a cruel, stunning nightmare.

Another disappointment in this year's Olympics was the play of the U.S. hockey team. Although not equated with the likes of the Soviets or Swedes by most experts, the Americans were picked to make it to the medal round. The Americans began favorably with an easy 10-6 win over the Austrians. However, they blew a three goal lead to a strong Czech team and, after pulling to within one, lost to the mighty Soviet Union squad, 7-5. In a must win game against West Germany, the American unit simply ran out of gas, falling 4-1. Although the U.S. displayed an aggressive, high-powered offense throughout its games (with the exception of the West Germany contest), it was its erratic, often sloppy defensive play which led to its demise.

Without question, the U.S. team has had its share of tough luck in Calgary. Yet, these Olympics have not been a total fop for the American athletes. Brian Boitano bested the other Brian from Canada to win the gold in men's figure skating. Speed skater Bonnie Blair raced to the gold in the 500-meter and is favored to do the same in the 1,000-meter as well. After finishing fourth in the 500 and 1,000-meter races, speed skater Eric Flaim of Pembroke, Massachusetts turned the heat up just a notch to take the silver in the 1,500-meter. And figure skater Debbie Thomas stands a good shot to win the gold in her long-awaited duel with East German heartthrob, Katarina Witt.

I don't intend to cite reasons why U.S. athletes are not performing as well as their international counterparts. But isn't it comforting to know that the newly established Olympic commission, whose main function is the betterment of the U.S. athletic program in future years, is to be headed by George Steinbrenner, a man of keen sensitivity who has long been known for the tremendous warmth and compassion which he has shown in his human contacts? I didn't think so.

Oh by the way, the U.S. men's and women's curling teams didn't win medals either.

Chinese Symposium scheduled for March

Chinese culture in the 10 years since Mao Tse-tung's death will be the focus of six-part symposium at Bowdoin College starting Monday, March 2.

The symposium which is sponsored by Bowdoin's Asian studies program with grants from the Mellon Foundation will be initiated by Peking University's Professor of English Language and Literature Zhang Longxi and Bowdoin's Visiting Fulbright Professor in the Asian Studies Program Li Zongjun with a talk entitled "Literature and Literary Thinking."

On March 7, Authoress and Journalist Judith Shapiro will present a lecture, "After the Nightmare." Shapiro has co-authored three books on China with her husband, Liang Heng and her articles have been widely published.

"The Deep Structure of Chinese Culture," a lecture by Memphis State University Professor of History Sun Lung-kee, will be given March 9. The lecture is drawn from his book addressing the underlying traits of Chinese culture, a work banned by the Chinese government.

In addition, the symposium will feature a discussion on the role of culture in Chinese society by three Bowdoin seniors on Feb. 29 and two films, "The Yellow Earth" and "A Small Town Named Hibiscus," to be shown at the Evening Star Cinema, Brunswick.

Admissions

(continued from page one)
year, when only about 50 applied. Lavin said the whole admissions office has "made a real effort" to recruit minority students.

Forty percent of next year's freshman class has already been accepted early decision. Lavin said that generally about 35% of the class is accepted ED, but this year it is a little higher because "we went with the strength of the pool." She added the 'quality' of the incoming class is "as good or better" than last year's.

There was a 36% acceptance rate for early decision students this year. Out of the 154 students accepted, 61% or 90 students were men. The ratio of women was 39% or 60 students. A high percentage of the accepted students were males from preparatory schools in Massachusetts. Lavin said, "This (percentage) is significantly different than it's been in past years...we're hoping it will balance itself out in the spring."

Only five black students applied early decision. None were accepted. There was also a significant number of children of alumni who applied early decision and 50% were accepted.

Lavin said this increase in the number of students accepted ED will make a real difference during the decision-making process in the spring. "It's going to be more difficult...we only have 60% of the class to play with." There are only 231 places left to fill in the class of 1992.

Once all the applications are in, each one is read carefully at least twice by four to five members of the admissions staff. In March the admissions office forms a committee to vote on the applicants. The final decisions are made by the week of March 24th and decisions will be mailed on April 8th.

The committee is shooting for a freshman class between 375-385. Lavin stressed that it is difficult to predict how many students will choose to attend Bowdoin, and the acceptance numbers vary from year to year. She said however that "Bowdoin has a really high yield" in the number of students that choose Bowdoin after the admissions office chooses them.

Fraternities

(continued from page one)

dant, since it is the college who has the money to pay.

President of the Inter-Fraternity Council Jennifer Goldsmith '90 noted that the IFC is in the process of creating a fraternity judiciary board, which would play the role of reviewing grievances held against an entire fraternity where it would be difficult to identify a single culprit.

"The ability of the Dartmouth administration to control fraternities would not be good for Bowdoin," said Goldsmith in an interview. "It's better to work with the administration rather than have them force the policies."

Goldsmith went on to comment on the prevailing differences between the fraternity systems of Bowdoin and Dartmouth. With regard to the enforcement of the minimum standards she said, "We already meet many of the standards although we are not forced to."

Rugby

(continued from page one)

meet if it were to retain its fall season.

These stipulations included the acquisition of a coach and what Erlenborn described as "shaping up our act." Having successfully met these requirements, President of the BRFC Joseph McLean '90 wrote to Gresson on Christmas Day, 1987, requesting a spring season for the rugby club.

Although the athletic department found no reason to refuse the BRFC request, the administration chose to ban the spring season in a joint decision with Bates and Colby. Since rugby is a club and not a varsity sport, this decision led many members of the BRFC to question the validity of a ban falling under the jurisdiction of the New England Small College Athletic Conference (NESCAC).

Expressing the concerns of other members of the rugby club, Erlenborn said of this joint decision, "The fact that we have to have their [Colby's and Bates'] approval is ridiculous."

On behalf of the BRFC Erlenborn brought the issue to the attention of the Student Executive Board at last week's meeting. The board questioned the validity of the ban falling under the jurisdiction of NESCAC and Gresson's authority to make any decision concerning the ban.

Chairman of the board George Hillhouse '88 said, "I don't know how or why President Gresson assumed the authority to deny rugby a spring season."

Board member Jason Easterly '90 summed up the board's contention that the president does not in fact have the jurisdiction to ban rugby's spring season. Easterly said, "President Gresson has no right to deny the spring season... rugby is not a part of the NESCAC - the club just needs to approach the Student Activities Fee Committee for funding."

The board has drafted a letter to Gresson on behalf of the rugby club questioning his authority to make a decision regarding a chartered student organization and appealing rugby's right to a spring season.

Despite the president's banning of the spring season, the athletic department has found no conflict with the rugby club. Field space and athletic trainers are not an issue, and the cost of the rugby club to the athletic department is minimal. The club asks the college to help pay for a coach because the administration required the club's acquisition of one; the remaining of the club's funds come from SAFC.

Although the ban has not been officially lifted, the rugby club has a spring season of play scheduled through the New England Rugby Football Union to which it belongs. In addition, the athletic department has allotted the rugby club time to practice in the William Farley Field House along with those other teams currently preparing for their spring seasons.

Ban or no ban, practices for the spring season are presently under way and members of the rugby club are looking forward to another season.

GOOD LUCK BEARS!

TAKE IT TO 'EM IN THE
HOCKEY PLAYOFFS!!!

BEER WINE KEGS, CHEESE ICE

SANDAU
TYPE & DESIGN

Typesetting & Design
for Resumes & Stationery

98 MAINE STREET, BRUNSWICK 729-5650
Upstairs from Benolts

FITNESS INSTRUCTOR
for Modern Club that includes
Nautilus, Aerobics.
Morning hours available,
membership inclusive.
Call 442-8498

Part-Time -
Home Mailing Program!
Excellent income!
Detail, send self-addressed,
stamped envelope.
WEST,
Box 5877, HILLSIDE, N.J. 07205

Study Abroad ITHACA COLLEGE LONDON CENTER

- SEMESTER OR YEAR PROGRAM
- ITHACA COLLEGE CREDIT
- BRITISH FACULTY

COURSES — British and European studies are offered in literature, history, art history, drama, music, sociology, education, psychology, communications, and politics. Special program offered in theatre. Internships available to qualified students in international business, social services, communications, political science, economics and theatre.

Please send information about the Ithaca College London Center to:

NAME _____ ADDRESS _____
PHONE _____ SCHOOL _____ YEAR _____ MAJOR _____
Return to: Office of International Programs, Muller 218, Ithaca College, Ithaca, NY 14850

LOOKOUT POINT HOUSE

Harpwell, Maine
(207) 833-5509

WINTER SPECIAL

2 days -2 nights
MAP plan - double occupancy
2 people - $150.00
or

Rooms by the month
on the sea eight miles from Bowdoin

BIG RED Q PRINTING

next to the College

- stationery
- resumes
- posters
- newsletters

212E Maine Street
Brunswick
729-4840

1933 GROWLER
4 ISSUES
BEYOND CLASSIC/CHERRY
CONDITION.
415-532-3260 -WELLS

OPINION

Romper-room politics:

The Executive Board tampers with student elections

Remember how the student council elections were held in the third grade? The teacher made everybody put their heads on their desks, cover their eyes, and raise their hand when the person's name they wanted elected was called. And no peeking. When the geek with the tape around his glasses who always picked his nose was the only person to vote for himself, only the teacher would know—no need to embarrass or discourage future political aspirations of the impressionable bratt.

One would think romper-room electoral methods would remain in the third grade, but a Student Executive Board decision Tuesday night makes future Executive Board elections conform to grammar school standards. Acting in its personal interest, the Executive Board resolved to censor Executive Board election results—not releasing the numerical results of elections and only announcing the winners' names.

Apparently, the Executive Board believes Bowdoin College students have more in common with seesaws, swings, jungle gyms, and playground monitors than the working adult world. Their decision assumes three condescending points: a) the college community lacks the proper maturity to handle or comprehend election results; b) candidates for the Executive Board—out of fear of childish embarrassment—are not mature enough to participate in a normal, democratic election; and c) an elected student body can withhold and censor public information.

It is unimaginable today that any serious election on the college, local, state, or national level could run the way the Executive Board has decided to conduct Bowdoin elections. Democratic elections are inextricably linked with election results; the elections are fair and open. Without releasing the full results to the public, an election ceases to be democratic and becomes a sham.

One just can't think of an election—other than Bowdoin's warped Executive Board and third grade student council elections—where the entire results are not made public. Everybody knows city, county, state, and national elections operate this way.

Election results substantiate an election's credibility. People have the right to know the degree of electoral support an elected official has and the lack of electoral support a candidate who did not get into office had. These statistics may be pleasing for some, embarrassing for others, but they are still part of the electoral process.

Personal interest to avoid embarrassment is what based the Executive Board's decision. The Board members who passed the motion were voting to insure that if they ran again—win or lose—the number of votes they received would not be made public. When anyone runs for a public office, however, he/she has voluntarily put themselves before public scrutiny of which election results are just the tip of the iceberg. The insecurity of the Executive Board does not warrant dumping the standards for fair elections—throw the Board blankets and pacifiers to suck on instead.

Pilgrimage By M. Svenson

Perhaps the most ludicrous aspect of the decision is its censorious nature. With the decision, the Executive Board restricted information that no democratic organization would even consider and set a legislative precedent for censorship. Now that the Executive Board has decided to censor one aspect of campus life what is to stop it from lumbering ever-forward towards further stupidity. The Executive Board was created to serve the interests of the student body—not limit and restrict it.

Next week, the Executive Board has two courses of action. One, it can regain its integrity and overturn last week's shameful decision. Or two, it can expand upon the last week's obtuseness and require that Morrill gymnasium be filled with 1350 desks where Bowdoin students can lie their heads, cover their eyes, and raise their hands at the next Executive Board election.

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

"The College exercises no control over the content of the student writings contained herein and neither it, nor the faculty assume any responsibility for the views expressed herein."

Editor	Stephen Reynolds
Managing Editor	Kathryn Nanovic
News Editors	Tamara Dassanayake, Dawn Vance
In-depth Editor	Kevin Wesley
Entertainment Editor	Sharon Smart
Sports Editor	Justin Prisdorf
Photography Editors	Alan Harris, Mary Ann Lai
Asst. News Editor	Tanya Weinstein
Asst. Sports Editor	Tod Dillon
Asst. Entertainment Editor	Lizz Millan
Contributing Editors	Albert Mauro
Senior Editors	Lori Bodwell, Michael Botelho
Production Manager	Vincent Jacks
Business Manager	Eric Foushee
Advertising Manager	Michael Townsend
Advertising Staff	Michelle Campagna, Nancy Eckel,
	Kim Maxwell
Circulation Manager	Eric Palmquist
Bowdoin Publishing Company	Lori M. Bodwell, Eric F. Foushee,
	Albert P. Mauro, Stephen Reynolds

Published weekly when classes are held during the Fall and Spring semester by the students of Bowdoin College. Address editorial communication to the Editor, subscription communication to the Circulation Manager, and business correspondence to the Business Manager at the Bowdoin Orient, 12 Cleveland Street, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011, or telephone (207)725-3300. The Bowdoin Orient reserves the right to edit any and all articles and letters. Subscriptions are $8.00 a semester or $15.00 a year. Past issues cannot be mailed. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to The Bowdoin Orient, Moulton Union, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011.

Letters

The Masque and Gown ticket rampage

Last Saturday I saw Masque and Gown's major/minor production of You Can't Take It With You, and was impressed with the overall experience. This production was of very high quality and demonstrative of what Bowdoin students involved in the Masque and Gown can accomplish.

What disturbed me about the experience was the lack of available seating for Saturday night's performance. People were turned away from the theater and did not have another opportunity to see the show. Initially, I thought it quite unfair that Masque and Gown did not schedule more performances or somehow see to it that everyone who wanted to see this production had the opportunity to do so.

What I later found out was that the Masque and Gown board attempts to do just that, and the real problem is an inconsistently expressed interest in theater on the part of Bowdoin students.

Apparently, this "Saturday night crunch" happens all the time. There seems to be several main factors which contribute to it. Unfortunately, the scheduling of such events must be nearly written in stone. It seems obvious that with the upcoming musical and one-act playwriting contest, Masque and Gown needs to move on, probably for reasons of logistics and the technical aspects that these productions entail.

While it may seem possible to an audience to extend the run of a show for another weekend, it is most probably not. George H. Quinby Theater is a one-hundred seat space. While this is quite small, Masque and Gown made a good choice in selecting this space for You Can't Take It With You. The actor's relationship with his or her audience is very different in GHQ than it would have been on the proscenium mainstage.

A certain number of those seats were reserved for actors' families and friends from outside the Bowdoin community. This certainly seems justified. The amount of time and energy that an actor puts into rehearsal is definitely worth that privilege, nothing else. Still more seats are reserved for big supporters of Masque and Gown. This, too, seems justified. Those who support Masque and Gown deserve first priority when receiving

(continued on page 11)

The Bowdoin Orient welcomes all letters. Due to space limitations, letters of 300 words or less will be considered for publication first. Letters not printed the week submitted will be put on waiting list with top priority for the next issue. The Bowdoin Orient reserves the right to edit any letter due to space limitations. All letters must be signed and include the address and telephone number where the author can be contacted for verification.

Summer & Career Opportunities
(Will Train). Excellent pay plus
world travel. Hawaii, Bahamas,
Caribbean, etc. CALL NOW
206-736-0775 Ext.544E

76 UNION STREET BRUNSWICK CORSICAN

The Corsican Restaurants of Brunswick and Freeport welcome the N.E. Swimming Championships.

Come in for your favorite pizza, calzone, homemade chowder and desserts.

729-8117

The London Theatre Program

of SARAH LAWRENCE COLLEGE and the
BRITISH AMERICAN DRAMA ACADEMY
at Regent's College, Regent's Park, London

A unique opportunity for college students to study with Britain's leading actors and directors. Acting study and performance, supplemented by academic work. Full academic credit is provided for either a semester or a year. For details and an application, call (914) 337-0700 or write:

The London Theatre Program, Box BBOW
Sarah Lawrence College, Bronxville, N. Y. 10708.

1 or 2 Females wanted immediately to share 4 bedroom furnished house at Willow Grove in Brunswick. Rent $250 a month plus one-third of utilities. Call Marina after 1 at 725-4004

TYPISTS - Hundreds weekly at home! Write: P.O. Box 17 Clark, New Jersey 07066

BARGAINS FOR STUDENTS

Bargain Balcony
Boutique

55 Plus Center, Brunswick
Open Mondays, Tuesdays and
Thursdays, 10 to 3

Harvard this summer

June 27-August 19, 1988

Harvard Summer School offers open-enrollment in day and evening courses. The curriculum includes courses that fulfill college degree requirements and programs designed for personal and professional development.

Our international student body has access to Harvard's outstanding libraries, fine museums, well-equipped laboratories, cultural activities, and nearby Boston.

We feature a college-level program for secondary school juniors and seniors,* as well as a Dance Center and special programs in Health Professions, Drama, Writing, Ukrainian Studies, and English as a Second Language.

(*admission required; for minority and economically disadvantaged students)

For more information return the coupon below or call (617) 495-2494 (24-hour line). Please allow 3-4 weeks for delivery.

☐ YES, please send a 1988 Harvard Summer School CATALOGUE and/or specific information about the following programs:

☐ Secondary School Program ☐ Dance Center ☐ Writing
☐ English as a Second Language ☐ Health Professions ☐ Drama

Name _____

Address _____

City, State, Zip _____

HARVARD UNIVERSITY SUMMER SCHOOL

DEPT. 611, 20 Garden Street, Cambridge, MA 02138

ORIENT OPEN HOUSE

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 28 AT 7:00 P.M.

12 CLEVELAND STREET (BEHIND PHYSICAL PLANT)

Anyone and everyone interested in working for the Orient in any department, especially writers, is invited to stop by, ask questions and meet the staff.

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

FIRST CLASS MAIL
U.S. Postage PAID
BRUNSWICK, ME.
Permit No. 25

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

VOLUME CXVII

BOWDOIN COLLEGE, BRUNSWICK, MAINE, FRIDAY, MARCH 4, 1988

NUMBER 18

Al Mauro '89 and George Hillhouse '88 lead an open forum addressing President Gresson's 'White Paper.' Photo by Mary Ann Lai.

Forum reviews 'White Paper'

TAMARA DASSANAYAKE
ORIENT News Editor

An open forum aimed at gathering student opinion on the proposals suggested in the White Paper on Planning for Bowdoin was conducted by the Student Executive Board last night.

The views expressed at the forum will be presented to the Governing Boards when they meet this weekend. The Boards will decide whether future developmental efforts of the College should be committed towards the building of a $21 million science center or towards a multi-faceted program aimed at providing increased academic space and improving the quality of student life while at the same time building a new science library.

The consensus which emerged from the students attending the forum was the need for the College to commit its resources in all three directions—but most importantly towards generating greater space for student activities.

"You've got to have more of a place to talk [to friends] than over a fruit plate," said Kirsten Ek '90 arguing that there is a real need for more student activities space."

Chairman of the Exec Board George Hillhouse '88 said, "one of the main problems is that when most of the Trustees were at the College, 90% of the student body belonged to a frat—there wasn't a need for other social space—the fraternities were the social space." He added, "now with 60% of the student body independent, there is nowhere for them to go."

Mitra Morgan '88 believes the present arrangements "place an unnatural emphasis on the fraternities because nothing else is available."

Joy Stuart '88, a member of the student life facilities committee said the student center will be a central area in which students can meet, eat, collect mail, listen to lectures and enjoy concerts.

Hillhouse added, "there is also a real need for a science center but what are the opportunity costs to other departments of pooling all our resources into the sciences...Bowdoin is trying to become a small University."

Governing Boards to vote on budget

DOUG JONES
ORIENT Contributing Editor

When the Governing Boards arrive on campus today for their winter meetings they will face two major decisions: whether to approve next year's operating budget, which includes an 8 percent increase in tuition, and choosing the sequence for building several planned construction projects, according to college administrators.

Traditionally, consideration of the next year's budget has dominated much of the two days of meetings as members of the Boards of Trustees and Overseers debate various provisions. Though the Governing Boards may amend the budget before giving it final approval, in the past, most changes have been made by the Executive Committee and the Financial Planning Committee which have already approved it.

Included in the operating budget is a proposed 8 percent tuition increase from $11,515 to $12,435 which the boards must approve in a separate vote, said President of the College A LeRoy Gresson.

Other important provisions in the budget include an increase in faculty base pay, an increase in funds allocated to scholarships, and an allocation of new funds for the salaries of the new director of personnel, additional development office staff and seven new faculty members.

The Boards will also make several decisions concerning the sequencgive priority to a student center, additional dining space and academic space and would be a change from Bowdoin's current "implied" policy of constructing the science facility first.

The letter said this plan has the advantage of addressing many of Bowdoin's serious problems in the short run while the previous

"Including in the operating budget is a proposed 8 percent tuition increase from $11,515 to $12,435...."

ing of Bowdoin's major construction projects and the methods of financing them. At question is the order in which Bowdoin should construct a new science facility, a student center, and additional academic and dining space.

In a letter outlining Bowdoin's options entitled "A White Paper on Planning for Bowdoin," sent to the Boards' members two weeks ago, Gresson and Chairman of the Trustees Leonard Cronkhite suggested that the college delay construction of the science facility. This would course would only address the need for a science facility and put other projects on hold.

The letter suggests that Bowdoin begin some construction on the science center, specifically the building of the science library, while proceeding with the conversion of the now unused Hyde Cage and Curtis Pool to a student center and increased dining facilities.

In an interview Tuesday, Gresson said the reassessment of priorities was brought about by an increase (Continued on page 13)

BWA hosts Women's Awareness Week

TANYA WEINSTEIN
ORIENT Asst. News Editor

Women are celebrating nationwide next week.

Women's Awareness Week is happening from March 7-12 as part of Women's History Week nationwide. Tuesday, March 8 is International Women's Day. President of the Bowdoin Women's Association (BWA) Rachel Dobkin '90 said, "It's a celebration of women and women's experiences in every aspect of (their) lives."

Throughout the week a variety of lectures, discussions and performances will be held. Each day will be centered around a different theme.

Luncheons will be held daily Monday-Friday in Coles Tower. Various films pertaining to the issues at hand will be continuously run each day from 9 am to 2 pm Tuesday-Friday in the Moulton Union.

In addition, several guest speakers will be delivering lectures. Andrea Dworkin, author of Pornography, Women Hating and Intercourse will speak on "Pornography and Civil Rights" on Thursday evening. Dobkin said, "She's one of the country's leading radical feminists and is very well known." She strongly encouraged people to attend the lecture, saying "She will really rile up people on this campus."

Another guest speaker, Marge Clark, will lecture and lead discussion on Friday afternoon. Clark is a Maine State Representative and Former Coordinator of NOW (the National Organization of Women). The forum entitled "A Progressive Family Agenda" will be addressing several issues. One pressing topic will be the proposed referendum in Maine that states a woman under the age of 17 needs parental consent for an abortion.

Anne Burnham '90, Treasurer of the BWA, commented that many other organizations are also involved in Women's Awareness Week. "We tried to incorporate as many parts of the campus as we could," she said.

On Monday evening, a panel of Dudley Coe Health Center personnel will speak on Women's Health at Bowdoin. It is sponsored by the Peer Relations Support Group. Burnham said, "It is centered around health issues for women at Bowdoin and women in general."

Chapel Talk this Friday will also center around women's awareness issues. Stephen Cerf, Associate Professor of German, will speak on "Feminist Criticism and Otherness."

A panel and discussion will also be held on Friday entitled "Bowdoin Fraternities; A Place for Women?" Panelists will include independent women, fraternity (Continued on page 13)

Bears in hockey finals! Special lift-out section

"Yeah, I'm going to be a star...." Band line-up for Midsemester's Madness page 5

What is your favorite commercial and why?

BECKY AUSTIN
ORIENT Staff

Chris Turner '89
Subaru's 'When a man loves a woman' because every man's been in that situation.

Susan Flood '88
Levi 501's because of the men.

Asher Miller '89
Clap on, clap off, the Clapper, because she's got the clap.

Lisa Carter '91
I personally like the Michael Jackson commercials because he's so sexy and masculine.

Execs plan J-Board reform

DAWN VANCE
ORIENT News Editor
With its selection process for next year looming in the near future, the Student Judiciary Board may soon witness changes in its present procedural practices.

In an attempt to make what Student Executive Board member Suzanna Makowski '90 described as the "self-perpetuating, secretive" nature of the J-Board more accessible to the student body, the Exec Board is working to introduce a number of reforms to the procedural format of the J-Board.

The reforms include changes in the interviewing and selection process of J-Board members, the introduction of student advocates and the official encodement into the Student Constitution of certain currently practiced but unwritten procedures.

The major reform the Exec Board is trying to introduce involves the interviewing and selection process of J-Board members. Any reform would entail the involvement of more Exec Board members in this process.

At present, the interviewing and selection process stands as follows in accordance with Article IX of the constitution of the Student Assembly:

A. The initial interviews of all applicants will be conducted by a committee composed of three Executive Board members (the vice-chair and two members at large) and the three seniors with two year appointments. This committee will compile a list of no less than ten candidates.

B. These candidates will be interviewed by a second committee composed of the Student Judiciary Board and the Executive Board chairperson. This committee will select the four new members and the two alternates.

It is part B of this process which the Exec Board is hoping to reform. The amendment upon which the board is presently working would entail the inclusion of two members at large in addition to the chairperson in the second round of interviews, thus increasing the Exec Board's authority over which candidates are chosen to hold J-Board posts.

Makowski pointed to the Exec Board's empowerment of the J-Board as the foundation upon which this reform rests. She said of the amendment, "Since we have responsibility for the J-Board members we feel we should have more input in who is chosen."

Chairman of the J-Board Sam Shepherd '88 expressed his objections to an increase in the number of Exec Board members sitting in on the second round interviews. Shepherd said, "I'm not crazy about the idea of more Execs on the selection committee - with nine people in the room it becomes unwieldy... also, because they don't know what's going on in J-Board hearings they don't know what makes a good candidate."

Shepherd voiced his opinion that it is unnecessary that more Exec Board members be involved in this process because the J-Board's by-laws stipulate that it must submit a final list of nominated candidates to the board for confirmation. "We have to submit the list of candidates to the board, so it can go through the same question and answer period that we go through during the confirmation," Shepherd said.

Another possible reform in the making involves the introduction of student advocates who will serve as counselors and supporters for candidates facing a J-Board hearing. These student advocates would assist Dean of Students Kenneth A. Lewallen in the preparation of a candidate before the hearing and would themselves accompany the candidate to the

(Continued on page 4)

Easterly resigns in show of skepticism

DAWN VANCE
ORIENT News Editor
Executive Board member, Jason Easterly '90, resigned at Tuesday night's Student Executive board meeting. Easterly's resignation marks the second this week.

Daniel Courcay '90, on a voluntary medical leave of absence, resigned from the board earlier this week in a letter sent to Executive Chair, George Hillhouse '88. During the board's open forum, Easterly tendered his resignation from what he termed the "oxymoron" which is the Student Executive Board. Easterly expressed his skepticism at "the ability and wisdom of the Student Government and the administration at Bowdoin College."

Easterly said of his resignation, "I can no longer serve on a board that I feel does not adequately represent the needs of the students it serves. Nor can I continue to serve in the advisory capacity of the board to an administration that is neither caring nor receptive to any matter not pertaining to finance."

Hillhouse addressed the board with his second call for action of the 1987-1988 academic year. He called for board members to serve as vehicles for the expression of student opinion because he said, "You people were elected to the Executive Board by the student body."

Upon the board's invitation, Gresson will appear at the board's Tuesday, March 8 meeting. This meeting will provide the board with an opportunity to pose questions to the president. The board hopes to limit the question and answer session with the president to a 45 minute period during its open forum.

The board briefly discussed its Student Life Facilities Open Forum scheduled for this past Thursday night, March 3. This forum was scheduled to provide the opportunity for informal discussion of Gresson's "White Paper". The "White Paper" concerns the Capital Campaign Fund and the prospective building of the science facility and the student center.

In conclusion the board discussed its planned reconstruction of the student activities room located in the Moulton Union. Upon completion of reconstruction this room will house space for all of the various campus organizations. The board may conduct a mural competition to determine the design for the room.

Midsemester's Madness strikes again

TAMARA DASSANAYAKE
ORIENT News Editor
ACT I.

SCENE I: A 'dream' melting pot of Vegas, comedy and music—incorporated into an atmosphere of fair-ground magic.

When: A mad midsemester night. Where: Beneath the pines.

On Saturday night the Moulton Union will play host to the fourth annual "Midsemester Night's Dream", an evening its organizers hope will prove one of food, fun and excitement.

According to Student Activities Coordinator Bill Fruth this year's program "should be a lot of fun." Saturday night's activities include a performance by Boston comedian Earl Reed, music by campus bands, a casino run by the Inter-fraternity Council, face painting by members of Struggle and Change, tarot card readings by the International Club, and several game booths and food stalls.

The evening's program will commence at 9 pm, Saturday. The entrance fee of three dollars will include access to all acts, food tickets and play money for use in the casino.

The significant change in this year's program from previous years is a change in the allocation of space to the various activities. Fruth said, "After evaluation of last year's program, we have made changes in the physical layout."

Four student bands will take turns performing in the Maine Lounge. According to Fruth the bands were allocated Maine instead of Lancaster Lounge because the former is a "larger room with more space for dancing."

The music starts at 9:30 pm with "John and Gabe". "John and Gabe" will be followed by "The Gresson LeRays", "Nick, Marshall, Tony, Lucas, Genevieve" and "The Missing Hitlites".

Meanwhile, downstairs in the Dining Room, members of the IFC and other members of the organizing committee will be dealing the cards in a makeshift casino. Russian roulette, poker and blackjack will constitute some of the options available to gamblers. The big winners can prize their paper winnings to changes by participating in an auction to be held at 1 am. All prizes are donations from various groups.

Booths open throughout the night include tarot card readings and a "Masque and Gown" production. In addition, Struggle and Change will hold face painting sessions from 10-11 pm and the Bowdoin Women's Association will play "Twister" in the Pub. Upstairs, the Newman Society will run a "Balloon Pop."

Also performing in the Pub will be Bowdoin's two acapella groups, The Meddiebumpsters and Miscellania.

Featured in Lancaster Lounge from 10 pm will be Boston Comedy Club performer Earl Reed. According to recent reviews, Reed boasts a

(Continued on page 13)

Bargain basement of used books begins in Union cloakroom

ANGELA DAILE
ORIENT Staff

No longer will there be a need to throw that used Calculus book away or to abandon it upon a dusty bookshelf. Why? Next year the Bowdoin Used Book Store (BUBS) will open for business.

Aware of the need for used books, sophomores Lindsay Wiersma, Lisa Kane and Todd Bland banded together to make their interest in starting a secondhand bookstore at Bowdoin a reality. According to Wiersma, the group thought that BUBS was "something this school needed since the Moulton Union Bookstore doesn't specialize in second hand books... books are expensive... we're offering the same books at reduced rates."

Taking the initiative, Wiersma, Kane and Bland wrote a proposal to the administration during the fall semester outlining their plans for a second hand bookstore. They successfully convinced the administration that they were serious about their idea. As a result, the administration granted them the use of the coat room across from the banking machine in the Moulton Union.

After spring break, the group will begin collecting books. At the time of the collections, a slip of paper with the student's name, mailing address and student I.D. number will be placed inside of each book.

If the book is sold next fall, the money amount will be recorded. After books for classes are bought, each student will receive a check for the full amount of his or her books sold. Students seeking to sell their books will own them for up to one year if not sold, after which time they will become additions to the BUBS collection.

BUBS will sell books at two thirds of their original price. Out of the money collected, BUBS will keep 15% as commission. Kane stressed, however, that BUBS "is not a profit seeking venture." She said that for their work she, Bland and Wiersma will be "paid like student jobs, maybe less."

Bland said that they will "get paid on an hourly basis for the amount of work we put in." Unlike ordinary campus jobs, however, students will be "in charge." Therefore, the three, and especially Wiersma, hope to involve other people in order to carry the project through.

According to Bland, "profits will go back into the store" and possibly towards "student benefits." Since the group still has to pay for publicity and Physical Plant for bookshelves, Bland said they "don't expect profits for a long while."

Wiersma, Kane and Bland are still in the process of working with the business office and Physical Plant to work out the details of their venture. After spring break however, the group hopes to start advertising and begin collecting.

This spring is the most important time for the collection of books. According to Wiersma, "How we do in the spring will determine how the bookstore will be run."

She continued, "Students we've talked to already about the idea have been really positive."

Wiersma added that eventually BUBS hopes to provide pleasure reading material for students as well as t-shirts with the BUBS logo.

They stressed that Ana Brown, Assistant Dean of Students has been supportive as their advisor. Brown said, "I think it's a great idea."

Li Zongjun addresses the state of Chinese literature on Wednesday night. Photo by Mary Ann Lai.

Chinese literature discussed

MARSHALL CARTER
ORIENT Staff

In the twelve years since the end of the Cultural Revolution, Chinese literature has changed dramatically, according to Li Zongjun and Zhang Longxi.

As part of the Symposium on Chinese Culture Today, Zongjun and Longxi addressed a crowd of about twenty five in Daggett Lounge Wednesday night. They spoke of the increasing variation and level of interest of Chinese literature since the lifting of communist restrictions.

Zongjun, a Fulbright Professor of Chinese Language and Literature at Bowdoin, spoke first about the literature of China. In a closely related topic, Zhang spoke of literary theory in modern China. Zhang is Professor of English Language at Peking University, and is currently studying Comparative Literature at Harvard University.

Previous to the modern period of literature in China, most writing was mixed down in politics. Its function was mostly of an educational nature and it placed little or no emphasis upon entertainment or enjoyment.

In Li's opinion, the literature "stressed too much on the education." He said the literature itself was about plot and morals and rarely "penetrated into the minds of the characters—the inner workings of man were pushed aside."

Much of that has since changed with the new literature. The end of the ten-year Cultural Revolution in 1976 marked the beginning of the modern area.

Zongjun stated that there are three main types of modern Chinese literature. The first, entitled "wound" or "scar" writing, displays the mental troubles caused by the repression of the Communist regime in China. The second type relies largely on introspection and retrospection about internal troubles of the writers. The third type was what Zongjun termed "variety" stories. These deal with larger issues and oftentimes bring out previously hushed issues such as sex.

Professor Zhang's lecture frequently overlapped Zongjun's. Zhang said prior to the Cultural Revolution, the majority of literature was predictable, cohering to strict party line guidelines. Foreign literature was translated into Chinese, but it always had a Soviet-written critical preface. This classified the work as revolutionary or counter-revolutionary, or more simply, as good or bad

AL MAURO
ORIENT Contributing Editor

Michael Dukakis and George Bush swept the Maine caucuses held over the weekend, while Jesse Jackson made a surprisingly strong showing, taking second in the Democratic race.

Caucuses were held statewide on Feb. 26 for the Republicans and Feb. 28 for the Democrats. Brunswick's Republican caucus, however, is to take place March 12.

Unofficial results, with 80 percent of the precincts reporting, give Dukakis 42 percent of the delegates to the convention, Jackson 28 percent, Simon four percent, Gephardt three percent, Gore two percent, Hart one percent, and uncommitted 20 percent.

However, popular vote totals gave Jackson 31 percent to Dukakis' 36 percent.

In Brunswick, 74 delegates to the May 13-15 state convention were selected in seven districts Sunday afternoon. Dukakis won 34 delegates, Jackson got 23, Simon took 2 and 15 delegates were given to uncommitted.

Carolyn Welch, outgoing chairman of the Democratic Town Committee, said there were no real surprises in the way the caucusing went. She estimated there were 400 persons participating in the caucuses in Brunswick. Welch said that Bowdoin students were well represented in the process.

President of the College, A. LeRoy Gresson was elected chair of the caucus, something Welch said is almost a tradition.

Due to problems in scheduling a meeting place, the Republican caucus in Brunswick will not be held until March 12. Carmel Davenport, chairman of the Republican Town Committee said Brunswick is not the only area to hold the Republican caucus after February 26 when most others were held.

Polls have shown Vice-President George Bush the easy winner in the state and Davenport thinks that might influence the Brunswick caucus.

Mike Smith '89, president of the Students for Bush campaign on campus said his organization, comprised of about 10 students, plans to participate in the March 12 caucus.

Smith said his group has been working around campus to inform students about Bush's campaign and has also been working with the Brunswick organization. Smith also serves as co-chair for the town committee.

Scott Townsend '89, co-chair of Sen. Robert Dole's campaign in the area said that the later date of the caucus probably will not help his candidate. "The fact that the results from other caucuses are already known will further skew the results against the other candidates," said Townsend.

Persons interested in participating in the caucus may register to vote at the caucus from 9-10 a.m. Students from out of state may change their residence and vote in the caucus and non-aligned voters may register to vote Republican. However, persons may not switch party affiliation the day of the caucus.

Symposium addresses modern China

LISA KANE
ORIENT Staff

The Asian Studies Program is sponsoring a series of events on the topic of "Chinese Culture Today" from February 28th to March 9th.

The events, made possible by a grant awarded by the Melon Foundation, began with a showing of the film "The Yellow Earth" last Sunday at the Tontine Mall. This film portrayed the predicament of the peasant class during the time of the Communist Liberation.

On Monday Daggett Lounge provided the setting for a symposium entitled "Who is the Audience?". Senior Asian Studies majors Larry Martin, Rob Millis and Leslie Stone all spoke on the role of culture in Chinese society.

Li Zongjun, Fulbright Professor at Bowdoin, and Zhang Longxi, a Professor at Peking University currently studying at Harvard, led the symposium on Wednesday night. They lectured on the topic of "Literature and Literary Thinking".

The Asian Studies Department has scheduled more events for next week. The Tontine Mall will feature "The Black Cannon Incident", a film about corruption among the officials of China, at 3:00 pm Sunday.

On Monday Judith Shapiro, recognized for her co-writing of the Son of the Revolution with her husband, will speak at 7:30 pm in Daggett Lounge. In her lecture "After the Nightmare", Shapiro will share her insights into what is currently happening with politics and culture in China.

Following this event Sun Lung-Kee, Professor of History at Memphis State University, will present the final lecture. The lecture, entitled "The Deep Structure of Chinese Culture" will be held on Wednesday in Daggett Lounge at 7:30 pm.

The purpose of this series of events is to expose and inform the Bowdoin College community of issues pertaining to modern Chinese culture. According to Stone these events also mark "a celebration of the Asian Studies Department, since we are here and growing fast."

Asian Studies was only officially recognized by the College as a major this year. Currently there are sixteen junior and senior majors in the Department. The major is interdisciplinary in nature and requires language study.

The increased fascination with the various cultures of Asia is a growing trend all over the country. In the last couple of years Bowdoin has responded to this heightened interest by hiring more faculty and offering more classes on the subject.

BIG RED Q PRINTING

next to the College

- stationery
- resumes
- posters
- newsletters

212E Maine Street
Brunswick

729-4840

LSAT

BE OVER 40 AND
LOVE IT!

Kaplan's LSAT prep course helps more students score "over 40" than any other test prep firm anywhere. Call.

KAPLAN
STANLEY H. KAPLAN EDUCATIONAL CENTER LTD.

Portland area LSAT class begins 3/27. Call to reserve your place. (617) 964-TEST collect.

Typing Word Processing

Term Papers

Class Notes

Resumes

Cover Letters

and more

Bayside
CopyWorks

Tel. 729-6992

Student discount with I.D. Free local pick-up & delivery.
Fast, Professional, Affordable

WINTER • SPRING • SUMMER • FALL

STUDY FOR ONE YEAR OR LESS AT OXFORD

Several Colleges of Oxford University have invited WISC to recommend qualified students to study under the tutorial system as Visiting Students or Associate Students for one year or for one or two terms. Upper Sophomore status is required, and graduate study is available.

Integrated student housing, social activities, tours offered by WISC. A special summer session is directed by WISC.

Past student evaluations available.

INTERN IN WASHINGTON SUMMER 1988

Pre-professional program: internships in Congress, the media, the White House, think tanks, etc. Related courses in Government or Journalism.

The Washington International Studies Center
Room 713A, 901 Six Street SW
Washington, DC 20024
(202) 337-9378/9379
(EO/AA)

Pat's got your number

Union veteran works for the students

KEVIN WESLEY
ORIENT In-Depth Editor

On any given weeknight, the line of students clamoring for a meal in the Moulton Union can stretch past the mailboxes in the next room. Yet somehow, with blinding efficiency, a bespectacled figure will clear the hallways and fill the stomachs of the hungry crowd.

Many students know her simply as Pat, and in fact as part of a trivia contest a few years ago, contestants had to find out what her last name was.

Pat Pye, a veteran of 14 and 1/2 years in the Bowdoin Dining Service, says the students that have filtered into her life have kept her young. "I like young people," Pye said. "I've met a lot of good friends who've kept in touch over the years."

Whether it be punching in ID with her two sons and two daughters, she is thrice a grandmother.

Pye, a slender woman with blonde hair neatly tucked under her "Bowdoin" cap, sits at the Union entrance, collecting ID numbers every evening from 5 to 6:15 p.m. While she occasionally has to ask a student for an ID number, she has many of students' faces and numbers tucked into her mind.

As the lines pile up in the Union, she can glance into the sea of faces and quickly punch in the numbers, expediting the entire process.

Pye has no idea how many of the numbers she knows by memory, but downplays her feat. "It's not that big a deal, especially when you do it five nights a week."

"We used to have a checklist," she explained, "and when we went to the computer, I said, 'Oh, no.' Now, it just clicks the minute I look at you."

She also said people have been very understanding of the new ID policies that have gone into effect this year. "They've been very good about it. Even if I know they're number a and name they'll show they're ID."

Working the entire time at the Union, always on the night shift, Pye has grown fond of the smaller familial atmosphere. She says the students have always been pleasant and amiable with her. "If you don't give the students a problem, they don't give you a problem," she said.

When asked why she prefers to work the night shift, Pye said, "I'm not a morning person, so this is great for me."

"You get to know the students better in the evening than in the daytime. It's more casual, not as hectic."

Pat Pye. Staff photo.

She also prefers the atmosphere in the Moulton Union over that in Wentworth Hall. "It's not as rigid here as at the Tower."

Pye also has gotten lots of laughs from her customers and coworkers while on the job. She recalled several years ago when a group of male students streaked through the Union wearing nothing but ski masks. When security personnel asked Union workers if they saw who the streakers were, an older woman said, "No, I never got up to their face."

Pye is quick to pick up on her students' needs, especially when students are stressed or pressured. "You can definitely tell when it's exam time," she explained. "I try to make them smile if they're down."

Her supportive tendencies also stretch to the Bowdoin playing fields, especially the hockey rink. An avid fan of Polar Bear hockey, Pye can often be seen in the kitchen area listening to a game on WBOR.

"I love hockey," she said. "They guys are great ... and great to feed."

With a laugh she added, "They never complain about what we feed them."

J-Board

(Continued from page two)

hearing to ensure that the line of questioning remains in order.

A student advocate would serve as one of the two character witnesses that a candidate is presently allowed to have during his or her J-Board hearing. Shepherd considered the idea of student advocates a good one but he also expressed some reservations.

Shepherd said, "I like the idea of student advisors as long as they're properly trained and don't turn into lawyers at the hearing... I think they'll be helpful as supporters of the candidate and to the dean."

The J-Board is currently considering these reforms in conjunction with the Exec Board. In addition, the J-Board is reviewing its overall procedures to ensure that its practices are in accordance with the preparation information given to a candidate about to face the board and with the constitution of the Student Assembly.

As it stands now, there are certain, unwritten but practiced procedures which are not wholly compatible with what is laid down in the student constitution. It is hoped that these practices will be officially incorporated into Article IX. Shepherd said that there are some details "not officially encoded in the student constitution right now" and that it is necessary to "put an official stamp on them".

After the review of its present procedures, the J-Board will present its findings to the Exec Board and Lewallen. If these findings entail the necessity of amending any part of the honor code, Lewallen will in turn present them to the faculty for any such changes hinge upon the approval of the faculty numbers or concocting chocolate shakes, Pat feels being a friend for the students is the most important part of her job. She's been rewarded with birthday and Christmas cards from students who have graduated as many as ten years ago.

Campus Profiles

A native and resident of Bath, Pye lives with her daughter, the youngest of four children. Along

ARMY & NAVY SALE

DATE: MARCH 9 and 10

LOCATION: ZETA PSI

9:00 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Genuine U.S. & European Surplus:

Wool, West German, British, French Pants - $15

U.S. Navy Wool Middys and Peacoats - $10-$30

Full length Raincoats and Trench Coats - $6-$15

U.S., British, French, Italian Wool Sweaters - $8-$15

Heavy Cotton, 6-pocket Field Pants - U.S., Dutch, West German - $7-$15

Down Feather Mummy Sleeping Bags - $20-$30

Wool Blankets, Gloves, Hats, Scarfs and lots, lots, lots more!

ENTERTAINMENT

Campus bands perform live tomorrow night

LIZZ MILLAN

ORIENT Asst. Editor

If you're wondering what to do this weekend, there are at least four good reasons to head over to the Union on Saturday. This weekend, Bowdoin will do its part to raise money for United Way, and four campus bands have volunteered their time to perform for this event. Each band will play for about an hour.

The duo, John and Gabe will perform. Who are John and Gabe? you may wonder—Gabe Dorman and John Casertano, both '91. Both play guitar, and according to Ruth-erford Hayes and Holly Varian, both of whom have seen them perform at Psi Upsilon, "are great!" John plays electric guitar while Gabe performs on an acoustic.

What brought them together? Gabe cited the lack of anything else to do as the primary motivating force. As John lives on the third floor of Winthrop and with Gabe down on the first floor, it seemed a convenient merge of talent. Practice is also convenient as they do so in the lounge of their dorm.

Because both performers share similar musical interests, choosing material is no problem. "We both like the Grateful Dead, the Beatles, CSN, Neil Young, we have the same musical taste," Gabe said.

Their main objective is to have fun; they like to keep things informal. "John and Gabe have a very mellow attitude when they're playing, you can tell they only play songs that they really like—they have fun," Holly Varian said. With John leading and Gabe providing the rhythm—fun is not the only by-product, great music is produced as well.

Both have had prior musical experience. Their Bowdoin careers took off last semester when they opened for White Beluga at Delta Sigma. Because both are members of Psi Upsilon, they perform there quite often. Not only do they have musical experience, they have a group—Dave Herman is their one and only groupy. Perhaps after their performance this weekend, he will be joined by others.

And, speaking of others, there are three other bands that will perform on Saturday. The Missing Hittites have been around for over a year and will be cranking out tunes on Saturday. Members are Tim Armstrong, '90, Christian Meyers, '90, Al Macintyre, '90, and Hedrick Allen, '89.

"We have definitely improved since last year. We've all learned together and grown together," Armstrong said. Meyers is now an experienced bass player and Allen has learned how to play the drums. Macintyre provides the lead vocals, as well as accompanying Armstrong's guitar playing.

The band does not share similar musical tastes. Allen is into hard-core punk, while Macintyre likes the older punk. Christian is a follower of avant garde while Armstrong's interests range from rap to jazz. The music they play lies somewhere in the middle of each of these areas.

"We know each other's tastes, we try to find a middle ground between each of our tastes. It's hard to believe that there is a middle ground, but we find it," Armstrong said.

On Saturday, they plan to play some original music combined with some rock covers from the '60's and '70's.

Continuing with the '60's and '70's music will be The Greasin' Leroy's. Freshmen Chris Linkas, Chris Brown, Josh Singer and "Tony" will be making their Bowdoin College debut. "Tony" and Singer have previous college band experience. They were a part of the now defunct Dry Rush. Linkas and Brown each have a musical background, but have never played for a Bowdoin audience.

The group has been together since November. "Chris and Josh were jamming one day and asked me to get out my bass. I did and we started to play," guitarist Brown said. Next, they formed "Tony", the drummer and the band was formed.

The name of the band is the product of a collaborated effort of all four members. "We wanted a topical name, like Dry Rush, we kicked around a bunch of different names and then Josh came up with The Greasin' Leroy's. We've been through lots of names," Brown said. Stool and the Samples and Cat Food are a few that have come and gone.

This Saturday, the Greasin' Leroy's will perform a mixture of cover songs from the '60's and '70's as they have not had time to prepare their own music.

The Missing Hittites. Staff photo.

Another band has also been pressed for time. This band has not even had time to come up with a name, although they have been together all semester. "We jumped in at the last minute, we haven't had time to prepare much," guitarist Nick Szatkowski, '90 said.

What's in a name anyway? The band has plenty of talent. Joining Szatkowski on electrical guitar is Marshall Sax, '88, with bass player Lucas to even out the sound. The beat is provided by Tony on drums. This band also has a singer—

Gonewie Anderson, '89.

It's a good thing there is plenty of talent, for the band does not boast of much else. "We don't have a set style," Szatkowski said. They are essentially a jazz funk band, with a bit of blues thrown in.

On Saturday, they will play mainly cover songs, "so people have something to identify with," Szatkowski said.

They may not have a name or a specific style, but each member brings to the band a good deal of experience. This experience will make for an entertaining debut in Saturday's Midsemester Madness.

Student's paintings selected for exhibition

ELIZABETH MULLEN

ORIENT Contributor

Steve Albert, '88, recently had his painting, "2 West C.T. Looking North" accepted into the Washington and Jefferson National Painting Show, a juried exhibition of artists from across the country.

The exhibit will take place April 1-26, 1988, at the Olin Fine Arts Center Gallery of Washington and Jefferson College in Washington, Pennsylvania. Albert's painting was one of only 60 paintings selected from over 400 entries submitted, principally by artists working at graduate and professional levels. The show was juried by painter Mary Weidner and Professor Paul B. Edwards, Chair of the Department of Art at Washington and Jefferson College.

Steve Albert, who is presently an honors candidate in studio art at Bowdoin, completed the painting during the fall semester, 1987, as an independent project in his Painting III course. According to Chairman of studio art, Mark Wethli, "2 West C.T. Looking North," like other paintings by the artist, is characterized by its careful execution, its unconventional perspective, and its interplay of representational elements and abstract design. While its image of rooms and doorways recede into depth, for instance, the painting is equally dependent on its use of bold, flat shapes in a highly reductive, two-dimensional composition. Within this bold pattern the painting also integrates passages of exacting detail, such as the reflections and wood grain in a hardwood floor or the individual petals of a flower. The balance and contrast of these elements generates a visual tension that creates a poised, understated sense of mystery."

When asked about the painting, Albert replied: "The inspiration for this piece came to me during a conference when, bored to tears, I started daydreaming. I looked at the door and this whole thing started to unfold. There was the straight door looking straight at me and these very massive sort of wall supports, and then the hallway and then another room. And so I capitalized on the design which I had in front of me. I sketched it out in my notebook margin—where most of my ideas actually take birth—and then I copied it from memory, adding a few things."

While the general form and "dorm-like" quality closely resemble the original room, many of the elements of the painting come from other aspects of Albert's life at Bowdoin. The wooden stool in the foreground is taken from the studios of the Visual Arts Center, while the armchair in the background comes from Albert's fraternity. In this manner, "2 West C.T. Looking North" becomes an amalgamation of Albert's experiences, and his personal associations connected to these places come across in the intimate tone of this painting.

In his works, Albert stresses the need for a balance between highly refined elegance and sensuality, realism and intimacy. His ability to communicate depth of feeling and emotion through his highly polished medium reflects the level of personal risk and involvement with which Albert invests his work. His blend of control and emotion was influenced by several different elements, including Japanese paintings, and their interplay of order and pathos. Albert strives for a happy medium between the flat formalism of Mondrian and the sensual order of Hoffman.

Continually searching for a balance between flatness and sensuality, Albert studied the work of California artist Bruce Cohen whose large scale and flat tones give his paintings a two-dimensional, design-like feeling. Albert liked Cohen's flatness and skewed perspective, but chose to scale his own work down in size and base his paintings on real places. As a result, Albert's paintings have an intimate, almost confessional quality to them. Another great influence on Albert's work has been Bowdoin's Chairman of studio art, Mark Wethli, whose work captures the elegant sensuality so essential to Albert's philosophy.

Encouraged by his recent success, Steve Albert plans to try his luck in California upon graduating in May 1988 and will apply to several art schools on the West coast.

"2 West C.T. Looking North" by Steve Albert '88.

N.Y. playwright discusses craft

LISA WLODARSKI

ORIENT Contributor

Last Thursday evening, in a lecture entitled "The Act of Playwrighting," Stuart Spencer, a playwright from New York City, treated his audience to some insights into the field of playwrighting.

The goal of the lecture, Spencer said, was to provide an overview of playwrighting from an artistic standpoint and to briefly discuss technique. He proposed to address these topics in the context of playwrighting as both an art and a career.

Spencer began with a discussion of playwrighting as an art, saying: "The most indicative thing about playwrighting is the way the word itself is spelled...plays are not so much written as wrought...they are very much hammered, nailed, and shaped."

There are three kinds of writing, Spencer maintained. Quoting Aristotle, he said that the writer may choose to imitate by narration, or speak in his own person, or change, or may give each of his characters a form. The latter, he pointed out, is drama. It is action that is played out before us.

Spencer then went on to compare and contrast different types of writing. First, he described Arthur Miller's philosophy of the difference between play and theater. In Miller's Crucible, there is a theme and a conflict. While any entertainment can be theater, a play must have an identifiable dramatic conflict. Like a bridge, it must have a structure. However, if the complete (Continued on page six)

Playwright

(continued from page five)
story is told, it is not drama but narrative.

On plays versus films, Spencer maintained that film generally tells a story visually through physical activity. Visual elements, not dialogue, are most important on the big screen.

Prose, on the other hand, said Spencer, "examines a moment through intellectual means," as opposed to being entertainment.

Drama, he concluded, "is both these things; physical yet ephemeral." It is immediate, as it does not reflect on the past, except by implication. He cited Tennessee Williams' work as a particularly good example of this form.

He then turned to the subject of "Playwrighting as a Career, as we sometimes laughingly refer to it in New York City."

Spencer first reminisced briefly about the Golden Age, when a producer would think nothing of simply putting on a playwright's play. Now, however, he pointed out, economic hardships create a major stumbling block in the process. Often the sum cost of producing a play will prevent a producer from taking a chance on a new playwright.

In closing, Spencer received questions, most of them pertaining to the creative impulse of crafting a play. He maintained that it was impossible to speak in the abstract, apart from a specific idea. His impulses come from different places and people. In order to create a play, one has to be possessed with the message to be conveyed, and the details will fall into place.

Spencer continued sharing his treatises on playwrighting in a workshop the following weekend (February 26-28).

Sights and Sounds: March 4 - 10

FRIDAY, MARCH 4
7:30 and 10:00 p.m. — The BFVS presents The Pink Panther Strikes Again in Smith Auditorium. Admission is $1.

SATURDAY, MARCH 5
7:30 and 10:00 p.m. — The BFVS presents A Shot In The Dark in Smith Auditorium. Admission is $1.

9:00 — 2:00 a.m. — A Midsemester's Night Dream will be held in the Moulton Union.

SUNDAY, MARCH 6
3:00 p.m. — The Foreign Film Series continues with Don Segundo Sombra, Spanish with English subtitles, in Smith Auditorium, Sills Hall.

3:00 p.m. — A Small Town Named Hibiscus, a film about the devastating effects of the cultural revolution in a remote town, is sponsored by the Symposium on Chinese Culture Today. The film will be shown free of admission at the Evening Star Cinema, Tontine Mall.

3:00 p.m. — A Gallery Talk, "Max Beckmann: Masterprints", will be given by Larry D. Lutchmansingh, associate professor of art, in the Walker Art Building.

7:30 p.m. — A lecture on "Jung and the Mystical Tradition" will be given by Harry S. Sky, rabbi, Temple Beth-El, Portland. It will be held in the Faculty Room in Massachusetts Hall.

MONDAY, MARCH 7
12:30 p.m. — The Music at Noon and a Half series will conclude with a recital given by violinist Elise Straus-Bowers with pianist Dale W. Arndt. The program includes works by Mozart, Leclair, Grieg, and Moni.

TUESDAY, MARCH 8
8:00 p.m. — Foodfight, a musical cabaret dramatizing women's obsession with food, weight, and body image will perform in Kresge

Auditorium, VAC. Foodfight features three multitalented actress/singers with piano accompaniment. Admission is $4 to the public, $2 to non-Bowdoin students and senior citizens, and free with a Bowdoin I.D.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 9
1:00 p.m. — A Gallery talk, "Athena and Arethusa: Some Thoughts on the Ancient Coins at Bowdoin and the Failure of Athenian Democracy," will be presented by Charles C. Calhoun, editor, Bowdoin magazine.

7:00 p.m. — Artist Martha Diamond, whose paintings are currently on display in the Museum of Art, will give a slide lecture on her work in Beam Classroom, VAC.

7:30 p.m. — The Dan E. Christie Mathematical Lecture, "Supermarket Bar Codes and Management Science", will be presented by John D.C. Little, professor, Sloan School of Management, M.I.T., in Room 202, Adams Hall.

THURSDAY, MARCH 10
7:30 p.m. — A concert of music for oboe and electronics by Libby Van Cleave '79, doctoral candidate, Yale University, with accompaniment by Jack Vees on the electric bass, director of Yale Electronic Music Studio, and Naydene Bowder, harpsichordist. Concert will be held in the Walker Art Building.

8:00 p.m. — Author Andrea Dworkin will give a lecture, "Pornography and Civil Rights", in Kresge Auditorium. The lecture is part of a week-long series of events devoted to the discussion of women's issues.

EXHIBITIONS
"Martha Diamond: Paintings": Exhibited in the Bowdoin Museum's 20th-Century Gallery, much of the work was inspired by the architectural environment of Manhattan. It will run through March 20.

"Max Beckmann: Masterprints" is on display in the Walker Art Building. Temporary Exhibition Gallery through March 20.

"Cedric Chatterley: Photography" opened March 1 in the John A. and Helen P. Becker Gallery, Walker Art Building. The exhibit will be on display through April 1.

Student works from the fall semester hang in the Visual Arts Center.

"The History of the Pejepscot Region" exhibit is on display at the Pejepscot Museum, 159 Park Row, Hours are Monday-Fridays, 10:00 a.m. - 3:00 p.m.

PERFORMANCES

February 24—March 13 — Painting Churches, a play by Tina Howe and directed by Evan Yionoulis, will be presented at the Portland Performing Arts Center, 25A Forest Ave., Portland. Call 774-0465 for times and ticket information.

March 15 — 8:00 p.m. — Frank Zappa performs at the Cumberland County Civic Center. Call the box office, 207-775-3458, or Teletron, 1-800-382-8080. Reserved seats are $16.50.

March 10, 11, 12 — "Johanna Boyce and the Cal' Women", a performance in which Johanna Boyce investigates the common, the heroic, and the bizarre with films, slides, text, music and dance. At the Baxter Gallery of the Portland School of Art, 619 Congress Street in Portland. Call 773-2562 for tickets and further information.

MOVIES

Evening Star Cinema (Tontine Mall)

Empire of the Sun, showing at 6:45 and 9:25 p.m.

Cinemas Four (Cooks Corner)

Good Morning Vietnam, showing at 7:00 and 9:00 p.m.

Shoot to Kill, showing at 9:10 p.m.

Three Men and a Baby, showing at 7:10 p.m.

Moonstruck, showing at 7:15 and 9:15 p.m.

Nickelodeon Cinemas (1 Temple St., Portland)

The Last Emperor

Serpent and the Rainbow

Fatal Attraction

Ironweed

A Night in the Life of Jimmy Reardon

Broadcast News

Foodfight.

Brunswick. The exhibit provides a comprehensive treatment of the area's historical developments

Summer at Brandeis University

Small Classes Taught by Brandeis Faculty

Close to the Excitement of Cambridge/Boston...

Information, catalog and application:

Brandeis University Summer School

Waltham, MA 02254, (617) 736-3424

COASTAL OPTICIANS

138 Maine St., Brunswick 729-4481

COASTAL OPTICIANS ANNOUNCES VUARNET 1988

MONDAY MARCH 7TH THROUGH SATURDAY MARCH 12TH

GET A FREE VUARNET 1988 SHIRT WITH THE PURCHASE OF ANY REGULARLY PRICED PAIR OF VUARNET 1988 SUNGLASSES

BE READY FOR SPRING BREAK WITH A NEW PAIR OF VUARNET 1988 SUNGLASSES AND A NEW FREE SHIRT

OFFER WHILE SUPPLIES LAST

COASTAL OPTICIANS ON DOWNTOWN MAINE STREET ALSO HAS A WIDE SELECTION OF OTHER SUNGLASSES COME TAKE A LOOK

1933 GROWLER
4 ISSUES
BEYOND CLASSIC, CHERRY CONDITION.
415-532-3260-WELLS

Part-Time -
Home Mailing Program!
Excellent income!
Detail, send self-addressed, stamped envelope.
WEST,
Box 5877, Hulsdale, N.J. 07205

FITNESS INSTRUCTOR
for Modern Club that includes Nautilus, Aerobics.
Morning hours available,
membership inclusive.
Call 442-8498

CRUISE SHIPS
NOW HIRING. M/F

Summer & Career Opportunities
(Will Train). Excellent pay plus
world travel. Hawaii, Bahamas,
Caribbean, etc. CALL NOW
206-736-0775 Ext. 544F

76 UNION STREET BRUNSWICK CORSICAN

The Corsican Restaurants of Brunswick and Freeport welcome the N.E. Men's Swimming Championships.

Come in for your favorite pizza,
calzone, homemade chowder and desserts.

729-8117

THE BRUNSWICK

FLOWER SHOP

729-8895
216A Maine St.
Mon.-Sat. 9:30-6

We Deliver
Wire Service

Centrally located across from Bowdoin College

KATE'S STORE AND DELI

89 Harpswell Street

BEER - SODA - 10" and 16" pizza
convenience items

8 A.M. to 9 P.M. Mon thru Sat 9 A.M. to 8 P.M. Sunday

DU ARS

Listen to the broadcast live from the Volpe Athletic Complex
on WBOR 91.1 FM in
Brunswick

Hockey Team

GOOD LUCK BEARS!

TAKE IT TO 'EM IN THE
HOCKEY PLAYOFFS!!!

BEER WINE KEGS CHEESE ICE

Cask and Ken

26 Bath Road, Brunswick, 725-4711 Mon. - Sat., 10 to 6

BICYCLES

Fuji, Univega, Peugeot, Trek, Shogun

PROMPT, EXPERT SERVICE • CUSTOM BUILT WHEELS

EXERCISE EQUIPMENT & ROWING MACHINES

ALL - TERRAIN BICYCLES & CROSS COUNTRY SKIS

TRADE INS & USED BIKES

CYCLING CLOTHING AND HELMETS • CUSTOM BICYCLES SET UP

Until March 1

Wed. - Sat., 10 - 5:30

Friday Nites till 8

After March 1

Mon. - Sat., 10 - 5:30

442-7002

ROUTE 1 WOOLWICH
(ACROSS FROM MACELMAN SUBARU & PEUGEOT)

LOOKOUT POINT HOUSE

Harpwell Maine

(207) 833-5509

WINTER SPECIAL

2 days - 2 nights

MAP plan - double occupancy

2 people - $150.00

or

Rooms by the month

on the sea

eight miles from Bowdoin

443-1400

The Portland Connection

NEW!

For your next trip to and from
Portland Jetport.

With this ad
receive $3.00 off our low price of $20.00
round trip
for only $17.00!

For your Spring Break
convenience.

Jet Limo - 443-1400

or contact your local travel agency.

Babson bows to Bowdoi

ERIC PALMQUIST
ORIENT Circulation Manager

There were less than two minutes left in the Polar Bear's season. They trailed AIC 3-1 on a lone goal by Mark Smyth, prompting many unfaithful fans to make their way out the doors to stagnant parties or color t.v. sets. They had won 17 games during the year, but it was all about to end in a bitter flash that had the remaining fans, and the players themselves, stunned and silent. The seniors on the squad began recalling the past—the '86 championship, the 20 win seasons—and prepared to close the book on their careers.

Then lightning struck, and another chapter was written. Goalie Brad Rabitor began his sprint out of net, but before he could reach the bench Tom Aldrich slapped one home off feeds from Steve Ilkos and Steve Thornton, pulling the Bears within one. There was 1:44 remaining.

Then, as Rabitor was again leaving the ice, Ilkos, showing all the determination of a senior, skated alone up the right side. As soon as the puck touched his stick it appeared that there was only one thing on his mind — scoring. He deftly moved past one defender, fought off another, and wristed one into the upper left hand corner of the net as he was being sandwiched to the ice. The crowd roared as he lay there, hurt yet victorious, having led himself and the Bears from disaster to glory.

Into overtime they went.

The Yellow Jackets were stunned, and they skated like zombies. For six minutes the Polar Bears pummeled the net, while Rabitor stood uncontested at the other end, resting from an outstanding game, as he had single-handedly kept the game close. Finally, Jim Pinecock nudged the puck from under the pads of goalie Mark Buckley, and the Bears were off to Babson to face the Beavers in the semifinals.

Rabitor had been brilliant against AIC, stopping 31 shots, but Coach Terry Meagher stuck to his goalie rotation, starting Steve Janas in net. The history between the two teams made the game even bigger.

The Beavers had defeated the Bears twice during the year, both by 2-1 counts. They had also made it to the ECAC finals five straight years, earning the bid last year with a dominating 6-3 win over the Polar Bears at Dayton Arena, which revenged a 6-3 loss to the Bears in the n in ECAC tournament

Photos by Lori Bodwell

'86 finals.

There is an old bit of wisdom that says you can never beat a team three times, and the Polar Bears proved it true, as they won when it counted, surviving a late rush by the Beavers to win, 3-2.

The Beavers tallied first, and looked to be on their way to the finals, when Steve Thornton scored his 16th goal of the year on a power play off a pass from Tom Aldrich to tie it up. Thomas Johansson then deflected a point shot from Jim Pincock into the net to give the Polar Bears the lead after one, 2-1.

The second period resembled the earlier contests between the teams, as both used tight checking and excellent goaltending to keep the period scoreless for 18 minutes. But Babson finally tied it up on a pretty two on one fast break, setting the stage for a dramatic third period.

The power play had left town against AIC, but it came back with a vengeance on Wednesday. After a tough call to give the Bears the man advantage, Kevin Powers took a beautiful set-up pass from Jim Pincock on a 2 on 1 break to give the Bears the lead. All they had to do was hold it and they were on their way to the finals.

Easier said than done. Janas turned away one Babson power play with brilliant saves, then, with just two minutes remaining, the Polar Bears were hit with yet another penalty. The Beavers pulled their goalie, giving them a 6 on 4 advantage for the last two minutes.

But Janas and the defense were up to the task. When Mike Cavanaugh iced the puck with eight seconds remaining the Bears were victorious, sending them to Merrimack for the ECAC championship tomorrow at 7:30.

The game with the Warriors will be no easy task, as Merrimack boasts a 30-4 record with numerous wins over Division 1 opponents. They slaughtered Salem State 7-2 to get to the final, and hold a 6-2 victory over the Polar Bears earlier in the season.

Merrimack has not lost in the ECAC all year. It will be a battle against the odds, but the AIC game proved that the Bears have something special, if only luck and determination. They will need all that and more on Saturday, and a big Bowdoin following at the game will certainly help.

 benetton

56 Main St. Freeport

Show your college I.D. on Tues., Wed., and Thurs.
and receive 10% off your purchase.

*Fragrance not included

AVOID LONG LINES THIS SUMMER.

Before you get out in the sun in your bathing suit this season, come in and get a smooth, even, natural tan. You'll look great, feel great and no one will know what your other bathing suit looks like.

Come in for 1 free tan session!

Bring your student ID for 10% discount.

Sundayz, Inc.

32 Turner St. 729-3383 (off Pleasant St., behind Big Apple)

Saturday, March 5, 1988

9 p.m. to 2 a.m.

Moulton Union

$3.00 admission

to raise money for

The United Way

-GAMES- -PRIZES-

-CASINO (bring $$$)-

-FOOD-

To the sponsors from the Bowdoin Campus and the surrounding communities:

THANK YOU for your support!!

GO BEA

1987-88 ECAC EAST
CHAMPIONSHIP
BOWDOIN

at

MERRIMACK

Saturday, March 5
at 7:30 p.m.

1987-88 Men's

SPORTS

Mike
Botelho

NHL — Bad news brawling

The other day I went to a fight and a hockey game broke out.

This familiar adage seems to characterize the sad state of professional hockey. The National Hockey League continues to linger in the Dark Ages, isolated from the civilizing influence predominant in modern society. Hockey is a sport which potentially can provide its viewers with the best in clean, exciting sports entertainment. We here at Bowdoin certainly can vouch for that. Winter Olympics is another fine example of how hockey could and should be played.

However, NHL officials have refused to do anything substantial to eliminate the power of the "goon" in professional hockey. Last Saturday, in the hallowed confines of the Boston Garden, I witnessed a game between the Boston Bruins and the Minnesota North Stars which made my stomach queasy. (The hometown team triumphed 7-4.) But because of the barbaric, repugnant nature of the first four minutes of the game.

In those first four minutes, I witnessed more head-bashing, brow-beating, and blood-spilling than skating, passing, or shooting. I thought for an instant that I had mistakenly entered a WWF main event. I had trouble focusing on any one fight since at least five occurred during that time span.

There was one point in the game where a Bruin and a North Star set up for a face-off when, without any apparent provocation, they suddenly forgot the puck, dropped their gloves, and started slugging away at one another. Does good sportsmanship mean anything in the NHL?

What's even worse is that the referees don't seem to care. During those initial minutes, two players squared off in front of the net, ready to fight. The official, standing directly in front of them, refused to intervene. In fact, he remained there for at least a minute without doing anything. Why? Did he believe that they were merely engaging in an existential discussion of life and death or asking about each other's weekend? I don't think so. But in the NHL, not very much seems to make sense.

What bothered me most about the fistcuffs that transpired that Saturday was the horrifying way in which the crowd responded to them. When the fighting broke out, the Garden fans were ecstatic and urged their favorites to bash in the heads of their North Star opponents. I felt as if I had been transported back through time to the days of the Roman Coliseum where the Romans merrily watched the lions devour their Catholic victims. I was astonished, enraged, and sickened by the ruthless nature of the

(Continued on page 12)

Women capture New England's

TOD DILLON
ORIENT Asst. Sports Editor

It's official. On Sunday the undefeated women's swim team captured the New England Div III Swimming and Diving Championships in impressive fashion. In the familiar confines of the Farley Fieldhouse pool the Bears tallied 1,182.5 points to outdistance Tufts University (1,048), Williams College (994), Amherst College (792), and MIT (728). The men host their championship, that began this morning, with the hope of turning in a solid performance of their own.

Twenty-five teams and over 360 athletes descended on the fieldhouse last weekend with hopes of leaving with the title but the young aqua-Bears squad, with 18 freshmen on the roster, proved to be too strong.

Highlighting the top performances of the meet is a difficult task indeed. Coach Butt, who was named Coach of the Year by his peers during the meet, said of his squad, "Everyone swam tremendously and really gave it their all... it was quite a performance." Despite the plethora of fine races there were some of special note.

Becky Palmer '91 earned the distinction of being the top Bowdoin performer and the third individual overall in the meet. Setting new college records in both the 100 and 200 yard breaststroke the freshman was the only individual winner for the hosts. She was not the only first place for Bowdoin though as both relay teams surprised a lot of people enroute to two solid victories. Spurred on by the strong swimming of co-captain Leslie Preston '88 in the backstroke legs the two relays upset many teams previously thought to be unbeatable.

Led by numerous season bests, the women's swim team captured the New England Division III championship. Photo by Alan Harris.

Judy Snow, another of the freshmen standouts, finished 17th overall in the individual scoring. Lowering her personal record in the 200 yard butterfly by an impressive 6 seconds the freshman captured 2nd. Holly Claiborn '91 turned in many fine races as well in the freestyle and butterfly sprints as she placed 14th overall in the individual standings.

Arguably one of the most impressive performances of the weekend was turned in by co-captain Sarah Bullock '88. Swimming in the 1650 yard freestyle Bullock swam a gutsy race besting the national qualifying standard by a mammoth 20 seconds.

What won the meet for the women was not just the fine individual performances. The key ingredient that is necessary for any championship team is depth. Firsts are fine but unless the team as a whole captures a solid number of the other places those wins go for naught.

This was evidenced in the diving competition. Lisa Jacobs '88 and Julie Asola '91 placed 6th overall, up from their 16th place finish of a year ago. All in all it was an impressive weekend performance by the women that we could expect to be duplicated in the future given the team's age and the well-above-par swimming turned in by the whole team.

The men look to this weekend's competition in search of a strong showing. Heading into the meet Williams and Amherst assume the positions of favorites. The host Bears look to be in a pack clawing for third place. Based on the team's attitude, a third place showing

(Continued on page 12)

Despite defeating Wheaton 50-40 and finishing the season 14-6, the women were denied a tournament bid. Photo by Bonnie Berryman.

Women's hoops miss playoffs

JIM ANDERSON
ORIENT Contributor

The Bowdoin women's basketball team took a roller-coaster ride through a script that would have made Rod Serling proud. For your consideration, the Bowdoin and Colby basketball teams involved in a game which Bowdoin leads 54-50 with three minutes left in regulation. Mysteriously Colby disappears and Bowdoin walks off a 72-54 victor. Also for your consideration, the Bowdoin and Wheaton teams involved in a struggle to obtain the final bid in the NIAC tournament. Bowdoin finishes with a 13-6 record, Wheaton a 12-7 record. In their only head-to-head game Bowdoin cruises to a 50-40 victory. Wheaton goes to the NIAC tourney, Bowdoin wonders how.

In Waterville last Saturday evening the Bears and Mules tangled in both teams final regular season game. Although Colby held a sub-.500 record entering for the season the game was expected to be tight. Colby, being a basketball-oriented school, offered perhaps the largest crowd the Bears had played against this year. Neither team disappointed the partisan Mule-crowd.

(Continued on page 12)

Track competes in Boston

BLAIR DILS
ORIENT Staff

The Men's and Women's Track teams had several representatives compete this weekend in their respective Div. I, II, and III New England Championships, as the teams geared up for the Division III ECAC Championships this weekend at Bowdoin (men) and Bates (women).

For the men, it was again Tod Dillon '89 and the members of the Distance Medley Relay team. Dillon placed 14th overall in the 1500m race with a time of 3:56.68, just missing the school record by a mere .68. The Distance Medley Relay team, with Steve Polikoff '88, Dan Brakewood '90, Marty Malague '90 and Dillon, ran well enough to finish 9th. This performance was very respectable considering the tough Div. I and II foes that the Polar Bears faced.

On the women's side, it was senior Tonya Bynoe and the 4x400m Relay team that excelled well at the Division III ECAC Championships this weekend at Bates. The Bears finished 12th last winter, and are looking for a solid finish in the top five.

The 4x400m team and the rest of the team now look to perform well at the Division III ECAC Championships this weekend at Bates. The Bears finished 12th last winter, and are looking for a solid finish in the top five.

The men, though, have set less lofty goals for their Championships as they look to match their 11th place finish from a year ago. The Polar Bears could easily attain these goals if solid results come from Dillon (5000), Erik Gans '88(55m Hurdles) and Damon Guterman '89(5000 Vault).

Women's mixed season ends on strong note

TONY JACCACI
ORIENT Staff

The women's varsity hockey team ended their season with a bang as they crushed U-Conn and Wesleyan last weekend. The Polar Bears began on Friday evening when they trounced a fiery U-Conn team by a score of 5-1. The black and white had no problems the following day as they decimated Wesleyan 10-4. The team finished what can truly be called a building year for the squad consists mostly of freshmen and sophomores. Coach Bobby Jones feels that the team will enjoy great success next season.

U-Conn has always been known as a tough team and they certainly lived up to their reputation last Friday as a hitting squad. Women's hockey is not a contact sport, however, and Bowdoin outskated, outhustled and outclassed the visiting team. The Polar Bears jumped out to a 4-0 lead at the end of two periods with two goals from Sheila Carroll, and one each for Petra Eaton and Liz Khan. U-Conn scored one but not to be outdone, captain Kathy McCormick scored a fifth goal for the black and white. Erin Miller had a relatively easy day in the nets as she turned away 12 shots while Bowdoin peppered the U-Conn netminder with 27 shots. The game ended in a 5-1 score in favor of the good guys.

The Polar Bears put in another strong performance the next day as they beat Wesleyan. Bowdoin hustled and played a smart game. Coach Jones felt that a high confidence level helped the team play well. "When the light goes on, we can do it," he stated.

Liz Walker ended the season in the nets for Bowdoin and like Miller the day before, the game was a walk in the park for her. Liz Khan had a hat trick on the day and Kathy McCormick shone with two of her own. The final score was 10-4 but could have easily been a bigger blowout.

The Polar Bears are a very young team and will only lose senior captain Kathy McCormick. Jones stated that McCormick was "a strong player, great captain and good all-around kid." The team will miss her next year but with Walker and Miller returning in the nets and names like Carroll, Russell, Folk, Eaton and Kahn the team will be very strong. Jones thinks that with one year of experience under their belts, this year's rookies will produce a strong, tight unit next year. The way the team closed out the season, coach Jones could very well be correct.

Botelho

(Continued from page 11)
raucous crowd. I even was tempted to leave. However, being someone who idealistic, I hoped that I would still see some good hockey played that afternoon.

Without question, the league has no intention to eliminate fighting in the NHL. Commissioner John Ziegler could easily halt fighting by making it mandatory that all who fight during the game be suspended for that game and the following one. Such measures would certainly deter the NHL's "goons" from acting up.

Unfortunately, it appears that NFL officials are content with the status quo. They are reluctant to take definitive action against fighting in professional hockey because it would diminish its popularity among its faithful entourage. I don't feel that eliminating fighting would be detrimental in any way to public interest in the NHL. On the contrary, cleaning it up will make it much more appealing to the populace.

I am no pacifist. Violence is a necessary part of many sports—football, rugby, and hockey included—however, fighting should be confined to the boxing ring, not the hockey rink. Haven't the thugs in hockey had their way for long enough? Get your act together, Commissioner Ziegler! (What does this guy do anyway?) Once professional hockey is purified of its more sordid elements, only its most outstanding qualities will remain for all true sports aficionados to see. If ECAC Division II hockey can be so successful without fighting, why can't the NHL?

Swimming

(Continued from page 11)
could be seen. Co-captain Andy Auerbach '88 summed up the team's mindset when he said, "We've been working hard and we are ready to swim well... we have had a good year and if we swim our best we will be challenging for the top spots."

Leading the men into the meet should be the captains, Auerbach and Ed Pond '88, as well as Tom Francker '89, Doug O'Brien, Dave Morey '91, and Tim Coultas '91 as they search for the title. Coach Butt exuded confidence in his charges as they taper for the meet.

First men in the pool were the divers in the preliminary rounds this morning and the waves won't subside until Sunday night's finals are over.

Basketball

(Continued from page 11)

Not until Rod Serling entered the scene that is.

As expected Bowdoin went to their talented, high-scoring front line of Nikki Comeau, Stephanie Caron and Kim Lemieux. The trio combined for a whopping 57 points and 32 rebounds. Colby chose to move the ball and look for the open shot. Both strategies worked well although Bowdoin seemed to have less difficulty scoring. Through the first twenty minutes the teams played relatively even basketball but Bowdoin went to the locker room with a 33-27 halftime lead.

The second half saw the Bowdoin lead fluctuate but never drop lower than 3 points. From the ten minute mark of the second half the teams basically took turns scoring as neither team could make a run of more than a couple of baskets. The Bears continued to dominate the inside scoring and rebounding but Colby sniped away from the outside effectively enough to keep within range.

Trailing 54-50, but having possession of the ball, with three minutes left Colby heard the eerie theme from the Twilight Zone playing. Suddenly Colby abandoned their patient game and began throwing up three pointers from everywhere. Meanwhile Bowdoin continuously beat a stand-still Colby press for easy layups and nailed 10 consecutive foul shots. When the final buzzer sounded the Bears had themselves an 18 point 72-54 victory.

Nikki Comeau paced the way with a superlative 22 point 11 rebound effort. Also starring in the game were Stephanie Caron, who scored a season-high 20 to go with 12 rebounds, and Kim Lemieux who added 15 points and 9 rebounds. The junior-trio paced Bowdoin to a fine 13-6 record this season, including a 4-0 record in CBB play.

Apparently this was not enough to impress the powers that be who choose the NIAC field. The players on the team obviously felt that they had earned a right to be in the tournament and to be overlooked in favor of a team that they had a better record than and had beaten during the year only added insult to injury. Bowdoin does have next year to look forward to however, for whatever that consolation is worth. The team loses just one player, team captain and point-guard Nancy Delaney, to graduation. With the talent and experience Bowdoin has returning for the 1988-89 year, the prospects for an even more successful season are quite good.

Pauline's Bloomers

Twilite Mall, Brunswick, 725-5952

QUALITY FLORAL SERVICE

Anniversary, Birthday, Hospital, Wedding, Sympathy, Holiday, All Occasions

Flowers, Plants & Gifts

We Deliver Wire Service

Balloons & Candles

Major Credit Cards Accepted • Open 6 days 9:00 to 6:30

LACOSTE

School of the Arts in France
Sponsored by
The Cleveland Institute of Art

Credit courses in:

Sculpture
Stone Carving
Painting
Printmaking
Self in the Environment
Drawing
Photography
French
Art History
Poetry

SUMMER SESSION

FALL SEMESTER

For Illustrated Brochure:

Foreign Studies

Cleveland Institute of Art-PCA

11141 East Boulevard

Cleveland, Ohio 44106

(216) 229-0938

STUDY ART
IN THE
SOUTH OF FRANCE

TYPISTS - Hundreds weekly
at home! Write: P.O. Box 17
Clark, New Jersey 07066

1 or 2 Females wanted immediately to share 4 bedroom furnished house at Willow Grove in Brunswick. Rent $250 a month plus one-third of utilities.
Call Marina after 1 at 725-4004

BARGAINS FOR STUDENTS!
Bargain Balcony
Boutique
55 Plus Center, Brunswick
Open Mondays, Tuesdays and
Thursdays, 10 to 3

FINAL APPLICATION DEADLINE: MONDAY, 11 APRIL 1988

Please write or call for information and application.

Fall or Spring Semester

AMERICAN MARITIME STUDIES

Accredited by
WILLIAMS COLLEGE

Taught at
MYSTIC SEAPORT MUSEUM

- ☐ Ecology
- ☐ Economics
- ☐ Biology
- ☐ History
- ☐ Literature
- ☐ American Studies
- ☐ Public Policy
- ☐ Oceanography
- ☐ Off-Shore Research

The Williams-Mystic Program offers a challenging opportunity to study in a museum of great stature and to learn with the best. Studying in a maritime museum at Mystic Seaport Museum, you can choose from outstanding maritime culture and history, well-equipped laboratory and diverse career opportunities. You can study with the best—college professors, historians, interpreters, conservationists, scientists, and marine policy. You can also develop new maritime skills and professional experience, including boat building, restoration, sailing, and cultural interpretation. You spend six days on board the schooner, R. S. The schooner is a 19th-century schooner and a genuine working vessel. The program is a unique opportunity to study in a museum of great stature and to learn with the best. Studying in a maritime museum at Mystic Seaport Museum, you can choose from outstanding maritime culture and history, well-equipped laboratory and diverse career opportunities. You can study with the best—college professors, historians, interpreters, conservationists, scientists, and marine policy. You can also develop new maritime skills and professional experience, including boat building, restoration, sailing, and cultural interpretation. You spend six days on board the schooner, R. S. The schooner is a 19th-century schooner and a genuine working vessel. The program is a unique opportunity to study in a museum of great stature and to learn with the best.

On Thursday, Friday and Saturday March 10, 11, 12 at 8:00 p.m. Johanna Boyce and the Calf Women, a modern dance company from New York City, will perform at the Baxter Gallery of the Portland School of Art in a program presented by the Portland Dance Center.

With dance, film, slides, text and music Johanna Boyce and Company will "investigate the common, the heroic, and the bizarre," according to Boyce. Of the five dances on Boyce's Portland program, three are accompanied by music and composed and performed by Boyce's husband Richard Munson. "Raising Voice," a dance for a large group of women some of whom are dancers and some who are not, exemplifies Boyce's style as a choreographer who is interested in people, in particular, women, and their differences.

COLUMBUS CLUB BOWLING BOWL

- Candlepin Bowling
- Fun and exciting
- Open Lanes:
- Monday 8 - 11 pm
- Friday 6 - 11 pm
- Saturday 1 - 11 pm
- Sunday 1 - 8 pm
- 7 Dunlop St
- (lower Maine St.
- behind J&J
- Cleaners)
- Brunswick
- 725-5241

$.90 per string

A Likely Yarn
90 UNION STREET
BRUNSWICK, ME 04011
(207) 725-2147

Soviet-American Peace Fleece is here!

CAREER SALES OPPORTUNITY

Would you like to earn $25,000 to $100,000 a year and more? Our leaders have earned in excess of $25,000 in the first year, in excess of $40,000 in the second year and over $100,000 yearly in subsequent years with our organization. We pay an initial guaranteed starting salary of up to $2000 monthly. Commissions and training allowance can increase income to the above levels and higher.

No overnight travel is required. We offer a comprehensive three year training program. Our professional sales representatives receive excellent fringe benefits. In addition to the financial rewards, we can also show that our leaders have great freedom and independence after the initial training program.

Please send a complete resume to
Mr. Jeffrey O'Hara
Northeast Planning Associates, Inc.
P.O. Box 5990
Manchester, N.H. 03108

We will contact all applicants who appear to have the appropriate qualifications.
Member of State Mutual Companies.

Boards

(Continued from page one)

in the projected cost of the science facility by about $12 million and the unexpected unused space in Hyde Cage and the Curtis Pool.

During this weekend's meetings, the Boards will cast several votes which will affect the science facility, Greason said. They will vote on whether to begin construction of the science library as a first step in construction and whether to formally commit the college to building the science facility so that the development office can begin soliciting funds from foundations. They will also consider giving approval for the college to seek federal funding for the science facility.

Greason also said the Boards will be asked to let the college administration proceed with detailed planning for the conversion of Hyde Cage and Curtis Pool into student and social space and to look into options for additional dining space. The Boards will also decide on whether to authorize fundraising for these facilities.

The Boards may not reach a final consensus on these projects this weekend since they have the option of postponing many of these decisions until their May meeting.

BWA

(Continued from page one)

women, and members of Women in Support of Bowdoin Fraternities.

Saturday night A Celebration of Women Artists at Bowdoin will be held in Kresge Auditorium. Melissa Gallander '90, Vice President of the BWA, said "It is the culmination of the whole week." Dobkin named a few of the upcoming acts: singing, dancing, poetry readings and music.

A collection of Bowdoin Women's Artwork will be exhibited throughout the week in Lancaster Lounge. There will also be displays in the Union Bookstore Window and in the Women's Resource Center.

Burnham expects a large turnout for the events. She said, "I think we have such a variety of events...everyone will be affected."

She added that this year's Women's Awareness Week "is pretty ambitious and much larger than previous ones...We had lots of help from people both on- and off-campus."

Bowdoin extended an invitation for all to attend. "It's about women but not just for women. Men are as much a part of it as women are."

Madness

(Continued from page one)

"devastating" improvisational comedy act.

In addition, several food booths will be dishing up specialties including Cajun fries, funnel cakes, ice-cream, pizza and popcorn.

The event is organized by an ad hoc committee of over 20 people representing several campus organizations and headed by Jennifer Andrus '90.

According to Fruth "this is a unique time at Bowdoin" with "everyone working together...the Union becomes a real melting pot of activity."

Now For Success. Macintosh.

Be competitive this semester. An Apple® Macintosh™ personal computer will give you the edge you need to stay ahead. Your writing and research skills enhanced, term papers will never look better.

Apple offers Bowdoin College students a tremendous advantage - a one time affordable price. Two great models to choose from:

The Macintosh Plus, which comes with one 800K drive, 1 megabyte of memory, keyboard and mouse.

And the Macintosh SE, which comes with either two built-in 800K drives, or one drive and an internal 20-megabyte hard disk. As well as a choice of keyboards.

Whichever you choose, Apple's one-time affordable student price will make it possible for you to compete more powerfully.

Purchase information is available from Brett Wickard at the computing center in Hubbard Hall. His hours are Monday, Wednesday, and Thursday 8-10 p.m. Sunday 7-10 p.m.

Bowdoin College Moulton Union Bookstore

The power to be your best.™

Apple and the Apple logo are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. Macintosh and The power to be your best are trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc.

Authorized Dealer

OPINION

Get our priorities straight

Anyone who has ever taken economics will immediately acknowledge the irrevocable losses in 'utility' which accompany unutilized or inefficiently used resources. The longer such resources remain unused, the greater the loss.

The losses are not just economic. If these unused resources have the potential to alleviate one of the most pressing needs of the Bowdoin community, the costs become increasingly severe.

Presently, almost 40,000 sq. ft. of prime space stands vacant. The Hyde Cage and Curtis Pool have not been used since the opening of the Farley Field House and Pool last October.

At the meeting of the Governing Boards this weekend, a decision which would finally lead to mobilization of these wasting resources could be made. The Boards are being asked to vote for one of two strategies outlined in the "White Paper on Planning for Bowdoin" released two weeks ago by the President's Office. The strategies outline two alternative proposals for future construction and renovation of academic and social space under the ongoing Campaign for Bowdoin.

The first strategy suggests the immediate and concurrent development of student life facilities, academic space and the library area of the new Science Center by utilizing the existing vacant areas.

The second strategy, which the paper says the college is currently "implicitly" following, calls for focusing Bowdoin's resources on the completion of the Science Center and addressing other needs only when the Center is completed successfully.

Few who have ventured into the existing science buildings will argue that the present provisions are not archaic and need revitalization. Presently, science students comprise more than one-fourth of each class at Bowdoin. It is thus imperative that hopes for the science center are kept alive if Bowdoin is to live up to its reputation as one of the leading undergraduate educators of science students in the nation.

However, the costs of forging ahead with construction of a science center which has a projected cost of almost $11 million more than initially expected is a delay of at least three years in the development of the other facilities.

Can the College afford to let 40,000 sq. ft. rot for several more years?

With the current space shortage on campus, 40,000 sq. ft. is a lot of space to be left unused. Everyday in the Union, students continue to eat on the floor of the dining room because there isn't enough space. Faculty and departmental growth is stifled due to space shortages.

Forging ahead with only the science center, however, will essentially turn a blind-eye to the very real and urgent needs of the student body.

Endorsing the alternative strategy of "seeking remedies on each of these fronts sooner rather than later," the Boards will respond to the need for academic and social space by mobilizing otherwise useless resources while preserving the plans for a science center by making provisions for future fundraising. This is the strategy to take. A solution to the needs for space in the sciences, other academic departments, dining halls, student activities can all be worked on, if this strategy is followed.

Photo by M. Svenson.

Cure the Exec Board resignation epidemic

Another week, another meeting, and yet another member has resigned from the Student Executive Board. Resignations are an epidemic on this year's board. The resignation of member Jason Easterly '90 this week marks the sixth - the third so far this semester alone.

That's not to say that many of these members have not resigned from the board for wholly legitimate reasons. Departure from Bowdoin accounts for three of the six resignations. The other three have resigned in protest—stating the Board is not able to serve the student body effectively.

Earlier, the latest to quit, resigned because he felt he could "no longer serve on a board that I feel does not adequately represent the needs of the students it serves. Nor can I continue to serve in an advisory capacity of the board to an administration that is neither caring nor receptive to any matter not pertaining to finance."

This may be true, but it is also hypocritical. As Exec-chair George Hill, '88 explained, such members are "criticizing the board for their own faults." Rather than working to amend an unsatisfactory situation as the student body elected them to do, such members are giving up or showing that they simply don't care.

Such attitudes aggravate what many call the apathy of the student body. The Exec Board is comprised of Bowdoin's student representatives whose responsibilities are to serve the student body; they are the student link with faculty, staff and administration.

In resigning from the board, members are abandoning their constituencies. Fine, let them resign accusing that the board doesn't face relevant issues confronting the student body. But by resigning, they themselves don't address these issues.

The board is not perfect. It can only be as effective as those who serve on it. With determination, however, the board has proven it can accomplish things when it sets its mind to it. That's something the next person should think about before resigning, as should candidates who run in the upcoming elections to fill the board's two current vacancies.

Rock on: WBOR stages successful concert

In a decade where small independent rock bands have toured college campuses, playing for less than $500 a night, and gone on to establish themselves as national acts, such as R.E.M., Bowdoin college has been a wasteland of musical entertainment.

Monday night's House of Freaks concert initiated a change for Bowdoin's dead "rock concert" scene; WBOR Bowdoin College Radio, the concert's organizer, proved that exciting concerts can happen at Bowdoin.

House of Freaks—a band with a nationally distributed album on a major independent label (Rhino Records) and recently reported on in both Spin and Rolling Stone—played to a full house in the Delta Sigma back barn. The concert was not fraternity related; WBOR organized the entire show, advertising it open to the public. One hundred people showed up and the House of Freaks played for an hour and a half to an enthusiastic audience.

So why doesn't this happen more often? Money cannot be the reason. House of Freaks, travel across the country in a rented van charging $250 a concert. White Beluga, a campus band with no record and no story in Rolling Stone, was paid $300 by the college to play in the Pub this semester.

National bands can be brought to campus for a reasonable price; the key is to find up-and-coming bands touring in the North East and schedule them into an open date as WBOR demonstrated. If necessary, ticket sales could cover extra costs.

The Student Union Committee has not sponsored a concert this year with the success of WBOR's Freak show. The poor attendance at SUC's Winter's Weekend dance was partially due to the band choice—The Boyz, an obscure cover band from Vermont. For the same amount of cash, SUC could have sponsored a quality national act.

WBOR has set the pace for campus concerts. Let us all hope someone is "rockin'" behind them for a follow-up.

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

"The College exercises no control over the content of the student writings contained herein and neither it, nor the faculty assume any responsibility for the views expressed herein."

Editor
Managing Editor
News Editors
In-depth Editor
Entertainment Editor
Sports Editor
Photography Editors

Stephen Reynolds
Kathryn Nanovic
Tamara Dassanayake, Dawn Vance
Kevin Wesley
Sharon Smart
Justin Prisdorf
Alan Harris, Mary Ann Lai

Asst. News Editor
Asst. Sports Editor
Asst. Entertainment Editor
Contributing Editors
Senior Editors
Production Manager

Tanya Weinstein
Todd Dillon
Lizz Millan
Albert Mauro
Lori Bodwell, Michael Botelho
Vincent Jacks

Business Manager
Advertising Manager
Advertising Staff

Eric Foushee
Michael Townsend
Michelle Campagna, Nancy Eckel,
Kim Maxwell
Eric Palmquist

Circulation Manager

Bowdoin Publishing Company
Lori M. Bodwell, Eric F. Foushee,
Albert P. Mauro, Stephen Reynolds

Published weekly when classes are held during the Fall and Spring semester by the students of Bowdoin College. Address editorial communication to the Editor, subscription communication to the Circulation Manager, and business correspondence to the Business Manager at the Bowdoin Office, 12 Cleveland Street, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011, or telephone (207) 725-3300. The Bowdoin Orient reserves the right to edit any and all articles and letters. Subscriptions are $6.00 a semester or $15.00 a year. Post issues cannot be mailed. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to The Bowdoin Orient, Moulton Union, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011.

Letters

Bowdoin and the Real World

Last month when I received my first issue of the Orient (January 29/1988) since graduating six years ago, I was startled, impressed, and concerned about news of the college that you saw fit to print: racial awareness, substance abuse, sexual abuse, and suicide. These were not general stories about distant social problems. They were real instances contributing to the character of the college community. You reported on M.L. King Jr. Day programs and alumni addressing their alcoholism in the Bowdoin Party Life. You printed an excellent letter from a person who was sexually abused by another Bowdoin student. And you had a tactful obituary with a responsible follow-up article, surrounding a person's suicide in the dorm.

During my four years at Bowdoin, there were a lot of casual remarks about "the real world" outside of Bowdoin — as if Bowdoin were some artificial laboratory or summer camp whose challenges bore little resemblance to the challenges that lay ahead in the world after graduation. The implication was that we lived in a sheltered campus. I hope that artificial distinction between "the Real World" and Bowdoin is fading away. The January 29 issue of the Orient communicates that Bowdoin is "as real as it gets!" in this world.

It is no cause to celebrate when you can count the number of Black American students at Bowdoin on two hands; when students, faculty, and alumni consume gallons of alcohol before they can have fun and enjoy each other's company on campus; when men and women who pass highly selective admissions requirements excuse attempted rape as an uncontrollable mistake; and when, in the midst of exams, a former preceptor, student, and member of the human race kills himself, right there in the dorm. I am sorry these things are happening at my school. For that matter, I am sorry they are happening in Cincinnati and Northern Kentucky where I presently live and work. But at least you, some of the college administration, and some of the student body are dealing with these happenings responsibly, instead of covering them up or minimizing them out of shame. This is what the "real world" is all about, if you ask me. On campus or off campus, one chooses to accept responsibility for what happens, or to reject it.

I am startled that these things are happening to openly at Bowdoin. I am impressed that there are opportunities to deal with these sensitive concerns openly. And I am concerned that these things are all happening in the first place. I think it is worth reconsidering in a broader context the opening paragraph of a letter about the dining service which appeared in the same issue of the Orient. "A tragic thing is happening on this campus. What was once a prestigious, personal college is becoming yet another unyielding bureaucracy." Emile Durkheim wrote in his book on suicide that suicide is a social disease that strikes when individual and community become alienated from one another. That means the community becomes impersonal. People feel free to treat each other as sexual objects. People fear genuine social intercourse, and so escape

The statues in the Union have been put back after one year in the repair shop. Director of the Moulton Union, Harry Warren, says a student knocked one of the statues over in the fall of '86. Neither Warren nor former Director of the Moulton Union Don Lancaster '27 knows where the statues originally came from, or their titles.

through alcoholism. People view a Black person as Black first, and a person second.

I do not think there is a simple vaccine for a complex social disease. But I do think that the first step is to identify the virus or other agents and examine them under a microscope. It is just this kind of self-scrutinizing reporting and reflection that will help our collegiate institution learn from its misfortune.

Christopher Kraus '82

The 'White pine' incident: Curley tells of involvement

I came before the Executive Board and the Student Assembly to apologize yet again for my activities on this campus. I believed that, when I chose not to run for re-election to the Executive Board last fall that I would be able to live out the balance of my Bowdoin career without manifesting any further discord and/or controversy.

Last semester I stood before the Board and requested an FC-3 charter for a new type of student organization: Students for Dukakis. No SAFC funds were requested, and, during the course of the year no account was ever opened. Activities on campus included phone banks, petition drives and a debate party. Participating students were able to meet everyone from the State Director for the Dukakis Campaign to the Governor's own mother, Olympia Dukakis.

Up until last week, I was confident that Students for Dukakis was a smashing success. Students had responded positively to membership tables and Brunswick phone banking indicated a significant amount of Dukakis support throughout the Brunswick area. As Vice-Chair and Campus Coordinator, I felt that all who took part were learning more each day about the candidate and his message. But last Thursday night changed all that.

I had traveled to the Cumberland County Phone Bank for a night of calling. Although I had organized each Brunswick phone bank and helped arrange previous Portland trips, this was my first trip to the center on Exchange Street. I then made two hours of standard calls...each time clearly identifying myself as a Dukakis supporter before asking for the voter's Presidential preference. By 8:45 pm, it was time to stop calling. It was then and only then that I was ordered to make 10 phone calls to previously identified supporters. The organizer who approached me then instructed me to use the name "Whitepine Polling Project" in order to determine if our support was "firm." The previous forty calls made under Whitepine had shown an erosion of support towards Dick Gephardt and the organizer was adamant about the calls.

Though I knew full well that no such WHITEPINE existed, I failed to act bravely enough to speak out on the spot. Only after a weekend of nagging doubt did I fully comprehend what the campaign was asking of me. By posing as an independent polling company, they wanted me to lie.

On Sunday night I withdrew my support from the Dukakis for President Campaign. I had always thought that political campaigns were less than savory affairs, but I never dreamed that in 1988 any one would ask a twenty two year old to lie for a man he has never met.

I realized that I could not fulfill my obligations as a Dukakis precinct leader on Sunday, February 28. I knew that I could no longer think highly of a candidate who has authorized this type of in-house polling throughout the country. I felt most importantly, that I had contributed to the construction of this moral dilemma.

Though this was the first time I had ever heard of WHITEPINE the guilt I felt over it overwhelmed me by Sunday night. I had sent other students down to Portland to face that same demand. I had given the names and numbers of supporters to the campaign. I had exposed people to deception.

The fact that I stalled my way out of making WHITEPINE calls was cold comfort. On Monday, Paul Wojcik, a paralegal in Chicago pointed out some federal regulations that may have been violated. I then decided to make White pine public in order to undo at least some of the damage I have done.

Each Dukakis supporter on campus will have to make his/her own mind up as to whether or not this practice is sufficiently unethical to warrant the withdrawal of his/her support. It was for me. Some have already left the campaign; others have elected to stay on; while still others are weighing the facts. I wish each of them the clearest head before making their decision.

The issue I bring, at length, to the Board tonight is this one: do we wish to continue to allow the chartering of organizations that help place students in situations similar to these? Do we wish to continue providing college sanction for groups which are in the grips of outsiders with such disregard to the morality of young people? I am well aware that those who wish to take part in politics have every right to do so, but does the Executive Board wish to place the College's seal of approval on organizations over which it cannot extend the full measure of its oversight? My feelings toward this organization in particular are irrelevant. I just feel that I created a type of group which may place the best interests of the College at risk.

Steve Curley '88

DOMINO'S PIZZA DELIVERS WHAT YOU WANT WHEN YOU WANT IT. GUARANTEED.

$1.00

Present this coupon to receive $1.00 off any size pizza.

One coupon per pizza.
Expires: 3/20/88

Fast, Free Delivery
729-5561
26 Bath Road

Valid at participating stores only. Not valid with any other offer. Prices may vary. Customer pays applicable sales tax. Limited delivery area. Our drivers carry less than $20.00. ©1988 Domino's Pizza, Inc.

729-5561

OPEN LATE EVERY NIGHT
OPEN FOR LUNCH SAT & SUN

DOMINO'S
PIZZA
DELIVERS®

hot & fresh!

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

VOLUME CXVII

BOWDOIN COLLEGE, BRUNSWICK, MAINE, FRIDAY, MARCH 11, 1988

NUMBER 19

Governing Boards commit to science center

 TAMARA DASSANAYAKE
 ORIENT News Editor

At their meetings this past weekend, the Governing Boards authorized the administration to proceed with efforts to secure federal funding for a $25 million new science center. They also allocated $200,000 towards initial expenses for the planning of student and academic space.

According to President of the College A. LeRoy Greason, the Boards voted on three issues dealing directly with the construction of increased social and academic space at Bowdoin.

One of the voters concerned the critical need for academic and social space on campus as outlined in the "White Paper on Planning for Bowdoin" released by the President's office three weeks ago. The paper suggested renovation of the currently vacated Hyde Cage and Curtis Pool areas into a student life facility.

According to Greason, the Boards decided that $200,000 should be allocated toward consultation costs for, "both programmatic and rebuilding plans for Hyde [Cage] and Curtis [Pool] for academic, dining and social purposes." This money would be used to engage architects and develop concrete plans for the new facilities.

The Boards also committed the college to the construction of a new science facility, with an estimated cost of over $25 million. Construction will begin with the $3.5 million science library wing. In conjunction with the endorsement of the science center the Boards authorized the administration to proceed with efforts to seek federal funding to assist in meeting the anticipated costs of its construction.

Bowdoin's hopes of partially covering the costs of the new science facility with federal funding presently lie with the Washington-based lobbying firm Cassidy and Associates. This firm has proven highly successful in introducing legislation to Congress on behalf of other institutions.

According to Appendix 3 of the White Paper prepared by Dean of Planning Thomas J. Hochstetler, "The chief benefit to the College of using a firm such as Cassidy and Associates is that these consultants... can materially assist Bowdoin as we seek direct Federal legislation that provides funds for a substantial portion of the science building project."

The appendix goes on to add that other "more conventional"

(Continued on page six)

Mme. DuBonnet (Sarajane St. John) falls into the arms of Percival Browne (Kevin Wesley) during last night's performance of "The Boyfriend." The show continues tonight and tomorrow at 8 p.m. Photo by Eric Rice.

Physics lab runs superconductor tests

AL MAURO

ORIENT Contributing Editor

What is small, black, looks like a kitchen magnet and is possibly the most important scientific development in years? High-temperature superconductors are, and Bowdoin is not left out of the race.

Professors and students in the chemistry and physics departments are pursuing studies of the new type of high-temperature superconductors.

The recent surge in interest stems from several breakthroughs early last year. The temperature at which a substance becomes a superconductor was raised significantly through the use of ceramics instead of metals.

A superconductor is a material which conducts electricity with zero resistance. All standard conductors provide resistance to the electricity flow, diminishing their effectiveness. Superconductors also repel magnetic fields, a property known as the Meissner effect.

The commercial possibilities depend on the temperature needed to make the material superconductive. Researchers envision transmission lines made of superconductors which would not lose any of the electricity they carry, which accounts for much of the cost of electricity today. Superconductors could also lead to much more powerful computers and transportation systems that rely on superconductors' repulsion of magnetic fields.

Until the recent discoveries, superconductive properties only appeared at temperatures very near absolute zero. In order to obtain the benefits of zero resistance and magnetic repulsion, the superconductor had to be cooled with liquid helium to about 4 degrees above absolute zero, -273.15 degrees C.

Liquid helium is costly and difficult to work with for extended periods. Most benefits of superconductivity were offset by the drawbacks of liquid helium.

The discoveries last year showed that some ceramics could be superconductive and they could do it at temperatures as high as 110-120 degrees Celsius. The higher temperatures allow liquid nitrogen to be used to cool the superconductors. Liquid nitrogen is considerably

(Continued on page five)

Governing Boards 1988 decisions: raise fees, plan for student space

The following are the results of the votes conducted by the Governing Boards of the campus when they convened on campus this past weekend.

VOTED:

1) Effective July 1, 1988, student charges for tuition, room, board and activities fee for the 1988-89 academic year are as follows: tuition, $12,435; Pine St. and Harpswell Apts. $2,650; other apartments $2,200; dormitories $1,925; board $2,460; student fee $130; total (exclusive of apartments) $16,950.

2) The operating budget dated January 26, 1988, which includes operating expenditures of $40,281,183 will be adopted for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1989.

3) The capital budget dated January 26, 1988, which includes expenditures of $408,000 will be adopted for the purposes specified in the budget.

4) To amend Section 8.0 of the By-Laws by adding the words "sexual orientation," after the word "origin," at the end of the seventh line.

That the following professors be promoted to the rank of Associate Professor with tenure, effective September 1, 1988:

5) Robert K. Greenlee, Ph.D., Assistant Professor of Music.

6) Joseph D. Litvak, Ph.D., Assistant Professor of English.

7) G.E. Kidder Smith, Jr., Ph.D., Assistant Professor of History.

8) Randolph Stakeman, Ph.D., Assistant Professor of History.

9) To confirm Allen B. Tucker, Jr. in the rank of Professor with tenure in the department of Computer Science and Information Studies, effective September 1, 1988.

10) That all bequests, gifts and grants and all sums contributed through the Alumni Fund and through The Campaign for Bowdoin to the President and Trustees of Bowdoin College during the period October 1987 through February 1988 be, and hereby are, accepted with gratitude and appropriated to the respective purposes specified by the donors or to the general purpose of the College.

11) That the President and Trustees of Bowdoin College are hereby committed to the building of the science facility at an anticipated cost of $25 million and that the project will begin with the construction of the Science Library Wing at a cost of $3.5 million.

12) That the President and Trustees of Bowdoin College authorize the administration to develop specific plans for the Hyde Athletic Building and the Curtis Pool to be used for academic and social purposes and that specific plans be developed for the location and design of additional dining space.

13) That the President and Trustees of the college authorize the administration to proceed with efforts to secure federal funding to assist in the construction of the science facility.

Dworkin attacks exploitation of women

 LISA KANE
 ORIENT Staff

Andrea Dworkin, internationally acclaimed feminist and author of many publications relating to the issue of pornography, spoke last night on "Pornography and Civil Rights." The Women's Resource Center and Women's Studies sponsored the event which was funded by a grant from the Mellon Foundation.

Kresge Auditorium was packed as members of the Bowdoin and the surrounding community came together. Dworkin prepared her audience for the criticism they were about to hear, "I don't come with good news. I come with bad news about the world we live in." Dworkin then proceeded to explain the way pornography is used in the United States to terrorize women.

Dworkin said millions of pornographic photographs are made and sold each year and described the two scenarios that are most commonly used. The first scenario involved women who have done well in our society and as a result should be punished for their success. The women then, are violently abused. Once they have been victimized, the woman will decide that despite what they may have thought previously, they are enjoying being demeaned and physically harmed by men.

The women typified in the second scenario, as Dworkin described it, are those who are already ready to be hurt — women, like prostitutes for example, who supposedly "crave" abusive treatment.

To support her argument Dworkin emphasized the fact that in mainstream pornographic material, and she does not even include in this category "snuff porn," women are photographed with weapons or in positions which imply forced sex and torture. "Pornographers exploit everyone," said Dworkin and she included in her list pregnant women and women made to look like children.

Dworkin also suggested that pornography is one of the ways that racial discrimination has developed in this country. She also said more generally that pornographers were, "...master exploiters of people's deep seated hatreds." Dworkin mentioned that these pornographers were not exclusionary in their practices, since

(Continued on page six)

Andrea Dworkin

Greason, Exec Board discuss crucial issues

This week President of the College A. LeRoy Greason appeared before the Student Executive Board. The following are a compilation of some of the issues that arose during the course of Tuesday night's meeting.

THE VOTES OF THE GOVERNING BOARDS

Greason explained the most important votes conducted by the Governing Boards when they convened on campus this past weekend. He said the Boards voted:

1) To commit the college to the building of the science facility, devoting the college to the construction of the science library wing first; anticipated groundbreaking - fall 1989.

2) To use Curtis Pool and the Hyde Athletic Building for social and academic needs - "to come up with something more exciting than we have here today".

3) To go ahead with fundraising. The Boards authorized the administration "to proceed with funding not only through traditional sources but through the federal government - to go ahead with federal legislation to procure funds."

STATUS OF FRATERNITIES

Board member Elizabeth Yarnell '91 asked, "What is the status of fraternities? What has the review committee come up with and what does the future hold?"

Greason said, "I have refrained from commenting since I set up this committee and gave it its charge... The final version of the committee's report will be presented publicly probably in early April... I will release my comment with the report."

Member Jennifer Yancey '90 asked, "When will changes associated with this report begin?"

Greason said, "I don't think there can be an immediate response to radical change if that's what the report calls for... I don't feel there will be any drastic change but I expect that there may be high standards and expectations for the fraternities."

ADMINISTRATION

Chairperson George Hillhouse '88 pointed to recent shuffling within the administration and asked, "What direction is the administration going in?"

Greason said, "I don't necessarily see it moving in any type of direction. Ideally it has to serve the desires of the constituency."

Member Al Mauro '89 asked, "Why was Dean Wilhelm released?" Greason said, "That can't be answered publicly... The worse that can be done to a past senior member of the administration is to come out with a litany of what went wrong."

MINORITY RECRUITING

Member Karen Feeley '90 asked about the college's plans for minority recruiting.

Greason said, "When Leon Braswell was hired it was essentially his responsibility... he has been working closely with alumni... minority applications are up 40% this year."

Greason pointed out that the college is also concerned with the retention of minorities. On this point he said, "I asked Gayle Pemberton to write a pamphlet on teaching the minority. It is a wonderful booklet - I have arranged to have it published and had copies sent to the presidents of every college (in the United States)... we will see what kind of publishing house Bowdoin is."

Member Suzanna Makowski '90 asked concerning minority recruitment and retention, "Can students participate in this process?" Greason pointed to the need for more efforts aimed at the heightening of awareness and pointed to the Afro-American society's upcoming year long celebration. He said, "We have an interesting year coming up with the 25th anniversary of the establishment of the Afro-American society."

LINEN FEE

Yarnell expressed the board's interest in continuing the pursuit of the establishment of an optional linen fee.

Greason said, "I'm getting to the point where I don't care what happens to the linen... I'm going to get worn down on that... I'm probably getting out of that one."

Makowski said of the fee, "There are lots of areas where students would like to use that fee other than linen."

Greason encouraged the board to once again approach Dean of Students Kenneth A. Lewallen with this issue. He said, "Tell him Greason has promised to keep his nose out of it."

son has promised to keep his nose out of it."

STUDENT-FACULTY/STUDENT-ADMINISTRATION RELATIONS

Makowski pointed out that one of students' largest calls right now is "one for more student-faculty relations".

Greason expressed his interest in the improvement of these relations. He said, "It is something that interests me. I don't pass a student on campus without saying hello... but it's not as if students are formally receptive to this."

In this same vein, Mauro asked, "How do student concerns and opinions involve the president? Is there any way to make these concerns and opinions more cohesive - to get students to say more?"

Greason said, "I think you're (the Exec Board) a great vehicle for giving student concerns expression." Greason suggested that the board invite other members of the administration to meetings.

SPRING RUGBY

Greason explained the joint banning of rugby with the Presidents of Colby and Bates Colleges.

He said, "NESCAC (New England Small College Athletic Conference) does cover rugby - rugby requires a coach, a trainer, ambulance... rugby has one season... there is a limited budget for two... rugby is the bottom of the totem pole when it comes to space - other activities will have priority - rugby had its season in the fall - it's not an anti-rugby thing."

President A. LeRoy Greason at Tuesday meeting. Photo by Eric Rice.

Chaddha asked to remain as Freshman Advisor

STEPHEN COOK ORIENT Staff

They just can't seem to get rid of her. Bina Chaddha '87 will repeat her term in the Dean of Students office as Freshmen Advisor, a title which she changed from Dean of Students Fellow last year.

Dean of Students Kenneth A. Lewallen expressed his pleasure that Chaddha accepted his invitation to remain. He said her experience from this year will be "desperately needed." Lewallen cited her "excellent people skills" as a major factor to his decision.

He added that Chaddha has "demonstrated her ability to initiate projects without supervision." Two of these projects have been the Study Skill Outreach program, which helps freshmen improve their note-taking skills and study habits, and the revamping of the Tutoring program.

In years past, Lewallen said the Dean's office has been very successful getting qualified graduates to take on the job. However, he said that Chaddha was special and

"head and shoulders above the rest."

When Lewallen offered her the job, Chaddha was unsure about her plans for next year. He tentatively offered the Senior Class a chance to apply. However, once Chaddha agreed to stay on, the offer was withdrawn.

After completing her second term as Freshman Advisor, Chaddha hopes to enter into medical school in the Fall of 1989. She hopes to eventually return to a college campus to practice in an infirmary.

Chaddha's return means that the position will not be open for the Class of '88. Peter LaMontagne '88 said "the position wasn't as open as it might have been in recent years."

However, the seniors have seemed to acknowledge that Lewallen was making the best decision. Nicolette de Bruyn '88, said "It's a good idea to have continuity in that position... [The incoming class] will benefit from her experience."

Lewallen said repeating an internship in one of the administrative or departmental positions is not a rare thing. "The original conception was one year in and out," but once the interns have been trained for a year they have the best qualifications. Headed, "You hate to lose them."

Lewallen acknowledged that keeping the internships open every year for seniors may change the nature of them. Lewallen said,

Pemberton produces paper

A paper written by Visiting Associate Professor Gayle Pemberton designed to help college professors become more sensitive to the problems of minority students is being sent to some 2600 college and university presidents across the country.

The paper, entitled "On Teaching the Minority Student: Problems and Strategies," aims to encourage discussion and reflection by professors on the interplay between racial attitudes and teaching techniques by outlining the difficulties minor-

"We'll have to take a long, hard look at the internships," in order to better serve the needs of the offices while still providing desirable positions for each year's graduates.

Chaddha has instituted several changes during her first year. The first was to change her title in order to more clearly define her responsibilities. She then created the Study Skills Outreach and reworked the Tutoring program, which she expects to direct next year as well.

These changes are only a beginning in a series to come as the position of Freshmen Advisor takes shape. Lewallen said there will be "increasing emphasis on residential life," and the advisor will be dealing specifically with the problems of freshmen.

ity students face at predominantly white colleges.

"Faculty are often insensitive to their own involvement in problems that minority students have," Pemberton said, "As institutions seek ways to remedy current problems, the classroom connection should not be overlooked."

"On Teaching the Minority Student" assumes that college professors are not so elevated above their culture as many people would like to believe; that, quite to the contrary, they share the prejudices and carry the same stereotypes about minority people in roughly the same proportions as their non-academic counterparts," Pemberton said.

Her understanding of the problems of minority students comes from 20 years of being a student and teacher in predominantly white, prestigious college and universities where she was the only black English major and then occasionally the only black professor on campus.

Who is your favorite woman and why?

Ned Searles '89
My mother. Ask Freud

Lynn Warner '91
Lucy from Peanuts because she's loud and obnoxious.

Anne Burnham '90
Ethel Merman because she speaks for our generation.

Steve Pokorny '91
Any woman, man!

BECKY AUSTIN
ORIENT Staff

Photos by Julie Felner

Scenes from this week's Women's Awareness Week. Upper left: Foodfright acts out how society influences eating patterns. Lower right: Andrea Dworkin addresses the issue of women and pornography. Left: A Bowdoin student examines the Bowdoin Women Artists exhibit in Lancaster Lounge.

Eating disorders acted out

LIZZ MILLAN

ORIENT Asst. Entertainment Editor
"What could women be doing if they weren't thinking about food all of the time?" This was the question posed by Foodfright, a series of acts depicting women's obsession with food, in Kresge Auditorium on Tuesday.

The show began with an exclamation from the pianist, Tammy Tanner: "So many different types of people are here tonight from so many different backgrounds and isn't it amazing that you all want to look alike."

The entire show served to demonstrate how ridiculous the issue of weight has become in our society.

The second scene featuring "The Hungry Woman Today Show" presented an entertaining caricature of "superdiet woman". This character ate things like Nutrasweet/Perrier marinade and was in a perpetual state of movement.

The audience got a good laugh from this scene, possibly out of personal recognition of this character's qualities as possessed by many women today. The ridiculous low-cal inventions and transformation of everything into calories burned, may have comical effects on stage, but its real life effects can be devastating.

The self-consciousness an overweight teenager experiences was brought to the stage in the third act, in which an entertaining rendition of "Sweet Sixteen" was performed. The lyrics had been creatively altered in order to express the pressure put on young people to be slim and to feel outcast if they are not.

The secrecy and competition which food can cause was illustrated in the fourth act. Two women pointed and whispered about a third. This "third" was overweight. The "Fat Rap" at the end of this scene left the audience with a message—"thin or fat, no one deserves to be treated like that."

Everyone has feelings; feelings don't disappear with added pounds.

A dramatic atmosphere replaced the comical as two women shared their problems during the fifth act. The two women realized and led the audience to see that "sizism" affects us all.

An extreme effect of this sizism was relayed in the sixth scene, a soliloquy in which the actress related to the audience her experience with binging.

The performance clarified the early growth of social forces, until they possess the power to manifest themselves in diseases such as anorexia or bulimia.

Finally, the audience was presented with many startling facts. "Eighty percent of fourth grade girls are on diets. Eighty percent of American women think that they are overweight, yet only twelve percent actually are."

One hundred thousand liposuction operations were performed last year. There are one million victims of anorexia in the United States. One billion dollars are spent on diet pills each year. Ninety-nine percent of all Americans have been, are, or will be on a diet. The list went on, and the surprise of the audience was visible.

The final song summarized with "Let's put a stop to all of this—we don't have to be someone's low-cal girl."

Foodfright's cabaret style music combined with the talent of the actresses provided a strong background for an equally impressive message. Said one audience member: "The facts and figures really blew me away—the acting really made me feel something."

The facts and figures were personalized in a way which made the issues more heartfelt. "I thought it was wonderful," was the opinion of another in the audience.

Wonderful it was, if the audience brought away the realization that they need not put up with the sizism that is prevalent in American society today. For it is awareness of this important issue which Foodfright aims to raise.

Women's Studies minor created

TANYA WEINSTEIN

ORIENT Asst. News Editor

With the recent expansion of the Women's Studies Program a new departmental minor in the subject has been added to the curriculum.

The need for a minor arose because faculty members involved with the Women's Studies Program were concerned that although there were courses being offered, only a student-designed major was available in the subject, said Assistant Dean of Faculty Helen Cafferty.

After examining the reviews of several consultants, President of the College A. LeRoy Gresson appointed a Women's Studies Program Committee consisting of faculty and students. President of the Bowdoin Women's Association Rachel Dobkin '90 said the committee "looked at other programs...and did research as to what courses to include."

The proposal drafted by the committee was presented to the Committee on Curriculum and Educational Policy last semester. It was approved and sent to the faculty, who "voted on it unanimously," said Cafferty.

The minor consists of Women's Studies 101, and four additional courses. There are presently 20 courses offered annually or bi-annually which may count towards the minor.

A description of the minor to appear in the 1988/89 course catalogue states, "Women's Studies is an interdisciplinary program that incorporates into the curriculum recent research done on women and gender. [It] explores the relationship between traditional disciplinary approaches to women's roles and emerging perspectives in the arts, humanities and natural and social sciences."

Dobkin said the minor was developed "with the intention of creating a major soon." The major could be coordinated with a major in a department that offers a Women's Studies course.

Dobkin said the response to the program so far has been really good, and there are students interested in pursuing a Women's Studies minor.

She added, "[The program] will bring alot to the college — it will really enhance every department."

GMAT

GET DOWN TO BUSINESS WITH THE BEST IN TEST PREP.

Only Kaplan offers free refresher math lessons and business school admissions information. Call!

KAPLAN
STANLEY H. KAPLAN EDUCATIONAL CENTER LTD.

Portland area GMAT class begins on 4/10. Call now (617) 964-TEST collect.

LOOKOUT POINT HOUSE

Harpwell, Maine

(207) 833-5509

WINTER SPECIAL

2 days - 2 nights

MAP plan - double occupancy

2 people - $150.00

or

Rooms by the month

on the sea

eight miles from Bowdoin

KRISTINA'S
BAKERY RESTAURANT

Everyone's favorite for Breakfast,
Lunch & Dinner

Deliciously different menus
Delectable pastries
Friendly atmosphere

Open Wed - Sat for
Breakfast - Lunch - Dinner
8:00 a.m. - 9:00 p.m.

Sunday brunch 9:00 a.m. - 2:00 p.m.

at the corner of
Center & High St.,
Bath, Maine 04530
(207) 442-8577

Typing Word Processing

Term Papers
Class Notes
Resumes
Cover Letters
and more

Bayside
CopyWorks Tel. 729-6992

Student discount with I.D. Free local pick-up & delivery.
Fast, Professional, Affordable

WINTER • SPRING • SUMMER • FALL

STUDY FOR ONE YEAR OR LESS AT OXFORD

Several Colleges of Oxford University have invited WISC to recommend qualified students to study under the tutorial system as Visiting Students or Associate Students for one year or for one or two terms. Upper Sophomore status is required, and graduate study is available.

Integrated student housing, social activities, tours offered by WISC. A special summer session is directed by WISC.

Past student evaluations available.

INTERN IN WASHINGTON SUMMER 1988

Pre-professional program: internships in Congress, the media, the White House, think tanks, etc. Related courses in Government or Journalism.

The Washington International Studies Center
Room 713A, 901 Six Street SW
Washington, DC 20024
(202) 337-9378/9379
(EO/AA)

Now ... at Macbeans Music

FINE ARTS VIDEO

Music ... Art ... Literature ... Opera ... Dance

Now you can collect outstanding fine arts programs to enjoy at home ... from HOME VISION, the largest, most comprehensive selection available anywhere. Priced from $29.95.

Also at Macbeans Music, select titles in Jazz, Musical Shows, Soundtracks and Children's Video. Come see!

THE TONTINE
149 Maine Street
Brunswick
Maine 04011
(207) 729-6513

Underground works surface

Although the Quill has traditionally provided the outlet for student fiction and poetry at Bowdoin, in the last year two anonymously published "underground literary" magazines—"underground" considering they are not left for distribution in a pile on the Moulton Union desk and "literary" in the sense that they publish non-fiction—have circulated around campus.

Both Four Q and Prose Please Daisy are photocopied and stapled pamphlets of predominantly satirical poetry and fictional prose. Whereas a page of nature haikus might appear in the Quill, the last issue of Four Q devoted a page to "Elvis Poems #41, 18, 3 and 20"—four short poems satirizing American consumer culture and naive. Prose Please Daisy's stories are generally less seriously anti-establishment than Four Q's; interspersed between regular submissions are the continuing adventures of "Cash Child" in the land of chickens, the crater of trashed automobiles, and the lineal buffet of Pepsi and Hostess snacks.

Not one student written poem or prose piece in Four Q has the author's real or pen name. Co-editor "Freddie Fender" claimed "we were too lazy to put names in it," and "Vinny Shockopolis" said, "Because Bowdoin is so into names and who does what, people would have pre-judged the work when they saw the author's name. This way everything will be taken at face value."

Shockopolis and Fender consider Four Q an alternative to "the archaic publication that begins with a 'q'"—or the Quill. "We don't want to be dusty or pretentious," said Fender. "We will print anything basically," said Shockopolis, "as long as it's not trying to spew out copies of Donne or Yeats, like the 'q'."

Notices in each issue have solicited submissions asking potential contributors to place their "creation" in an envelope in a specified desk somewhere in Hubbard Hall. So far, says Shockopolis, one submission has been received and printed.

Published twice since Fall 1987, Four Q's next issue is scheduled to come out today. Because Four Q has covered its photo-copy expenditures with the editors' pocket change, previous issues have been limited to around 50 copies sent through campus mail and circulated from person to person across campus. With the third issue, Four Q hopes to boost their circulation to 250—it will even set them out on the Union desk—with the help of an anticipated $500 in funding from the Student Activity Fees Committee.

Prose Please Daisy has only published once and plans for a second issue are uncertain. Co-editor Petunia Doiley, anonymous simply because "I don't want anyone to know who I am," said Prose Please Daisy was created "because we [Doiley and co-editor Mr.X] knew the stuff we wrote would never be printed in any other publication."

Prose Please Daisy asks for submissions on WBOR, the campus radio station, and in posters around campus, claiming "we'll print anything." Most of the contributors realized Prose Please Daisy was not a publication for serious work—one story printed was a grammar school writing assignment of a Bowdoin student.

Four professors granted tenure

LISA KANE
ORIENT Staff

This past weekend the Governing Boards granted four assistant professors promotions to the rank of Associate Professors with tenure, effective September 1, 1988.

The titles of Professor of Music Robert Greenlee, Professor of English Joseph Litvak, Professor of History Kidder Smith and Professor of History Randolph Stakeman will change to Associate in the fall, when the college officially recognizes their promoted status.

As Craig McEwen, Dean of the Faculty explained, professors are chosen for tenure on the basis of three criteria: teaching ability, professional engagement and service to the college. Candidates up for tenure are evaluated McKuen said, "from all levels of the college." The opinions of department colleagues, students, other faculty members and the secret vote of the Faculty Affairs Committee are all factors taken under consideration. It is the Governing Boards, however, who officially have the authority to grant tenure.

Greenlee, who is presently in his sixth year in the Bowdoin Music Department, views his tenure as, "A verification of my significance to the College." Headed that being tenure will mean that he is "part of the team" but with those benefits will come "greater responsibility."

Most of the classes Greenlee teaches focus on early classical music. His achievements extend beyond the classroom, however. Greenlee conducts the Bowdoin Chamber Choir, a group that will make their first overseas tour to Germany this spring, and which Greenlee is planning to develop for future tours, he is currently working on a book on Renaissance song and he also sings professionally. Litvak, who is in his sixth year with the Bowdoin English Department commented, "I'm very pleased to be able to stay at Bowdoin." Prior to teaching at Bowdoin Litvak taught at Northeastern University for two years.

His academic concentration is on literary theory and Victorian literature. He, too, is in the process of writing a book for which he is studying the theatricality of the nineteenth century novel. In terms of his accomplishments at Bowdoin, Litvak said that he was most proud of the fact that, "I've helped bring about a greater representation of the novel as a literary genre in the English Department curriculum."

Smith, also in his sixth year at Bowdoin, prides himself on, "having helped create an opportunity for students interested in Asian studies to do so much with it and to do so well in it." Smith, who teaches classes focusing primarily on China, plans to continue developing the Asian Studies Department.

Smith is as pleased with the news of the tenure as he is with what he perceives a changing attitude in the Bowdoin student. Smith said, "I find people thinking...not simply from the point of view of how they can benefit themselves but rather how they can understand their place in a world where other cultures can be viewed as equal to ours."

Stakeman, an Africanist who has played his role as a member of the History Department since 1978 is also pleased to, "...become a part of the firm...a permanent fixture." Stakeman teaches courses relating to African and Afro-American history. He claims that he is most proud, "...of being able to teach a variety of courses...and to help students see the World in a new way."

Robert Greenlee

Randolph Stakeman

Kidder Smith.

Joseph Litvak

Roderick a master of illusion in world of 'make-believe'

KEVIN WESLEY
ORIENT In-Depth Editor

Michael Roderick believes that realizing student self-potential is just as important as setting stage lights.

Since the spring of 1978, Roderick has served as Technical Director of Theater. Nestled in his neatly-organized office at the bottom of Pickard Theatre, Roderick sees himself as a teacher, a technician, a designer, but, even more so, a human being.

Roderick not only orchestrates the technical development of sets, lighting and scenery for each of Masque and Gown's shows, he also supervises a crew of 18 student workers who do the majority of the backstage legwork involved in show production.

He also teaches a class in technical theater each semester, which culminates in student set and lighting design.

"We deal with the world of illusion, with the world of make-believe," said Roderick. "How we can lie and get away with it."

"We're the key to understanding Roderick. While away from Bowdoin, he is a self-professed loner ("I like my own company"), he is a master at developing the skills of his workers.

Mike Roderick

Photo by Kevin Wesley

Roderick came to Bowdoin College in 1978 after a phone call from Director of Theater Ray Rutan. His first show at Bowdoin was the musical "Guys and Dolls." The following year the faculty position became available.

His training began at the Gorham State Teachers College (now the University of Southern Maine). He was drafted during the Vietnam War, but never served combat duty.

He attended Indiana University, but never completed his master's thesis. He left Indiana to work on various road shows in opera houses, including the national touring company for the musical "Pippin."

He also has worked with rock acts ranging from Frank Zappa to the Rolling Stones. Yet Roderick isn't interested in his professional past. "Who cares?" he asked.

"It's more important working on the major-minor or the One Acts than anything I ever did professionally. Some of the best theatre I've ever seen has been by students at Pickard Theatre."

"What happens specifically at Bowdoin is individuals are provided with the opportunity to realize potential in themselves," he said.

He says the world of student theatre is much different than in the professional realm. "There's honesty, they work harder, and there's no bullshit."

Yet Roderick understands the self-realization will not come overnight. A believer in the Hindu concept of satori, Roderick said the self-realization is accomplished through insight, but the actual discovery is unplanned. Satori is a sudden awareness of "the big picture."

"You must have faith in their ability to fail, and give them the opportunity to fail," he explained.

That faith in his students is what keeps Roderick teaching. "There's a self-fulfilling reason for what I do. You do it because you can bring another human being to realize something in themselves."

While he does not enjoy the chaos associated with technical theatre, Roderick said safety and trust are the keys to a show's success. "I deal with the part that, if it doesn't move, doesn't breathe, doesn't have a pulse, that's tech theater," he said.

"I can only be as good as the demands put upon me by the students. I'm just a tiny cog in a big machine."

"I like being a cog."

Superconductor—

(Continued from page one)

by cheaper and easier to use than liquid helium.

"Ceramics are one part luck and one part black magic," said Peter Doan, visiting professor of Chemistry. "The process is so dependant on just about everything."

Dale Syphers, assistant professor of physics, said work at Bowdoin on formulating superconductors has been going on for about nine months. He said work started last May, trying to duplicate published reports of the new ceramics.

Syphers has been working with George Schmiedeshoff, visiting assistant professor of physics and James Everett '88, who is doing an independent study on superconductors.

Since the making of superconductors is a problem of both physics and chemistry, the chemistry department is also involved. Doan is working with Rob Follett '88.

"We've found nothing outrageously new," Syphers said. He said the department's work focuses on looking at various substitutions to a basic formula.

To make a ceramic superconductor, the ingredients must be thoroughly mixed and pressed into a form. The material is then baked in an oven at temperatures around 760 degrees Celsius.

After the superconductor is baked, it can be quickly tested for superconductivity by dipping it in liquid nitrogen and placing it near a magnet to detect signs of the Meissner effect.

Tests then can be conducted to determine the properties of the new sample.

The Bowdoin research concentrates around testing the superconducting temperatures of the samples and the magnetic resistance.

Syphers said the big problems to be solved deal with making the ceramics workable either through the addition of elements or making a film out of them. Bowdoin, said Syphers, does not have the complicated equipment necessary for much of this kind of research.

Where Bowdoin does have a great advantage is in research on the response of superconductors to high-field magnets, said Syphers. Superconductors repel magnetic fields, but when subjected to a very high level field, the superconductivity is overcome and the properties are lost. By working on materials with a higher tolerance to fields, the superconductors become more practical.

Research into superconductors has slowed as scientists get frustrated by a lack of new breakthroughs. Syphers said he was optimistic at the first discoveries, then pessimistic as he discovered the difficulty of working with ceramics. Still, Syphers says he has "some optimism for getting useful technology in the very near future."

Campus Profiles

"I try to develop a sense of confidence in the students. I must direct individuals into those areas they're most interested in," he said.

Several students he has hired had never worked in theatre. Many had never even picked up a hammer, but Roderick considers that part of his obligation to his students. "A lot of my time is spent teaching. It's the most time-consuming (part), but the most important," he said.

"I have to be sweating in there with the rest of them. I have to let those who've just learned to teach those who've never done it."

"You got to play a kind of god — to generate something from scratch," he said.

CRUISE SHIPS NOW HIRING. M/F

Summer & Career Opportunities (Will Train). Excellent pay plus world travel. Hawaii, Bahamas, Caribbean, etc. CALL NOW 206-736-0775 Ext. 544F

Part-Time -
Home Mailing Program!
Excellent income!
Detail, send self-addressed,
stamped envelope.
WEST,
Box 5877, Hillsdale, N.J. 07205

BIG RED Q PRINTING next to the College

- stationery
- resumes
- posters
- newsletters

212E Maine Street
Brunswick
729-4840

Circa 1821
the Samuel
Newman
House
BEHIND COLLEGE TOWER
7 South St., Brunswick, Me. 04011
For Reservations, call (207) 729-6999

BED & BREAKFAST

STOWEN TRAVEL

MID COAST MAINE'S MOST COMPLETE TRAVEL AGENCY
A TRAVELERS NATIONAL NETWORK AGENCY
■ GROUP TRAVEL SPECIALISTS ■ BUSINESS ACCOUNTS
■ INCENTIVE TRAVEL ■ CRUISES ■ AMTRAK ■ AIRLINES
■ VCR CASSETTE TRAVEL LIBRARY ■ VACATION PACKAGES
■ GREYHOUND ■ WESTERN UNION
■ $150,000 AUTOMATIC FLIGHT INSURANCE
"ALL SERVICES AT NO EXTRA COST"

725-5573

8:30 - 5:30 DAILY
9 - 2 SAT. (SUMMER)
9 - 4 SAT. (WINTER)

9 PLEASANT ST. BRUNSWICK

Call 1-800-522-9990 toll free in ME.

Little's

149 Maine Street 729-6642

M-Th 9:30 - 5:30 Fri 9:30 - 4

Spring/Summer Clothing (arriving daily)

DR. WILLIAM R. OUELETTE DR. BRIAN L. DANIELS

OPTOMETRISTS

Eye Examinations

Optical Services

Specializing in Contact Lenses

Pleasant Street Professional Building

53 Pleasant Street, Brunswick

Telephone 725-2161

443-1400

The Portland Connection
NEW!

For your next trip to and from Portland Jetport.

With this ad
receive $3.00 off our low price of $20.00
round trip

for only $17.00!

For your Spring Break
convenience.

Jet Limo - 443-1400

or contact your local travel agency.

Dworkin

(Continued from page one)
they did cover every existing ethnic stereotype.

The common message in the pornography, whether it be in books or photographs, according to Dworkin is that women want to be hurt. She challenged the audience to examine pornographic materials to see for themselves the way sexuality with violence are represented as inherently intertwined.

After attempting to show the significance behind the ten billion dollar industry, Dworkin talked about its harmful effects. She pointed out that besides women being oppressed world wide due partly to pornography, women in pornography were themselves suffering. A majority of the women are incent victims; most of them are also poor, uneducated and with limited options. Once they participate, they are also often blackmailed and become trapped.

The leaders of the growing industry do not think about the victims; they are motivated by profit. Dworkin cited crime statistics which demonstrated, as she explained, "women are being treated in the way pornography treats women."

After this eye-opening account of the effect of pornography, Dworkin expressed her anger and frustration at a system that is letting this torture continue. The problem, as she explained, is that violence to women is being viewed as entertainment.

Dworkin's criticism was not only directed at the pornographers.

She also showed her resentment towards those individuals who insist that if they were around when Nazis were prevalent, for example, they would have acted. She addressed those people when she said, "This is your chance to do something. This is the Nazis marching in, only they live here and the constitution protects them."

Dworkin presented a historical interpretation of the constitution to demonstrate why fighting against pornography is 'such a difficult struggle. She suggested that the constitution was originally constructed with the intent of maintaining the slave trade, and today serves to protect the rich and powerful. The First Amendment serves as a "weapon against the powerless," as she put it.

Dworkin discussed her efforts as a co-author of the Minneapolis and Indianapolis ordinances, to break into what she perceives as an ineffective system. The ordinance, which defines pornography as a civil rights violation, has been met with a great deal of resistance. She sees the Courts functioning to "protect their rights to use us."

Dworkin does not see misunderstanding or confusion of the issue to be the root of the problem. Instead, she insists, "Commitment to women's inequality in this country is real, is serious, it is not a mistake."

She went on to say that women are being treated as if they do not count. "The Bill of Rights has become a bill of wrongs."

Dworkin stated that those fighting against pornography are the weakest women who have limited funds to support their cause. She concluded her lecture saying, "I am telling you this as a promise, these women...are not going to be stopped."

Those who asked questions revealed an interest in understanding what we as individuals can or should do to fight against pornography. Dworkin stressed the importance of discovering patterns of pornography within our community and confronting its audience. She also advocating joining a women's group to become more aware of the dehumanization of women that is prevalent in our society.

Gov Boards

(Continued from page one)
methods of obtaining federal funding for capital projects such as applications to the National Science Foundation (NSF) have, "historically proven efficacious primarily for larger universities, where the ability to specialize and the presence of large facilities with a broad range of interests provide an insuperable edge in the competition for funds."

A college such as Bowdoin would find it difficult to compete with the larger universities for assistance with capital construction.

The lobbying firm started developing a prospectus for Bowdoin even before the Governing Boards decision last weekend. The grounds on which the firm will request funding include Bowdoin's extensive contribution to the fields of environmental research and assessment.

According to Greason, the environmental theme was chosen because "it is an area both of faculty involvement and national need." Headed, "Bowdoin is well located for environmental research because of its proximity to the Atlantic Ocean and the forest areas."

Several professors in the science departments have been working with environmental issues. According to Professor of Chemistry Dana Mayo, Professor of Chemistry, Samuel Butcher is currently working on air pollution and has done work on acid rain in the area. Professors David Page and Edward Gillfillan have been involved in assessing marine pollution and collecting oceanographical data along the New England coast.

In addition, the Microscale Organic Laboratory program developed by Mayo and Butcher at Bowdoin has not only revolutionized the teaching of chemistry at several hundred academic institutions nationwide but has also been instrumental in reducing the laboratory hazards and dangerous organic waste associated with organic chemistry labs.

BARGAINS FOR STUDENTS
Bargain Balcony
Boutique
55 Plus Center, Brunswick
Open Mondays, Tuesdays and
Thursdays. 10 to 3

TONTINE HAIR FASHIONS

207-729-5475

visit our two stylists, Paul and Gail,
in the Tontine Mall

BOWDOIN STUDENT DISCOUNT
FOR HAIRCUTS - BRING I.D.

Flowers By Knowles

Get your shamrocks and green carnations here for
St. Patty's Day!

15 Jordan Ave. 725-2461

Come in for your FREE tanning session

SUN (ask about our student rates!)

DAYZ, Inc.

TANNING SALON

32 Turner Street
Brunswick, ME 04011

(behind Big Apple, off Pleasant Street) 729-3383

NEW!!

Film Developing In 45 Minutes!

Why Wait Any Longer?

MERCURY PHOTO

Quality Film
Developing...Fast!

Kodak® Mini Lab System 25 processor
Newest Kodak paper and chemicals
Kodak Colorwatch quality control links
our lab with Rochester for
unsurpassed results.

FULL LINE CAMERA STORE -
Slide developing - cameras,
film, batteries, bags
large frame selection - repairs

PASSPORTS
WHILE
YOU WAIT

A vacation is a terrible thing to waste - get quality developing at Mercury Photo and get a FREE second set of prints on Spring Break pictures
if you bring in this ad.

Ever Lost Your Film Or
Had It Come Back Wrong?

good Monday, April 4 through Monday, April 11

You only develop your film ONCE. You owe it to yourself to get the highest quality backed by the KODAK®
COLORWATCH™ SYSTEM.

TOPSHAM FAIR MALL

I-95 (EXIT 24) & ROUTE 196, TOPSHAM, ME.

ENTERTAINMENT

Play review

Humor abounds in Wilson's Boyfriend

LISA WLODARSKI
ORIENT Staff

Somehow, despite the frustration and exhaustion cast members inevitably feel during the last week of rehearsals before the show "goes up," a production will always come together in the end. Masque and Gown's annual spring musical this year is no exception to this credo.

The Boyfriend, has a very basic plot: boy meets girl, they fall in love, they have a minor misunderstanding and in the end... well, you know how it ends. If the weak point of this musical is its lack of intellectual challenge, then its strong point is its success as sheer entertainment.

The show began with a virtually flawless overture by an ensemble of the cream of Bowdoin's musicians. They captured the sound of the 1930's with the help of a banjo player, Peter Mezoian, from Colby. Linda Blanchard '88, the student Musical Director, has evidently reached the pinnacle of her career as a music major with this production.

Then, the silver sparkling curtain went up! The setting of The Boyfriend is a finishing school in Nice, and the plot is centered around a Costume Ball which will occur in the evening. Act I is that morning at the school, Act II is the afternoon "Sur La Plage," and Act III is the Ball.

The sets simply yet effectively create the drawing-room of an elegant French school with backdrop of foliage outside the windows and a pink color scheme.

First to appear is the French maid, played by Carmen Thomas '88, who sets the show off with a flair. Her French accent and mannerisms immediately create the appropriate mood.

Next to appear are the principal schoolgirls: Lynn Horton (exchange), Jennifer James '90, Alice Hufstadler '88 and Mary Inman '90. Their adorable costumes and enthusiasm almost compensate for their hesitation in their first number, "Perfect Young Ladies." (What a paradox!)

Polly Brown, played by Amy Winton '90, arrives, and the next song, "The Boyfriend," is the first major production number. It leaves no doubt about the ambition of the girls! They were joined by Dan Rush '89, Matt Wilcox '88 and Rafi Baeza '90, who led them through the choreography of this number, which appears a bit too challenging for the comfort of the dancers, as does that of the subsequent one, "Won't You Charleston With Me?" The latter is saved by Inman's portrayal of a coquettish Maisie and Jim Barton's '88 romantic Bobby Van Husen.

The headmistress of the school, played by Sarajane St. John '91, is arguably the most challenging character. St. John's is one of the best overall performances.

She, too, seeks a boyfriend, and her advances toward Polly's father, played by Kevin Wesley '89, are a hilarious stereotype of french romance. His performance as the flustered gentleman is most charming. They are assured and relaxed in their song and dance, and their make-up is excellent.

Before we can blink, Polly has found Tony, played by Joe Akely '90, they have fallen in love and they are tap-dancing. The tap-dance is right on, and this critic is impressed with their ability to sing and tap at the same time! Akely is the perfect shy messenger-boy-turned-boyfriend.

On this note, Act II begins. In the opening number "Sur Le Plage," the Chorus comes together for a show-stopper. Here, the choreography of Danielle Stasa '88 and Katie Filmanowicz '90 has been perfected and the men are especially dashing in their navy-blue blazers and straw hats.

Other highlights in Act II are the love song "A Room in Bloomsbury," which Winton and Akely sing beautifully, and Inman's amusing advice in "Safety in Numbers." Also, Lord Brockhurst, played by Bill Baker '88, is a hilariously dirty old man. Later, he and Hufstadler sing a delightful duet as he attempts to romance her. Genivive Anderson '89, as Lady B, does a fine job of spoiling his fun.

In the final Act, the dancing is more exciting, as the orchestra has moved onto the stage. There is a precisely executed tango at the Ball, announced with gusto by Jeff Durkee '90 as Gendarme. Winton has the perfect facial expressions to play the petulant Polly dressed up as Pierrette. The melodramatic song "Poor Little Pierrette," in which she accompanies St. John, is strong.

Diamond explains inspiration behind New York paintings

LISA WLODARSKI
ORIENT Staff

In a lecture Wednesday evening, artist Martha Diamond described the inspiration behind an exhibit of her most current works at the Walker Museum of Art.

The works are large-scale images of New York City, that upon a first glance may appear as finger-painting. However, the artist utilized a precision of intent and technique to produce this effect.

She revealed that these paintings, which are representative of her work from the past two years only, are part of a cycle that she thinks all people involved in creative work follow. In the past two years, she has essentially "started out again," using images that she used when she began to paint.

At that time she also began to concentrate more exclusively on her work. Experimentation with new techniques and the philosophies behind them were important objectives that she pursued.

Diamond mentally brought herself back to the mindset of the first painters, cave painters. It is important to her that her work is original and does not resemble other artists' work, even those that she admires, so this elemental strategy proved effective for her.

"I started out painting post and lintels, and ended up painting large scenes of New York City," said Diamond.

Another change was her experimentation with using very large brushes, and various types of brushes to achieve new effects. For instance, to paint a nine by six canvas, she tried using a five-inch house-painting brush.

She also contracted with a new dealer and began to interact with less conservative artists, who could inspire and appreciate her new style. "The nutter it got—the more far out—the more excited they got."

Of her openness to new ideas, Diamond pointed out that "you have to keep moving and changing, or else no one will stay interested." To Diamond, the two major considerations in viewing art are the reasons for the decisions the artist has made and the sources of his/her inspiration. The sources are usually either primarily abstract or realistic.

If the initial idea for the creation comes from within the mind of the artist, based on an effect he/she wants to achieve with different materials, it is primarily abstract. If the inspiration comes from something the artist sees and wants to depict, that is more realistic.

Diamond's recent work is of architecture in New York because she is from New York; "That kind of imagery took naturally to the type of brushwork I wanted to use," she said.

She decided to make these paintings in blacks, reds and yellows "to get peoples' attention." They are meant to be images of the city, water and wind. Failing that, one may see them, she said, simply as colors and shapes in an interesting composition.

Student exhibit in the Visual Arts Center.

Women in Science lectures continue

LIZZ MILLAN
ORIENT Asst. Ent. Editor

The Women In Science Program provided an informative lecture last Thursday in Kresge Auditorium. Astronaut Marsha Ivins of NASA appeared at Bowdoin to share some of her experiences with the space program.

The complications of living without gravity were visually presented in two movies. If the audience had ever wondered how astronauts relieve themselves while on board without gravity to keep anything down, Ivins cleared their minds. Eating and sleeping maneuvers were also revealed.

From the spaceship, sunrises and sunsets are visible every ninety minutes. For Ivins, this beauty helped make all the toil and trouble of training worthwhile, as did the opportunity of serving her country in space exploration.

Ivins expressed concern over the lack of funding granted to NASA. "The Russian program receives three times the funding we do. This is why they have caught up with, and in many ways surpassed us," she said.

Ivins believes that more attention needs to be given to space exploration. She expressed this view in an enlightening presentation geared toward the average citizen. A background in science was not necessary.

During the remainder of the semester, the Women In Science Series will be sponsoring three more presentations. On March 17, Regina Zibuck a chemist from Syracuse University will speak. April 14 and April 28 are other days on which there will be featured speakers.

Sights and Sounds: March 11-16

FRIDAY, MARCH 11

7:30 and 10:00 p.m. — The BFVS and the BWA present the social drama Norma Rae, in recognition of Women's Awareness Week, in Smith Auditorium, Sills Hall. Admission is $1. An outstanding film portraying the realities of working class society, it features Sally Fields' Academy Award-winning performance in her role as a textile worker who fights to unionize the mill where she works. Directed by Martin Ritt, the cast includes Fields, Beau Bridges, Ron Leibman, and Pat Hingle. (—Allegre McNeally)

7:30 p.m. — A panel discussion, in which panelists include independent women, fraternity women, and members of "Women in Support of Bowdoin Fraternities," takes place in Psi Upsilon. Moderators are Reene Rayhill '89 and Rachel Dobkin '90. The discussion is a part of Women's Awareness Week.

8:00 p.m. — Masque & Gown presents The Boyfriend by Sandy Wilson, in Pickard Theater. Admission is $5 for the general public, and free with a Bowdoin I.D.

SATURDAY, MARCH 12

7:30 p.m. and 10:00 p.m. — The BFVS and the BWA present Silkwood, in recognition of Women's Awareness Week, in Smith Auditorium, Sills Hall. Admission is $1. This biography/drama illustrates the personal and professional struggles of Karen Silkwood, who "accidentally" died in 1974 while attempting to expose the dangers of the plutonium plant in which she worked. Directed by Mike Nichols, it features Meryl Streep, Kurt Russell, and Craig T. Nelson. (—Allegre McNeally)

7:30 p.m. — The activities of Women's Awareness Week conclude with an evening of performances, by, for, and about women, in Kresge Auditorium. Admission is free.

8:00 p.m. — Masque & Gown presents The Boyfriend by Sandy Wilson, in Pickard Theater. Admission is $5 for the general public, and free with a Bowdoin I.D.

SUNDAY, MARCH 13

3:00 p.m. — The Foreign Film Series continues with La Boum, French with English subtitles, in Smith Auditorium, Sills Hall.

3:00 p.m. — A Gallery Talk, "Athena and Arethusa: Some Thoughts on the Ancient Coins at Bowdoin and the Failure of Athenian Democracy," will be given by Charles C. Calhoun, editor of Bow-

Street. Refreshments will be served. Sponsored by the International Club.

MONDAY, MARCH 14

4:00 p.m. — The Bowdoin College Russian Club sponsors an afternoon conversation session (in English!) in the International House living room with Yuri Druzhnikov, emigre Soviet writer, visiting professor, University of Texas. Refreshments will be served and all are welcome.

7:00 p.m. — Roger Shiff, professor of art, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, delivers the Lehman Lecture in the Fine Arts, entitled "Picasso: From Modernism to Postmodernism." The talk is to be given in Kresge Auditorium.

7:30 p.m. — An unusual solo program of traditional and contemporary music for the Japanese koto will be presented in the Bowdoin College Chapel. Ricardo D. Trimillos, ethnomusicologist and chair of the music department at the University of Hawaii, Honolulu, will perform on the koto, a 13-string zither about six feet in length.

8:00 p.m. — A talk, "Traditional Morality Versus Soviet Mentality," will be given in Daggett Lounge by Yuri Druzhnikov, emigre Soviet writer, visiting professor, University of Texas.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 16

3:00 and 8:00 p.m. — The BFVS presents God's Country, directed by Louis Malle, in Kresge Auditorium. Admission is free.

4:00 p.m. — Religion Department Open House for prospective majors and minors is sponsored by the Department of Religion in the Seminar Room, 2nd floor, 38 College Street. Faculty will be present to explain courses for 1988-1989.

EXHIBITIONS

"Martha Diamond: Paintings": Exhibited in the Bowdoin Museum's 20th-Century Gallery, much of the work was inspired by the architectural environment of Manhattan. It will run through March 20.

"Max Beckmann: Masterprints" is on display in the Walker Art Building. Temporary Exhibition Gallery, through March 20.

"Codic Chatterley: Photography" opened March 1 in the John A. and Helen P. Becker Gallery, Walker Art Building. The exhibit will be on display through April 1.

"Creation, Transformation, Abandonment: Holy Land, U.S.A." is on display through April 10 in the Zappa performs at the Cumberland County Civic Center. Call the box office, 207-775-3458, or Teletron, 1-800-382-8080. Reserved seats are $16.50.

March 11, 12 — "Johanna Boyce and the Calf Women," a performance in which Johanna Boyce investigates the common, the heroic, and the bizarre with films, slides, text, music and dance. At the Baxter Gallery of the Portland School of Art, 619 Congress Street in Portland. Call 773-2562 for tickets reservations and further information.

March 16 — 7:30 p.m. — The

Richard D. Trimillos, chair of the Music Department at the University of Hawaii performs in a recital Monday.

do magazine, in the Walker Art Building.

3:00 p.m. — Mahmud A. Faksh, Assistant Professor of Political Science at the University of Southern Maine will speak on Middle Eastern International Relations at the International House, 30 College

"Inuit Women," a part of the photographic display currently in the Arctic Museum.

Museum of Art.

"Paintings, Drawings, and Prints by Johannes B. Girardoni '89 and Nora E. Sturges '90 are on display in the Visual Arts Center.

"O Darkly Bright: Journeys Among the People of Labrador 1899-1910," an exhibit featuring vintage photographs, is on display at the Peary-MacMillan Arctic Museum and Arctic Studies Center through April 12.

PERFORMANCES

February 24—March 13—Painting Churches, a play by Tina Howe and directed by Evan Yionoulis, will be presented at the Portland Performing Arts Center, 25A Forest Ave., Portland. Call 774-0465 for times and ticket information.

March 15 — 8:00 p.m. — Frank Portland Concert Association's Great Performance Series resumes with Emma Kirkby & the Consort of Musick Ensemble. It takes place at Portland City Hall Auditorium. Call 772-8630 for information.

MOVIES

Evening Star Cinema (Tontine Mall)

Hope and Glory, showing at 7:00 and 9:05 p.m.

Cinemas Four (Cooks Corner)

Good Morning Vietnam, showing at 7:00 and 9:00 p.m.

Frantic, showing at 9:00 p.m.

Three Men and a Cradle, showing at 7:10 p.m.

Moonstruck, showing at 7:15 and 9:15 p.m.

Mating, showing at 7:05 and 9:05 p.m.

KEGS - WINE - BEER

THE SHOP WITH THE MOST SURPRISING INVENTORY...AND LOWEST PRICES!

729-0711

THE BRUNSWICK

FLOWER SHOP

729-8895

216A Maine St.

Mon.-Sat. 9:30-6

We Deliver

Wire Service

Centrally located across from Bowdoin College

TYPISTS - Hundreds weekly at home! Write: P.O. Box 17 Clark, New Jersey 07066

We're Fighting For Your Life.

American Heart Association

Summer Session

Planning to be in Southern Maine this summer? Then build USM into your Summer Plans

With 7-week, 4-week, and 6-week course sessions and numerous special institutes, USM makes it convenient for you to continue moving toward your goals with quality academic experiences, as well as enjoy the rocky coast of Maine.

Registration begins March 14, 1988, and continues through the beginning of each session.

For more information, contact: Summer Session, University of Southern Maine, 96 Falmouth St., Portland, Maine 04103, (207) 780-4076.

Reminder: all USM degree candidates, as well as special students taking 12 or more credit hours, must comply with the State Immunization Law before registering.

University of Southern Maine

Spring Sale

MARCH 14 - 19

15% off

all merchandise

including new inventory of

COTTONS

plus Baskets of Bargains

from $5.00 to $2.00

Yankee Yarns

— WE SHIP ANYWHERE —

THE RED BRICK HOUSE

47 PLEASANT STREET BRUNSWICK, MAINE

725-7013 YARNS

SPORTS

Hockey falls 4-1 to Merrimack in ECAC final

ERIC PALMQUIST

ORIENT Circulation Manager

It seemed that destiny was on our side, that somehow, no matter what the odds, the Polar Bears would win. They had pulled out a magical victory against AIC, a game not many people in the hockey circles thought they would win, then had traveled to Babson, where once again they confounded prognosticators with a tight 3-2 victory. They were living a dream, a dream that perhaps would end with an ECAC championship.

But maybe we put too much faith in destiny and its storybook conclusions. Perhaps, in the real world, bitter reality is the norm, for on Saturday David could not knock off Coliath, and the Merrimack Warriors walked away with a 4-1 victory, and the title.

When the Warriors scored first just four minutes into the contest, on a rebound off a 3 on 1, the dream was not broken. When they dominated play for the first ten minutes, keeping the puck locked in the Polar Bear zone, the dream still remained. If anything it grew, for the talent of the host was awesome, making their impending defeat all the more glorious. Indeed, when the Bears began to apply pressure in the latter half of the period, controlling the play, in fact, it seemed certain that the Warriors were fighting something more than their opponents.

But, with the teams skating four a side in the middle of the second period, a slap shot from the point past a screened Brad Raboritor made it 2-0. It was time to worry. Raboritor had been brilliant in net, turning away many excellent shots, but now the Polar Bears were down two, and All-American goalie Jim Hrivnak, a draftee of the Washington Capitals, stood in the way of any comeback.

The Polar Bears could have died right there. Many teams would have. But as they have all season, they refused to quit. Just two minutes later, with the Bears applying tremendous pressure, Steve Iikos jarred the puck between Hrivnak's pads off shots from Tom Aldrich and Jamie Everett for his 24th goal of the season. It was anybody's game.

The teams began the third period knowing that the next goal was the key. Merrimack's superior size and skating ability would most probably become apparent late in the game, so it was imperative that the Polar Bears stay in it to give them a chance in the final minutes. It was not to be. Four minutes into the final stanza the Warriors slapped another shot past a blinded Raboritor, and the dream died. The Bears continued to struggle, with Coach Moagher playing his top two lines constantly, but they were worn out by the bigger Merrimack players. After outshooting the Warriors 25-22 in the first two periods, they were outdone 11-3 in the third. All hopes vanished when Raboritor, after stopping a barrage of shots, had a rebound flicked over his left shoulder with seven minutes remaining.

Brad Raboritor's (1) outstanding play in net failed to match the strength of Merrimack. Photo by Lori Bodwell.

The season can hardly be considered disappointing, however, as the rousing cheer delivered by the Polar Bear faithful at the game demonstrated. It was a great achievement just to get to the final game, the ninth time a Bowdoin squad has done so. They closed out the year 19-7, and it should be remembered that no Polar Bear club ever won twenty games until the championship year of 1986, so one can see how successful this team was. The seniors on the team were part of that club, and Saturday's game was a fitting end to their careers.

Steve Thornton's freshman scoring record was threatened this season by Thomas Johansson, but still the speedy forward managed to close his career with a total of 62 goals and 84 assists, ranking him with the most prolific scorers in Bowdoin history. Co-captain Steve Iikos, who will forever be remembered for his game tying goal against AIC, finished with 54 goals and 26 assists, including a team high 24 this season, as he combined with Thornton and Tom Aldrich (12 goals, 24 assists) to form one of the

(Continued on page 10)

Squash earns national ranking

JIM ANDERSON
ORIENT Contributor

The men's hockey team had a tremendous season this year. Nothing anyone could say can ever take that away from them. However, the most successful team on campus this winter just may have been the men's squash team. That's right, and most likely a hell of a lot of people don't know the first thing about the team or the game.

Not many teams from Division

III schools obtain national recognition and ranking. The Bowdoin squash team though compiled a 10-2 regular season record and performed well enough last weekend at the national squash championships at Princeton, New Jersey to merit a top 20 national ranking. The nine man squad ended with the #14 ranking in the country. That includes all the schools, not just the other Division III schools. Coach Norm Reid noted that this is an impressive feat since Bowdoin does not really possess the manpower to beat teams such as Dartmouth, Princeton and Harvard.

It was actually the six-man squad that competed in the 40 team tournament over the weekend. The team, composed of Gary Robbins, Eric Loeb, Scott Hirsch, Ben Cohen, Ross Baker and Aaron Caplan, performed at peak ability at the Nationals. Gary Robbins, the number one player throughout the year, won 5 matches before bowing out. Eric Loeb also played spectacularly before losing a close contest to Williams' number one player. The rest of the team turned in strong performances and although the six-man team final rankings have not been tabulated as of yet Coach Reid seems to expect another impressive ranking.

The highlight of the season was when Bowdoin stood 7-2 and had to face Amherst, Tufts and Army in their final three matches. Despite never having beaten Tufts or Army before the Bears fired up and took three consecutive tough matches. Efforts such as this led Coach Reid to say, "The whole team was composed of good, hard workers. This is the best team I've had in years." Quite a complement from a man who has been around the game as long as Reid has.

The team will be tested next year however. Two seniors will be lost to graduation and four sophomores plan to study elsewhere next year. Although next year may be a year to rebuild, the return of the 4 JVAs will add leadership, experience and talent to the group which will take the court next year.

Skiers finish season; Russell, Badger fare well

TONY JACCACI
ORIENT Staff

Two weekends ago, the Bowdoin alpine and nordic ski teams traveled north to the Colby Winter Carnival which played host to the Division II championships.

The team placed well in a field of about 15 teams as the men grabbed fourth place and the women came home with the fifth spot. Two Bowdoin skiers qualified for the Division I championship at the UNH Winter Carnival last weekend. Nordic captain Angus Badger raced cross-country while Holly Russell qualified in the alpine events.

On Friday, the alpine team took to the slopes of Sugarloaf mountain to run the Giant slalom race. In the men's race, senior Kyle Appel took the top spot for the Polar Bears as he placed 10th.

Kevin Creamer had a strong race and running towards the end of the pack, Creamer finished 15th. Ted Arleo also had a strong race and was right behind Creamer in 16th place.

The women had a good day on the slopes as well. Holly Russell took 3rd place for the black and white while Booka Smith finished in 9th. Captain Laura Hudud followed close behind and finished in 10th place.

The following day the team returned to the hill for the slalom competition. For the men, Bob Frenchman finished in ninth place while Appel finished in 11th place. Captain Cordy Snyder skied to 14th place. The women did not have a good day on the other hand, as both Holly Russell and Booka Smith fell. The top finisher for the women was Hudud in 17th place. She was closely followed by Lynn Mansen in 18th place.

The nordic team skied a 15 kilometer race and both the men and the women put in strong performances. The men's race fielded 60 skiers and Captain Angus Badger, skiing like a madman, finished in 3rd place. He was followed by Ben Hall who finished in 16th place and Mark Spencer who came in third for the Polar Bears.

For the women, Pam Butler skied to 15th place while Dawn Vance came in 18th. The third finisher for Bowdoin was Sarah Dick who came in 21st.

When all of the racing was finished, Bowdoin took fourth place in combined scores while the women took fifth. Angus Badger and Holly Russell both qualified for the Division I championships but Russell was unable to compete due to injuries sustained in her slalom fall.

Badger did compete in a 15 k, however, and finished in 30th in a field of 60 racers. It was a strong race for Badger in which the winner "had some Swedish name I couldn't pronounce" according to the captain.

Aqua Bears take fourth

BLAIR DILS
ORIENT Staff

Bowdoin College was the site for the New England Div. III Championships this past weekend as the home team turned in a satisfying fourth place finish, 15 points ahead of Tufts and hundreds of points ahead of Colby and Bates.

Freestyler Doug O'Brien '91 was the main man for the Polar Bears as he finished 7th in the overall competition, not placing less than fourth in his three events. O'Brien earned a 2nd in the 500 yd. free and a 3rd in the 1650 yd. event; his times good enough to qualify him for the Nationals. A solid 4th place finish came in the 200 free, giving him enough points for his impressive overall placing.

The 200 yd. Medley Relay team and the 200 yd. Freestyle Relay team also figured prominently in the team scoring. The Medley Relay team, consisting of John Treadwell '90, Kevin Fitzpatrick '90, John Watson '91, and Tom Francoeur '89 swam very well as they broke the Bowdoin record. The same was true for the Freestyle Relay team (Capt. Andy Auerbach '88, Robert Paglione '90, Watson and Francoeur) as they swam impressively and gained a new school record.

While not placing with the relay teams, Francoeur and Watson also did their share individually. Francoeur garnered two top eight performances in the 50 and 100 yard freestyle events while Watson, the butterfly specialist, took second in the 100 yd fly. In doing so, Watson earned himself a trip to the Nationals.

Captain Ed Pond '88 was quite pleased with the way the New England and the whole season turned out. "It was the best season in my four years," said Pond. "We lost to M.I.T. and Wesleyan in dual meets earlier this season but beat them badly this past weekend. Everyone had personal best times at the New England." Next weekend, Watson and O'Brien travel to Atlanta for the national championships.

Hockey

(Continued from page nine)
most potent lines Dayton Arena has ever seen.

Roger Ladda (6,10) and Co-captain Mark Smyth (6, 8) will also make their departure as parts of one of the best classes in memory. With them go defensemen Dave Dowbrowski and Jamie Everett, who solidified what many thought would be a shaky defense into championship caliber. Ryan McGuire leaves as the unlucky third goalie behind Rabor and Janas, though many contend that he could start almost anywhere else.

But of all these players perhaps the one who will be missed the most is goalie Brad Rabor. He was in the nets as a sophomore for the Bears championship in '86, and he has given Polar Bear faithful many a thrill over the past four years. He finished this year allowing just over three goals a game while stopping 91% of opponent's shots, including 29 against Merrimack. Though his replacement is more than adequate in Steve Janas, he has left his mark on Bowdoin Hockey.

All of these men have, in fact. Whenever they recall the banner hanging from the rafters of Dayton Arena with Bowdoin's fifth ECAC crown embroidered on it, and whenever they think on the struggle with Merrimack for the title, they can rest assured that although their time on the ice is over, the future players of this school will be skating in their footsteps forever.

Harriers race in post-season tournament

BRETT WICKARD
ORIENT Staff

The men's track team placed seventh overall in last weekend's ECAC championship. Defending NCAA Division III champs Frostberg State won the team title with 107 points. Traditional powerhouse M.I.T. was second.

Eric Gans '88 and Tod Dillon '89 ran stunning races capturing All-ECAC honors. Gans broke his own school record in the high hurdle race with a time of 7.74. Dillon, who demolished a seven year old school record in the 1500, placed third with a time of 3:54.69. Both Dillon and Gans qualified for the NCAA Division III Championships at Smith tonight and tomorrow.

The 4 x 400 relay team of Steve Polikoff '88, Bob Noel '91, Colles Stowell '88, and Co-captain Rob McCabe '88 finished fourth with a season's best of 3:25.42.

Also scoring for the Polar Bears were Dan Brakewood '90, Damon Guterman '89, and Co-captain Chris Lacke '88. Brakewood was fifth in the 800 with a time of two minutes even. Guterman was fifth in the pole vault (13'-6"), and Lacke threw the weight 44'-4" for sixth place. Marty Malague '90 finished seventh in the 1500 with a personal record of 4:04.

The women's track team posted a fifth place finish among twenty teams at last weekend's ECAC championships. The Bears improved over last year's 14th place finish.

The team had two individual champions. Donna Ingham '90 won the weight throw with a personal best of 42'-4". Tonya Bynoe '88 was the 800 meter champion with a time of 2:14.8.

Tod Dillon's outstanding performances all season long earned him the opportunity to compete in the national championships tonight at Smith.

Also receiving all-ECAC honors were Anja Kannengieser '88, Sandra Scibelli '88, Theresa O'Hearn '88, Heather Wood '91, Deanna Hodgkin '89, Kristen O'Keefe '90, and Margaret Heron '91.

Kannengieser broke the school record as she paced second in the 1000 meter with a time of 2:43.9. O'Keefe was fifth with 2:47. Scibelli was third in the weight throw, while Hodgkin and Heron were part of the third place 4x800 meter relay team.

The most exciting race of the day was the second record performance of the 4x400 meter relay team. O'Hearn and Wood joined Kannengieser and Bynoe in a great effort that saw Bowdoin knock three seconds off the old school record. The team was gaining on the defending national champion UMass-Boston and by the end of the race trailed by only ten yards. The final competition of the season will be this weekend at the NCAA Division II championship at Smith College. Bynoe will be the sole representative for Bowdoin in the championships.

We have shamrocks and Bells of Ireland!
Green carnations
also available!

Pauline's Bloomers

McKenna

Trenton Mall, Brunswick

To order call: 25-5952

Major credit cards accepted

DELIVERS TO BOWDOIN COLLEGE

PIZZAS - SANDWICHES - SALADS

DINNERS

EXAMPLE:

Regular Cheese Pizza $2.20

add $.55 per topping

Large Cheese Pizza $5.50

add $1.00 per topping

no minimum

free delivery

SPECIAL
BUY ANY LARGE PIZZA
GET A LARGE CHEESE
PIZZA FOR JUST $1 MORE!
STARTS FRIDAY!!!

725-9753

MON - THUR
5:30 - 9:30

FRI - SAT
5:30 - 10:30

SUN
5:30 - 8:30

BICYCLES

Fuji, Univega, Peugeot, Trek, Shogun

PROMPT, EXPERT SERVICE • CUSTOM BUILT WHEELS

EXERCISE EQUIPMENT & ROWING MACHINES

ALL - TERRAIN BICYCLES & CROSS COUNTRY SKIS

TRADE INS & USED BIKES

CYCLING CLOTHING AND HELMETS • CUSTOM BICYCLES SET UP

Until March 1
Wed. - Sat., 10 - 5:30
Friday Nites till 8

After March 1
Mon. - Sat., 10 - 5:30

442-7002

ROUTE 1 WOODWICH
(ACROSS FROM MCELIMAN SUBARU & PEUGEOT)

TAKE THE ULTIMATE FIELD COURSE

Join us and study:

- Wildlife Management in Kenya,
- Marine Biology in the Virgin Islands,
- Deforestation in Costa Rica,
- Dolphins in Hawaii
- Biogeography in Australia
- and 18 more environmental issues worldwide.

Financial aid and academic credit available

For more information on January, Summer & Semester environmental field research courses, come to:

MOULTON UNION CONFERENCE ROOM AT 4 p.m. MARCH 16

INFO ON THE CENTER FOR NORTHERN STUDIES
or write: SFS, Box A, 376 Hale St., Beverly, MA 01915, (617) 927-7777

THE SCHOOL FOR FIELD STUDIES
THE WORLD IS YOUR CLASSROOM

LETTERS

'Quill' demystified

This is an open letter, intended to clarify some points about the Quill that I think have become less clear than they ought to be. To begin with, (and in case you've missed the funky posters) the Quill's box is at the Moulton desk, and that's where submissions and comments can be left. All items left in the box will be relayed to every member of the editorial board. The deadline for this semester's submissions is April 10, and the issue will be coming out well before reading period.

The editorial board reviews submissions anonymously. Nobody but the editor, who makes the photocopies, knows who is the author of any particular piece. Each submission is read aloud as well as silently, and following a discussion by those present, a vote is taken as to whether that poem, story, etc. is to be included in the issue. At no time this year has it been the contention of the group that our opinion is worth anything more than our opinion. We are not pedagogical "scholars," just regular people who get together to publish a book of things our peers are writing.

Last year was a pretty unsuccessful year for the Quill, because only one issue was published and because that issue was (to be generous) small. This was due to financial and organizational problems handed down from years past, and was not the fault of any member(s) of last year's staff. The issue produced last semester was, to be sure, a marked contrast. It was high on 100 pages long, and included the writings of over twenty students.

There have been some comments made about the Quill, which I would like to answer. First, that the Quill is somehow "archaic." I don't think this is a reference to the age of its charter. I wish someone would clarify for me what this means. Shall we also call the Orient archaic? How about the Board of Trustees? They've both been around for a long time. I don't think it is a reference to the age of the editors—in fact, half of the editors last semester were freshmen. Perhaps the first comment can be elucidated by another that has been made. That is, that the Quill does not truly represent the writings of the college community. Here is my answer: it never claimed to.

It is not possible that, in a given semester, the editors will be so open-minded as to accept everything submitted. The Quill is shaped by the personal tastes and prejudices of its editors. The great thing about this, though, is that the editors change every semester. In fact, there were only two editors who worked on both the fall issue and last spring's issue. Therefore, the flavor of every issue is bound to be different.

Those comments were made by students who felt that the Quill was not for them in a particular semester, and published another collection. One of these is Prose Please Daisy. I was sorry that I didn't even know about Prose Please Daisy until this week. Apparently, it was distributed on a small scale to a select audience. I would have liked to have seen everyone know about it. Personally, I am excited to find that more people are sharing their writing with us. I applaud the Bowdoin Women's Association for their upcoming issue of Women's Words, and look forward to reading it. Maybe someone will even fire up and publish another issue of The Gutter.

The point is: who cares how it gets published? I don't. But one thing does bother me. And that is when people criticize another organization for doing things differently than they would have. I see no reason for complaining. If you want to get published in the Quill, leave it at the MU desk. If you want to work on the Quill, join in. Our meetings are every Monday night, 5:00 p.m. in Mitchell East. If you want to start an alternative publication, go for it! Write a budget proposal, get some funds from the SAFA and start photocopying.

One thing I ask, though. Don't keep your publication a secret. Make it available. I, for one, want to see.

Scott Andrew Mendel '90

Photo by M. Sven

Legend of Union statues revealed

You reported in your March 4th issue that neither the current nor the former director of the Moulton Union knew the origin or the identity of the two bronze statues of naked boxers that have recently been replaced on their stands at the entry to the Moulton Union. Let me solve the mystery for you.

The statues, known as "The Pugilists," depict Creugas and Damoxenus and are taken from the life-size originals by the neo-classic sculptor Canova, made in 1800-1802 and placed by Pius VII in the Vatican Museum.

The donor was Mrs. Henry H. Pierce of New York, the wife of a Bowdoin trustee, Henry Hill Pierce, of the class of 1896. According to the "Report of the President" for 1928-29, the statues were placed in the Moulton Union upon its opening in 1928 (Bowdoin College Museum of Art accession number 1928.22).

Canova seems to have invented the depiction, for no known models of the original have survived from antiquity. But Pausanias reports, in his Description of Greece in the 2nd century A.D., that the originals stood in the Sanctuary of the Lycian Apollo. He tells their rather brutal and revolting story in these terms:

Damoxenus, one of two statues in the Moulton Union lobby.

Creugas and Damoxenus, pugilists of remarkable strength, were competing in the Nemeaean Games, their hands bare save for the usual leather thongs. When, after a lengthy match, neither seemed able to win, it was agreed that each boxer should alternately give a blow to his antagonist and receive one in return.

Creugas went first and struck his adversary on the head, but with no evident result. Damoxenus, before proceeding, required that Creugas place his left hand on his head. He then drove his armed hand into Creugas's exposed side, penetrated his entrails, and tore them recking from his body. He died on the spot. Struck with horror by the deed, the crowd boxer's countrymen placed the olive-crown on his head and condemned Damoxenus, the "winner," to perpetual exile.

Canova's work depicts the moment when Creugas, having delivered the first blow, stands with his unarmed head raised to his head, waiting for his adversary to strike.

Mark W. Cutler

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

"The College exercises no control over the content of the student writings contained herein and neither it, nor the faculty assume any responsibility for the views expressed herein."

Editor
Managing Editor
News Editors
In-depth Editor
Entertainment Editor
Sports Editor
Photography Editors

Stephen Reynolds
Kathryn Nanovic
Tamara Dassanayake, Dawn Vance
Kevin Wesley
Sharon Smart
Justin Prisendorf
Alan Harris, Mary Ann Lai

Asst. News Editor
Asst. Sports Editor
Asst. Entertainment Editor
Contributing Editors
Senior Editors
Production Manager

Tanya Weinstein
Tod Dillon
Lizz Millan
Albert Mauro
Lori Bodwell, Michael Botelho
Vincent Jacks

Business Manager
Advertising Manager
Advertising Staff

Eric Foushee
Michael Townsend
Michelle Campagna, Nancy Eckel,
Kim Maxwell
Eric Palmquist

Circulation Manager

Bowdoin Publishing Company
Lori M. Bodwell, Eric F. Foushee,
Albert P. Mauro, Stephen Reynolds

Published weekly when classes are held during the Fall and Spring semester by the students of Bowdoin College. Address editorial communication to the Editor, subscription communication to the Circulation Manager, and business correspondence to the Business Manager at the Bowdoin Orient, 12 Cleveland Street, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011, or telephone (207)725-3300. The Bowdoin Orient reserves the right to edit any and all articles and letters. Subscriptions are $8.00 a semester or $15.00 a year. Past issues cannot be mailed. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to The Bowdoin Orient, Moulton Union, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011.

Pete

TOP OFF YOUR PIZZA WITH GREAT SAVINGS.

$1.00

Valid at participating stores only. Not valid with any other offer. Prices may vary. Customer pays applicable sales tax. Limited delivery area. Our drivers carry less than $20.00. ©1988 Domino's Pizza, Inc.

Present this coupon to receive $1.00 off any size pizza.

One coupon per pizza.
Expires: 3/20/88

Fast, Free Delivery
729-5561
26 Bath Road

729-5561

OPEN LATE EVERY NIGHT
OPEN FOR LUNCH SAT & SUN

DOMINO'S
PIZZA
DELIVERS®

hot & fresh!

THE BOWDOIN BORIENT

FIRST CLASS MAIL
U.S. Postage PAID
BRUNSWICK, ME.
Permit No. 25

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

VOLUME CXVII

BOWDOIN COLLEGE, BRUNSWICK, MAINE, FRIDAY, APRIL 8, 1988

NUMBER 20

"I'm just an ordinary guy," says lead guitarist Jimmy Methadone of the rock band Blue Light Special. "I shop at Sears and eat Swanson hungry man teevee dinners while watching Andy Griffith reruns on the tube." Blue Light Special will be the headliner at Bowdoin's spring concert. Unable to get either Tiffany or Pablo Cruise for the annual event, the Student Union Committee and the Music Department chose Blue Light Special after hearing their single, "Cat-hair stuck in my teeth," played in heavy rotation on WBOR, the campus radio station. Nancy Reagan's "Partnership for a Drug Free America" is a co-sponsor of the event.

College purchases assault robot

STARS N. STRIPES

ORIENT Military Advisor

The war against under-age drinking, over-due library books and illegal parking has taken a new and high-tech twist at this normally quiet New England campus.

Bowdoin Security has revealed that it has contracted out for a new computerized weapons system from the Pentagon. The "MX-KILL MACHINE" known as Bo Bo Cop to security officers is an automated weapon system that has atomic, chemical-biological, and neutron weapons in its arsenal.

Bo Bo Cop was first developed for the University of Detroit. The estimated cost of the unit is $42 million, though defense insiders expect cost over-runs to range from $4 billion to $7 Billion.

Chief of Security, Ivan Schwarzenager, said the system will "revolutionize" campus security. The unit is equipped with three modes: 1) search and destroy, 2) beat and pummel, and 3) pillage and burn. It has twin .50 caliber machine guns designed to fire 5,000 - 6,000 warning shots per minute.

Schwarzenager said the armament is not excessive. "Look what happened at Bates," he said. "The students are better armed than the security force. And our deans are even more unpopular."

Brunswick Naval Air Station Commander Ollie B. South stated that even though Bowdoin's close proximity to his base made Bowdoin "extremely likely to be hit in the first strike of a nuclear-exchange" the Bo Bo Cop might "take care of nukes that slip by SDI."

There was initial opposition to the weapons system; the members of Struggle and Change held a die-in protest on the quad. Bo Bo Cop showed up on the scene and the die-in became very literal.

New Athletic Center planned

SPIKE PIGSKIN

ORIENT Jack

Plans are underway for a new multi-purpose athletic facility, to be completed by the fall of 1989, the president said last night.

A. LeRoy Greason, president of the college said in an address to a well tanned alumni group at Sonny Bono's Bar and Grill in Palm Springs, Ca., that Bowdoin will build an extensive new facility to supplement the $14 million Farley Field House and pool complex.

The new facilities will house several sports new to Bowdoin and modernize facilities for others, Greason said.

In addition to a 67,000 seat indoor football arena, a new 17-lane swimming pool will be added to replace the already obsolete 6-lane pool opened earlier this year. New sports are being introduced with the addition of a curling and shuffleboard facility.

Sid Watson, director of athletics, said "I generally hate sissy sports, but if you can get some lazy farts up off their a--s and make them do something for a change, well I'm for it."

Harvey Shapiro, a coach, agreed, "I know I work for a living. I work up a good sweat and when I go home, I smell and feel like a real man. I don't know how anybody can live with themselves, just sitting around all day."

Greason said space for the facility will be made by auctioning the rare books section of the Hawthorne-Longfellow Library. "The books are all on microfilm anyways," Greason said.

Other parts of the new complex will be located in already existing buildings. The Chapel is to be converted into lanes for 10-pin and candlepin bowling and Pickard Theatre will house a tri-level pinball arcade.

Alumni approve $10 mil. Funplex

AL TRUIST

ORIENT Asst. Peon.

An anonymous $10 million donation towards the construction of a centrally located Funplex on campus has sparked a sizzling controversy among members of the college community, polarizing the campus.

"I have a vision," said President of the College A. LeRoy Greason in an interview today. "The donation and the Funplex have the potential to relieve some of our most pressing social needs," he added.

The administration hopes the Funplex, to be constructed on the quad, will serve as an alternative meeting place for students. Dean of Students Kenneth Lewallen said, "The Moulton Union and the Library simply are anti-fun. Results of a campus poll gives the MU a negative fun rating. The Funplex will provide the kind of social atmosphere the college is lacking."

The decision on which facilities to include in the Funplex was made only after careful consideration and heated debate. After much deliberation, the final plans were formulated. Several sets of swings, a 30-foot winding slide, swinging tires, and jungle bars connecting the Visual Arts Center with the Chapel are included in the plans. The pride of the complex is, however, the 50-by-30-foot sandbox filled with real Maine sand specially imported from Popham Beach.

"We will be the only school in the East to have one," said Greason of the sandbox. "I haven't played in one since I was a child," he added.

Professor of Art Mark Wetli commented enthusiastically, "It will really help our studio art majors act out their creative urges in 3-D." Professor of Physics Elroy Lacase added, "The new sandbox will be a real plus to the physics and engineering students...sandbox lab will become a mandatory part of the curriculum."

Terry Meagher of the Athletics Department pointed out the advantages of the Funplex to the Bowdoin Hockey Team. "The team will be able to utilize the various equipment in the Funplex as part of their pre-season training. This should guarantee us a winning season next year," he said.

Several other members of the Athletic Department are concerned, however, that the Funplex will replace other activities. Director of Athletics Sidney Watson commented, "Students will now be more likely to use the Funplex than the training room, the pool and other facilities in the new Field House."

Director of Security Michael Pander also expressed doubts regarding the Funplex. "It will be hard to monitor the area at night...we will have to hire a special security force to patrol the quad" he said. Pander added that the jungle bars from the VAC to the Chapel would also make it easier to scale the steeples of the Chapel, encouraging more flag-hangers.

Roy Weymouth, the College Physician, expressed his concern regarding the number of possible injuries resulting from the Funplex. He said, "At other universities such as Colby that have existing Funplexes there has been a substantial increase in the number of critical cases of Bruised Knee Syndrome." He suggested safety mats under the swings and at the bottom of the slide and encouraged students to use the equipment with care.

The donation for the Funplex comes in the wake of serious concern regarding the shortage of social space on campus. According to Greason, the complex will be named the Eugene Martin '29 Funplex in memory of the alumni's three consecutive championships ('32, '33, '34) in the World Sand-Castle Erection Competitions.

Exclusive coverage of "Rethinking Celibacy Week" see page nine

Bowdoin Ninja to compete in International Paragon of Death Tourney see Sports, page twelve

Who cut your hair?

THE QUESTION MAN
ORIENT Staff

Photos by Richard Avedon

Leroy Dean Witter III '89: Shearson-Lehman Bros...with a silver and gold plated Brooks Bros. manicure set, I might add.

K.Y. "Strokin" Bobby Kodiak Jr. '91: Your momma.

Horace '90: My dad sat me on the toilet, put a cereal bowl on my head, and cut around the edges. I got hairballs stuck in my throat from the ordeal too.

Martin Bryne '88: It was either Jerry Garcia or Leroy the flourescent space fern.

Tower asbestos to be removed

ABBY BESTOS
ORIENT Staff

Coles Tower will be closed for much of the 1988-89 academic year due to the recent discovery of asbestos that must be removed from the building. According to David Barbour, Director of Physical Plant, the discovery of the hazardous material came over spring break during routine fire safety inspections.

"It was quite a shock," said Barbour. "At the time of the Tower's construction, the company informed us that no asbestos would be used in the structure."

According to Bowdoin College physician Dr. Roy E. Weymouth, the long term affects of exposure can be serious. "Lung cancer is the major disease that has been associated with exposure to asbestos. It is too early to tell the effects here at Bowdoin. Unfortunately, some students may have received a fair amount of asbestos dust in their lungs, enough to cause problems... We'll be running some tests in the upcoming weeks on current Tower residents. In addition, I've advised the College to notify all past residents to have tests run by their personal physicians as soon as possible."

All of the plumbing pipes in Coles Tower are insulated with the dangerous substance. Until recent years, asbestos was widely used in construction but recent research has shown that it can pose serious health problems to those with extensive exposure to the material. As a result, several schools and other types of buildings have undergone removal work in the last decade. Work on the Tower should begin in late May, as soon as the building is vacated for the summer.

"This is very delicate work. Because of the danger of asbestos removal work, our firm's normal policy is to work in vacated buildings only. This is especially true in structures like Coles Tower, where the use of asbestos is so widespread. The situation at Bowdoin needs immediate attention to prevent further medical problems," said Michael Spirelli of Spirelli Safety Services (SSS), a Boston firm that specializes in asbestos removal work. SSS has been contracted by the College to undertake the task. Spirelli estimates that the job will take approximately six months to complete.

"This is very distressing, both for the medical impact and for the impact on next year's housing situation," said Ana Brown, Assistant

Dean of Students and Dean of Housing. "The Tower houses a large number of students and this situation is forcing us to turn to alternatives that we haven't figured out yet. As it stands now, Bowdoin does not have sufficient housing to accommodate the students that will be displaced. This is really going to make a tremendous impact on this year's housing lottery... I can assure you that this issue is at the top of every administrative priority list."

Brown said little more on the problem, commenting only that area hotels and motels might be approached for their help.

To accommodate for the loss of the Wentworth dining facilities, conversion of the Hyde Cage into a student center/dining area will begin before the end of May. Bowdoin College Dining Service (BCDS) director Larry Pinette was not available for comment.

Treasurer of the College Dudley Woodhall said that the cost of the work would be approximately $5 million but did not pose an immediate threat to the Bowdoin's financial state.

"The college has sufficient funds to cover the cost of the removal work. We may have to shelve some projects we had anticipated for this year, but as it stands, the College can financially handle this unfortunate discovery," Woodhall would not specify which projects would be put aside.

However, Woodhall said that there are many costs not directly related to the actual work that must be paid.

"We expect the cost of alternative housing to be high. But it is too early to tell what those costs will be." He said that the most cost-effective option, once found, would be chosen. He expects that the College will absorb the extra costs so that board fees for the 1988-89 year would not rise.

He added that the possibility of legal action against the Tower's original construction firm was being considered. Although no mention of not using asbestos was made in the original contract for the Tower's construction, the firm's officials indicated orally "several times" that asbestos would not be used, according to John F. Brush, Superintendent of Grounds and Buildings in the mid-1960's when Coles Tower was constructed. At the time, the danger of asbestos was not known, but it was not to be used in the Tower because another material was considered more cost efficient.

My Personal Opinion...

What's wrong with BoBo students?

The mentality of Bowdoin students never ceases to amaze me.

As my fourth semester here under the pines draws to a close I find myself continually asking, "What ever could have compelled me to come to Bowdoin? What was I thinking — was I dropping too much acid when I sent in that deposit of $200 during the spring of 1986?" One thing I know for sure — it certainly couldn't have been the people that attracted me here.

For 1350 people who are supposed to be intelligent, Bowdoin students certainly don't act it. And, unfortunately I must say that this is not the least of their not so redeeming qualities.

I came to Bowdoin in the fall of 1986, hoping to enrich myself academically, culturally and socially. I looked forward to meeting other 1349 people and immersing myself totally in the life of an intellectual.

I spent my first semester swept away by the whirlwind of a freshman college student's life — all-nighters, library research, and crying to professors because somehow I just hadn't managed to finish that five page paper. But by the time of my return from winter break I awoke to discover my somewhat romantic vision of Bowdoin College and especially its students shattered, not only because I realized that I had indeed gained those "freshman 15" but because I recognized that Bowdoin was devoid of any intelligent life forms.

Reality had indeed struck me a harsh blow, and I was overwhelmed with disgust to find myself surrounded by so many morons. This morosity extended beyond an intellectual sense, however, to encompass the way Bowdoin students dress, the things they say and especially the way in which they relate to one another.

Anybody who has taken a walk across the quad will immediately notice first and foremost that Bowdoin students still need their mothers to lay their clothes out on their beds in the morning — especially the girls. All of the females on this campus look as if they managed to harsh as "unpleasantly crude, abrupt or strained as to be offensive to the mind or feelings". Scoop refers to any of various utensils shaped like a shovel or ladle used to dig out ice cream or dirt; as for good fire, it is something only the Bowdoin student would think to say.

Catherine
Jessica Hornsplatt

steal their big brothers' wardrobes. They wear their clothes ten sizes too big — and this is supposed to be attractive? I should say not.

To complement their sacklike, baggy outfits the girls choose to put their hair up in bows. Pink and frilly or black and satiny, these bows all look stupid and out of place. And when the Bowdoin female is not dressed in bags or in bows, she is running around, showing off her incredible body in those slinky, not so fashionable running tights which betray all those bulges she has yet to lose.

More horrifying than Bowdoin students' modes of dress is their command of the English language. The words most likely to come out of a Bowdoin student's mouth? Random, harsh, scoop, good fire.

For those of you who don't know, Webster's dictionary defines random as "lacking aim or method; purposeless; haphazard", and Another note of advice: these are not words recommended for use in interviews, especially for those seniors attempting to find real jobs.

The way in which Bowdoin students relate to one another at least as far as male-female relationships are concerned is best summed up in the two words: they don't. In this sense Bowdoin students have especially alienated themselves from the rest of the real world.

Bowdoin students don't date — they "scoop" not ice cream but each other at fraternity parties in drunken stupors. "Real" relationships equate with the "constant scoop", or the inseparable pseudo-married couples who hibernate from the rest of the campus.

Having become totally disillusioned with all I have seen and having more than risen above all the idiosyncrasy and pettiness, I have decided that it is time for me to shut up.

Exec-board examines student apathy

In case you haven't guessed, page one and two of this week's Orient is a joke. Nothing is true. Everything was made-up entirely inside the staff's protien deficient cerebrums. The staff thought they would say this so nobody would sue them.

Hodum, Greenberg awarded fellowships

Two seniors Peter Hodum and Steven Greenberg were recently awarded fellowships by the Watson Foundation. Hodum will study in Australia, New Zealand and the Galapagos Islands. Greenberg will study the influence of native medicine in Nepal. Photo by Alan Harris.

STEVEN COOK ORIENT Staff

Seniors Peter Hodum and Steve Greenberg have come as close to winning the Tri-State Lottery as any of us will. The Watson Foundation has awarded them each a $13,000 grant in order to further their education in their fields of interest.

The two Biology-Environmental Studies majors were among the 75 students chosen from a pool of 216, representing 54 small colleges across the country.

Hodum will be heading "down under" this year, to study the ecology of two species of seabird in New Zealand. He hopes to get some "baseline breeding data" on these birds, perhaps as a prelude to a more complete lifelong study.

At the same time, Hodum will examine the system of nature conservation in New Zealand, one of the most extensive in the world.

Questions he hopes to answer include, "Why are they so good at it?" He hopes to establish whether it is simply a matter of funds available for conservation or a real difference in attitude to that of Americans who meet conservation efforts with more resistance.

He will continue this comparative study in the Galapagos Islands, where he spent the spring of his sophomore year on a project funded by National Geographic.

After his year, Hodum plans to wait one more year before entering graduate school, where he intends to combine his interest in Biology, Ecology and Conservation.

Greenberg too will be far from home next year. He will spend his fellowship year looking at "social change and cultural imperialism," which translates into a year in the Indian subcontinent, primarily in a single isolated village in Nepal.

There he will live as another member of the community, paying close attention to the traditional health treatment methods. He is hoping "to see what happens in every day life, specifically in terms of reaction to, and treatment of, injury and disease."

Once he has developed a thorough understanding of the ancient medical practices and their influence on society, Greenberg will place himself in a village which has been equipped as a western medical outpost.

Once there, he will examine the extent of cultural conflict between the modern doctors, who "perceive a need" for modern health care, and the traditional village healer, whose methods have kept the village alive for centuries long before the arrival of the outpost.

In America, he says, we believe that our medical techniques are the best possible, and possibly the only valid ones. However, Nepal, with a completely different world view, has an equally different system of health care, which may be more valid than our ethnocentric natures will permit us to admit.

When Greenberg returns from what will be his second trip to Nepal, he too will enter graduate school, and work towards an M.D. in Medical Anthropology.

The application process was a two-step operation, the first within Bowdoin, which sent four names to the other 212 at the national level. Research proposals may be on any topic in any field.

President appoints Board on Sexual Harassment

AL MAURO
ORIENT Contributing Editor

Members have been selected to serve on the President's special Board on Sexual Harassment.

The new board was established by the President to adjudicate all sexual harassment cases from students, faculty, administration and staff.

The board is comprised of six members, one male and one female from the faculty, administrative staff, and student body. Alternates have also been chosen for each of the members.

R. Wells Johnson, professor of mathematics, has been selected to head the committee. Barbara Kaster, the Harrison McCann Professor of Oral Communication is the second faculty representative on the board.

The two members of the Administrative staff on the board are Richard Mersereau, director of public relations and publications, and Anne Underwood, director of the Breckinridge Public Affairs Center. Students Samuel Shepherd '88 and Carey Smith '88 represent the student body on the new board.

The alternates are: Celeste Goodridge, visiting professor of English; Joseph Litvak, assistant professor of English; Ruth Peck, trade book buyer; Sammie Robinson, assistant director of Admissions; Greg Merrill '90 and Ann St. Peter '89.

According to Dean of the College Jean Jervis, the new board serves three purposes. First, the board provides a group of people specially trained in handling sexual assault and harassment cases, which have different requirements than other disciplinary matters.

Second, the board offers a different means of resolving matters that do not formally exist at present.

"Most of the board's cases will be mediations, not adversarial trials," Jervis said. Often, she said, one person is not wrong or right. "Most cases of sexual harassment come from misunderstanding," she said. However, there are, "Some malicious, spiteful things you want to punish, not mediate," she added.

Third, Jervis said, "The formation of the board makes a public announcement that the school doesn't approve of this kind of thing and gives people an avenue of redress."

Richard Mersereau, a member of the board, said that although the board is not yet hearing cases, it is very busy.

Mersereau said Chairman Wells is working on establishing the procedures of the board, a matter complicated by the fact that the board must deal consistently with students, faculty and staff.

The members are also going through training sessions in both mediation and understanding and dealing with harassment, said Mersereau.

According to Mersereau, the committee hopes to begin hearing cases in the very near future. "We are all very serious," he said.

THE
BRUNSWICK

FLOWER SHOP

729-8895
216A Maine St.
Mon.-Sat. 9:30-6

We Deliver
Wire Service

Centrally located across from Bowdoin College

PARENTS!

Give your college student a very special care package! An Ice Cream Cake from Ben & Jerry's for birthdays, study breaks, exams, surprises, rainy days...

Call and order your cake today.

Free Delivery (207) 725-2725
96 Maine Street, Brunswick

LSAT
GMAT
GRE

WHAT IF YOU DON'T GET INTO THE GRAD SCHOOL OF YOUR CHOICE?

Sure, there are other schools. But why settle? Kaplan prep courses help students raise their scores and their chances of being admitted into their first-choice schools. Fact is, no one has helped students score higher!

KAPLAN

STANLEY H. KAPLAN EDUCATIONAL CENTER LTD.

OTHER COURSES: MCAT, DAT, NCLEX, NTE, CPA, BAR REVIEW, & OTHERS

There's still time to join our Portland classes for the June LSAT and GMAT exams.
Call today! Collect 207-761-TEST

Most students face a long tough road after graduation. But this should help.

Pre-approved credit & $400 cash back.

If you've received or will receive your bachelor's degree from a 4-year college, or graduate degree from an accredited institution between October 1, 1987 and January 31, 1989, you can qualify for Ford's Graduate Assistance Program.

We can give you pre-approved credit through Ford Credit and $400 cash back that can be used as a down payment on your new Ford. Only if you buy one of the new Ford cars or trucks listed below and only if you take delivery by December 31, 1988. Ask your dealer about other retail incentives which may be available, too.

For more information, call this toll-free number: 1-800-321-1536. Or see your New England Ford Dealer today.

Escort EXP

Escort GT

Escort

Festiva

Tempo

Mustang

Taurus

Thunderbird

Probe

Bronco II

Aerostar

Ranger

New England Ford Dealers
No one knows New Englanders better.

Grants broaden curriculum

LISA KANE
ORIENT Staff

Next year will herald further expansion of Bowdoin's academic programs focusing on the study of foreign languages and cultures. The additions to faculty and curriculum have been made possible by grants from the Pew and Mellon Foundations.

According to Dean of Faculty Craig A. McEwen, "Foundations respond to what they see as national and educational needs. There is a sense that Americans are often poorly trained in both the language and culture of foreign nations."

The changes made possible as a result of the grant include the creation of several new teaching positions. Professor of Religion, Edmund T. Gilday joined the Asian Studies program last fall. Gilday specializes in the religion and culture of Japan.

Professor Don Harper, who is currently at the University of Chicago, will be teaching courses in Chinese language and literature next semester.

Also joining the faculty will be Sara Dickey, who will teach courses on the subject of Indian Anthropology. Her specific interest is film and its relationship to politics.

Associate Professor of Asian Studies Kidder Smith explained the significance of the sudden increase in demand for academics studying foreign cultures. "Both the college foundations and the public generally are recognizing the importance of Asia, not only in the world today, but in the curriculum," he said.

The Asian Studies program has been developing in stages. The Mellon Foundation recently provided the college with $275,000 for the purpose of expanding and improving the foreign language offerings at Bowdoin.

The grant will enable the College to provide a greater number of language courses to supplement the classes that focus on various foreign cultures.

The administration is presently in the process of hiring another Italian instructor as well as a professor to teach Japanese. Japanese has never been offered at Bowdoin before. In the past, students traveled to Bates College to receive language instruction in Japanese.

Gilday defended the lack of Japanese courses in the past. He pointed out that Bates and Bowdoin had intentionally planned to share their resources. Bowdoin provided Chinese. Bates provided Japanese, and students were free to take the class at either college.

In addition, there are plans to invite teaching fellows from Japan and Russia. The establishment of a foreign visitors program is also under consideration.

The college will also acquire computer equipment which will, among other things, make it possible to use Macintosh computers in languages which have different alphabets, such as Japanese, and Russian. All these changes should, "enliven the language teaching program at Bowdoin," said McEwen.

In the past, the monies from the Pew and Mellon Foundations have helped fund the underground connecting tunnel in the library and supported improvements in the Media Language Center.

In 1985, the Pew Foundation granted $500,000 to Bowdoin to be used for innovative programming in curriculum development. The establishment of, and expansion of the Asian Studies major was also funded by the Pew Foundation.

Changes proposed for orientation

PATRICK CURRAN
ORIENT Contributor

A Student Life subcommittee chaired by Student Activities Director Bill Fruth has proposed substantial changes in freshmen orientation for next year.

The subcommittee began the long and arduous process of review last October with interviews of deans, members of the faculty, students and representatives of the Dining Service. It sent out questionnaires to members of the faculty and all current freshmen, and compared Bowdoin's orientation program to those of both Colby and Reed Colleges.

The review process resulted in the decision by the subcommittee that Freshmen Orientation as it now exists at Bowdoin is too long, too disorganized, and lacking in focus as well as in academic services. The subcommittee also decided that the social aspects of orientation are overly stressed, and that new students don't have enough contact with faculty and upperclassmen during orientation.

In lieu of these findings the subcommittee has proposed several changes in an oral report to the Student Life Committee.

First, it has suggested the shortening of Freshmen Orientation from seven to four days. Also, the subcommittee proposed that certain non-essential activities currently part of orientation such as career services activities, study skills advice, and talks on such topics as the role of alcohol at Bowdoin, be postponed until later in the semester.

In addition, there is a possibility that all incoming freshmen will be required to read a selected book over the summer which will be discussed at length in faculty or student led discussion groups during orientation.

The proposed changes are meant to balance academics with student services and to increase interaction between new students and faculty. The Student Life Committee wants to provide a shorter, richer, and more focused orientation experience without losing the administrative and social aspects.

Freshmen Advisor Bina Chaddha stressed the increased faculty involvement in the proposed changes. She said many students come to Bowdoin for its low faculty-to-student ratio. Involving professors in Freshmen Orientation eases student tensions in approaching their professors outside of the classroom and of "humanizing" them in the minds of timid new students.

Current freshmen have not become distraught over the proposed changes in new student orientation. Many, in fact, had trouble remembering orientation week at all. "I faintly recall missing my library tour," reflected Michael Frost '91. He added, "you know, I didn't feel any more Oriental after that week."

In a prepared statement, he stressed the need for interesting discussions and talks in future Freshmen Orientations, citing such topics as "the colorization of black and white movies," and "the pros and cons of styrofoam cups."

If the Student Life Committee adopts the proposed changes later this semester as expected, it is hoped Freshmen Orientation will become a more interesting and memorable experience for all involved.

CALL WILBUR'S
CANDY FOR BALLOON
DELIVERY

We still have some Easter Bunnies
50% off!!

Tontine Fine Candies

Traditional & Unique Candies

WILBUR'S CANDY TONTINE FINE CANDIES
13 Bow Street
Freeport, ME
865-6129 / 865-4071

Tontine Mall
Brunswick, ME
729-4462

STOWE TRAVEL

MID COAST MAINE'S MOST COMPLETE TRAVEL AGENCY
A TRAVELERS NATIONAL NETWORK AGENCY

- GROUP TRAVEL SPECIALISTS ■ BUSINESS ACCOUNTS
- INCENTIVE TRAVEL ■ CRUISES ■ AMTRAK ■ AIRLINES
- VCR CASSETTE TRAVEL LIBRARY ■ VACATION PACKAGES
- GREYHOUND ■ WESTERN UNION
- $150,000 AUTOMATIC FLIGHT INSURANCE

"ALL SERVICES AT NO EXTRA COST"

725-5573

8:30 - 5:30 DAILY
9 - 2 SAT. (SUMMER)
9 - 4 SAT. (WINTER)

9 PLEASANT ST. BRUNSWICK

Call 1-800-522-9990 toll free in ME.

APPLE®
MACFEST

FRIDAY
APRIL 15

9 TO 5

MAINE
LOUNGE
MOULTON
UNION

The Apple Macintosh™ personal computer is powerful, yet easy to use. And now is the time to purchase yours. As a student you're eligible for Apple's higher education discount. You'll never see prices like this again. Ask questions, see a Macintosh demonstration and meet software representatives at Apple MacFest.

Apple and the Apple logo are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. Macintosh is a trademark of Apple Computer, Inc. MacFest is a servicemark of Apple Computer, Inc.

Close to the Excitement of Cambridge/Boston...

Information, catalog and application:

Brandeis University Summer School

Waltham, MA 02254, (617) 736-3424

Circa 1821
the Samuel
Newman
House
BEHIND COLES TOWER
7 South St., Brunswick, Me. 04011
For Reservations, call (207) 729-6959

BED & BREAKFAST

Study Abroad
ITHACA COLLEGE
LONDON CENTER

- SEMESTER OR YEAR PROGRAM
- ITHACA COLLEGE CREDIT
- BRITISH FACULTY

COURSES — British and European studies are offered in literature, history, art history, drama, music, sociology, education, psychology, communications, and politics. Special program offered in theatre. Internships available to qualified students in international business, social services, communications, political science, economics and theatre.

Please send information about the Ithaca College London Center to:

NAME _____ ADDRESS _____
PHONE _____ SCHOOL _____ YEAR _____ MAJOR _____

Return to: Office of International Programs, Muller 218, Ithaca College, Ithaca, NY 14850

RESEARCH OPPORTUNITIES

If you plan to start a research career upon graduation, start your job search at Tufts University, Boston Campus.

Tufts' Boston Campus is comprised of the Medical School, Dental and Veterinary Schools, the Sackler School of Biomedical Sciences, and the U.S.D.A. Human Nutrition Research Center.

We have an ongoing need for science graduates in a variety of exciting medical science research areas.

Tufts offers an excellent salary and benefits package in cluding tuition assistance.

All interested candidates should call, send a resume or complete the following mini-application and forward to Tufts University Personnel, 200 Harrison Ave., Boston, MA 02111, (617) 956-6600. An Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer.

Name _____
Address _____
Phone (Home) _____
Phone (College) _____
College _____ Major _____
Date Available for Employment _____

Execs review charters

With three newly elected Student Executive board members participating in their first meeting this past Tuesday, the Executive Board approved charters for campus organizations in Funding Categories 2, 3, and 4 and formed committees to oversee upcoming Executive Board elections and Faculty Committee selections.

Three new members sat on the Board for the first this week. Richard Coombs '89, Dawn Vance '90, and Jim Pincock '90 were elected in the recent elections. They replaced the vacancies created by the resignation of Jason Easterly '90, Tim Hughes '88, and Danny Courcy '90.

Each spring, Executive board committees review the charters of existing FC-2,3, and 4 campus organizations and bring their recommendations to a general Executive Board meeting for a final vote. Charters can be revoked or downgraded by a two thirds vote if an organization fails to follow its charter, mismanages SAFC funding, or misuses the college name.

No charters were revoked or downgraded at the meeting with the Board members expressing little dissatisfaction with existing organizations.

Board member Todd Breslow '90 questioned the College Republicans' use of the phrase "to make fun of liberals and other granola types" as a statement of purpose in their campus advertising. Executive Chair, George Hillhouse '88, raised doubt as to whether or not the Bowdoin Literary Society follows its charter by co-sponsoring events with the English Department. Neither concern influenced voting as the College Republicans' and the Literary Society's charters were approved unanimously.

During the committee reviews, several organizations were found to have lost their charters. Hillhouse said Executive Board copies of charters will be sent to all campus organizations.

Hillhouse also noted some organizations—including the Bowdoin Film Society—failed to appear before Exec-board committees for charter review. A list of organizations whose charters have not been reviewed will be posted next week in the Moulton Union.

During the third week in April, students will elect next year's Executive Board and student representatives to the Governing Boards. The same week, the current Executive Board will select people to fill year long spots on over twenty faculty committees—including Student Life, African-American, and Student Activity Funding. Sign-up sheets to interview before an Executive Board sub-committee will be posted in the Moulton Union next week.

In open forum, Adam Falcon '90 presented a preliminary charter for the Bowdoin Chess Association. Falcon is scheduled to bring a finalized charter next week and the Board will consider it at that time.

Campus "Rethinks Sex"

From April 5 through April 12 the Peer Relations Support Group (PRSG) is sponsoring Rethinking Sex Week. The PRSG will host lectures, films and discussions throughout the week centering upon the topic of sex and sexual relations.

A film about incest, "Breaking Silence" kicked off the week's activities on Tuesday followed by a discussion led by a representative from "Looking Up," a counseling service for incest survivors.

On Wednesday, O.A.S.I.S. (Organized Against Sexism and Institutionalized Stereotypes) presented a discussion for Men Only. The group also presented a slide show on the images of men in advertising.

The Inter-Fraternity Council

sponsored a forum Thursday night entitled "Fraternities and Sexual Harassment" at Beta Theta Pi. The forum included a panel made up of representatives from PRSG, the Bowdoin Women's Association, and the IFC.

A dance co-sponsored by the Bowdoin Christian Fellowship will be held Saturday night in Daggett Lounge as an alternative to the party scene.

Monday, a discussion will be led by PRSG members at Zeta Psi entitled "Men and Women: A discussion of male and female relationships at Bowdoin."

The last event of the week will be held Tuesday, Mike Rosenzweig, a college counselor, will lead an Assertiveness Training Workshop in Daggett Lounge.

Weddington addresses abortion

TANYA WEINSTEIN
ORIENT Assistant News Editor

In 1973, Sarah Weddington won her most famous case, Roe vs. Wade, that legalized abortion in the United States. On Tuesday night, Weddington spoke to an audience addressing this controversial case as well as other women's issues.

As a Texas lawyer, Weddington was familiar with many previous cases concerning abortion throughout the country. She decided to try to challenge Texas law to provide women with the right to have an abortion if they so desired.

Before Roe vs. Wade was brought to the Supreme Court, abortion was lawful only when it was necessary to save the life of the mother. Weddington said many women resorted to illegal abortions in Mexico. In many cases these illegal procedures proved to be harmful to the mother.

Weddington discovered Jane Roe, a pregnant woman looking for an attorney to explain her legal options. She decided to sue the state for the right of privacy. Henry Wade, the District Attorney, represented the state of Texas as the defendant.

Weddington described how the case eventually went before the Supreme Court. Briefs were submitted by interested parties. After the judges read through all of the material, she said, "I had 30 minutes to argue Roe vs. Wade...30 minutes of quick questions" that the judges fired at her.

The three issues brought up in court were whether pregnancy is fundamental, whether there is a right of privacy, and if these are true whether the state still has the right to regulate.

Weddington won the case of Roe vs. Wade by a vote of 7-2. She said the monumental case would stand for the principle of pro-choice, not pro-abortion. She added, "What is important to me is that I am a part of changing issues and changing attitudes towards women."

She went on to state many examples of cases in which women were denied rights based on discrimination. She said, "The whole history of law was essentially a tradition that said women don't have the same rights that other people do."

Weddington pointed out that the original Constitution did not include women under many laws, but "the people who wrote the Constitution knew it would be changed." She added that the reason the Constitution has survived so long is because "We have found ways to make it fit with our society."

Weddington stated that laws concerning discrimination against women and men have progressed. She said, "Gender based issues have come a long way."

Weddington commented on the issue of abortion in the future. With three new justices on the Supreme Court, she expressed her concern that in future years the state may be able to strictly regulate abortions. Certain guidelines could make it almost impossible to have an abortion.

Weddington encouraged Bowdoin students get involved in the decision-making process and to "always ask the question 'why.'" She said, "When social attitudes change, legislation will change...we can make a difference in legislation, courts and attitudes."

Weddington attended the University of Texas Law School. She later became a Special Assistant and Advisor to President Carter on Women's Issues. She was named by Esquire and Time magazines one of the 10 most influential or outstanding women in America.

Sarah Weddington. Photo by Greg Morrell.

ENTERTAINMENT

Spring one-acts chosen

GENEVIEVE ANDERSON
ORIENT Contributor

The winners of the Student Written One-Act competition have been chosen for 1988. Four were chosen out of a relatively small pool of submissions, 14 in all by a panel of three faculty reading judges. The plays are: Full Circle, written and directed by Adam Hale, '91, and Adam Nalberg '90. Dance, written by Jonathan Halperin '89, directed by Emily Lensen '88. The Myth of Maine, written and directed by Michael Libonati '91, and David Spohr '91. Otto, written by Scott Mendel, '90 directed by Dave Mittel '89. The performance dates are April 25-28 (Wed.-Sat.) at 8:00pm.

The decision was very difficult, according to the judges, Barbara Kastar, professor of English, Nancy Johnson, assistant professor of psychology, and Michael Ong, assistant professor of mathematics, who were chosen by the board of directors of the Masque and Gown for their creativity and appreciation of theater. The plays were judged with no special criteria in mind except that they be interesting. Ray Rutan, the director of the theater, played no part in the decision; however, he instructed the judges to respond to "anything that hits them."

And what struck the judges especially about these four plays? The one-acts deal with a variety of subjects from art to love. In describing their play The Myth Of Maine, Michael Libonati said "It's a play about Maynads and Labstahs..." Well, actually," corrected David Spohr, "It's about the stereotypes and myths of Maine." Jon Halperin only revealed that his play, Dance, deals with a sculptor at work. Full Circle was labelled as a "multi-levelled comedy about two students trying to write a film," by its authors. Scott Mendel summarized Otto with the statement: "It is a tragedy of otherness set in 1960 on a college campus." All in all the performances promise to challenge the audience with a great range of moods and emotions, and characters.

The cast is quite large this year. The only thing lacking seems to be the number of female parts, approximately seven out of 25. A fact resulting perhaps from the small number of women who submitted plays this year.

The competition also extends to the actual performances. Generous cash prizes will be awarded to Best Director, Best Performance, Best Actor and Actress. The reading judges will select the best performance, and the other awards will be chosen by a group of anonymous faculty members. The winners of these prizes will be announced after the final performance.

Congratulations to the 1988 winners of the contest, and an encouragement from the Masque and Gown for other aspiring playwrights to submit next year. The performances should be exciting and new—not to be missed.

Museum's personable guard: Edmund Benjamin

LIZZ MILLAN

ORIENT Asst. Ent. Editor

"One should not be afraid of greatness—some are born with it, some achieve it, upon others it is thrust."

This is just one of the ideas that Edmund Benjamin, a security guard at the Walker Museum of Art, circulates among students. For Benjamin, however, keeping an eye on the art is only one of his responsibilities. Benjamin, known to students as "Benji", also feels that he must keep an eye on the well-being of the students.

Benji came to the United States in 1963 and has been at Bowdoin for sixteen years. Originally from the British West Indies, he came here to see "how the other half lived; to experience the Emerald Island—America."

Mary Baxter White, owner of Stowe Travel in Brunswick, was the person with whom he arrived. "I was working at that time as a customs agent, and I helped her when she had some things stolen from her. She helped me come to America," Benjamin said.

Working at the museum has been a source of pleasure for him. "Each time I step into the building, I feel 11 feet tall," he said. He helps others to attain that height as well, greeting each person with a smile. According to him, "a smile is like a light on the Christmas tree."

He expressed his eagerness to share with students more than just a smile: "I read books on the subject of art in my spare time so that I can aid the students in their understanding of it." Knowledge of art is not the only source of understanding upon which he sheds light, for after sixteen years at Bowdoin, he has come to learn much about the students. He uses this knowledge to uplift them, he trying to help others feel good about themselves.

"Many students seem not to notice one another, they are like two ships passing in the night." He believes that students should reach out to each other, to search for the inner beauty which each person possesses.

The high rate of suicide disturbs him. Benjamin believes that if there was more communication between young people and their parents, this problem would not exist to the extent that it does. He does his part by reaching out to as many students as he can, as "a smile and a nice word can mean so much to a student." He always finds time to chat with students in the museum.

"Benji is a great person and he knows so much about the museum, I always learn something new when I talk to him," one student said.

"Aim at the sky so that if you fall you catch the clouds." This phrase is often repeated by Benjamin to Bowdoin students. Education, in his opinion, is one of the most effective ways of aiming for the sky. Edmund Benjamin's presence in the museum helps make this aim more enjoyable.

Sights and Sounds: April 8-15

FRIDAY, APRIL 8

7:30 and 10:00 p.m. — The BFVS presents 39 Steps in Smith Auditorium. Admission is $1.
9:00 p.m. — The Atlantic Clarion Steel Band performs in The Pub.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 13

12:30 p.m. — A Gallery Talk, "Japanese Art from the Permanent Collection," is given by Clifton C. Olds, acting director and Edith Cleaves Barry Professor of the History and Criticism of Art.

SATURDAY, APRIL 9

7:30 and 10:00 p.m. — The

THURSDAY, APRIL 14

7:30, 8:15, and 9:00 p.m. — The

"Sounion, Greece, March 7, 1970," a dye transfer print from the Bowdoin Art Museum Exhibit "Eliot Porter."

BFVS presents North by Northwest in Smith Auditorium. Admission is $1.

8:00 p.m. — The 2nd Annual Intercultural Talent Night for students, professors, and host family members takes place in The Pub. For more information, call x3406.

9:30 p.m.—1:00 a.m. — A dance is held in Daggett Lounge, by the Peer Relations Support Group.

SUNDAY, APRIL 10

2:00 p.m. — A Gallery Talk, "Robert Louis Stevenson and America" is given by Linda J. Docherty, assistant professor of art, in the Walker Art Building.

3:00 p.m. — The Foreign Film Series continues with Der Amerikanische Freund, German and English dialogue, with English subtitles, in Smith Auditorium.

3:30 p.m. — A lecture on "The Column in American Art: The History of a Metaphor," is given by David S. Andrew, Henry Luce Visiting Professor of American Art and Literature. The talk is held in Kresge Auditorium. Andrew discusses the development of a classical language in American art and architecture from Colonial times to the present, with an emphasis on the influence of Greek and Roman orders.

8:00—10:00 p.m. — Opening of works by Nora E. Sturges '90 and Johannes B. Giraadoni '89 in Kresge Gallery, VAC.

MONDAY, APRIL 11

8:00 p.m. — Joseph Weizenbaum, professor of computer science, M.I.T., and internationally renowned author, speaks on "Are Computers Really Good for Children?" in Daggett Lounge.

land Dance Center's 1987-1988 "Dance Around Town" performance series with a performance in the Portland Performing Arts Center. In the works for the performances are a number of historic revivals as well as new works by choreographer Daniel McCusker and the premiere of a collaborative piece created by McCusker and visual artist Katarina Westlin entitled "Pentimento"—the term describes the type of effect that occurs when an outer coating of paint begins to fade or chip away to reveal another layer of paint. For tickets and further information, call the Portland Dance Center at 773-2562.

EXHIBITIONS

"Eliot Porter", is on display in the Twentieth Century and Temporary Exhibition Galleries, April 15 through June 5.

"Creation, Transformation, Abandonment: Holy Land, U.S.A.," photographs by Cedric N. Chatterley, visiting instructor of photography, is on display through April 10 in the Museum of Art, John A. and Helen P. Becker Gallery, through April 10. "What remains of Holy Land, U.S.A. [a religious theme park in Waterbury, Conn.] is a twisted paradox of the worst kind. It is a visual rubble of misdirected conviction, silently screaming as if it were somehow blaming itself for what it has become," Chatterley said.

Contemporary Art from the Permanent Collection, is on display in the John A. and Helen P. Becker Gallery through May 29.

"O Darksy Bright: Journeys Among the People of Labrador 1899-1910", an exhibit featuring vintage photographs, is on display at the Peary-MacMillan Arctic Museum and Arctic Studies Center through April 12.

NOTES

Thomas B. Cornell, professor of art, has a 1981 painting, "The Nurture of Dionysus," featured in "Post-Modernism: The New Classicism in Art and Architecture," a new book by Charles Jencks. The chapter that includes Cornell's work was featured in a recent issue of the British magazine Art and Design.

Elliott S. Schwartz, professor of music, will present the pre-concert lecture at the March 22 Portland Symphony Orchestra performance. He will discuss that evening's program of works by Britten, Nielsen, Druckman, and Williams.

Katie McCarthy and Daniel McCusker in "pentimento", April 14-16 at the Portland Performing Arts Center.

Typing Word Processing

Term Papers
Class Notes

Resumes

Cover Letters
and more

Bayside
CopyWorks

Tel. 729-6992

Student discount with I.D. Free local pick-up & delivery
Fast, Professional, Affordable

Saint Louis University's Academic Year in Madrid
COMPLETE CURRICULUM: English, Spanish,
Liberal Arts, Business & Administration, TESOL, Sciences, Hispanic Studies

SLU in Madrid is a member of AA/BOE

Graduate Courses offered during Summer Session in July

Apply NOW for Summer and Fall 1988

More than 900 students in the Program

Contact:

Saint Louis University
Study Abroad Coordinator
Admissions Office
221 North Grand Blvd
St. Louis, MO 63103
Toll-free tel: 1-800-325-6666

Raymond L. Sullivan, S.J.
Saint Louis University in Madrid
Calle de la Vina, 3
Madrid 28003 SPAIN
Tel: 233-2032/233-2812

Teach in an independent school.

Dare to go! Join a tradition of excellence and independence at the elementary or secondary level in a private school. Call now toll free to discover job openings nationwide. (In Mass.) 617-542-0260 or 800-225-7996 or ask at the Career Development Office.

Carney, Sandoe & Associates

100 Bowdoin St., Boston, MA 02119 Teacher/Admissions Placement

The Ivy League Year in New York

Qualified upperclassmen are invited to apply for admission to Columbia College as visiting students beginning in September 1988. Full access to housing, library resources, and upper division courses. For further information and an application, write or call:

Columbia College Admissions Office
212 Hamilton Hall
New York, New York 10027
(212) 280-2521

Pre-registration undergoes change

AL MAURO
ORIENT Contributing Editor

The administration took steps this week it hopes will help alleviate pre-registration problems and class over-crowding.

An April 4 memorandum from Dean of the College Jane Jervis, outlines five steps being recently approved by the Committee on Curriculum and Educational Policy.

Starting with pre-registration for the Fall 1988 semester, students may preregister for only four courses. Any student adding a fifth course must do so during the add/drop period.

"There are few students who end up taking five courses and there are few courses where enrollment is limited," said Jervis. "There are very few students wanting to take five courses that are overenrolled."

Any courses added or dropped at the beginning of the semester must approved by a faculty signature. Previously, only drops required signatures.

Any student who is included on the final preregistration list for a class may not be dropped unless the student misses the first meeting of the class.

Before classes begin, a list will be published by the registrar, listing any limited-enrollment courses which are not yet full.

Finally, a new schedule will be implemented for preregistration for the spring semester. Students will preregister for courses earlier than before, in order to receive notification of their courses before they leave for Winter vacation. Jervis said this will leave students more time to work out problems in their schedule and decrease confusion.

In a related move, the schedule for classes has been expanded, providing additional slots for classes. Classes are now scheduled through the lunch hour, adding a time slot, and several class times out side of the usual 8:00 a.m. - 1:30 p.m. schedule have been added. This should eliminate some course conflicts.

"With the new schedule, I was tempted to preregister for lunch as my first class," said Mimi LaPointe '91.

In addition, Jervis said an effort was made to more evenly distribute classes throughout the schedule. Some popular classes have been moved to 8:00 a.m. to try to discourage less dedicated students.

Luis Clemens '89 said the changes miss the point. "The changes are in preregistration are cosmetic and fail to address the basic shortage of classes and faculty."

"The measures will help, but they won't make everything perfect," Jervis conceded. However, she said no more changes are planned for this spring.

Pub and Union will join forces

In an attempt to provide food service with more efficiency in staffing, the Moulton Union dining service and Bear Necessity Pub have combined forces.

Starting this week the Moulton Union cafeteria serving line has closed its doors to customers at 8:00 P.M. In its stead, for a one month trial period the dining service is providing food service through the Bear Necessity Pub. After 8:00 the pub staff is in charge of taking all food orders while dining service still operates behind the scenes to prepare the food.

With the closure of the cafeteria serving line, the Pub is offering an expanded food menu. This menu includes old Pub favorites like nachos and pizza and such items from the dining service's offerings as subs, grilled cheese sandwiches, burgers, bagels, yogurt, cookies and brownies. The Pub will continue to serve juice, soda, beer and wine but will now also serve milk, specialty and regular coffee and hot chocolate.

The Pub will also continue the dining service's tradition of evening specials. The Pub will offer specials designed in concert between the Pub Manager and the kitchen.

The combination of forces has lent the Pub more of a restaurant like atmosphere - professional type menus now deck the Pub's tables. However, the pub will still provide entertainment and special programming. Its doors will remain open to all and any organization can sponsor events in the pub. It is hoped that this joint effort on behalf of the Pub and the dining service will not only increase efficiency but bring more people into the Pub. Student Activities Director Bill Fruth expressed the hope that this one month trial period will "bring a greater cross-section of the campus into the pub," but stressed that it is "important to realize that this is something that is on a trial basis."

Evening pub manager Brandon Sweeney '89 said of this temporary change in food service policy, "It's good because the pub may now become more of a focal point for socializing."

The transition in operations has not proven an easy one, however. Pub Manager Cindy Heller '88 said, "The transition is very difficult at the moment because it's coming three-quarters of the way through the year and at a difficult time for the staff. There's great potential with this but we're having trouble with the staffing because students are not used to working twice as hard with twice to three times the traffic in the pub."

The dining service and pub will evaluate their joint effort at the end of the one month trial period. The dining service will resume its original operation of the cafeteria serving line when the Pub closes its doors for final exams.

Pauline's Bloomers

Tontine Mall, Brunswick, 725-8852

QUALITY FLORAL SERVICE
Anniversary, Birthday, Wedding, Sympathy, Holiday, All Occasions
Flowers, Plants & Gifts

We Deliver
Wire Service
Major Credit Cards Accepted • Open 6 days 9:00 to 5:30

Balloons & Candy

LOOKOUT POINT HOUSE

Harpwell, Maine

(207) 833-5509

WINTER SPECIAL

2 days - 2 nights

MAP plan - double occupancy

2 people - $150.00

or

Rooms by the month

on the sea

eight miles from Bowdoin

COUNSELOR/ TEACHER

Leader in quality programs for Youth at Risk seeks Counselor/Teachers for year-round wilderness camps in FL, NC, RI, VT and NH. Child care/college experience preferred. Excellent salary and benefits.

For more information and to apply, call Marita Schneider at 1/800-537-0039 or send resume to:

ECKERD FAMILY YOUTH ALTERNATIVES, INC.
c/o Camp E-Hun-Too
Box 607A, RR 1
Exeter, RI 02822
EOE MF

SPORTS

Mike Botelho

College Hoops —

The failure of the favorite

Next year I'll know better. I'll know that it's a futile effort to try to pick winners in the NCAA basketball tournament.

Yet, why didn't I learn that lesson in 1983 when North Carolina St. stunned Houston's Phi Slamma Jamma? Why didn't Villanova's unimaginable defeat of Big East rival Georgetown in 1985 make me see the light?

Perhaps, it's common for sports buffs to allow their oversized egos to override their sense of rationale. Perhaps, college basketball aficionados truly believe that they possess the acumen and basketball knowledge necessary to outwit the forces of destiny and the gods of roundball heaven. Or perhaps, it's just that sports fans never know when to say "no".

I guess that I thought that this year would be different when I entered a betting pool with some friends.

Boy, was I mistaken.

This year's college bonanza was very much like those of past years. Unpredictable. Cinderella Kansas, who began the post-season with 11 losses and was seeded 6th in the Midwest Regional, bulldozed its way to the NCAA's promised land, the Final Four, and then knocked off Duke and Oklahoma to claim the national championship.

How could Kansas - a team with only one true superstar, Danny "I am the Man" Manning (Dick Vitale's quintessential "Rolls Royce" performer), a team which during the regular season had 12 different starting lineups due to injuries, poor grades and suspensions, a team which lost six players during the course of the season - win it all?

As was the case with NC State in '83 and Villanova in '85, Kansas started to get hot at the right time of the season. They picked up their defensive intensity and jelled as a cohesive offensive unit led by the formidable Mr. Manning, who played the best basketball of his illustrious collegiate career.

Against the bad boys from Oklahoma, Manning had the game of his life. He exploded for 31 points, hauled down 17 rebounds and played fierce, intimidating defense against a potent offensive squad. Yet, he had his share of support. MIT Newton played stellar defense on Sooner forward Pete Sieger in the second half (holding the three-point specialist to just four points) while contributing 14 points to his team's cause. And then there was Kevin Pritchard who scorched Oklahoma for 12 points on 6 for 7 shooting.

Yet, Kansas won quite simply because it played the better defense. The Sooners entered the contest known for its tenacious full-court (Continued on page 10)

The men's Lacrosse Team managed to hold off a New England College comeback to win 8-5. Photo by Lori Bodwell.

Winter athletes earn recognition at national and local level

TONY JACCACI
ORIENT Staff

The winter season ended favorably for several Bowdoin teams as various athletes went to national competition in their respective sports while others were honored with all-star team selections. Polar Bear teams boasting these athletes were men and women's swimming, men and women's basketball, men and women's track, men's hockey and women's squash.

Bowdoin hosted the New England championship swim meet this winter in the new pool and a total of six Polar Bear swimmers qualified for the nationals which were held at Emory College in Atlanta. The women's division I national meet was held first and Bowdoin sent freshmen Amy Wakeman, Judy Snow, Becky Palmer and Senior captain Sarah Bullock. The women swam well, but partially due to the fact that they had peaked in training two weeks earlier for the New England, the results were not among the top finishers.

Freshmen Doug O'Brien and John Watson represented Bowdoin a week later at the men's championships also held at Emory. As with the women, the men did not come home with top finishes. Five of the six competitors were freshmen and the experience they gained will help them immeasurably next year when they hope to return to the nationals.

Two members of the track team qualified for the division III national track meet held at Smith College on March 12. Women's co-captain Tonya Bynoe '88 placed third in the 800 meter run with a time of 2:14.05. Bynoe holds the school record with a time of 2:13.49. Representing the men were junior Tod Dillon and senior Eric Gans. Dillon placed sixth in the 1,500 meter run in a time of 3:53.68, shattering the old record held by Doug Ingersoll '81. Both runners were named All-Americans for their performances.

On the men's basketball team, senior co-captain Joe Williams was named to the second-team all-star team. Williams led the team in scoring with 20.4 points per game and became the third all-time high scorer for Bowdoin with 1,389 points. For the women hoopers, juniors Kim Lemieux, Nicole Comeau, and Stephanie Caron were named to the 1988 All-CBB team. Lemieux led the team with 16.8 points per game and was named the CBB most valuable player for the second year in a row. Comeau averaged 14.9 points per game while Caron led the team in rebounding with 9.9 rebounds per game.

On the ice, seniors Steve Thornton and Brad Raboritor exited with style as they were named to the ECAC second team east all-star squad. Thornton led the team in points this year with 16 goals and 24 assists. He finished his career at Bowdoin in second place on the all-time scoring column with 146 points. Raboritor finished this season with a 7-4 record ending his Bowdoin career with a record of 32-17. Raboritor had a 90.5 save percentage and a 2.80 G.A.A. this season.

In women's squash news, sophomore Erika Gustafson gained national recognition for her outstanding performance all season long.

Laxmen capture two early season victories

JIM ANDERSON
ORIENT Staff

Two weeks ago the Bowdoin Polar Bear lacrosse team soundly defeated Michigan State University. This game kicked off the season for the lax team during the southern swing of their season this spring break.

Bowdoin actually opened up the season a couple of days prior to this with scrimmage games on back to back days at Drew University in New Jersey. Last year Bowdoin opened up with a win against the Spartans as well. Last year's battle was a 17-16 overtime thriller so another hotly contested game was expected by both sides. This was not to be the case. Bowdoin waltzed to a surprisingly easy 10-3 victory.

In the words of sophomore goalie Morgan Hall, "They were not as good as we had expected." Bowdoin controlled the offensive end with tri-captain Lloyd Byrne supplying the main fire power. Byrne cashed in for 4 goals and added 2 assists. Aiding the cause were Jake Odden and Mitch Caplan who chipped in 3 and 2 goals respectively. Defensively tri-captain Chip Davis and Matt Vokey supplied goalie Hall (15 saves for his first varsity win) with outstanding defense.

The Bears ventured down to Lexington, Virginia for a weekend game against Washington and Lee. Mother Nature came to play as well. With six minutes remaining in the first quarter a driving rainstorm, with the full accompaniment of thunder and lightning, halted play for half an hour. At that point Bowdoin held a 4-2 lead. When play resumed conditions were more suitable for mud wrestling than lacrosse. Whether it was the field conditions or if Bowdoin just became careless Washington and Lee tied the score at the end of the quarter with two goals in the final eight seconds.

Play sea-sawed back and forth throughout the half. Bowdoin held a precarious 8-7 advantage at the midway point. Neither team could sustain a consistent attack in the second half and goals were traded fairly frequently. Bowdoin found themselves up 14-11 with three minutes to go when they found some footing and some instant offense. In the final three minutes the Bears tallied three times to come away 17-11 victors.

Once again the offense keyed off Byrne who fired in 4 goals and dished out 3 assists. Caplan added an impressive day as well as he tallied twice while notching 4 assists. Bowdoin also got a lift from senior tri-captain Greg Bohannon who fought off the flu, which kept him out of action against MSU, and added 2 goals. Not to be left out are the hat tricks recorded by both Ed McGowan and Mark Peluso. The (Continued on page 10)

Chris Fitz. Photo by Asaf Farashuddin.

Baseball behind on the count

BLAIR DILS
ORIENT Contributor

The Bowdoin College Baseball team began the Northeast segment of the schedule last week, facing Bentley, Babson and USM, and in the process dropping to 2-6 for the season.

After a 1-4 performance against clubs in Florida, the Bears returned to play Bentley College. Bowdoin was baffled by the opposing pitcher for 8 innings and fell behind 6-1. A dramatic comeback was staged in the ninth but the effort fell short by one run, losing 6-5.

Next up for the Polar Bears were the Beavers of Babson. Chris Fitz pitched for 8 strong innings, Brendan Difley came on in relief and the second victory of the season was secured by a score of 8-5. Freshman E.J. Covey had three hits, Scott Twitchell, Chris Hill, and John Hartnett had two apiece and Tom Aldrich hit a solo shot to pace the Bears.

On Wednesday, the perennially tough USM squad handed Bowdoin the 6th loss of the season 6-3.

Chris Fitz found himself on the losing side for the first time this young season. Captain Twitchell, commenting on the lack of offensive production, stated "No one was hitting today."

Freshmen have been the story this season for Coach Harvey Shapiro. Brad Chin (LF), Al Bugby (DH), Hartnett (RF), Covey (1B), Jeff Wood (2B) and Dan Train (P) all have contributed with Covey and Hartnett leading the way, producing day in and day out. The youngsters are balanced by the senior veterans on the squad, Twitchell (CF), Hill (3B), Aldrich (SS) and Fitz (P). Kevin Cloutier (2B), a sophomore, has recently broken back into the line-up, and Andy Roberts and John Irons have been platooning at the catching position.

If Coach Shapiro can properly blend the raw talent of the freshmen with the experience of the seniors, a successful season could result. The team is at home tomorrow against Brandeis at 3:00 and faces Colby on Tuesday at Pickard Field.

Student artists display works

BETH MULLEN
ORIENT Contributor

This semester, the works of many studio art majors at Bowdoin have been on display in the Visual Arts Center.

The walls of Kresge Gallery and the Fishbowl have been covered with examples of student work since the beginning of the semester, as part of a series of individual art shows sponsored by the department of studio art. Each exhibit remains for one week and contains the work of two student artists. The shows are undertaken on a voluntary basis, and most of the artists are seniors.

This series of student works allows the student to experience firsthand the work involved in putting together an art show. It also gives the community a sense of the diverse and exciting talent among Bowdoin artists. In several cases, honors candidates in studio art may use the individual shows as a means of getting a response to their work from a larger audience. Many students have already exhibited their work. They are: Audrey Augustin, Linda Woodhull, Marc Svensson '89, Gregory Morrell '89, Thinley Dorji '88, Robert Wuillamy '88, Stuart Strong '88, Lisa Aufranc '88, Peter Imhoff '88, Michael King '88, Mark Rodgers '88, Susan Harnisch '89, Nina Schwartz '88, Suzanne Palmer '88, Kate Herz '88, and Cynthia Sperry '88. Still to come are: Johannes Girandoni '89, Nora Sturges '90, Angus Wall '88, Elizabeth McGhee '89, Stephen Gevedon '88, Lacey Biddle '88, Joseph Ferlazzo '88, Piet Ogata '88, Steven Albert '88, and Misa Erder '88.

May 15-29, a group exhibition will be held composed of works by graduating studio art majors.

Botelho

(Continued from page nine)

pressure defense which had caused great havoc, dread and suffering for its tournament victims. However, it was the Jayhawks whose defense shined on Monday night. They kept Oklahoma State King at bay and outmuscled the Sooners on the defensive glass, 28-17. Their offense was also able to take care of the ball against the Sooner press which Coach Billy Tubbs mysteriously abandoned for most of the second half.

This year's NCAA basketball tournament resembled a collection of Grimm fairy tales in which the mighty giants fell to seemingly weaker, less reputable opponents. Who can forget URI's defeat of Big East champ Syracuse (a team this particular columnist picked to make the trip to Kansas City) or Richmond's first round victory over Indiana or Vanderbilt's OT win over Pitt or Villanova's shocking triumph against Kentucky? The list goes on and on and on...

Like endless fairy tales, this year's story ended happily, except for Sooner fans. The good guys beat the bad guys, David knocked off Goliath. Monday night's loss couldn't have happened to a nicer guy than Mr. Billy Tubbs - a guy who thought that Villanova was in the Atlantic 10, a guy, when accused by opponents for intentionally rolling up the score against them after the game was already won, graciously accepted this claim and stated that the biggest lead of the game should be at its end, a guy whose insidious smile could be equaled only by that of Jack Nicholson. Perhaps, on Monday, Mr. Tubbs learned his lesson the hard way - losing is not any fun.

Maybe, I learned my lesson too. The only thing that is indeed certain in the NCAA basketball tournament is the prospect of uncertainty.

Lacrosse

(Continued from page nine)

defensive crew did an excellent job shutting down Washington and Lee's two primary weapons who are considered two of the leading attackers in Division III lacrosse.

After taking the rest of the break off the Bears held a couple of practice sessions this week before getting right back into their schedule. On Wednesday Bowdoin entertained New England College. Either complacency or eight days without competition seemed to plague the Bears' game. Bowdoin was clearly the superior team overall, but they seemed to lack concentration and fluidity. When they put it together Bowdoin had little trouble scoring against NEC. Much of the time in between spurts was spent missing passes or fumbling the ball away. NEC cut an 8-3 margin down to the final total of 8-5 late in the game when Bowdoin got tagged with a couple of penalties and was forced to play 2 men down at times.

The Bears travel to Burlington tomorrow to take on the University of Vermont. The game is one of the essential ones in the schedule. By the latest Brine poll for New England UVM was ranked #7 followed by the Polar Bears at #8.

Annual Polar Bear Run

April 10, 1988

1:00 p.m. Polar Bear Plaza

Prizes, T-shirts, Gift Certificates

Registration: 11:30 a.m.-12:45 p.m. Sponsored by Society of Bowdoin Women

CREATE

The perfect hairstyle for your lifestyle!

Call the Plaza today and visit us at our new location next to the White Seal Laundry

Walkins Welcome

DOWNTOWN PLAZA
COIFFURES

MON. THRU WED. 9:30 to 10:30
THURS. AND FRI. 8:30 to 8:50 SAT. 9:30 to 10:30
174 MAINE STREET - 725-8853

PLAZA
COIFFURES

MONDAY THRU FRIDAY 9 AM to 6 PM
SATURDAY 9:30 to 10:30
725-8800 CORNER CORNER

CRUISE SHIPS NOW HIRING. M/F

Summer & Career Opportunities (Will Train). Excellent pay plus world travel. Hawaii, Bahamas, Caribbean, etc. CALL NOW 206-736-0775 Ext.544F

TYPISTS - Hundreds weekly at home! Write: P.O. Box 17 Clark, New Jersey 07066

Part-Time - Home Mailing Program! Excellent income! Detail, send self-addressed, stamped envelope. WEST, Box 5877, Hillsdale, N.J. 07205

SWAN'S ISLAND, ME. 3 BR, deck, view. Hiking, swimming. June - Sept. $350 a week. No smokers. 609-466-1102

TOPSHAM FAIR MALL
(207) 729-1800

SPORTS

Open 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Mon-Sat
Sunday afternoon, noon to 5 p.m.

SQUASH RACQUETS 50% off

Donnay

Pro Kennex

all price ranges
ONE WEEK ONLY

SUPPORT WILDLIFE!

THROW A PARTY!

WINE-BEER-CHEESE-KEGS-ICE

26 Back Road, Brunswick, 729-0711 Mon. - Sat. 10 to 6

COLUMBUS CLUB BOWLING BOWL

- Candlepin Bowling
- Fun and exciting
- Open Lanes:

Monday 8 - 11 pm

Friday 6 - 11 pm

Saturday 1 - 11 pm

Sunday 1 - 8 pm

7 Dunlop St
(lower Maine St.
behind J&J
Cleaners)

Brunswick

725-5241

$90 per string

TONTINE HAIR FASHIONS

207-729-5475

visit our two stylists, Paul and Gail,
in the Tontine Mall

BOWDOIN STUDENT DISCOUNT
FOR HAIRCUTS - BRING I.D.

SUMMER CAMP POSITIONS

Counselors, 21+, Coed, sleepaway camp, Mass. Berkshires, WSI, arts and crafts, tennis, all land and water sports, gymnastics, drama, piano/play for shows, judo, photography, dance, computers, nature, wilderness, model rocketry, guitar, radio, video, archery, yearbook, wood-working, RN and typist. Write, Camp Emerson, 5 Brassie Rd., Eastchester, NY 10707 or call 914/779-9406

BIG RED Q PRINTING

next to the College

- stationery
- resumes
- posters
- newsletters

212E Maine Street
Brunswick
729-4840

BICYCLES

Fuji, Univega, Peugeot, Trek, Shogun
PROMPT, EXPERT SERVICE • CUSTOM BUILT WHEELS
EXERCISE EQUIPMENT & ROWING MACHINES
ALL-TERRAIN BICYCLES & CROSS COUNTRY SKIS
TRADE INS & USED BIKES

CYCLING CLOTHING AND HELMETS • CUSTOM BICYCLES SET UP

After March 1
Mon. - Sat., 10 - 5:30

442-7002

ROUTE 1 WOODWICH
(ACROSS FROM MCGILLAN SUBURBY & PEUGEOT)

We're Fighting For Your Life

American Heart
Association

OPINION

Rethinking sexual relations and their implications

A female student walking past the Moulton Union on Wednesday evening was accosted by three unfamiliar men. They stopped and asked her, "So, it's Rethinking Sex Week at Bowdoin?"

She, caught off-guard by what she deemed the awkwardness of the situation, replied that it was. At this point one of the men turned to her and asked, "You want to have sex?"

The woman hurriedly continued on her way, disquieted by the experience, despite the man's reassurance that he was only kidding.

But such an attitude is no joke. Hurting or making someone feel uncomfortable is nothing to laugh about. The fact that someone could pass it off as a mere joke accentuates the necessity of educating society to the full implications of sex-related issues.

If you haven't noticed, April 5 through April 12 is Rethinking Sex Week at Bowdoin. It is time that the college community pays serious consideration to the issues dealing with sex and sexual relationships. The Peer Relations Support Group and all those who participated in the coordination of this week should be applauded for their efforts.

Such efforts undoubtedly make headway toward creating an awareness of issues pertaining not just to Bowdoin College but to society at large. They follow the national trend of examining problems which arise from sexual relationships. Sexual harassment, abuse and the growing threat of something so deadly as the AIDS virus are very real problems which society can no longer ignore. People can no longer afford to shut their eyes and just wait for them to go away.

It is essential to realize that no one is immune to these problems. They are indeed out there and in the "real world" people must constantly face them. Such programs as Rethinking Sex Week arm us with the knowledge necessary to combat such realities.

Photo by M. Sven.

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

"The College exercises no control over the content of the student writings contained herein and neither it, nor the faculty assume any responsibility for the views expressed herein."

Editor
Managing Editor
News Editors
In-depth Editor
Entertainment Editor
Sports Editor
Photography Editors

Stephen Reynolds
Kathryn Nanovic
Tamara Dassanayake, Dawn Vance
Kevin Wesley
Sharon Smart
Justin Prisdorf
Alan Harris, Ma. y Ann Lai

Asst. News Editor
Asst. Sports Editor
Asst. Entertainment Editor
Contributing Editors
Senior Editors
Production Manager

Tanya Weinstein
Tod Dillon
Lizz Millan
Albert Mauro
Lori Bodwell, Michael Botelhof
Vincent Jacks

Business Manager
Advertising Manager
Advertising Staff
Circulation Manager

Eric Foushee
Michael Townsend
Michelle Campagna, Nancy Eckel,
Kim Maxwell
Eric Palmquist

Bowdoin Publishing Company Lori M. Bodwell, Eric F. Foushee,
Albert P. Mauro, Stephen Reynolds

Published weekly when classes are held during the Fall and Spring semester by the students of Bowdoin College. Address editorial communication to the Editor, subscription communication to the Circulation Manager, and business correspondence to the Business Manager at the Bowdoin Orient, 12 Cleveland Street, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011, or telephone (207)725-3300. The Bowdoin Orient reserves the right to edit any and all articles and letters. Subscriptions are $8.00 a semester or $15.00 a year. Past issues cannot be mailed. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to The Bowdoin Orient, Moulton Union, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011.

Pete

PETE

Letter

I am writing in response to the recent faculty decision regarding athletic evaluation in the admissions process. This decision permits essentially unregulated preferential treatment for athletes. Such admissions policies comprise academic excellence in favor of bolstered division three athletic teams.

The relative importance of athletics in the educational process is an issue which has been raised at several institutions. Recently a motion was made at Brown University to waive the "academic index" requirement in the case of a limited number of athletes in order to improve their hockey team. The "academic index" is an objective criterion reflecting SAT scores, class rank, and grade point average, and serves as a baseline in admissions evaluations. While this motion was passed by the Ivy Committee, it was stopped by the University president. His decision was a clear statement of Brown's commitment to academia. Conversely, the Chancellor of Maine Universities declared that a new football stadium should be built at the University of Maine at Orono, in spite of pressing academic needs. His rationale for this statement was that athletics is a powerful means of bringing money back to the school in the form of alumni donations. The latter philosophy appears to be the prevalent one here at Bowdoin. The new nine million dollar Farley Field House stands as a disturbing monument to the skewed priorities of this school. While the athletes are comfortably ensconced in a lavish gym, plans to continue with the new science center become more and more uncertain.

The elevation of athletics over academia at this institution is pervasive. While the football and hockey games are given tremendous publicity, there is little recognition for the dwindling population of scholars here. This year, the James Bowdoin Scholar ceremony was quite overshadowed by the opening of the new pool. The picture of this year's Phi Beta Kappa scholars merited space toward the rear of the school newspaper while athletic news claimed a front page position. These are only token examples of a problem that runs rampant here.

It has been suggested that to eliminate the athletic rating system would be to discriminate against athletes. Why do we not have other commensurate rating systems for musicians, actors, painters and writers? The present rating system discriminates against every applicant of less than exceptional prowess. Further, this process points up an equally prevalent form of discrimination that is visible in every aspect of this institution: discrimination against women.

While there are women's athletic teams at Bowdoin, the treatment of the men and women is clearly different. For instance, the women's hockey team is allowed ice time for practice only during the dinner hour when the rink is vacated by the men's team. This situation can be understood by examining the athletic tradition which draws on a predominantly male culture of fraternity that tends to exclude women. This exclusion identifies "women" as "other" and objectifies them as a commodity for men to exploit. The insistence on athletics rather than academia here at Bowdoin promotes such an unenlightened attitude towards women. This idea is incontrovertibly substantiated in Bowdoin's problems with sexual harassment. In the fall semester, two men were expelled for the sexual harassment of two women. Both of these men belonged to fraternities and were members of athletic teams here.

While athletics can be an important part of one's education, developing a sound body, as well as a sense of commitment and tenacity, it cannot be the sole or primary contributor to the development of the well rounded individual. As the purpose of the college states: "An important aspect of a sound liberal arts education is the power to read with critical perception, to think coherently, to write effectively, to speak with force and clarity, and to act as a constructive member of society." Clearly these ideals are firmly rooted in a strong sense of academia. It is time for the Bowdoin College faculty and Administration to have the courage to return to these intentions or to turn the school into a year round hockey and football camp.

Melissa Kiely '88

LEAVE A VOID IN THE NOIDSM

Clip this coupon off the
NOID's face and call
Domino's Pizza® now!
We Avoid The NOIDSM
and make pizza just the way you want it.

729-5561

26 Bath Rd.
Open late every night.
Open for lunch every Sat. and Sun.

Our drivers carry less
than $20.00.

Limited delivery area.

©1987 Domino's Pizza, Inc.
NOIDSM design in CLAYMATION[®]
by Will Vinton Productions, Inc.

DOMINO'S
PIZZA
DELIVERS[®]
FREE.

SM

$1.00

$1.00 off any 16" pizza.
One coupon per pizza.
Expires: 4-17-88

Fast, Free Delivery
26 Bath Rd.
Phone: 729-5561

includes all applicable state and local taxes

THE

BOWDOIN ORIENT

FIRST CLASS MAIL
U.S. Postage PAID
BRUNSWICK, ME.
Permit No. 25

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

VOLUME CXVII

BOWDOIN COLLEGE, BRUNSWICK, MAINE, FRIDAY, APRIL 15, 1988

NUMBER 21

Students meet with Greason to discuss athletes and academics

KEVIN WESLEY

ORIENT In-Depth Editor

Consequent to a letter printed in last week's Orient and the Portland Press Herald, 35 students met with President A. LeRoy Greason on Tuesday.

The meeting, organized by Melissa Kiely '88, was held to discuss what she called the "unregulated preferential treatment of athletes" both in the admissions process and the classroom.

Kiely said she had received a phone call from President Greason last Thursday in response to a letter printed in the Press Herald earlier this month. In a similar version printed in the Orient last week, Kiely criticized the recent faculty vote calling for unlimited athletic ratings, and the lack of fair treatment in other extra-curricular activities.

The meeting began with Greason criticizing the letter, saying, "One of my concerns with your letter is that it was misleading." Greason said Kiely was questioning the rights of individual faculty members to vote on specific issues.

Kiely also questioned the rights of athletic coaches to be considered full faculty members, while citing that administrative staff, many with master's degrees or doctorates are not considered faculty members.

Greason said the reason coaches are faculty members is "historical in nature," dating back 25 years ago when physical education was part of the college curriculum and included in a student's grade point average.

Students in the Hawthorne-Longfellow conference room verbally attacked Greason's comments, and pressed for him to explain why coaches are considered faculty, yet do not teach graded classes.

"It is a discrepancy," Greason said. It's never been seriously challenged. The reason it hasn't been is that (faculty status used) to get men and women who are interested in the students more than a won-loss record."

While Greason said he has not taken steps to change the faculty criteria and that the coaches show up "not very often," they tend to show when they have "some issue of consequence to them."

Karen McSweeney '88 said since coaches have no connection to academics, they should not be considered faculty members. She said she and other seniors present have seen a greater emphasis on athletics during their Bowdoin tenure. "After four years here, we sense a problem. Bowdoin has a long way to 273 people showed for Bowdoin's Spring blood drive yesterday. Organizer Andy Bernstein '88 says 230 pints were collected which is over 100 more than this February's blood drive. Photo by Alan Harris.

(Continued on page 11)

Federal funds sought for science center

DOUG JONES

ORIENT Contributing Editor

When Congress begins approving the budgets for federal agencies this summer Bowdoin administrators will be reading the fine print. If all goes as planned, they will find $12 million for Bowdoin's proposed science facility.

around the country are increasingly turning to Congress for funds instead of going through the established "peer review" system which many see as stacked against them.

"The ability of small schools to get federal funds on 'brick and mortar' projects is not very good... This route of appealing directly to Congress by attaching a specific spending allocation onto the appropriations bill for a particular government agency.

Critics have attacked this practice of hiring lobbyists by arguing that Congress is not qualified to make decisions on these projects and that colleges should be rewarded for their academic not political prowess.

Gerald Cassidy, the president of Cassidy and Associates, has come under fire himself for playing the role of an academic lobbyist. During a debate on the Senate floor in 1986 Senator John Danforth, Republican of Missouri, said, "This Mr. Cassidy goes around to colleges and universities and says, 'Pay me $2000 a month for a minimum of two years and I will help you get government grants.' It is just plain wrong for colleges to be belying up to the trough of the Federal Government." The New York Times reported.

Smaller schools have countered that the alternative, the traditional system of peer review, favors larger research oriented institutions.

(Continued on page 11)

Admissions accepts 860

LISA KANE
ORIENT Staff

The letters are out. This week 3,665 high school students will have received their long-awaited notification from the Bowdoin College Admissions Office.

The Admissions Office has finally completed its decisionmaking process for the class of 1992 and high school students all over the country will open their letters of notification this week. Seventy-nine percent of those that applied will receive rejection letters. That 21% which Bowdoin has granted admissions will most likely receive acceptances from a number of other selective colleges as well, according to Bill Mason, Director of Admissions.

The Admissions Office received its second largest pool of applicants in a dozen years. Despite the high number of applicants, Dean of the College Janet Jervis limited the class of 1992 to 360 students. As Janet Lavin, Associate Director of Admissions, pointed out, "It is wonderful for Bowdoin, it just made our job that much more difficult." Out of a pool of 3,665 Bowdoin admitted 803 students.

According to Mason, the admissions process occurs in stages. 160 students were accepted through Early Decision. 250 students who were clearly the academic elite were offered admission. Only about 390 spots remained for the regular decision process. Mason said that when they were considering an application—which took an average of 15 minutes—they looked for high achievers and also searched for talented students who for one reason or another had not realized their potential but would do so in college.

Both Mason and Lavin stressed that this year in particular they (Continued on page 11)

Smaller colleges around the country are increasingly turning to Congress for funds instead of going through the established "peer review system" which many see as stacked against them.

Following a controversial national trend, Bowdoin is appealing directly to Congress for funds, bypassing the traditional method of "peer review" through which most federal funds are allocated to colleges. In order to make its case on Capitol Hill Bowdoin has retained the lobbying firm of Cassidy and Associates.

Bowdoin is not the first college to take this step. Smaller colleges gress is being increasingly used by colleges," said Dean for Planning Thomas Hochstetler.

In the traditional peer review system Government agencies bring in outside experts to appraise the value of proposals based on such factors as the competence of the institution, the merit of the proposal, and the expected returns of the project. Such reviews do not occur when schools pursue special

The 1988
Bowdoin Dance performance-tonight and tomorrow night
see page five

Robert Cray Band announced as Spring Concert... see page three

Minority admissions increase

TAMARA DASSANAYAKE
ORIENT News Editor

A significant increase in the number of minority student applicants has characterized the admissions process to select members of the Bowdoin College Class '92. Many of the minority students who were admitted have been invited to visit the campus this weekend for the "Bowdoin Experience."

According to data released by the Admissions Office, almost 11% or 88 of this year's admitted applicants belong to minority groups. The number of Black, Hispanic, Asian American and Native American admissions are 42, 16, 29 and one respectively. Last year, only 6% of the admissions offers were made to minority applicants.

The Black, Hispanic and Native American students admitted in this week's admissions decisions were invited to minority weekend, the "Bowdoin Experience" being held on campus this weekend. Of the 59 students invited, 34 decided to attend the four-day "Bowdoin preview."

"This is a great opportunity for them [the students] to get the feel of Bowdoin and examine what it has to offer," said Assistant Director of Admissions Leon Brasswell. "It is supposed to be a 'fun' weekend but it is up to the students to make the most of their time here...and get to the issues which concern them," he said.

"Bowdoin may be a shock to some of the students...especially those from larger cities," said Brasswell. "I don't want Bowdoin to be seen through rose-colored glasses...but I do want the students to be as excited about the College as we are," he added.

Prospective students visit campus.

The program for this weekend started with a welcoming dinner on Thursday night after which the students met with their Bowdoin hosts at the Afro-American Center.

On Friday, students are free to attend classes and are also able to meet with Director of Student Aid Walter Moulton who will discuss the logistics of financing a Bowdoin Education. "Many of the students will require financial aid to attend a college like Bowdoin...it is important to understand how the financial aid package works," said Director of Admissions William Mason.

A reception with faculty and administration followed by dinner with faculty in their homes has been arranged for later in the day. "This not only gives students a chance to find out the teaching and research interests of the faculty...but also allows the faculty to form bonds with future students," said Brasswell.

The schedule for Saturday includes lunch in Portland and a Freeport shopping spree. The same evening, the students will have the opportunity to meet with minority Bowdoin alumni to discuss "Life after Bowdoin" before rounding up their visit at a party hosted by the Afro-American Society.

The number of Black applicants almost doubled this year as compared to last year. The total number of black applicants this year was 103 as compared with last year's number of 56.

The number of Hispanic, Asian American and Native American applicants also increased compared to last year. This year's 3665 strong applicant pool contained applicants from 103 Black, 38 Hispanic, 106 Asian American and 8 Native American students.

Brasswell said he was very pleased with the increased interest of minority students in Bowdoin this year. "I hope we see a continuation of this trend," he added.

Agriculture series ends

ALAN HARRIS
ORIENT Photography Editor

The sun is rising for agriculture, or so it seems according to the speakers in the lecture series "Sustainable Agriculture in New England: Alternatives, Challenges, and Choices."

The final lecture of this series sponsored by the Environmental Studies Program and the Economics Department will take place on Monday April 18th, at 7:30 pm in Daggett Lounge. Stuart Hill of McGill University's Ecological Agriculture Projects and Chaitanya York of the Maine Department of Agriculture will discuss "Sustainability: Commitments for Society, Commitments for the Individual."

Bucky Koulouris, Environmental Studies Program Assistant, and David Vail, Professor of Economics organized the series to provide for as wide an interest as possible. According to Koulouris the lectures were "not too unifying" and presented "a variety of perspectives" on sustainable agriculture. Most of the lectures were followed the next day with an informal luncheon discussion.

The first event was a panel discussion on "The Challenge of Sunrise Agriculture" which provided an introduction into what sustainable agriculture meant for New England. Vail, who chaired the discussion, said that agriculture in Maine has been going through some dark times as of late with the decline of the poultry, dairy and potatoes industries the past two decades. Vail expressed his hope for "sunrise on new agriculture in New England."

Esther LaCognata of the Maine Department of Agriculture discussed the state of Maine's farms and what the farmers saw as their needs. She said that potatoes are still the "number one commodity" but that Maine has gained significant ground in sunrise industries—those industries which produce fresh foods for local markets like broccoli and pick-your-own raspberries.

Stewart Smith of Tufts University said, former director of the Maine Department of Agriculture spoke on the need for farmers to reclaim the nearly 90% of the agriculture industry that has been lost to non-farm segments like marketing and fertilizers. Small farms could sustain themselves by "vertical development"—marketing their own produce at farmer's markets and other outlets.

Matthew Liebman, Professor of Sustainable Agriculture from the University of Maine, spoke on the ways farmers could lower their costs and be more environmentally benign. He pointed out that fertilizers and pesticides have been used to excess and that current applications of them are quite inefficient. Liebman ran through varieties of crops and methods that could improve the soil without the use of pesticides.

Next, Patrick Madden, Professor of Agricultural Economics at Penn State spoke on "The Economic Promise of Alternative Agriculture." He not only covered some of the techniques necessary to allow farmers to produce crops more efficiently with less environmental damage but also how to produce profits at the same time.

Madden saw the future of alternative agriculture as "win-win situation." He also talked about government and higher education's effect on research in the field. He is currently involved with a new program that was started with $3.9 million of federal money.

Edward Hawes, Professor of History at Sam Houston State University, talked about saltwater farming systems in Maine in the third lecture. He looked for "historical precedence" as to how former inhabitants used the resources available. Hawes hoped to preserve some of the better aspects of these former systems.

A series on issues concerning the Gulf of Maine will follow this lecture series next semester. Koulouris hopes to find speakers whose material can be integrated into topics classes may cover in the fall.

Jones creates communications company

TAMARA DASSANAYAKE
ORIENT News Editor

Sophomore Keith Jones realized a 10 year dream Tuesday when he officially established his very own corporation, Papaveracea. The first venture of the corporation, certified as a communications company, will be to publish a book of the same name written by Jones.

The purpose of the company is "to encourage the creativity of novice or neophyte artists," said Jones. Although he's starting in the arena of publishing, Jones hopes to expand into other forms of communicational media such as music, video and film.

According to Jones, he has chosen to initiate his venture by publishing 101 copies of his own book, an autobiography. He described the work as a "reflection of the diversity of the last 10 years of my life in many literal genres," and a "statement about a Black male in American society."

The material in the book is a culmination of several years of work and includes the contents of several creative papers he has written for classes at Bowdoin. According to Jones, the book also reflects the changing influences of literature in his life such as the writers of romantic period and existentialism.

Jones estimated the printed version to be approximately 140 pages in length. He hopes to have the first 101 signed and serial numbered copies plus 15 copies for release to the press ready before June, at the latest. The Moulton Union Bookstore has already ordered 12 copies to be put on display. He added that New York Times reporter Bren Staples has suggested the possibility of obtaining a distributor.

Jones also has several plans for the future. At present he is negotiating with several unpublished writers at Bowdoin and other institutions. Contracts are being drawn up for three more books by other authors and an "avant-garde magazine" said Jones.

He added that his contracts "provide extensive creative freedoms" for the artists. "They have full creative control and my benefits are the right to reprint and a percentage of the profit," he said.

Jones has also committed 33% of Papaveracea's profits to be divided amongst Amnesty International (Bath-Brunswick), the Bowdoin South African Scholarship fund, Looking Up (a program providing support for incest victims), the Pine Tree Legal volunteer lawyers program and the Jesse Jackson Presidential Campaign.

Eleven elected to Phi Beta Kappa

This year Bowdoin has elected eleven seniors to its chapter of the national honor society Phi Beta Kappa honoring graduating seniors. The eleven seniors chosen are:

Susan Anderson, a Math major, from Baltimore, Maryland; Aditya Behl, a Classics major and Religion minor, from New Delhi, India; Shawn Bell, a Government major and Romance Languages minor, from Lewiston, Maine.

Also, Joanna DeWolfe, a Psychology major and Chemistry minor, from Cumberland Center, Maine; Marilyn Gondek, a Religion major and Art History minor, from Topsham, Maine; Melissa Kietly, a Biochemistry and English double major from Leominster, Massachusetts.

And, William Littell, a Religion major and Philosophy minor from Winchester, Massachusetts; Theresa O'Hearn, a Psychology major and Economics minor, from Alstead, New Hampshire; Devika Seth, a Government major and Sociology minor, from Fort Wayne, Indiana; Samuel Shepherd, an English major, from Cambridge, Massachusetts; Katharine Whitman, an Anthropology major and Romance Languages minor, from University Park, Maryland.

What is your favorite 'Brady Bunch' episode?

BECKY AUSTIN
ORIENT Staff

Holly Jones '91: "They're all good but the best one is when Bobby goes on Greg's date and the frogs start jumping in the pizza."

David Weinstein '91: "When Greg's up in his love pad, complete with beads, and he makes Bobby believe there's a flying saucer, giving him wild dreams but not blowing his innocence."

Jim Barton '88: "When Bobby kisses a girl, sees fireworks, but gets mumps instead of a second date."

Larry Glenn '88: "Oh my nose! Oh my nose! Oh my nose!"

Robert Cray makes first appearance in Maine

DAWN VANCE
ORIENT News Editor
The Robert Cray Band is hot. And it is making its first appearance in Maine in Bowdoin College's own Morrell Gymnasium on Monday, May 9.

Thanks to the efforts of the Student Union Committee (SUC) and Student Activities Coordinator Bill Fruth this year's spring concert will feature the rhythm and blues of The Robert Cray Band. The Boston based band Treat Her Right which has recently released an album on RCA records will serve as the evening's opening act.

The planning for the spring concert began in an ad hoc committee of SUC months ago. This committee engaged itself in the complex task of wrangling with agencies and with other schools over possible choices for bands. After boiling down its choices, it presented its ideas to SUC in whose hands lay the responsibility of making a final decision.

The final decision? Pursue the possibility of bringing The Robert Cray Band to Maine, and specifically to Bowdoin College. The band confirmed last week for the May 9 date. Matt Finkelstein '90 who participated in the various stages of planning for the spring concert characterized this confirmation as a "feat in itself".

Finkelstein said that in searching for this spring's concert band the committee was looking for something different than what Bowdoin has held in the past. In a desire to move away from bands in the mode of the Ramones or the Fixx the committee opted for the rhythm and blues sound of The Robert Cray Band.

Finkelstein also said that when choosing a band the committee aimed at settling upon a group that would please not only the student body but the general community outside of Bowdoin. Most importantly, Finkelstein said, "We wanted to get someone people know and are going to be excited about."

And The Robert Cray Band is certainly something to be excited about. This West Coast Band is currently gaining worldwide attention, thanks in part to the smashing success of its recent album Strong Persuader and its single releases "Smoking Gun", "Right Next Door (Because of Me)", and "Nothing But a Woman".

Rolling Stone magazine has said of Cray in regard to Strong Persuader: "Strong Persuader is virtually a concept album, something that earlier generations of blues and soul men rarely assembled. Cray has blues and soul down to his fingertips, but he isn't some naive guitar slinger up from the bars. Like other Eighties rockers, he's made careful, self-conscious decisions about sound and sense. And with his intelligence, his ear for economy and the mysterious chemistry that turns scholarship into soul, Cray has grabbed enough roots to sound like a pioneer - not a throwback."

Robert Cray, who has won raves as a guitarist, singer and songwriter is joined by bass player Richard Cousins, keyboardist Peter Boe, and drummer David Olsen. The power of their performances and the widespread popularity that their music is attracting has catapulted them to the covers of a number of major magazines including Rolling Stone, Musician, Guitar Player, Cashbox and Living Blues.

The real-life, biting, passionate quality of Cray's music has gained the recognition and respect of such superstar musicians as Eric Clapton, Elvis Costello, Keith Richards, Mick Jagger and Tina Turner.

The Robert Cray Band will perform Monday, May 9 in Morrell Gymnasium. Tickets are on sale starting tomorrow in the Campus Scheduling Office. The price for tickets is $8 with Bowdoin ID, $12 without.

Rolling Stone has also said of Cray: "Musicians like Robert Cray aren't supposed to exist in the 1980's. Any A&R honcho at Conglomerate Records will tell you that smart black musicians in their thirties aspire to be Prince (if they're skinny), Lionel Richie (if they're decorous), or Luther Vandross (if they're hefty) and that they've probably never heard of Bobby 'Blue' Bland or Magic Sam. The blues also knows that black blues and soul singers are guys in polyester suits pushing fifty and singing at supper clubs if they're lucky; bars if they're not; the music's out of date and unsuitable for mass-market vinyl. Blues today, he'll say, equals white guitarists mumbling lyrics and slinging feedback - you know, the stuff they play on AOR.

To prove those assumptions wrong, out of nowhere (well, Tacoma, Washington) comes Robert Cray - a black soul-blues singer-guitarist who's at home in the 1980's, fashion be damned."

So far SUC's decision on The Robert Cray Band has met with positive response. Fruth said that he has received "a lot of response through the grapevine" and that there has been "response in the community already - that was a good sign".

Finkelstein said, "A lot of people I know are excited about it - and Robert Cray is hot... just by judging what people are saying I think it's going to go over well."

And no doubt it will go over well. Tickets for The Robert Cray Band - showtime 7:30, Monday, May 9 - have already gone on sale at ticket outlets statewide and in the Campus Scheduling Office. Tickets are available in the Campus Scheduling Office from 8:00-12:00 and 1:00-5:00 at a charge of $8 with Bowdoin student I.D. or $12 for the general public.

On the day of the show tickets will be sold at $9 with Bowdoin student I.D. or $13.50 for the general public.

Alpha Beta Phi sorority loses house

STEPHEN COOK
ORIENT Staff

The landlord of 39 Harpswell Street has "cried wolf" for his last time.

The women of Alpha Beta Phi sorority found themselves homeless last Friday upon their landlord's announcement that he has finally decided after two years to convert their home into a bed and breakfast. According to Alpha Beta Phi's president, Wendy Carlson '90, this announcement came three hours before room draw deposits were due, leaving little time to notify those women planning to live in the house next year.

Carlson said that although this has been a setback for the sorority, the group is trying to "view it as a possibility for growth." Despite the landlord's tolerance of its activities, Carlson added, the sorority is "looking for a more dependable living arrangement."

While this may leave the sorority in limbo for a year, since it is unlikely the group will secure a house until the 1989-1990 school year, this does not forbid hibernation from Bowdoin Greek life.

For the first two years of Alpha Beta Phi's history at Bowdoin, the members were without a house and still attracted sufficient drop classes. The lack of housing "definitely will make it harder to compete with the other houses, but...it's worked in the past," said Carlson.

For next year the group plans to work within the college housing system and hopes to cluster as many members together as possible so that it can organize small rush activities from one central location.

The greatest hindrance to attracting freshmen next year will be the impossibility of the sorority to participate in the rotational dining system. This dining system has proven a major rush activity for all of the other Greek organizations because it gives the freshmen a chance to gain a perspective into the daily life of the fraternities.

The history of Bowdoin's only sorority is a rocky one. Besides problems finding a permanent home, the state liquor inspector caught Alpha Beta Phi for serving alcohol to minors last fall.

Carlson said of the eviction, "This makes me realize we're a lot more than where we live." It is instead the people who belong to the organization which define the house, and this realization has unified the women of Alpha Beta Phi a great deal.

Beyond these preliminary plans, these women cannot take any greater steps at this time, primarily because they await the publication of the report of the Fraternity Review Committee. That report may suggest some sweeping changes which the sorority will have to take into account as it continues its search for a place to live.

AVOID LONG LINES THIS SUMMER.

Before you get out in the sun in your bathing suit this season, come in and get a smooth, even, natural tan.

You'll look great, feel great and no one will know what your other bathing suit looks like.

Come in for 1 free tan session!

Bring your student ID for 10% discount.

Sunday, Inc.

32 Turner St. 729-3383 (off Pleasant St., behind Big Apple)

LACOSTE

School of the Arts in France
Sponsored by

The Cleveland Institute of Art

Credit courses in:
Sculpture
Stone Carving
Painting
Printmaking
Self in the Environment
Drawing
Photography
French
Art History
Poetry

SUMMER SESSION
FALL SEMESTER
For Illustrated Brochure:
Foreign Studies
Cleveland Institute of Art-PAK
11141 East Boulevard
Cleveland, Ohio 44106
(216) 229-0938

STUDY ART
IN THE
SOUTH OF FRANCE

Norse scholars gather for international conference

More than 30 archaeologists, historians, and climatologists from the United States, Canada, and Europe will gather at Bowdoin College to attend "The Norse of the Atlantic" international conference to be held April 17-21.

Three lectures will be open to the public at no charge. All of the lectures will start at 7:30 P.M. in Kresge Auditorium, Visual Arts Center.

Sunday, April 17, Thomas McGovern, associate professor of anthropology at Hunter College, will present "The Life and Death of Viking Greenland". His talk will examine the history of Norse colonization, their interaction with natives and the physical environment, and theories regarding the death of the Greenland colony in the 15th century.

Monday, April 18, Gwyn Jones, professor emeritus of English language and literature in the department of history and Scandinavian languages at the University of Cardiff, will discuss "The Viking World". His talk will give an overview of the history and literary tradition of the Vikings.

Birgitta Wallace, staff archaeologist at Parks Canada, Atlantic Region will present "The Norse In North America: Myth and Reality". Her talk will review the latest evidence of Norse exploration along the northeast North American coast, including the genuine Norse penny found at a site in Penobscot Bay.

The conference received more than $25,000 in grant support from the National Geographic Society, the Wenner-Gren Foundation for Anthropological Research, the Maine Humanities Council, and the American-Scandinavian Foundation.

The conference is co-sponsored by the Peary-MacMillan Arctic Museum and Arctic Studies Center and the Center for Northern Studies, Wolcott, Vt.

Twenty-five people, representing several Maine environmental groups, protested Brunswick Naval Air Station's alleged mismanaged toxic waste dumps last Monday. Photo by Alan Harris.

Demonstrators protest toxic waste dumps

A small group of twenty-five people stood outside the Brunswick Naval Air Station (BNAS) Monday afternoon protesting the military base's alleged mismanaged toxic waste dumps. Representing a coalition of several Maine environmental groups—including Maine P.O.W.E.R., Maine People's Alliance, and Stop Toxics Against Citizens—the protestors chanted slogans to passing cars and held a small press conference for twenty minutes before leaving.

The group was a combination of the "southern" and "western" arms of a three tiered caravan visiting what they call the "terrible ten" toxic waste sites in Maine. The three groups converged upon the Department of Environmental Protection (EPA) in Augusta later that afternoon to present a "report card" of the department's performance in toxic waste law enforcement.

"For too long, we have been trying to control or manage toxic wastes," said Cathy Hinds of Maine P.O.W.E.R. at the picket lines outside the Naval Air Station. "The 'terrible ten' sites are good examples where reduction by source is necessary."

Maine People's Alliance says the base has 7 toxic waste dumps on its grounds, one within a quarter mile of Brunswick and Topsham public drinking water supply wells. The EPA labeled Brunswick Naval Air Station as one of the nation's worst toxic waste sites in the nation last year.

Other stops on the "terrible ten" caravan included the International Paper Mill in Jay, Saco Defense Inc., and the Danville Ash Landfill.

HALF OFF

SELECTED SUNGLASSES

Come to Coastal Opticians and choose a new pair of sunglasses from our selection marked HALF PRICE, OR pick from our regular lines and we'll give you a $10. credit for your old pair.

Either way, you can face summer in style.

Coastal Opticians, Inc.

138 Maine St., Brunswick 729-4481

Pauline's
Bloomers

HINT: SECRETARIES
WEEK BEGINS
APRIL 25!

Send your secretary a gift she will appreciate - the F.T.D. Bud Vase with fresh flowers; a Rose Bowl with a variety of flowers; blooming plants; or an assortment of Holland flowers.

Call or visit us today!

We deliver!

-wire service-

major credit cards accepted

TONTINE MALL
BRUNSWICK, ME.
725-5952

BIG RED Q PRINTING
next to the College

- stationery
- resumes
- posters
- newsletters

212E Maine Street
Brunswick
729-4840

SWAN'S ISLAND, ME.
3 BR, deck, view.
Hiking, swimming.
June - Sept. $350 a week.
No smokers.
609-466-1102

CRUISE SHIPS
NOW HIRING. M/E

Summer & Career Opportunities
(Will Train). Excellent pay plus
world travel. Hawaii, Bahamas,
Caribbean, etc. CALL NOW
206-736-0775 Ext.544F

TYPISTS - Hundreds weekly
at home! Write: P.O. Box 17
Clark, New Jersey 07066

Part-Time -
Home Mailing Program!
Excellent income!
Detail, send self-addressed,
stamped envelope.
WEST,
Box 5877, Hulsdale, N.J. 07205

Summer Session

Planning to be in Southern Maine this summer?
Then build USM into your Summer Plans

With 7-week, 4-week, and 6-week course sessions and numerous special institutes, USM makes it convenient for you to continue moving toward your goals with quality academic experiences, as well as enjoy the rocky coast of Maine.

Registration begins March 14, 1988, and continues through the beginning of each session.

For more information, contact: Summer Session, University of Southern Maine, 96 Falmouth St., Portland, Maine 04103, (207) 780-4076.

Reminder: all USM degree candidates, as well as special students taking 12 or more credit hours, must comply with the State Immunization Law before registering.

University of Southern Maine

ENTERTAINMENT

Dance group executes vivacious, creative performance

LIZZ MILLAN

ORIENT Asst. Ent. Editor

The Seventeenth Annual Spring Dance Performance will be held this weekend. Long hours of practice and planning have produced a dynamic show. To experience the depth of talent, Pickard Theatre is the place to be on April 15 and 16 at 8:00 p.m. The show provides an hour of creative movements and forms.

The dance group consists of thirty-five Bowdoin students who executed most of the planning themselves.

"Only three of the fifteen dances are faculty constructed. All of the others were choreographed by the students—we have provided feedback, but almost all of the ideas are theirs," said June Vail, head of the Dance Department.

The performance is not limited to any specific type of dance. "We wanted to give the dancers the freedom to explore their own ideas," Vail said.

Variety is certainly not lacking in this year's show. It opens with a Hawaiian dance, "Tua Hone"—a wonderful way to open a wonderful show. Meighan Howard's performance is smooth and controlled. The dance is soothing to watch.

The next performance was quite a display of talent. Cyndy Sperry and Leslie Stone began work on this duet in the Fall and the result of their efforts was obvious. The two dancers, moving at times as one, generated a great deal of energy. Their lifts seemed effortless and the way they glided across the stage was reminiscent of the smoothness of a fish skimming through the water.

The show progressed from the sea to the bedroom of an adolescent. Julie Boyd and Elizabeth King danced/acted the trials and tribulations of "Adolescence" in this innovative dance. Julie Boyd's performance captured this mood, providing a definite change of pace.

After three solid performances, "Small Talk" was disappointing. There were too many dancers doing too many different things. Individual dance displays were strong, yet overall this dance lacked unity.

The show picked up again quickly as Vince Jacks, Jennifer Levitsky and Beth Mullen took the stage. "Thinkin' About Your Body" was great! Everything from the lights to the music came together to create a well-balanced display of movement.

Colin Sweeney and Laura Farnsworth as "Donald and Lydia" were no less exciting as they related their story to the audience. Through minimal movement, much was expressed, making this dance one of the most entertaining.

The final dance of the first half was the most beautiful. Trinka Hamilton transformed the stage into a white blur of graceful movement. "Ode to Isadora," inspired by the dances of Isadora Duncan, combined ballet with a more modern form of dance, producing magnificent results.

Opening the second half of the show was a minimalist dance.

According to the dance program, "Trio A" says "No to performance, virtuoso movement, feat, character, development and climax and substitutes tasklike activity, human scale, neutral performance, equality of parts." "Trio A" lived up to this description. It was performed by Trinka Hamilton, Elizabeth King and Leslie Stone, each giving a strong performance.

The next dance flowed nicely. Dancers

Lisa Bourassa, Matt Ennis, Melissa Erdor, Karen Feeley, Trinka Hamilton, Dorothy MacGillivray, Moy Oglivie and Diane Russell made "River" quite eye catching. Their costumes accentuated the mystic mood the dance created.

Jen Levitsky and Beth Mullen appeared together for another appealing performance. Their movement and form generated a light mood. The two dancers had their steps coordinated perfectly, and possessed all of the grace of two cats stalking in the night.

Proving again that there is some element which will appeal to everyone was the next dance, "Ikk." This dance was anything but "icky," but a creative collaboration adding a nice curve to the show. Laura Farnsworth, Elizabeth King, Kate Kramer, Asher Miller and Leslie Stone transformed themselves through both costume and movement into creatures of the night. There were many surprises in this number, making it a fun experience.

Tessa Hadlock, Meighan Howard, Leslie Stone and Cyndy Sperry perform a modern dance in the Seventeenth Annual Spring Dance Performance held tonight and tomorrow night at 8 p.m. in Pickard Theatre. Photo by Erika Goeldner.

The only ballet number of the performance followed. Meighan Howard and Elizabeth King made the most of this opportunity in their well-executed dance choreographed by Katie Filmanowicz.

"Meighan and Elizabeth worked really hard on it and I think it was nice for them to do something different," Filmanowicz said.

"Vacationland" was a strong finish to a strong show. Trinka Hamilton, Meighan Howard, Cyndy Sperry and Leslie Stone formed a major source of this strength. The efforts of the other dancers in the number added to the flourishing finish.

"The performance has always been strong because the people who are involved with it are disciplined. Their motivation and commitment come across in the performance," Vail said. After viewing the performance most will agree.

Casselberry-Dupree speak through reggae

GENEVIEVE ANDERSON
ORIENT Contributor

You might have seen the posters. Casselberry-Dupree is coming to Bowdoin on Saturday. Casselberry-Dupree? What's that you might ask: a new flavor at Ben and Jerry's? Some special type of ice-cream? Well, actually it's a hip, re-they chanced upon each other and began singing together.

Since then, the two women have moved to San Francisco and back East again to Boston collecting material and defining their style. This exploration has shaped them into a politically aggressive, ebullient force in modern African and reggae music.

Jaque Dupree has a clear, undiluted, soprano voice which glances off J. (for Judith) Casselberry's dark, soulful contralto in harmonies that are reminiscent of gospel and soul. They will be joined on Saturday by Toshi Reagan (who played to sell-out crowds here three years ago) and the percussionist Annette Aguilar. They are primarily a solid reggae band which ventures into other styles of music to express the universality of music in a world of prejudice.

Their music is socially conscious, reaching out to "everybody regardless of skin color, shoe size, age diet, sexual preference, hair texture or marital status." They sing of many different kinds of pain and oppression, touching on a range of issues from feminism to war. But don't be mistaken, the lyrics might be heavy but the music is not. With roots that reach back to Aretha Franklin, Bob Marley, and Motown, their sound is a rocking combination of American folk songs, island rhythm, and African melody.

In the age of the disposable hit song, Casselberry-Dupree play groovy beats which beg you to dance and which actually have a message!

On their new album, City Down, they reinterpret Bob Marley's "Coming in from the Cold" and "Positive Vibration", making it their own. They have the talent to make even the Eagles sound soulful in their rendition of "Take it to the Limit." The album was chosen "Best Of" by the Boston Globe, Los Angeles Times, and Pulse Magazine. The group will be selling copies during their concert here.

Susan Evans '88 of the Bowdoin Women's Association has arranged for Casselberry-Dupree to come warm up this unseasonably cold campus with a little Third World sun. Other sponsors are the Women's Resource Center, SUC, GLSA, Struggle and Change, and SAFC.

The music begins at 8:30 p.m., this Saturday. Tickets are $8.00 for the general public, and $3.00 for students ($4.00 at the door.) Tickets are on sale at Macbean's music (Tontine Mall), and the Women's Resource Center.

This reggae band will have something for everyone, but most of all, it promises to be a good time. After the Ramones, I think we all need a little harmony.

sounding, reggae duo who are coming to Morrell Gym to rouse you from your usual weekend trance.

Casselberry and Dupree are two women who met in 1967 on the steps of Erasmus High school in Brooklyn, New York. They were both students at the school when

Photography exhibit opens

ELIZABETH MULLEN
ORIENT Staff

A student exhibition featuring works by Angus Wall '88 and Elizabeth McGhee '89 opens Sunday in the Kresge Gallery, Visual Arts Center.

Both artists work mainly in photography, though their styles are quite different. Wall's work, a kind of photo-collage, explores the tension between the immediate reality of each separate photograph and the imposition of an artificial structure through collage which deliberately manipulates the eye of the viewer.

"It's like a dance," explained Wall. "You work with the camera in order to capture a series of split seconds, flickers of reality." Using black lines to accentuate the different photographs in each collage, Wall produces a disjointed unity. This "stilted flow" leads the viewer along a specific visual path while calling attention to its parts and allowing the viewer's eye to travel back and forth along the created path.

"I was influenced by film," noted Wall. "Especially montage—the idea of seeing something from several different angles in rapid succession. The advantage to my work is that you can see that succession all at once; the temporal element is eliminated."

Much of Elizabeth McGhee's work deals with the spatial relationship between objects within the frame of the photograph. Working both in still life and with the figure, McGhee sees each element of the photograph as an integral part of the whole. She has been influenced by such artists as Cartier-Bresson and Robert Frank.

In addition to their individual works, Wall and McGhee have done some collaborative photography. This kind of group work can be the most difficult, according to McGhee: "There's quite a bit of emotional give and take that goes on when you're trying to join heads and make two visions one."

The exhibition will run from April 17-21.

Photograph from Wall and McGhee's exhibit.

Sights and Sounds: a calendar for April 15-24

FRIDAY, APRIL 15
7:00 and 9:00 p.m. — Wherefore Art presents Nostalghia, a film by the late Russian director Andrei Tarkovsky. In Italian and Russian dialogue with English subtitles, the film will be shown in Kresge Auditorium.

7:30 and 10:00 p.m. — The BVFS

for students/$4 at the door, and $8 for the general public. Tickets will be available at the Women's Resource Center Monday-Friday from 3:00 p.m.-midnight; MacBeans Music, Brunswick; and Saturday a 7:00 p.m. in Morrell Gymnasium.

SUNDAY, APRIL 17

A photography exhibit of student works by Elizabeth McGhee '89 and Angus Wall '88 opens Sunday April 17 in the VAC.

presents The Pope of Greenwich Village, in Smith Auditorium. $1 admission.

8:00 p.m. — The Seventeenth Annual Spring Performance by the Bowdoin Dance Group, of student and faculty works, will be given in Pickard Theater.

SATURDAY, APRIL 16

8:00 p.m. — The Seventeenth Annual Spring Performance by the Bowdoin Dance Group, of student and faculty works, will be given in Pickard Theater.

8:30 p.m. — Casselberry-DuPre, whose record, City Down, was picked as "Best of 1986" performs a blend of gospel, country, folk, and reggae music. Presently, this duo is performing throughout the United States and Canada with a band and often features Toshi Reagan and Annette Aguilera. The concert will be held in Morrell Gymnasium, and admission is $3

for students/$4 at the door, and $8 for the general public. Tickets will be available at the Women's Resource Center Monday-Friday from 3:00 p.m.-midnight; MacBeans Music, Brunswick; and Saturday a 7:00 p.m. in Morrell Gymnasium.

for students/$4 at the door, and $8 for the general public. Tickets will be available at the Women's Resource Center Monday-Friday from 3:00 p.m.-midnight; MacBeans Music, Brunswick; and Saturday a 7:00 p.m. in Morrell Gymnasium.

Auditorium.

MONDAY, APRIL 18

7:30 p.m. — "The Viking World," will be discussed by Gwyn Jones, professor emeritus of English language and literature in the department of history and Scandinavian languages at the University of Cardiff. The talk will give an overview of the history and literary tradition of the Vikings.

TUESDAY, APRIL 19

4:00 p.m. — Composer, conductor, and writer Gunther Schuller will visit Bowdoin for a free-for-all discussion in Room 101, Gibson Hall. Schuller, the former president of the New England Conservatory of Music, is the founder and director of the New England Conservatory Ragtime Ensemble. In his own music, he has often sought to combine jazz with the classical music tradition, resulting in a hybrid he has named "third-stream" music.

7:30 p.m. — "The Norse in North America: Myth and Reality" will be given by Birgitta Wallace, staff archaeologist at Parks Canada, Atlantic Region. Wallace directs the excavation and analysis of the site at L'Anse aux Meadows, Newfoundland, the only documented Norse settlement in the New World.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 20

1:00 p.m. — A Gallery Talk, "Contemporary Art from the Permanent Collection" will be given by Larry D. Lutchmansingh, associate professor of art, in the Museum of Art.

PERFORMANCES

April 14 — The Duke Robillard Band will appear at the Tree Cafe, 45 Danforth St., Portland, (774-1441). Tickets are $5. Robillard is a blues/jazz guitarist, founder of Rumble of Blues.

April 15-16 — 8:00 p.m. — The Ram Island Dance Company appears as the final event in Portland Dance Center's 1987-1988 "Dance Around Town" performance series with a performance in the Portland Performing Arts Center. In the works for the performances are a number of historic revivals as well as new works by choreographer Daniel McCusker and the premiere of a collaborative piece created by McCusker and visual artist Katarina Weslien entitled "Pentimento" — the term describes the type of effect that occurs when an outer coating of paint begins to fade or chip away to reveal another layer of paint. For tickets and further information, call the Portland Dance Center at 773-2562.

April 17 — 3:00 and 7:00 p.m. —

The Portland Symphony Orchestra's final Candlelight Concerts will take place at the Eastland Ballroom of the Sonesta Hotel. Violinist Sandra Kott guests on works by Arraiga, Ginastera, Vaughan-Williams, and Elgar. Call 773-8191 for further information.

EXHIBITIONS

"Eliot Porter," is on display in the Twentieth Century and Temporary Exhibition Galleries, April 15 through June 5, a major exhibition celebrating the 50-year career of Eliot Porter, one of the world's leading color photographers. His brilliantly colored images of leaf and landscape, sun and tide have the majestic authority of revealed truth. They restore a bit of the natural world to our imaginations," says John Coffey, Bowdoin College curator of collections. Porter prefers intimate views of nature rather than sweeping landscapes. In his own words, "nature is too vast and complex to grasp quickly, but a fragment of it is comprehensible and allow the imagination to fill in the excluded setting." Contemporary Art from the Permanent Collection, is on display in the John A. and Helen P. Becker Gallery through May 29.

OUTING -- CLUB SCHEDULE

On Friday, April 22 two afternoon trips are planned — a Rock Climbing trip leaves at 2:00 p.m. from the Bowdoin polar bear and is scheduled to return at 6:00 p.m. Contact John Scott (729-0723) or Steve Greenberg (433-2369) for more information.

Also, a flatwater canoe trip to Merrymeeting Bay goes out from 1:00 p.m. to 6:00 p.m. The Bay is just a short drive from campus, allowing for lots of time to enjoy the afternoon paddling, and no canoeing experience is necessary. This trip will be led by Matt Arbour (x3982) and Pat Coughlin (729-6500), whom you should call for answers to any questions about the trip. Be sure to sign up just outside of the BOC office starting early next week. For hiking buffs there is going to be a trip to Acadia National Park. The trip will depart from the polar bear at 1:00 p.m. on Friday and return around 10:00 p.m. Saturday. Beginner hikers are welcome, as this trip will be a challenging yet not too difficult day hike. Contact Liz Sizeler or Shamu Fenyes at 725-7576 if you have questions.

On Saturday, April 23, a white-water canoe excursion to the Saco River will be led by John Robison (x3905). The trip is open to anyone who has taken the BOC white water canoe class, and it is scheduled to leave at 8:00 a.m. Saturday morning and return at 6:00 p.m. that evening. Sign up for what promises to be a fun, relaxing day of paddling down the beautiful Saco River.

Sunday there is yet another flat-

Wherefore Art presents Andrei Tarkovsky's "Nostalghia" tonight in Kresge Auditorium at 7:00 and 9:00 p.m.

water canoe trip planned, this time to the Ellis River. It is scheduled to leave at 7:00 a.m. and to return at 6:00 p.m. Check with Jim Lentz (x3325) for more information.

Just a reminder...All of the above trips have important pre-trip meetings on Thursday, April 21 at 7:00 p.m. in the BOC office. If you cannot attend the meeting, be sure to contact one of the trip leaders beforehand. The office is in Sargent Gym (in the main door and up the left staircase), where you will also find the bulletin board with the sign-up sheets for the trips that are going out that weekend.

THE BRUNSWICK

FLOWER SHOP

Centrally located across from Bowdoin College

729-8895
216A Maine St.
Mon.-Sat. 9:30-6

We Deliver
Wire Service

The TASTE OF MAINE RESTAURANT

- Banquet Facilities
- Function Rooms
- Overlooking Pleasant Cove

443-4554

Rt. 1, Woolwich
Just north of Bath

76 UNION STREET BRUNSWICK CORSICAN

Freshman Orientation includes a trip to
The Corsican.

Enjoy pizzas, calzone,
fresh salad and desserts.

729-8117

SPORTS

Mike
Botelho

Spring Expectations

Spring is a season which evokes endless images and feelings in all of us - birds chirping high above the tree tops, lilacs budding bright for all to see and smell, the excitement that comes with the close of a school year and the apprehension that comes with the start of finals.

But springtime means much more. Spring signals the commencement of our nation's great old pastime and the start of the NBA playoffs. In Boston, this year, spring is peaking with renewed brilliance and vivacity due to the lofty expectations attributed to its sports teams.

After spring training and only nine regular season contests, the Red Sox appear headed on a fortuitous track. But looks can be awfully deceiving when it comes to the Boston Red Sox.

Yet, with Wade Boggs, Roger "Can he be the first to win Cy Young awards?" Clemens, and Dwight Evans coming off stellar performances last year, and the addition of some outstanding and proven young blood, Mike Greenwell, Brad Anderson, Ellis Burks, Todd Benzinger and Sam Horn, the Sox do indeed look ready for the 1988 season.

Not enough can be said about the superlative exploits of Mr. "Chicken Man" Boggs. Boggys won another batting title last year, his fourth (or maybe it's his fifth) overall, and now boasts a not too shady .354 career batting average. Boggs' main dilemma is not preparing a different chicken dish before each game but trying to perform to everyone's expectations. Despite his impressive numbers, Boggs is often overlooked because so much has been asked of him for so long.

The Sox improved upon a horrendously pathetic bullpen that compiled a miserable total of 16 saves last year with the supreme acquisition of Lee "Godzilla" Smith, a man who seems bigger than life or at least bigger than his 6'6", 245-pound frame would suggest. Nowadays, Calvin Shiraldi's shakiness in the 1986 World Series seems a distant, though still painful memory. (However, Billy Buckner's wobbly knees remain indelibly etched.) Despite possessing a strong starting eight, solid pitching and a good bench, the Red Sox could be plagued by one key factor, the burden of Great Expectations. Much is expected of Boston this year. Diehard Red Sox fans recall what that has often meant - the dismal disappointment of unfulfilled hopes and aspirations.

Unlike the BoSox the Boston Celtics have responded well to the high expectations often associated with them. As the playoffs near, the Celtics appear primed for a strong bid for their 17th world title. Although Boston's starting five are no spring chickens, they still make up the best starting unit in the NBA. Unlike last year, they are well

(Continued on page eight)

Colby lax upsets undefeated Bears

JIM ANDERSON
ORIENT Staff

Ouch. What more can you say when you are undefeated, coming off a huge win, ranked #1 in Division III New England and in the top 15 nationally and then proceed to lose to your biggest rival? That is exactly what happened to the men's lacrosse team during the past week. Bowdoin split two games in the past week, beating Division I Vermont and then losing to arch-enemy Colby.

Bowdoin trekked to Burlington for a weekend match against the University of Vermont. Entering the game Bowdoin was one notch below the Catamounts in the latest Brine New England Lacrosse ranking. The Bears did not play as if that were the order though. They thoroughly dominated Vermont and came away 8-5 winners.

The defense provided the spark in this game. In the first half the goal-tending of Morgan Hall '90 was aided by the play of senior defenders Brian Ferriso, Chip Davis and Matt Vokey along with mid-fielders Scott Farrell '88 and Mark Peluso '88. The defensive tandem completely shutout the Catamounts in the first half as Bowdoin opened up what proved to be an insurmountable 4-0 lead. Coach Mort LaPointe praised his whole team. "We played awfully well in the first half," he noted.

In the second half Vermont rallied a bit but the trio of Lloyd Byrne '88, Mitch Caplan '89 and Jake Odden '90 was too much. Byrne kept his hot streak going by tallying twice while adding an assist. Caplan notched the same totals as Byrne while Odden added a goal and two assists. Goalkeeper Hall turned in another fine game, turning away a total of 19 shots.

Bowdoin's loss to Colby, 9-8, knocked the Bears out of their first place position in the NE Division III standings. Photo by Lori Bodwell.

Bowdoin obviously came into the Colby game as high as a kite. 4-0, #1 in New England, coming off a big win and playing against an only better than average Colby team what could possibly go wrong? Well, playing at a man disadvantage for the final 5:04 against a very motivated Mulesquad proved to be the answer to that question. Colby scored a hard fought 9-8 upset over the Bears.

Bowdoin came out and dazzled Colby in the opening portion of the first half and opened up a 4-1 lead. It looked like another day at the office, money in the bank so to speak. The Bears may have gotten a bit overconfident or even complacent and Colby tied it at 4 by halftime. Mort LaPointe commented, "They played very well and I'm afraid we weren't ready to play."

No doubt LaPointe's halftime lecture was more colorful. In the second half the Bears could neither seize the momentum nor shake the pesky Mules. In fact Colby, bolstered by their first half rally, played inspired lax for the remainder of the game. Colby played scrappy team offense which led to eight players scoring their nine goals. Jake Odden and Lloyd

(Continued on page eight)

Softball drops 2 to St. Joe's

TONY JACCACI
ORIENT Staff

The women's softball team began their season slowly last week as they lost their first four games. The Polar Bears dropped the first two in a doubleheader to the University of Southern Maine and the final two in a doubleheader against St. Joseph's College. Bowdoin had little time to practice together before the first game and coach Lynn Ruddy feels that the team will begin to produce wins once they have a chance to play together.

The first doubleheader was against division III power St. Joseph's, a team which already had thirteen games under its belt in the season. The Polar Bear pitching was plagued with unearned runs and in the words of coach Ruddy; "our bats were not very loud." Pitching for Bowdoin were freshmen Lynne Mastre and Melissa Conlon.

The University of Southern Maine was a much tougher opponent for the Polar Bears this year and took two from Bowdoin last Saturday. Again, the pitching for the black and white was provided by the freshman connection. SMU took the first game 12-2 as Bowdoin remained dormant on offense. In the second game, however, the

(Continued on page eight)

Despite a slow start, the women's softball team hopes to rebound for the remainder of the season. Photo by Asaf Farashuddin.

Polar Bears split double-header with Brandeis Judges

BLAIR DILS
ORIENT Contributor

The Bowdoin College Men's Baseball team squared off against Brandeis University and Colby College recently, splitting games in a doubleheader with the Judges and losing in 10 innings to the Mules. The Polar Bear record now stands at 3-8.

On a cold, windy Saturday the Bears were able to take one from the always powerful Brandeis squad. In game 1 of two seven inning contests, Bowdoin opened quickly with three runs in the top of the first but saw that lead diminish and turn into a deficit after 5 innings by the score of 8-3. In the bottom of the sixth the Polar Bears rallied for six unanswered runs to take a slim lead into the last inning, 9-8. Chris Hill '88 had two hits in the inning including the game winner. Kevin Cloutier '90 preserved the victory in the top of the seventh by striking out the final two batters.

Opposed to the high scoring in game 1, the second game featured strong pitching but some key defensive mistakes as Brandeis emerged victorious 4-3. Pitcher Dan Train '91 had control problems on that blustery day but managed to get out of some early jams. The Bears went up 2-0 after three but saw the score tied, resulting from an outfielding error. Single runs were exchanged in the later innings but Brandeis managed to gain the final lead of the day in the top of the seventh. No late game heroics could be found in this one as Bowdoin fell 4-3.

The Colby Mules then invaded Pickard Field on Tuesday, coming away victors 14-10 in an extra inning contest. Errors were the problem for the Polar Bears as they committed 8 of them. Chris Fitz had his problems early and was yanked in the 3rd, down 5-1. Cloutier once again came in but didn't fare much better. He gave up four more runs and was then replaced by Brendan Diffley '88 who finished out the contest. Fortunately, the Bears' offense kept pace with Colby's, keeping them within 3 runs throughout the game and scoring three in the bottom of the ninth to force extra innings. The Bears could have won the contest in that ninth inning but stranded two runners.

The good fortune did not last long as a tiring Diffley was smacked for four runs, giving the Mules the victory. The big hit was registered by catcher Tom Griffin who drilled a double. Griffin had struck out four previous times that day.

The Bears travelled to Windham Wednesday to face a powerful St. Joseph's squad and found themselves on the short end of a 15-5 decision. On Saturday the Bears will play host, weather permitting, to Husson for two seven inning contests. Hopefully the team can take the double header and gain some momentum heading into USM on Sunday. Depending on how they play, the Bears may have a profitable weekend.

Men's track outruns Bates

PAUL KELLY
ORIENT Contributor

The men's track team opened up their 1988 spring season on Magee track last Saturday, hosting a tri-meet with MIT and Bates. The Bears finished in the middle with MIT easily winning with 133 points while Bates brought up the rear with 38.

Tod Dillon, an indoor All-American, was the lone individual winner for the squad as he captured the 1500 meter event, his specialty.

Eric Gans, who competed in the national championship with Dillon, competed in three events in the course of the afternoon. He took seconds in the 110 meter hurdles and the 100 meter dash and he claimed third in the 200 meters. With his points helping out Bow-doin was able to outlast Bates by 2 points.

Other solid performances were turned in by John Dougherty '91 in the 3000m steeplechase, Tim Trafton '87 in the javelin, and the 4x100m relay team of Steve Polikoff '88, Damon Guterman '89, Rob Noel '91, and Eric Gans, as they all claimed seconds.

Marty Malague '90 also turned in a courageous performance as did freshman Ben Hale. Running in the 800m for the first time Malague was able to place third even though distance events are more to his liking. Hale doubled in the 1500m, claiming fourth, and the 800m with strong performances in both.

The Bears look to host Colby and Tufts tomorrow, come rain or snow, in a tri-meet at Whitfield field.

Gary Simmons swims in the Special Olympics held last Tuesday in the new pool in Farley Field House as Mary Beth Coolidge and Margaret Cochran cheer him on. Photo by Alan Harris.

Lacrosse

(Continued from page seven)

Byrne were the offensive sparks once again. Odden scored twice with an assist while Byrne netted one goal to go with two assists. Also scoring for the Bears were Todd Bland '90, Eric Lunger '88, Ed McGowan '88, Caplan and Peluso.

At 8-8 late in the final period Colby beat goalie Kurt Liebich '90 for the game winner. Playing a man down so late in the game Bowdoin could not find the spunk to get the equalizer. Failing to do so cost the Bears not only the game but their position atop the rankings in New England. They will probably remain in or near the top 5 however.

Bowdoin will attempt to turn things around against the Cardinals of Wesleyan this Saturday in Connecticut. They also travel to Lowell to take on the Chiefs on Wednesday. The home town faithful will finally get to see some men's lacrosse again on Saturday the 23rd when Middlebury comes to the Pines.

Research works.

WE'RE FIGHTING FOR
YOUR LIFE

American Heart
Association

COASTAL SELF STORAGE

Residential - Commercial - Industrial Autos - Boats - Campers, etc.

- units in 8 sizes, 5x5 thru 10x40, all 10 ft. high
- Fireproof and insulated -Electronic Gate Fencing
- Only Resident-managed Facility in the area
- Monthly and yearly rates available

FREE - 2 weeks with 3 month rental

FREE - 1 month with 6 month rental

Cooks Corner, Rt. 24 south, Brunswick, near Sears and Cinema IV

725-5818

SUPPORT WILDLIFE!

THROW A PARTY!

WINE·BEER·CHEESE·KEGS·ICE

26 Beth Road, Brunswick, 725-6711 Mon., Sat., 10 to 6

BICYCLES

Fuji, Univega, Peugeot, Trek, Shogun
PROMPT, EXPERT SERVICE • CUSTOM BUILT WHEELS
EXERCISE EQUIPMENT & ROWING MACHINES
ALL - TERRAIN BICYCLES & CROSS COUNTRY SKIS
TRADE INS & USED BIKES
CYCLING CLOTHING AND HELMETS • CUSTOM BICYCLES SET UP

After March 1
Mon. - Sat., 10 - 5:30

442-7002

ROUTE 1 WOOLWICH
(ACROSS FROM MCLEMAN SUBARU & PEUGEOT)

Softball

(Continued from page seven)

Polar Bears came alive in the sixth inning a staged a rally. Unfortunately, Bowdoin fell just short and lost the game by a score of 12-10. The team played well and began to show signs of strong, team play.

The team is quite young, only fielding three seniors and although they do not lack leadership, there is a definite need for time together as a team and experience. As coach

Ruddy stated, if the first two matchups had been later in the season, the final score would have been a toss-up.

Ruddy's charges hope to get back on track as they travel to Biddeford to play New England College in two seven inning games. As the team heads into the rest of the season the outlook is bright as long as the team begins to come together.

Botelho

(Continued from page seven)

rested, without major injuries and look mentally fit for the playoffs. Much criticism has been directed towards the Celtics' bench. Yet, there has been noticeable improvement in its play and the addition of Jim Paxson was an added plus for the Green. Bill Walton is expected to return for the playoffs. Although the big redhead won't be the Walton of old, he'll give the Celts a definite psychological boost and some veteran leadership and defense at the pivot position.

I pick the Celts to win it all because of a number of factors. First, they're playing their best basketball at the right time of the year. They are healthier and their bench is stronger than last year's when they lost to the dreaded glamour boys of LA in six games, a much closer series than experts predicted. Plus, the competition though strong is not too formidable.

With all the hoopla surrounding Michael Jordan (most of it justifiable), Larry Bird continues to leave a phenomenal mark on the game. Bird is having his finest season ever, scoring 30 points a game, pulling down 9 boards, dishing out 6 assists and shooting 3-pointers at an astounding proficiency. But numbers alone can not measure the true value of a Larry Bird. Bird lifted weights in the off-season and came to camp more determined than ever to win this year. His fierce determination, intensity and desire to win are Bird trademarks. And most opponents know that when Larry Joe Bird wants something, he usually gets it. In my opinion, this year should be no different. No one else in the league appears ready to challenge Bird and the Celtics as they cruise into the playoffs.

The sun may not shine in Los Angeles after all. Sorry, Mr. Nicholson.

SUMMER CAMP POSITIONS

Counselors, 21+, Coed, sleepaway camp, Mass. Berkshires, WSI, arts and crafts, tennis, all land and water sports, gymnastics, drama, piano/play for shows, judo, photography, dance, computers, nature, wilderness, model rocketry, guitar, radio, video, archery, yearbook, wood-working, RN and typist. Write, Camp Emerson, 5 Brassie Rd., Eastchester, NY 10707 or call 914/779-9406

You can't cure colorectal cancer if you don't know you have it.
Call us.

AMERICAN CANCER SOCIETY

We have everything for your favorite Spring sports:

Lacrosse, Baseball, Softball, Tennis, etc.

Frisbees and Hacky Sacks, too!

212 Maine Street • Brunswick • 725-8675

TOPSHAM FAIR MALL

(207) 729-1800

Open 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Mon-Sat

SQUASH RACQUETS 50% off

Donnay

Pro Kennex

all price ranges

ONE WEEK ONLY

After two years, execs earn students optional linen service

SCOTT TOWNSEND
ORIENT Contributor

After two years of effort on the Student Executive Board's part, the linen fee may be no more.

According to a proposal being submitted to Dean of Students Kenneth A. Lewallen, linen service would be optional next year for all students with the exception of first semester freshmen. Vice-Chairman

Mark Peluso will approach Lewallen with this matter.

In other business, the Board has scheduled elections for Class Officers and Student Representatives to the Governing Boards. Petitions for these offices are due at the candidates' forum on April 20 at 7:30 pm. The elections will be held on April 25.

The Executive Board is now interviewing for Student Representatives to Governing Boards and Faculty Committees. Interview times will be posted in the Moulton Union.

Kevin Wesley, chairperson of next year's Student Activities Fee Committee, approached the Board in order to have the spring SAFC budget approved. The Board approved the allocation of $1200 to the Bowdoin Women's Association and $855 to the Rugby Club.

Wesley also discussed next year's Student Activity Fee increase from $100 to $130.

The Chess Club was granted an FC-3 Charter by a 11-0-0 vote. The eight member club plans to purchase chess boards now that it is eligible for SAFC funds.

Member Al Mauro raised the issue of the student lounge at Coles Tower during the open forum. The student lounge had been eliminated in order to make room for office space for Dining Service. Mauro said, "We were told that the present lounge was just temporary and that an approved lounge would be provided. The current lounge seats eight and is very cramped. We have been had." Mauro will meet with Dean of the College Jane Jervis to bring attention to this issue.

Peter Lancia '89 and Dawn Johnson '89 won a cash prize in the New England Undergraduate Research Conference in Sociology last week for their paper entitled "Friendship and Foeship: Interaction Among the Characters of the Young and the Restless."

Soap opera report earns recognition

A three-year soap opera addiction earned Dawn Johnson '89 and Peter Lancia '89 professional recognition for their prize-winning sociology study.

The two juniors were named winners in a competition sponsored by the Thirteenth New England Undergraduate Research Conference in Sociology. They presented their paper "Friendship and Foeship: Interaction Among the Characters of The Young and the Restless" at a weekend conference which took place April 9 at Slavin Center at Providence College in Providence.

Bowdoin Sociology Instructor Jananne K. Phillips also attended the forum to moderate student presentations.

Both students completed their term paper for Phillips' "Sociology and Gender Roles" course. The two friends, avid watchers of their favorite soap opera, took one week to monitor the various patterns of interaction among the cast's leading men and women. The 20-page paper concluded that "The Young and the Restless" reversed traditional real-life expectations by portraying women as "reserved" and men as "friendly."

Johnson and Lancia received a cash prize for their efforts. Of 15 papers accepted for the conference, only two were awarded prizes.

Campus Briefs

Ever wish you could make a long distance call from a campus phone for free? Well, students at Middlebury College have done just that — it was discovered how to bypass the system and make off-campus calls for free. Approximately 2000 phone calls were made without costing a cent (although it cost Middlebury a pretty penny).

Dormitory crowding has made gaining admission to the University of Connecticut a little bit harder. The freshman class next year will be cut by about 400 students. This means admissions will decrease by 15%. Because of the isolation of the UConn campus, off-campus housing is extremely limited. The administration is considering the addition of more dorm space to allow a larger student body.

Now it will be convenient to do laundry and buy condoms at the same time. At Wesleyan University, condom machines have been installed next to laundry machines in the dormitories. However, the "3 for 25" rule does not apply here: each condom will cost 50 cents each.

Some encouraging news for you pre-med students... While most colleges around the country, such as Bowdoin, are raising tuition by approximately 7-8%, the Washington University School of Medicine in St. Louis is lowering its tuition by 5%. According to the trustees, this is to try to relieve students of the burden of repaying huge loans after graduation. The American Medical Association found in 1987 the average graduating medical student in $32,000 in debt.

Little Ones

149 Maine Street 729-6642

M-Th 9:30 - 5:30 Fri 9:30 - 4

Little Ones is relocating.
Watch for more details!

DR. WILLIAM R. OUELETTE

DR. BRIAN L. DANIELS

OPTOMETRISTS

Eye Examinations

Optical Services

Specializing in Contact Lenses

Pleasant Street Professional Building

53 Pleasant Street, Brunswick

Telephone 725-2161

LOOKOUT POINT HOUSE

Harpwell, Maine

(207) 833-5509

WINTER SPECIAL

2 days - 2 nights

MAP plan - double occupancy

2 people - $150.00

or

Rooms by the month

on the sea

eight miles from Bowdoin

POSITIVE

NEGATIVE

It's all here in black and white.

Sync's
ramie/cotton crop sweater
S M L 64.00

Wear with Sync's
easy fitting cotton/poly pants
S M L 38.00

Senter's

124 Maine Street • Brunswick • Maine 04011

LETTERS

Responses to Kielty's letter

I would like to respond to some of the issues raised in the letter by Melissa Kielty published in the April 8, 1988, issue of the Orient.

Bowdoin College is committed to total equality in its athletic programs. As to the specific reference to hockey practice times, the women's team practiced 10 times during the dinner hour, while the men's program practiced 23 times through the dinner hour—13 by the varsity team and 10 by the JV team. There are factors outside the control of Bowdoin College that affect scheduling of which most observers are not aware. Two such factors involved in women's hockey are the availability of competition and the part-time status of the coach.

Bowdoin College is too small an institution to necessitate that issues such as this be aired through the paper. I would encourage any future concerns to be discussed with me in person. When we lose this one-to-one contact, we do not take advantage of one of the College's many strengths.

Sidney J. Watson
Director of Athletics

I am writing this letter as a result of the letter written by Melissa Kielty in last week's Orient. Although it is well written, the letter lacks the true facts about the athletes, about the field house, and about the ratings system at Bowdoin. Above all, Melissa declined to see the Bowdoin community's view on athletics as a whole but chose to concentrate her grievances only on hockey and football, which are actually only a small part of the whole athletic program.

Eighty percent of Bowdoin's students are involved in athletics, and many are Dean's list students. There are James Bowdoin scholars who are on athletic teams as well. Melissa wrote athletics "cannot be the sole or primary contributor to the development of the well rounded individual." I do not see how it is possible to make the Dean's list by only focusing on sports. All members of athletic teams study and view academics as a vital factor in their Bowdoin experience. In addition, most people would attest that playing sports teaches you discipline, patience, commitment and how to organize your time. All of these qualities are useful in academics as well. Getting along with different people, showing leadership and pushing oneself to the limit are all factors which everyone will face when they leave Bowdoin.

In response to Melissa's statement about the field house, the new facility is in no way a "disturbing monument" and Bowdoin does not have skewed priorities. First of all, the facility used before was unhealthy and unable to meet the needs of all the teams. Secondly, the field house was a gift from a successful alumni who specifically wanted the money to go to athletics. The field house is not only used by members of athletic teams. Many other students use it for tennis, swimming, running, nautilus and aerobics as a way to relieve the tension of studying. The fieldhouse aids the well being of each student, not to mention many faculty members, school employees and local residents.

Photo by M. Sven.

The fact that other departments at Bowdoin do not use a rating system is not the fault of the Athletic department. The departments of music, art, drama, etc. have every opportunity to develop ratings systems of their own. The coaching staff is interested in seeing optimistic, fun, talented and smart students at Bowdoin. Intelligence is needed to play on a team as well. The coaches at Bowdoin are in no way trying to get a step up on the other departments, and they often refer prospective students to department heads concerning other activities. The athletic staff is comprised of some great individuals who are truly concerned about students and their complete experience at Bowdoin.

Although Melissa's letter concerned all athletes at Bowdoin, she focused primarily on men's hockey and football as representative of all sports. It is true that both these sports get a lot of publicity and support. The Bowdoin community and alumni want to watch these games because they are a tradition at a school which has been coed for only eighteen years. This does not mean, however, that Bowdoin students do not take time to watch other sports, including women's. Any "different treatment" of men's and women's sports is in no way to blame for any discrimination which exists. Women's sports have done exceptionally well here. In fact, their success has probably aided to the problem of discrimination. Anyone who plays a sport has a mutual respect for other athletes, whether they are the same or opposite sex.

The problem with publicity at Bowdoin is one which the Orient should address, obviously, inequality exists in the paper. When the women's swim team won the New England's, the article was small and incomplete. Even though most of the campus was excited about their victory, it was presented as second rate men's hockey. This is not to say hockey is not important, but it does not need to be the main story every week. This problem of inequality is not the fault with the Bowdoin community but with the sports staff. The Orient needs to come to terms with representing the views of Bowdoin as a whole. However, I think the most important part is that although it is nice to have your picture in the paper, most students, male and female, do not play sports for the recognition. Probably most students do not work to become a James Bowdoin scholar for the recognition either. Melissa's letter ignored what is really important in anything one does. The reward at doing athletics or studying is the satisfaction within yourself, in the hope that it will make you a stronger person. The unique quality of Bowdoin students is that they maintain a good balance between athletics and academics. This balance makes not just well rounded people but makes Bowdoin the successful college that it is. Erika S. Gustafson '90

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

"The College exercises no control over the content of the student writings contained herein and neither it, nor the faculty assume any responsibility for the views expressed herein."

Editor
Managing Editor
News Editors
In-depth Editor
Entertainment Editor
Sports Editor
Photography Editors

Stephen Reynolds
Kathryn Nanovic
Tamara Dassanayake, Dawn Vance
Kevin Wesley
Sharon Smart
Justin Prisdorf
Alan Harris, Mary Ann Lai

Asst. News Editor
Asst. Sports Editor
Asst. Entertainment Editor
Contributing Editors
Senior Editors
Production Manager

Tanya Weinstein
Tod Dillon
Lizz Millan
Albert Mauro
Lori Bodwell, Michael Botelho
Vincent Jacks

Business Manager
Advertising Manager
Advertising Staff
Circulation Manager

Eric Foushee
Michael Townsend
Michelle Campagna, Nancy Eckel,
Kim Maxwell
Eric Palmquist

Bowdoin Publishing Company
Lori M. Bodwell, Eric F. Foushee,
Albert P. Mauro, Stephen Reynolds

Published weekly when classes are held during the Fall and Spring semester by the students of Bowdoin College. Address editorial communication to the Editor, subscription communication to the Circulation Manager, and business correspondence to the Business Manager at the Bowdoin Orient, 12 Cleveland Street, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011, or telephone (207) 725-3300. The Bowdoin Orient reserves the right to edit any and all articles and letters. Subscriptions are $8.00 a semester or $15.00 a year. Past issues cannot be mailed. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to The Bowdoin Orient, Moulton Union, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011.

Misquote?

Although I hope that I may, in some small way, be of use to Bowdoin, I also hope that I did not say "my significance" here had been "verified" ("Four Professors Granted Tenure," March 11). If I did, may a Bowdoin Polar Bear ingest my organs of speech.

Robert Greenlee

The Bowdoin Orient welcomes all letters. Due to space limitations, letters of 300 words or less will be considered for publication first. Letters not printed the week submitted will be put on waiting list with top priority for the next issue. The Bowdoin Orient reserves the right to edit any letter due to space limitations. All letters must be signed and include the address and telephone number where the author can be contacted for verification.

Science Center

(Continued from page one)
tions and concerns federal funds in a small number of elite colleges and universities.

The fact of peer review is that it concentrates the majority of funds in a few institutions," said Treasurer of the College Dudley Woodall. "We, Bowdoin, say that there are other equal or more valid reasons" for funding programs at smaller schools.

In response to the criticism that Congress is not qualified to examine such projects Hochstetler said that Members of Congress, "probably are not qualified to pass this project, but by the same token they are not qualified to pass the MX missile or speed limit laws. But they do have people who work for them who are."

"It is not correct to say that Congress isn't qualified to make these judgements especially if about the polarization of [the country's] science programs," Woodall said.

Professor of Chemistry Edward Gillilan said, "Basically peer review is itself a political process. I don't think we are trying to circumvent the peer review process but are going to the people with the money."

Moral Questions Raised
Other questions have been raised by this move to seek funding from Congress.

"I do worry about making an original claim on the treasury at a time when many people are saying that the treasury is extended," said Professor of Government Allen Springer.

The possibility of the science center taking money or votes away from other projects was also addressed by Hochstetler. "Members of Congress who support this may be expected to support other things in the future, it is the way the American political system works, and these other projects may not have as much merit," he said.

There has also been concern over the methods Cassidy and Associates may use to get the federal funding approved such as donating money to the campaign funds of key Members of Congress. Woodall flatly denied that such techniques would be used saying, "They do nothing of that sort whatsoever... they don't pay anyone anything."

According to Hochstetler the Governing Boards had considered explicitly forbidding campaign contributions in the contract but Cassidy balked at the idea because it would imply they had done it on other projects.

The Best in the Business
Cassidy and Associates has been highly successful and has won funding for every project it has taken on. The firm boasts former employees of key Congressional committees who have experience in the funding process. Gerald Cassidy, the firm's president is a former aide to Senator George McGovern.

"We chose them because they are the best... they are the most qualified and competent and their reception in Congress and with colleges and universities is without exception," said Woodall.

According to President of the College A. LeRoy Greason a contract is still being negotiated with Cassidy, but the college and Cassidy are "going ahead with a rough understanding." Greason said the contract will cover about three years.

Greason said he was encouraged by the chances of passage by discussions he has had with Senators William Cohen and George Mitchell of Maine, both graduates of Bowdoin, and Maine Representative Joseph Brennan who "thought it was fine and would want to be helpful."

Although Cassidy is aiming to get the grant on an appropriations bill sometime this summer, such an allocation would come in three installments over three years. Bowdoin would have to show it is putting the money to good use in order to continue the installments, according to Hochstetler.

Bowdoin will be asking for half the price tag of the science center or about $12 million.

No administration officials would reveal what Cassidy's fee will be since it is still under negotiation, but similar contract with other colleges would suggest the fee will be over half a million dollars.

Greason said the money will come from Governing Boards members and other individuals. "The majority of the amount, has been pledged by the board," he said.

Making the Case to Congress

In presenting the science facility to Congress, through a proposal which Members of Congress and their staffs will read, Bowdoin will stress two main points, according to Greason. First, most students who go on to graduate school come from schools like Bowdoin and such a center would help improve the country's scientific education.

Secondly, the center will also serve as an "Environmental Assessment Center" where facilities will be devoted to studying the environment. Bowdoin already conducts much research in this area especially in the area of oil spills and shifting sea beds.

Gillilan said the Environmental Assessment Center would provide lab and office space for professors already engaged in this research and would focus on developing methods of determining change in the environment.

Greason

(Continued from page one)
go.

Students were also concerned with the compromised academic atmosphere in classrooms which they attributed to the high number of Bowdoin athletes.

Peter LaMontagne '88, a double major in Environmental Science and Government, said he needed to double major because he felt "the government major isn't very well-respected here." Both he and McSweeney said they had been in classes which were simplified in order to accommodate lesser-qualified students.

Greason noted that compromising class standards was a problem which will be examined at a later date.

Concerning the issue of heavy athletic recruitment at Bowdoin, Greason said the College recruits in area's other than the football field and hockey arena. "I would say there is wide-ranging recruiting of all kinds of students." Students disagreed, claiming athletic coaches spend more of their time recruiting than can professors with full teaching schedules.

Greason argued that Bowdoin is bound to New England Small College Athletic Conference (NESCAC) rules which limit the types of recruiting which can be done.

Kiely cited the Barker Report, a report issued last year at Bowdoin which compared the performance of athletes to non-athletes, and the emphasis of athletics on admissions. The report concluded that male athletes have a better chance of being accepted to Bowdoin, yet often do not perform to standard in the classroom. Greason dismissed the report.

Greason said, "I think part of our problem is what happens to these students once they get here."

At the end of the two hour meeting, Greason assured the students that action will be taken although he did not specify what kind of action or establish a timetable.

He indicated he will discuss with Director of Admissions William Mason and Athletic Director Sid Watson what needs must be addressed concerning athletes at Bowdoin.

He added that something must be done, "but whatever gets done should be the right thing."

Admissions

(Continued from page one)
they were pursuing the type of student who enjoyed learning. Lavin commented, "Superior academic performance is what we were looking for and I think we found it."

Minority recruitment was up this year in the hope that more qualified minorities would apply. Minority students received 11% of the acceptances marking an increase from years past.

Another noticeable increase in the number of students accepted were those who displayed some form of musical or artistic talent. 64 students were rated for their musical ability by the Music Department. Dancers and visual artists also sent in samplings of their work to be reviewed by the committee.

Athletes, despite the scrutiny of the college community this year, also took the initiative by sending in videotapes of themselves participating in their particular sport and coaches assembled lists of their top prospects. Mason said that coaches terminated their communications with these athletes if they learned that they were not academically viable candidates.

Mason said coaches lobbied more actively than the faculty but added that there was less talk about athletics this year. He added that the coaches' lists were smaller than they have been in previous years. Lavin said, "Many of the students with athletic talent were admitted solely on their academic record."

There is more geographic diversity to the students accepted this year as well. Although New Englanders made up 39% of those selected, this is a smaller group than last year. There were more candidates picked from the Deep South region. The Admissions Office's statistics indicate that students who live closer to Bowdoin are more likely to choose it. By admitting more students from farther away the committee is taking risks. Mason said, "We might lose very very heavily this spring."

Distance from Bowdoin is not the only factor which may cause a smaller amount of students to choose Bowdoin, however. As Lavin explained, "Because we accepted such stars, we're in competing with 'The Ivies' and 'The small Ivies' and we don't know how that will pan out in the end."

Walter Moulton, Director of Student Aid, said Mason also took some risks involving the amount of financial aid offered to the accepted students. In reference to Mason, Moulton said, "He's [Mason] gambling with numbers, we're gambling with money." 397 students were granted some form of financial aid. "We have funded to the full extent of calculated need, every freshman admitted... not many colleges do that," said Moulton.

A new packaging policy was developed for students who are least able to afford Bowdoin's tuition, said Moulton. The policy provides grants alone without the financial burden of loans or the pressure of obtaining a job right away. This policy holds for the freshman year only, in the hope of making the critical first year an easier transition for the lower income students.

Moulton explained that the policy was developed in the hope of attracting more students from families with lower incomes. Currently the percent of the student body from low income homes has dropped. Moulton believes that the new policy will encourage students in financial need to view Bowdoin as a "hospitable place."

Bowdoin has invited all admitted students to visit the campus next weekend, April 21 and 22.

NOW
ACCEPTING
SOPHOMORES!

Juniors, Seniors & Grads...
GIVE YOURSELF SOME CREDIT!
APPLY NOW FOR YOUR VERY OWN...

- Bring a photocopy of your School I.D.
 - No cosigner required
- APPLY NOW ON CAMPUS!

Date: APRIL 18-20

Time: LUNCH

Place: M.U. and C.T.

OPEN TO FRESHMEN

© Citicorp. 1986

KRISTINA'S
 BAKERY RESTAURANT

*Everyone's favorite for Breakfast,
 Lunch & Dinner*

*Deliciously different menus
 Delectable pastries
 Friendly atmosphere*

Open Wed - Sat for
 Breakfast - Lunch - Dinner
 8:00 a.m. - 9:00 p.m.
 Sunday brunch 9:00 a.m. - 2:00 p.m.

at the corner of
 Center & High St.,
 Bath, Maine 04530
 (207) 442-8577

THE REWARDS OF A HIGHER EDUCATION.

You've worked hard for your degree. And now you can get the graduation gift you've always dreamed of. Goodwin's Chevrolet and GMAC have teamed up to make owning or leasing your first new Chevrolet a lot easier. This package is open to anyone within six months of graduation, and includes the option to defer your first payment for up to 90 days. Stop in today for more details.

GOODWIN'S CHEVROLET

195 Pleasant Street, Brunswick 729-1611 773-1516 1-800-HI-FRANK

Form follows function; the new student center appears on the quad after late night construction. Photo by Allan Harris

Administration reacts to review

STEVEN REYNOLDS
ORIENT Editor

Eight months after its conception by President Leroy Greason at last fall's convocation, the Fraternity Review Committee has produced a 150 page document outlining 53 recommendations concerning the Bowdoin College fraternity system. The College administration generally supports the Committee's recommendations as Dean of the College Jane Jervis, Dean of Students Kenneth Lawless, and Greason all say the report provides guidelines for improving both the fraternity system and Bowdoin College as a whole.

"I think if the fraternities wish it, a real future exists for them," said Greason, "what is important at this point, is to go on discussing with good heart and confidence and we can make it work."

Structural repairs ranging in the one hundred thousand dollar amount for most houses, co-education on both the local and national levels and expectations to follow Maine state laws and college policy regarding alcohol are the thrust of the report's recommendations. Failure to comply with these recommendations—which are expected by Greason and Jervis to be accepted as college policy during the May meeting of the Governing Boards—could result in a fraternity becoming unrecognized by the college.

"It's bad for them and it's bad for the college," said Jervis concerning the fraternities who might break away from the college. On the one hand, Jervis said the cost of managing and maintaining a large facility would present a difficult challenge for the fraternity—along with dealing directly with the police instead of college security.

Conversely, the college does not favor the idea of what Jervis calls "renegade social organizations."

"If things went wrong we would have to deal with adverse publicity," Jervis said, "we can disassociate from them legally, but it might be morally and educationally irresponsible."

Although breaking away from the college is a possibility, Greason believes the fraternities will accept the committee's recommendations. "I don't think they will want to become independent. I think house corporations can encourage fraternities to meet the report's expectations."

Alumni support will be important in bringing fraternity housing conditions up to college standards. Without alumni contributions or loans from a national, fraternities will have a "tough time making necessary repairs" said Jervis.

"I don't see how they can make it without the support of alumni. The financial plight of fraternities is serious and room and board fees at college dorm rates will not be enough to survive," she added.

The report suggests the college should offer low interest loans, but even these have been found difficult to pay back as in the case of Delta Sigma, which owes $80,000 to the college, and Alpha Rho Upsilon, which recently sold its house to the college in a lease-back arrangement to cover previous unpaid bills and loans.

The report stresses national and local recognition of females as full house members. Differentiation between national recognition of co-ed chapter membership and co-ed membership across the nation in every house is one necessary distinction Lawless thinks the report fails to make. "It is unclear to me at this time," said Lawless, "whether the report refers to co-ed national membership in all the schools or national membership in a Bowdoin chapter."

Jervis believes national fraternity membership has few advantages. "It's not clear to me what the benefits are," said Jervis. "The most common response to the question 'What does national membership involve?' is 'they take our money as dues'...I guess you can visit another chapter house, but I'm sure females can't even do this."

The most immediate effects of the report could materialize as early as next fall, starting with the absence of Fall rush. The report suggests a

(Continued on page nine)

Hornets build funplex

It took nearly two years to build the multi-million dollar Farley Fieldhouse. It took about twenty minutes last Sunday night to erect the $9,236,117.84 (including $230 for Port-a-John rental) new Student Social Center on the quad.

Complete with a full-body size Dining Service ID scanning device, an "authentic" Jasper Johns portrait of Larry Pinette, Director of Centralized Dining, the Student Social Center was the latest project of the Green Drone Construction Company (GHCC). Since 1965—when a granite pyramid topped with a red lantern "compliments of the town of Bath" appeared on the quad—the GHCC has annually built a structure and sent the bill to the college.

"We haven't paid yet and we owe well over a billion," said President Greason regarding the college's consistent twenty year waiving of payment. "I think it's good fun...fun with a real humorous jab."

This year's bill included charges for Nubian slaves ($15.90), a Super Ace Glider balsa airplane (25 cents), Oracular Consultation ($5.00), and Secular Consultation ($4.95). Research and Development accounted for the bulk of the bill, a $9 million fee which Greason contested as "steep" in a Tuesday letter to the Bowdoin Times.

Using out-and-out blackmail, the Orient arranged an interview with Green Drone Hornet, certifiable drone worker or the GHCC. Wearing a green gortex jacket, ski mask, and gloves, Green Drone Hornet visited the Orient offices and discussed the GHCC's projects.

The GHCC is a tight organization. About twelve people belong each year, all linked by the same qualification—absolute anonymity—according to Green Drone.

GHCC has never had a problem with their structures being removed due to their content—although in 1970 early morning groundskeepers apparently disposed of a structure, thinking it was trash, before the campus got out of bed to see it. Consequently, the GHCC and the administration signed the "Green Drone—Bowdoin College Mutual Aid, Co-Prosperity and Non-Aggression Pact in May of 1970. The Pact stipulated that no GHCC structure would be removed until 11:00 a.m. the day it was erected unless it was found "morally offensive" by the Dean of the College, an unanimous vote of the House of Lords, and Ramses II.

Committee suggests fraternity reform

The Report to the President from the Committee to Review Fraternities was released earlier this week to the Bowdoin community. The report, the "most comprehensive review of Bowdoin fraternities in the history of the College," according to Chairman, Merton G. Henry '80, suggests several recommendations for improving the system.

In an accompanying memorandum to the report, President of the College A. LeRoy Greason said the report was, "a candid look at fraternities at Bowdoin today." Headed, "Their plight, in general, is seen as the result not only of fraternity actions over recent years but also of the inaction of other College constituencies."

Greason will now recommend to the Executive Committee that it forward the Report to the Governing Boards with its own recommendation for approval at the May 27 meeting of the Boards. "Now it is time to act...to delay longer is simply to perpetuate the anxiety about fraternities that has colored this year," said Greason.

The Committee was appointed on October 1, 1987 by Greason "to review the recent history of fraternities at Bowdoin, especially their policies and their practices as they pertain to membership, rushing, orientation, standards of conduct, social life, community projects and financial standing, including any indebtedness and projections for payment...[to] seek information about the degree and quality of opportunities for women students in fraternities as well as the quality of leadership offered by faculty, staff and alumni to fraternities," to make a judgement about the "value of fraternities to Bowdoin, either as they exist now or as they might exist," and to "recommend what actions, if any, you feel the College should take relative to fraternities."

In the report, the "Committee unanimously recommends that Bowdoin retain its fraternities but

(Continued on page nine)

Student-written plays reviewed page 5

IFC reaction to Presidential Committee report page 3

Executive Board announces election results

SCOTT TOWNSEND
ORIENT Contributor

Another crop of Class Officers was elected by their respective classes by a campus vote held on Monday April 25th.

For the Class of 1989, Sara Thorp was elected as President. According to Thorp, next years officers "are all honored to have been chosen to serve our class and to do our best to round up our troops for a great last 'hurray' at Bowdoin."

After being elected as Vice-President, Matt Hornbeck said, "My first reaction is that I was overwhelmed by how many Seniors voted this year; over twice as many as last year. I think that our Senior Class has elected a great set of officers that will really work well together. I'm looking forward to even having events as early as the first week we get back."

Todd Remis, elected as Treasurer said, "I am really looking forward to next year and working with the newly elected officers to make our Senior year an unforgettable time for everyone." Suzanne Kovacs will serve as Secretary.

For the Class of 1990, Terry Rouse was elected President. "I am as excited as can be considering that I ran unopposed. I thought it was weak that no one else ran, but then half the class won't be here next year. [I am] looking forward to next year, disappointed that no one else ran, hopefully we can turn that around next year."

Elizabeth Millan, Holly Varian and Robyn Hill will serve as Vice-President, Treasurer and Secretary respectively. Each ran unopposed in the election.

For the Class of 1991, Lisa Carter was elected as President. Commenting on the race, Lisa Carter said, "I basically plan, to start raising money in order to minimize our dues as Seniors. We would like to have Sophomore Class newsletters to create class unity."

Serena Zabin was elected as Vice-President. Alyssa Hoggatt, elected as Secretary said, "I am really excited to be elected. I'd like to investigate doing something to get the class together like a class-wide barbecue." Anthony Wion will serve as Treasurer.

Write-in votes cast by members of the class of 1991 were declared ineligible by a vote of the Executive Board. The write-in candidates for Freshman President and Vice-President received substantial support, according to Chairman George Hillhouse '88, but were declared "non-candidates" on the grounds that they did not satisfy certain Constitutional requirements. According to the Student Assembly Constitution candidates must file a petition and attend the Public Forum.

Cara Maggioni, who was a write-in candidate for President said, "We understand the decision made by the board. But the reason we ran was that we thought that the most apathetic thing was that the elections were uncontested. At least, this has brought the election to attention of the student body."

Serena Zabin, whom the Board recognized as the Vice-President of the Class of 1991, resigned on Wednesday. In a statement to the Orient she said, "In order to more fully promote the spirit of a campus election with full discussion of the issues, I have decided to offer my resignation as the Vice-President for the Class of 1991. I do not feel that I ought to have accepted the position offered to me last night simply because there is some doubt as to whether or not I am truly the person whom my classmates selected to represent them."

In response to Zabin's resignation, Todd Breslow '90, Chairman of the Elections Committee said, "In my mind, the issues are very clear. The criteria for being a candidate in the election are very clear. That's what I have to go by. In regard to Serena, she ran unopposed, so its obvious that she is the proper winner. She rightfully won."

Fiske '90 and Cheryl Silva '90 ineligible as candidates on the grounds that they could not fulfill the position that they took to their plans to study abroad next Spring. Upon their ineligibility, the Executive Board awarded the position to Robert Smith '91, the fourth candidate.

After being declared ineligible, Fiske said, "It is not really the fault of the Executive Board for the Constitution. But this clause should have been pointed out to the candidates before the race was held. I study abroad, I told the person from the Board I might possibly in Spring. He asked what the chances that my plan was definite. I said I hadn't sent in application and there was no way I could know for sure whether I was going."

Silva added, "In talking with another Exec board member this morning he said that the guy who called [Rich Coombs '89] said it was pretty definite that I was going. I really wish that I had a chance to explain it further. There are reasons that I might not go abroad, for example financial. They acted on bad information, insufficient information.... If there is a problem with the election, there should be another one."

In regard to Silva's being declared ineligible, Breslow said "According to the Constitution to be eligible for any position you have to be enrolled for the whole term of office. In terms of what happened, it would have been better for her been at the Board meeting to explain her future plans."

Breslow added, "Technically, since she hasn't been accepted and since presently in the eyes of the College she will be enrolled for the next year, she therefore might be eligible but it comes down to an issue of whether or not she can fulfill the position she petitioned for. In my opinion, it would be irresponsible for the Executive Boards to appoint someone who we knew could not fulfill the position."

In the election to select the Student Representative to the Board of Trustees, Jim Harrop '90 was elected. Suzanne Makowski '90 will be the alternate.

Sara Thorp '89.

Matt Hornbeck '89. Photos by Dawn Vance.

I was going abroad; but I assumed that if I went away, the alternate would take the position. It really should have brought up ahead time."

Silva stated, "I can understand the Board having to follow the Constitution in not allowing people who are going abroad to serve. But the thing that I object to is that it is still doubtful whether I'm going abroad. When the person from the board called to see if I had plans to

Senior apartments remain empty after room draw

LISA KANE
ORIENT Staff

Finding a place to live next semester became a real concern this week as the annual room draw evolved several unexpected twists.

Four Pinestreet Apartments and one Cleveland Street Apartment, meant exclusively for seniors, remained open when rising seniors had finished making their room choices on Tuesday evening. Many juniors turned down the opportunity to live in the Apartments and opted instead to live in Coles Tower.

At the beginning of room draw for rising juniors, many students who had expected to get in to the Tower found that it was already filled. On finding no space in the Tower, some juniors then considered the possibility of moving into the Pinestreet Apartments, which are traditionally only for seniors. Assistant Dean of Students Ana Brown, in charge of housing, decided at the time of the junior room draw, not to make the Pinestreet and Cleveland Street Apartment available to juniors.

Brown, who has four years of previous experience dealing with housing concerns, is in her first year at Bowdoin. She explained that the Apartments were barred off in order to give herself more time to think up a resolution to the problem. She said, "I've been thinking about this since January...I thought of all the pitfalls that could go wrong but I didn't think of this one."

On Wednesday morning Brown discussed the housing dilemma with Dean of Students Kenneth Lewallen and Dean of the College Jane Jervis. It was decided that the administration would go back through the senior list and those seniors with the highest lottery numbers who picked the Tower, because they grouped themselves with underclassmen, would be given the option of switching to Pinestreet Apartments. If the seniors down the list decided to turn down the chance, juniors will be given the option of switching to Pinestreet Apartments.

Openings in the Tower will then be given to the juniors with the highest lottery numbers who are not already housed there. Seniors and Juniors were informed of this arrangement via campus mail. Seniors were given until noon today to make their decision.

"I know not everybody is going to be happy but I'm trying to do what I think is fair," said Brown. Pinestreet Apartments, which normally go right after Harpswell Apartments are filled, have recently been refurnished. Brown attributes the decline of the Apartment's popularity to the fact that many seniors chose to room with underclassmen. She also suggested that transportation may have been a reason that some seniors preferred the Tower.

Sophomore room draw on Thursday night went more smoothly according to Brown. 13 groups involving 24 rising sophomores did not get housing and were put on a waiting list. "Everyone will get housing; this happens every year," said Brown.

Three quads in the Tower had been saved prior to room draw for some of the twenty five exchange students who will be coming to Bowdoin next fall. Brown also mentioned that fewer people going on study away next semester may have also added to the complexity of arranging housing this year.

"The system is workable but needs some reviewing...we don't have to keep doing it this way," said Brown. She already has plans to organize a student committee to review the room draw procedure. Brown also said that she is considering the possibility of letting groups of less than four students pick rooms in the Tower. Brown also mentioned the idea of having a pre-room draw survey next year to help provide some sense of where people will choose to live.

Students who are unhappy with their housing situations should talk to Brown on Monday in order to be placed on the Waiting list.

What do you think of the room draw situation?

JENCKYN GOOSBY '91

I think the class of '91 should set up tents on the ground and stage a live-in until adequate housing is provided.

NEAL HUFF '88

It's all going to be all right because Mr. Greason's got everything under control.

JIM RECORD '90

Somehow I think it will all be resolved.

KELLY BEEKMAN '91

I'm sittin' pretty (#1002).

BECKY AUSTIN
ORIENT Staff

Fraternity representatives speak out

REPORT RECEIVED WITH MIXED REACTIONS

This week President of the College A. Leroy Greason unveiled to the college community the long-awaited report of the Committee to Review Fraternities. Greason will recommend that the Executive Committee forward the report to the Governing Boards so that they might vote upon its approval at their May 27 meeting. He is pushing for the quick approval of the report's recommendations because, so he says in his memorandum to the Bowdoin Community, "to delay any longer is simply to perpetuate the anxiety about fraternities that has colored this year."

The fraternity system has received this report with mixed reactions. Although some fraternities have expressed anger and anxiety at the report's implications, however, many have found the report's recommendations well thought out, fair, predictable and feasible. Some have even suggested that these recommendations will not only serve to improve the individual houses but will strengthen the fraternity system and its relation with the college administration as a whole.

Below is what the presidents of the various greek organizations (with the exception of Alpha Kappa Sigma President Martha Scher who was unavailable for comment) and President of the Inter-Fraternity Council Jennifer Goldsmith '90 had to say about the report and its implications upon initial reaction.

STEVEN COTE '89, PRESIDENT CHI PSI

From an initial standpoint it would appear that the national stipulation and the new rush policy if approved would place the future of Chi Psi at Bowdoin in jeopardy. Most of us felt that because of our single sex status, we were half-way into the bag already.

We found the report a detailed, well-organized review of the fraternity system. Most of what the report had to say was pretty predictable - we expected that that was what the report would say. It was a thoroughly researched report, that's for sure. We're having a corporation meeting on Saturday to look at the report more extensively, and we'll be calling the national soon.

Admittedly, we're on both sides of the fence right now. Although we did find portions of the review predictable, there's no question that we are disappointed with some of the recommendations.

Steven Cote

JENNIFER GOLDSMITH '90, PRESIDENT, INTER-FRATERNITY COUNCIL

Basically it's a very positive report, and it's very thorough. I think it looks at many aspects of the situation and the committee came up with a pretty reasonable analysis. Although I don't think it's going to be an easy three to four years for the fraternities, I think they're giving us the opportunity to make many positive changes.

I think one of the greatest things the report calls for is greater relations between the faculty and the students. We need guidance in implementing many of these policies. I think that if both factions - the committee, the President's office, the administration can work together with the fraternities rather than against them and we receive help in implementing changes then the fraternity system can only become more positive. We have a positive fraternity system right now and it can only become better.

On the issue of the national - that's something we all have to think a lot about and digest. I don't have an answer to that right now - it's not a situation that can occur over night.

In terms of the Inter-Fraternity Council's role with the committee - it (IFC) has become an active body, and I hope this will continue and that we'll be able to work with a stronger force behind us. It's a strong tool for making the system even better.

Basically, I hope there can be some compromise within this report. I hope they'll listen to what we have to say, and I hope this isn't something that's just dictated to us because I believe we could have some innovative ideas. We are the people affected by this report and we might be able to shine some insight into some of the issues that weren't necessarily covered by the report.

WENDY CARLSON '90, PRESIDENT ALPHA BETA PHI

Nothing in the report really came as a surprise. I thought that the committee did as fair a job as possible. You could tell that the report was well thought out. We're still exploring what it'll mean for us.

CHRIS MEYER '89, PRESIDENT ZETA PSI

I thought the report was an extremely fair assessment of the situation. I thought the report made the college look like the person at fault for the situation and that was noble of the committee.

The biggest change of course is the national issue, but that didn't come as a surprise - we figured that was something that would happen, although it'll be a hassle we will have to work through.

To tell you the truth, I was pretty impressed with the report.

TOM GROVES, PRESIDENT DELTA KAPPA EPSILON

First of all, in speaking for the house, the report was very well done, it was very fair, and it is obvious that the committee took a lot of time and looked at every problem - not just the social problems, but the structural and the dining. The report also indicated that the college needs to improve its social offerings to its students. The report was all encompassing.

The national issue is something that is pretty big and is something which also affects our house. Deke is equal - the national recognizes women as full local members but not as members as the national level. The members are equal on the local level and in the house as a whole, but only males can belong to the national. I don't know what we're going to do about that - it's something we're going to have to discuss with our national.

The report is good as a stepping stone especially for our house as we've been working to improve its condition this semester and people are becoming more willing to give to the house. It's recommendations will provide a way for the houses to become stronger. The report calls for greater interaction between students, fraternities, faculty and the administration, and with the college's backing the fraternities will grow individually strong and strong as a group.

One thing I'd like to add - President Greason is pushing for the Governing Boards to accept the committee's recommendations at their meetings in May.

This is pushing for the Boards to vote quickly on the report and not giving our house and the other fraternities time to act, to respond to the report itself. That's less than a month's time and house members have a lot of work to do - I think a lot of the houses would appreciate more time to talk about the report with their corporations and their nationals.

MARSHA MOXCEY '90, PRESIDENT ALPHA RHO UPSILON

I think that the report was very thorough and very well-written. It recognized the importance of fraternities at Bowdoin and the importance of the Inter-Fraternity Council. It strongly urged the recognition of the IFC as a body, and it could do a lot more as a recognized body.

The main problem I found with the report was the shorter rush. I don't think ten days gives freshmen enough time to make informed decisions. The report realized the need for faculty advisors, and that's important. On the national issue - that's also important but it doesn't affect ARU directly.

SUSAN YOUNG '89, PRESIDENT ALPHA DELTA PHI

The report comes off as if the college is going to sit there and tell us what to do without giving us a chance to respond. It would be nice if the college would give the fraternities a chance to respond, but obviously that's not going to happen. Maybe the fraternity review committee didn't have a choice in releasing the report this late, but it seems as if it were planned so that we don't have a chance to respond. The timing seems rather deliberate because this late we don't have time to write letters or make phone calls.

Overall the report comes across as a sort of hidden plot to eventually get rid of fraternities no matter what the college says - especially in advocating the severing of ties with the nationals. I mean, if the fraternities become local where else do they have to turn? Once the fraternities become local it would become even easier to phase them out.

I'm pretty skeptical and cynical about the whole thing. It seems like the college is delving into a lot of stuff it doesn't have any right dictating to us.

JEFF PATTERSON '90, PRESIDENT BETA THETA PI

I'm not too surprised or shocked. Everyone saw it coming. Some stuff was vague. Policies were described but who and how carries these policies out is unclear. What is clear in the report is that the campus wide of today is gone.

Policy regarding the national is also vague and confusing. It's up to interpretation. Could the national admit women at Bowdoin as full members but not across the country? It's a hopeless battle to convince the national organization to go co-ed across the country, but it's not a hopeless battle - though a difficult one - to make a fight for Bowdoin women to be recognized.

We are not worried about repairs at all. We have a fundraiser underway and we are hoping alumni will cover costs. If we need to, we will take out a loan from our national.

Tim Armstrong

TIM ARMSTRONG, HOUSE MANAGER DELTA SIGMA

The report doesn't concern us very much except for the financial side. We are concerned about the timing of the repairs that are mandated. Just because 1990 is a round number is not fair to us.

The estimates are very inflated. Provided we do a lot of the work ourselves we could do the work for one-quarter of the estimated amount.

We plan to make every effort to retain ownership of the house. Provided we can get the flexibility on the timing of the repairs it is reasonable to expect we could retain ownership.

My opinion is you can't get any more strict than the liquor inspector and the report confirms what we have already dealt with and what we will continue to deal with.

ANDY ROBERTS '90, PRESIDENT PSI UPSILON

Generally, what the report had to say was to be expected, especially all the stuff about campuswide, calling for doorkeepers, hand stamps, enforcement of the 21 drinking age.

For Psi U the report is not as bad as it is for the other fraternities. In three years we'll be the only fraternity (with a national affiliation) which won't have to deal with the equality issue - our national already recognizes women as full members. I like Psi U's position concerning women and the national issue.

Besides that, I would agree with the others in saying that the report is fair. And it is finally ridding the college of the double standard of having campuswide despite the 21 drinking age. With all the pressure the college is opening its eyes and saying that this stuff isn't going to go on anymore.

I'm sure there will still be versions of campuswide - just toned down. We shouldn't have a problem keeping up with that since we don't really have campuswide now.

The only real problem we'll find ourselves having to deal with is our poor report concerning the physical plant standards - Psi U got the second worst report. We'll be drumming up alumni support and starting work on the house over the summer. Our alumni will be behind us all the way. We hope to get our house up to standards within the next two to three years so we shouldn't have a problem with that either.

MIKE AUGUSTINI '89, PRESIDENT THETA DELTA CHI

I think the report was fair. As for the repairs, we were rated as the second best house compared to Zeta. We took out a loan from our national a few years back to do renovations. Right now, we have full capacity so our house corporation is willing to put money back into the house.

As far as national membership goes, that's going to be decided in house meetings. One of the major things to consider is our $70,000 debt to our national.

The school wants to monitor fraternities. I think fraternities function better the more independent they are. I think it is better that they are independently governed.

Interfraternity Council gathers to discuss the report at Alpha Rho Upsilon on Wednesday afternoon.

Polar Jazz Ensemble playing it cool

KEVIN WESLEY
ORIENT In-Depth Editor

Swinging saxes and hopping horns will bop the night away next Thursday when the Polar Jazz Ensemble holds its annual spring concert.

The concert will be held at 8 p.m. in Pickard Theater on Thursday, May 5.

The Polar Jazz Ensemble is under the direction of Mark Manduca, a member of the Portland Symphony Orchestra and the Portland Brass Quintet. Manduca, a trombone player, is a faculty member at the University of Southern Maine and conducts the Bowdoin College Brass Quintet.

Manduca was hired to conduct the group last spring. Before that time, the group was known as the Bowdoin Swing Band and was led and conducted solely by students.

The switch to a professional conductor has paid off with huge dividends according to student members. Cynthia Hall '89, a former co-director for the ensemble, said, "The change in organization that occurred three semesters ago has made an incredible difference. The group is much more organized and we get a lot more done."

The 19-piece band is comprised of students from all classes. The PJE is also undergoing a youth movement, with only one senior and two juniors currently playing.

The current co-directors, Mary Inman and Mike Frantz, both sophomores, are responsible for the organizational and financial operation of the group. Funding comes from the Student Activity Fee Committee.

Hall emphasized that since the restructuring process, the students have been able to concentrate on establishing a library and increasing the group's repertoire and playing experience.

"We're hoping to do some exchanges with other schools in the coming years. It will be great to get some new ideas, meet other players and publicize the PJE a bit more," she said.

The PJE plays a diverse range of music from Blues to Bop to Ballads. Some selections include "Take the A Train," "Stompin' at the Savoy," and "Freckle Face."

Group members include:
Saxes — Julia Brabson, Scott Dedrick, Shane Engstrom, Mike Frantz, Mary Inman, Mike Matos, Cannon Riley, Dave Shacter
Trumpets — Peter Holtz, Andrew Hudson, Melissa Katz, Mark Waltz
Trombones — Jennifer Brookes, Leslie Dwight, Cindy Hall, Schieff Smith Rhythm — Tom Gibbons, Scott Guay, Tony Wion

Levesque manages the meetings

KEVIN WESLEY
ORIENT In-Depth Editor

A visitor to the Student Activities office on the ground floor of the Moulton Union would be amazed at the amount of activity occurring behind the desk.

In the background, a computer printer is spitting out reams of paper. A student is typing away furiously at a nearby terminal. Mail is scattered on the countertop, waiting to be sorted.

In the middle of this cacophony sits a smiling middle-aged woman with a phone at her ear, pen in hand, poring over massive binders of schedules, rooms and appointments. "Hello, campus scheduling. This is Joanne speaking."

Joanne Levesque, the campus scheduler, has been manipulating meetings and smoothing out schedules since September, 1986. Responsible for the scheduling of most campus events (except classes and athletics), Levesque has to accommodate students, administrators and staff with requests for performance space, guest suites, and lunch and dinner meetings.

"I think the nicest part of the job is that it's so diverse. There's no day that's like another," she said.

A native of Holyoke, Colorado, Levesque and her husband Louis moved to Brunswick three years ago. They had been living in Washington, D.C. with their children, Nicole, 13, and Steven, 15, before Louis retired from 22 years in the U.S. Air Force.

"I arrived one day and had a job the next day," she said. She began working at Bowdoin College in the treasurer's office, then moved to summer programs. When the newly-appointed position of campus scheduler was created, she jumped.

Photo by Alan Harris

While the entire year is hectic, Levesque said August and September are the worst, when groups are working with students. "I'm always amazed at their creativity. They've always treated me with a great deal of respect. Some even call me Mom."

Her biggest complaint about her job is the lack of manpower. Currently four students work for her. She also added that due to the amount of enthusiasm on the Bowdoin campus, many facilities are overworked, and so is she.

"That's kind of normal," she explained. "I think anytime you have facilities that are overused and abused, that will be the pace."

When she's not working, Levesque enjoys "gardening, cooking, shopping and spending time with my family." She is also a volunteer for the Special Olympics.

Campus Profiles

slowly becoming organized. "The phone never stops ringing," she said.

"I try to be fair, whether it be students, administrators, or staff. I think if you're fair to people, they're fair to you," she said.

Levesque also said she loves

AMERICAN CANCER SOCIETY

Get a checkup. Life is worth it.

THE REWARDS OF A HIGHER EDUCATION.

You've worked hard for your degree. And now you can get the graduation gift you've always dreamed of. Goodwin's Chevrolet and GMAC have teamed up to make owning or leasing your first new Chevrolet a lot easier. This package is open to anyone within six months of graduation, and includes the option to defer your first payment for up to 90 days. Stop in today for more details.

GOODWIN'S CHEVROLET

195 Pleasant Street, Brunswick 729-1611 773-1516 1-800-HI-FRANK

ENTERTAINMENT

Student plays show diversity

ELIZABETH MULLEN
ORIENT Staff

This year's collection of student written one-act plays are nothing if not diverse. Ranging from the abstract to the slapstick, this collection of four very different plays provides a showcase for student talent.

The evening begins on a dramatic note with Otto, a story of a Jew faced with the Gentile world of college, and the tension his religion creates both internally and between himself and his roommate. Written by Scott Mendel and directed by Dave Mittel, this play starts off lightheartedly enough as Jim, played by Paul Adelstein '91, and Otto, played by Pat Seed '90, self-consciously greet each other.

The action quickens when Jim discovers that Otto is Jewish and he wants to keep his religion a secret. Jim's discovery becomes problematic as Jim tries to help Otto to "fit in," compromising his religion in the process.

Actors Adelstein and Seed build tension between themselves from the very start of the play. Adelstein's frenetic energy plays well against Seed's strained reserve. The dialogue is well-written and well-paced, though the ending to this play is somewhat disappointing and inconclusive.

The following play, Dance, written by Jon Halperin '89, and directed by Emily Lensen '88, is equally dramatic, though more abstract than the first. A man, played by Al Mauro '89, attempts to build a sculpture based on Henri Matisse's "Dance," but as he attempts to draw the circle of dancers together, his life and the dancers' become more and more disjointed.

The fragmentary nature of the play and its use of flashback and dream scenes make it more difficult to follow than the rest, yet that fragmented quality lends added importance to each scene. "Dance" evokes images of a modern-day Puck.

Following on the heels of Dance, The Myth of Maine is like a blast from another world. Written and directed by Michael Libonati and David Spohr, both '91, this play examines the rigors of keeping the myth of Maine and the rugged, reserved Mainer, alive.

The dialogue is light and amusing, and Louis Frederick '90 gives a stunning performance as the intellectual/whittling, tobacco-chewing merchant in a general store/souvenir shop somewhere in Maine. Kevin Wesley '89 and Julie Felner's '91, appearance as the nerdy, tasteless tourists is brief but convincing, and Bart Accolla '91 achieves a kind of "Bartley and Jaymes" effect as Harvey, the overweight businessman/Mainer storyteller.

One look at the cast list of Full Circle, the final one-act of the evening, gives an idea of what is in store. Such diverse roles as "Elvis/Kung Fu Master/Don Johnson" hint at the composite nature of this play.

Set at Bowdoin in the present day, Full Circle, written by Adam Najberg '90 and Adam Halem '91 out.

Cory Burns '88 and Greg Shean '89, as Kurt and Tim, give delightful performances reminiscent of "The Odd Couple." Burns' rendition of the artistic film buff appalled at the surfer/slasher film mentality of his partner is particularly dynamic.

While the various short scenes and the many, many characters of this play are diverting and, at times, hilarious, the premise wears thin and the humor degenerates into one-liners and slapstick. At times and directed by Adam Halem, tells the tale of two struggling screenwriters two days before their deadline. As they voice their different story ideas, the characters appear behind a white curtain and act them this play seems more like a talent show than anything else. Luckily, some of the talent makes it funny and enjoyable.

The fragmentation of a life moves "Dance." Photo by Mary Ann Lal.

"Otto" examines a student's struggle with his Jewish identity. Photo by Mary Ann Lal.

The plays will show tonight and Saturday at 8 p.m.

Ogata, Ferlazzo display works

BETH MULLEN
ORIENT Staff

On Sunday, May 1 at 9:00 p.m. Joe Ferlazzo, '88 and Piet Ogata, '88 will present an exhibition of their recent works in Kresge Gallery, Visual Art Center.

Ogata, an Honors candidate in studio art, works in a number of media, including house paint, oils, and spray paint. Her palette is somber with occasional touches of bright color.

Influenced by such artists as Robert Ogata and Cy Twombly, Ogata explores the use of alphabetic characters for their intrinsic aesthetic value.

"I was influenced by the letters of foreign countries" said Ogata, "I would see these combinations of characters which were completely foreign to me—like Arabic—and I would think about how to a group of people that jumble of forms had meaning."

Ogata shows this influence in her use of single and combined letters as forms rather than as symbols. Her use of spray paint lends a graffiti-like quality to some of her works.

In contrast, Ferlazzo, also an Honors candidate in studio art with a minor in sociology, uses vivid planes of color in his multi-canvas works.

"I use different surfaces within each piece to try to evoke different but related ideas" said Ferlazzo, whose surfaces are inspired by such diverse elements as light, stone, and skin. At times his canvases seem diffused with light, while in other works, the solidity of the surface creates an object-like effect.

Ferlazzo pieces the different surfaces together in challenging ways: "I make the canvases different sizes and depths in order to create a tension between the object nature of the canvases and the traditional use of picture space," said Ferlazzo. In this idea, he has been influenced by artists Robert Irwin and Jasper Johns.

This exhibition will run from April 29-May 5.

Sights and Sounds

FRIDAY, APRIL 29

7:30 and 10:00 p.m. — The BFVS presents Breaker Morant, in Smith Auditorium. $1 admission.

8:00 p.m. — The Student-Written One-Act Plays will be performed: Otto or the Jew on Campus by Scott

Mendel '90, directed by David Mittel '89; Dance by John Halperin '89, directed by Emily Lensen '88; The Myth of Maine, written and directed by Michael E. Libonati '91 and David W. Spohr '91; and Full Circle by Adam Najberg '90 and Adam Halem '91, directed by Adam Halem. The performance will be held in the G.H.Q. Playwrights' Theater, Pickard (downstairs). Limited seating.

SATURDAY, APRIL 30

11:00 a.m. — Composer Pauline Oliveros will give a lecture, "The Roots of the Moment," in Gibson Hall, Room 101. One of America's prominent contemporary composers, she is well-known for her work in electronic music and the innovative use of voices.

3:30–5:00 p.m. — Bowdoin College Community Orchestra, directed by Zae Munn, assistant professor of music, performs a piece by Joyce Keesel, in Pickard Theater. Keesel will speak about her work before the performance, and a panel discussion with guest composers will follow the performance.

7:30 and 10:00 p.m. — The BFVS presents Giallioli in Smith Auditorium. $1 admission.

8:00 p.m. — The Student-Written One-Act Plays will be performed:

Otto or the Jew on Campus by Scott Mendel '90, directed by David Mittel '89; Dance by John Halperin '89, directed by Emily Lensen '88; The Myth of Maine, written and directed by Michael Libonati '91 and David Spohr '91; and Full Circle by Adam Najberg '90 and Adam Halem '91, directed by Adam Halem. The performance will take place in the G.H.Q. Playwrights' Theater, Pickard. Limited seating.

SUNDAY, MAY 1

8:30 a.m. — Registration for the "Run for a Free South Africa" race will begin on the Dudley Cox Health Center lawn. T-shirts will be available on a first-come, first-served basis. The registration fee is $5 in advance or $6 on the day of the race.

10:00 a.m. — The "Run for a Free South Africa" race will start on the Cox Health Center lawn. The race is a community effort to raise public awareness as well as to aid and educate black South Africans in their struggle for freedom.

11:00 a.m. — Composer Peter Racine Fricker will give a lecture, "Composer and Chorus," in Room 101, Gibson Hall. A native of London, Fricker's works for orchestra and chamber ensembles have been performed throughout Europe and the United States.

2:00 p.m. — The Bowdoin College Chamber Choir, directed by Robert Greenlee, associate professor of music, with Linda Blanchard '88 as assistant director. The program will include performances by guest composers Peter Fricker and Pauline Oliveros, and composition finalists: Esta Blood, Phil Winsor, Alex Lubet, and Lawrence Moss. Following will be the judging of the finalist compositions in the Festival of Contemporary Choral Music in America. The winner will be announced at the end of the program.

3:00 p.m. — A Gallery Talk, "Bowdoin Eye Painter and Early Attic Red Figure," will be given by D. Neel Smith, assistant professor of archaeology, in the Walker Art Building.

7:30 p.m. — A lecture "Journey to the West," will be given by Anthony Yu, professor of religion and literature in the Divinity School, and professor, department of Far Eastern languages and civilizations, department of English, and the Committee on Social Thought, University of Chicago. The lecture will be held in Daggett Lounge, Wentworth Hall.

TUESDAY, MAY 3

11:00 a.m. — Our Lives in Our Hands, a 50-minute color documentary about the Micmac community in Aroostook County, will be shown in Smith Auditorium, Sills Hall. The film focuses on the role of basketry and cultural change in the Indian community.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 4

1:00 p.m. — A Gallery Talk, "Endless Work: Julien Dupré's Women in the Fields," by William C. Waterson, associate professor of English, will be given in the Walker Art Building.

THURSDAY, MAY 5

11:00 a.m. — Eunice Nelson of the Penobscot Indian nation will speak in the Chase Barn Chamber, 256 Maine St. Born on the Penobscot reservation at Indian Island, Nelson is the first of her tribe to earn a doctoral degree (in anthropology). She has taught at the University of Maine, Orono, and the College of the Atlantic in Bar Harbor.

EXHIBITIONS

"Eliot Porter," is on display in the Twentieth Century and Temporary Exhibition Galleries, April 15 through June 5, a major exhibition celebrating the 50-year career of Eliot Porter, one of the world's leading color photographers. "His brilliantly colored images of leaf and landscape, sun and tide have the majestic authority of revealed truth. They restore a bit of the natural world to our imaginations," says John Coffey, Bowdoin College curator of collections. Porter prefers intimate views of nature rather than sweeping landscapes. In his own words, "nature is too vast and complex to grasp quickly, but a fragment of it is comprehensible and allow the imagination to fill in the excluded setting."

Contemporary Art from the Permanent Collection, is on display in the John A. and Helen P. Becker Gallery through May 29.

An exhibition of works by Joseph L. Ferlazzo '88 and Piet H. Ogata '88 will open on April 29 in the Visual Arts Center, Kresge Gallery.

MOVIES

Evening Star Cinema (Tontine Hall)

The Last Emperor, showing at 6:30 and 9:25 p.m. (Friday and Saturday), and at 6:45 p.m. on Sunday through Thursday.

Cinemas 4 (Cook's Corner)

Good Morning Vietnam, showing at 7:00 and 9:00 p.m.

Beetlejuice, showing at 7:05 and 9:05 p.m.

Johnny Be Good, showing at 7:10 and 9:10 p.m.

Bad Dream, showing at 7:15 and 9:15 p.m.

THE BRUNSWICK

FLOWER SHOP

729-8895
 216A Maine St.
 Mon.-Sat. 9:30-6

We Deliver
 Wire Service

Don't forget Mother's Day - it's coming soon!

COASTAL SELF STORAGE

Residential - Commercial - Industrial Autos - Boats - Campers, etc.

- units in 8 sizes, 5x5 thru 10x40, all 10 ft. high
- Fireproof and insulated -Electronic Gate Fencing
- Only Resident-managed Facility in the area
- Monthly and yearly rates available

FREE - 2 weeks with 3 month rental
FREE - 1 month with 6 month rental

Cooks Corner, Rt. 24 south, Brunswick, near Sears and Cinema IV
725-5818

UNIQUE HOUSING OPPORTUNITY FOR BOWDOIN STUDENTS - MALE OR FEMALE APPLICATIONS NOW BEING TAKEN FOR NEXT SEMESTER

Rooms in beautiful, newly renovated lovely Colonial home very near campus. Bedrooms have charming antique pine and oak bureaus and desks, new oak beds, and large closets. Share 3 all-new stylish tile baths and lovely new contemporary kitchen with new appliances, new cabinetry, cathedral ceiling. Refined pumpkin pine floors; natural refinished doors. Spacious, quiet and clean. Single occupancy, $1400 per semester plus security deposit. All utilities included. Especially charming space for a few particularly discerning students.

This is not a place for parties, etc.
 Care to take a look?
 Call Mr. Boudette at 729-8616

The Omelette Shop Café

BRUNSWICK-MAINE

CALL WILBUR'S CANDY FOR BALLOON DELIVERY

Celebrate Spring with a Chocolate Truffle!

Tontine Fine Candies
 Traditional & Unique Candies

WILBUR'S CANDY TONTINE FINE CANDIES
 13 Bow Street
 Freeport, ME
 865-6129 / 865-4071

Tontine Mall Brunswick, ME 729-4462

Graziano's serves homestyle Italian fare

LIZZ MILLAN
 ORIENT Asst. Ent. Editor

The menu at Graziano's, begins: "Welcome to our table... One of the special moments in an Italian home is the gathering of friends around the table with ample dishes of the family recipes being shared by all. We're glad you are here! As you wander through our menu, you should know that our sauces are homemade...relax, enjoy and please come again soon."

After eating here, you will indeed return again soon.

Located in Lisbon Falls, Graziano's is only twenty minutes from campus and well worth the trip. It's a perfect place for a casual dinner.

There is nothing fancy about Graziano's, but there is definitely something special. The tables are covered with red cloths, and each has a vase with a small arrangement of flowers. It is easy to feel right at home. Obviously, many of the patrons do; many knew the hostess and waitresses by name.

Interest is added by the sports paraphernalia covering the walls. The owner, Joe, is a cousin of the late, great fighter Rocky Graziano, and many photos of this famous cousin serve as the restaurant's adornments.

Another bright spot in Graziano's is the service. The waitresses are pleasant and attentive. Graziano's is the perfect place to go when you do not want to wait long for your food, for before your eyes have time to linger at the photos on the walls, the food is served.

The food, of course, is the most enticing feature of the restaurant. If you like Italian food and lots of it, this is your restaurant. To warm up for the main course, you have the choice of many appetizers: stuffed mushrooms, antipasto, fried eggplant slices... The appetizers, however, are not essential supplements, for the main courses are able to stand on their own.

Two especially delicious specialties are the Baked Lasagne Parmigiana, homemade, stuffed with ricotta cheese and meat, mushroom and peppers and covered with Provolone cheese. This is enough to fuel someone through two marathons! A bit on the lighter side is the Tortellini Casa Festa, roasted pasta with cheese stuffing, sautéed in garlic butter with ham, sweet peas, carrots and Romano cheese. Although light, there will probably be plenty of this dish left to take home. Eggplant Parmigiana, Shrimp Scampi Cala-brese and Seafood Marinara are other specialties of Graziano's.

Spaghetti with almost any type of sauce imaginable is also available. There is no end to the pasta possibilities: ravioli, manicotti and ziti are a few.

If you don't like pasta there are chicken, seafood and meat alternatives. Each entree comes with a generous basket of fresh-baked bread and a fresh salad.

There is an extensive wine list to complement the main dishes. The wines are available by the glass or the bottle.

If you want a lighter dinner, you might try the pizza, or a selection from the Bambino Corner. A nice mug of beer of can be obtained at the bar. The bar is small and in no way interferes with the atmosphere of the restaurant.

Chances are, you will be too full to even consider dessert. There are, however, plenty of tasty choices available.

If you want small portions served on good china with classical music playing softly in the background, Graziano's is not the place to come. Graziano's caters to hungry people who want to enjoy real Italian food at reasonable prices.

Miscellania records "Right on Time"

ANGELA DAIGLE
 ORIENT Staff

On May 4 Miscellania will begin recording their new tape tentatively entitled "Right on Time."

According to Business Manager Alison Aymar '90, "Right on Time" will feature "songs that have yet to be recorded and a bunch that are newly arranged." New arrangements include "Hodja," "Beimir" and "Happy Together."

Aymar said Miscellania will record part of the new tape in Portland this semester because "we wanted graduating seniors to have the chance to get a couple songs on the new release." The rest of the tape will be recorded next semester.

Yale's all male singing group recently invited Miscellania as their guests to participate in the Yale's Baker's Dozen Spring Jam held on April 8th. Amy Winton '90 said "some of the live cuts from the concert will be used on the new tape." She added the group "basically" wants a raw type of recording with no fixing, touching work.

Winton said "Right on Time" will come out in the middle of next semester and their "Christmas concert will be a big plug for it." Miscellania plans on selling their new tape in the Moulton Union bookstore as well as at concerts.

According to Aymar, Miscellania financed most of the cost of their new tape from the money raised on their successful October tour. On that tour the group gave concerts for alumni in Rhode Island as well as in the Massachusetts area. Concerts were given at Faneuil Hall and Harvard Square where Aymar said the group "sold tons of tapes and people just gave us donations."

Winton added that since Miscellania will be only 15 years old next year, their "alumni is too young to support us." Current Bowdoin alumni pays for Miscellania's transportation but not for the group's concerts.

Since Miscellania is an all female organization Aymar said "according to the college, we are not recognized as a group." Therefore, Miscellania receives no financial support, does not have an advisor, and receives no credit.

However, Aymar said "on tour we were singing as Bowdoin College Miscellania" and are therefore representing the college. Winton added if they had college funding Miscellania "could afford to tour for more than alumni."

Since Miscellania exists independently from the college, Aymar said the group acts as "one big democracy." We all make decisions collectively without outside forces making decisions for us."

Aymar said during next semester's break Miscellania is planning to tour in New York City, Philadelphia, and Washington, D.C. The group will sing for Bowdoin alumni clubs as well as college prep schools.

Due to the upcoming graduation of this year's student director, Linda Blanchard, Winton said "everyone is making a well rounded effort instead of just relying on Linda." According to Aymar, the interesting aspect of the semester "is everyone is making a collective effort in arranging new songs as well as taking turns leading rehearsals."

As a result of the growing group effort, Miscellania has been preparing three new numbers; "Locomotion," "Tuxedo Junction" and "Does Jesus Have a Baby Sister?" They are preparing these new selections for their Spring Concert scheduled for May 8th, the Sunday of Ivies weekend, at 8 p.m. in Daggett Lounge.

Community runs for Africa

TANYA WEINSTEIN
 ORIENT Asst. News Editor

Sunday morning's Run For a Free South Africa will mark the culmination of South African Awareness Week.

The Run For a Free South Africa Race is being sponsored by the student-run group Run For a Free South Africa (RAFSA). All proceeds from the race will go towards the fund for Bowdoin Scholarships in South Africa. The scholarships will enable two black South African students to attend integrated universities in South Africa.

RAFSA has also raised money for these scholarships by soliciting businesses in the Brunswick community for donations or contributions. Many businesses have given cash donations or gifts to be awarded as prizes the day of the race.

Two events will take place on Sunday morning, starting on the lawn of the Dudley Coe infirmary — a 10-kilometer road race and a three-kilometer "fun run." The 10-kilometer race will begin at 10 a.m., and the "fun run" will start 5 minutes later.

T-shirts will be handed out on a first-come, first-serve basis. In the 10-kilometer race, prizes will be awarded to the top finishers in each age division. Age categories are broken down into 18-under, 19-29, 30-39, 40-49, and 50-over. In the "fun run", a raffle will be held after the race and runner's names will be drawn randomly.

Registration fees are $5 in advance and $6 the day of the race. Registration begins at 8:30 a.m.

The race was previously held two years ago in the spring. 170 people participated in both events. A total of $200 was raised for the scholarship. Bill Littell '88, a committee member of RAFSA, said, "We hope for a good turnout again this year... we are hoping to raise $1500."

In the previous race most runners participated in the 10-k race. Littell said runners throughout the state showed up the day of the race.

Littell said the primary function of the race is to raise money for the fund. However, he added, "its other function is to acquaint Bowdoin students and the greater community that the South African issue has not died since Bowdoin divested."

When the Governing Boards voted on the decision to divest from South Africa, Littell said participating students promised not to let the issue die. However, the issue has died since important and "it is just as alive... the situation is no different in South Africa" he added.

SPORTS

Mike
Botelho

What Montreal jinx?

Things weren't going too well for me Tuesday night.

I was feeling lethargic and sluggish. For two and a half hours, I had been hunched over my carrel in the basement of Hawthorne and Longfellow confronted with the gruesome reality of an undone honors thesis and a fast approaching deadline. My mind was like mush, and it seemed like I wasn't going to get anything accomplished. Every five minutes or so, I found myself wandering aimlessly from my desk through the dark, dusty stacks of the library for want of anything to do besides the work before me.

I went to the telephones beside the reserve desk and saw, to my astonishment, that one booth was unoccupied. I had decided to call my roommate Jan to learn the present score of the Bruins-Canadians playoff game. If it were close, I'd walk back to the tower and watch it. If the Canadians were up by a lot, I'd trudge back to the gloomy, ominous confines of my desk and continue to grapple with the seemingly monumental task at hand.

When Jan told me the score was then 3-1, being the consummate optimist, I instantly figured that the Bruins were down and not the Canadians. I mean the game was at the Forum and after three straight losses, I assumed that the Canadians would come out strong. I couldn't imagine that they'd be down by two goals. Yet, Jan reassured my somewhat dubious mind that my beloved Bruins were indeed ahead in the contest. It was something I had not expected. But it provided me with the justification that I had long sought. I could now escape from my desk for at least until the game was over.

Once in the tower, I raced to the empty second floor lounge and switched the TV to channel 38. The Bruins were still up, 3-1, and it was five minutes into the third period. Only fifteen minutes until the long drought would finally end.

Suddenly I began to hallucinate. In my mind flashed images of past Bruins-Canadians playoff contests. And though the circumstances differed greatly, the outcomes were always the same. 1979 entered my head, and I thought I saw too many men on the ice. (But I wasn't really sure.) 1986 appeared before me, and I witnessed four straight pathetic Bruins' losses. It hit me now that this was much more than just a hockey playoff game. There was something very special and historic about it.

It was the termination of 45 years of utter futility and failure; 45 years of endless pain and suffering; 45 years of bad bounces and bad calls; 45 years of speedy Canadian for-

(Continued on page eight)

Polar Bears overwhelm Jumbos

JIM ANDERSON
ORIENT Staff

After two lacrosse-less weeks at Bowdoin College fans of the sport were treated to a battle between two of the best teams in New England. Unfortunately for Bowdoin they were playing the #1 ranked Division III team, Middlebury.

For each team this was a game of monumental importance and both teams played up to their potential. As far as quality games go, you do not find many better than this one. Despite losing 8-6 the Bears have nothing to be ashamed of. With the possible exception of the last five minutes, this was most likely the Bears' finest effort of the season.

Bowdoin's effort was keyed by strong defensive play. At the hub of the defense was goalie Morgan Hall '88. Hall turned a performance described by Coach Mort LaPointe as "outstanding." Hall turned away 28 of Middlebury's 36 shots for an impressive save percentage of 78%. On the offensive side of things, Lloyd Byrne '88 and Ken McLaughlin '89 each tallied twice. Jake Odden '90 and Todd Bland '90 each scored once. Odden adding an assist to his point total as well.

The last period was the decider in this one. The Bears entered down 5-4 but with five minutes remaining were clinging to a 6-5 advantage. Of the last five minutes in which Middlebury scored 3 goals, LaPointe commented, "We had them with five minutes to go and let it get away." The coach continued saying of Middlebury, "They deserved it...they're good." Even though the loss dropped Bowdoin to 6-2, the quality of their opponent and play will (or should) not hurt their #3 ranking.

Attackman Lloyd Byrne (4) tries to fend off Middlebury defenseman. Bowdoin lost 8-6. Middlebury is ranked number one in Division III lacrosse and has proven to be a perennial nemesis for the Bears. The Bears managed to rebound quickly by defeating Tufts on Wednesday by a score of 7-4. Photo by Lori Bodwell.

Women's lacrosse falters at Tufts, 9-5

BRETT WICKARD
ORIENT Staff

The women's lacrosse team found themselves on the short end of a 9-5 decision to the Tufts Jumbos, who are currently ranked 4th nationally.

It was a hard-fought game, but the superior strength and speed of Tufts persevered. The score was a downheartening 1-5 at the end of the first half, but Bowdoin played them evenly in the second half 4-4. There were many highlights from the Bowdoin side. "Cynthia Davis '88, Audrey Augustin '88, and Kathleen Devaney '90 all had excellent games," commented coach LaPointe.

Margaret Danenburger '90 led the Bowdoin scoring with 3. Her third goal came on what LaPointe described as a "garbage" assist. Kathy McCormick '88 had fallen in the crease and tossed the ground ball up to Danenburger who scored. Nancy Mahoney '90 and Augustin rounded off the Polar Bear's scoring with 1 apiece.

Goalie Hily Snyder '88 succeeded in saving 64% of the shots on net. "She's been keeping us in a lot of games," said LaPointe. Though Bowdoin lost, the game is still a bright spot. "I couldn't ask for more," LaPointe said. "I was really pleased."

Danenburger is currently the leading scorer for the Bears with 20, followed by three others at 17. Snyder's save percentage is still in the low 60's.

Last Saturday, in a match that proved to be nothing more than a warm-up for Wednesday's game, the Polar Bears thoroughly defeated Wheaton College. Coming off that victory, the team had anticipated a closer match-up with Tufts.

This weekend the Polar Bears play host at Pickard to two visitors from Vermont. Bowdoin needs to knock off the first guest, Middlebury, this Saturday to reach the .500 mark. The Panthers, who are also mentioned nationally, will prove to formidable competition.

The game is at home at 2:00 on Saturday. On Sunday, the Catamounts from the University of Vermont will face the Bears on the fields at 1:00.

Brendan Diffley '88 unwinds into his delivery on Wednesday against Bates. Photo by Lori Bodwell.

Baseball falls to state rivals

BLAIR DILS
ORIENT Staff

The Bowdoin College men's baseball stumbled this past week, losing four games to two teams, Bates and UMaine-Farmington, in the process dropping to 4-15 for the season.

On Friday April 22 the Bears travelled to Lewiston to face the Bobcats and they found Lewiston to be quite unfriendly. The story of the Polar Bear's plight on this day was simple: 5 hits and 5 errors. Bowdoin jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the third inning, but that lead did not last long as the Bobcats got 3 runs in that same inning and never looked back. The Bears managed to stay even for

On Wednesday the Bears bounced back from the Saturday loss to reel in the Jumbos of Tufts and go on to win 7-4. Bowdoin trailed momentarily in the first half but shrugged that off and shut down Tufts for most of the second half to win going away. The victory ups the Bears record to 7-2 with four regular season games to play.

Once again goalie Hall has to be considered the backbone of the victory. The sophomore netminder was brilliant for the second consecutive game, turning away 16 of the 20 Jumbo bids for goals. Hall commented on his last two games, "Right now I feel the best I have all season. I'm getting a lot of help in front of me which makes my job much easier. My confidence in myself and my defense has helped my play out on the field. I just go out there with the attitude that nobody can get it by me."

However the offensive play of Lloyd Byrne cannot be overlooked. Byrne had his most prolific game of the season, scoring 4 goals while adding an assist to the cause. This was truly a team effort and several others deserve credit in the victory as well. John Stonestreet '88, normally not a big scorer, managed to find the back of the Tufts net on 2 separate occasions. Odden also tallied and assisted. LaPointe stressed the work of midfielders Greg Bohannon '88 and McLaughlin for their exemplary work on the faceoffs.

Bowdoin enjoys two games in the rain under the Pines this week. Tomorrow they tackle the Amherst Lord Jeffs and then go to battle with the Babson Beavers on Tuesday. Action will kick off in the weekend game at 2:00 and on Tuesday at 3:00.

several innings but a 5 run outburst in the 8th sealed the fate of the visitors. Brad Chin '91 was the story on offense, collecting a home, a triple, and 3 RBI in the process.

The double-header on Saturday with UMaine-Farmington epitomized the fortunes of the 1988 version of Bowdoin Baseball. In Game 1 of two 7" inning match-ups, the Bears staged a late inning comeback, only to watch UMaine score an unearned run in the top of the 7th to snatch away the victory. Bowdoin lost it on two walks, an error and a fielder's choice, after having erased a four run deficit. The error was one of six committed by the defense (Continued on page eight)

Tennis topples to UMO

JUSTIN PREISENDORF
ORIENT Sports Editor

The Bowdoin men's tennis team finished the past week with a 1-2 record as they brace themselves for the upcoming competition at the NESAC Championships.

On Friday and Saturday, the squad travelled to Vermont to face Middlebury and UVM. Middlebury, showing much depth, walloped the Polar Bears 8-1. Pete Goldman '90 earned the lone victory with a gutsy 3 set win. John Zitzmann '89, and the doubles teams of Goldman-Jack Cooley '88, Blair Dils '90-Nat Jeppson '91, all pushed their matches to three sets but were unable to get much needed victories.

Saturday, the Div. I Catamounts dismantled the young Bowdoin contingent, 9-0. Dils and Jeppson managed to split sets in their doubles match but lost after squandering an early third set lead.

Tuesday, the Bears earned their sweetest victory of the season. Facing a UMaine-Orono team that had beaten the Bears a week earlier, Bowdoin escaped with a 5-4 victory. Jack Cooley, Jeppson and Bill Caan '88 all won in their singles positions to keep the match at a tight 3-3 score. Bill Caan, a 5th year senior walk on playing in the no. 6 spot, has been an inspiration to the squad this year. Steve Mitchell states, "He's like a father figure to some of the younger guys on the team." The match then moved in to the doubles, where Bowdoin needed two victories. They both went to 3 sets but Goldman-Cooley and Dils-Jeppson outlasted their opposers to bring in the win.

Standing with a record of 4-5, Coach Vandersee's club now sets their sights on the NESAC Championships this weekend at Middlebury. The team looks to fare better than the last place finish of last season.

John Dougherty '91 sizes up his competition en route to winning the men's 3000m steeplechase on Saturday in the state meet. Bowdoin did not fare as well as UMO who won the state title convincingly. Photo by Alan Harris.

Chi Psi shoots for charity

MARTIN MALAGUE
ORIENT Contributor

The first annual "Chi Psi Three on Three For Charity" basketball tournament was held on April 22-23. The event raised over $150 for the Bath's Children's Home. Steven Cote, president of Chi Psi and organizer of the event said, "We could not have been happier, all the teams were great sports."

Thirteen teams played in the tournament, held on the recently refurbished Chi Psi driveway/court. Varsity players Kevin Hancock and Steve Drigotas teamed with Hancock's younger brother Matt to win the tournament. Keeping with the spirit of the event the winners showed true sportsmanship by donating the prize money set aside for them to the children's home. In the final match the Hancock brothers and Drigotas narrowly beat the trio of John Cole, Scott McCabe, and Mike Roque by only two hoops.

The money donated was accumulated from the ten dollar entrance fee for the teams and from contributions from Chi Psi. Cote expressed his pleasure with the results, "I'd just like to thank all those involved. I think we have the makings of a great annual event."

SWAN'S ISLAND, ME.
3 BR, deck, view.
Hiking, swimming.
June - Sept. $350 a week.
No smokers.
609-463-1102

1985 Toyota Corolla
new muffler, good condition
AM-FM cassette, A/C
$3700.
Call Joe at 773-7211

KRISTINA'S
BAKERY RESTAURANT

*Everyone's favorite for Breakfast,
Lunch & Dinner*

*Deliciously different menus
Delectable pastries
Friendly atmosphere*

Open Wed - Sat for
Breakfast - Lunch - Dinner
8:00 a.m. - 9:00 p.m.
Sunday brunch 9:00 a.m. - 2:00 p.m.

at the corner of
Center & High St.,
Bath, Maine 04530
(207) 442-8577

Baseball

(Continued from page seven)
on the game.

Game 2 turned out to be a carbon copy of game one, except this one was extended to extra innings. UMF built up a 9-2 lead after 5 1/2 innings but the Polar Bears came storming back in the bottom of the 6th to tie the count 9-9. Tom Aldrich '88 bolstered the offense in that inning, knocking a grand slam home-run. As in the first game, UMF managed to scrap out a run, this time in the tenth, and the victory was sealed. Two game totals for the Bears on this day: Chris Hill '88-4 hits, Aldrich-2 HRs, Ray Duffley '88-2 hits, Scott Twitchell '88-2 hits, John Irons '89 and Chin-I HR.

On Wednesday, the Bears returned to action against the Bobcats at Pickard Field, the same result again occurring. Not enough offense and ineffective pitching sealed Bowdoin's plight as they succumbed to the Bates' attack. Sunday finds them in Williamstown to face the Ephrims.

Botelho

(Continued from page seven)

wards blazing around, past and through brawny Bruins defenses; 45 years of too many Montreal tallies and too few Boston opportunities; 45 years of mocking and ridicule on the part of Canadian fans. Not since 1943, after 18 consecutive playoff series, had the Boston Bruins departed from a round with the Montreal Canadians with heads held high in triumph.

When Bruins' goalie Reggie Lemelin made some outstanding saves to thwart a strong Canadian onslaught and forward Cam Neely picked up a loose puck and broke free on Montreal's Patrick Roy to score Boston's fourth goal of the game, I knew that what was once a foolish dream was now a brilliant reality. Bruins win, Canadians lose. Words not often heard in the same breath. At least not since WWII.

When the game ended at 4-1, I went back to my desk uplifted and revived with a renewed sense of purpose. If the Bruins could defeat the dreaded Habs of Montreal, I could certainly deal with foreign intervention in the Spanish Civil War. (At least I thought so then.)

At around 11:30, I returned to my room in order to express my sincere sorrow and show pity for my roommate Josh, a Montreal citizen and avid Canadians' fan. (I also wanted to collect on a little wager which we had made on the outcome of the series.) Josh was taking the loss very badly. He was in far worse condition than I would have ever imagined. Josh lay flat on his bed, stiff as a graphite racket, his head darkish green and his whole body quivered incessantly. He moaned and groaned some indiscernible mish-mash about some "grave injustice", "goons and zebras and Jay Miller", and that the world was in some kind of a "chemical imbalance". Jan, my other roommate John and I huddled over him clearly disturbed by the seriousness of his malady.

As time progressed, Josh's nausea subsided, and he yelled less and less. He became somewhat coherent and now recognized us. He was soon accepting the awful truth much better now. I left his side deducing that one less Bruins' fan in his room could only help him to recover more quickly. Like the city of Montreal, Josh remained restless and did not sleep well that night. But in Boston, all was joyous and gay. Those who slept, slept well. And those who rested, rested easy liberated from the grisly memories of past Boston debacles. For 45 long years, Boston had waited for a night like this. For many like myself, it was well worth the wait.

But maybe next time the wait won't be so long.

SUMMER CAMP POSITIONS

Counselors, 21+, Coed, sleepaway camp, Mass. Berkshires, WSI, arts and crafts, tennis, all land and water sports, gymnastics, drama, piano/play for shows, judo, photography, dance, computers, nature, wilderness, model rocketry, guitar, radio, video, archery, yearbook, woodworking, RN and typist. Write, Camp Emerson, 5 Brassie Rd., Eastchester, NY 10707 or call 914/779-9406

TYPISTS - Hundreds weekly at home! Write: P.O. Box 17 Clark, New Jersey 07066

CRUISE SHIPS NOW HIRING. M/E.

Summer & Career Opportunities (Will Train). Excellent pay plus world travel. Hawaii, Bahamas, Caribbean, etc. CALL NOW 206-736-0775 Ext. 544F

BICYCLES

Fuji, Univega, Peugeot, Trek, Shogun
PROMPT, EXPERT SERVICE • CUSTOM BUILT WHEELS
EXERCISE EQUIPMENT & ROWING MACHINES
ALL - TERRAIN BICYCLES & CROSS COUNTRY SKIS
TRADE INS & USED BIKES
CYCLING CLOTHING AND HELMETS • CUSTOM BICYCLES SET UP

After March 1
Mon. - Sat., 10 - 5:30

442-7002

ROUTE 1 WOODWICH
(ACROSS FROM MCELMAN SUBARU & PEUGEOT)

Part-Time -
Home Mailing Program!
Excellent Income!
Detail, send self-addressed,
stamped envelope.
WEST
Box 5877, Hulsides, N.J. 07295

Reliable, energetic, personable
male, familiar with food,
wanted to fill position
in a new concept in
food vending.
Starts in mid-May.
Hourly rate + commission.
Call daily Greg Moyer
725-2434 or 729-4570.

Suggestions

(Continued from page one)
that it revitalize and reform the fraternity system in light of the findings and recommendations set forth in this report."

The following is a summary of the recommendations set forth in the Report to the President from the Committee to Review Fraternities. College Policy on Fraternities

That Bowdoin College will continue to recognize those fraternity chapters that conform to College policies as appropriate for developing student leadership and for providing housing and dining facilities consistent with the values of the College....[N]o chapter of a national fraternity that does not permit full membership regardless of sex shall be maintained on the Bowdoin campus after September 1, 1991, that any fraternity chapter not conforming with College policies be totally severed from any connection with the College whatsoever.

Legal Status

All College ties with any unrecognized fraternity or sorority must be severed on an absolute and total basis. Those organizations should not be permitted to participate in College organizations such as the Interfraternity Council.... The College should require each recognized fraternity to furnish it with evidence of liability insurance coverage in such amounts as the College Treasurer...prescribes.

Social Life Problems

The College must resolve as soon as possible the need for adequate social space for students.

The Committee encourages all members of the College community to curtail alcohol abuse and to encourage responsible behavior. The College should establish an Alcohol and Sexual Harassment Task Force to coordinate educational programs and concerns related to these two issues.

The College should make it absolutely clear to all students that they are expected to comply with Maine State drinking laws and with College alcohol policies.

The College must enforce drinking rules uniformly among all students.

A system of ID cards and doorkeepers should be instituted at all College and fraternity parties to control underage drinking. Campus-wide parties that are open to unlimited numbers of people and that violate fire and safety codes shall not be permitted in any recognized fraternity or in any College facility.

The dormitory proctor system should be improved by requiring that proctors be juniors or seniors rather than sophomores.

Physical Condition of Fraternity Houses

Effective August 1, 1990, students should be prohibited from rooming or dining in any recognized fraternity that is not certified by the Physical Plant Department as meeting College standards.

Effective August 1, 1990, recognized fraternity facilities should be inspected and certified by the Physical Plant Department on the same cycle that dormitories are.

Student Conduct and Leadership

Specific written guidelines should be established for student conduct and leadership in fraternities.

Written governance and operating procedures for fraternity chapters should be clearly defined.

Uniform periods of service for fraternity officers should be adopted, with major officers being required to serve one-year terms.

The Colleges should conduct leadership training seminars for all fraternity officers and should require their attendance.

Rushing and Orientation

A second-semester only rush should be adopted as soon as expanded dining facilities are available. Given the enormous pressures facing new students in the fall, the present rush period distracts from their orderly introduction into the College community.

All rush functions should be dry. Unrecognized fraternities or sororities may not participate in rush. Rush should be limited to ten days....

A specific date should be set for initiation night within four weeks from the start of classes.

The "Bowdoin College Hazing Policy" should be rewritten to include clearer and more specific examples of hazing.

Orientation programs should go beyond traditional initiation practices. Degrading but conventional elements of initiations such as fear, intimidation, line ups, and rote memorizations violate hazing laws and undermine the central mission of the College.

Fraternity Governance

The College should appoint an Assistant Dean of Students who would be responsible for advising fraternities and other student social organizations but who would not be responsible for discipline, which would continue to reside with the Dean of Students.

All fraternities should have faculty or staff advisors who would become familiar with chapter operations, be available for consultation, and meet regularly with the fraternity.

The College should make sure that faculty and staff advisers of recognized fraternities are covered as far as any personal liability is concerned by the College's By-Laws and liability insurance coverage.

The College should identify key alumni in the fraternity houses, express Bowdoin's appreciation to them, and encourage them to continue playing a vital role in the fraternity system.

Each fraternity should have an undergraduate officer who serves as an alumni liaison and coordinates alumni outreach.

If It Doesn't Fit

Ship It.

Whether heading for college or home for vacation, Mail Boxes Etc. USA will get your things there safer, faster and all in one piece. We even pack your boxes for you!

The Post Office Alternative
MAIL BOXES ETC. USA®

We'll pack & ship your belongings home. See you at Moulton Union.

May 15: Noon to 5

May 16-19: 10 to 5 (729-8774)

Reaction

(Continued from page one)
second semester rush only, a move which Lewallen says could easily be implemented. "A first semester rush is too early. It distracts incoming students from important matters and is unfair for both students and fraternities."

Furthermore, the argument that first semester rush and fraternities ease the load off Dining Service's overcrowded meal hours will not be true given next years scheduling of classes through the lunch hours, says Lewallen.

Campus wifes as they now exist—with their nearly unlimited supplies of keg beer provided to anyone with a Bowdoin College I.D.—will face stricter times ahead. Greason says fraternities "don't have a choice about obeying laws and the College has an obligation to see the laws are followed."

A monitoring system to bring fraternity campus-wifes into accordance with state liquor laws and college alcohol policy needs to be worked out, according to Lewallen.

Jervais hopes fraternities will take the initiative to police themselves; "If the fraternities don't do it, then the college will be forced to do it."

Lewallen says the College Alcohol Policy should be revised since fraternities will now be required to fully follow the Policy. For example, as College Policy stands currently, kegs are not allowed in College residences; if it remains unchanged, kegs—a permanent fixture in most Greek houses—would not be allowed in fraternities.

Lewallen and Jervis commend the Committee's recommendations to improve academic attitudes and social behavior at fraternities. "The report mandates that sexual harassment won't be tolerated anywhere," said Lewallen.

The report also advocates the hiring of a new dean to deal specifically with the governance of the fraternity system.

"I never thought fraternities were bastions of anti-intellectualism," said Lewallen, "I will suspect, though, they will be more responsible to incorporate the liberal arts experience."

Jervais said, "I hope that the college and fraternities can work together to implement these changes in good faith...we'd have a stronger fraternity system and school."

WHERE'S THE BEER?

(Everyone needs to believe in something.)

I believe I'll have another beer!

WINE·BEER·CHEESE·KEGS·ICE

OPINION

Fair assessment

The Report to the President from the Committee to Review Fraternities was not a move to abolish fraternities, nor was it an insignificant slap on the wrist. Instead, it was a thorough, practical and measured response to a number of problems with the fraternity system.

The recommendations made in the report, if fully implemented, will significantly alter the role of fraternities at Bowdoin. The revised system, as set forth in the report will eliminate most of the hypocrisy now existing between the fraternity system and the college's official policies towards co-education. The revisions will bring about a fraternity system that is more sound in finances, physical plant and leadership.

One of the most influential recommendations that committee has made is that fraternities must meet regular College standards for housing and dining by August 1, 1990. After making inspections of each fraternity, the committee, estimates fraternities must spend in excess of one million dollars to meet these standards. With several houses already in financial trouble, the new burden will add to the fiscal drain. Some fraternities may be forced to sell their houses to the college, who will make the repairs and then lease the house back. The fraternities will also be forced to retain as much liability insurance as the treasurer of the college requires.

The report also encourages the reorganization of the Interfraternity Council as a College-recognized organization. The committee recommends extensive advising systems, as well as the appointment of a new Assistant Dean of Students to deal expressly with fraternities and other social organizations.

A report makes a bold step in recommended that any local ties to a national fraternity that does not recognize women must be dropped. This is only logical and it is about time that this hypocritical situation is addressed by the administration.

The same goes for the official non-recognition of Chi Psi and Alpha Beta Phi. The administration has continually demonstrated an ambivalent acceptance of these two organizations. The report rightfully points out that these organizations run counter to the school's policies and can no longer be tolerated.

What the college must remember is that the fraternities are only part of the social life at Bowdoin. Tremendous changes are coming onto the Bowdoin social scene and other alternatives must be explored and developed as changes are pursued in the fraternity system. In any case, the students must not be forgotten in the rush to look at fraternities.

Executive snafu

The recent class officer and representatives to the Overseers elections conducted by the Executive Board were indicative of some of the fundamental weaknesses in the election process.

Two candidates for Representatives to the Board of Overseers were declared ineligible after the election. The Executive Board failed to clearly state the criteria for eligibility and then failed to screen the candidates. These candidates were forced to endure a futile campaign trail only to be declared "non-candidates" after the election. The Board then discarded the votes of a good portion of the student body without considering the possibility of a new election.

All the candidates for junior class officers ran uncontested. In the sophomore class election, write-in campaigns were conducted as alternatives to the unopposed candidates for president and vice president. During the election, the Board validated the write-in efforts by posting their names on the official list of candidates. However, after the election the Board declared the write-ins "non-candidates." The Board misled freshmen voters into considering the write-ins and then revoked the constitutional right of these students to participate in the election.

The elections were flawed; the Executive Board failed to fulfill its obligations to the student body. Sincere campaign efforts were squelched and the election process made into a mockery. Once again, the omnipresent Executive Board election booths will be erected to correct a comedy of errors. Don't they have anything better to do with our time?

Editor's Note

The Orient would like to defend its article of April 15th by Doug Jones entitled "Federal Funds Sought for Science Center."

In last week's Orient, Richard Mersereau's letter entitled "Federal Funding Clarified" said that the article was wrong in stating Bowdoin was bypassing the traditional system of "peer review" by seeking funds directly from Congress for the planned science center. "In fact," the letter stated, "the peer review process applies only to requests for research funds and not for support of facilities construction." The article, however, was correct.

According to Peter Smith, spokesman for the Association of American Universities which has been at the center of the controversy over peer review, "Peer review is a part of the facility construction process as well as the research process."

An article in Congressional Quarterly entitled "Colleges Lobby Congress for Facility Funds, Avoid Academic Peer Review," (Nov

24, 1984) says that the practice of seeking facility funds directly from Congress does bypass the peer review system. "Particularly in the construction of science facilities the practice (seeking direct Congressional funding) has been seen as undermining the peer review system that is typically used in the allocation of federal research money."

Another article in the Chronicle of Higher Education entitled "National Science Foundation Seeks Ways to Prevent Universities from Bypassing 'Peer Review' System" (Nov 28, 1984) cited "an increase this year in the number of attempts by universities to bypass the traditional 'peer review' system and obtain new research facilities directly from Congress."

Though much of the money allocated to colleges through the peer review system is in the form of research grants, the peer review process also applies to requests to federal agencies for money to be used for facilities construction.

Letters

C.I.A. recruiting defended

In the April 21 issue of the Colby Echo, Bowdoin professor H.R. Coursen suggested that allowing the C.I.A. to recruit on campus was akin to welcoming the Nazi party.

I find this incredibly insulting and distasteful. How dare you have the audacity to compare Colby's students to "fascists." Not only does it reflect your insensitivity to those persecuted under their brutal rule, but it also shows your utter ignorance of the true issue at stake.

First of all, the purpose of a liberal arts education is to instill in each individual the ability to make responsible decisions for themselves. Now this has nothing to [sic] with whether or not one is for or against the C.I.A. but whether the aim of the such an education [sic] is being undermined. Refusing the C.I.A.'s right to recruit on campus suggests that the school does not trust the judgement of its own students, and therefore is acting paternalistically, not responsibly.

Slightly less important, but nonetheless significant is the fact that I will be a senior next year. Like most of my fellow classmates, I want to decide for myself whether to schedule an interview with a C.I.A. recruiter, or any other potential employer for that matter. Job searching is an arduous process, and any attempt to regulate who comes to Colby sets a dangerous precedent. For if the C.I.A. is barred, will American companies with investments in South Africa be next?

Such decisions must be made by the students. They must decide for themselves what is right, not anyone else. For if the responsibility is attacked so is the very essence of a liberal arts education.

Chris Preston
Managing Editor, Colby Echo

GYN tests clarified

Dear Bowdoin Women Students,

Apparently my note to you has created a misunderstanding for some students. Annual exams and pap smears are not a requirement here at Bowdoin. My purpose in sending the note was to remind those students who were planning to see me this term that May 12th was the last day for pap smears. This deadline will allow me to get the results back by May 19th. Sorry for the confusion.

Robin Beltrami RNC, FNP
Dudley Coe Health Center GYN Services

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

"The College exercises no control over the content of the student writings contained herein and neither it, nor the faculty assume any responsibility for the views expressed herein."

Editor
Managing Editor
News Editors
In-depth Editor
Entertainment Editor
Sports Editor
Photography Editors

Stephen Reynolds
Kathryn Nanovic
Tamara Dassanayake, Dawn Vance
Kevin Wesley
Sharon Smart
Justin Preisendorf
Alan Harris, Mary Ann Lai

Asst. News Editor
Asst. Sports Editor
Asst. Entertainment Editor
Contributing Editor
Senior Editors
Production Manager

Tanya Weinstein
Todd Dillon
Lizz Millan
Albert Mauro
Lori Bodwell, Michael Botelho
Vincent Jacks

Business Manager
Advertising Manager
Advertising Staff

Eric Foushee
Michael Townsend
Michelle Campagna, Nancy Eckel,
Kim Maxwell
Eric Palmquist

Circulation Manager

Bowdoin Publishing Company
Lori M. Bodwell, Eric F. Foushee,
Albert P. Mauro, Stephen Reynolds

Published weekly when classes are held during the Fall and Spring semester by the students of Bowdoin College. Address editorial communication to the Editor, subscription communication to the Circulation Manager, and business correspondence to the Business Manager at the Bowdoin Orient, 12 Cleveland Street, Brunswick College, Brunswick, Maine 04011, or telephone (207)725-3300. The Bowdoin Orient reserves the right to edit any and all articles and letters. Subscriptions are $8.00 a semester or $15.00 a year. Past issues cannot be mailed. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to The Bowdoin Orient, Moulton Union, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011.

Letters

Athletics and academics

The issue of athletics and academics at Bowdoin has become an issue of great dispute over the last several weeks, triggered by Melissa Kiely's letter to the Portland Press Herald. Students on all sides of the argument have become involved. I strongly urge all students to carefully look at the facts before forming an opinion, for it seems that misinformation is fueling this debate. The letter written by Erika Gustafson, printed in the Orient on April 15, clearly illustrates this point.

Gustafson explains that many Dean's List students and James Bowdoin Scholars are athletes. There is great truth in this statement. Indeed, some of the best students at this school are members of athletic teams. The relevance of this point, however, simply escapes me. Kiely's view, and mine as well, is not that all athletes are stupid, but rather that under the current athletic recruitment policies, many athletically inclined students are accepted at Bowdoin, despite the fact that their academic records are far below Bowdoin standards. You will find that many of these students who benefit from Bowdoin's athletic recruitment policy are quite incapable of high academic performance at this school. The facts to support my statement are clearly displayed in the Barker Report.

Those of us advocating reform of athletic policies in the admissions process at Bowdoin recognize the values of athletics. Gustafson blatantly misrepresents Melissa when she quotes her as saying that athletics "cannot be the sole or primary contributor to the development of the well-rounded individual." Kiely's actual statement was: "While athletics can be an important part of one's education, it cannot be the sole or primary contributor to the development of the well-rounded individual."

Perhaps Gustafson would be wise to familiarize herself with "the true facts" before accusing others of their misrepresentation. For instance, Gustafson claims that departments other than the Athletic Department (such as the Departments of Music, Art, and Theater) do not rate students, but could if they so desired. Again Erika is mistaken. Each year the Music Department receives tapes submitted by applicants to the school, which are rated by the Music Department faculty. The problem is more deeply rooted than Gustafson is willing to recognize. The professors at this school are not paid to recruit, but rather to teach. In addition, the pressures of having to publish occupy a large amount of their time. If recruitment in the arts were to become comparable to that in athletics, the college would have to hire new faculty expressly for this purpose.

But even if recruiters for the arts and other departments were hired, equal treatment would not evolve, for many departments do not have the proper facilities to attract new students. While the Athletic Department boasts the brand new Farley Field House, the Music Department lacks the most basic facilities. The Bowdoin Music Department does not house one single soundproof practice room. Space in Gibson Hall is completely inadequate in terms of office space, instrument storage, and performance space. Nowhere on this campus do we have a recital hall. The list goes on and on. I personally find the situation to be absolutely deplorable! How can an academic department such as this attract students?

I would like to clear up one more false statement made by Erika Gustafson. In her letter she states that the Farley Field House was a gift, thereby justifying the inequality which exists on this campus. This claim is incorrect. Bowdoin spent $9 million on this new facility. The other $5.5 million was raised by the school.

In order to return to the original intentions of the school, Bowdoin College must reorder its priorities. These changes must begin in the Admissions Department. Progress cannot be made toward improved academics without diverting some attention from athletics, for the school has a finite amount of resources, such as time, energy, and money. Such changes, without a doubt, will create tension within the college community, but in mind the cause is worthy of such upheaval.

Sarah Stoycos '88

Lack of support alarms IFC

On Thursday afternoon at four o'clock the Interfraternity Council sponsored a tea for the faculty, staff and administration. One hundred and ninety-five invitations were sent out through Dean Jervis, Mr. Ward, Mr. Whiteside, Mr. Howell, and Larry Pinette were the only ones who took the time to attend. We greatly appreciate their support but once again the IFC's attempts to bridge the gap between the fraternities and faculty has failed. In light of the fact that the Fraternity Review Committee report came out yesterday we find it quite alarming that the faculty showed no interest or support in our endeavors. These efforts began well before the report was published and include a wide spectrum of activities. Beginning with a dry rush in the fall the fraternities came together and saw a need for some positive change. Throughout the year we have participated in blood drives, the Brunswick Halloween festivities, Christmas parties for children of the community, Alcohol Awareness Week, Women's Awareness Week, sexual harassment forums, the March of Dimes Walk-a-Thon, Weekly Chapel Talks, and the list continues. We have formed a solid alliance amongst the fraternities and have sought to improve relationships with both the Bowdoin and Brunswick communities. Although the fraternities have clearly made some remarkable strides over the past year we are in need of guidance and support from the faculty, staff and administration at this administration of this institution. The report calls for better relationships between these two factions of the college and considering today's dismal turnout we are still searching for a place to start. We are open to any suggestions and would appreciate any added input. Clearly something must be done. Jennifer Goldsmith '90 and the IFC

Music/athletic conflict

The rumor that athletic coaches put pressure on students to attend practices and meets is erroneous. After participating in twelve seasons of sports, I can attest that the athletics faculty have been more than willing to allow students to attend to miss practices and meets because of health and academic problems. If athletes are injured or if they need to study for an exam, they do not play. While members of the athletic faculty are very flexible about their attendance policies, members of the music faculty are inflexible.

The music faculty are overly strict in their attendance policies. They lack compassion, sensitivity and understanding. Rather than develop well rounded individuals, members of the music faculty exert a great deal of pressure on students to attend their rehearsals. They create tension and anxiety in students' lives.

At a small school, conflicts inevitably arise between activities because there are so few students that students often contribute to campus life in a variety of ways. Members of the music faculty are very unwilling to allow students to attend academic exams, classes, lectures, conferences, athletic events, and play practices during musical rehearsals. For example, without my consent, a member of the music faculty contacted a mathematics professor in order to have me not take a math exam with the rest of the class from 7:00 to 8:30 p.m., but to play in orchestra rehearsal from 7:00 to 8:30 p.m. Both the music and mathematics professors put pressure on me to attend rehearsal and to take the exam from 8:30 to 10:00 p.m. This pressure to take an exam late at night without the rest of the class is clearly not professional. Certain music faculty do not handle conflicts between musical rehearsals and other activities acceptably.

When conflicts arise between athletic meets and music rehearsals, one hopes that music faculty realize that an athletic team depends upon its members who are also musicians to attend athletic contests. Yet, music faculty tend to be inflexible and rigidly refuse to allow athletes to miss rehearsals in order to participate in athletic contests. In contrast, most members of the other academic departments are much more readily understanding about allowing students to miss a class in order to participate in athletic competition. For example, I was getting into the van to travel to the Boston College relay when the track coach said that a member of music faculty had gone to Dean Llewellyn and that if I went to the track meet, I would flunk orchestra. The decision to miss orchestra and to attend the track meet was my decision independent of the coaches, who never knew I played an instrument and never put any pressure on me to attend the meet. Yet, a member of the music faculty threatened that I would flunk the course as I left to try to throw my best for Bowdoin. Not only did I not throw well, but my two throwing teammates did not throw well either. I attribute it directly to the threat made by the member of the music faculty.

Since I was not enrolled in orchestra for credit and was playing on a volunteer basis to contribute to campus life, then I was deeply hurt. Certain members of the orchestra recognized that I stood up for a principle and were hurt because as the only member of the Bowdoin College and Community Orchestra for the past eight semesters, I did not receive acknowledgment from the Orchestra conductor. An important principle which needs to be learned by members of the music faculty is to allow us to develop as students, athletes, dramatists, and musicians.

Lisa Jacobs '89

Company laments payment delay

We are shocked and not a little bit surprised to hear that, despite personal threats from the Black Fly Collection Agency, the college has again deferred payment on a contracted project.

Each year, the Green Hornet Construction Company has faithfully completed its Spring project, on time, over budget and in good faith. We hoped that by declaring a moratorium on payments several years ago, that this would encourage them to mend their ways. As always, however, we plan to give the College, our favorite customer, yet another chance.

We have heard that there have been rumors circulating that we are associated with this or that campus organization, and we would like to put them to rest. Perhaps this sudden interest in us is because of our mysterious construction methods. In truth, this is because we usually are running more than a little late, and, to insure the project's completion, we must work well into the night.

Merton C. Plaid,
Assistant Associate Vice-President,
Green Hornet Construction Company

Flowers by Knowles

Remember Mother
with flowers on Mother's Day
- May 8 -

15 Jordan Ave. 729-2461 or 725-6483

LOOKOUT POINT HOUSE

Harpwell, Maine

(207) 833-5509

WINTER SPECIAL

2 days - 2 nights

MAP plan - double occupancy

2 people - $150.00

or

Rooms by the month

on the sea

eight miles from Bowdoin

Pauline's Bloomers

Preserve your love for Mom.
Send her the F.T.D. Preserve jar with a beautiful assortment of fresh flowers.

We also have a large assortment
of Holland flowers, blooming plants,
gourmet fruit baskets, cut roses
Please just call or visit us today.

We are located in the Tontine Mall
149 Maine St., Brunswick, ME 04011

- 725-5952 -

wire service
WE DELIVER

BIG RED Q PRINTING

next to the College

- stationery
- resumes
- posters
- newsletters

212E Maine Street
Brunswick
729-4840

Most students face a long tough road after graduation. But this should help.

Pre-approved credit & $400 cash back.

If you've received or will receive your bachelor's degree from a 4-year college, or graduate degree from an accredited institution between October 1, 1987 and January 31, 1989, you can qualify for Ford's Graduate Assistance Program.

We can give you pre-approved credit through Ford Credit and $400 cash back that can be used as a down payment on your new Ford. Only if you buy one of the new Ford cars or trucks listed below and only if you take delivery by December 31, 1988. Ask your dealer about other retail incentives which may be available, too.

For more information, call this toll-free number:
1-800-321-1536. Or see your New England Ford Dealer today.

Escort EXP

Escort GT

Escort

Festiva

Tempo

Mustang

Taurus

Thunderbird

Probe

Bronco II

Aerostar

Ranger

New England Ford Dealers
No one knows New Englanders better.

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

FIRST CLASS MAIL
U.S. Postage PAID
BRUNSWICK, ME.
Permit No. 25

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

VOLUME CXVII

BOWDOIN COLLEGE, BRUNSWICK, MAINE, FRIDAY, MAY 6

NUMBER 23

Admissions figures rise again

AL MAURO

ORIENT Contributing Editor

Next year's freshman class will be the largest one in recent years, according to tentative figures released by the admissions office.

As of Thursday, 397 deposits had been received, out of 803 acceptances that were offered by the admissions staff, according to Director of Admissions Bill Mason. Mason said that although the deadline for replying was May 1, responses received with a May 2 postmark will also be accepted.

"We were a little more successful than I had hoped," said Mason.

The tentative number of 397 would make the class of 1992 the largest since the current senior class, which entered with 405 members. The class of 1989 started with 387, which is larger than the class after it, the class of 1990, which has 385 students. The current freshman class has 393 members.

The current figure is markedly higher than a size of 360 hoped for by the administration. Mason said he was working towards a figure between 375-385.

"Nothing is static," said Mason. Almost a dozen acceptances are up in the air as students wait to hear from financial aid and contemplate deferred admission.

At this time, the larger-than-expected yield prevents taking anyone off the waiting list.

As of Thursday, Haverford, Middlebury and Brown had gone to their waiting lists to fill up their classes. Mason said that if some students who had made deposits at Bowdoin get accepted off wait lists to other schools, enough spaces might open up to necessitate go to our own list.

Mason called this year's minority acceptance numbers "not appreciably different from last year." Mason said at least 12 black students will be coming in the fall out of the 42 admitted. These figures come from a total black applicant pool of 103 students, which Mason said was the largest number of blacks to apply in recent years.

Mason said approximately 12 Asian students and six Hispanics have accepted Bowdoin's offer of admission.

As of Wednesday, 110 students had not been heard from at all. Mason said usually 10-20 percent of those accepted never respond.

The admissions staff accepted 803 of 3,665, one of the largest pools in recent years. Mason said the staff usually accepts 850-875 applications, but was very conservative this year because of the decision to curb the class size.

The 49 percent yield is also one of the largest in recent years, according to Mason.

Ana Brown, assistant dean of students, said the large number of expected incoming freshmen should not present a problem for housing. "If we use all triples, we will have around 400 spaces, which could go to 410. It is not a problem, it will just be tight."

Scott Milo '88 and Arya Amirshahi '90 sell t-shirts in preparation for Ivies weekend. The weekend is highlighted by activities on the quad Sunday afternoon, including performance by Livingston Taylor. The festivities are capped off Monday with a concert featuring the Robert Cray Band with special guests Treat Her Right. Tickets can be purchased at the door and are $9.50 with a student ID and $13.50 for the general public.

Meddies and Wellesley Tupelos join talents

DAWN VANCE

ORIENT News Editor

Despite the barring of the Meddiebemps from performing at Wellesley College fall semester, the Wellesley Tupelos will join the Meddies in their 'Spring Sing' on Saturday night.

Due to an article which appeared in an issue of the Orient last semester which described Wellesley women as "sexually frustrated," the Tupelos encouraged the Meddies not to perform during Wellesley's parents' weekend event. According to the Meddies' Business Manager Michael May '88 the Tupelos "kindly suggested we not sing because of the angered and offended tone on campus."

The Meddies were scheduled to sing as the only non-Wellesley acapella group at the concert. The Meddies had included the Wellesley performance as part of their annual fall break tour.

May said in regard to the performance, "We sang with a different Wellesley group—the Blue Notes—last year. We wanted to join with a different group and heard that the Tupelos were very good, so Jay [Gibbons '88, Meddies' musical director] lined up the concert for the Meddies' annual October break trip. Because of factors beyond the Meddies' control we were encouraged not to perform."

With the barring of their performance at Wellesley, the Meddies cut their Fall tour short. They returned to school rather than performing as planned at the Head of the Charles Crew Regatta in Boston on Sunday, Oct. 18.

Despite what May described as an "unfortunate situation that we were not directly responsible for," the Meddies included the Tupelos as one of their "top three choices" when searching for groups to join them in their Ivies weekend concert. May said, "We thought a year's tenure would let feelings die down but then when we were looking for groups the Tupelos were one of our top choices. We thought that inviting them to sing would be a way of reconciling a situation that was due to outside forces."

The Tupelos called May on Thursday afternoon to confirm that they would appear with the Meddies on Saturday night as part of this year's Ivies weekend festivities. May said the Tupelos' decision to join the Meddies "indicates their attempt to put this issue behind us."

Elaine Kelly, business manager of the Tupelos said of her group's decision to perform on Saturday night posed no problems. "We have no problems with it at all. We are happy to be coming to Bowdoin. The Meddies were not involved in what happened in the Fall. We are excited to let it all pass. We didn't let the Meddies sing at Wellesley because of the article—they wouldn't have been well received by the audience."

Kelly continued, "The fact that the Meddies invited us up here is great. It's an example of forgetting the past. We are looking forward to a great concert with them on Saturday night."

The Meddies will perform with the Tupelos at 8:00 p.m. on Saturday night in Kresge Auditorium. The Student Union Committee is helping to sponsor Saturday night's event in conjunction with Ivies Weekend.

Students, administration push alcohol awareness

Inconsistencies between administrative preaching—no underage drinking on campus—and practice—sitting idly as fraternity campus wades occur each weekend—and a general concern for alcohol abuse on campus were the reasons behind the formation of the Inter-Departmental Alcohol Committee.

Co-chaired by Jill James '90 and Dean of the College, Jane Jarvis, IDAC will start work next Fall to promote campus awareness of alcohol. IDAC is intended to serve the entire College community—faculty, students, administration, and employees.

James hopes to institute a program training athletic coaches and team captains to recognize and deal with people with alcohol problems by next semester. IDAC also anticipates to conduct a bartending training session for fraternity members.

A splinter group of the highly successful Alcohol Peer Advisors group, IDAC will stress accordance with College alcohol policy, says James. IDAC, however, says James, "is not going to be a task force."

Mr. Psi U captures 1988 Mr. Bowdoin crown

Wednesday night Psi Upsilon hosted the 21st Annual Mr. Bowdoin Contest. A capacity crowd was entertained as the contestants participated in grueling competition in evening wear, swimsuit, talent and question and answer categories. The audience complained about the home crowd advantage as the judges crowned Mr. Psi U, Roberto Ruiz '91, 1988 Mr. Bowdoin.

Ruiz's 90 points far outdistanced those of the first runners up, Mr. Beta and Mr. AD, who both finished with 67.

Representatives of nine fraternities are introduced to the crowd gathered in the dining room of Psi U.

1988 Mr. Bowdoin, Roberto Ruiz.

Photos by Lori Bodwell

Buffonge contemplates past and future

KEVIN WESLEY

ORIENT In-Depth Editor

Gordon Buffonge '88 will graduate from Bowdoin College this month with a sense of completion, but knowing there are still things left to do.

The 21-year-old Buffonge, arguably one of the more visible figures on the Bowdoin College campus, is a government major with a concentration in political theory. Putting his studies to practical use, Buffonge has developed his own theories about Bowdoin life, and his own.

Looking back on four years at Bowdoin, Buffonge appears content with his undergraduate career, but is critical of the administration's response to student demands. "I enjoyed it immensely," he said. "Most of the times I worked with the administration, not against them."

"My main problem with Bowdoin is the complaints I hear constantly," he said.

Citing student space as an example, Buffonge thinks the administration has had a deaf ear on student concerns. "People have been asking for these kinds of things since before I've been here. I've noticed an incredible amount of lethargy on going to sit back?"

As he recalls his Bowdoin days, Buffonge would like to be remembered as a conversationalist. "I'm interested in people. I prefer discussions with people beyond 'hello,'" he said.

Buffonge was born in Montserrat, West Indies, and lived there until he was 15. His parents, Tom and Gloria, chose Boston to raise their family (Gordon, Tamara, now 10, and Andre, 20). "People told us Boston was the educational capital of the world, and at least the United States," Buffonge said.

He attended Hyde Park High School for a year and a half, and quickly realized people had been referring to Boston's colleges and universities, not its high schools.

"The year and a half at Hyde Park High School was clearly the worst one and a half years of my life," Buffonge said. Citing disrespect for teachers and too many drugs, Buffonge was dismayed by the attitude of American students.

Acting upon the advice of a teacher at Hyde Park, he was accepted at A Better Chance (ABC), Inc., a progressive high school aimed at minority students in Lawrenceville, New Jersey.

When college selection time came along, a roommate of his told Buffonge about Bowdoin. His initial response was, "God, it's cold enough in Jersey, why the hell would I go to Maine?"

Next year, Buffonge plans to travel throughout Europe and Africa. After that, he may attend law school or pursue a master's degree in political theory. "It seems a shame to me to confine your life to a pattern right away," he said.

CAMPUS PROFILE

the part of the administration," he said.

He also said that often student concerns are left unattended because students have other necessary obligations, such as studying and extracurricular activities. "It all comes back to the administration... are they going to lead or are they

Alternative eatery approved

KATHERINE DEMING

ORIENT Contributor

Matt Hornbeck '89 and Josh Fost '91 were given the green light Wednesday by the Exec Board to carry out their proposal for a student-run, non-profit, non-alcoholic eating and social alternative to the Pub, the Tower, and the fraternities.

Hornbeck stated, "it will be a cafe-style atmosphere, serving light food and drinks, such as cappuccino, juices, sodas, popcorn, fruit, desserts, and non-alcoholic crushed ice drinks."

Their plans also include, Hornbeck stated, "theme nights, parties, movies, games, music by request, paper and crayons on the tables, and a wall for graffiti."

Hornbeck got the idea on a visit to Haverford College, where a similar cafe has been set up by students and has proven very popular.

The location of the cafe is undecided. Among the options are the basement of Baxter House, Chase Barn, the Curtis Pool area, and second floor of Hubbard Hall.

Hornbeck and Fost are hoping to have the cafe open by the time students return to campus this fall.

The cafe will be open, Hornbeck stated, "a couple of nights during the week and weekend nights, and we will extend the hours and nights depending on the response from students."

Their purpose, Hornbeck stated, "is to create a fun, entertaining, and much-needed place where all students can go to hang out and have fun."

No more pencils. No more books.

 CHRYSLER LE BARON CONVERTIBLE	$13,920* -400 GRADUATION CASH BACK -1,250 AMERICA'S WINNERS CASH BACK $12,270 YOU PAY JUST $274.59 PER MONTH
 $8395* -400 GRADUATION CASH BACK -500 AMERICA'S WINNERS CASH BACK $7495 PLYMOUTH SUNDANCE	 $6238* -400 GRADUATION CASH BACK -500 AMERICA'S WINNERS CASH BACK $5338 COLT 3-DR.

The new album release from the Meddies!

CANCELLED

Get your copy from:
any Meddie
the M.U. Bookstore
or order from the Meddies c/o M.U. or call 207-729-8183

No more driving Dad's old car.

Chrysler-Plymouth helps college graduates buy a new car, with an additional $400 cash back!

We know how expensive college was, or is, if you're still paying for it. Cars are expensive too, and credit's not easy to get. We want to help.

That's why Chrysler-Plymouth is giving recent graduates, 1988 graduates and graduate students $400 cash back on new Chrysler, Plymouth and import cars. Keep the cash or apply it to your down payment. This offer is good in addition to any other incentive we may offer on the car you choose. It's our little graduation gift to you.

If you have any questions about this offer, eligibility requirements or about financing your new car, call toll-free 1-800-826-3163. Or stop by a participating Chrysler-Plymouth dealership. We'll also be happy to explain our 7/70 Protection Plan, the best powertrain and outer body rust-through warranty in the business.

*Base sticker price excludes title and taxes. Based on base sticker price, including destination charges, less cash back, with 10% down at 9.75 Annual Percentage Rate financing for 48 months to qualified retail buyers through Chrysler Credit Corp. Title and taxes extra. See dealer for details of choices of easy financing payment plans. Some states do not permit the delayed payment plans or special credit alternatives Chrysler offers to college graduates. *To retail buyers of new '87 and '88 dealer stock. See limited warranty at dealer. Some restrictions apply. Excludes imports. *Sticker price less cash back. Title, taxes and destination charges extra. Excludes Horizon and Reliant models.

See your local New England Chrysler-Plymouth dealers!

Parrots
End of Semester Sale

SAVE 20%

ON A FABULOUS SELECTED GROUP OF SHOES - CLOTHING - ACCESSORIES

BRING THIS COUPON WITH YOU!

ONE CITY CENTER
PORTLAND, ME 04101

How do you procrastinate?

BECKY AUSTIN
ORIENT Staff

MISA ERDER '88
I chew tea leaves.

PETER IMHOFF '88
I gotta planter's wart that I'm pickin' at.

MATT ENNIS '88
I collect belly-button lint.

PETER LUBELL '90
Oh wait, give me a minute.

Board gives Hillhouse engraved gavel

SCOTT TOWNSEND
ORIENT Contributor

Executive Board Chairman George Hillhouse '88 completed his term with a burst of glory this Wednesday night. The Exec Board awarded him an engraved gavel to commemorate his year of service as Chairman; summer Chair Suzanna Makowski '90 presented him with the gavel.

In other business the Board awarded the "Student-run Cafe" an FC-3 Charter which provides $50 per semester. The Board then voted by 7-2 margin to grant the Cafe an FC-2 charter so that the organization could get unlimited funding to buy kitchen equipment.

Josh Post '91 said the Cafe would be "a non-alcoholic, spot of place to hangout. The problem with the Pub is that it is dark, the food's heavy, and it is mainly a place for upperclassmen to drink beer. This would be a non-profit, place serving little beers, cappuccino, fruit dishes and virgin cocktails."

Fost and Matt Hornbeck '89 expect that $2000 will be needed to buy a refrigerator, a micro-wave, and blender. Student volunteers will work at the Cafe. Fost and Hornbeck are working with the Administration to find a place to house the cafe.

Keith Supko '90, President of the Russian Club, requested that the Board upgrade his organization's charter from an FC-3 to an FC-2. The Board unanimously approved the upgrade for the organization.

David Spoor '91 submitted a charter for 'Improbabilities'-an improvisational comedic troupe. The troupe would like to have a charter in order to get SAFC funds to help pay for posters to advertise its performances.

In news from last week's meeting: Reuben Milliken '89 presented the Asian Interest Group's charter for the Board's approval. The FC-3 charter was granted by a unanimous vote of the Board.

The Board approved the Student Representatives to Faculty and Governing Board Committees. Next year's Student Activity Fee Committee will be chaired by Kevin Wesley '89. Serving as members will be Asaf Farashuddin '89, Mike Smith '89, Terry Rouse '90 and Matt Finkenstein '90. Andrew Winter '89 will serve as an alternate.

Next year's Student Judiciary Board will be chaired by Ann St. Peter '89. Luis Clemens '89 was selected to serve as the Senior members, while Glenn Waters '89 will serve as the Senior alternate. Brandon Sweeney '89 will also serve as Senior member. Paul Poppeo '90 and Gilbert Seymour '90 were selected as Junior, 'Halley Harrisburg '90 will serve as the alternate.

Todd Breslow, the Chair of the Elections Committee announced the election "results." The Executive Board ratified the following as the successful candidates: Jim Harrop '90 as Student Representative to the Board of Trustees and Suzanna Makowski '90 as the Alternate.

Maureen Rayhill '89 and Rob Smith '91 were elected as Representatives to the Board of Overseers; the alternate spot is still open. For the Class of 1991, President: Lisa Carter; Vice-President: Serena Zabin; Secretary: Alyssa Hoggatt; Treasurer: Anthony Wion. For the Class of 1990, President: Terrance Rouse; Vice-President: Elizabeth Millan; Secretary: Holly Varian; Treasurer: Robin Hill. For the Class of 1989, President: Sarah Thorp; Vice-President: Matt Hornbeck; Secretary: Suzanne Kovacs; Treasurer: Todd Remis.

The Board also discussed the Student Activities Room which is in the Union. Suzanna Makowski said that SAFC funds would be spent to refurbish the room so that Student Organizations can use it. She added that "students can now walk into it to find out what and where every club is doing."

Matt Hornbeck '89 submitted a charter for "Student-run Cafe." The proposed "Student-run Cafe" would be an innovative non-alcoholic, non-profit student-life. Hornbeck added that the idea "is based on a similar organization that is working very well at Haverford College."

In other business, Suzanna Makowski was elected in an uncontested race as Exec Board Summer Chair. The Summer Chair will handle board business that comes up during the summer such as the Bowdoin Big Brother/Big Sister.

Research receives rewards

LISA KANE
ORIENT Staff

Five Bowdoin students were chosen as representatives this year at the Second National Conference on Undergraduate Research. The conference was held at the University of North Carolina in Asheville from April 21-23.

Approximately 600 undergraduate students from all over the country, as well as from Mexico, Canada and the Virgin Islands, were officially registered. 400 professors and researchers and 300 bystanders also attended the Conference.

Students were kept very busy over the three day period listening to keynote speakers, hearing students give paper or poster presentations and frequenting forum discussions. The focus of the forum talks were on "building bridges" between different disciplines of study.

Although the academic concentrations of the participants were quite varied, they all shared a common interest in doing research. Every student was expected to give a presentation based on his or her particular research project.

The Conference was sponsored by several organizations including the National Science Foundation. The purpose of the Conference was to give students the opportunity to observe the type of research fellow colleagues are doing and to encourage undergraduate students to continue their interest in research.

Most of the students who apply to attend the Conference have reached what they perceive to be significant conclusions from their research work in their honors projects or independent studies. Students are then selected from abstracts they send in describing their research.

Bowdoin professors were notified about the Conference. Clarisse Yenitch, a research scientist and Adjunct Assistant Professor in the Chemistry Department at Bowdoin, was one faculty member who took an interest in the program. She suggested biochemistry majors Wendy Brown '89 and Josh Bloomstone apply for the program. Bloomstone has tested the use of experimental cancer therapy involving a specific type of drug treatment. Both students were asked to attend the Conference to share the details of their research.

Sara Stotius '88 and David Beard '88 were also chosen as representatives. Beard discussed his work in Microeconomics. Joanna Rizoulis '88 also attended, speaking on her studies in French literature.

Bloomstone emphasized students from a wide range of disciplines attended the Conference. He pointed out "There's this misconception that research means science." Regarding the value of the trip paid for by the College, Bloomstone added, "It's probably the best academic experience thus far in my stay here...all of us become teachers and all those who are listening are teachers by profession...We are the specialists and they are genuinely interested in what we have to say."

STUDENT WRITTEN ONE ACT CONTEST

Down east play captures the attention of the judges

KEVIN WESLEY
ORIENT In-Depth Editor

The 52nd Student Written One-Act Play Contest was performed last weekend in the George H. Quinby Memorial Playwrights' Theater. Veterans and newcomers capped awards which were determined after judging the four student-written one-act plays.

"Myth of Maine" was the big winner, garnering two of the three awards. Written and directed by Michael E. Libonati and David W. Spohr, both freshmen, "Myth of Maine" was judged best play.

"Myth of Maine" takes an irreverent look at two old Mainers in their general store discussing life, leisure, and chewing tobacco. The sardonically humorous play also topped the award for best actor.

Louis J. Frederick '90 won for his portrayal of Regis, the aged storekeeper with a keen memory and a distaste for tourists.

The best director was David J. Mittel '89 who directed "Otto," a tale of inner discovery on a college campus in 1960.

The contest was underwritten by the generosity of Hunter S. Frost class of 1947. The best playwrights were each awarded a Bowdoin College Chair, as well as the traditional Masque and Gown Figurine. For his efforts, Frederick was awarded a Bowdoin College pewter tray, while Mittel was awarded a Bowdoin College mirror.

The four plays chosen for the contest were selected from over 25 entries earlier this spring. Reading judges were Professors Barbara Kaster, Nancy Johnson, and Michael Ong, who also chose the directing award.

The judges for best play and best actor were Professors Gayle Pemberton, Eugene Huskey and Alan Springer.

Director of Theater Ray Rutan deemed the contest a success. "I had a very enjoyable evening," he said. "I thought they all went very well. It's always a nice event."

After the completion of the contest, the 1988 George H. Quinby Awards were presented to four members of the freshman class.

The Quinby Awards are presented annually to those freshmen who have made the most significant contributions to Masque and Gown over the current academic year.

This year's award winners were Anne Beseler, Dave Callan, Charles Gibbs and Meredith Sumner.

Each winner was given an engraved Bowdoin chair and will have their names inscribed on a plaque in the lobby of Pickard Theater.

The Student Written One Acts featured not only three of this year's winners, but also three past Quinby Award winners. Gibbs was stage manager for the one acts, and Beseler worked on the stage crew. Sumner was a cast member of "Full Circle" and worked on the costume and makeup crews.

UNIQUE HOUSING OPPORTUNITY FOR BOWDOIN STUDENTS - MALE OR FEMALE APPLICATIONS NOW BEING TAKEN FOR NEXT SEMESTER

Rooms in beautiful, newly renovated lovely Colonial home very near campus. Bedrooms have charming antique pine oak and oak bureaus and desks, new oak beds, and large closets. Share 3 all-new stylish tile baths and lovely new contemporary kitchen with new appliances, new cabinetry, cathedral ceiling. Refined pumpkin pine floors; natural finished doors. Spacious, quiet and clean. Single occupancy, $1400 per semester plus security deposit. All utilities included. Especially charming space for a few particularly discerning students.

This is not a place for parties, etc.

Care to take a look?

Call Mr. Boudette at 729-8616

BIG RED Q PRINTING

next to the College

- stationery
- resumes
- posters
- newsletters

212E Maine Street
Brunswick
729-4840

DR. WILLIAM R. OUELETTE DR. BRIAN L. DANIELS

OPTOMETRISTS

Eye Examinations

Optical Services

Specializing in Contact Lenses

Pleasant Street Professional Building

53 Pleasant Street, Brunswick

Telephone 725-2161

TONTINE HAIR FASHIONS

207-729-5475

visit our two stylists, Paul and Gail,
in the Tontine Mall
BOWDOIN STUDENT DISCOUNT
FOR HAIRCUTS - BRING I.D.

STUDIO

3 Bowker St.
Brunswick, Me.

725-2694

Within walking distance
of campus.

MEN $7.00
WOMEN $12.00
with Bowdoin I.D.

Sights and Sounds: May 5-9

FRIDAY, MAY 6
12:30 p.m. — The Bowdoin Dance Group performs Museum Pieces VIII in the Museum of Art, Walker Art Building.
7:30 and 10:00 p.m. — The BFVS presents Annie Hall, in Smith Auditorium. $1 admission.
8:00 p.m. — The Bowdoin College Chorale performs "Miriam's Song of Triumph" by Franz Schubert, and "Liebeslieder Waltzes" by Johannes Brahms, in the Chapel. (Gerald McGee, director; Susan Scheib, soprano; Kathryn Lewis and Martin Perry, pianists.)
9:00 p.m. — The Ripper appears in The Pub.
SATURDAY, MAY 7
4:00 p.m. — A recital by Jennifer A. Malone '90, violin, will be given in Room 101, Gibson Hall.
7:30 and 10:00 p.m. — The BFVS presents Manhattan in Smith Auditorium. $1 admission.
8:00 p.m. — The Meddies will perform in the VAC, with guests, the Wellesley Tupelos.
MUNDAY, MAY 8
3:00 p.m. — A Gallery Talk, "Endless Works: Julien Dupre's Women in the Fields," will be given by William C. Watterson, associate professor of English, in the Museum of Art, Walker Art Building.
8:00 p.m. — Miscellanea will perform in Daggett Lounge, Wentworth Hall.

MONDAY, MAY 9
7:30 p.m. — The Robert Cray Band, with special guest Treat Her Right, will perform in Morrell Gymnasium. Admission is $8 with Bowdoin I.D. in advance, and $9.50 at the door; $12 for the general public, and $13.50 at the door. Tickets are available at the Moulton Union. Cray's 14-year career includes five albums. His blend of blues, soul, and rock and roll has earned him widespread acclaim, several film and television appearances, and a Grammy award.
PERFORMANCES
May 14 — 8:00 p.m. — Virtuoso guitarist Bennett Hammond and Appalachian Dulciner innovator Lorraine Lee will perform at the Little Theater, Center for the Arts, the Chocolate Church, 804 Washington St., Bath. Versatile artists, the duo's instrumental compositions are grounded in the traditional music of Europe and America. The lively selection of tunes and songs in their ever-increasing repertoire employ thoughtful arrangement and artful execution.
EXHIBITIONS
"Eliot Porter", is on display in the Twentieth Century and Temporary Exhibition Galleries, April 15 through June 5, a major exhibition celebrating the 50-year career of Eliot Porter, one of the world's leading color photographers. His brilliantly colored images of leaf and landscape, sun and tide have the majestic authority of revealed truth. They restore a bit of the natural world to our imaginations," says John Coffey, Bowdoin College curator of collections. Porter prefers intimate views of nature rather than sweeping landscapes. In his own words, "nature is too vast and complex to grasp quickly, but a fragment of it is comprehensible and allow the imagination to fill in the excluded setting."

Contemporary Art from the Permanent Collection, is on display in the John A. and Helen P. Becker Gallery through May 29. An exhibition of works by Steven D. Albert '88 and Melissa T. Erdler '88 will open on May 6 in the Visual Arts Center, Kresge Gallery.

MOVIES
Evening Star Cinema (Tontine Mall)
The Unbearable Lightness of Being, showing at 6:30 and 9:35 p.m. (Friday and Saturday), and at 6:45 p.m. on Sunday through Thursday.
Cinemas 4 (Cook's Corner)
Good Morning Vietnam, showing at 7:00 and 9:00 p.m.
Battlejuice, showing at 7:10 and 9:10 p.m.
Biloxi Blues, showing at 7:05 and 9:05 p.m.
Bad Dreams, showing at 7:15 and 9:15 p.m.

Give Her Our Best for Mother's Day

She'll Love Seychelle Sportswear

Something new in fun contemporary clothing in easy care, cotton blends!

Choose from lots of free spirited pieces to mix and match!
(left) Exuberant windowpane check sleeveless jumper in coral & white SML 50.00
Polo shirts 32.00
in coral, white or light blue.

Pretty ramie/cotton yacht club sweater 60.00

Cotton knit pants in light blue or coral 38.00

Senter's

One Week Only

Yours free with any purchase of 10.00 or more - a silk rosebud for Mom!

Limit 1 per customer per day

124 Maine Street - Brunswick, Maine • 04011
Monday-Friday 9:00-6:00 Saturday 9:00-5:00 Enjoy breakfast & luncheon in the Greenery

ENTERTAINMENT

Half Life portrays nuclear devastation

LIZZ MILLAN

ORIENT Asst. Entertainment Editor
What are the ramifications of United States' exploitation of inhabited areas for unrestricted tests of nuclear weapons? This question is addressed in Dennis O'Rourke's disturbing film, Half Life.

The movie begins with Albert Einstein, as an old and graying man, telling of the development of the atomic bomb. This small scene sets the tone for the rest of the film, a parable for the nuclear age. Striking is the image of an older man discussing the possibility of the continued production and testing of nuclear arms preventing the young from living to be old. The movie demonstrates that society has gone out of its way to forward the nuclear age begun with Einstein's work.

The film uses contrasting imagery to illustrate the rapid devastation of the Marshall Islands through their use as testing grounds by the U.S. of atomic weaponry.

The Marshall Islands are located near Hawaii, and share, or did share, its beautiful physicality. Initially, the film provides shots of towering palm trees, cloudless skies and clear blue waters. The island inhabitants are shown as open, friendly people.

In 1954 the nature of these islands underwent change, as they became a U.S. nuclear test site. Sixty-six bombs in total were tested on these islands. The visual effects of the film display the consequent alteration in the landscape: the towering palm trees were shot to the ground; the cloudless sky was transformed into a mass of yellow/red fire and smoke; and the clear blue waters became yellow with contamination.

The island on which the bombs were dropped was evacuated, yet precautions were not followed to evacuate the neighboring islands. The film shows clips of a propaganda film for 'Bravo', boasted to be the most powerful bomb in the world, and a subject of tests in the Marshall Islands. This clip reveals the insensitivity of the American testers in their statement: "We owe this to our children, we must provide them with a more secure tomorrow."

The Americans, while thinking about the welfare of their own children, did not take the time to consider the futures of the children of the Marshall Islands. The fallout from the explosion of Bravo was swept to the unevacuated neighboring islands. This radioactive fallout resembled snow, and the children of these islands played in this

"snow", and were consequently affected by burns and other disabling deformities.

The island children suffered. The fish became bitter, the coconuts sour, people became sick. Americans soon appeared on the scene to bring the natives to the U.S. for aid. Yet, was their interest in the victims solely philanthropic, motivated by remorse, or was it selfish? The film records interviews which state that the Americans knew the dangers of the fallout but went ahead with the testing anyway, in order to gain human subjects on which to test the effects of the radiation.

"They took my son to America, they used him as if he was an animal. They punctured him like a chicken. He was like a lab animal, a guinea pig. They destroyed my son like a worthless animal. This is the one thing I can never forgive," said one native.

The words of the natives appeared in subtitles. As they spoke, tears often came to their eyes. Many of them spoke of dead loved ones or children who they never had a chance to love—children born without life. "Shortly after the bomb, I became pregnant, my belly began to swell. Before it was time, something came out—I couldn't even recognize it as a child; it looked more like the innards of a beast."

O'Rourke's film is powerful, revealing that for anyone who has ever wondered just how destructive a nuclear bomb is, unfortunately, the living results are available. Scenes of sparkling sunshine are contrasted with the darkness of explosions. Music is used skillfully to further demonstrate this contrast—"touristy" Hawaiian music in one moment and dramatic chords the next. The camera constantly moves—in one instant resting on the smiling faces of children, and then suddenly focussing on a child howling all alone, a victim of the fallout. "Civilized" Americans, of questionable civility or decency, and "barbaric" islanders, with greater respect for the value of life are compared.

Half Life bombards the viewer with visual and emotional contrasts, as it demonstrates the most basic contrast, between life and death—beautiful, peaceful islands converted to fields of destruction. The movie is well-written and well-directed, and through its moving camera, leads the viewer into the scene and leaves him there to question what he has seen.

Museum Pieces—dances by various Bowdoin student s—was held in the Walker Art building this afternoon. Pictured here are Alyssa Hoggatt '91 and Kirsten Ek '90 in rehearsal. Photo by Alan Harris.

Chamber Chior tours Germany

LISA WLODARSKI

ORIENT Staff
This writer (and Chamber Choir member), from personal experience, can tell you that Bowdoin's Chamber Choir has had a very hectic schedule this semester, not the least of which was during the Spring Break tour of Germany. After returning to campus, we performed the tour program in a concert for the Bowdoin community. Finally, last weekend, the group ended its year with the Biannual Contemporary Music Festival.

In the opinion of Robert Greenlee, assistant professor of music and director of the Chamber Choir: "I think it was a very successful year."

The musical program for the tour was quite varied, and thus very challenging. Selections ranged from sacred and secular German Renaissance music, to Contemporary American music, jazz arrangements and spirituals. This was because our hosts in Germany all wanted to hear different types of music. In any case, there was hardly room for boredom.

The choir—28 singers and Greenlee—began the tour on Saturday, March 19. Our first stop was Altensteig, where the people of nicknamed us the "BCC" and advertised our concerts with posters bearing the Stars and Stripes. Perhaps they thought we were the equivalent of participants in the Olympic Games? They were wonderful hosts, and appeared to enjoy our concert immensely.

During our stay in Altensteig, we took two day trips. The first was to Freudentadt, and the second was to Strassbourg, where the choir was hosted by Bowdoin professors Paul Nyhus, professor of history, and Katherine Watson, director of the Bowdoin Museum of Art, who are on sabbatical this semester in Basel. Nyhus gave us a brief lecture on the history of the city, and Watson discussed the cathedral from an art historical perspective.

After our departure from Altensteig, we were on the road to Hellenhahn, north via Speyer and Heidelberg.

One of the highlights of the tour was the incredible experience of singing in the Speyer Cathedral (c. 1300), a piece that was written in honor of the bells there, and other pieces that, according to Greenlee, were intended to be performed in cathedrals of that type.

From Hellenhahn, the choir took a day trip to Limbourg to sing in the fourteenth-century Limbourg Cathedral, which was an example for us of the transition between a Romanesque structure, like the Speyer Cathedral, and a Gothic structure, like the Strasbourg Cathedral.

That evening's concert in Hellenhahn included three other choirs in addition to the Chamber Choir. This was an opportunity to hear some other styles of German music.

The next day—we'd now been in Germany for a week—it was time to move on to Kassel, for much sight-seeing. On the last night in Kassel, the church youth group threw a small party for the Choir.

We learned, happily, that football exists in Germany, and we shared with them a bit of our American collegiate tradition. We also exposed them to some popular American music; we had the dubious distinction of bringing the music of the Violent Femmes to Kassel.

The final stop on the tour was Wiesbaden. The concert that evening was for the Holy Thursday service, so it included only sacred music. It was a successful performance and the tour ended on a good note.

Albert/Herder show opens Sunday

ELIZABETH MULLEN

ORIENT Staff
On Sunday, May 8 at 8:00 p.m., Steven Albert '88 and Misa Erder '88 will present a show of their recent works in the Kresge Gallery, Visual Art Center.

Albert, an Honors candidate in studio art, recently participated in a juried show at the Olin Fine Arts Center Gallery of Washington and Jefferson College, Washington, Pennsylvania. His Painting, "2-West C.T. Looking North," received 2nd purchase prize out of five awards given and is on loan for Albert's exhibition at Bowdoin.

Influenced by artists Bruce Cohen, David Hockney, and, more recently, Vermeer, Albert's work is infused with a carefully controlled passion. On Vermeer, Albert said: "His paintings—talk about sensuality—are about the most sensual realist paintings I've ever seen—they have a very human and inviting quality to them which I want to be able to capture in my own work."

Albert's works capture that sensuality so attractive to him in Vermeer. He works in a range of media, from oils to drawings to photography.

Erder, also an Honors candidate in studio art with a minor in French, concentrates on landscape in her works, which range from monotypes and etchings to paintings.

"I originally began this project with landscapes with the idea that I would be doing linoleum cuts," said Erder, "but I found that what I had undertaken really didn't suit my medium. The raw energy of the landscape and its mutability couldn't be captured on these tiny squares of linoleum, so I had to look for something else."

The results of Erder's search for the proper medium for landscape are evident in her work. vast landscapes with carefully blended, subtly changing colors characterise her work.

Above: painting by Misa Herder '88. Right: painting by Steven Albert '88.

In Lots Of Companies The "Corporate Ladder" Is More Like A Maze. At Grossman's, It's Your Path To The Top.

...and to help you get there quicker, we've developed two exciting new Training Programs. From the moment you start, you'll begin learning everything you'll need to take you to the top - with the encouragement and support that only a leading retailer of lumber and building materials in the Northeast can offer.

Take a look at the following Merchandising and Management Training Programs and get started on a ladder that will take you right to the top, with one of the Northeast's top retailers!

OPERATIONS TRAINEE PROGRAM

In this intense, 6 month, on-the-job training program, you will learn the skills necessary to succeed, first as an Area Supervisor, and then as an Assistant Manager. If you want to bring your leadership skills to a management position in one of our successful retail stores, this is your chance! A college degree is all you need; prior retail experience a plus, but not necessary.

MERCHANDISING TRAINING PROGRAM

If your ambition is to become a retail buyer, this training program is for you! You'll spend one year learning all the different aspects of our business - from customer service in our stores to advertising and finance in our Division Headquarters. After successful completion of this program, you should be an Assistant Buyer - and well on your way to the top! A college degree is a must; strong interpersonal skills a plus.

You'll be on top from the start, with Grossman's highly competitive salaries and extensive benefits, including tuition reimbursement, 401K plan and medical package.

Please send your resume to Carolyn Mahoney, Personnel Manager, Grossman's, 200 Union Street, Braintree, MA 02184.

An equal opportunity employer

GROSSMAN'S
EVERYTHING TO BUILD WITH

THE BRUNSWICK FLOWER SHOP

We wish our best to the graduating class and we will see everyone else in the Fall!

729-8895

216A Maine St.
Mon.-Sat. 9:30-6

We Deliver
Wire Service

Pauline's Bloomers

Preserve your love for Mom.
Send her the F.T.D. Preserve jar with a beautiful assortment of
fresh flowers.

We also have a large assortment
of Holland flowers, blooming plants,
gourmet fruit baskets, cut roses
Please just call or visit us today.

We are located in the Tontine Mall
149 Maine St., Brunswick, ME 04011

- 725-5952 -
wire service
WE DELIVER

CALL WILBUR'S CANDY FOR BALLOON DELIVERY

Don't forget your white chocolate polar bears when you leave!!

Tontine Fine Candies

Traditional & Unique Candies

WILBUR'S CANDY
13 Bow Street
Freeport, ME
865-6129 / 865-4071

TONTINE FINE CANDIES
Tontine Mall
Brunswick, ME
729-4462

PARENTS!

Give your college student a very special care package! An Ice Cream Cake from
Ben & Jerry's for birthdays, study
breaks, exams, surprises, rainy days...

Call and order your
cake today.

Free Delivery (207) 725-2723
96 Maine Street, Brunswick

SPORTS

Jim
Anderson

Let's go bigtime

If there's one thing Bowdoin could use it's a little excitement. Sometimes to obtain excitement you have to make a few sacrifices. With a little effort and a few sacrifices Bowdoin could easily turn itself into a basketball powerhouse. I'm talking Division I, challenging for the NCAA title, type of powerhouse. Skeptical? Say it can't be done? Well, I have some ideas which could transform sleepy Bowdoin College into a basketball mecca.

Obviously what we need are some Division I caliber players. I'm talking Street & Smith All-Americans. So, what Bill Mason should do is relax the academic standards for say ten blue-chip hoopers. Come on, that's hardly anything at all, no one would notice. Give these guys full scholarships and we would lose our NESCAC standing, but hey, that's long overdue anyway. Bowdoin is actually the ideal place to loosen the academic qualifications. Since we don't require SAT scores none of the players would be academically ineligible under that silly Proposition 48 rule.

Secondly, Bowdoin will have to free up some money to provide scholarships, a new coach with a six-digit salary, new uniforms, plane tickets for away games, etc. This really isn't as big a problem as it might appear. If we raise the student activities fee by 10% and eliminate unnecessary organizations which aren't conducive to a winning attitude (you know which ones I'm talking about), these additional costs should be covered. In any case, these costs will be short-term as television revenues will eventually more than make-up for them. If worse comes to worse we can simply eliminate the other sports and the music and art departments. Leasing out Farley Field House is always an option too.

A Leroy Greason seems to have no problem raising money from alumni as it is now, so can you imagine the cash flow we'd have with a national contender? I have no doubt someone would donate the dough to build a sports complex with a capacity of at least 45,000. They could put it over in McGee Track. The track and football teams would probably be eliminated anyway and there probably wouldn't be a whole lot of problem in purchasing that graveyard from Brunswick. If not we could just add an addition to Farley and cover up the soccer, baseball and lacrosse fields. Remember, this is a team effort so these competitors should gladly sacrifice their fields for the good of Bowdoin.

Of course the schedule will not adjust as quickly as the team changes. So we go a few seasons of beating Colby and Bates by 80 or 90 a game, no sweat. Then we add UMaine and blow them out. Pretty soon its UVM, then BC and before you know it you'll be saying to your roommate, "So are you going to the Indiana game tonight?" This can be a reality in, I'd say less than 5 years if we accept some necessary

(Continued on page 8)

Lacrosse crushes Babson

JIM ANDERSON
ORIENT Staff

Unlike previous weeks, the men's lacrosse team turned on the offense and let the defense take care of itself. In three games this week the Bears converted 41 times which inevitably led to 3 wins. Despite the apparent scoring fest, Bowdoin limited its opponents to a paltry 24 goals during the same span. The trio of wins raised the lacrosse team's overall record to an impressive 10-2 and will surely keep them locked into second place in the ECAC Division III standings.

Bowdoin entertained Amherst on Saturday in what turned out to be the highest scoring game of the year. In the end the Bears prevailed in a wild 16-14 affair. The Bears staged an impressive second half, fourth quarter rally to walk off victors. Lloyd Byrne '88 was the big gun for the Bears as he has been for most of the year. Byrne tallied a season high 6 goals and added 2 assists. Mitch Caplan '89 was the other primary threat. Caplan scored 4 and dished off 4 times in equalling Byrne's point output. The other big scorer for Bowdoin was John Stonestreet who fired home 2 goals. Stonestreet noted of his recent superlative play, "Actually my inspiration has come from Morgan Binswanger '88. He's been firing me up before the games and I really think it has contributed to my play before the game. Morg is a lot like M.L. Carr in terms of his attitude."

In the second game of the week Bowdoin beat Babson into the ground. The final score was 15-4

All eyes are on the ball as Bowdoin swarms in front of the Amherst net Saturday. The Polar Bears went on to win the high scoring affair 16-14. Photo by Lori Bodwell but believe it or not it was not that close. This was a first class lambasting of an opponent. From the opening faceoff the Bears ruthlessly dominated this very lopsided game. Byrne once again was the main culprit in this one. Byrne fired home four goals and was a tremendous thorn in the side of the Babson defense for the limited amount of time he spent out on the field. Binswanger was a force off the bench as he provided defensive continuity and heady play as a senior on Coach Mort LaPointe's team is expected to do.

The last game of the busy week was a 10-6 victory over Plymouth St. At this present time little hard facts exist about the components of the win. However it was a typical 1988 Bowdoin lacrosse victory. The Bears pushed the ball up and tried to control it as much as possible. Once again the shots for to shots against ratio was heavily in favor of the home-town Bears. Plymouth State played some scrappy defense but there was simply too much fire power up-front and in the mid-field section for the visitors to overcome.

After this highly successful week the Bears continue their post-season play against the Ephraim at Williams College today.

Crew hosts Head of the Androscoggin Regatta

IAN JOHN
ORIENT contributor

The crew team hosted its annual Head of the Androscoggin Regatta last Sunday in the rain and cold. Competing against Bates and Colby in a number of various races ranging from women's light fours to men's heavy fours Bowdoin found themselves in some exciting races. The team was simply overpowered in the first four races of the day by the perennially strong Bates team.

The last two races proved to be a different story as the women's novice four (Heather Brennan, Holly Jones, Katherine Perrine, Kristina Geiger, Deepa Ghandi coxswain) and the men's lightweight four (Greg Morrell, Jason Brown, Nick Schmidt, Chandler Everett, Matt Hornbeck coxswain) powered to victory.

In other races the Bears fielded a women's lightweight four, a women's heavyweight four, a men's heavyweight four, and another men's lightweight four. The women's lightweight four of Katie Grondeck, Nancy Eckel, Bev Halladay, Maureen Neill, and coxswain Anita Fuchrocher finished 3rd, only 24 seconds behind the winning Bates boat. The men's lightweight broke a rigger at the start and were forced to withdraw prior to returning for the last race of the day.

In the women's heavyweight race Marina Heusch, Liz Leonard, Kim Thrasher, Elizabeth Boettcher, and coxswain Adrienne Candella finished 2nd behind the Bates contingent. The men's heavyweights of Ben Schwartz, Peter Thompson, Eric Foushee, Grant Mershon and coxswain Dave Belmont finished 4th in their respective race.

Kim Thrasher, president of the Bowdoin's women's team, expressed her satisfaction with the event saying "We were really happy with the way things went, especially since we won both novice races." She added that the three teams were planning to purchase a trophy that would go to the winning school every year of the CBB sprints, as they have been come to be known.

Track teams compete at NESCACS

TOM BYERS
ORIENT Contributor

Last Saturday the men's and women's track and field teams traveled to Williams College to compete in the NESCAC championships. The weekend proved to be a successful one for many individuals which translated into strong showings for both squads. Both teams laid claim to individual league champions; Marilyn Fredey '91 and Donna Ingham '90 for the women, Tim Trafant '87, Eric Gans '88, and Tod Dillon '89 for the men. The women tallied 63 points to finish 4th while the men garnered 51 for a 6th place showing.

Fredey began the meet for Bowdoin as she ran away from the field in the 10,000 meter run. The freshman cruised uncontested to victory; winning by almost one minute. Ingham captured 1st in the discus and also took a strong 2nd in the hammer.

Deanna Hodgkins '89 turned in a away with performance as well as the three season runner earned a hard-fought second in the 5000 meter

William Brown, the coach of the team, said of the races, "I was very pleased with the rowing. We've just got to get to a point where we can row at a higher stroke rate." He pointed out that because the Bates team was so powerfully conditioned they were able to row five to six strokes more per minute which translates into a bigger lead. One other reason for the Bobcat's dominance is the year head start they have recorded by Lisa Jacobs '88 (3rd hammer), Sandra Scibelli '89 (5th hammer), Karen Crehore '90 (3rd high jump), Kristen O'Keefe (3rd 800m), and Bowdoin's 4x800 relay. First year coach Peter Slovinski was extremely pleased with the efforts put forth by the athletes who made the trek to Williamstown. "The women have run strongly since the fall and it is evident once again in the results," added the coach.

On the men's side Trafant began the meet on a positive note with an impressive win in the javelin. He also came back to lay claim to 6th in the shotput. Gans ran away with his specialty the 110 meter high hurdles, in convincing fashion, winning by over 3 of a second. Now that may not seem like a lot of time but one must keep in mind that this race is run flat out for only 110 meters. Dillon too ran in his specialty, the 1500 meter run, and came away with a win, outkicking Trinity's Craig Gemmel in the final 100 meters.

Noteworthy efforts were also on the Bowdoin program.

With only one race left this year, the New England's this weekend, Thrasher and the rest of the team are looking forward to next year with hopes of increased interest from the student body. The team is looking forward to a busy fall with six races already on the schedule and with heightened interest those races could hold some promising results.

recorded by Damon Guerman '89 (2nd pole vault), Scott Wilkins '89 (5th high jump), Chris Lacke '88 (7th discus), and Steve Polikoff '88 (8th 400m). Freshman Ben Hale once again demonstrated promise for the future with an exciting come-from-behind win in the unseeded heat of the 1500 meter run. Senior co-captain Polikoff voiced his pleasure over the team's performance. The decathlete said, "Even though we are nearing the end of the year the men are really giving 100%... hopefully this weekend we can parlay that into some standout results."

The meet Polikoff is referring to is the New England Div. III outdoor championships which will be held under the pines 'at McGee Track tomorrow where some undoubtedly fast times and strong throws will be turned in.

The top runners and throwers in New England and at Bowdoin will be competing to determine the cream of the crop in Div. III track this spring.

Big Time

(Continued from page seven)
changes and stop being so uptight about academic prowess.

Let's face it, its time we stopped this sad joke about Bowdoin being too athletically oriented and get serious about it. C'mon, we all now a good man-to-man is more fun to watch than an art lecture in Kresge.

Since many of the loyal Bowdoin fans would road trip to away games, Bowdoin would benefit from the cultural experiences of places such as Memphis State. Your friends would actually know where Bowdoin is. Since we're such a small campus the team could probably get a shoe contract that included the entire student body. The library would be less crowded since the team members would be in the newly created Phys. Ed. Dept., taking courses such as the Theory of the Zone Press and The History of Left-Handed Centers in the NBA.

This is not a poke at the players' intelligence, but just an admission that these guys are here to play ball. And Bowdoin could probably pick up some 1st or 2nd round games in the NCAA tournament, especially if we're ranked around 3rd in the country (which we undoubtedly would be).

Bowdoin is just a little effort away from being the UCLA of the 1990s. Sure it will take a communal effort from the entire student body and administration, but if there is a worthy cause out there, this is it. Face it, in your heart you'd rather see Bobby Knight out there throwing chairs because Bowdoin is up by 10 with 2 minutes to play than the construction of a boring science building or a useless student center. I say, roll out the red carpet to the Rumeal Robinsons and Jerry Tarkanians, and give this school a tradition it can really be proud of.

Tennis wraps up season

DAVID BURNHAM
ORIENT Contributor

The Polar Bear Men's Tennis team returned from the NESAC Championships and faced Colby this past week, showing improvement all the way.

The squad finished 9th this season at the NESACs, moving up from last season's 11th place finish. Friday, Pete Goldman '90 got the ball rolling as he defeated Ted Vaughn of Wesleyan 6-1, 6-4 in A Division action. Steve Mitchell '90, Jack Colley '88, Nat Jeppson '91 and Ted Maston '91 all played well but were unable to pick up victories in their respective divisions. The doubles groupings did not fare much better as Mitchell-Maston (A Div.), Cooley-Goldman (B Div.) and Jeppson-Dils (C Div.) all lost in straight sets. Saturday, Dils moved in to the quarterfinals of the C Division by beating Chris Jones of Colby 6-1, 6-3 after receiving a bye on Friday. Goldman's luck could not carry him further on Saturday as he lost 6-1, 6-1 to a powerful player from Amherst. Dils was right there with him as he lost 6-3, 7-6 to Sean Nolan of Bates. Mitchell rebounded from Friday's loss to post two wins in the Consolation Tournament before bowing out to the Tournament's number 2 seed who had lost a first round match. In all, Bowdoin picked up 4 points, a far cry from last year's 1/2 point showing, and beat out Wesleyan and Trinity for the coveted ninth place position.

Tuesday, the Bears travelled to Waterville to face Colby, losing 7-2. Blair Dils won in singles and teamed with Nat Jeppson to get the other Bowdoin victory. Steve Mitchell and Bill Caan played courageous matches before losing in three sets.

If It Doesn't Fit

Ship It.

Whether heading for college or home for vacation, Mail Boxes Etc. USA will get your things there safer, faster and all in one place. We even pack your boxes for you!

The Post Office Alternative
MAIL BOXES ETC. USA®

We'll pack & ship your belongings home. See you at Moulton Union.

May 15: Noon to 5

May 16-19: 10 to 5 (729-8774)

Part-Time -
Home Mailing Program:
Excellent income!
Detail, send self-addressed,
stamped envelope.
WEST
Box 5877, Hulsides, N.J. 07205

Reliable, energetic, personable
male, familiar with food,
wanted to fill position
in a new concept in
food vending.
Starts in mid-May.
Hourly rate + commission.
Call daily Greg Moyer
725-2434 or 729-4570.

CRUISE SHIPS NOW HIRING. M/F

Summer & Career Opportunities
(Will Train). Excellent pay plus
world travel. Hawaii, Bahamas,
Caribbean, etc. CALL NOW
206-736-0775 Ext.544F

SWAN'S ISLAND, ME.
3 BR, deck, view.
Hiking, swimming.
June - Sept. $350 a week.
No smokers.
609-465-1102

"Reason deceives us often; conscience never." - Rousseau

GOOD LUCK ON EXAMS!!

Have a great summer and many thanks for your patronage this past year!

Clask and Ken

26 Bath Road, Brunswick, 725-4711 Mon. Sat. 10 to 6

j&j sports center

We have everything for your
favorite Spring sports:

Lacrosse, Baseball, Softball, Tennis, etc.

Frisbees and Hacky Sacks, too!

212 Maine Street • Brunswick • 725-8675

BICYCLES

Fuji, Univega, Peugeot, Trek, Shogun
PROMPT, EXPERT SERVICE • CUSTOM BUILT WHEELS
EXERCISE EQUIPMENT & ROWING MACHINES
ALL-TERRAIN BICYCLES & CROSS COUNTRY SKIS
TRADE INS & USED BIKES
CYCLING CLOTHING AND HELMETS • CUSTOM BICYCLES SET UP

After March 1
Mon. - Sat., 10 - 5:30

442-7002

ROUTE 1 WOODWICK
(ACROSS FROM MACLEAN SUBARU & PEUGEOT)

COUNSELOR/TEACHER

Leader in quality programs for Youth at Risk seeks Counselor/Teachers for year-round wilderness camps in FL, NC, RI, VT and NH. Child care/college experience preferred. Excellent salary and benefits.

For more information and to apply call Marita Schneider at 1/800-537-0039 or send resume to:

ECKERD FAMILY YOUTH ALTERNATIVES, INC.

c/o Camp E-Hun-Tee
Box 607A, RR 1
Exeter, RI 02822

EDE MF

TYPISTS - Hundreds weekly at home! Write: P.O. Box 17 Clark, New Jersey 07066

1985 Toyota Corolla
new muffler, good condition
AM-FM cassette, A/C
$3700
Call Joe at 773-7211

the Samuel
Newman
House

Circa 1821

BEHIND COLES TOWER
7 South St., Brunswick, Me. 04011
For Reservations, call (207) 729-6959

BED & BREAKFAST

COOK'S LOBSTER HOUSE IS NOW OPEN!

Daily 12-9

Sunday 12-8

Closed Mondays until Memorial Day

visa/MC accepted

Sunday, May 8

Homemade dessert for mothers with all meals!

ROUTE 24 • BAILEY ISLAND • 833-2818

THE KAPLAN CURRICULUM
FOR CAREER CLIMBERS.

LSAT, GMAT, MCAT,
GRE, DAT,
Advanced Medical
Boards, TOEFL,
Nursing Boards,
NTE, CPA, Intro. to Law, Speed
Reading,
AND MORE.

For nearly 50 years, Stanley H. Kaplan has prepared over 1 million students for admission and licensing tests. So before you take a test, prepare with the best. Kaplan. A good score may help change your life.

KAPLAN

STANLEY H. KAPLAN EDUCATIONAL CENTER LTD.

Summer classes forming now for the fall exams.
Enroll early, transfer free to over 120 centers nationwide.

Boston (617) 266-TEST
Newton (617) 964-TEST
Cambridge (617) 868-TEST
New Hampshire (603) 641-EXAM
Maine (207) 761-TEST

THE REWARDS OF A HIGHER EDUCATION.

You've worked hard for your degree. And now you can get the graduation gift you've always dreamed of. Goodwin's Chevrolet and GMAC have teamed up to make owning or leasing your first new Chevrolet a lot easier. This package is open to anyone within six months of graduation, and includes the option to defer your first payment for up to 90 days. Stop in today for more details.

GOODWIN'S CHEVROLET

195 Pleasant Street, Brunswick 729-1611 773-1516 1-800-HI-FRANK

OPINION

Meddies and Tupelos let past die

Last semester the Meddiebumpsters were barred from performing on the Wellesley College campus due to the printing of a sexist phrase in an Orient article which escaped detection until the paper went to press. The reference to Wellesley as a "school for sexually frustrated women" generated such extensive anger and offense that the acapella group the Wellesley Tupelos "kindly suggested" that the Meddies not sing in order to avoid an overwhelmingly unperceptive audience.

Due to this unfortunate circumstance the Meddies cut their fall break tour short. The group's reaction to the barring of its performance could best be summed up in the words of its Business Manager Michael May '88: "It was frustrating to have such a blemish caused by an outside force."

Not to appear hypocritical or elitist—it was this paper that started the whole mess—what happened was unfortunate and let it be said that it was not the Meddies' fault. Any anger or offense the article caused aside, the Wellesley Tupelos will join the Meddies in their "Spring Sing" performance on Saturday night. The Tupelos' willingness to perform with the Meddies indicates an attempt to let the issue pass. As Elaine Kelly of the Tupelos has said, "It's an example of forgetting the past."

Letters

Single sex option adds diversity

I would like to comment on the editorial in the April 29 issue concerning the Fraternity Review Committee's report. I agree that the report was a very fair and thorough assessment of the Greek system at Bowdoin, and am hopeful that it will facilitate many constructive changes.

I disagree, however, with the statement that the existence of the unrecognized, single sex organizations of Chi Psi and Alpha Beta Phi run counter to the college's purpose and should "no longer be tolerated."

The purpose of the college is to produce critically-thinking individuals with a strong basis for decision-making. These organizations in no way undermine this goal, indeed, their members support and pursue it. I see no evidence that these organizations are sexist, anti-intellectual, or generally intolerant in any way.

It is not the purpose of the college to mold its students to a particular ideology or morality. This is counter to the purpose of a liberal arts education.

By dictating what social organizations a student may or may not belong to, the college is imposing its own prejudices upon its students. In saying that the aforementioned organizations run counter to the college's purpose, it implies that the students exist to embody and perpetuate this purpose (whatever that may be), rather than the college existing for the development of its students.

I am not saying that sexual equality is not a legitimate goal; it is an extremely important one. I worry, rather, about the means the college is using to pursue it. It is taking away its students' freedom to evaluate and decide personally how to deal with it. The college is imposing its values in an area of its students' lives I am not sure it has any business in.

If it could be shown that the organizations I've mentioned undermine the college's educational goals, I would not support their continued existence. However, I see no signs of this or the embodiment of any anti-social values.

These organizations represent part of the diversity that is essential to a liberal arts institution. Freedom of choice is also an essential, and I worry that this is tactfully and carefully being taken away being taken away from us.

Wendy Carlson '90

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

"The College exercises no control over the content of the student writings contained herein and neither it, nor the faculty assume any responsibility for the views expressed herein."

Editor
Managing Editor
News Editors
In-depth Editor
Entertainment Editor
Sports Editor
Photography Editors

Stephen Reynolds
Kathryn Nanovic
Tamara Dassanayake, Dawn Vance
Kevin Wesley
Sharon Smart
Justin Prinsendorf
Alan Harris, Mary Ann Lai

Asst. News Editor
Asst. Sports Editor
Asst. Entertainment Editor
Contributing Editor
Senior Editors
Production Manager

Tanya Weinstein
Tod Dillon
Lizz Millan
Albert Mauro
Lori Bodwell, Michael Botelho
Vincent Jacks

Business Manager
Advertising Manager
Advertising Staff

Eric Foushee
Michael Townsend
Michelle Campagna, Nancy Eckel,
Kim Maxwell
Eric Palmquist

Circulation Manager
Bowdoin Publishing Company
Lori M. Bodwell, Eric F. Foushee,
Albert P. Mauro, Stephen Reynolds

Published weekly when classes are held during the Fall and Spring semester by the students of Bowdoin College. Address editorial communication to the Editor, subscription communication to the Circulation Manager, and business correspondence to the Business Manager at the Bowdoin Orient, 12 Cleveland Street, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011, or telephone (207) 725-3300. The Bowdoin Orient reserves the right to edit any and all articles and letters. Subscriptions are $8.00 a semester or $15.00 a year. Past issues cannot be mailed. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to The Bowdoin Orient, Moulton Union, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine 04011.

This is what you want, this is what you get

Let me offer a dissent from the findings of the Committee to Review Fraternities. I speak as a member of a national fraternity (DKE), a current officer of my class (Amherst, 1954) and as a former advisor to two fraternities here (DKE and Beta—my late father's fraternity at Penn State).

The Report tends to make fraternities the central concern of the College, at least until 1991. It guarantees stasis and institutional drift as Bowdoin preoccupies itself with an anachronism. It perpetuates the "anxiety about fraternities" that President Gresson notes in his memorandum.

The Report tends to treat fraternities as if they were the only constituency of Bowdoin College, when they actually incorporate a minority of undergraduates.

It focuses attention upon the "health" of obviously unhealthy organizations and thus tends to assume the health of other components of the College—particularly academic programs. As someone who has been here for a quarter of a century, I find the report's assumptions about academics at Bowdoin remarkably untenable.

It grants a small group of fraternities more time in which to comply with institutional and societal imperatives. No organization at Bowdoin, except the male sports team, should be permitted to deny membership to women. None. Not now. Not last year. Not in 1990.

In spite of the evidence of harassment, alcoholism, anti-neighboring behavior, debt (enough to endow a junior chair on the faculty), and reactionary attitudes—all attributable to that non-system that the Report calls a "system"—the Report, incredibly, talks of maintaining the "Greek tradition." To what purpose?

The Report's best recommendation—that Bowdoin renovate facilities that are often slums—is buried in vi. 3 (2). Few would have objected had the report gone on to recommend that renovated houses be returned as locals, with continuing links to graduates—apparently an important consideration here and one that fair minded people must be willing to grant.

The Report, however, merely confirms the ambiguous status of organizations that are at once part of and not part of the collegiate structure. I drove down Boody Street the other day and found that Chi Psi was there. Bowdoin's cartography to the contrary.

While the Report endorses the College's belated initiative towards a student center, it ignores the fact that the Library—the available space—has become a de facto student center. The Report mutes the imperative for social space by choosing not to mention the erosion suffered by a central academic component of the College because other spaces, out of the wind, have not been developed.

The Report recommends that yet another administrative body be brought in to deal with a set of problems that Bowdoin's current administrators admit are not susceptible to administrative solution.

For all of its pious disclaimers, the Report privileges what is worst in our community by giving it one more chance to "reform." It can't reform. Fraternities are, by nature, centripetal and reactionary. Brief flickers of "social-consciousness" are merely time buying efforts to secure anti-social agendas. The Report grants feudalism a chance to make its case in the face of historical inevitabilities that should long since have swept it away.

The body of the Report ignores the experience of colleges with which "Bowdoin likes to compare itself." One must assume that the conclusions of Amherst, Colby, and Williams contradicted the seemingly pre-ordained findings of this Report.

The Report could have recommended that Bowdoin get on with its long-neglected academic agenda—the only agenda that will ensure the College's survival into the 21st century.

In that the evidence that the Report adduces refutes its basic conclusion—that somehow fraternities must "improve and thrive"—the Report is in itself an exercise in "non-intellectualism."

The Report may have been what Bowdoin wanted, but it is not what Bowdoin needed. It merely confirms Bowdoin's long standing inability to make decisions that support its ostensible goals.

Nick Carraway says to Gatsby, "You can't repeat the past." Gatsby replies, "Of course you can." Bowdoin's effort to repeat the past and this time try to make it work makes the question of Bowdoin's future itself a question. Insofar as the college rests its case on its history, it deserves to be what it is, an historical artifact that has no relevance to the future from which it turns its collective face.

H.R. Cousen, Professor of English

Letters

Older and wiser and leaving Bowdoin

Another year at Bowdoin College has come to an end.

It was a good year for many of us. As we reflect upon the past eight months we realize we have become wiser than we have ever been before. We have formed interpersonal relationships, we have studied hard, we have eaten well, and most of us have had, in general, a rather pleasant time living together. We have experienced another year of the Bowdoin tradition, a privilege we must all be grateful for. A good year for many of us—not for all.

In numerous ways I, too, share this excitement of the past year. As a first year student, I have enjoyed the freedom of being away from home; I have developed a better sense of my intellectual pursuits; and I have indulged myself in the material and physical comfort of life on the Bowdoin College campus. But I am leaving.

It takes a great deal of conviction and determination to transfer out of a college. There is more than just the tedious process of applications and essays, a repetition of the ordeal every college student is all too familiar with. It is hard to tell your professors you do not like the institution they have chosen to teach at. It is even harder to tell your peers and friends that, despite them, you would rather be spending your college years somewhere else. Unfortunately, I have found it necessary to go through this process.

No doubt, the campus is pretty. No doubt, the library is full. No doubt, we are all smart. But what lies behind this beauty? Behind the ivy? Behind the masks? What is Bowdoin? To tell you the truth, I have found very little.

When I came to Bowdoin, I thought I would be entering an intellectual environment. I was looking forward to late night discussions about our history, about our future. I was expecting social awareness, a sense of responsibility to the individual and the community, a passion for truth, for integrity. Yet instead?

Yes, I have witnessed a few discussions. Their topic ranged from the quality of farts to the shape of female genitalia. The closest thing I have found resembling social awareness was athletic fanaticism, the only passion—for body building. The one time I have ever seen anyone slightly irritated by any of the past year's national events was the Stock Market crash.

It is hard to pinpoint the cause for all of this. I know the administration is trying to deal with these problems. And the faculty is simply wonderful.

Perhaps it is the composition of the student body. An interesting and flexible group of people just cannot be composed of white, handsome, upper-middle class, well-rounded New England conservatives. The fraternities—these seminal factories, these sexist, elitist and alcoholic institutions—are certainly a factor.

If I had believed I could effect changes at Bowdoin, I would have stayed. I have tried to do a few things, and I have watched many work hard on doing others. Frankly, I am exhausted. Frustrated, too. The polar bear seems to be made out of stone, unwilling to listen, unwilling to change, unwilling to move forward.

And thus, as we relax during this summer vacation, let us reflect. Let us reflect what it is we want out of our college years. Let us reflect upon our values and our integrity. We owe it to our professors, we owe it to ourselves.

I am moving onward, leaving you all with sincere wishes of goodwill.

Jonathan Touval '91

Is there an athletic/music conflict?

In response to Lisa Jacob's letter which appeared under the heading "Music/Athletic Conflict" in the April 29 Bowdoin Orient, I would like to state the Bowdoin College Community Orchestra's attendance policy.

"Unexcused absences per semester: 3 for Monday/Thursday participants, 2 for Thursday only or Monday only participants. Zae should be notified in advance. These may be for any reason whatsoever. A late arrival or early departure constitutes one half of an absence. Absences beyond these must be negotiated in advance. They may not include travel plans, class preparation, sports events, evening lectures—use your free absences for these."

The attendance policy, which I feel is quite clear and which incorporates a good deal of flexibility, applies to students participating for credit or as an extra-curricular activity, and to community members. Zae Munn, Director, Bowdoin College Community Orchestra

I would like to address Lisa Jacobs' letter to the editor titled "Music/Athletic Conflict." Last week, I was primarily disturbed by the gross generalization that Lisa made in stating that the entire music faculty was inconsiderate of student's athletic conflicts and overly strict in their attendance policies as compared to the athletic staff.

I believe it is just to say that there are certain professors, directors or coaches who are less liberal with the policies they establish and abide by in every department. Therefore, experiences with certain professors, directors or coaches should not serve as a decisive argument supporting or condemning departments, organizations or extracurriculars at Bowdoin.

Secondly, I believe that if someone is going to make an argument he/she should base it on verifiable facts and present the entire picture. I would like to clarify the facts. Miss Jacobs stated that the orchestra director, Zae Munn, telephoned her coach to confirm Miss Jacobs' meet. This is quite true. However, Miss Jacobs neglected to write the circumstances under which Zae made the phone call. Miss Jacobs was to miss two dress rehearsals because of her athletic commitment.

Zae, in accordance with orchestra attendance policy, could not allow Miss Jacobs to participate in the performance. In a professional manner, Zae phoned Miss Jacobs' coach to see if something could be worked out. What she discovered was that Miss Jacobs did not have an athletic commitment the first day and the following day's meet was not one which required her attendance.

It is unfortunate that Miss Jacobs has only experienced frustrating circumstances in her participation in the music department—I sympathize. However, to tarnish the reputation of the music department and emulate that of the athletic department is unjust. If Miss Jacobs is going to present a comparison, she should approach it in a truthful manner so that we might understand why, in this case, the coach was more understanding than the director.

To support her argument, Miss Jacobs attributes her poor athletic performance to the disturbing ordeal with the orchestra director. A serious athlete, as any serious musician, would not allow his/her performance to reflect unresolved tension. Maybe Miss Jacobs should concentrate on developing herself either as a musician or an athlete if she can't manage both. Barbara Milewski '89

Chaos at a campus wide: it doesn't have to be that way

Last Saturday, Delta Sigma, of which I am a member, had a campus wide party. It seemed like a good idea at the time. Unfortunately, our evening was ruined by a population of filthy animals that do not deserve to be enrolled in Bowdoin College. Within six hours of the starting gun, four of our windows were broken, one of our doors broken down, and dozens of people at the party were harassed in one way or another. It is an objective fact that most of the damage was done by members of a few fraternities. Coincidentally, members of these same fraternities constituted the majority of creatures that snuck or battered their way into our house.

At this point, it is fair to ask why a given goon's status as a fraternity member is relevant. The reason was painfully obvious last Saturday. There is in this school a large population of evolutionary mishaps with hormone imbalances. Said mishaps are far more likely to pillage when they are backed up by thirty of their steroid injected Neanderthal brothers. Should a given mishap decide to harass someone at a party, there is very little we can do about it. So, when some idiot asks me whether I cut my hair the way I do to get back at my parents, I am unable to ask him if he acts like a baboon to get back at his parents. The point is these creatures can act however they want, with predictable results. For this reason, I will encourage Delta Sigma not to host any more campus wide. It isn't worth it.

Incidentally, when you read the Report to the President from the Committee to Review Fraternities, you may wonder why the fraternity houses seem to be in such bad shape. I contend that a substantial part of the damage was done by drunken slobs with no sense of right or wrong. It doesn't have to be this way. Ben Paris '91

P.S. If anyone wants to harass me over the phone for this letter, they won't be able to, some pinhead ripped the phone off the wall.

729-6642
M-Th 9:30 - 5:30 Fri 9:30 - 4

Little Ones

Come and see us at our new location!
151 Maine Street

The Omelette Shop Café

BRUNSWICK-MAINE

KRISTINA'S

RESTAURANT, BAKERY, HARRY'S BAR

Tuesday Night
2 For 1

Summer Hours

Monday 8-3
Tuesday-Saturday 8-9:30
Sunday Brunch 9 a.m.-2 p.m.

At the Corner of
Center & High St.
Bath, Maine 04530
(207) 442-8577

a unique opportunity for Math/Science
(Majors/Minors/Aptitudes)

PEACE CORPS

The toughest job you'll ever love

For you and for the world. Peace Corps will combine your education with training to prepare you for a volunteer position in: • Education • Fisheries • Health • Agriculture • Forestry or other areas. You'll meet new people, learn a new language, experience a new culture and gain a whole new outlook. And while you're building your future, you'll be helping people in developing countries learn the basics of technological advancement.

MATH AND SCIENCE STUDENTS:
The Peace Corps has positions overseas starting this summer. Share your knowledge where it is needed most. APPLY NOW!
For more info call collect: 617-565-5555 ext. 103.

PEACE CORPS

First in class.

Domino's Pizza has been helping students study for over twenty years.

Keeping you first in class has made us the number one pizza delivery company in the world.

While you hit the books, we hit the pavement with delicious, made-to-order pizza. So call us for a proper meal. Domino's Pizza Delivers.™

Call us.

729-5561

26 Bath Road

Open late every night.
Open for lunch Sat & Sun

Our drivers carry less than $20.00.

Limited delivery area.

© 1988 Domino's Pizza, Inc.

$1.00

$1.00 off any pizza purchase.
One coupon per pizza.
Expires: 5-22-88

Fast Free Delivery
26 Bath Road
Phone: 729-5561

Includes all applicable state and local taxes.

$1.00

$1.00 off any pizza purchase.
One coupon per pizza.
Expires: 5-22-88

Fast Free Delivery
26 Bath Road
Phone: 729-5561

Includes all applicable state and local taxes.

THE

BOWDOIN ORIENT

FIRST CLASS MAIL
U.S. Postage PAID
BRUNSWICK, ME.
Permit No. 25

The Oldest Continuously Published College Weekly in the United States

VOLUME CXVII

BOWDOIN COLLEGE, BRUNSWICK, MAINE, FRIDAY, MAY 27, 1988

COMMENCEMENT

Greason addresses baccalaureate gathering

Bowdoin College President A. LeRoy Greason urged the class of 1988 to be "more sensitive to the present than we are likely to be given the experience of the past" and to develop compassion and moral awareness, in his baccalaureate address on Thursday, May 26, at the First Parish Church.

The baccalaureate service, which included the presentation of three major awards to seniors, marked the beginning of the 183rd commencement activities at the college. These activities will culminate with the graduation of 390 seniors on Saturday, May 28.

The motivation for his speech this year stemmed from his belief that "we need to look reflectively at our present... as we are no wiser about our present than earlier generations were about theirs," said Greason.

Opening his address with quotes from the Book of Isaiah, Greason spoke of "another kind of revelation, a new song to be sung: the revelation of hindsight, the wisdom that comes from looking back."

"The concern that underlies this talk is how we can see the truths of the present with the same kind of clarity and conviction with which we seem to be able to perceive the truths of the past."

He recounted his visit to Washington, D.C. where he passed the U.S. Supreme Court Building with its famous inscription, "Equal justice under law."

"It was while taking in that grand sentiment that I noticed a black couple, about my age, standing and looking at the building, too. Between the engraving of those words and the three of us lay the whole civil rights movement, James Meredith, Ole Miss, Selma, Martin Luther King, and the civil rights legislation of the 60s. The irony of 'equal justice under law' was inescapable.

"Why couldn't the designers of that building in the 1930s foresee that outrageous gap between their rhetoric and the reality of their time? The answer, I want to suggest, is that they could not see their own times. They were too much of them, too much shaped by them, too little outside of them.

"It was for the same reason that I and my school friends in the 1930s could sit in the Wellesley Community Playhouse and watch Bojangles Robinson dance and sing with—and defer to—Shirley Temple. And we could watch Stephi Fetchit dance and kowtow and play the fool. I don't think any of us was horrified at these outrageous stereotypes. Bored maybe, but not horrified. We were already too brainwashed—even though that particular term hadn't come into being yet."

In his address, Greason quoted extensively from "Aunt Dan and Lemon," Wallace Shawn's drama about a young woman whose isolation from humanity distorts her moral sensibilities.

"The play," he said, "sends you out into the night wondering what you have blessed in your own time that will horrify and humble you in the future. One can surmise of course. We are not doing very well by our environment. Our toleration of poverty, of homelessness, of hunger, of illiteracy seems almost boundless at times. Although I suspect what we may be judged most harshly for is what we are the

(Continued on page three)

Susan Anderson

Samuel Shepherd

Laurie Duchovny

Tradition continues as seniors deliver commencement speeches

DAWN VANCE
ORIENT Staff

A Bowdoin tradition will continue when three seniors present speeches tomorrow as the College conducts its 183rd commencement exercises.

The Student Awards Committee chaired by Professor Elroy Lacase, Jr. awarded three seniors, Susan M.L. Anderson, Laurie Marsha Duchovny, and Samuel Brooks Shepherd, prizes for speeches they will present during tomorrow's commencement exercises. A fourth senior, Lisa Mariette Bourassa, received the DeAlva Stanwood Alexander Second Prize for the commencement speech she submitted to the committee.

The Committee awarded Anderson the Goodwin Commencement Prize. Anderson, a mathematics major from Baltimore, has served as student coordinator of the mathematics department's self-paced calculus program, a student phone-a-ton leader, has volunteered time to helping the community, is a James Bowdoin Scholar and is a newly elect member of the college's chapter of the national honor society Phi Beta Kappa.

Once Anderson decided to write something for the speech competition she said she, "started out by figuring out what makes me who I am at Bowdoin and I decided that my major is a big part of it. I thought about that and why people are surprised that I am a math major."

In figuring out what makes her who she is at Bowdoin, Anderson hit upon the need for women role models. She said that to a large extent her need for role models motivated her speech as well as Assistant Professor Rosemary A. Roberts, the only female of the eight professors in the mathematics department. Anderson said of Roberts, "She's definitely a role model for me - no doubt about it."

In regard to her commencement speech Anderson said, "I've been telling people it's about being a math major and being a woman but there's more to it than that."

Being a math major is something that she holds as very important.

When asked why she decided on math as a major, Anderson said, "I prefer the rightness and wrongness of it. When you finish a problem set you have a sense of this is right/wrong, good/bad. But the frustrating thing is the higher you go in math the more it's open to interpretation like everything else."

She continued, "Also, it's an incredibly good department. The professors are easy to approach, they care about what you're doing, and there are good opportunities to get to know other majors and professors. That was something that was important to me. I didn't want to be just another face in a department. I wanted something where I could interact within the department and with other majors."

Duchovny has received the DeAlva Stanwood Alexander First Prize for her commencement speech. An English major from New York City, Duchovny has served as vice-president of the Bowdoin Women's Association and as co-president of the Bowdoin Literary (Continued on page eight)

INSIDE:

Profile of the Class of 1988
page three

Review and pictures of Little Shop of Horrors page five

Five distinguished by honorary degrees

Bowdoin College will award five honorary degrees at its 183rd commencement exercises to be held Saturday, May 28, 1988.

Tina Howe, a successful playwright whose works include Painting Churches, Coastal Disturbances and Museum together with James Russell Wiggins, a former editor of The Washington Post and the current editor and publisher of The Ellsworth American will receive honorary doctor of letters degrees.

Robert L. Woodbury, chancellor of the University of Maine System will receive a honorary doctor of humane letters degree. Bernard Lown, M.D., cardiologist and co-president of International Physicians for the Prevention of Nuclear War will be awarded the honorary doctor of science degree and Kurt Ollmann '77, world-renowned opera singer will be awarded the honorary doctor of music degree.

Tina Howe visited the Bowdoin campus in November 1987 to deliver the inaugural Helen Hartley Jenkins Lecture on Modern Literature and to oversee the student production of her play Museum.

In addition to Museum, Howe is the author of The Nest, Birth and Afterbirth, The Art of Dining, Painting Churches and Coastal Disturbances, which was nominated for a Tony Award for the best play of 1986-87. She has received the 1983 Obie Award for distinguished playwrighting and the John Gassner Outer Critics Circle Award, as well as a Rockefeller grant and an NEA fellowship.

Howe, who currently teaches playwrighting at New York University, first entered show business in 1962 while teaching at Morse High School in Bath, Maine.

While her husband, Norman Levy, was completing his undergraduate degree at Bowdoin, she became active writing and directing for the state one-act play contest.

Howe's anti-war play, Capacity Five, was performed in the finals held in Bowdoin's Pickard Theater. She later worked as a reporter for the Brunswick Record.

A native of New York City, Howe is a graduate of Sarah Lawrence College.

Bernard Lown, professor of cardiology at the Harvard School of Public Health, senior physician at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston and co-president of International Physicians for the Prevention of Nuclear War, is one of the world's leading cardiologists.

In 1985 IPPNW, which was established in 1980, was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize for its "considerable service to mankind by spreading authoritative information and by creating an awareness of the catastrophic consequences of atomic warfare." Its membership has grown to more than 150,000 (Continued on page three)

What do you regret not having done in your four years at Bowdoin?

"I regret not doing well."
Andy Bernstein

"I regret not doing as well as Andy Bernstein."
Heather Adams

"I regret not having returned my library books on time."
Karen McSweeney

"I regret being a senior-class officer."
Scott Milo

"I regret not having kissed the cutest senior guy."
Linda Woodhall

"We regret ever doing an honors project."
Andrea Tsacoyeanes and Mary Cline

"I regret not ever attempting to steal the flag from the quad flagpole."
Mark Peluso

SCOTT TOWNSEND ORIENT Staff

SPORT SHORTS

Augustin, Davis named to lacrosse Division III All-Region Team

Audrey Augustin '88 and Cynthia Davis '88 have been named to the Intercollegiate Women's Lacrosse Coaches Association New England Division III All-Region Team.

Augustin, an honorable mention All-American selection in 1987, was voted to the All-Region's first team in the defense category. Playing center for the Polars Bears, Augustin tallied 14 goals and four assists this spring for a 5-6 Bowdoin team.

For Davis, this is the first postseason recognition that she received. An aggressive defender and dangerous scoring threat, Davis scored eight goals and added six assists in 1988. She was a member of the second team's defense category.

Senior harriers race to strong finishes during home finale

The John J. Magee Track at Whittier Field was the site of the New England Div. III men's track meet. The Polar Bears teamed up for a ninth place finish in a field of 25.

Several seniors turned in strong performances in their last home meet. Co-Captain Eric Gans swept through his trial heat, semifinal and final of the 110-meter hurdles. His times along the way to becoming the New England Div. III champion were 15.39, 15.2 and 15.29 seconds.

Co-Captain Steve Polikoff placed fourth in the decathlon. Polikoff's 5240 points were 752 points shy of the winning total.

The Bowdoin 4 x 400-meter relay team placed fifth in the finals after winning its heat. Seniors Polikoff, Colles Stowell and Rob McCabe and Junior Tod Dillon finished with a time of 3:24.98. The Fitchburg squad turned in the winning time of 3:16.39.

Ilkos, Smyth honored for dedication to Bowdoin men's hockey

The captains of the 1987-88 Bowdoin men's hockey team were honored this month at the team's break-up dinner. Steve Ilkos (54-26-80 in his career) received the Hugh Munro Jr. Memorial Trophy which is awarded annually to the member of the Bowdoin varsity hockey team who best exemplifies the qualities of loyalty and courage which characterized the life of Hugh Munro Jr.

Mark Smyth (19-26-45 in his career) was awarded the Harry G. Shulman Trophy. This prize is awarded annually to the member of the Bowdoin hockey team who has shown outstanding dedication to Polar Bear hockey.

Men's hockey co-captains announced

Bowdoin College Head Coach Terry Meagher announced that Kevin Potter '89 and Kevin Powers '89 have been named 1988-89 Polar Bear men's hockey co-captains. The two were selected by the vote of last year's team members.

President of the College A. LeRoy Greason accepts a check from the organizers of "The Struggle Against Apartheid." From left: A. LeRoy Greason, Kevin Blanchard '88, Jane Cullen, Edmund Searles '89, William Littell '88 and Lawrence Martin '88.

Community fund supports South African scholarships

For the third consecutive year, the Bowdoin College community has raised enough money to support two black South African students in college for one year.

Backed by President of the College, A. LeRoy Greason, the governing boards, faculty, staff and students raised nearly $3800 to provide scholarships for Amon Dlamini at the University of Natal and Edward Maloka at Rhodes University.

"This effort succeeded because so many helped. I am especially pleased, because it represents a positive way of addressing the evil of apartheid," said Greason.

Bowdoin students raised more than $2000, including proceeds from the May 1 "Run Against Apartheid" and $1100 in community donations. The governing boards, faculty and staff contributed $1600. A $180 balance was carried over from last year's successful campaign.

The scholarships cost a total of $5600. Greason donated $2800 from his discretionary fund to the campaign. This year's surplus will be carried over to next year.

Bowdoin students coordinated "The Struggle Against Apartheid," a week of lectures, films and debates concluded by the road race, to raise awareness of the political situation in South Africa and to raise money for the scholarship fund.

Seniors Kevin Blanchard, William Littell, Lawrence Martin and junior Edmund Searles directed this year's effort. Joining the students was Brunswick resident Jane Cullen who has lived in South Africa for many years, where she worked with black students at the University of Natal.

19 nominated to Phi Beta Kappa

The Bowdoin College chapter of Phi Beta Kappa announced today that 19 seniors have been nominated for membership in the national honor society that recognizes high academic distinction.

The 19 were chosen on the basis of their scholarly achievement and sustained superior intellectual performance during their four years at Bowdoin, according to Associate Professor of Physics and Secretary-Treasurer of the Bowdoin Phi Beta Kappa chapter, James Turner.

The newly nominated Phi Beta Kappa members are: Kyle M. Appell '88, Lori M. Bodwell '88, Deerin S. Brott '88, Gayle S. Burns '88, Peter J. Gallagher '88, Jennifer A. Gervais '87, Roger M. Gold '88, Kimberlee J. Grillo '88, Heidi J. Heal '88, Peter J. Hodum '88, Melanie S. Johnson '88, James C. Kelly '87, Douglas F. Kirshen '88, Stefan C. Marellid '88, Theresa A. Nester '88, Sarah W. Sanborn '88, Jennifer S. Stern '88, Jeffrey M. Sullivan '86 and Susan E. Tegtmeyer '88.

THE CLASS OF 1988

The Bowdoin College class of 1988 will be the largest graduating class in recent years. At the 183rd Commencement Exercises scheduled to take place tomorrow, 390 seniors will receive their undergraduate degrees.

The most popular major amongst this year's seniors was Government. Almost 24% of the class completed a major in this department. History majors accounted for over 19% of the class, followed by Economics which attracted approximately 11% of majors.

Approximately 40% of the class had undertook double majors.

2.88%

The members of this year's senior class represent 39 States and 11 countries. The largest contingent is from Massachusetts, making up over 21% of the class. 18% of the graduating class is from Maine and approximately 13% are from New York. Just under 3% of the class hail from foreign countries.

Honorary degrees

(Continued from page one)

physicians in 49 nations. Lown has had a long-standing interest in international cooperation. In 1974-5 he presided over the USA-China Physicians Friendship Association. He was the founder and first president of Physicians for Social Responsibility. He has received the George F. Kennan Award, the Gandhi Peace Prize and the first Cardinal Medeiros Peace Award.

A pioneer in the research of sudden cardiac death, Lown invented the defibrillator and the cardioverter. He also introduced the drug Lidocaine, now used worldwide to control disturbances of the heartbeat.

A native of Lithuania, Lown graduated summa cum laude from the University of Maine and earned his medical degree at the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine.

James Russell Wiggins has been editor and publisher of The Ellsworth American since 1969. Wiggins' career in journalism spans more than 65 years, beginning in 1922 when he was a reporter on the Rock County Starr, Minnesota.

He purchased the paper in 1925 and continued as editor and publisher until 1930, when he joined the editorial page staff of the St. Paul Dispatch-Pioneer Press. Wiggins acted as the newspaper's Washington, D.C., correspondent from 1933 to 1938, when he became managing editor.

Following World War II, he returned to edit the St. Paul papers before being named assistant to the publisher of the New York Times. From 1947 until his retirement in 1968, he worked for The Washington Post, first as managing editor, then as editor and executive vice president.

In 1968, Lyndon Johnson appointed Wiggins United States Ambassador to the United Nations, a post he held until Richard Nixon's inauguration the following year.

Wiggins is past president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors and the American Antiquarian Society. He received the Eugene Cervi Award from the International Society of Weekly Newspaper Editors in 1987 and was named Maine Journalist of the Year in 1977.

A native of Luverne, Minnesota, Wiggins is a graduate of the Army Air Forces Air Intelligence School in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania.

Kurt Ollmann, a member of Bowdoin's class of 1977, has performed opera and vocal music worldwide. He has sung at La Scala, the Kennedy Center and Merkin Hall, among other concert halls in the United States and abroad.

Ollmann has performed with the Vienna State Opera, the Santa Fe Opera, the Theatre de Monnaie, the New York Philharmonic and the Skylight Comic Opera in Milwaukee. He has returned twice to Bowdoin to perform, once in 1985 and then again in 1987.

During his career, Ollmann has made recordings for Deutsche Grammophon, EMI and Harmonia Mundi. He has also worked with Leonard Bernstein on television productions and recordings.

Ollmann has received several awards for his music including first prize in the 19th International French Art Song Competition, the Award of the Professional Union of French Singing Teachers, first prize in the 1978 Wisconsin Federation of Music Clubs Student Auditions and first place, Maine chapter, in the 1977 National Association of Singing Teachers Auditions.

A native of Racine, Wisconsin, Ollmann continued his education, after Bowdoin, at the Orford Art Center in Quebec and thereafter at the Music Conservatory of Geneva.

Robert Woodbury has been chancellor of the University of Maine System since September 1986. He was previously president of the University of Southern Maine, a post he assumed in 1979.

Woodbury joined the faculty of the University of Massachusetts, Amherst, in 1968. He was named associate dean of the School of Education in 1969, associate provost in 1971 and acting vice-chancellor for student affairs in 1976.

He has also taught at the California Institute of Technology, Amherst College and the University of London.

Woodbury has traveled and lectured widely in the United States, China, Europe and most recently in the Soviet Union. He has also published several articles on urban education, higher education and American culture and politics.

In addition, Woodbury is a trustee of the Maine Development Foundation, Amherst College, the Folger Shakespeare Library and numerous other institutions.

A native of New Jersey, Woodbury is a graduate of Amherst College and earned his master's and doctoral degrees at Yale University, where he was a Danforth Fellow and a Woodrow Wilson Fellow.

Bernard Lown.

James Russell Wiggins

Tina Howe.

Kurt Ollmann.

Robert Woodbury.

Baccalaureate

(Continued from page one)

least sensitive to today."

We strengthen our moral centers when we strip away our prejudices, the president said. "That, we hope, is a process you learned something about at Bowdoin. And clearly it must go on for the rest of your lives, if you are truly to remain alive, if you are to free yourselves from the tyranny of our times, from the unstated prejudices of our day. In the words of the god of the sea in the Oriental tale (you heard earlier this evening): 'There is no end to the weighing of things.'

"The weighing of things can have its joyful discoveries, its pleasures of fresh insights and understanding. After all, that biblical prophet spoke of a revelation so moving that he could urge the believer to sing unto the Lord a new song.

"The revelation of a compassionate and adventurous morality can bring that music, too. May you be blessed with hearing it often," he concluded.

During the baccalaureate service, three senior-class awards were presented. Peter LaMontagne and Cynthia Heller were co-winners of the Andrew Allison Haldane Cup, awarded to a member of the senior class who has outstanding qualities of leadership and character.

Laura Bongiorno, Lisa Bourassa, Kevin Hawkins and Sharon Walker, were named co-winners of the Lucien Howe Prize, given to the senior who has shown the highest qualities of conduct and character.

Lynn Levasseur received the Col. William Henry Owen Premium given to "a humble, earnest and active Christian."

Rooms for Rent

Two private rooms with private baths available for students 1988-1989. One half block from Bowdoin Campus -- on Federal Street.
Call Barbara Norton
Home -- 729-4489
Work -- 729-7577

WRIGHT PREVIEW WEEK!
SAVE 10% OFF
ALREADY DICOUNTED
PRICES
FROM MAY 31st-JUNE 4th

From May 31st-June 4th we're taking 10% off each pair of WRIGHT shoes you buy as we present the Spring 1988 line of WRIGHT shoes.

Walls, our WRIGHT representative will be at our store to present the line and assist you in making your purchase on Friday, June 3rd from 12:00 noon to 6:00 P.M. and Saturday, June 4th from 9:00 A.M. to 4:00 P.M.

Maine's Original Highway Shoe Store.

(Bass)
Wayside Shoe

U.S. Route One, Brunswick (Just North of Freeport)
Open Daily 9-6; Sunday 11-6 729-6728

Pemberton named new Director of Minority Affairs

Visiting Associate Professor of English and Acting Director of the Afro-American Studies Program, Gayle Pemberton has been named Director of Minority Affairs for the coming year.

Pemberton will assume the newly-created position on July 1, 1988. She will also continue to lecture in the English department.

In addition to acting as an advisor to Bowdoin's minority students, she will concentrate on programs to attract more minorities to the campus and to generate endowment funds to provide them with scholarships. A related goal is to strengthen the Afro-American studies program and the Afro-American Society, which will observe their 20th anniversary during the 1988-89 academic year.

The effort will involve Bowdoin's administration, faculty, governing boards, admissions officials, financial aid officers, development office and students. Minority alumni groups will be asked to assist Pemberton in student recruitment and fund raising.

"The appointment of a remarkably able person to fill the new role is meant to make clear to all that Bowdoin takes minorities and minority issues seriously," said President of the College A. LeRoy Greacon.

Pemberton joined the faculty in 1986 as a visiting associate professor of English, and served as acting director of the Afro-American studies program during the current academic year.

She has been working with a newly-formed consortium of prestigious undergraduate colleges in related efforts to recruit and retain minority students.

Greacon has distributed her new booklet, "On Teaching the Minority Student: Problems and Strategies," to 3000 college and university residents around the country. Orders for another 5000 copies have been filled and the booklet is presently going into its third printing.

"My understanding of the problems of minority students comes from 20 years of being a student and teacher in predominantly white, prestigious colleges and universities where I was the only black English major and then occasionally the only black professor on campus," she said.

A native of St. Paul, Minnesota, Pemberton is a graduate of University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, and earned her master's and doctoral degrees at Harvard University, where she was a Ford Foundation Doctoral Fellow and a W. E. B. DuBoise Fellow. She has taught at Smith College, Columbia University, Middlebury College, Northwestern University and Reed College.

Gayle Pemberton.

HUSHANG EXCHANGE DANCE CLUB

presents a

BOWDOIN BLOWOUT

Thursday, June 2nd

9:00 P.M. - close

$1 Drafts

$1.50 Well Drinks

Present a valid Bowdoin ID to receive discounts

"Dance in the heart of the Old Port"

HuShang Exchange Dance Club

29 Exchange Street, Portland

773-0300

Little Shop entertaining if limited

AL MAURO
ORIENT Staff

The senior musical, Little Shop of Horrors, provides good entertainment in spite of obstacles presented by the limited facilities of Kresge Auditorium.

The show, directed by Bill Evans '87, is the popular Broadway musical and later, a movie, about a blood-thirsty plant in a skid row flower shop. Seymour, the overworked, underpaid klutz at Mushnik's Flower Shop, grows a peculiar, carnivorous breed of Venus Fly Trap that propels the shop into the limelight. Seymour is also trying to find the affection of Audrey, a ditzy blond at the shop. Audrey, however, is seeing a sadistic dentist.

Lisa Burnett, a graduate of the class of 1987, plays Audrey with a perfect sense of naivete and flawed reasoning. Her high, breathy voice is well-suited to the part and follows through well in the musical numbers. At times, however, her voice is almost too soft and characterized to be heard. Overall, Burnett gave an excellent performance.

John Brube, '90, plays the wimpish Seymour. Brube worked well with the partially animate plant, Audrey II. He was able to consistently overcome the muddled acoustics in the room and give clean, clear dialogue and precise singing. Brube also worked well with Burnett, especially in the duet on "Suddenly Seymour." Brube was good and consistent, although some of his actions were very stiff.

Jim Barton, '88, turned in a solid performance as the aging Czechoslovakian owner of the flower shop.

The part of Audrey II was physically played by styrofoam props with humans inside, but the voice, done by Bill Evans, came over a load speaker. Evans gave the plant the necessary power in the voice. The speaker enhanced the better parts of the voice, mainly the lows, but made worse the weak parts. There were also some obvious problems in the plant trying to lip-synch the voice.

A chorus of four women in the skid row scene outside the flower shop gave a good, but uneven performance. Hope Hall '90, Alison Aymar '90, Tamara Mallory '90, and Staci Williams '90 were at times right on target with their commentary on the main action, but at other times were barely audible and out of character.

John Ivers, '87, gave an entertaining performance as Orin Scrivello, D.D.S. However, his character was not always consistent, ranging from memorably maniacal to just average.

Among the secondary characters, Barbara Milewski, '89, gives wonderful performances as a bag lady, a dental patient and as the money-laden wife of the editor of Life magazine.

Many of the drawbacks of the show come from the limited stage area and facilities in Kresge. The auditorium is not built for theater. The lighting for the play is limited to very basic effects. Evans uses strobe and fluorescent lights during some murder scenes with the plant with mixed results.

The stage is also too small to put on a complex show such as this. The stage is divided into two areas, the shop and skid row. Neither is given enough room to give the desired effect. The shop, particularly, could have benefited from a more professional set.

The acoustics in the room are not even fit for a lecture, let alone a musical production.

The musical accompaniment is provided by a pianist and drummer. They both perform well, if not too loud. At times, the piano overpowers the vocals.

The show will be performed Friday May 27th at 7 and 9:30 p.m.

Congratulations Bowdoin Seniors and Good Luck

from Vincenzo's Restaurant

15 Cushing Street
Brunswick, Me
729-9112

Serving
Dinner
from
5-9 p.m.

Sunday
Dinner
noon-
8 p.m.

Casual Country Dining

with homemade soups,
breads and desserts

Reservations Recommended
Rt. 123, Harpswell Center 833-5305

The Friendly Store with the Red Store Door.

Welcome Bowdoin Women

Specialty Shop for Women

We're open 9:30-5:30 Mon.-Sat.

"Around the corner from Bowdoin College, across from the big Grey Church."

185 Park Row, Brunswick

729-3907

BRUNSWICK CORSICAN
CONGRATULATIONS
GRADUATES

The Corsican in Brunswick
featuring a new menu
open daily 11-9
Sunday 4-9

Closed Tuesday

729-8117

Congratulations
Class of 1988

We always welcome you back as alumni!

Left: Jim Barton (right) tangles with John Brube. Bottom: Brube and Lisa Burnett clean up Seymour's mess. Right: Brube feeds Audrey II, the Green Mean Mother From Outer Space. Photos by Al Mauro

Wilhelm Haas.

Thomas R. Pickering.

Alumni return as ambassadors to Israel

When Thomas R. Pickering and Wilhelm Haas return to Brunswick for their 35th college reunion, they will have more to discuss than their undergraduate days at Bowdoin.

Pickering is the United States ambassador to Israel and Haas is ambassador to Israel from the Federal Republic of Germany. The two will share the podium at the College Convocation, part of Bowdoin's 1988 Reunion Weekend, on Saturday, June 4, at 11 am in the Farley Field House.

A career ambassador with nearly 30 years of experience, Pickering was U.S. ambassador to El Salvador from 1983 to 1985 before taking his current assignment in Tel Aviv. He will remain in Israel until June, when he will become undersecretary of state for management, one of the three top career posts in the State Department.

Haas, like Pickering, began his foreign service career 30 years ago and assumed his post in Israel about the same time as his classmate. A native of Berlin, Haas previously served as head of West Germany's department in charge of relations with Africa, Asia and Latin America and in a number of diplomatic positions in Europe, Africa and Japan.

Bowdoin will award an honorary doctor of laws degree to Haas in recognition of his distinguished career.

Pickering received an honorary doctor of laws degree in 1984.

President of the College A. LeRoy Creason will preside at the special program, one of the highlights of the three-day reunion.

Stanwood receives Alumni Service Award

Geoffrey R. Stanwood, assistant to the Bowdoin College president emeritus, will receive the Alumni Service Award at the Alumni Association luncheon on Saturday, June 4.

The award, the highest bestowed by the Bowdoin Alumni Association, will be presented by Association President Walter Bartlett '53.

Stanwood, a Brunswick resident, is president of the class of 1938. In 1971 he was named assistant director of the College's capital campaign. From 1975 to 1982 he was the program coordinator for Bowdoin's Breckenridge Public Affairs Center in York, Maine. From 1980 until his retirement in 1983, he served as assistant to the president.

Before his appointment to the Bowdoin staff, Stanwood was director of public relations for the First National Stores in New England, New York and New Jersey.

A native of Wellesley Hills, Massachusetts, Stanwood has been active in civic organizations, notably the United Way and the Brunswick Improvement Association.

In 1937, he founded the Meddiebempsters, Bowdoin's men's augmented double quartet.

Geoffrey R. Stanwood.

College elects retirees to Alumni Association

Ten staff members and one athletics coach will retire at the end of this school year.

Rhoda Z. Bernstein of Brunswick, registrar, will retire after nine years with the College.

Dining Service Aide Gladys H. Desjardins, also of Brunswick, retires after 17 years.

John S. DeWitt of Bath, will retire from his position of superintendent of mechanical services after 23 years at Bowdoin.

Service Bureau Supervisor Bryce A. Minott of Brunswick will also retire after 23 years here.

Jacqueline A. Minott of Brunswick, records clerk, will retire after 40 years.

Custodian Joanne E. Needham from Lisbon Falls retired last fall after 14 years at Bowdoin.

After 19 years, Edward T. Reid of Brunswick, athletics coach, will retire.

Receptionist Prudence P. Smith, also from Brunswick, retires after 25 years.

Ezra A. Stevens of Bowdoinham, dining service purchasing agent, will retire after 14 years.

After 10 years at Bowdoin, Custodian Jeanette R. Stubbs of Brunswick retired last October.

Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds Robert E. Wilson of Brunswick will retire June 30 after 29 years.

Dewitt, Bryce and Jacqueline Minott, Reid, Smith, and Wilson have been elected honorary members of the Bowdoin College Alumni Association.

Minority ratio rises in Class of 1992

Minorities constitute almost 10 percent of Bowdoin College's class of 1992, the most highly selective class in a decade.

Of the 397 members of the class who will matriculate next fall, 38 are members of minority groups, including 17 blacks, 13 Asian-Americans, and eight Hispanics. A year ago minorities accounted for just six percent of the freshman class.

In early April 805 letters of admission were mailed to some 3,665 applicants. The acceptance rate of 21.9 percent was the lowest since 1978, when 20.7 percent of applicants to the class of 1982 were offered admission.

With 397 of 805 accepting this year's offers, Bowdoin's yield of over 49 percent was also the highest in several years and one of the highest nationally.

Concerning the minorities admissions situation, which saw applications from black students rise 84 percent, Director of admissions William R. Mason said, "I'm pleased with the progress in our ongoing efforts to diversify the student body. There is still more ground to cover, however, and we intend to press on with the effort."

Of those in the entering class whose secondary schools computed class rank, 80 percent ranked in the top 10 percent. Of the 248 students who chose to submit their Scholastic Aptitude Test results, 67 percent scored 600 or above on the verbal section, while 79 percent scored 600 or above in the math. Thirty-eight percent of the class exercised the option to not submit SAT's.

Although 47 percent of the admitted group were women, they only make up 42 percent of the matriculants, a lower percentage than in recent years.

Geographic distribution continues to broaden. In the class of 1992, less than half of the student hail from New England. Nearly a quarter are from the mid-Atlantic states; 10 percent are from the Midwest; nine percent are from the far West; seven percent are from the South; and three percent are from foreign countries.

More students continue to enroll from Massachusetts than any other state (21 percent); Maine is a strong second (15 percent); New York is third (eight percent).

1st Quality...Great Selection... 10-20% Savings and More!

Choose from:
Bass • Walk-Over • Aigner • Nunn-Bush •
Sebago • Allen Edmonds • Old Maine Trotters •
Bandalino • Selby • Rockport • Sporto • Sperry •
Bates • Wright Arch Preserver • Tretorn •
Clogs by Krone • Deer Stags • Moccasins by Minnetonka • Red Wing • Herman. Plus a large selection of belts, handbags, socks and gloves.

Maine's Original Highway Shoe Store.

Bass
Wayside Shoe

U.S. Route One, Brunswick (Just North of Freeport)
Open Daily 9-6; Sunday 11-6 729-6728

Congratulations Class of 1988

from

Tontine Fine Candies

WE HAVE WHITE CHOCOLATE POLAR
BEARS AND BEAUTIFUL MILK
CHOCOLATE-ROSES FOR THE GRADUATE

We are in the Tontine Mall

THE
BRUNSWICK
FLOWER SHOP

729-8895
216A Maine St.
Mon.-Sat. 9:30-6

We Deliver
Wire Service

We wish our best to the graduating class and we will see everyone else in the Fall!

MONTSWEAG FARM RESTAURANT

An enjoyable and affordable big red barn of the sea, halfway between Bath and Wiscasset on Rt. 1. Good and simple food and beverages served in a casual atmosphere of nautical hand-me-downs.

LOBSTER-STEAKS-CHICKENS

Daily Noon Specials

Banquet Facilities

Private Dining Room

Reservations Accepted.

11:30-8:00 Sun.-Thu.

*Til 8:30 Fri. & Sat.

1/2 hour later in the summer

443-6563

LETTERS

In Memoria

The following was delivered by A. Ray Rutan, Director of Theater, at a May 21st memorial service for Laura Thomas. Thomas was the costumer for Masque and Gown for 26 years. She passed away May 8th.

A fiddler on the roof. Sound crazy. No? But in our little town of Anateeka, you might say every one of us is a fiddler on the roof, trying to scratch out a pleasant, simple tune without breaking his neck. It isn't easy.

You may ask why do we stay up there if it's so dangerous? We stay because Anateeka is our home.... and how do we keep our balance? That I can tell you in a word... Tradition.

Because of our traditions, we've kept our balance for many years. Here in Anateeka we have traditions for everything...how to eat, how to sleep, how to wear clothes. For instance, we always keep our heads covered and always wear a little prayer shawl.... This shows our constant devotion to God.

You may ask how did this tradition start. I'll tell you—I don't know. But it's a tradition...because of our traditions, everyone knows who he is and what God expects him to do.

The opening words from the last musical Laura costumed, with a great apology to Chris "Fig" Newton, our Tevye.

After twenty-six years or so of working with the Masque & Gown, Laura, herself, is a tradition. She has often said she may not remember a former student's name, but she sure knows their measurements.

Convincing young people that they look quite correct for the role they're playing can be a far from easy task. But Laura's Scottish/Portuguese background, with a liberal sprinkling of humor put the characters in character on our stages.

I wonder how many hundreds of Bowdoin students have passed through her costume shop with each one leaving with a special remembrance of the cordial, helpful proprietor? It has boggled my own mind in recalling in the last few days of our short association of the past seventeen years and about so many beautiful productions made possible through the care and endless hours Laura gave to them. What wonderful memories. What a wonderful tradition.

There is another core of students who are even closer to Laura, her hard working, loving, loyal crews. From the sound of laughter that frequently floated out of the costume room, I believe they enjoyed learning and working and were so very able, because of her, to carry on this Spring without her.

We all know of the ploy of borrowing a cup of flour, or is it sugar, across the back fence to get to know a neighbor. I've even had someone row across the tight anchorage behind Mistake Island Down East, with empty cups in hand. (Our dogs didn't approve.) Polly Qinyb did one better and over their adjoining yard fence got Laura to help on costumes for the Masque & Gown. It started this tradition of a long, good friendship.

Of course, I'm most familiar with the theater connection. As a highlander and a lowlander, but not a Brunswickite, I can only somewhat recall the civic work Laura did, such as Voter Registration and Poll Watcher, perhaps more vivid was the time during which Laura and Tom were official Rat Exterminators. Her reports of the Harpswell Dump were, to say the least, unsavory. There was a tradition of civil duty.

And national duty was also a great tradition, from the canvass work on the 44 destroyers at BIW which she and Tom did during World War II to the great pride of her grandsons, Bill who graduated from West Point last year and, Jim, his brother, who is now at Annapolis.

Dartmouth, Tom's alma mater, I have to confess, was traditionally a high priority, too.

But without doubt, the greatest tradition for Laura was the abounding love for her family. So very proud of each and everyone. It is with great thanks that she so happily spent these last months with the, where abideth faith, hope, love, these three; and the greatest of these is love.

Sunrise, sunset
Sunrise, sunset
Swiftly flow the days
Seedling's turn overnight to sunflowers
Blossoming even as we gaze.

Sunrise, sunset
Sunrise, sunset
Swiftly fly the years
One season following another
Laden with happiness and tears.

The 1987-88 Bowdoin men's hockey team. Standing from left to right: Ryan McGuire, Brad Rabbitt, Tom Aldrich, Roger Ladda. Kneeling: Jamie Everett, Steve Thornton, Steve Ilkos, Mark Smyth, Dave Dobrowski.

Thanks

To the Editor:

Through the medium of your paper, we would like to express our thanks to the members of the Bowdoin Varsity Hockey team who are graduating this year.

We have enjoyed many hours of hockey throughout your four years and wish you well as you go your separate ways.

As it is not possible to thank each one of you individually, this letter will show our appreciation for your efforts.

We also wish to thank Terry Meagher and his staff for the team that they have had through the years.

Perhaps we will be able to meet you later... we would welcome each of you to stop in if you are in our area.

We look forward to Bowdoin hockey for many great games.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. Hall
Boothbay, Maine

Congratulations to all and good luck!

STOWE TRAVEL

MID COAST MAINE'S MOST COMPLETE TRAVEL AGENCY

A TRAVELERS' NATIONAL NETWORK AGENCY

■ GROUP TRAVEL SPECIALISTS ■ BUSINESS ACCOUNTS
■ INCENTIVE TRAVEL ■ CRUISES ■ AMTRAK ■ AIRLINES
■ VCR CASSETTE TRAVEL LIBRARY ■ VACATION PACKAGES
■ GREYHOUND ■ WESTERN UNION
■ $150,000 AUTOMATIC FLIGHT INSURANCE

"ALL SERVICES AT NO EXTRA COST"

725-5573

8:30 - 5:30 DAILY
9 - 2 SAT. (SUMMER)
9 - 4 SAT. (WINTER)

9 PLEASANT ST. BRUNSWICK

Call 1-800-522-9990 toll free in ME.

Rose receives Fulbright award to lecture in Sri Lanka

Gunter H. Rose, associate professor of psychology, has received a Fulbright award to lecture in Sri Lanka during the 1988-89 academic year. The announcement was made by the Board of Foreign Scholarships and the U.S. Information Agency.

Rose, a psychobiologist, will conduct research to identify indigenous medicinal plants that affect the central nervous system, especially those relating to sleep and alertness. His studies will include field work in villages as well as laboratory research at the University of Peradeniya in Kandy. The award will also allow him to visit key institutes in India and Nepal.

While Western researchers tend to focus on the biological basis of behavior, "how the brain influences the mind," Rose says, in Sri Lanka and other Asian countries there is also an emphasis on how psychological functions affect bodily processes, "how the mind influences the brain."

"What is exciting to me is the potential of integrating the Western approach with traditional Asian methods, including meditation, acupuncture, and medicinal plants," says Rose. "This involves a mutual exchange and understanding, not just of information, but of methodologies and attitudes as well."

Gunter Rose.

Rose visited Sri Lanka last summer under a grant from Fulbright-Hayes Project Abroad to develop studies for the Intercollegiate Sri Lanka Educational (ISLE) Program at Bowdoin and other participating schools.

A native of Englewood, N.J., Rose joined the Bowdoin faculty in 1976. A graduate of Tufts University, he earned his master's degree at Brown University and his doctorate at UCLA.

Fulbright grants, among the most coveted academic awards in the nation, are awarded annually to lecturers, research scholars, and students "to increase mutual understanding between the people of the United States and the people of other countries." The program was designed in 1946 under congressional legislation introduced by former Senator J. William Fulbright of Arkansas.

Camp Counselors

Positions available. Camp Arcadia for Girls, Casco, Maine. June 19 to August 13. Lovely setting on Lake. Hiking and Canoe Trip Leaders. Sailing, Arts and Crafts, Riding (eastern), Gymnastics, Archery, Dance, Photography. Call or write Mrs. John Fritts, New Vernon, NJ 07976 (201) 538-5409.

For commencement or Memorial Day weekend and the month of June. Ocean front, two bedroom cottage. Mere Point (five miles from Brunswick. Call Sarah Jensen 725-3295 weekdays and 729-1376 evenings.

Set Your Sights

On Jack Baker's Log Cabin today for lunch or dinner. Because when it comes to atmosphere, you just can't beat Mother Nature (and the food's darn good, too!). Join us today.

Spring Hours: 12-2:30 p.m. (M-Sat); 5-8:00 p.m. (M-Th); 5-9:00 p.m. (F, Sat); Sunday, all day.

Jack Baker's Log Cabin
Bailey Island, 833-5546

Speeches

(Continued from page one)
Society, started a student-run poetry workshop and worked on the college's sexual harassment hotline her sophomore year.

Duchovny said the inspiration for her speech stemmed from the poetry workshop and from her association with last semester's poet-in-residence Yvonne Boland who conducted a poetry seminar for the English department. Duchovny said of the poetry workshop, "I was motivated to see that people were interested in creative writing and were willing to work together as a cooperative."

In regard to Boland she said, "I wouldn't have written the speech if I hadn't met Yvonne Boland. I owe everything to her. She made me feel confident about writing and taught me to express myself."

Duchovny continued, "If I hadn't met her I probably would have given up writing because I had started feeling that it wasn't important. She made me realize that you have to ask yourself whether you can live without writing and I decided I couldn't. She was incredible."

Duchovny said that her speech was also motivated by the need for "expression in a non-academic fashion." She pointed out that there are alternate means of expression that can not be judged by grades. "We shouldn't be defining ourselves by how many duals we got last semester. We can't be judged by grades," she said.

Duchovny said that it was important that people accept that there are different ways of looking at the world. "Why did I write my speech? Part of it was going through four years at Bowdoin and enjoying it a lot but feeling always that there was a part of me that wasn't being developed within the structure of the school. There is a certain part of Bowdoin that doesn't acknowledge different ways of thinking," she said.

She continued, "There are different ways of thinking and we should celebrate them. People shouldn't be put down or feel lessened for these different ways of thinking. I wanted to make people feel comfortable looking at the world at a slant, upside down, or in any way."

Shepherd was awarded the Class of 1868 Prize for the speech he will deliver tomorrow. Shepherd, also an English major, hails from Cambridge, Mass. Since he transferred to Bowdoin from Southern Methodist University during the spring of his sophomore year he has served as chair of the Student Judiciary Board and has played on the golf team. He is a James Bowdoin scholar, a member of Phi Beta Kappa and has won such distinctions as the James Bowdoin Cup, the Jefferson Davis Award and the Pray English Prize.

to him."

Shepherd also pointed out that his transfer from SMU has played a large role in shaping his "Bowdoin Experience" and has lent him inspiration. "The transfer thing has given me a whole different perspective on Bowdoin. If you transfer from somewhere you appreciate the experience that much more. You don't take for granted the excellent faculty, the students, the atmosphere. I think you might have missed those things if you were here for four years," he said.

Shepherd continued, "I think if I'd gone to Bowdoin from the beginning I wouldn't have gotten as much out of it as I did - not even close I don't think."

Saturday's commencement procession will form at 11:30 A.M. Exercises for the 183rd commencement will begin at 12:00 noon on the Terrace of the Walker Art Building. In case of rain, Saturday's exercises will be held in Farley Field House.

Shepherd attributed the inspiration for his speech to his father and to his transferring to Bowdoin from SMU. Shepherd said, "My father inspired me to write this speech. It's really for him because we didn't have a good relationship. My speech was an effort to try to set down our relationship on paper, and it's a trib-

Flowers by Knowles

Congratulations to All
&
Best Wishes

15 Jordan Ave. 725-2461

KRISTINA'S

RESTAURANT, BAKERY, HARRY'S BAR

Tuesday Night
2 For 1

Summer Hours

Monday 8-3
Tuesday-Saturday 8-9:30
Sunday Brunch 9 a.m.-2 p.m.

At the Corner of
Center & High St.
Bath, Maine 04530
(207) 442-8577

JAMESON Tavern

17 79

Main Street,
Freeport
865-4196

*Noted under landlord
Jameson for its quality spirits
and excellent cuisine,
we aspire to an old tradition.*

Steaks • Seafood
• Cocktails

Light meals in the Lounge
Banquet Facilities
Map 4 No. 97

TRIPLE LOBSTER SPECIAL

The TASTE of MAINE RESTAURANT

Seafood • Beef • Chicken
Banquet Facilities
RT. 1 WOOLWICH, ME

Just North of Bath
(207) 443-4554

Open
Mid-February
to December

Master Card, Visa
&
American Express

THE ATRIUM

Cooks Corner
Brunswick
729-5555

186 Air Conditioned Rooms
In-Closed Tropical Atrium
Daily Chinese-American Lunch Buffet
Take Out Available Anytime

Weekend dinner specials:
Roast Prime Rib
and Lobster any way

The Omelette Shop Café

BRUNSWICK-MAINE

CONGRATULATIONS GRADUATING CLASS